SIDE TALKS.

By Ruth Cameron.

THE PRIDE THAT PRETENDS.

People are sure to laugh at the naive pride of the newly prosperous who go about boasting of their prosperity and telling you, either directly or by carefully manufactured implication, how much their new possessions cost.

I once took a dinner at a house where our host told us the price of practically every large piece of furniture in his new house. He took us about from room to room displaying the grand piano, the electric range, the mahogany bed set, with tulip wood inlay saying: "That set us back $350. What do you think they soaked us for that range, $250—pretty good for a kitchen stove, eh?" and so on.

It was very funny. It was hard not to show a flicker of amusement.

But Fools No One.

But the other day I heard of a display of pride in property that was even more amusing. The man's pride was naive and frank. It didn't try to hide itself. This of which I am about to write was the opposite, it was the pride that apes humility—but does it so badly that it deceives no one.

The woman who displayed it is a young woman who had the delightful—but usually unsettling—experience of climbing from comparative poverty to comparative wealth in a few years. In school she had travelled with a crowd of girls whose families were in better circumstances than her own. But she made the best match (financially) of the crowd and now she has more than any of them—house that is almost a mansion, a luxurious car, a chauffeur, exquisite clothes.

I asked one of the old crowd if all this had her head. "Does she boast about her possessions?" I questioned.

A Notable Anniversary

The four hundredth anniversary of the introduction of printing into England by William Caxton—the first English printer—was celebrated at South Kensington Museum, on Saturday, June 13th, 1877, by the opening of a loan collection of articles, appliances, and machinery connected with printing. At the banquet, which followed, upwards of four hundred guests were present, including the Rt. Hon. W. E. Gladstone, presiding, the Emperor of Brazil, the Archbishop of York, Sir Charles Reed, etc. Mr. Gladstone in proposing the memory of William Caxton, the first English Printer, after giving an eloquent description of Caxton's career proceeded to say: "I hold in my hand, a volume to which I beg everyone to direct his eye, because I think it may be called the climax and consummation of the printing art. Since the clock struck twelve last night the people at the University Press, Oxford, have printed and sent us this Bible—they have sent several copies, one of which will be presented to the Emperor of Brazil. The Bible held up by Mr. Gladstone, was printed at Oxford, bound in London and delivered in South Kensington Exhibition Buildings literally within twelve consecutive hours. The event was quite the sensation of the day, and copies of this "Caxton Bible" as it was called, are scarce, if not unobtainable.

Dear Sirs,—Since the start of baseball season we have been hindered with sore muscles, sprained ankles, etc., but just as soon as we started using Minard's Liniment our troubles ended. Every baseball player should keep a bottle of your liniment handy. Yours truly, W. E. McPherson, Secretary of Armstrong High School Baseball Team.

THE WONDER CAR.

Month after month she goes a-chooing, and all she asks is along the pike, speed cops pursuing, you see her like chain lightning pass, pedestrians and farm stock strewn in heaps upon the wayside grass. Month after month, through mud and gravel, on errands vain, I make her fly, and nothing seems to make her fly, she's always full of pep, and spry; and speed cops, worn by ceaseless travel, crawl under some tall tree and die. Month after month, without repairing, without a wrench scooting, tearing, up mountain roads where danger lurks; and speed cops, tired and vainly swearing, resign and hire as grocers' clerks. Month after month my car goes, swinging, the envy of all other chaps, along the road, her rear wheels flinging the mud in chunks, the clay in scraps; and speed cops stand, their worn hands wringing, or tearing whiskers from their maps. And then some day she breaks a casting, she stops, a helpless auto ran; and I must wait hours everlasting, before there comes the fix-it man; and drearily I stand dogging the men who made so much of me. Her long, long service all forgotten. I cuss, a symbol of despair: "The stuff they use in cars is rotten," I say, with cold and stony glare; "when once a car is old and battered, the makers have no other care. This auto graft sure makes me single and long to yield a snicker-snee; I'd like to warp a tight surprise on those who wished this wain on me." And speed cops gaze from dells and dingles, and chortle in unholy glee.

That is what the average "talking machine" is sold for when auctioned these days. Not so the NEW EDISON, as was proved at a recent auction sale in St. John's. If you wish to learn the reason, call at 178 Water Street and hear the difference between one of America's best and most advertised talking machines and a NEW EDISON. The Edison Phonograph with a Soul. It pays to get the Best.
