XMAS WEEK—ANOTHER GREAT PLAY FROM "FRECKLES" DELIGHTFUL NATURE STORY BY GENE STRATTON PORTER—XMAS WEEK

The mysterious twelve-winged craft, built in Savannah, Ga., which is expected by its inventor, Capt. Matthew A. Batson, of the U.S. Cavalry, to cross the Atlantic. It is a triple-motored multiplane with a speed capacity of from forty-five to sixty miles an hour on water and one hundred miles an hour in the air. It is seventy-four feet long and weighs about 9,000 pounds. The present plan is to make a preliminary flight from Savannah to New York, and then to try to cross the Atlantic.

DESPITE STIRRING EVENTS IN ENGLAND, DUBLIN IS STILL MUCH THE CENTRE OF THINGS EXCITING. CONVEYING THE STRIKE PAY FROM THE DUBLIN BANK.

JUSTINA WAYNE, WHO WILL BE SEEN AS "DIANE EVELETH" IN THE FAMOUS BOOK PLAY, "THE INNER SHRINE," AT THE GRAND ALL THIS WEEK.

THE INNER SHRINE.

It was a pleasure to read Basil King's fascinating story, "The Inner Shrine." It is a joy to see Channing Pollock's dramatization, with all the splendid characters reproduced on the stage. If one has read this tale of love and intrigue, he will find its new setting even more delightful. Those who did not follow the adventures of the lovely Diane Eveleth in her search for happiness, will want to peruse Basil King's pages after seeing this intensely interesting drama. "The Inner Shrine" has been attracting large and enthusiastic audiences everywhere. They watch the great love story unfold its perilous course and win despite all obstacles, despite malicious slander and gossip, and they come away satisfied. In writing "The Inner Shrine," and in getting it ready as a theatrical production, its makers keep forever in mind Coleridge's famous line "All are but ministers of love, and feed his sacred flame." "The Inner Shrine" is essentially a love story. The "old, old tale" and "the light that never was on land or sea," runs thru it from end to end, not delude themselves with the most wholesome, and if sometimes heroic, that it is "mushy." It is clean and this has been mankind's absorbing theme since the world began. Channing Pollock has made of this novel a play that will find a large following everywhere. The play is in four acts, the first act being laid in the house of the Eveleth's in Paris; the second and third in the home of Derek Fruyn in New York City, and the last act, a marvelously beautiful set showing the porch of the Bay Tree Inn, in Lakeville, N. J.
