SAM LOYD'S PUZZLES.

GREAT PICNIC PUZZLE.

When they started off on the great annual picnic every wagon in town was pressed into service. Half-way to the grounds ten wagons broke down, so it was necessary for each of the remaining wagons to carry one more person. When they started for home it was discovered that fifteen more wagons were out of commission, so on the return trip there were three persons more in each wagon than when they started out in the morning. Now who can tell how many people attended the great annual picnic? ANSWER TO REAPER'S PROBLEM PRINTED FRIDAY.

In that problem of the three reapers, Ben could have done the work in 12 and 12-29 days, and Bill would have required 48 days, while if they both worked together, they could have completed it in 9 and 63-73 days. Jake, who could do the job in nine days, is evidently worth ten shillings for the five days. Ben who should have received 40 shillings, got three shillings and ninepence less, as that was given to Bill, which establishes his rating, so that it would take him 48 days to earn 90 shillings.

A Perplexed Man. Walter Evertsen was as good as his word, and gave a considerable amount of his time to Dubuisson's affairs. He began by helping him to select a suitable lodging in King street, and laughed when his com-panion expressed some doubt concerning the requisite depth of his pocket. "If we all paused to consider such a trifle as that," said Evertsen, "a vast number of us might as well be dead and buried. If you would catch a fortune, you must make the bait attrac-

And, these pre-liminaries settled, Evertsen introduced Victor to some of his friends, took him to the clubs, arranged that he should receive a bow from the Prince Regent at Carlton House, and brought him generally into contact with men of fashion and position. Without gambling much and without drinking to excess, vices which were foreign to his nature, Victor Dubuisson managed to mpress his new companions as being an acquaintance well worth cultivating. Of course, such friendship was all on the surface, a veneer merely but it served the purpose of unlocking 382,800; working expenses, £2,422,400; the gates of the world of fashion into success. It must be admitted that Evertsen's help was given unselfishly; he had little to gain by it, and perhaps his feeling towards Dubuisson had rather more depth in it than his sentiments toward his fellows usually had. There was a certain quiet force about Dubuisson which was attractive: he could be frivolous, but it was more natural to him to be serious, to get down under the surface of things and to see the real earnestness of life. Evertsen realized this, and at those times when there was any semblance of

The Value and Economy of Bovril

BOVRIL is a very concentrated preparation and contains all the stimulating and flavoring qualities of beef plus the Fibrin and Albumen.

The Fibrin and Albumen of the beef give to BOVRIL its high nutritive value and make it entirely different from meat extracts.

BOVRIL is so rich in food value and its nourishment is so easily absorbed that, when used in making soup, preparing stews, ragouts, etc., it renders the use of a large quantity of meat unnecessary, at the same time building up a reserve of health and strength in the system. A 1-lb bottle of BOVRIL will make 50 portions of good nourishing soup at a cost of 3½ cents

For giving strength and vitality to the system and warding off colds, grip and other ailments BOVRIL is without an equal.
