THE GREAT PARIS 200.

haired negre or a four leaved sliamrock is a milk white blackbird, and the garden now arithitis three of them. Then, again, we have a whole village of American prairie dogs. They mostly sit up on their wee hind legs and whistle, and when winter draws on they take to their burrows in the soil and go to sleep under the werm snow.

One of the functions of the garden is to terms and break to the harness certain animals counted unmanageable. The sebra is one of these. The society has succeeded perfectly in breaking the zebra and making him work in the field outs like the house. sectly in breaking the sebra and making him work in the field quite like the horse. A very beautiful animal, the hemione, has been bred by crossing the wild ass of Mongo his with the French variety. A splendid sample of gray mule has been obtained by means of a plebald ass from Nubis and a means of a plebald ass from Nubis and a aum. Then there is the tame estrich, which allows itself also to be harnessed to a small carriage and to draw a lively, laughing group of children in it over the garden. Juliette, the female elephant who was Romeo's companion and escaped the shambles during the siege, still walks her, beaten path with a living load, as in former years, followed or preceded by damels, drome-daries, horses, ponies, yaks, goats, lamas, etc., yoked to all manner of vehicles.

The Ashantee troupe consists of thirteen men, most of them being warriors, four married women and two girls, The chief, Umque Lantobs, 51 years of age, is a very powerful looking man. The two girls, Bundiger and Rannei Zooloo, are, respectively, 16 and 17. Names is very pretty and cases for a beauty
