Dallas W. Sprinkles, left, and Charles S. Preston, are directors of public relations for Breckinridge Job Corps Centre at Morganfield, Kentucky. This organization is operated by Southern Illinois University and trains young men and women for work. The majority of the trainees, both Negro and white come from the South, yet the Centre is totally integrated in every phase of operation. The public relations men say the centre is working in friendship with most of the community, despite a few diehard segregationists and the visit of one Ku Klux Klansman.

Urges Training Of More Negro Lawyers

Livinston L. Wingate, executive director of HAR-YOU-ACT, urged today that the proposed extension of legal services to the poor under the war on poverty programs not be, "a mere show, a mockery that will not guarantee justice."

He told an assembly of Negro lawyers that they should have a special interest "in making sure" that legal services to the poor "does not become just one more white man's burden; we have to make sure that it is not a takeover by legal aid; and we have to make sure that lawyers sent into our communities are not just emissaries of the mayors . . . trying to sell us a new version of injustice." Wingate also urged that many more Negroes be trained as lawyers.

Wingate made his remarks at a seminar on legal services to the poor at the 40th Annual Convention of the National Bar Association in New Orleans.

"Many of these projects," he emphasized, "will be started in urban areas — and in this man's country, that means that the clients of these new and fashionable neighborhood services will be Negro."

"Let us be candid, we want to have a monopoly on these legal assistance funds, these salaries, these new plush offices, these subsidized practices. But we won't get it. And on the basis of past performances, there is some question as to whether we deserve it."

"By and large we have not given adequate services in the field of welfare, consumer frauds, representation in juvenile court, landlord-tenant problems, evictions, discrimination cases and public housing."

"I think we must begin to train new Negro lawyers. If we cannot get them into law schools because they have no college degrees, we should let them clerk for us first as investigators, then as assistants. We should seek for and find for them admission to the Bar through the old and discredited method, the one used by our emancipator, Abraham Lincoln, reading the law."

"We need to and must start looking at what kind of justice is being dealt our people. We have a special interest in making sure that this new upsurge of interest in the law for the poor does not become just one more white man's burden; we have to make sure that it is not a take-over by legal aid; and we have to make sure that the lawyers sent into our communities are not just emissaries of the mayors, of the 'man down-town', who is trying to sell us a new version of injustice, 1965 style, war-on-poverty style. We cannot afford a mere show, a mockery that will not guarantee justice. We must stand ready to make sure that it is freedom and justice that is meted out in this war on poverty."

Negro Artists Praised

Washington — The Negro musician has made a "significant and creditable" contribution to the U.S. Cultural Presentations Programs overseas, an officer of the United States Information Agency said here recently.

Howard B. Woods, Associate Director of USIA, spoke to the opening session of the National Association of Negro Musicians convention held at the Statler-Hilton Hotel.

The USIA official said that in the eleven years the cultural program has been in existence, there have been some 38 projects in more than 120 countries. Sports, choral, dance, drama, jazz, musical comedy, as well as academic groups have been featured, he said.

Woods singled out such artists as Marian Anderson, Leontyne Price, William Warfield and Louis Armstrong as having made great contributions to the overseas program.

Anti-Bias Fight Long, Hard Pull Grads Told

2000 SOCIOLOGISTS TO VIEW RACE ISSUE

More than 2,000 sociologists from throughout the U.S. and Canada will meet at the Edgewater Beach Hotel, for the 60th annual meeting of the American Sociological Association.

Race and Ethnic Relations is one of the timely subjects that will be discussed.

Among the sociologists presenting papers on the racial question will be Stanley Lieberson, Arnold Silverman, S. Joseph Fauman, Dr. Ira deA. Reid, and Martin Oppenheimer.

Center, Convocation speaker at the annual Atlanta University Summer School Commencement exercises, told the graduates that it was going to be a long, hard war against discrimination and that, as members of the educated class, they should prepare themselves for the long, hard pull.

"Your education will make it possible to see what is in store for Negroes in the immediate future and will help you to see what part you must play in that future if we are to make it what we want it to be," he said. Saying that the battle must be fought on two fronts, Dr. Richardson continued, "The first frontier is a battle against our outer enemies for full self-expression and full participation as citizens.

"The second front, which is equally as important and which must go on at the same time if the fight for freedom is to succeed, is in the area of inner development of the people. It is up to educated Negroes to help close the gap between those who have and those who have not," and suggested that it might be upon their unseen efforts in this area that the outcome of the struggle might depend.

Afro Arts To Present Play

The Afro Arts Culture Centre, in conjunction with the Pan African Students organization, will present a new play titled "The Adoption" which will open this Thursday at the Mount Morris Park Music Grove, 122nd street, and Madison Avenue. The play will begin at 8.00 p.m., each evening.

This event is only one of the many events being presented by the Centre this year in its effort to fully endorse President Lyndon Johnson's proclamation of 1965 as International Cooperation Year."

Weaver Expected To Be Named

Almost momentarily, President Johnson is expected to name New York's Robert C. Weaver to the newly created Housing and Urban Development Department, as head of that cabinet-level department. This will be the first new cabinet post since 1953. It received House approval and was passed by the Senate on Tuesday — ending a 4½ year struggle for passage. Weaver has long been considered front-runner for the new post. He is presently head of the Housing and Home Financing Agency.
