exactly over his own."
Cytheres said hurriedly, "Do they know at what hour."
"The doctor says it must have been between 2 and 3 o'clock this morning."
"Heard him ?"
"Heard him die."
"You heard him die? What did you hear?"
"A sound I heard once before in my life—at the death-bed of my mother. I sould not indentify it—though I recognized it. Then the dog howled, you remarked it. I did not think it worth while to tell you what I had heard a little earlier." She looked agonized.
"It would have been useless," said Miss. Aldelyffe. "All was over by that time." She addressed herself as much as Cytherea when she continued, "It is a Providence who sent you here at this juncture that I might not be left entirely alone?"
Till this instant Miss Aldelyffe had forgotton the reason of Cytherea's seclusion in her own room. So had Cytherea herself. The fact now recurred to both in one moment.

"I'll this instant Miss Aldelyffe had forgotton the reason of Cytherea's seclusion in her own room. So had Cytherea herself." The fact now recurred to both in one moment.

"Do you still wish to go?" said Miss Aldelyffe, anxiously.

"I'd don't want to go now," Cytherea had will an any likeness which Miss Aldelyffe's bereavement bore to her own; it had the appearance of being still another call to her not to forsake this woman so linked to her life for the sak of any trivial vexation.

Miss Aldelyffe held her almost as lover would have held her, and said musingly:

"We get more and more into one groove. I am now left fatherless and motherless as you were." Other ties lay behind her

I am now left fatherless and motherless as you were." Other ties lay behind her thoughts, but she did not mention them. "You loved your father, Cytherea, and wept for him."
"Yes, I did. Poor papa!"
"I was always at variance with mine, and can't weep for him now! But you must stay here always, and make a better woman of me."

of me."

The compact was thus sealed, and Cytherea, in spite of the failure of her advertisements, was installed as a veritable companion. And, once more in the history of human endeavor, a position which it was impossible to reach by any direct attempt, was to come by the seeker's swerving from the path, and regarding the original object as one of secondary importance.

CHAPTER VII. THE EVENTS OF EIGHTEEN DAYS.

THE EVENTS OF EIGHTEEN DAYS.

§ 1. August the seventeenth.

The time of day was 4 o'clock in the afternoon. The place was the lady's study or boudoir, Knapwater House. The person was Miss Aldelyfic sitting there alone, clothed in deep mourning.

The funeral of the old Captain had taken place, and his will had been read. It was very concise, and had been executed five years previous to his death. It was attested by his solicitors, Messrs. Nyttleton & Tayling, of Lincoln Inn Fields. The whole Cytherea had doubts whether an architect pure would do.

The chief pleasure connected with asking an opinion is not adopting it. Miss Aldelyffe replied decisively:
"Nonsense; of course he would. Your brother Owen makes plans for country buildings—such as cottages, homesteads, stables, and so on?"
"Yes, he does."
"And superintends the building of them?"

"Yes; he will soon."
"And he surveys land?"
"Oh, yes."

"And he surveys land?"
"Oh, yes."
"And he knows about hedges and ditches—how wide they ought to be, boundaries, leveling, planting trees to keep away the winds, measuring timber, houses for 99 years, and so on?"
I have never heard him say that; but I think Mr. Gradfield does those things.
Owen, I am afraid is inexperienced as yet."
"Yes; your brother is not old enough for such a post yet, of course. And then there are rent days, the audit and winding up of tradesmen's accounts. I am afraid, Cythie, you don't know much more about the matter than I do myself. I am going out just now," she continued. I shall not want you to walk with me to day. Run away till dinner-time."

Miss Aldelyse went out of doors, and down the steps to the lawn; then turning to the right, through a shrubbery, she opened a wicket and passed into a neglected and leafy carriage drive, leading down the hill This she followed till she reached the poin of its greatest depression, which was also the lowest ground in the whole grove.
