PLANNED FOR EFFICIENCY

Fifth Avenue Hospital, With Centralized Control, Separate Rooms for All Patients, Eliminating Danger and Inconvenience of the Wards.

(New York Evening Post)

That the new Fifth Avenue Hospital, an institution in which rich and poor patients alike will be housed in separate single rooms, will cost no more to operate than the present type of hospital which houses free patients in open wards is the opinion of Dr. Weley E. Woodbury, its director.

"There is an enormous waste in the administration of the free ward," said Dr. Woodbury this morning, "which I had not realized by any except those who have had direct experience with it. This waste will be eliminated to a large extent by housing patients in separate single rooms. And the keynote of the whole thing will be the flexibility of the service.

"In the first place, it is the business of a hospital to cure people. No one will say that noise, confusion and unsightliness are conducive to cure. A separate room for each patient together with other provisions for privacy and comfort in this new hospital will eliminate noise, confusion, and unsightliness—and with them, fear. What that will mean in energy and worry to the doctor and nurse and patient is incalculable.

"Next, the single room system will save the nurse's time. In the ordinary ward all the supplies are kept at the end of the ward, and the nurse has to travel its entire length to get what she requires every time she goes...

With the ward system there is often a waiting list for the women's surgical ward, while several beds are empty in the men's ward. This means that two things happen: People who urgently need surgical treatment are denied it and empty beds add their quota to the overhead without working for it.

"Again, in the classification of diseases, the maternity ward of the old type hospital may be half empty and the surgical and medical wards full. Yet it is impossible to put surgical and medical cases into a maternity ward, for fear of infection. That means more beds wasted also heat and light and service. It is equally wrong to put children with adults. But in a wardless hospital in case of an epidemic among children the children can easily be put into adults rooms.

No Transferring of Patients.

"Pneumonia and typhoid patients should never be put in open wards at all, because it is impossible to control the sources of infection. These cases need varying temperature; some, moreover, are of a virulent form and some are not; and some may be fairly safe at the start and develop into virulent cases later and infect others.

"I have often seen a fifteen-bed ward occupied by only two patients. Of course, in cases like this it would be cheaper to put the patients into single rooms and close the wards; but frequently there is no single room vacant, and all the heat and service and light and equipment needed for fifteen people have to be expended upon two.

"On the other hand, when a single room is unoccupied the lights are put out, the heat is turned off, the door is locked — and that room costs nothing for upkeep until it is occupied again.

"The area of the island is close to 300,000 square miles and supports a population estimated at 1,200,000. If New Guinea could be transported on to the United States with its southeastern point at Norfolk, Va., it would extend across Virginia, West Virginia, Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, Minnesota and North Dakota.

Sightly, Select Neighborhood, Healthful and Convenient.

Particularly desirable are these lots, commanding, as they do, a glorious view of the bay, river, and surrounding country.

While just far enough from the centre of the city to avoid the smoke and confusion, they are within easy reach of business and shopping districts. Bentley street school is close at hand.

All are front lots, ground easily workable, nicely graded to street, those on the west side measuring 80 by 120 feet, and those on the eastern side, 60 by 120 feet. For particulars and prices, 'Phone Main 3000 and only by separating them can the greatest comfort be secured for each.

A Type of Mistake Precluded.

"There are a number of worse dangers, too, that are minimized by the single room system. The first time the real horror of these dangers came forcibly to my attention was when I was director of the government hospital in Manila. A patient suffering from bubonic plague got past the examining room and was wheeled into the open ward. His condition was discovered before there was time to take him off the litter and nothing happened. But we had all the horrors and all the thrills. We thought we had an airtight examining department there, but mistakes do occur. The best thing is to make sure that as little harm as possible will result from such mistakes, and this can be done only by separating the patients.

"Centralization of control is the final resolving point of all these separate problems. All the activities of the hospital radiate from its central control, the centre of the basement floor, which is like the middle point of a spider web. This point is connected by telephone and telautograph—which reduces clerical work and eliminates the chance of error—with every part of the building.

YOUNG OLD LAND.

New Guinea One of the World's Ancient Spots.

New Guinea, second largest island on the globe, occupies the paradoxical position of being at once the oldest and youngest spot on the earth. There are found animals that roamed centuries ago, when ferns grew to the size of giant trees and glaciers were making valleys, and there, too, is one of the few unexplored portions of the world.

Thirty-six years ago Great Britain, Holland and Germany divided the island on paper, and with the exception of a few trading posts on the coast little change has been made. The portion formerly held by Germany has been placed under the control of Australia. The interior is still held by wild tribes which bear a strange resemblance to the Negroes of Africa and their origin is a mystery. The Papuans, as the natives are called, are Ethopian in almost every characteristic—woolly hair, flat noses and thick lips, while the natives of the adjacent islands are Malayan.

The Papuans seem to have a weakness for elevated homes. In the northern and eastern portions of the island they build their houses on piles and in the southeastern part they live in rude huts in the trees. While undeniably savage, head hunting and cannibalism are still practiced there. The natives have the virtue of cleanliness to a marked degree. Bathing with them is almost a part of their religion, and they believe the spirits of the departed are as much addicted to water as the living. This belief accounts for the carefully made paths which lead in a tribal cemetery to the water. The living have made smooth the way of the dead to the bath.

The New Guinea of today is strange to western eyes and represents a fauna of bygone ages. All of the native animals are marsupials, having pockets, like the opossum of North America, and many of them lay eggs, like birds. In the number and beauty of its birds the island is without a rival. One of the most beautiful members of the feathered family native to the island is the gorgeous bird of paradise. Bird skins from one of the chief items of export from the island.

A HOUSE SHORTAGE REMEDIED.

(Toronto Globe.)

The way in which New York City is overcoming the housing shortage is a lesson in taxation for all communities. The situation last year was so critical that a special session of the legislature was called to try to find a remedy. While the rent law gave the tenant some protection and prevented eviction, it was not a stimulant to building. In restraining the greed of landlords, it probably restrained also the erection of houses.

A session of 1920 providing for the exemption from taxation for ten years of new buildings erected after April 1, 1922, and completed before April 1, 1924. The bill was permissive, leaving it to the various municipalities to determine whether they would apply it or not. The city of New York last year adopted the principle, but limited the exemption to $5,000 per house or apartment. In no case was the exemption to exceed $1,000 per room. The effect was immediate and decisive. Between February 26 and October 13 this year plans were filed for dwellings to house 38,500...

families at an estimated cost of $189,000,000. Eighty-five per cent of the construction is in progress. If such a rate is maintained until March next accommodation will have been provided for 260,000 people.

The defect of the plan is, of course, that it gives one group of property owners a special privilege for a period. But it is being used as an argument against the system which taxes land and buildings at the same rate. It proves that to encourage building it is necessary to tax more lightly or not at all. If landlords could be assured of immunity from taxation it might prove a more effective remedy to promote building is to reduce the tax.
