The "Desperado" Who Terrorized Thamesville District is Brought Before Judge Houston

A poor little lad, very much frightened, appeared before Judge Houston n County Court this morning.

"Is this the desperado who was terrifying the whole country" queried? Judge Houston, of Major Coogan. "Yes, that's the Epperson of the tale," replied the valiant High Confrom Pisa to Leghorn.
A little son of Mr. D. Pilkey, of Brougham, died from the effect of a stable.

Yesterday, the chief of police of Thamesville telephoned that a desperate burglar had been brought to bay in an oat field, and the field was surrounded by farmers. The robber had looted three houses. The story was vivid and horrible that man robbed, Thomas Terry. The actions of the lad aroused the suspicions of Constable Cape, and he closely ques tioned the boy, who finally broke down and acknowledged he was the robber. The lad was brought to Chatham last evening, and this morning it was a very meek, quiet and much terrified lad that appeared before Judge Houston. He gave his age as 14 past and said that his mother was married. and said that his mother was married again to a jeweler in West Lorne. VAIN APPEAL

"Please can't I go home and see my mother. I'll never steal again if you only let me out this time. Please let me out just to go home to see mother. She is sick."

Such was the piteous appeal level-led, between sobs, at Judge Houston on a charge of stealing a pair of shoes from the wife of Dr. Bechard for whom the girl had been working George Gordon Martin had jus made one of his touching and compre-hensive addresses to the Judge in defense of the prisoner; and the eloquent criminal lawyer had urged that the child had only taken the shoes to better celebrate the First of July and the Judge had expressed his in tention of sending the prisoner up to jail till Monday, when the little col ored girl gave vent to the outburst quoted above. The scene was a touch ing one, but the Judge, considering that the girl had been up before and that this sin, though acknowledged, would prevent other honest girls be-ing trusted, thought that some lesson should be taught and he remanded the prisoner till Monday.
