Admiral Casey made his family a to Seattle yesterday and immediately returned to his ship. As in the case of the Wisconsin, all The following information as to that he was receiving a salary of furloughs and shore leave have been carried by Bouthillette.

The battleship Wisconsin was all provisioned early in the day yesterday and had steam up ready to sail; long before noon. The dense clouds of smoke from the forest fires that engulfed the Sound in almost total darkness and made navigation difficult, made the officers hesitate about leaving at 1 o'clock as intended

There was some talk of the little gunboat Boston now at the navy yard being ordered to accompany one or other of the battleships to their destination, but the naval officers there say that such a rumor is without foundation, for the reason that the gunboat needs some extensive repairing before she again can undertake a lengthy ocean voyage.
