Calling Mr. Burnham to him Moli-neaux requested him to have the guests pass by to be questioned. With one policeman standing behind Molineaux, the other officer stood at the foot of the staircase and sent each couple along. As they passed the youthful detector of crime he scrutinized them quickly and surely. Nearly a hun-dred guests had passed him when Molineaux suddenly put out his hand and stopped a woman, the whiteness of whose face was in striking con-trast to the gorgegus black dress she wore. She was alone, a curious fact that caused Molineaux to quickly grasp her arm and say: "Your name, please." "Mits. Timperley," was the reply. "Have you been here all even-ing?" "Sidce 3 o'clock." Lying easily on his back in full evening dress with a look of horror on his face was a man of about thirty years of age, cold in death. Stepping quickly nearer, Molineaux stooped down and took a microscope from his yest pocket and carefully examined his

PEKING, April 13 .-- Conferences between the representatives of China and Japan were resumed today, but there was no break in the deadlock which has arisen. The Chinese Government declines to recede from the position it has assumed, netwithstanding the fact that the Japanese minister. Eki Hioki, threatened today to discontinue the negotiations. The Chinese foreign minister, Lu Cheng-Hsiang, refused to discuss group four of the Japanese demands. M. Hicki endeavored to draw the Chinese representatives into a discussion of article five of this group, which has to do with the concession to Japan has to do with the concession to Japan of rights for the construction of rail-roads. He intimated that China had favored Great Britain with railway concessions and had not given similar rights to Japan. He again urged China to grant the concessions de-manded and permit Japan to take up subsequently with Great Britain any question which might arise in respect of encroachment on British railway interests. interests.

In his left hand, when Molineaux raised the stiffened fingers, was a crushed white rose, the first link in the chain of evidence the detective was seeking. Handing the rose to one of his assistants, Molineaux completed the examination, but evidently found nothing more of interest around the body. He dis-missed one of his men, instructing him to wait on the lower landing, where he could command a full view of the bail room; told the workman to disconnect Molineaux was immediately impress-ed with the girlish simplicity of the daughter of the house. A wave of pity swept over him, but did not pre-vent suddenly taking from his pocket the rose that he had found in the dead man's hand. "Did you ever see this rose before?" he asked each in turn. After your bed is all ready to plant water it carefully with the sprinkler, and do this the day before you are intending to do the planting. You seldom find that satisfactory work can be done in plant-ing when you leave the bed-watering to be done just before the plants are to be put in. You will find yourself in the midst of a fine sticky mess. The soil should be moist and soft be-fore planting, never wet and sticky, since clumps of earth will then clog up around the tender roots.

However, as we have stated many times, nursing babies should not vomit much after feeding, and it is particu-larly significant of something wrong if the milk makes its appearance con-tinuously, or just before another feed-ing is due. When the stomach is full, baby should be kept quiet; for if he is carried around or tossed in the air, the food cannot possibly remain where it should. Tight clothing is a frequent cause of vomiting. When bottle-fed babies vomit, the trouble is generally with the food. Sudden or acute vomiting in the previously healthy child means thas beginning of almost anything. All acute illnesses, grippe, tonsilitis, pneu-monia, scarlet fever, may begin with vomiting.
