

loving-kindness of the Lord. Truly "His compassions fail not, they are new every morning; great is His faithfulness."

We received and read at this time, all the epistles from the different Yearly Meetings with which we are in correspondence. In the hearing thereof, our earnest desires have been raised to the God and Father of us all, that He may in the continued extension of His marvellous loving-kindness and power, condescend to bless you with all spiritual blessings, to the end that you may be faithful in every good word and work, and know a being joyful in His praise. In your tried and isolated state, we call your attention to the Lord's favored people formerly. Hath not "the Lord our God given you a good land, a land of brooks of water, of fountains and depths that spring out of valleys and hills; a land of wheat and barley, a land wherein you shall eat bread without scarceness, and you shall not lack anything in it? and when you have eaten and are full, then shall you bless the Lord your God for the good land which He has given you."—Deut. viii, 7-10.

We desire that you may profit by the legacy that our Saviour left us, when He said, "Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you." The mind that is rightly stayed on the Lord is in peace. We take comfort in believing that there are those amongst you, who, like Simeon of old, can reverently bless the Lord, that their eyes have been opened to see His salvation. May such be strengthened to hold fast their hope. In every storm of trial or of conflict, may this hope be to them as an anchor to the soul, both sure and steadfast, entering into the eternal realities within the veil, and may they be so kept by the power of God, through faith unto the very end, as to witness the Lord Jesus in the fulness of His redeeming love, to be not only their hope, but their final rest and everlasting praise.

The business that claimed our attention, through the different sittings of this meeting, has been weightily considered, and judgment arrived at in unity and condescen-
