and in politics.

It was not only because Julia Arthur is a great actress, but because she is also a great actress, but because she is also a Canadian who has brought honor to her country through her genius and her devotion to her art, that I was glad when my friend, Mr. J. W. Thorold, another Canadian, of whom we are all proud, said: dian, of whom we are all proud, said: "Will you come with me to call upon Miss Arthur to-morrow? She is altogether charming, and will be pleased to see you."
There was one answer to such a question as that, so on the morrow we set out for Holland House, where Miss Arthur lives

The moment I had entered the sunny sitting room I was struck with a sense of familiarity in Miss Arthur's face. I knew I had seen it before, but where? When? Just then shie rose to show me some photographs, and like a flash came a memory of my school days, and my first visit to the theatre.

"Did you not take part in a play called "The Duchess' in the little theatre in Hamilton years and years ago?"

"Why, yes; that was my first appearance as Zamora. Do you recall it? Were you there?"

"It is the only time till to-day I have seen you. See how your face has lingered in my memory. How Eastern yon look!"

Miss Arthur laughed, and her laugh is a delicious thing to hear.

"Yes, when I go back I am often reproached for not being more like a Canadian; but I love Canada. I love its quiet and peace, and cherish great hopes for its lone."
