TRAIN WORK POORLY PAID, GERMAN YOUTHS SPURN IT
Geneva, Aug. 28. (A. P. by Mail)—Intellectual occupations in low exchange countries like Germany seem destined to extinction, and the younger generation is turning to more remunerative manual work, according to evidence before a League of Nations Commission, now investigating this question. Teachers, writers and journalists are so poorly paid, no new recruits can be found. The commission, in which John Henry Wigmore, Dean of North Western University, is active, may ask American colleges for aid.
