Telling the Truth

"I sent for you, Mrs. Binter," began the public school principal, "not so much because Jerry isn't behaving himself in school—though he isn't at all the kind of boy he ought to be. I must say—as because he seems to have a habit of telling such dreadful falsehoods. We can't believe a thing he says."

"Did you ever?" ejaculated Mrs. Binter. "An' if there's one thing that's always talked into him at home it is to tell the truth. When he comes home last night and tells you the worst of me, I just tell him I won't be going to take no excuses from him, an' I started in right then and licked him something fierce. He got a warning up he won't forget in a hurry."

"An' you can be sure I'm that sorry for his teacher I'll do anything for her. He'll get a licking, good an' proper, every time she says he needs it, an' don't you forget it."

"Come here, Jerry," said the principal to the dejected boy, who had snivelled ostentatiously in his cap during his mother's speech. "I think you may go up to your room while I talk to your mother. I'll send for you later. Just sit down, Mrs. Binter," she went on, as a streak of boyish wit vanished out of the door. "I am sorry you punished Jerry before I came."

"O, that's all right," Mrs. Binter broke in reassuringly. "I'd just as lief do it as not. It ain't the trouble that I mind, and I know he must both be his teacher something fierce. I'm always ready to lick him. You just send him home any time an' I'll see to him."

"I don't think you quite understand began the school principal again. "I wanted to see you to have a talk about the untruths that Jerry tells. Two days ago, for instance, he told me he took away a ball which he was playing with in the cloak room. You know he might break a window with it if he plays with it in the building. Miss Bremer put it on her table, and when she came back after recess it was gone. She suspected that Jerry had taken it, but he denied it, and even cried, and said it was her fault, and she'd have to get him another ball. Some of the boys came and told Miss Bremer that Jerry had taken the ball in his pocket, and so she brought him to me, and I made him produce the ball."

"Something like that happens almost every day. Yesterday Miss Bremer had trouble with him because he tried to make her believe he was eight days in his spelling when she had marked his paper fifty. You see how commonly he tells these untruths. Does he do it at home, and do you talk to him seriously about it?"

"Well, I should say so," asserted Mrs. Binter. "I'm always telling him to be honest. An' we do everything we can to make him learn his lessons. I just told him last night that if he didn't pass for fifth grade in June I'd send him to the reform school. Yes, I did! I told him that nearly every day an' I got him so good and frightened that he brought his books home every evening an' you know he passed!"

"Yes," said the principal, "he passed. O, of course, I didn't mean it." Mrs. Binter assured her. "I wouldn't let my boy go away from me, but he didn't know that an' it scared him all right. If you people here'd just tell him you'd send him to the reform school you'd find out he'd toe the mark."

The principal sighed to herself and began a new line of attack. "Does his father take any hand in your son's training?" she inquired. "I think when a boy gets to be Jerry's age his father ought to keep pretty close watch on his habits."

"His father works nights and sleeps daytimes mostly," replied Mrs. Binter. "An' he's that hard on the kids I never tell him what they do. Why, he'd pound Jerry to a jelly if he heard about him lying to his teacher. This way, I don't dare tell him anything like that."

"Why, last week I kept Jerry in from his play Saturday 'cause he'd stayed up so late the night before an' when his father saw him he says, 'What you doing here, kid?' an' I spoke up quick, I was so afraid Jerry'd tell him why, an' say 'Jerry's got the toothache, an' I told him to stay by the stove.' His father wouldn't have him tell no lies for anything. Him an' me tells Jerry always to be honest an' never to say anything that ain't so."

"Well," said the principal, "I'm sorry I had to trouble you to come to see me. But I wanted to be sure that home influence with the boy was what it should be and I can always find that out more quickly by talking with a boy's mother than in any other way. Of course, if he lives with people who are themselves are always straight-forward and insist on honesty in him, he is sure to outgrow the bad habit. I believe a great deal in the force of example in training children. If a boy's mother and father are always strictly truthful with him he is far more apt to be honest himself, don't you think so?"

"Sure," assented Mrs. Binter. "An' we always do the right thing by him. You see, I licked him the minute he told me yesterday that he was waiting to see me. An' I'll do the same thing to see me."

"I have not been without a bottle of Coltsfoot's Expectorant in the house for over nine years. At that time I procured it for a bad cold I had. Nearly all of them have been subject to cough, and that's when I find Coltsfoot's Expectorant useful. You are welcome to use this testimonial as you wish."

When commonness doesn't trouble you
When you do not feel troubled by a poor day's work, or when a slighted job does not haunt you as it once did.

When you can work untired in the midst of confused, systemless surroundings which you might remedy.
When you can listen without protest to indignant stories.
When your ambition begins to cool, and you no longer demand the same standard of excellence that you once did.
When you do not make a confidante of your mother as you once did, or are ill at ease with her.
When you begin to think your father an old fogey.
When you begin to associate with people whom you would not think of taking to your home, and would not want the members of your families to know that you knew—Success.

Remember that when the stomach nerves fail or weaken, Dyspepsia or Indigestion must always follow. But, strengthen these same inside nerves with Dr. Shoop's Restorative, and then see how quickly health will again return. Weak Heart and Kidney nerves can also be strengthened with the Restorative, where heart pains, palpitation, or kidney weakness is found. Don't drug the stomach, or stimulate the Heart or Kidneys. That is wrong. Go to the cause of these ailments. Strengthen these weak inside nerves with Dr. Shoop's Restorative and get well. A simple, single test will surely tell.

PARDONABLE.
(Harper's Weekly.)

A prominent novelist spoke recently at a Boston Club about the wonders of modern invention. He said: "There was an old fisherman rowing in his boat one day, when an automobile came sprang a leak near him and immediately sank."

"However the wrecked canoeists managed to swim to him, and as they clambered into his boat one of them spluttered angrily: "Confound you, why didn't you lend us a hand? Didn't you see we were sinking?"

"The old man took his pipe out of his mouth and stared at them in astonishment. "Blessed if I didn't think you was one of them new-fangled submarines," he said."

TOO SUGGESTIVE.

Mr. McGuire (to hospital attendant)—"What did ye say the doctor's name was?"

Attendant—"Dr. Kilpatrick."

Mr. McGuire—"That settles it. No doctor said that cognomen will get a chance to operate on me—not if I know it."

Attendant—"Why not?"

Mr. McGuire—"Well, ye see, my name is Patrick."

UNEQUALLED AS A CURE FOR CROUP.

Besides being an excellent remedy for colds and throat troubles, Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is unequalled as a cure for croup, says Harry Wilson of Waynesboro, Ind. When given as soon as the croupy cough appears, this remedy will prevent the attack. It is used successfully in many thousands of homes. For sale by:

KNEW WHAT SHE WANTED.

A teacher asked her class to draw a picture of what they wished to be when they grew up. The pupils went diligently to work with paper and pencil, some drawing pictures of soldiers, policemen, fire ladies, etc. They all worked hard, except one little girl, who sat quietly holding her pen and pencil in hand.

The teacher, observing her asked: "Don't you know what you want to be when you grow up, Anne?"

"Yes, I know," replied the little girl. "But I don't know how to draw it. I want to be married."

PROF. H. A. HOWELL, OF HAVANA, CUBA, RECOMMENDS CHAMBERLAIN'S COUGH REMEDY.

As long as I can remember, my mother was a faithful user and friend of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, but never in my life have I realized its true value until now," writes Prof. H. A. Howell, of Howell's American School, Cuba. "The night of Feb. 3d our baby was taken sick with a very severe cold, the next day was worse and the following night was desperate. He could not lie down and it was necessary to have him in the arms every moment. Even then, his breathing was difficult. I did not think he would live until morning. At last I thought of mother's remedy, Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which we have, and it afforded prompt relief, and now, three days later, he has fully recovered. Under the circumstances, I would like to state a moment in saying that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and that only, saved the life of our dear little boy. For sale by:

DISASTER AHEAD.

"In my school days," said a story-teller, who was trying to illustrate the absurdity and futility of unfounded fears, "we used to have a lecture every Friday afternoon. One day the lecturer was a geologist and spoke of a formation of the falls, described the different periods to be traced in the gorge, and then went on to say that the falls were slowly wearing back towards Buffalo, and that in the course of two hundred thousand years they would have worn back to Erie, Pennsylvania, and that town would be left high and dry."

"Suddenly one of the girls in my class began to sob convulsively."

"What is the matter?" asked the teacher in alarm.

"Oh," wailed the girl, "my sister lives in Erie!"
