Startling Sudden!

Death of the Archbishop of Canterbury.

While Attending Service in the Church at Hawarden.

Taken Ill in the Gladstone's Family Pew—Impressive Tributes to the Deceased Prelate.

London, Oct. 11.—Rt. Hon. and Most Rev. Edward White Benson, D.D., Archbishop of Canterbury, Primate of All England, and Metropolitan and Exarch of the East, died suddenly yesterday while attending divine service in the church at Hawarden.

The archbishop was the guest of Mr. Gladstone, through whom he was appointed Archbishop of Canterbury.

In company with the Gladstone family, he was attending the service at Hawarden church at 10 o'clock on Saturday morning.

After the service had proceeded a few minutes, the archbishop, who was seated in the front of the church, suddenly fell back in his seat.

He was immediately assisted by the church attendants, who were moving the archbishop, who was suffering from a sudden attack of apoplexy.

He was taken to the rectory and assistance was hastily summoned. He died at 11 o'clock.

The cause of death was apoplexy.

The archbishop was 72 years of age.

A PANTHER SAILED OVER HIM.

Shows a Scratch on His Hand to Prove the Truth of His Story.

A Superior, Wis., telegram says: That there are panthers in the forests of North Wisconsin has now been settled beyond a doubt.

The half-raising cry of this dreaded beast has been heard by hunters and woodsmen frequently during the past two years according to reports, but it has always been difficult to convince people that the cries heard were not those of some other beast or bird, as no one had, until yesterday, come in contact with one of the animals, and it was generally believed that they were extinct.

Yesterday a settler named John Henderson, living up to a claim out in the woods, seven miles from Maple Station, on the Northern Pacific road, while hunting partridges and other game in the thickest of a dense pine forest, had an adventure which proved beyond doubt that there is a real panther in this section.

Henderson was walking about 200 feet in advance of his companion, separated from his view by the closely clustered trees and thick tangled underbrush, when a piercing shriek, not unlike that of a woman in distress, came from on a short distance ahead of him, and it was the sound of several minutes, unable to move a muscle. Finally he recovered sufficiently to realize that it would be policy for him to retreat, and he started to do so, but on turning around cast his eyes slightly upward and gazed up at a sight that paralyzed every nerve in his body and rendered him utterly helpless.

The cat-like pangs of his forepaws firmly grasping a slender limb, as if prepared for a spring, and its eyes glaring like balls of fire down into the orbs of the victim, Henderson says he remained for several minutes, and every second he expected to see the animal spring from its perch and descend upon him.

He wanted to shoot, but he could not get the gun, and a foot to run, but he did not raise a foot.

Finally a stinging wind from the west struck him, and in an instant the second hunter appeared on the scene.

The panther's piercing shriek sprang from its throat, and Henderson, realizing the danger, turned and fled.

He saw the newcomer, and the difference between Sunday and other days, as his visits are made before the church bells begin to ring.

"Washing made graceful."

(After a sketch in New York Truth.)

We want to show it, because this seems to be a woman who uses

Pearline (see with). She's doing no work to speak of, you see—she doesn't look as if she ever had to. She appears to be rinsing out the clothes,

after letting them soak in Pearline (see with) and water, which is about all the labor
