Spirited Excal finishes 2nd

There are few precious moments in the annals of sports history when one team can capture the hearts of an adoring nation. Team Canada in 1972, the 1980 Olympic hockey team, and the 1927 New York Yankees are shining examples of this feat, and on May 10, one more team was nearly added to this celebrated and fabled group. The Excalibur Existentialists made a valiant grasp at immortality but fell just short.

The Excal nine played tough, dug deep, gave it their all, played with a spirit of fun and kinship, and had the proper amount of females on their team (which the other did not).

Mel Broitman anchored the outfield for the team while Mario Scatoloni, Rebecca Cann, Susan Spurling, Vicky Fusca, Wendy Ward, Reya Ali (briefly) and Lorne Manly solidified the infield. Excal's tireless typesetter, Stuart Ross, covered the field brilliantly from his rover position. Ross, immediately after a brilliant inning-ending shoestring catch, rapped a solid base hit into right field, that seemed to wake the team up, provoking a furious last inning comeback.

But alas, the Excal nine ended up on the losing end of a 24-12 score. And there was no joy in Mudville for the mighty Casey had struck out.
