THE PALACE OF THE BIBLE

Entering the Portico, in Genesis, we pass through the Portrait Galleries of the historical books, extending to the end of the kingdom; find the Music Room in the Psalms, where the Spirit, sweeping the keyboard of human nature, touches every chord, from the low moan of the Fifty-first, all dripping with tears, "Have mercy upon me, O God", to the swelling note of the Twenty-fourth, "Lift up your heads, O ye gates"; pass through the Business Office, in Proverbs; the Chapel, in Ecclesiastes, echoing with the voice of the preacher; the Conservatory, in the Song of Solomon, fragrant with the rose of Sharon and the lily of the valley, with all trees of frankincense, with pleasant fruits and with all spices, smelling like Lebanon; then look into the Observatories of the Prophets, with telescopes of various sizes, pointing some toward near and some toward distant stars, but all brought to bear upon the bright and morning star about to arise. We enter the Audience Chambers of the King himself, in the Gospel, viewing the Lord from four standpoints; next witness the Holy Spirit performing his office work, in the Acts; inspect the Correspondence Rooms, in the Epistles—with Paul and Peter and James and John and Jude, each at his desk; and finally gaze upon the Throne Room, in the Revelation.—David McConaughy.

FAVORABLE OF TRADE TURNED FAVORABLE TO THE DOMINION

Ottawa, Sept. 15.—The outstanding feature of Canadian trade statistics for the fiscal year, 1922, according to the annual report of the Department of Trade and Commerce, was no doubt the conversion of an adverse trade balance in 1921 to a favorable balance.

During the year ending March 31, 1922, the trade balance was favorable to Canada, amounting to $6,122,877, as compared with an unfavorable balance for the same period in 1921 of $29,730,763, and for the pre-war year, 1914, of $163,756,774.

From 1916 to 1920, Canada's exports exceeded her imports each year by a very large amount, due principally to abnormal conditions which existed during the war period and the reconstruction period following the termination of hostilities. Prior to 1915 the trade balance was unfavorable to Canada for a number of years.

STORAGE OF VEGETABLES

Winter storage of vegetables is an old question often discussed, but apparently not yet well understood. To store the crop seems a comparatively easy task, but to guard against heavy loss while in storage is sometimes quite a problem even for the most experienced growers.

Some of the first and most important factors influencing the keeping of vegetables in storage are to see that the vegetables are free from disease, well grown, fully matured, free from injuries such as bruises caused by careless handling harvest time. If these important points are kept in mind and carefully attended to at the time of selecting the material for storage, much worry and subsequent loss in dollars and cents will be avoided by the grower later on.

For the storage of such crops as beets, carrots, potatoes, cabbage, celery, parsnips and turnips, a properly constructed, frost proof cellar should be available, with adequate ventilation to keep the temperature as constant as possible around 36 degrees F at all times during the storage period. By no means should a storage cellar become excessively damp, because excessive moisture favours the development of many of the common diseases attacking vegetables in storage. Moderate-sized, slatted bins or crates should be used for the storage of roots and potatoes, while cabbage can be stored on slatted shelves or in bins. Celery is usually stored in the root cellar. The plants are stripped of all rough leaves and placed in an upright position on moist sand, more sand being placed around the roots. However, where only small quantities of vegetables are to be stored for household use, and a basement is available, a compartment or room should be provided therein, of such construction as to exclude the heat from the furnace and with suitable vents in the wall to provide good ventilation. It is not advisable to store a great quantity of cabbage or turnips in the cellar of a dwelling house. A good earthen floor in the storage room is to be preferred to cement. Where an earthen floor can be had in a well constructed vegetable room, it is seldom necessary to store the carrots, beets, parsnips and potatoes in sand, because, as a rule, sufficient moisture will escape from the floor to keep the air moist enough to prevent the vegetables from withering up.

Onions require quite different conditions, while in storage, to other varieties of vegetables. A dry, cool dark room is best suited for this crop, where the temperature can be kept around 34 degrees F. By no means should onions be stored in a cellar, except where it is possible to maintain a dry cool atmosphere.

Squash and pumpkins should be stored in a dry, moderately warm room, where a temperature of 50 degrees F can be maintained. Particularly careful handling is necessary at harvest time if this crop is to be kept for any length of time. Place the squash or pumpkins on shelves or on a table, in a single layer.

GIRDLES

Girdles this season are most interesting. Some are scarcely an inch wide, and others develop until they become the most noticeable thing on the whole flock. The metal ribbons are much liked for this purpose.

"THE BREAKING POINT"

By Mary Roberts Rinehart

A Review

"The Breaking Point", by Mary Roberts Rinehart, has been so extensively reviewed in the United States that no words are necessary to introduce it to Canadian readers. It is a book one likes to write about, nevertheless, and it may be well to remind people that McClelland and Stewart, Toronto, are its agents in this country. It is a compelling story. The hero, a most wholesome and human character, is the victim of a circumstance that had so disintegrated his psychic self as to sever him, in his experience at least, from the average human being. Mrs. Rinehart doubtless caught the idea for her theme from the general interest in psycho-analysis. Under the stress of great fear a man's past drops from his memory, even the name he bore, and yet we find him ten years later with another name, a kindly, yet most modern and progressive physician, in love with an unusually charming girl. But that forgotten past held tragedy, tragedy that began stalking the young doctor when his life's happiness was almost grasped. A chain of iron circumstance closes about him; one shock after another results in the awakening of memory and, finally, the unifying of the two personalities in the man's consciousness. The good folk whom the doctor had loved and helped, but who forgot their obligation to him as soon as public opinion set against him, are doubtless like the average people in American and Canadian small towns. Mrs. Rinehart understands crowd psychology, and she has no cloak for their ingratitude and weakness. "The Breaking Point" is a book that should appeal to many classes of readers. There is thrilling story interest and there is also a searching look into the problem of personality. Perhaps the novelists will succeed finally in making a better world, for they bring to all people a thought, at least, of the strange forces, personal and social, that so profoundly affect human life.

Transacted Thousands of Dollars Worth of Business While Sitting in His Office ---By Telephone, of Course

Mr. S. George Davis, sales manager of the Inverness Railway & Collieries Limited, Port Hastings, voices appreciation of our Telephone service in the following very gratifying way in a letter addressed to our exchange manager at Port Hawkesbury.

"I have used the telephone for 90% of our business in the past three years and while I have had occasion to telephone from almost every important town in the Maritime Provinces and have had no occasion to complain of service, I would not be doing justice to your office if I did not state that the service there was absolutely the best, in my opinion, to be obtained anywhere.

"I had occasion, twice recently to talk to New York and successfully transacted some thousands of dollars worth of business while sitting here in my own office."

Mr. Davis' experience is just another illustration of the fact that in almost every instance it is as easy to do business by the Long Distance Telephone as in a face-to-face interview.
