Some of these islands are very large, the Prince of Wales Island being 100 miles long and in some places 50 miles wide, with a mountain range running through its centre, the maximum height being not over 1,200 feet. This island is in Alaska, and is without doubt the Nimrod and angler's paradise, as its many beautiful streams are teeming with fish, and her mountain sides alive with the fattest deer on the continent, owing no doubt to the abundance of excellent grazing. He Couldn't Solve It.

As a train was approaching a town on the Great Northern railway in Ire-land an intelligent looking young Irishman observed a lady standing up searching her pocket. She commenced to weep. "Have you been robbed?"

'Oh, no," she replied; "I've lost my ticket, and they will accuse me of

"Well, see will that fit it?" said Pat, handing him the small piece, and it did. A look of surprise crept over the while Pat caused much amusement by exclaiming, "Begorra, I knew he could not solve it!"—London Tit-Bits.

WHAT HAS BEEN WRITTEN IN THE DUCHESS OF FIFE'S ALBUM.

Quaint Admissions by Members of the British Royal Family—Princess of Wales Dislikes Gush.

In an album which the Duchess of Fife has kept for many years are entered the personal opinions, personal tastes and impressions of nearly every member of the English royal every member of the English royal family. Several pages are devoted to

The following extracts give interesting glimpses of the real feelings and inclinations of the leading royal personages. The Prince of Wales, who loves freedom and naturalness in every respect, writes ;-

when the train stopped, the guard collected all the tickets but one. Where is your ticket?" he asked the young man.

"You have got my ticket," he replied.
"No, I have not got it. I'll call the tickets and dislikes, but can say when I feel happy and when unhappy. I feel happy when I am-told I don't look above thirty; unhappy when I feel like sixty. I am unhappy when I know! I have to make a public speech, happy when I have to make a public speech, happy when I have made it."

happy when I have made it."

The Duchess of Fife is an extremely retient member of the royal family. She has written in her own book;—
