

J. P. MORGAN'S CONFESSION OF FINANCIAL FAITH AT PUJO INQUIRY

J. P. Morgan's one public confession of his financial and economic faith was made before the Pujo "Money Trust" committee in Washington Dec. 18 and 19, 1912. In the course of his testimony there he made these declarations: Directors of interstate corporations should be the sole judges of their deposits, and the government should have nothing to say in the matter. I purchased the stock of the Equitable Life Assurance Society because I thought it was the best thing to do at the time, and I cannot give you any other reason. If concentration of interests is good business and for the interests of the country, I do it. No, sir, as far as I am concerned, a man is not "likely, quite unconvincingly, to imagine that things are good for the interests of the country that are good for his business."

STARVATION CAUSED DEATH OF MORGAN WHO PASSED AWAY PEACEFULLY

Financial use, it was confidently asserted in financial circles in the city, that the "money king's" affairs had long ago been arranged, so that he could exercise no material effect on the market. In recent years, to the management of the tremendous enterprises in which he was engaged had been gradually transferred to the shoulders of his lieutenants, he retained for himself only general control.

Minister Urges Men to Vote Against Whitney Government

Renewal of Brockton Club License, According to Rev. Lawrence Skeay, Was Sufficient Cause for Opposing Conservative Members—Federation of Men's Association Will Be Brought About in the Near Future. That the renewal of the Brockton Club license, Sheridan avenue and Dundas street, will mean the defeat of the two conservative candidates for that portion of Toronto at the next provincial election was the prediction of Rev. Lawrence Skeay, rector of St. Andrew's Anglican Church.

Canada Needs New Tribunal

here before, and I trust that after this report is presented in England, we will have some guidance as to a better way of dealing with divorce and of avoiding the present reflection made on the Canadian parliament. The minister seems to be able to do more in the divorce line than anything else, and that the present divorce law is a disgrace to the country. I do not think any Canadian is proud of that condition of affairs. I hope that at an early date some way will be found to take these cases out of the jurisdiction of parliament.

Expected on Change

NEW YORK, March 31.—That Wall Street always discounts expected developments was again shown yesterday by the calmness with which the news of J. Pierpont Morgan's death was received on the Stock Exchange. Ever since the attack in Egypt the market has been adjusting itself to the possibility that the cables might any day bring announcement of his death.

There are five cases of smallpox there, and when the outbreak in the other schools were smallpox existed few of the children went home, and those who did were back again in a few days. Dr. Roberts, however, is determined, and does not intend to allow any of the pupils to return until the epidemic in the school is over, and that may be a long time. In the meantime a staff of inspectors is keeping watch on all children at home, and in no instance will they be allowed to roam the streets.

Morgan Widely Known But Little Known of Him

Great as a Financier and an Art Collector and Himself the Son of a Famous Man, He Was Yet to the World at Large More of a Personage Than a Person. What John Pierpont Morgan did overshadowed thru his life what he was. No man of his time was more widely known, yet there were few men of his time about whom less was known. Romance hid reality; he was a personage rather than a person. A library might be filled with the pictures that were drawn of him, yet it was not often that more than high lights were used. Details were lacking because details could not be had. Mr. Morgan was born at Hartford, Conn., on April 17, 1837, the son of Junius Spencer Morgan and Juliet Pierpont Morgan. His father's American line ran back to Capt. Miles Morgan, a Weeharst, who came to New England in 1637 and who achieved colonial fame in the defence of Springfield, Mass., in the Indian wars. His mother's grandfather was the Rev. James Pierpont, one of the founders of Yale College, so that it was thru inheritance he came by the intellectual gifts that characterized his career.
