LIVE STOCK.

There was a very small supply of pats in, and the demand was very brisk. The price still continues to advance, and today they sold from $1 65 to $1 72. There is such a steady demand and so little apparently with which to meet that demand that there is little likelihood that there will be any decrease in price.

Other prices remain as follows:

The structure was no rush about it today. The run was comparatively light, and prices were not any easier than last week. The general tone was, in fact, firmer, and toward still higher prices for this week, unless there should be very heavy runs in the next couple of days. Export cattle were today bought mostly for local butcher prices, leaving very few for actual shipping. hipping.
