Jimmy Ellis Says Ali Floating Like Elephant

Houston (AP) — Jimmy Ellis admits he sometimes gets in trouble with his manager Angelo Dundee because he likes to wade into opponents. But Ellis doesn't think he'll have any trouble with Mahammad Ali.

Ellis went through an impressive training session at the Astrodome in preparation for his July 26 bout in the Astrodome against Ali. Both fighters are using the fight as a stepping stone to another shot at heavyweight champion Joe Frazier.

"I like to mix it up," said Ellis, the former World Boxing Association champion. "They get on me sometimes about it but that's just my nature."

"We don't have the same style," Ellis said. "This guy likes to ride a bicycle. I don't like to back up but he may have to get on his bicycle."

Ali and Ellis taunted each other during their training sessions with Ali taking a lot of kidding about being overweight. "He's floating like an elephant," Ellis said. "He's got three speeds, slow, slower and a walk."

The two fighters are working from different sides of the weight scales. Ali is trying to trim down to 212 from 218 and Ellis will add about four pounds to his present 187.

Ellis said he expected Ali to be in shape by fight time. "I don't want him to use any excuses about Frazier taking it out of him."

Ellis said he didn't like Ali interrupting his training sessions. "You have to look for this guy to do anything," Ellis said. "I don't mind him coming in as long as he doesn't make a big disturbance. That's my time to work."

"I guess he just wanted to see how I looked. I know I probably looked pretty good to him."
