Ans.—Thank you, "English Violet," for this hint along the egg-sending line. And regarding the lonely young man overseas (no, I didn't print that part). I'm going to give his name to some of the warmest hearted Pageites I know. He must not go without regular boxes any longer.

Can Be One of Them. Dear Miss Grey,—Still another new beginner. I have read your letters so much that I could not walt any longer, so I thought that I might be one of your Pageites as well as the rest.

Miss Grey, 'may I ask a favor of you, and that favor is, will you please publish

Dear Miss Grey,—Re sending eggs to solders, I thought perhaps some of our readers would like to know that if they cover the eggs after having been boiled hard (I have not tried uncooked ones) with paraffin wax, they will reach their destination perfectly. Eggs are so nourising that it is a pity not to send them if at all possible. With best wishes for the Mail-Box.

It Seems a Pity to Let These Babies Starve!

RUE, this is another Belgian appeal, and you are a little tired of Belgium's trouble. But, remember, while it is your problem how to plan variety in three meals a day, most of the Belgian population is standing in line hours every day for a bowl of seup and a site of bread! No child can thrive on this ration. Tens of thousands of Belgian children (under 12) are becoming victims of tuberculosis, rickets and other aliments due to the pitfully inadequate food.

The Belgian Children's Health Fund enables the Dutch authorities to take some of the starving little ones to Holland for care and treatment for six weeks. Then what? They must go back to Belgiam to make way for other of the 15,000 odd in the waiting list. More could be done if you will listen to the appeal of these bables.

The Belgian Orphan's Event takes even of fatherless more benefatigued.

The Belgian Orphan's Fund takes care of fatheriess, motheriess, friendless waifs. Think how they lost their fathers. $3.70 of your money feeds, clothes and educates an orphan for a whole month. Can you hear the call?

Whatever you contribute goes entire to the Dutch authorities, through the Belgian Minis er of the Interior (at Le Havre, France). Not a penny is deducted for administrative expenses, even for this advertising. It is absolutely guaranteed, too, that the Germans larive no benefit whatsoever.

IIMMY COON STORIES By Dr. Warren G. Partridge.

CHAPTER VIII.—Jimmy Coon Goes Hunting For Frogs.

"Peter Rabbit," called out Jimmy Coon, one moonlight night, as he passed his front door, "come out and go frogbing with me." Now Peter was cooling his heels on his front piazza; and he was tired; but Peter felt flattered to be myitted to hunt with Jimmy Coon, because Jimmy is such good company; and because he is so clever as a hunter. "Jimmy." asked Peter Rabbit," where are you going frogging tonight? At Mirror Pond?"

"Well, Peter Rabbit." laughed Jimmy Coon, "you can read all my thoughts. You are a great hunter, for I was Just heading myself for Mirror Pond." And the two famous hunters circled for the frog musicians, who were giving a free concert. Now you know that Peter Rabbit, doesn't like frogs to eat. But he likes to be with Jimmy Coon, because he is so jolly and such a good-hearted friend.

When they got near the edge of Mirror Coon's strong and duick left arm.

likes to be with Jimmy Coon, because he he is so jolly and such a good-hearted friend.

When they got near the edge of Mirror Pond, Jimmy whispered into the long left ear of Peter Rabbit, Now if you want to see some fun and good hunting, Peter Rabbit, you sit down here on this stump, in the edge of the bushes, and be as still as a mouse, and just keep your eye peeled on your uncle, Jimmy Coon."

Now Jimmy Coon had a difficult job on hand, to get a sly big frog into his little hands. For you know that a big frog is very careful of his health and safety. If you don't believe it, you try to catch one, You know a clever big frog has sharp eyes, and keen ears, and he seems to smell danger.

And as soon as Jimmy Coon grent very softly near the water, the free concert by the frogs, stopped suddenly, Grandpa Frog gave the signal, "Now every frog lie low, and stop your singing for an enemy is near." And Mirror Pond was very silent And nothing made any more noise than the moonbeams dancing on the smooth surface of the tiny inland sea.

Oh, how still it was, as Peter Rabbit said to himself, "What in the world is Jimmy Coon doing? Is he going to swim into the deep water?"

Oh, my, no! Jimmy Coon knows his business, for he is creeping out softly to get on that half-sunken log, that extends out into the pond, with one end on the shore. And all the frogs saw him and heard him; and they kept as still as wood-mice.

Peter Rabbit said to himself, "Oh, why doesn't Jimmy lump right in among still as wood-mice.
Peter Rabbit said to himself, "Oh, why doesn't Jimmy jump right in among those frogs, and gobble up a whole lot

A woman told me not long ago that her son in France requested her to send him Canadian money in this way, rather than by check, as he could get it exchanged for French money at any ited Cross depot or Y. Who Has the Words?

My Dear Mis Grey,—I am a stranger to your page, but would like to ask a few questions:

I. Has anyone the words of the song, entitled, "From Prison to Mother's Liveyar"? entitied. From Prison to Mother's Grave"?

2. What do you think would be suitable to send a soldier brother for a birthday present?

What do you think of my writing for a girl 15 years old?

Do you get many letter from this place?

Wants It in Code.

Dear Miss Grey,—I want to thank you for printing my letter in the column. At last my friend believes he can reduce his superfluous flesh. I hope so at any rate. I want to ask you something: Could you print someone's name and address in a code of my own make-up? I do hate to have to send my name. I hope I am not too bold in making this request. Also that the W. P. B. won't get its clutches on this. Will send in some recipes for chocolate and cream fudge next week. With best regards from all, I remain as before, Do you get many letter from this place?

Or no doubt a good plummy birthday cake, and, if he smokes, a selection of his favorite tobacco will meet with greater favor still. Outside of what we generally term "comforts" or "extras" there seems little to be sent the boys that they can really find use or convenience for.

all? I bet it is distributing a free supply of stuffed heads. Winter will soon be here.

Now, Miss Grey, I am a soldier's wife. I have one little angel aged two years. As I dread the long winter alone, I wonder could you please advise me as to where I could apply to get a girl about 12 years or over, who would like a nice home. I am not wealthy, but I would use her as my own.

Also the old question, what do you think of my writing? It is not extra, I know, so do not criticize too much.

I will close now, wishing you and all the Pageites the best of every thing. I remains, TOMMY'S SISTER.
