CHILD WELFARE EXPLAINS HOW TO TAKE CARE OF BABY

Offers Mothers Simple Rules To Follow in Hot Weather.

NO ICE CREAM

The child welfare association offers a few simple rules to make the baby more comfortable and to insure health during the hot summer months. Last year was an unusually good one for young babies, as there were no prolonged hot spells, but the city may not be so fortunate this year, and last year London lost 105 children under five years of age. The great majority of these died during the summer months, many of whom might not have been sacrificed if simple precautions had been taken.

The following are good rules to Nurse your baby.

Do not wean your baby without consulting your doctor. If the baby is bottle-fed, keep the food covered and on ice. If you have no ice put the milk in a pan of cool water, changing the water frequently. Cover the milk with a clean cloth, allowing the ends to touch the water. The evaporation keeps the milk cool.

No Ice Cream.

Do not give ice cream or unripe or too-ripe fruit to young children. Do not allow them to eat between meals. Children require only three-quarters as much food in hot weather cool weather.

Designers Strive To Please Miss Fashionable, Says London Buyer.

Dress lengths and sleeve lengths cut at the point desired by the customer is the mode in England and on the continent now, according to J. A. Atcheson, buyer of Smallman & Ingram, who has just returned from Europe with A. M. Trick, also of the firm.

Mr. Atcheson says that the shor skirt is popular in London and Paris just as it is here. Some extremists wear dresses quite short, just to the knee, the more conservative dressers drop them lower.

Sleeve lengths run from no sleeves to full length in both afternoon and evening gowns, according to the fancy of the wearer. Hand-beaded work of the French variety still has la great attraction for women abroad.

There is a growing demand for hand-embroidered lace in blouse tunics. In knitted wear the tenden-cies are toward a long full coat with heavy collars and cuffs. A new type of tennis suits of jer-sey is fashionable. White predom-inates, with flashes of color. The necks come in Peter Pan, turtle and
