And yet, Columbus, this new world is thine!
Thy claim was in thy forward reaching soul,
An inner, prescient right; thou didst divine
Wonders that the veiled hemisphere should unroil
At last, from out the blue blank of the sea;
And whatsoever foot might tread this shore,
Clear was thy title of discovery,
Whose thought outsailed thy ship so long before.

about the fast horse he once possessed.
Uncle Caleb, who has long since old sort in the town of W——, and used to like to join the group at the village store, in their tales of strange and interesting things gone by.

One evening the talk ran upon teh inspired to relate an incident from his own experience.

"Twuz the year Gineral Jackson come to W—," said he. "My mare Betsey, she was jes six year old. Six? Lemme see; yes, she wuz a 3-year-old when I had 'er o' deacon Jones in 1828, 'n' that wuz jest three year before. Wal! We wuz all up in arms over Gineral Jackson comin' thru' f'm Worcester; an' me and my hired man, Zeke Tewksbury, we wuz hayin' down on the medder. "Wal! We wuz hard 't work hay-in', as I says, when all to once we heerd the horn on that ere coach blowin' like time, way over on Wallapog hill. 'N what'd we do but hitch up that mare Betsey, and drive off, lickety split, for W— square. Wal, sir! An' how long d'ye think it took us to drive in?"

"How long, Uncle Caleb?"

"Jest two minutes!"

There was a burst of incredulous laughter through the store.

There was a burst of incredulous laughter through the store.
"Two minutes!" the exclamation went around. "Why, Uncle Caleb, it can't be done. Drive over that road, a mile, in two minutes! Why, there's no horse in the world that ever did that or ever could!"

Uncle Caleb began to grow a little confused and worried, lest he had told too hig a story. And then he tried to too big a story. And then he tried to get out of it.

"Wal, ye see," he said, "it might not 'a' been done ordinary times, but 'twas such nation slick sleighin' that it wa'n't nothin' very surprisin' fer that mare!"—Youth's Companion. On a River in Siam.

Rain fell heavily during the night, washing the face of nature, burnishing the trees, clearing the air and thus brightening the whole landscape. The cool, fresh morning air that bathed our hands and faces as we started soon after daybreak was scented with the fragrence of flowering shyths and grance of flowering shrubs and es, and the panorama we passed rough was delightful. Temples dec-ated with dark red and gold and the through was delightful. Temples decorated with dark red and gold and the picturesque monasteries were set like gems in the beautiful fringes of foliage that skirted the banks. Women and girls, gayly attired in a striped petticoat, or one of a small tartan, and a silk scarf thrown over the left shoulder, tripped along barefooted on their way to the market with baskets of flowers and garden produce.

Here a group of men and women sat squatting on the sands, having a chat before crossing the ford. There men, women and children, with their garments tucked up above the knees, laughed and joked as they waded the stream. Groups of children playing in the water dashed it about and splashed each other. Cattle were lowing on the banks on their way to pasture. The sun was lighting up the bald pates and yellow garments of the monks and acolytes, who were passing in procession carrying their begging bowls through the streets. Women and children were reverently awaiting the approach of the monks, and heaping little cups of rice and saucers of the company of the same period of the company of the company of the same period of the company of the company of the same period of the company of th

Exciting Experiences of the Editor Human Nature. WE ARE LEFT.-For the past four weeks very busy man, but the pressure be yery busy man, but the pressure became so great we had to give in.

Last Tuesday evening the city caucus was held, and instead of being nominated for mayor we received only three votes out of upwards of sixty cast. Our friends were mistaken when they insisted that we were wanted. Instead of being the unanimous choice of the patriotic people, we had the pleasure of seeing Jerry Baxter, the meanest man in town, given the nomination.

Oh, well, that's human nature right through, and an editor fool enough to go into politics Oh, well, that's human nature right through, and an editor fool enough to go into politics deserves to be driven head first into the tanbark, as we were. We have a word to say, however, The Kicker will not only bolt every candidate on the ticket, but we guarantee to have nine-tenths of the nominees in prison before they are a month older. Veni cum granisi which is Latin for saying: Don't monkey with a newspaper man.

nis! which is Latin for saying: Don't monkey with a newspaper man.

HAVE GOT A FEW.—A correspondent inquires if The Kicker has any libel suits on hand, as the result of its independent and outspoken course. Well, yes, it has a few—about four dozen, we believe, but we are not worrying any. They have all been instituted by second class ducks, who haven't any character to be damaged; and the whole batch will probably be thrown out of court in a lump some day. In the beginning of our career a libel suit used to give us the colic for three days and nights, and we'd wake up from a troubled sleep to find our cheeks wet with tears, but we soon got sunburned. Indeed, we rather prefer to see them come. It looks like business.

MIST HAVE BEEN THE PROFESSOR—Ever

to see people enjoy themselves. Then we warned the public to let up or somebody would get hurt. Last Wednesday night a rock weighing three pounds came through a window and barely missed our head as we window and barely missed our head as we lay sleeping on our cot. As we got to the door with a shot gun some one could be seen making off over the common. We drew on him and pulled trigger, and something uttered a yell.

Yesterday the body of Professor Jenkins was found in the sage brush about two miles from town, and it was plain that he died of a dose of buck shot in the back. Just as likely as not he was the chap we fired at in the dark.

as not he was the chap we fired at in the dark-ness. We didn't owe him any particular grudge, and we didn't know that he did us, and we are willing to foot half the burial exand we are willing to foot hair the burnal expenses at a venture.

A BASE COWARD.—The item in the Chicago press of recent date that we had been fatally wounded by a judge for publishing a alander was not exactly correct. In the first place, the individual was a cowboy named Ress. Lit the part place the article was true.
