Stresemann's Past Experience

HELPS IN NEW DIFFICULT TASK.

BERLIN—Dr. Gustav Stresemann, the new chancellor of the German republic, is a thoroughly experienced catch-as-can politician. He is a ready stumper, and a facile writer on political subjects. Unlike many of the German leaders who are heavy with degrees, long on political theories, and inexperienced in the ways of mankind, Chancellor Stresemann has had much training in a practical politics. He speaks the language of the ordinary man and makes extemporaneous speeches which are so terse and direct and so thoroughly characterized by a lack of big, jaw-breaking words, that one would never suspect him of having passed through many of the toughest courses Berlin and Leipzig University offers aspirants for doctorates.

But Stresemann has had a lot of hard experience since he deserted the universities. His first job was secretary to the Saxonia Association of Industrialists. He became a deputy of the Dresden town council and in 1907 was first elected a member of the Reichstag. He was a long time a managing member of the German-American Commercial Association, and served as head of the German Association of Industrialists.

His work has thrown him with employers and employees alike. In the universities, he specialized in economics and history and in active life he has had abundant opportunity to study the basic commercial and industrial problems which Germany faces. Stresemann has been a receptive candidate for high political honor for six years. He had an important part in the removal of Bethmann-Hollweg, and since that time, his name has always been among "those mentioned" for prominent cabinet positions.

He was an adherent of the parliamentary system even when it was regarded as impossible in Germany, but he held himself in the background till the plan for the great coalition came to the fore. He was too canny a politician to let himself be the victim of an improvised government patching up without support from the more liberal elements. Immediately after the revolution Stresemann became the leader of the German People's Party. Backed by the main industries, that party managed to gain a strong position. Stiness and other magnates stood behind it, but Stresemann had many tiffs with the purely industrial sections of his own group.

He has always fought vigorously for the unity of the Reich, but has stood insistently for an understanding with Germany's former enemies, even if heavy financial sacrifices must be the price.

Stresemann was born in Berlin, May 10th, 1878. He is above medium height, stockily-built, wears a closely cropped mustache, is erect and well set-up, has firm blue eyes, and carries himself with the pose and assurance that characterizes business men of wide experience the world over. He is partly bald and has a large shapely head. In every way he has the appearance of a man of action who enjoys excellent health and radiates enthusiasm.

Finds Pre-Glacial Relic

WINNIPEG, Oct. 24 (A.P.)—A fossilized oyster, believed by scientists to be a relic of the preglacial ages, has been unearthed by A. G. Shearer, plowing the top of a hill at Pope, Manitoba.

Dr. R. C. Wallace, professor of geology at the University at Manitoba, stated that, in all probability, Shearer struck a rock, carried by the ice of the glacial age and belonging to a period millions of years earlier than the ice age, as there is now neither river nor lake near Pope.

"Brighter backyards!" is the cry of the Gardens Guild. Then lady-love and honey-suckle should blossom there.

Marine Locks Lift Steamers Over High Hills

Trollhattan Falls, Sweden. (A.P.)—Climbing mountains in a ship was the unusual experience of many American visitors to the Gothenburg exposition when they made the trip over the historic Gotha Canal from Gothenburg to Stockholm.

Marine locks in flights of five or six carry tourist ships through granite hills from river to lake, until the canal reaches an altitude of more than 300 feet in the highlands of picturesque southern Sweden, and then the ships begin their trip "down" stairs until they make their way to the level of the Baltic Sea, and after a short voyage on the open sea, finally enter lakes again and slip into the back door of Stockholm through fresh water.

It takes two and a half days to make the inland journey of 380 miles from Gothenburg to Stockholm. The actual canal is only 54 miles long, but 58 locks are passed in avoiding the falls in rivers and ascending to the high lakes in the interior.

Fifty miles of the trip is through the Gotha River, and here at Trollhattan Falls the canal passes around the celebrated falls which give southern Sweden much of its electrical power and are the seat of some of its greatest industrial concerns. Here is the great plant which supplied the Bolshevik government with 600 locomotives, and recently sent 125 locomotives to Argentina.

In the early days of the Bolshevik government, when Lomonosoff was in charge of the effort to re-equip the Russian railways, Sweden was given a contract for 1,000 locomotives. This plan was dashed before the eyes of other industrial nations by Bolshevik leaders, who feared at them for their failure to recognize Russia and share in the great profits promised from participation in its rehabilitation. The Swedes insisted on having gold in advance on the locomotive order. Five hundred were finally completed and delivered. Then the work stopped although the Swedish manufacturers still had Russian money which had been advanced for materials. The Swedes altered the plans for the locomotives to meet the needs of the Argentine railways, and are to-day carrying on a lively business with the South American republic which has enabled the manufacturers to return to Russia its advances on cancelled orders.

The Gotha Canal was originally begun in 1800, when the Trollhattan Falls were successfully locked. The complete water-way between Gothenburg and Stockholm was first opened in 1832.

BUSY SUCKERS.

These suckers keep on sending their coin to sinful sharks, in spite of my unending sage counsel and remarks. These suckerlike civilians who want to me give ear are blowing hard earned millions for gold bricks every year. In vain the village banker expounds the safer plan; for sudden wealth they hunger, and seek the gold brick man. Of unearned coin they're dreaming, and in their sleep behold the glittering and gleaming of bricks all filled with gold. You'd think when once they've tasted the fakes' bitter draft, their coin would not be wasted again on such a graft. Betrayed by some false mucker, you'd think they'd quit, but no; the sucker is a sucker while he remains below. The suckers' hopes are built on hope of rainbow hue, on promises so gilded they never could be true. The millions that are wasted would buy the suckers' homes, with goldleaf neatly pasted upon the shining domes. The millions they have squandered would buy them rich sedans, in which they might have wandered in joyride caravans. The millions sent to fakers would buy them airships proud, and they might sail through acres of space above the cloud.

Presumed Too Far

A good story was told recently by Mr. Ramsay MacDonald. Little Bobby, said Mr. MacDonald, has been playing with a boy somewhat older and bigger than himself. Presently he came crying to his mother, and complained that his little playmate had struck him.

"Why, Bobby," his mother exclaimed, "I always thought Jimmy was such a nice, quiet, well-behaved boy. I never thought he would do anything like that."

"Nor did I," wailed Bobby. "Else I would not have kicked him."

THE SPORTSMAN.

When you have learned to see another's side, you are a sportsman. The victory you hoped yourself to gain, To bear your failure bravely and come in, And seek not to excuse it or explain; When you can take defeat with decent grace, As one with sportsman you shall have a place. When joy of battle thrills you to the soul, And when the game means more than paltry prize, And a fair fight is greater than the goal, And being true excels being over-wise— When this you've learned, and practice, come what may, Men shall respect you and admire your play. When you can make mistakes and pay their cost, When you can fall and never blame your luck, Or give some paltry reason why you lost; Seeking to strike, can smile at being struck, When you can take from others what you'd give, You will have learned just how to play and live.

Telltale Symptoms of Woman's Ills.

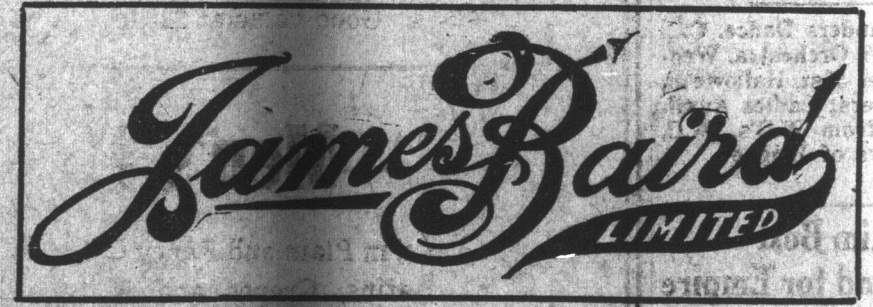

Every woman who suffers from backache, headaches, dragging-down pains, nervousness, irregularities, displacements, irritability, or despondency should recognize in such symptoms some derangement of her system which should have attention before some more serious ailment develops. These conditions are often evidenced by a sallow complexion, dark circles under the eyes, lassitude and sleeplessness. For nearly fifty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been pre-eminently successful in overcoming such conditions, and it is now recognized everywhere as the standard remedy for woman's ills.

Rules About Rings

For a woman to wear a ring on the third finger of her left hand is a sign that she is engaged, and on the third finger if he is married. If the ring appears on the little finger, he is determined to remain a bachelor.

Rings carved with the heads of deities were used by superstitious ancient Greeks to ward off evil. Ancient Britons used the figure of Saint Christopher to protect them from sickness and flood, and that of St. Barbara to ward off sudden death. In the eleventh century rings made of horn and worn on the fourth finger were said to afford protection against epilepsy; while a pure gold ring was said to cure pains in the side.
