NATURE STUDY ADVICE

PAMPHLET JUST ISSUED BY DEPART-MENT OF EDUCATION.

Written by Dean W. H. Muldrew, of th Macdonald Institute-Much Information Given as to Methods of Work-Advice to Teachers-An Interesting Book-A Model Garden-Lesson in Forestry

For the encouragement of the study Department of Agriculture has issued a highly interesting pamphlet of instructions to teachers. It is written by Dean W. H. Muldrew, of the Macdonald Institute, and gives much information as to meth work.

In recent years, says Mr. Muldrew, local Fairs have given prizes to schools for nature collections, and in some places excellent sets have been shown. The weakest point with these has been shown. in some places executive the solution of the solution in the solution in the solution in the solution in the preparation of exhibits. It is very probable that such competitions will be encouraged more on the solution of the solution in th and more in future years in connec tion with the larger exhibitions as well as at the smaller fairs. As a centre of interest for the na-ture studies of a school, there is nothing more helpful than a collec-tion of suggestive things from the outdoor world. Outdoor nature is full of interesting things and events. Little eyes and ears are quick to see and hear, and little minds are quick to think. Suppose we help them to keep a record of the happenings of this outside world.

would show thinking as well as col-lecting, and the very best-one in the Province would make an excellent bulletin for the schools of 1905.

Trees and shrubs are easily planted and form a permanent living collection of constantly increasing value. They attract the birds and other forms of life and shelter the wild flowers. In this way they prepare for wild nature study. Arhor Day need not be limited to one day but should rather keep recently. but should rather keep pace with a growing interest in trees and plants. No school can afford to neglect the planting of trees and shrubs. The Ontario Agricultural College is proparing to grow seedlings of forest trees for the use of farmers, and it that such nursery seedlings will be offered to schools that have shown an interest in such matters. School grounds may thus become object lessons in forestry for the farms of the neighborhood.

At a recent meeting of the Cana-dian Forestry Association in Toron-to a gentleman described a garden made in the grounds of the school where he taught twenty-five years ago. It had trees and shrubs from the neighboring woods, and flowers grown from seeds, all planted and cared for by the teacher and pupils. The trees are now a foot or more in diameter, and farmers' wives in that section still grown flowers descended. section still grow flowers descended from the little school garden. That teacher is now a member of Parlia ment for the same constituency, and deserves his promotion as well as the familiar bouquets still brought him by his pupils.

In giving details for the making of an aquarium, Mr. Muldrew says: "The secret is to imitate Nature, those of some pond where water life flourishes. Flowers, if dried be-tween sheets of porous paper under heavy pressure, retain much of their original color and strength in a form that is very convenient for examining, as well as for preserving and exhibiting. When a plant is placed thus to be dried, a note should be put with it, stating its name, the date of collection, the locality where it was collected, and the collector; for one must not trust

"It is worth while to learn to know the seeds of noxious weeds that are often mixed with seed of grain, grass, or clover.

"Many Canadians have never seen the seed of the pine; and many can see no connection between the constat the summit and the seedlings at the foot of the giant of the forest. A collection of tree seeds carefully mounted and named is an excellent lesson on forestry.

"Sections of wood from the various kinds of trees form an interest-

"Sections of wood from the various kinds of trees form an interesting and useful collection. These should be prepared in such a way as to show the bark and two planed surfaces. Sections showing the work of insect borers or of woodpeckers may also be mounted.

"For the collection of insects a handy boy can readily make a net for himself. All that he requires is a broom handle, three feet of stout wire, and one yard of cheese cloth. The collector will be a little awkward at first in the use of the insect net but with practice the williest and most rapid of insects may be captured.

Objects that link the past to the Objects that link the past to the present are of great educational interest and value. Such this are found in every neighborhold, and the school is the proper place for their keeping and interpretation. The boy who has picked up an ancient arrowhead or pipe from the site of some long-forgotten village may well feel a personal interest in the early exploits of Huron and Iroquois. But we need not go back to Indian times for relics of the past. The early pioneers of our swa race have disappeared, too, and their primitive weapons, tools, and manufactures are hardly known to the children of to-day.

How much true history would be suggested by a few articles from a settler's outfit of 100 years ago? The fint-lock musket, and the smooth hollowed stone used for grinding grain by hand, are almost as far removed from the present as are the commends Dodd's Dyspeps a Tab moved from the present as are the tomahawk and the bow-and-arrow. Those who possess such relics would often be glad to place them where they could be assured of permanent care and usefulness to successive generations of children.

Mr. David Boyle, of the Education Department, Toronto, is our best authority on all that pertains to these relics of our past history, and he is always ready to assist collectors in understanding their "finds."
Boys often collect birds' eggs, but this is a destructive practice, and should be discouraged in every way in the making of children's collec-

It should be known also that the destruction of harmless birds or their eggs is an offence punishable by fine or imprisonment.

BRITAIN'S PAGAN CLERGY.

Marie Corelli's Attack on the English Archdeacon Sinclair's description

Archdeacon Sinclair's description of London as a "Pagan city" has drawn from Miss Marie Corelli a furious attack on the clergy—or, at least, some of them. The article appears in this week's Bystander. pears in this week's Bystander.

"It is quite easy," observes Miss Corelli, "to say 'Pagan London,' but what if one spoke of pagan clergy? What of certain ecclesiastics who do not believe one word of the creed they profess, and who daily play the part of Judas Iscariot over again in taking money for a new botrayal of Christ?

trayal of Christ?

"What of the ordained ministers of Christianity who are un-Christian in every word and act of their daily lives? What of the surpliced hypocrites who preach to others what trayal of Christ? every word and the surpliced hypo-lives? What of the surpliced hypo-crites who preach to others what they never try to practice? What of the countiess vicious and worldly clerical bon-vivants, who may be met with everywhere in the houses of wealthy and titled persons, 'clothed in fine linen and faring sumptuously every day, talking unsavory society scandal with as much easy glibness scandal with as much easy glibness as any dissolute 'lay' decadent that ever cozened another man's wife away from the path of honor in the tricky disguise of a 'Soul?'

'What of the spiteful, small-minded, quarrelsome little 'local' parsons, who, instead of fostering kindness, neighborliness, good-will and unity. neighborliness, good-will and unity among their parishioners, set them all by the ears, and play the petty tyrant with a domineering obstinacy which is rather worse than pagan, being purely barbarous?

"And if the word 'pagan' be used at all, should it not be particularly and specially applied to those theat-rical dignituries of the church whose folk wing of the simple and beautiful doctrine of Christ consists. in sheer disobedience to His commands—disobedience openly displayed in the or-which Christ expressly forbade?

"Disloyal to both God and the King, the 'pagan clergy' are doing more at this present day to injure the cause of true religion among the masses than is any lack of zeal or want of faith that may exist in the want of faith that may exist in the people themselves. Who can blame sensible men and women for staying seasone men and women for staying away from church, when in nine cases out of ten they know that the officiating minister is less Christian, less enlightened, loss charitable and kind-hearted than themselves?"

In conclusion, Miss Corelli declares that "if London is indeed a 'pagan city,' as Archdeacon Sinclair solemnly declares from under the shadowy luminance of his own big 'fairy lamp,' St. Paul's Cathedral, then the clergy, and the clergy alone, are responsible. On their 'ordained' heads be it! For 'pagan' people are merely the natural outcome of a 'pagan' priesthood." In conclusion, Miss Corelli declares Seinsh Like to Be Thrilled.

"If thrills are what the public want, we give them their fill. We arrange about one thrill every two minutes through a three-hour program." So says the circus man. The bicycle enters into the most "hair-raising acts." It was thought the climax had been reached when a one-legged rider came down a long ladder on his wheel. This gave way in hair-raising effect to looping-the-loop. But even looping-the-loop was not the climax. It has given way to vaulting the chasm. Day after day a human being has to perform this feat at dirs risk of his life for the purpose of giving a thrill to the crowd. He has to do this whatever may be the state of his health or his nerves. Sometimes, probably, he goes to it in mortal fear. Other human beings supply a thrill by walking over Niagara on a rope or by entering a cage full of wild beasts. The nature of the sensation is not doubtful. When Blondin performed on the high rope at risk of his life there were 40,000 spectators; when he performed on the low rope feats more difficult, but without any risk to his Selfish Like to Be Thrilled. formed on the low rope feats more difficult, but without any risk to his life, there were not 4,000. Such are the ways in which some of us are still doomed to earn their bread. He who goes to a show for the purpose of enjoying such a thrill sins against humanity and against his better self. He comes away a meaner man.—Goldwin Smith in Weekly Sun.

One day a farmer saw some hunts men coming toward his field. The field had just been planted, and the horses would have killed the crops. The farmer sent out a boy to keep The farmer sent out a boy to keep the gate closed, and he was told not to open it under any consideration. The huntsmen came up to the gate and ordered it opened, but the boy refused to do so. The men grew very impatient. They threatened and bribed him, but all in vain. The boy refused. The Duke of Welling ton stepped to the front and said "My boy, I am the Duke of Welling-ton, and I command that gate to be opened." The boy took off his be opened." The boy took off his cap and said, "I am sure the Duke of Wellington would not want me to disobey my master's orders." The Duke took off his cap and said: "I honor the boy or man who obeys or-ders and resist threats and bribes. If I had an army of such people, I could conquer the whole world.

N - Irish Mayor's Coal. A curious privilege attaches to the office of Mayor of Limerick. From time immemorial the mayor has claimed the right to a quarter of a ton of coal out of every cargo im-ported into the town. The coal merchants recently objected to paying this tribute, and a test case was taken to the local Quarter Sessions. The magistrates decided in favor of the mayor. That official receives 100 tons of coal from this source every year and distributes it among the poor of the town, although there is no legal reason why he should not use it for his own private purposes.
