Accidental Death.

The inquest into the death of the late Michael Lally was concluded last evening before Coroner Flock. The evidence of a Thos. Joy, the man who was with Lally about the time of the accident, was that deceased was attempting to steel a ride between two cars on a freight train. The jury returned a verdict of accidental death, due to his own carelessness. The G. T. R. is exonerated from all blame.

Middlesex Church Notes.

The members and friends of the Methodist Church, to the number of about 100, headed by the Sparta brass band, agreeably surprised their pastor, Rov. Wm. Penhall, on Mouday evening. Mr. Marshall T. Harvey was called to the chair. A well-worded address was read on behalf of the congregation. Miss Dora Gunn and Mrs. M. T. Harvey presented Mr. Penhall with a handsome gold watch and Mrs. Penhall with a handsome gold watch and Mrs. Penhall with a dozen silver knives and forks. Refreshments and short addresses followed.

On Tuesday evening the Yarmouth Center congregation met at the residence of Mrs. Geo. Newcomb, to say farewell to Mr. Penhall and family. After refreshments had been served Mr. D. Luton, ex. M. P. P., was called to the chair. Many short complimentary addresses were made. A beautiful address was read by Miss Flora McIntyre and Mrs. Wm. Blewett on behalf of the congregation, presented Mr. Penhall eventually with a purse containing $27. A suitable reply was made. The Orwell congregation presented him with a beautiful easy chair. Mr. Penhall goes to St. Johns circuit, London township.

The Oid City Burying Grounds.

"I see," said Mr. James Gillean this morning, as the spry veteran of 50 summers' toil and enjoyment in London met an Advertiser man, "I see that you ask who remembers when there was a burying ground where O'Callaghan's terrace now stands on Ridout street? Well do I remember it. After my arrival in London in the summer of 1842, I attended many a funeral there. It was a public burying ground, and at its west end, at the corner of North street and Ridout, stood a frame Methodist Episcopal Church, a leading member of which was ex-Ald. John Christie. I recollect when many of the bodies were moved to other cemeteries in order that the land might be used for building purposes. Among the remains unearthed were those of the late Simeon Morrill's first wife, who in her day was regarded as a beauty. Her fine tresses of black hair were found in the coffin, arranged as when she was buried. The coffins in those days were not ornamented with timel, but were made of oak. I have no doubt that many bodies yet lie interred in the O'Callaghan terrace neighborhood. The graveyard extended from Ridout street to the river and west as far as North street, now Queen's avenue. At the corner of Maple and Richmond streets the Roman Catholics of this locality had a graveyard. Its entrance was where Peel's marble works and Taylor's shoe shop now stand. The bodies interred there were also removed to other graveyards. There have been many ups and dows since these cities of the dead were given up for the more medern ones."
