

anti-colonial forces have been successful in promoting a very broad ideological consensus on the impropriety of a continuation of colonialism. This is now being extended into international law - a new law delegitimizing colonial possession and justifying measures of liberation.

35. I think most Canadians will agree that our support must go to those who seek to end colonialism and apartheid. The difficulty is that the hard-core cases - the Portuguese Territories, Rhodesia and South Africa, are unlikely to be solved by the kinds of pressures which have been successful elsewhere. The accepted law regarding sovereignty makes the alteration of the status quo by means which the West has hitherto considered legal to be impossible.

36. The solution of the Afro-Asians is to change the law, - to give legal justification to assistance for wars of national liberation, to declare colonialism per se to be illegal,