What Canada Wants.

(From the Bobcaygeon Independent.)
Its population is flying from it. There s no mistake about the matter, -the inhabitants of Ontario are steadily leaving it. Why is this? It is the finest province in the Dominion, and is beyond all question the most favored land on the continent. We have good laws, and a large measure of freedom. There are no blizzards, no floods reedom. There are no blizzards, no floods no grasshoppers. Peace and plenty are everywhere, and yet the people fly from it. Why, we ask again, is this? During last year no less than 21,513 Canadians settled in the northwest, most of whom went from Ontario, and the chief of the bureau of statistics at Washington makes returns showing that no less than 125,000 Canadians emigrated to the United States during the fiscal year. We cannot say what proportion of this 125,000 went from Ontario, but we presume the number was not very small. of this 125,000 went from Ontario, but we presume the number was not very small. Furthermore the U. S. statistical returns show that there are 25,703 Canadians living in the state of New Hampshire, and 15,428 in Connecticut. There must be a cause, perhaps many, for this exodus of the Canadian population, but one of them we do not hesitate to declare, will be found in the curse of party. That terrible affletion has almost entirely eradicated patriotism from the Canadian bosom, and the average Canadian's love for his country is measured by what it returns to him in dollars and cents. He has no pride in his name and national. what it returns to him in dollars and cents. He has no pride in his name and nationality; he is a mere colonist; he is scarcely a Briton; he is certainly not an American; he is neither fish, flesh, nor good red herring. Why then should he be proud of his country, or make any sacrifices at the altar of patriotism? What he wants is pay—his only ambition office. The remedy for of patriotism? What he wants is pay—his only ambition office. The remedy for this is obvious—independence. When Canada has a distinct name and nationality, her people will feel that they are no longer mere stuffings and padding to the British crown, unvalued and unconsidered; they will assume the rights, privileges, prerogatives, and responsibilities of manhood, and then they will learn what it is to have a home of their own and to value it.
