[DAILY EDITION]

THE CANADA FOOD COMPANY,

HE Canada Food Company, Limited, incorporated under the Nova Scotia Joint Stock Companies' Act, with headquarters at Halifax, has been organized for the purpose of acquiring and operating the wholesale grocery business of MORRISON'S LIMITED, Amberst, and MORRISON'S WILLIAMS, Halifax, and the establishment of stores in the undermentioned towns, arrangements having been completed for the taking over of some of the most progressive retail businesses in the province. There will be three stores in Halifax, one in Darimouth, and one store each in the towns of Windsor, Kentville, Canning, Bridgetown, Digby, Wolfville, Stellarton, Yarmouth, Liverpool, Truro, Westville, New Glasgow, Antigonish, Sydney, North Sydney, Anticolis

The company will from time to time add to and operate stores in other growing centres of the province, and will erect a modern warehouse in Halifax, where also a small up-to-date cold storage and refrigerating plant will be installed. The establishment of stores throughout the province will enable the produce of the farmers to be sold direct to the consumer, with the advantage of passing through but one channel. The Company's business will be on a cash basis, eliminating bad debts.

It will be co-operative, thus affording opportunities to the investor and the customer.

The new building at Canning which has lately been acquired by The Canada Food Company, Limited. The structure has a frontage on Main street of 85 feet and a depth of 70 feet. It is of brick, concrete and steel. The rear is on the river where the railway connects with the wharf, affording excellent shipping facilisties. The building has commodious cellars for the storage of heavy goods coming by steamer to the port for reshipment to the Canada Food Company's Valley branches.

Management

The directors, all of whom are known to the public as successful and capable business men, have been particularly fortunate in securing the services of two experienced men for the WHOLESALE and RETAIL departments, in Mr. D. A. Morrison, now operating wholesale stores in Hallfax, Truro, Amherst and St. John, and Mr. A. S. Burgess, who for eight years has been conducting business in Canning, operating and managing The Trading Company. Both Mr. Morrison and Mr. Burgess, who are well-known business men, are admirably qualified to make a success of the enterprise.

Twice during the morning he drove to the entrance of Clifford's inn, but each time his courage failed him and he returned to Grosvenor square to learn that the expected message from Loder had not come.

CHAPTER VI.

It was a wearing condition of mind, but at worst it was scarcely more than an exaggeration of what his state had been for menths and made but little In the afternoon he took his place in

In one of the lobbies he encountered

Fraide surrounded by a group of friends. With his usual furtive haste he would have passed on, but moving away from his party the old man accosted him. He was always courteously particular in his treatment of Chilcote, as the husband of his ward and god-

"Better, Chilcote," he said, holding out his hand. At the sound of the low, rather formal tones, so characteristic of the old statesman, a hundred memories rose to Chilcote's mind, a hundred hours distasteful in the living and un-bearable in the recollection, and with them the new flash of hope, the new possibility of freedom. In a sudden Fraide pressed his fingers kindly.

"That is right," he said. "That is right. I called at Grosvenor square this morn-ing, but Eve told me your illness of the other day was not serious. She was very busy this morning. She could only spare me a quarter of an hour She is indefatigable over the social side of your prospects, Chilcote. You owe her a large debt. A popular wife means a great deal to a politician."

The steady eyes of his companion disturbed Chilcote.

He drew away his hand. "Eve is unique," he said vaguely. Fraide smiled. "That is right," he said again. "Admiration is too largely excluded from modern marriages." And with a courteous excuse he rejoined his friends.

It was dinner time before Chilcote could desert the house, but the moment departure was possible he hurried to Grosvenor square. As he entered the house the hall was empty. He swore irritably under his breath and pressed the nearest bells Since his momentary exaltation in Fraide's presence his spirits had steadily fallen until now they hung at the lowest ebb. As he waited in unconcealed impatience for an answer to his summons he caught sight # his man Allsopp at the head of the stairs. "Come here!" he called, pleased t find some one upon whom to vent his irritation. "Has that wire come for "No, sir. I inquired five minutes back. "Inquire again."

"Yes, sir." Allsopp disappeared.

A second later after his disappea ance the bell of the hall door whizzed Chilcote started. All sudden sounds, like all strong lights, affected him. He half moved to the door, then stopped himself with a short exclamation. At the same instant Allsopp reappeared.

Chilcote turned on him excitedly. "What the devil's the meaning of this?" he said. "A battery of servants in the house and nobody to open the hall door!" Allsopp looked embarrassed. "Crap

"No."
"Then the bargain's sealed."

Loder walked slowly across the room and, taking up his position by the man-telpiece, looked at his companion. The similarity between them as they faced each other seemed abnormal, defying even the closest scrutiny. And yet, so mysterious is nature even in her lapses they were subtly, indefinably different Chilcote was Loder deprived of one es-sential; Loder, Chilcote with that es-sential bestowed. The difference lay neither in feature, in coloring nor in height, but in that baffling, illusive inner illumination that some call indi viduality and others soul.

Something of this idea, misted and tangled by nervous imagination, crossed Chilcote's mind in that moment of scrutiny, but he shrank from it appre-"I-I came to discuss details." he said quickly, crossing the space that divided him from his host. "Shall we?— Are you?"— He paused un-spoke with abrupt decision. Moving to the table, he indicated a chair and drew another forward for himself. Both men sat down.

Chilcote leaned forward, resting elbows on the table. "There will be several things to consider," he began nervously, looking across at the other.

"Quite so." Loder glanced back appreciatively. "I thought about those things the better part of last night. To begin with, I must study your hand-writing. I guarantee to get it right, but it will take a month." "A month!"

"Well, perhaps three weeks. We mustn't make a mess of things."
Chilcote shifted his position.
"Three weeks!" he repeated. "Couldn't

"No, I couldn't." Loder spoke au-thoritatively. "I might never want to put pen to paper; but, on the other hand, I might have to sign a check one day." He laughed. "Have you ever thought of that—that I might have to, or want to, sign a checks."

"No. I confess that escaped me" "No. I contess that escaped me."
"You risk your fortune that you may keep the place it bought for you?"
Loder laughed again. "How do you know that I am not a blackguard?" he added. "How do you know that I won't clear out one day and leave ve high and dry? What is to prevent John Chilcote from realizing £40,000 or £50,000 and then making himself scaree?" "You won't do that," Chilcote said.

with unusual decision. "I told you your weakness last night, and it wasn't money. Money isn't the rock you'll split over." "Then you think I'll split upon some rock? But that's beyond the question.
To get to business again. You'll risk my studying your signature?" Chilcote nodded. "Right! Now item two." Loder counted on his fingers. "I must know the names and faces of your men friends as far as I can. Your woman friends don't count. While I'm you, you will be adamant." He laughed again pleasantly. "But the men are essential—the backbone of the whole business." "I have no men friends. I don't trust the idea of friendship." "Acquaintances, then."

Chilcote looked up sharply. "I think we score there," he said. "I have a reputation for absentmindedness that will carry you anywhere. They tell me I can look through the most substan-tial man in the house as if he were gos-samer, though I may have lunched with him the same day."

Loder smiled. "By Jove!" he exclaimed. "Fate must have been constructing this before either of us was born. It dovetails ridiculously. But 1 must know your colleagues, even if it's only to cut them. You'll have to take me to the house."

"Impossible!"
"Not at all!" Again the tone of an thority fell to Loder. "I can pull my hat over my eyes and turn up my coat collar. Nobody will notice me.

We can choose the fall of the after noon. I promise you 'twill be all right." "Suppose the likeness should leak Loder laughed confidently. "Tush, man! Risk is the salt of life. I must see you at your post, and I must see the men you work with." He rose, walked across the room and took his pipe from the rack. "When I go in for a tring I like to go in over head Loder, still looking at his hand, didn't seem to hear. "There's only one thing to be done," he said. "Each wear two rings on the third finger of the left hand. Two rings ought to cover it." He made a speculative measur
