THE WEATHER.

Toronto, Ont., Jan. 25—11 p.m.—The depression which was north of the lake last night has moved southeastward, being now central in New Hampshire, with increased energy, and in conjunction with an important development of high pressure, which has occurred to the northward of Manitoba and the lake region, is causing a cold northerly gale in the Province of Ontario. The weather continues mild in the Northwest Territories.

Minimum and maximum temperatures: Calgary, 18—26; Battleford, 4—22; Prince Albert, 2—34; Qu'Appelle, 4—28; Winnipeg, 6 below—24; Toronto, 24—39; Montreal, 4—14; Quebec, zero; Halifax, 8—32.

Local temperatures—Highest, 36° above; lowest, 29° above.

TO-DAY'S PROBABILITIES.

Toronto, Jan. 26—1 a.m.—The indications for the next 24 hours for the lower lakes region (covering the peninsula and as far east as Belleville) are: Strong northerly to northwesterly winds; fair, very cold.

Baskerville, J. H. Barons, John Christie, George McPhillips and John S. Pearce. The Dean of Huron conducted the service.

Some Magic Lantern Epigrams.

The Young Liberals have a new magic lantern arrangement, and last night manipulated it for the first time as a test. The experiment was highly satisfactory.

A large crowd gathered in front of the rooms in the Oldfield block, and the production of the canvas called for a good deal of cheering and laughter. Pictures and pertinent sayings were thrown out alternately. Some of the political cracks caught the fancy of the audience immensely. Among the epigrammatic sayings that evoked enthusiasm were: "Wanted—a candidate. Apply Conservative Association." "No Toronto man for us." "There's no place like home—J. C." "Remember the 5th of March." "Five hundred next time." "Hurrah for Hyman!" "Wasn't it a shame to throw John Carling over?" "We are ready: bring on the lamb for the sacrifice." "Will they stand on pigs' feet?" "Why did that customs official hide under the buffalo robe?" "What was Ed. Ming at the Beth-Emmanuel Church?" and many others.

Dehorning Cattle Is Legal in Scotland.

Wm. Bosworth, of Messrs. Speidie Bros., sheep and cattle salesmen, Glasgow, Scotland, has been visiting Messrs. Steele Bros. of Iowa, Elgin county, and in reference to the order in investigation here concerning the dehorning of cattle he says that the practice is not cruel, and greatly enhances the value of the cattle. In Scotland dehorning is legal, and without it the Scotch cattle-raiser could not feed his cattle in the winter of snow. In place of horns, the cattle during the winter season, as in Canada, they are allowed to run loose in small inclosures, a system which is claimed to have superior food-producing effects. If horned, the stronger animals would injure the weaker, and the weaker would injure their fair share of food. Consequently, dehorning is resorted to, and Scotch buyers will pay more for Canadian cattle if dehorned, as they can then place them with their own herds. Mr. Bosworth thinks it would be well if Canadian farmers should adopt the Scotch method of feeding, but if they do they must dehorn their cattle. In shipping horned cattle, either by rail or boat, serious injury is often inflicted by the stronger on the weaker.

Legal Suiting.

Thomson vs. G. T. R. Company—Aylesworth, Q.C., for the defendants, moved to set aside an appointment for the examination of one Wm. Crawford as an officer of the defendant company, for discovery before the trial. The plaintiff sues for damages for injury received in an accident while he was working upon a bridge over the River Jordan, near St. Catharines. Wm. Crawford is a bridge foreman or inspector, and was the person in charge of the work when the plaintiff was injured. The defendant company, that Crawford is not an officer, but merely a servant of the company without any authority, power or discretion. Marsh, Q.C., for the plaintiff, contended that Crawford was in the position of a sub-head of a department in control of the work, and was therefore an officer of the company for discovery. An affidavit of Mr. Hobson, engineer of the southern division of the Grand Trunk Railway, was filed, showing that he was the sole director of the bridge work in his division, but was not present at the time of the accident. The learned judge held that the fact of the absence at the time of the accident of Mr. Hobson, who was in supreme control, did not make the person in temporary charge of the work examinable. Order made setting aside the appointment. Costs to the defendants in any event.

Canada at the World's Fair.

"Canada wants at least 25,000 square feet of space for her exhibits at the Exposition, not counting the space she will ask for in the manufacturers' building after the applications have been summarized. Such was the encouraging outlook presented yesterday by Professor William Saunders, the special commissioner from Canada. Professor Saunders passed nearly the entire day at headquarters arranging the preliminaries for the Canadian exhibit, visiting all the departments. He gave notice that the Canadian Government would ask and expect at least 10,000 square feet of space in the horticultural building to show its fruits, and the same amount of space would be wanted in the mines and mining building for the display of Canada's mineral resources. He also thought that 15,000 square feet of space would be none too much for the exhibit that would be made by his government. Professor Saunders says that a considerable section of the Canadian exhibit, but that the Government hopes to make such a display of all its products as will be worthy of Canada's reputation as a government expected in the fisheries."—(Chicago Herald.)

The Bucketer's Bylaw.

At a recent meeting of the London City Council, the retiring mayor (Geo. Taylor), who, by the way, is the independent candidate for East Middlesex, addressed the Council as follows:

"As you are aware some time ago by-law was passed by this council prohibiting the purchase on the market by hucksters of poultry, vegetables and other produce. I may say that when the matter was brought before the council by No. 3 Committee I measured. However it was adopted, contrary to my judgment, and a honest endeavor on the part of our city officials has been made to enforce the by-law with very unsatisfactory results. Our market, our farmers, gardeners and producers generally who attend our market. Therefore, after carefully considering the interests of the citizens, and from a practical knowledge I have that the great want of the farmer is a prompt sale, I would recommend that the bylaw be rescinded in the best interest of all concerned. We should encourage the farmer to offer his produce on our market, and the reader also he can obtain from any purchaser, no matter who he may be, will make it a greater inducement to the seller to come to our city, patronize our market, and to purchase from our merchants in preference to going elsewhere. All of which is respectfully submitted."

It is likely that as a consequence of these recommendations the bylaw will be withdrawn, and the farmers and hucksters will regain their liberties to sell to the best advantage.

BURNS' ANNIVERSARY.

Revival of the Annual Celebration of the Great Scottish Poet's Birthday.

Mr. Robert Reid on the Lessons of His Life and Work—A Good Musical and Literary Programme.

For the first time since the celebration of the centennial of the Scottish national poet's birth, in 1859, the admirers of Robert Burns in London, commemorated the event last night. The entertainment took place in the cosy rooms of the W. C. T. U. and Vice-President J. D. Clarke presided. The attendance was not large at the start, but it increased as the programme proceeded. It was an excellent one. Professor Barron, who acted as accompanist, opened the entertainment with some pretty Scottish selections. Then came Miss Boon, who gave "The Anniversary" with dramatic effect. Miss Gilmour sang "O' the Auld Scots Can Blaw," and was enthusiastically encored; and Miss Phillips, who accompanied her, subsequently gave some lively piano selections.

THE ADDRESS OF THE EVENING.

For nearly an hour Mr. Robert Reid, president of the society, entertained the audience with a most interesting address. "One hundred and thirty-three years ago to-day," he said, "was born in a small clay bigging covered with a straw thatched roof, in the then small town of Ayr, in the west of Scotland, the most wonderful poetic genius of the eighteenth century, and we, his countrymen and countrywomen in this far-off land, thousands of miles away from where this event took place, met to-night in the last decade of the nineteenth century to do honor to the genius and work of Robert Burns, the peasant bard of Scotland. It is too late in the day to offer apologies for the faults and failings of Burns as a man. Whatever they were, they were faults common to the best and wisest of men in all ages. He was a man of great energy, who grew around his memory, propagated by centuries of bigotry, have at last been pretty well cleared away, and the keenest critics and the best men of the century have come to the front in his defense and have given him the stamp of the foremost genius of his age, and thoroughly vindicated the great purpose of the poet's life. Ninety-six years and some months have elapsed since the death of Burns, and during that time there have been more than 40 biographies of him written by men eminent in literature. More than 100 editions of his songs and poems have been issued from the press of Great Britain alone, besides those that have been issued from the American press, which I believe are quite numerous. In the face of such a multitude of biographies and criticisms it is difficult to find anything to say about Burns and his writings which has not already been much better said by such men as Francis Jeffrey, Lockhart, Carlyle, Cunningham, Chambers and Sir Walter Scott. Burns seems to disarm all criticism. Whenever censure is attempted it is at once mollified by pulsations that remove the sting. It was the loving spirit of Burns, not only for suffering humanity, but for everything in nature, animate and inanimate, which drew out our complete sympathy for him. The first manifestation of this intense spirit was shown in his love for his native land. Burns knit his countrymen together in a common bond of brotherhood. The first thing that strikes any reader of Burns is his all-absorbing patriotism. Mr. Reid referred to several incidents that had been made regarding Burns' character. The allegations that he was irreligious and profane in his personal intercourse the speaker emphatically denied. His earliest writings showed that the bent of his mind was of a deeply religious turn. Under various moods of mind he wrote a series of prayers and psalms. In "The Gossamer Saturday Night" Burns showed himself essentially a religious man and that he believed that the religious life of the peasantry of Scotland was the grand secret of the country's greatness. Mr. Reid concluded by saying: "Believing that I have given sufficient proof in these extracts that Burns was neither an immoral, irreligious or profane man, but on the contrary, that to the best of his ability, he always did justice, loved mercy and walked humbly before his God, let us join in the prayer of Wordsworth, who had a deep sympathy with nature and the poet of nature.

The address was received with the warmest approval by the audience. Its more eloquent periods were loudly applauded.

The chairman highly eulogized its merits, and hoped that in a future occasion the president would resume the subject.

OTHER CONTRIBUTIONS.

Mrs. Cooper was in the best of voice. She sang "Ye Banks and Braes o' Bonnie Doon" and "Whistle and I'll Come To Ye, My Lad," and for her own part, she gave a Bonnie Briar Bush. Mr. R. H. Morrison gave a robust rendering to that fine song, "Scots Wha Hae," and Mr. A. Templeton sang "My Highland Home" with vigor. Miss Templeton accompanying, Miss Gilmour gave "My Nannie's Awa," and Professor Barron contributed to the amusement of the audience by her rendering of one of the pawky productions of Mr. Wansley, of Detroit, with the refrain, "He Liked Her Rale Weel." Mr. J. H. Barron sang with his old-time force, "The King of the Auld Granite," and Professor Barron closed the programme with an amusing imitation of the bagpipes on the organ. Mr. J. W. Jones announced that the duet between himself and Mr. Wm. Howie was postponed on account of the weather.

President Reid moved the thanks of the assembly to the ladies and gentlemen who had so kindly given their services to the society. When the ladies came out through the "cauld Januar' win' to aid them in celebrating the national poet's birth, it proved that they had true appreciation of the importance of the occasion.

Mr. Morris (Tilsonburg), a former Londoner, seconded the motion, which was carried by a standing vote. Promptly at 10 p.m., "Auld Lang Syne" was sung, and the celebration was brought to a close.

Christ's Second Coming.

Attention is called to the meeting in the Opera House on Thursday evening next, advertised in another column, at which time a solemn testimony will be delivered to the people of London concerning the immediate coming of Jesus Christ, and the generally unprepared condition of all Christians for that event. The ADVERTISER has long advocated Christian union, and it would seem that the time has arrived when the various Christian denominations should come closer together. Mr. Wood, the lecturer of the evening, who is a strong advocate of Christian union, says that God is doing a supernatural work in these days, and that about as much to-be-desired end, as the seats will be brought free, and no collection being taken up, the lecturer must have some other object in view than money making. The ADVERTISER readers should go and see what it is.
