

THE ACADIAN
One Year to Any Address
for $1.00.

The Acadian.

No better advertising medium in the Valley than
THE ACADIAN.

HONEST, INDEPENDENT, FEARLESS.

VOL. XXVIII.

WOLFVILLE, KINGS CO., N. S.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 27, 1908.

NO. 11

THE ACADIAN.

Published every Friday morning by the Proprietors,
DAVIDSON BROS.,
WOLFVILLE, N. S.

Subscription price is $1.00 a year in advance.
Newspapers from all parts of the county, or articles upon the topics of the day, are cordially solicited.

Advertisements in this paper are charged for on a per line basis. The rate for the first insertion is 25 cents per line for each subsequent insertion.

Contract rates for yearly advertisements furnished on application.
By Air, Quotations ten cents per line first week, and five cents per line for each subsequent week.

Copy for new advertisements will be received up to Thursday noon. Copy for changes in contract advertisements must be in the office by Wednesday noon.

Advertisements in which the number of insertions is not specified will be continued and charged for until otherwise ordered.

This paper is mailed regularly to subscribers until a definite order to discontinue is received and all arrears are paid in full.

Job Printing is executed at this office in the latest styles and at moderate prices.

All postmasters and news agents are authorized agents of the Acadian for the purpose of receiving subscriptions, but receipts for same are only given from the office of publication.

TOWN OF WOLFVILLE.
W. MARSHALL BLACK, Mayor,
A. E. COLWELL, Town Clerk.

OFFICE HOURS:
9:00 to 12:30 a. m.
1:30 to 3:00 p. m.
Close on Saturday at 12 o'clock.

POST OFFICE, WOLFVILLE.
OFFICE HOURS, 8:00 a. m. to 8:30 p. m.
Mails are made up as follows:
For Halifax and Windsor close at 6:15 a. m.
Express west close at 9:15 a. m.
Express east close at 4:10 p. m.
Kentville close at 5:45 p. m.

CHURCHES.
BAPTIST CHURCH.—Rev. E. D. Webber, Pastor. Services: Sunday, preaching at 11 a. m. and 7:00 p. m.; Sunday School at 2:30 p. m. E. Y. P. U. prayer meeting on Tuesday evening at 7:30, and Church prayer-meeting on Thursday evening at 7:30. Women's Missionary Aid Society meets on Wednesday following the first Sunday in the month on the third Wednesday of the month at 3:30 p. m. All seats free. Others at the door to welcome strangers.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.—Rev. David Wright, Pastor. St. Andrew's Church, Wolfville: Public Worship every Sunday at 11 a. m. and at 7 p. m. Sunday School at 9:45 a. m. Prayer Meeting on Wednesday at 7:30 p. m. Chalmers' Church, Lower Horton: Public Worship on Sunday at 3 p. m. Sunday School at 10 a. m. Prayer Meeting on Tuesday at 7:30 p. m.

METHODIST CHURCH.—Rev. E. B. Moore, Pastor. Services on the Sabbath at 11 a. m. and 7 p. m. Sabbath School at 10 o'clock a. m. Prayer Meeting on Thursday evening at 7:30. All singing on Sabbath and prayer meetings at all the services. At Greenfield, preaching at 3 p. m. on the Sabbath, and prayer meeting at 7:30 p. m. on Wednesdays.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND.
St. John's Parish Church, of Horton. Services: Holy Communion every Sunday, 8 a. m.; first and third Sunday at 11 a. m. and 7 p. m. Special services: Evening, 7:30 p. m. Special services: Sunday School, 10 a. m.; Superintendent and teacher of Bible Class, the Rectory.

Rev. R. F. Dixon, Rector.
Geo. A. Prax, Warden.
St. Francis (Catholic)—Rev. Martin Carroll, P. P.—Mass 11 a. m. the fourth Sunday of each month.

THE TABERNACLE.—Rev. A. Coburn, D. D., Superintendent. Services: Sunday, 8 a. m.; first and third Sunday at 11 a. m. and 7 p. m. Gospel service at 7:30 p. m. Prayer meeting Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock.

MASONIC.
St. George's Lodge, A. F. & A. M., meets at their Hall on the second Friday of each month at 7:30 o'clock.

ODDFELLOWS.
ORDER OF THE 32, meets every Monday evening at 8 o'clock, in their hall in Harris' Block. Visiting brethren always welcomed.
E. W. DUNCANSON, Secretary.

TEMPERANCE.
WOLFVILLE DIVISION 8, of T. meets every Monday evening in their Hall at 7:30 o'clock.

FORESTERS.
A. Blomquist, I. O. F., meets in Odd Fellows' Hall on the third Wednesday of each month at 7:30 p. m.

SCOTIA FARM DAIRY
J. Rufus Starr, Proprietor
BEST QUALITY MILK AND CREAM.
FRESH EGGS supplied early every morning by our teams.
Leave orders at Mrs. Hutchinson's, telephone exchange, or telephone No. 15 at Fort Williams.

Free Our New Illustrated Catalog for Fall and Winter is Ready.

Sit right down now and send your name and address for this beautifully illustrated Catalog. It contains pictures of the very latest styles in women's suits, coats, skirts, undergarments, waists, house dresses, kimonos, corsets, gloves and other lines of ready-to-wear goods, besides giving description and prices of all kinds of dry goods.

Those whose names are already on our list will receive a copy of this Catalog as soon as they can be mailed out. You will find it of valuable assistance in buying your fall and winter supply of garments and dry goods.

If you are not a customer of ours, will you kindly send your name to Catalog 4A.

MAHON BROTHERS LIMITED

Mail Order Department, Halifax, Canada.

School Supplies.

We keep the largest stock of School Supplies in town therefore we give the lowest prices. Try us for School Books, Pencils, Erasers, Note Books, Scribblers, Pens.

$1000.00 as Prizes in Book.
$1000.00 in books given to the boys and girls of Canada as prizes for the best copy of the picture on the cover of The Prize Practice Book. This book which serves as an excellent scribbler, is on sale here only. Come and learn full particulars.

SPECIAL For a short time we will sell a 5 cent scribbler and a one cent eraser together for 4 cents.

FLO. M. HARRIS

WOLFVILLE, N. S.

EIGHTH MARITIME WINTER FAIR

— WILL OPEN AT —
AMHERST
Nov. 30 to Dec. 3, 1908.

The greatest educational event of the Maritime Provinces along Agricultural Lines.
Excellent programme of lectures nightly.
Low Rates on all Railway Lines.
Entries close November 15th.

Professional Cards.

DENTISTRY.
Dr. A. J. McKenna
Graduate of Philadelphia Dental College
Office in McKenna Block, Wolfville.
Telephone No. 43.
Gas Administration.

Dr. J. T. Roach
DENTIST.
Graduate Baltimore College of Dental Surgeons, Office in HENRIE BLOCK, WOLFVILLE, N. S.
Office Hours: 9-1, 2-5.

Leslie R. Fairn,
ARCHITECT,
AYLESFORD, N. S.
W. R. FORBES, E. C. HARRY W. ROBERTS, L.L.B.
ROSCOE & ROSCOE
BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS,
NOTARIES, ETC.
WOLFVILLE, N. S.

E. F. MOORE
PHYSICIAN & SURGEON.
OFFICE: Delaney's Building, Main St.
RESIDENCE: Methodist Parsonage, Gasperson Avenue.
OFFICE HOURS: 9-10 a. m., 2-3 p. m., 7-9 p. m.
Telephone connection at office and residence.

Wolfville Real Estate Agency.
Persons wishing to buy or sell apply to
J. W. BELFORD, Man. gen.
Wolfville, April 27.

At Wolfville.
Building Lots for sale on the Rand Hill, fronting on Victoria Avenue and the new street, running east and west across the hill (King street).
The lots are conveniently and beautifully situated in the centre of the town.
Land good. Air and views delightful.
Apply to
MRS. ED. COGSWELL,
Wolfville.

Dr. Shoop's Headache Tablets
A. V. RAND.
FREEMAN'S NURSERY
LETTUCE!
Bedding Out Plants of All Kinds.
Rose, Carnations, and Other Cut Flowers.
FUNERAL DESIGNS
and Bridal Bouquets made up at short notice.
Telephone 32.
Expert Piano Tuning Guaranteed.
Voicing, Regulating and Repairing. Organs Tuned and Repaired.
M. C. COLLINS.
P. O. Box 331, Wolfville, N. S.

The Parting.

New, as we part, dear heart, thy smiling eyes
Doth send me glances on my lonely way,
Notice well that conquered self belie.
Thy smile, and sweetly sighs, "Thy mine to stay."
That I should worthy be of this from thee
Is fortune more than I can ever show,
And in my glasses leaves but few, to me,
Stronger regrets to know, "Thy mine to go."
Days may be long, and lone, but what I wish,
To thee shall hold me with a golden chain,
And as, dear heart, our happy farewell kiss
I'll mutual love, both join us two again.

When She Was Thirty.

Eleanor had picked up the bit of paper that had been blown from the window of the office of the Times and it read:
"Thomas J. Rhodes, of Connecticut, to Margaret Eliza, daughter of John Riding, Esq., President of the Wheel of Fire Mining Company."
So that was what had become of Tom. She had not remembered the J, in his name, but of course it must be Tom. There could hardly be another Tom Rhodes, of Connecticut. It sounded prosperous, this marriage to the daughter of the president of a Mining Company. So it was the end of her one true love. He and she had never been one, if only she had known—if only she had known she used to think so strong and firm had not held her heart in its thrall. She had the New England conscience, and it was worse in upon her mind that she ought to wish Tom to be happy in this new love, this new life. Did she? She tried to check herself into thinking so, but her soul defied her. "You know well," cried the voice of conscience within her, "that you don't want him to be quite, quite happy. You wouldn't like him to be absolutely miserable, but you want him to be something short of satisfied; to say to himself every day, and every day, 'Ah! Eleanor would not have done this, or said that; Eleanor would have understood better.'"
And then conscience cried aloud: "Oh, you poor, small soul! in that thought you are for him when he might have been yours; he was not grand enough for you then; and now you would wish him something short of life's best good." And she listened to the voice, and, afraid of herself, she cried out for strength; and it was as if her guardian angel leaned her quiver on her shoulder and drew her quiver to the impulse came to her to write a letter which should convey to Tom her wishes for his happiness—wishes wholly honest now.

She lingered over it for some time. She began it, "Dear Tom." Then she bethought of propriety, and then began to write: "Dear Mr. Rhodes—I have just checked to see in a Denver paper the announcement of your marriage. Oddly enough, just before it came to me, I had been especially thinking about you. I am 30 years old this day, and it seems natural that my thoughts should be busy with my youth, which you now feel ends with to day, and of a part. For you a new life is just beginning. Mine is but the same of story; only it seems as if the rest of it would be what they call in books an 'appendix.' I write this letter to wish you joy and peace and a happy heart most earnestly.

"I think I know you well enough to be sure that you would not have married without love, and love is the greatest thing in the world. May all its fullness and blessedness be yours, now and in the time to come—may it be the friend of your earlier years."

She addressed this letter to "Thomas J. Rhodes, care of John Riding, Esq., President of the Wheel of Fire Mining Company, Denver, Colorado."

"Why did she always feel just a little tired when they had been for some hours together? Of course it would be a glorious destiny for her to be called her—the queen of his art, to share his ambitions, to be the confidant of his dreams. She ought surely to be grateful to fate, and surely she was. At 30, no doubt, the time for ecstasy is past. She looked out into the vague distance, and saw some one walking toward her under the trees that fringed the highway. There seemed something familiar in the coming figure. She caught her breath quickly. Were her eyes deceiving her? No; it was it absolutely was—Tom Rhodes! As one in a dream, she got up and moved forward to meet him; for he had turned in at the gate now.

"She seemed hardly to know what strange thing stirred in her 30-year-old heart when he took her hand in a strong, close clasp.

"You, Tom!" she cried. "You?"

"Yes, Eleanor; the same old Tom. And your wife! Where is she?"

"Here, darling, if only I can win her."

"What?" she asked and posted. "Yes, I am not Thomas J. Rhodes. He is my second cousin, from Connecticut also, but from quite another part of the state. I am Thomas Rhodes at your service—the same Tom who loved you years ago, and has never thought of marrying any other woman. You made me feel, in the old days, that it would be of no use to speak to you, and so I went away. But when I got your letter and knew that you were Eleanor Gray still, I resolved that if I did not win you, I should not be because I was too cowardly to ask. At least you have a right to know how long and well I have loved you."

"What?" she asked and posted. "Yes, I am not Thomas J. Rhodes. He is my second cousin, from Connecticut also, but from quite another part of the state. I am Thomas Rhodes at your service—the same Tom who loved you years ago, and has never thought of marrying any other woman. You made me feel, in the old days, that it would be of no use to speak to you, and so I went away. But when I got your letter and knew that you were Eleanor Gray still, I resolved that if I did not win you, I should not be because I was too cowardly to ask. At least you have a right to know how long and well I have loved you."

"What?" she asked and posted. "Yes, I am not Thomas J. Rhodes. He is my second cousin, from Connecticut also, but from quite another part of the state. I am Thomas Rhodes at your service—the same Tom who loved you years ago, and has never thought of marrying any other woman. You made me feel, in the old days, that it would be of no use to speak to you, and so I went away. But when I got your letter and knew that you were Eleanor Gray still, I resolved that if I did not win you, I should not be because I was too cowardly to ask. At least you have a right to know how long and well I have loved you."

"What?" she asked and posted. "Yes, I am not Thomas J. Rhodes. He is my second cousin, from Connecticut also, but from quite another part of the state. I am Thomas Rhodes at your service—the same Tom who loved you years ago, and has never thought of marrying any other woman. You made me feel, in the old days, that it would be of no use to speak to you, and so I went away. But when I got your letter and knew that you were Eleanor Gray still, I resolved that if I did not win you, I should not be because I was too cowardly to ask. At least you have a right to know how long and well I have loved you."

"What?" she asked and posted. "Yes, I am not Thomas J. Rhodes. He is my second cousin, from Connecticut also, but from quite another part of the state. I am Thomas Rhodes at your service—the same Tom who loved you years ago, and has never thought of marrying any other woman. You made me feel, in the old days, that it would be of no use to speak to you, and so I went away. But when I got your letter and knew that you were Eleanor Gray still, I resolved that if I did not win you, I should not be because I was too cowardly to ask. At least you have a right to know how long and well I have loved you."

"What?" she asked and posted. "Yes, I am not Thomas J. Rhodes. He is my second cousin, from Connecticut also, but from quite another part of the state. I am Thomas Rhodes at your service—the same Tom who loved you years ago, and has never thought of marrying any other woman. You made me feel, in the old days, that it would be of no use to speak to you, and so I went away. But when I got your letter and knew that you were Eleanor Gray still, I resolved that if I did not win you, I should not be because I was too cowardly to ask. At least you have a right to know how long and well I have loved you."

"What?" she asked and posted. "Yes, I am not Thomas J. Rhodes. He is my second cousin, from Connecticut also, but from quite another part of the state. I am Thomas Rhodes at your service—the same Tom who loved you years ago, and has never thought of marrying any other woman. You made me feel, in the old days, that it would be of no use to speak to you, and so I went away. But when I got your letter and knew that you were Eleanor Gray still, I resolved that if I did not win you, I should not be because I was too cowardly to ask. At least you have a right to know how long and well I have loved you."

"What?" she asked and posted. "Yes, I am not Thomas J. Rhodes. He is my second cousin, from Connecticut also, but from quite another part of the state. I am Thomas Rhodes at your service—the same Tom who loved you years ago, and has never thought of marrying any other woman. You made me feel, in the old days, that it would be of no use to speak to you, and so I went away. But when I got your letter and knew that you were Eleanor Gray still, I resolved that if I did not win you, I should not be because I was too cowardly to ask. At least you have a right to know how long and well I have loved you."

"What?" she asked and posted. "Yes, I am not Thomas J. Rhodes. He is my second cousin, from Connecticut also, but from quite another part of the state. I am Thomas Rhodes at your service—the same Tom who loved you years ago, and has never thought of marrying any other woman. You made me feel, in the old days, that it would be of no use to speak to you, and so I went away. But when I got your letter and knew that you were Eleanor Gray still, I resolved that if I did not win you, I should not be because I was too cowardly to ask. At least you have a right to know how long and well I have loved you."

"What?" she asked and posted. "Yes, I am not Thomas J. Rhodes. He is my second cousin, from Connecticut also, but from quite another part of the state. I am Thomas Rhodes at your service—the same Tom who loved you years ago, and has never thought of marrying any other woman. You made me feel, in the old days, that it would be of no use to speak to you, and so I went away. But when I got your letter and knew that you were Eleanor Gray still, I resolved that if I did not win you, I should not be because I was too cowardly to ask. At least you have a right to know how long and well I have loved you."

"What?" she asked and posted. "Yes, I am not Thomas J. Rhodes. He is my second cousin, from Connecticut also, but from quite another part of the state. I am Thomas Rhodes at your service—the same Tom who loved you years ago, and has never thought of marrying any other woman. You made me feel, in the old days, that it would be of no use to speak to you, and so I went away. But when I got your letter and knew that you were Eleanor Gray still, I resolved that if I did not win you, I should not be because I was too cowardly to ask. At least you have a right to know how long and well I have loved you."

"What?" she asked and posted. "Yes, I am not Thomas J. Rhodes. He is my second cousin, from Connecticut also, but from quite another part of the state. I am Thomas Rhodes at your service—the same Tom who loved you years ago, and has never thought of marrying any other woman. You made me feel, in the old days, that it would be of no use to speak to you, and so I went away. But when I got your letter and knew that you were Eleanor Gray still, I resolved that if I did not win you, I should not be because I was too cowardly to ask. At least you have a right to know how long and well I have loved you."

"What?" she asked and posted. "Yes, I am not Thomas J. Rhodes. He is my second cousin, from Connecticut also, but from quite another part of the state. I am Thomas Rhodes at your service—the same Tom who loved you years ago, and has never thought of marrying any other woman. You made me feel, in the old days, that it would be of no use to speak to you, and so I went away. But when I got your letter and knew that you were Eleanor Gray still, I resolved that if I did not win you, I should not be because I was too cowardly to ask. At least you have a right to know how long and well I have loved you."

"What?" she asked and posted. "Yes, I am not Thomas J. Rhodes. He is my second cousin, from Connecticut also, but from quite another part of the state. I am Thomas Rhodes at your service—the same Tom who loved you years ago, and has never thought of marrying any other woman. You made me feel, in the old days, that it would be of no use to speak to you, and so I went away. But when I got your letter and knew that you were Eleanor Gray still, I resolved that if I did not win you, I should not be because I was too cowardly to ask. At least you have a right to know how long and well I have loved you."

"What?" she asked and posted. "Yes, I am not Thomas J. Rhodes. He is my second cousin, from Connecticut also, but from quite another part of the state. I am Thomas Rhodes at your service—the same Tom who loved you years ago, and has never thought of marrying any other woman. You made me feel, in the old days, that it would be of no use to speak to you, and so I went away. But when I got your letter and knew that you were Eleanor Gray still, I resolved that if I did not win you, I should not be because I was too cowardly to ask. At least you have a right to know how long and well I have loved you."

"What?" she asked and posted. "Yes, I am not Thomas J. Rhodes. He is my second cousin, from Connecticut also, but from quite another part of the state. I am Thomas Rhodes at your service—the same Tom who loved you years ago, and has never thought of marrying any other woman. You made me feel, in the old days, that it would be of no use to speak to you, and so I went away. But when I got your letter and knew that you were Eleanor Gray still, I resolved that if I did not win you, I should not be because I was too cowardly to ask. At least you have a right to know how long and well I have loved you."

"What?" she asked and posted. "Yes, I am not Thomas J. Rhodes. He is my second cousin, from Connecticut also, but from quite another part of the state. I am Thomas Rhodes at your service—the same Tom who loved you years ago, and has never thought of marrying any other woman. You made me feel, in the old days, that it would be of no use to speak to you, and so I went away. But when I got your letter and knew that you were Eleanor Gray still, I resolved that if I did not win you, I should not be because I was too cowardly to ask. At least you have a right to know how long and well I have loved you."

"What?" she asked and posted. "Yes, I am not Thomas J. Rhodes. He is my second cousin, from Connecticut also, but from quite another part of the state. I am Thomas Rhodes at your service—the same Tom who loved you years ago, and has never thought of marrying any other woman. You made me feel, in the old days, that it would be of no use to speak to you, and so I went away. But when I got your letter and knew that you were Eleanor Gray still, I resolved that if I did not win you, I should not be because I was too cowardly to ask. At least you have a right to know how long and well I have loved you."

"What?" she asked and posted. "Yes, I am not Thomas J. Rhodes. He is my second cousin, from Connecticut also, but from quite another part of the state. I am Thomas Rhodes at your service—the same Tom who loved you years ago, and has never thought of marrying any other woman. You made me feel, in the old days, that it would be of no use to speak to you, and so I went away. But when I got your letter and knew that you were Eleanor Gray still, I resolved that if I did not win you, I should not be because I was too cowardly to ask. At least you have a right to know how long and well I have loved you."

"What?" she asked and posted. "Yes, I am not Thomas J. Rhodes. He is my second cousin, from Connecticut also, but from quite another part of the state. I am Thomas Rhodes at your service—the same Tom who loved you years ago, and has never thought of marrying any other woman. You made me feel, in the old days, that it would be of no use to speak to you, and so I went away. But when I got your letter and knew that you were Eleanor Gray still, I resolved that if I did not win you, I should not be because I was too cowardly to ask. At least you have a right to know how long and well I have loved you."

"What?" she asked and posted. "Yes, I am not Thomas J. Rhodes. He is my second cousin, from Connecticut also, but from quite another part of the state. I am Thomas Rhodes at your service—the same Tom who loved you years ago, and has never thought of marrying any other woman. You made me feel, in the old days, that it would be of no use to speak to you, and so I went away. But when I got your letter and knew that you were Eleanor Gray still, I resolved that if I did not win you, I should not be because I was too cowardly to ask. At least you have a right to know how long and well I have loved you."

"What?" she asked and posted. "Yes, I am not Thomas J. Rhodes. He is my second cousin, from Connecticut also, but from quite another part of the state. I am Thomas Rhodes at your service—the same Tom who loved you years ago, and has never thought of marrying any other woman. You made me feel, in the old days, that it would be of no use to speak to you, and so I went away. But when I got your letter and knew that you were Eleanor Gray still, I resolved that if I did not win you, I should not be because I was too cowardly to ask. At least you have a right to know how long and well I have loved you."

"What?" she asked and posted. "Yes, I am not Thomas J. Rhodes. He is my second cousin, from Connecticut also, but from quite another part of the state. I am Thomas Rhodes at your service—the same Tom who loved you years ago, and has never thought of marrying any other woman. You made me feel, in the old days, that it would be of no use to speak to you, and so I went away. But when I got your letter and knew that you were Eleanor Gray still, I resolved that if I did not win you, I should not be because I was too cowardly to ask. At least you have a right to know how long and well I have loved you."

"What?" she asked and posted. "Yes, I am not Thomas J. Rhodes. He is my second cousin, from Connecticut also, but from quite another part of the state. I am Thomas Rhodes at your service—the same Tom who loved you years ago, and has never thought of marrying any other woman. You made me feel, in the old days, that it would be of no use to speak to you, and so I went away. But when I got your letter and knew that you were Eleanor Gray still, I resolved that if I did not win you, I should not be because I was too cowardly to ask. At least you have a right to know how long and well I have loved you."

"What?" she asked and posted. "Yes, I am not Thomas J. Rhodes. He is my second cousin, from Connecticut also, but from quite another part of the state. I am Thomas Rhodes at your service—the same Tom who loved you years ago, and has never thought of marrying any other woman. You made me feel, in the old days, that it would be of no use to speak to you, and so I went away. But when I got your letter and knew that you were Eleanor Gray still, I resolved that if I did not win you, I should not be because I was too cowardly to ask. At least you have a right to know how long and well I have loved you."

"What?" she asked and posted. "Yes, I am not Thomas J. Rhodes. He is my second cousin, from Connecticut also, but from quite another part of the state. I am Thomas Rhodes at your service—the same Tom who loved you years ago, and has never thought of marrying any other woman. You made me feel, in the old days, that it would be of no use to speak to you, and so I went away. But when I got your letter and knew that you were Eleanor Gray still, I resolved that if I did not win you, I should not be because I was too cowardly to ask. At least you have a right to know how long and well I have loved you."

"What?" she asked and posted. "Yes, I am not Thomas J. Rhodes. He is my second cousin, from Connecticut also, but from quite another part of the state. I am Thomas Rhodes at your service—the same Tom who loved you years ago, and has never thought of marrying any other woman. You made me feel, in the old days, that it would be of no use to speak to you, and so I went away. But when I got your letter and knew that you were Eleanor Gray still, I resolved that if I did not win you, I should not be because I was too cowardly to ask. At least you have a right to know how long and well I have loved you."

"What?" she asked and posted. "Yes, I am not Thomas J. Rhodes. He is my second cousin, from Connecticut also, but from quite another part of the state. I am Thomas Rhodes at your service—the same Tom who loved you years ago, and has never thought of marrying any other woman. You made me feel, in the old days, that it would be of no use to speak to you, and so I went away. But when I got your letter and knew that you were Eleanor Gray still, I resolved that if I did not win you, I should not be because I was too cowardly to ask. At least you have a right to know how long and well I have loved you."

"What?" she asked and posted. "Yes, I am not Thomas J. Rhodes. He is my second cousin, from Connecticut also, but from quite another part of the state. I am Thomas Rhodes at your service—the same Tom who loved you years ago, and has never thought of marrying any other woman. You made me feel, in the old days, that it would be of no use to speak to you, and so I went away. But when I got your letter and knew that you were Eleanor Gray still, I resolved that if I did not win you, I should not be because I was too cowardly to ask. At least you have a right to know how long and well I have loved you."

"What?" she asked and posted. "Yes, I am not Thomas J. Rhodes. He is my second cousin, from Connecticut also, but from quite another part of the state. I am Thomas Rhodes at your service—the same Tom who loved you years ago, and has never thought of marrying any other woman. You made me feel, in the old days, that it would be of no use to speak to you, and so I went away. But when I got your letter and knew that you were Eleanor Gray still, I resolved that if I did not win you, I should not be because I was too cowardly to ask. At least you have a right to know how long and well I have loved you."

"What?" she asked and posted. "Yes, I am not Thomas J. Rhodes. He is my second cousin, from Connecticut also, but from quite another part of the state. I am Thomas Rhodes at your service—the same Tom who loved you years ago, and has never thought of marrying any other woman. You made me feel, in the old days, that it would be of no use to speak to you, and so I went away. But when I got your letter and knew that you were Eleanor Gray still, I resolved that if I did not win you, I should not be because I was too cowardly to ask. At least you have a right to know how long and well I have loved you."

"What?" she asked and posted. "Yes, I am not Thomas J. Rhodes. He is my second cousin, from Connecticut also, but from quite another part of the state. I am Thomas Rhodes at your service—the same Tom who loved you years ago, and has never thought of marrying any other woman. You made me feel, in the old days, that it would be of no use to speak to you, and so I went away. But when I got your letter and knew that you were Eleanor Gray still, I resolved that if I did not win you, I should not be because I was too cowardly to ask. At least you have a right to know how long and well I have loved you."

"What?" she asked and posted. "Yes, I am not Thomas J. Rhodes. He is my second cousin, from Connecticut also, but from quite another part of the state. I am Thomas Rhodes at your service—the same Tom who loved you years ago, and has never thought of marrying any other woman. You made me feel, in the old days, that it would be of no use to speak to you, and so I went away. But when I got your letter and knew that you were Eleanor Gray still, I resolved that if I did not win you, I should not be because I was too cowardly to ask. At least you have a right to know how long and well I have loved you."

"What?" she asked and posted. "Yes, I am not Thomas J. Rhodes. He is my second cousin, from Connecticut also, but from quite another part of the state. I am Thomas Rhodes at your service—the same Tom who loved you years ago, and has never thought of marrying any other woman. You made me feel, in the old days, that it would be of no use to speak to you, and so I went away. But when I got your letter and knew that you were Eleanor Gray still, I resolved that if I did not win you, I should not be because I was too cowardly to ask. At least you have a right to know how long and well I have loved you."

"What?" she asked and posted. "Yes, I am not Thomas J. Rhodes. He is my second cousin, from Connecticut also, but from quite another part of the state. I am Thomas Rhodes at your service—the same Tom who loved you years ago, and has never thought of marrying any other woman. You made me feel, in the old days, that it would be of no use to speak to you, and so I went away. But when I got your letter and knew that you were Eleanor Gray still, I resolved that if I did not win you, I should not be because I was too cowardly to ask. At least you have a right to know how long and well I have loved you."

"What?" she asked and posted. "Yes, I am not Thomas J. Rhodes. He is my second cousin, from Connecticut also, but from quite another part of the state. I am Thomas Rhodes at your service—the same Tom who loved you years ago, and has never thought of marrying any other woman. You made me feel, in the old days, that it would be of no use to speak to you, and so I went away. But when I got your letter and knew that you were Eleanor Gray still, I resolved that if I did not win you, I should not be because I was too cowardly to ask. At least you have a right to know how long and well I have loved you."

"What?" she asked and posted. "Yes, I am not Thomas J. Rhodes. He is my second cousin, from Connecticut also, but from quite another part of the state. I am Thomas Rhodes at your service—the same Tom who loved you years ago, and has never thought of marrying any other woman. You made me feel, in the old days, that it would be of no use to speak to you, and so I went away. But when I got your letter and knew that you were Eleanor Gray still, I resolved that if I did not win you, I should not be because I was too cowardly to ask. At least you have a right to know how long and well I have loved you."

"What?" she asked and posted. "Yes, I am not Thomas J. Rhodes. He is my second cousin, from Connecticut also, but from quite another part of the state. I am Thomas Rhodes at your service—the same Tom who loved you years ago, and has never thought of marrying any other woman. You made me feel, in the old days, that it would be of no use to speak to you, and so I went away. But when I got your letter and knew that you were Eleanor Gray still, I resolved that if I did not win you, I should not be because I was too cowardly to ask. At least you have a right to know how long and well I have loved you."

"What?" she asked and posted. "Yes, I am not Thomas J. Rhodes. He is my second cousin, from Connecticut also, but from quite another part of the state. I am Thomas Rhodes at your service—the same Tom who loved you years ago, and has never thought of marrying any other woman. You made me feel, in the old days, that it would be of no use to speak to you, and so I went away. But when I got your letter and knew that you were Eleanor Gray still, I resolved that if I did not win you, I should not be because I was