foronto and Hamilton Systems Compared With London's.

It Could Be Adopted in Lendon Within Certain Limits in a Satisfactory Manner-The Bylaw as It Is at Present.

After the several different snowfalls of the month the snow question becomes a deep one, and it is after a thaw such as London experienced on vides that the occupant, or where there Sunday that the inadequacy of the present system of snow removal becomes apparent. In cold weather several inches of snow on the sidewalksas long as the "beautiful" is reasonably packed-are neither here nor there. But when the thaw comes, and with it the slip-sloppy walks and wearytoiling pedestrians who, as a rule, slip back three inches in every six. London's snow bylaw makes explicit provisions for the cleaning of the downtown portion of the city sidewalks, and also for the manipulation of the snow plow. But the bylaws are only indifferently enforced.

Section 41 of bylaw 760 states: "The occupant, and in case there is no occupant, the owner or person having the charge, care, or control of any house, building or lot fronting or abutting on Dundas street, between Ridout street and Wellington street, Richmond street between the Grand Trunk Railway and Maple street, King street between Clarence and Ridout street, Talbot street between York street and Carling street, and Clarence from Dundas to York, shall remove and clear away and keep removed and cleared all snow and ice from the side walk and to the breadth of one foot out of the drain, water course and gutter on that side of such street or highway which is nearest to such house, building or lot; and also remove and clear away and keep removed and cleared all dirt and other obstructions from such sidewalk, and to the breadth of one foot out of such drain, water course and gutter.

"42. If any person who is required by the next preceding section of this bylaw to remove the snow and ice from afternoon. The master, Mr. Dawson the sidewalk, etc., neglects to remove and clear away the same within the first four hours of daylight after any fall of snow or fall of hail or rain which shall freeze on the sidewalks, or ness. He hoped the grangers would in the drains, water courses, or gutters, or fall of snow from any building, entirely off the sidewalk and to the breadth of one foot out of the drain. water course or gutter adjoining his premises; and if any person required by the said section to remove and clear away other obstructions from the sidewalk and to the breadth of one of the order across the line. foot out of the drain, etc., adjoining to be removed and cleared away at the standing committees. to be removed and cleared away at the expense of such person, and in case of non-payment of such expense following delegates present from subspecial assessment against the premises in respect to which the duty exists and is unperformed, and may be same to be recovered accordingly; provided always that if the snow or ice be so frozen that in the judgment of the street commissioner or city engineer it cannot be removed without injury being done to the sidewall pavement in its removal, such person as aforesaid shall strew such sidewalk or pavement with ashes, sand or other like substance, and shall not be deemed in default in removing such snow and ice until the expiration of four hours of daylight from the time when such snow and ice shall become capable of being removed without any injury being caused in its removal.' The bylaw is explicit enough, "But."

as the city engineer stated, "it is not carried out."

"All this snow," said he, pointing in the corner of both directions from the corner of Richmond and Dundas streets, "should be taken off. When it thaws it is allowed to freeze again and form ice.' "Why don't you see that the law is enforced?" asked the reporter.

some portions of the city," replied the engineer. "Take, for instance, a man living in any of the outlying wards. He owns probably half an acre of land, and often lives on a corner. He must also, as a rule, get to work at 7 o'clock in the morning. It would be a hardship to expect him to clean off his portion before his day's labor begins, and almost as bad to expect him to do it at night."

But while it might not apply in the sparsely settled portions of the city there are a great many citizens who think that the Toronto method could be applied to such London streets as are largely patronized by madestrians. are largely patronized by pedestrians-Dundas street, King street and Queen's avenue, running east and west; and Richmond street, Talbot and Clarence, running north and south. These are all much traveled streets, and if people were sure of clear walks they would go out of their way to patronize them. This could not help but benefit busi-ness along the streets named. It is a subject that might interest some aldermen.

Clause 43 of the bylaw further is no occupant, the owner or person having care or charge of any building abutting on, or situate within ten feet of any public street, thoroughfare, sidewalk or pavement, shall, whenever snow or ice shall accumulate on the roof of such house or other building to an extent that shall either in fact, or in the opinion of the engineer or street commissioner, be dangerous to persons passing, cause the same to be forthwith removed therefrom, every person removing the same shall take due care and precaution for the warning of persons and animals passing or being on such street, thoroughfare, sidewalk or pavement.

Section 44 deals with the snow plowing. Plows shall be started by either the street commissioner or city engineer at 4 a.m., when four inches of snow shall have fallen during the night. Streets most used shall be cleaned first, and the plow, if necessary, shall go over part a second time.

HELD THE DOOR.

Action of a Cleveland Conductor When the Trolley Ran Away.

Cleveland, Feb. 27.-While a heavy motor car filled with pasengers was descending the long, steep hill at the foot of Scranton avenue yesterday, the brake failed and the motorman lost control of the car. It at once plunged forward at a terrific rate, and it is estimated reached a speed of a mile a minute.

Half-way down the hill the motor crashed into a heavily loaded truck. It plowed through this obstruction, and then struck a coal wagon, a few hundred feet on. William Marx, driver of the truck, was hurled 30 feet, while the driver of the coal wagon pitched headlong on the side of the street, alighting in a snow bank, which saved him from serious injuries. Marx received many wounds, and is probably internally injured and may die.

The front of the car was smashed and the motor box was wrenched from its fastenings. Motorman Hart did not desert his station, and was bruised about the head and shoulders. The passengers during the terrible run became panic-stricken and made a rush for the door, but the conductor held on and shut them in. All escaped without serious injury.

A NEW GAS BURNER.

By means of a newly invented gas burner M. Ladureau is said to have produced incandescence having a body resembling a bottle brush, and by him called "le Heirsson;" it consists of organic threads, which are impregnated with light-giving oxides.
The light radiating apparatus consists of a center axle composed of two platinum wires around which the illuminating threads are wrapped in such a manner as to stand upon the wire like hair in a brush, these being flexible and not fragile, a quality which permits of their being handled without danger of breaking. When put into use, they become more fragile, all the organic matter having disappeared, but they remain sufficiently solid to resist trepidations, shocks, or wind, and become more durable the longer they burn. It is further stated that with this apparatus, M. Ladureau has obtained on a single one of these threads a light effect of 11-2 centimetres width and seven to eight centimetres length. The consumption of gas is thus considerably

"Of course you will hold the horsewhen we get there," said the young lady, and she stepped into the carriage and drove away into the forest, the silence broken only by the chattering of the teeth of the man by her side.

Reaching the spot Miss Carr dropped out of the vehicle. All was silence save for the fierce vibrations of the man's teeth, estimated at 3,500 a minute, when suddenly his cheek was fan-ned by the shock of the wild cat's cry, now close at hand. His jaw was paralyzed. Then again nature shook with the wild cat's shriek, his glassy, baleful eyes were seen between two rocks, there was the sharp report of a rifle and the beast and the man fell forward, the one dead, the other in a faint. The horse dashed wildly down the road with the limp young Mr. Lupton hanging over the dashboard. But at the end of a mile the city chap recovered consciousness, stopped the animal and drove bravely back. When about half way he met Miss Carr dragging the wild cat behind her by the tail. She threw it into the carriage and again they drove home. The young man is still under the care of physicians, suffering from shock, but Mise Carr has felt no inconvenience from the experience.
