The Ninth Wave

The many thousands who will spend some time by the sea during the summer months will have an opportunity, if they care to take it, of investigating for themselves the reliability of the notion that the ninth wave is always the biggest.

Tennyson wrote:—

And then the two Dropt to the cove, and watch'd the great sea fall,
Wave after wave, each mightier than
the last,
Till last a ninth one, gathering half the deep
And full of voices, slowly rose and plunged Roaring.

There can be no doubt that a belief prevails that the waves breaking on the beach keep increasing in regular series till the maximum arrives, and then the series begins again.

The fact seems to be that when two waves reinforce each other a big one results, but this does not seem to occur at fixed intervals, and those who prophesy that such and such a wave will reach farther than its predecessors, during the rise of the tide, will prove wrong three times out of four.

Feed the Brute

During one of those informal discussions on occultism that are constantly cropping up just now, the following story—with a moral for wives—was related by Miss Margaret Bondfield, who, it will be remembered, was Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Labour in the last Administration.

A young married woman who imagined that she was losing her husband's affection, went to a seventh daughter of a seventh daughter for a love-charm.

The mystery woman, after listening to the wife's story, gazed long and earnestly into her crystal, then she said in low tones:

"Get a raw piece of tender beef, cut fat, about an inch thick. Slice an onion in two, and rub the meat on both sides with it. Sprinkle with pepper and salt and grill on both sides over a clear fire. Drop on it three lumps of butter and two sprigs of parsley, and get him to eat it."

The young wife followed the instructions—and her husband loved her ever after!

The Passing Hour

The conscientious enthusiast in charge of the improvised "soda-fountain" at the garden fete could supply drinks in two flavours—vanilla and strawberry.

Towards the end of the day up came a thirsty man who wanted a plain soda, without and flavouring at all.

"What flavour do you want it without?" asked the temporary bar-tender.

"I don't care."

"Well, you'll have to have it without vanilla, 'cause there's no more strawberry left," was the verdict.

She: "When I married you I thought you were a brave man."

He: "So did everybody else."

Old Brown had worked nearly forty years as gardener and odd man, and was apparently contented until his employer added poultry-raising to his list of activities. Then he was ordered to write on each egg with an indelible pencil the date and the name of the hen that laid it.

"I'm going to leave, sir," announced Brown one day.

"Leave! Whatever for?" inquired the employer.

"Well, I've done nearly everything about the place, but I ain't a-goin' to be secretary to your hens!"

Teacher: "Thomas, what is the best time for picking apples?"
Thomas: "When the big dog isn't loose, teacher."

"George," said a pompous squire to an old farm labourer, "you are getting very bent. Why don't you stand up straight like me?"

"Well, sir," answered George, "I've seen you field of corn."

"I do," said the squire.

"Then you'll notice that the full heads hang down, while the empty heads stand up."

The prisoner had been convicted a dozen times before.

"Your honour," he said, "I should like to have my case postponed for a week. My lawyer is ill."

"But you were captured with your hand in this man's pocket. What can your counsel say in your defence?"
"Precisely so, your honour. That is what I am anxious to know."

Bring the Hammer.—First Visitor: "My dear these cakes are as hard as stone."

Second Visitor: "I know. Didn't you hear her say, 'Take your pick' when she handed them around?"

Straight lines will be the general rule, in spite of increasing fullness in the mode.

Expect Shortage of Harvesters

A shortage of harvesters to handle the Western Canada crop is regarded as a possibility. It is felt that the necessary fifty-five or sixty thousand hands required will not be easily found in Canada and that the labor markets of the United States may not be able to offer enough to meet the demand. In the event of such a shortage it may be found necessary to return to the former practice of bringing British harvesters. There is no doubt but that the help could be secured even at an increased passage. Two years ago the steamship rate was $60 to Winnipeg. Even a $70 rate it is thought would bring a good type of men if work in the harvest fields was assured.

Already 460 British families are scheduled to leave the Old Country in the spring of 1926 for Canada under the Empire Settlement scheme, which provides assisted passages for 3,000 families annually. Under the existing regulations the Immigration Department feels that they are getting the very finest type of settlers for the Dominion.

They say the tailored fur coat will take an important place in the autumn mode.

An Ancient Ceremony

LONDON, Eng., (Can. Press).—The Dunmow Fitch trial, held at Ilford with the strictest possible observance of the rights and ceremonies evolved since the days of King John, attracted over 30 couples who claimed the fitch on the grounds that for a year and a day they had neither quarrelled nor repented of marriage, says the London Times. Only three couples faced the jury of spinsters and bachelors and nearly three hours were spent in hearing their claims. G. A. Chesterton, wearing a full-bottomed wig and red robe, was judge. In an address to the court the judge said that nowadays domestic infelicity and quarrelling were regarded very handsomely. Prominent figures in leading divorce and other cases were generally made film actors or actresses or were engaged to write a novel. He did not know what evidence these persons gave for a capacity for fiction except in the witness box. After evidence had been given the jury announced that in the case of Mr. and Mrs. Waring, who appeared in court with nine children, they found for the claimants.

Urban Nature Note.—The city kid was roaming about in the country when he came upon a dozen or so empty condensed milk cans. Greatly excited, he yelled to his companions. "Hey, fellers, come here quick! I've found a cow's nest!"
