

FACES THE CHARGE OF MURDERING A FRIEND

Trial of James Atkinson, charged with murder of Milo Bankes, opened in Supreme Court yesterday.

(From Wednesday's Daily.) Charges with the murder of Milo Bankes, a neighbor, with whom he had always been on friendly terms prior to the fatal shooting affair, James Atkinson faces a jury in the Supreme Court, the trial opening shortly before noon Tuesday Justice Simons presiding.

Up to the hour of adjournment for the forenoon session but one witness had testified. His evidence, while not so damaging to the defence as it might have been, went to show that Atkinson fired the shot that resulted in Atkinson's death on September 17th, last, near Atkinson's farm home in Shamrock Valley, 46 miles north of Vermilion.

Upon Atkinson's cross-examination yesterday a plea of not guilty was promptly entered, and after disposing of a number of other matters, Justice Simons took the case for trial. Crown Prosecutor Cogswell appeared for the prosecution and H. E. Robertson for the defence. In the selection of a jury, counsel for the accused exercised seven challenges. The following jurors were finally found to be acceptable to both the prosecution and defence, and were sworn: James Graham, John A. Ganton, C. J. Sharkey, G. Walker, J. Stanton and George Bell.

In his opening statement to the jury Crown Prosecutor Cogswell briefly outlined the case as the evidence would later show. He then called George E. Dodes to the stand.

Mr. Dodes, who is a well known and very clear account of the tragedy as he saw it. Mr. Dodes resides some distance from the Atkinson home, and he was passing through Shamrock Valley on September 17th, when the shooting occurred. He stopped at Atkinson's for dinner, arriving there at 1:15 in the afternoon. While he was eating Bankes entered the house. Besides Atkinson there were also present a boy who was staying there, a young lady visitor, and Atkinson, who was sick in bed. All engaged in a friendly conversation. A few minutes later Bankes and Atkinson went outside to shoot on a range, the latter carrying Bankes' gun. Bankes being the better gun of the two.

Shortly afterwards the three men, including Dodes, went into a tent near by and there Atkinson and Bankes drank freely from a jug of whiskey. Finally they became involved in a good-natured scuffle. Bankes got mad and challenged Atkinson to fight. Atkinson replied that he had better go home, that he (Atkinson) did not want to fight. However, they grappled, Bankes being the aggressor. Bankes struck Atkinson in the eye, knocking the latter down.

Evidently angered at the rough manner of his fall, Atkinson picked up an axe, assuming a menacing attitude. Dodes said he heard Atkinson to drop the axe. Without saying a word Atkinson started for the back of the tent, where he emerged from the rear door with a gun in his hands. Dodes urged him not to shoot, but Atkinson shot him on the head, the bullet piercing the tent and the leaden missile struck Atkinson on the side of the head, passing through the cheek bone and coming out on the other side. Atkinson turned to the house and put his rifle away. Although blinded by blood flowing profusely from the gunshot wound, Bankes managed to walk a short distance down a trail leading from the tent. He died in a short time.

HOME RULE AS SEEN BY SIR ROBERT PERKS

Famous British Nonconformist Discusses Features of the Issue Now Before the House of Commons. Separate Province—This Would Remove Many Objections.

Toronto, Oct. 15.—Home rule for Ireland is now to the fore in Britain. The first shots in the campaign have been fired, and home rule's record in wrecking English parties and governments has been such that the progress of the new campaign is awakening keen interest both at home and in Canada.

After referring to the reported differences in program advanced by Mr. John Redmond in the United States and Mr. T. P. O'Connor in Canada during their last visit, Sir Robert said: "You must remember that Protestant Ulster, which is wealthy, progressive and the power of the island, but one-third of the population of Ireland, while the Roman Catholic population is two-thirds of the whole."

"I think this view of the matter cannot fail to appeal to the Canadian mind. It is not proposed that Quebec and New Brunswick, for instance, were to be amalgamated and ruled from Quebec, how do you suppose New Brunswick would like the idea? The position of New Brunswick in Canada has hitherto always shown us that of Ulster, unless the suggestion of two provinces—the drawing of a separate and separate and distinct entity—is adopted."

Nonconformists Would Agree. "Would that satisfy Protestant sentiment in the United Kingdom?" the reporter inquired. "As regards Protestant sentiment in Ulster," replied Robert, "I am not prepared to say. But it is my belief that, if the government, in framing their measure are prepared to agree to two provincial governments of the kind suggested, the British Protestant Nonconformists probably would not oppose it. There are, however, other difficulties in the way of home rule. In the first place, there is the question of the financial relations between the two countries. Loans to no less an amount than a thousand million dollars have been raised by the British government for the purpose of enabling the Irish tenant to become the owner of the property which he rented. Thus landlordism in Ireland is in a fair way to become a thing of the past without the necessity of any further legislation. If home rule is brought about what security would there be for those loans. I am bound to say, however, that in my judgment this would probably not prove a great practical difficulty, for Ireland has hitherto always shown herself very punctual in her payments on her loans. At the same time she would find it impossible to get any further such favorable loans from Great Britain."

Irish to Leave Westminster. "I wish to leave Westminster," said Robert, "I don't see how the British are going to submit to Irish control by allowing the Irish members to sit at Westminster. That is the role on which Gladstone and Chamberlain split."

Suppose, however, suggested the reporter, "the Irish members do not retain any control by sitting at Westminster, over British affairs?" "In that case," replied the baronet, "there will be a very considerable alteration in the present state of affairs there. The eighty Irish Nationalist members have generally voted—apart from matters religious and educational—on the side of progress. And I conceive that their removal would probably strengthen the forces of the vested interests—land, church and beer. The whole political situation would then require re-adjustment. I should look to see three British parties. First, the party of the vested interests; secondly, a reform and progressive Liberal party of sane and rational reform, one, two, three, four, five, six, seven, eight, nine, ten, eleven, twelve,
