CHAPTER XXVI.

UNDERGROUND—AN URGENT SUMMONS—A MYSTERY.

A horror of great darkness fitly represents the frightful realization into which George Eglantine struggled in a vague, confused way, at an unknown period of time after he had been thrown down the shaft of the disused mine. His first feeling—after recollection had fully asserted itself—was that of wonder. He wondered why the fall down the shaft had not killed him. His limbs were indeed aching with pain, and his head seemed to reel, but this might well proceed from the blow he had received from Captain Gibson or Garrett, he did not know which. Excepting a rather large lump on one side of his head, where he had been first struck, he suffered no external injuries. While engaged in groping with his hands, he touched his hat, and this he gladly placed on his head to protect him from a cold air which was coming against him from one direction. He now rose to his knees, and crept slowly forward to the right, groping his hand carefully in front as he went. It was well he did so, for he had not gone half a yard when his hand touched the edge of a cavity, and beyond he could feel nothing. He took up one of the pieces of rock which lay about and chucked it over, when, to his horror, he heard it fall down a great depth, and strike with a sudden plunge in the water. "Good heaven," he murmured, "had I moved a few inches further in that direction I would have shot down into a fathomless depth." After groping about in the darkness for several hours, feeling his way with a stick which he had providentially kicked against, the air blew stronger in his face, and it had the fresh delicious smell of the open landscape and its morning fragrance. Traversing the narrow passage with agitated and excited footsteps, he followed several turns and windings, the light growing stronger as he advanced, till, at last, through a mass of overhanging branches, he discovered the sky. Between this and the point where he stood, a mass of rubbish had nearly blocked the passage up, and over this he had to make his way on his knees till he reached the trailing branches of bramble which cast their interlacing stems across the aperture, and forcing these aside with an arm that cared nothing for the prickles, George passed between a narrow cleft of rock into the open air. He was in the ravine, though at a point which he judged to be considerably above Matthew Greigson's cottage. So occupied was George with surrounding objects, that he had forgetten the letter which Lilias had given him, and on feeling in his pockets he discovered that it was still there, and with an unbroken seal. "From Manby," he ejaculated on looking at the address. "Ha, he was to write me when he had anything important to communicate concerning Walley. Good gracious! perhaps this is of the utmost importance." He tore open the envelope, and found the thought amply confirmed.

The trade of the United Kingdom is increasing with unexampled rapidity. In 1871 the imports and exports amounted to £97,300,000 more than in 1870, and of the increased imports, £8,100,900 came from British possessions. Taking the figures all round, the imports of 1871 show an increase of 8½ per cent on 1870, and the exports during the same period an increase of 14 per cent.

CASH!

TREMENDOUS SUCCESS!

Ready Pay Principle Victorious!

THE NEW STORE

"CASH" is now doing Double the Amount of Trade for Ready Pay that any Credit Establishment in Guelph is doing.

WHY?

Because for Ready Pay a small profit only is asked, the money is turned over five times when Ready Pay is made, but the credit system entails an extra per centage added in marking goods, in order to guard against bad debts. The man who gives credit cannot buy his goods as well as the man who does not.

WHY?

Because he has to buy his stock on credit, and is thereby deprived of the large saving to be made by buying for cash, but the man who sells for ready pay has the money in hand when he goes to market, and can take every benefit that the trade will offer.

Such being the case, who can wonder at the great rush there is going on at present at the new store. "CASH" is creating quite a panic among the slow coaches who have been living at their ease on large profits, and he is now going to make a shaking among the dry bones.

Hurry up with your money. Don't forget the spot,
