EUROPE BETWEEN SHIPS

By W. E. Harrison

When is a Negro a Negro, What is a Negro. Anybody who has traveled outside the United States to South and Central America, to the West Indies, or to Europe, soon asks himself these questions. In the United States the answer is definite and even curt. A Negro, in America, is anybody who admits that he has African blood.

Let a white person say in jest today "My grandfather was a Negro," let him be believed by his associates and tomorrow he will incur all the civil and social disabilities of the Negro. "Friends" will become less cordial and more patronizing; his daughter's engagement will be broken; his son may lose his job as an accountant or professor in a non-Negro concern or university. Therefore, as Dean Pickens has declared, the same potency in Negro blood which is claimed, by believing citizens, for the blood of Jesus Christ; it takes only one drop to make you whole.

In other countries a Negro is a black person; all other shades of colour are designated as "colored." Members of the brown, yellow and red races, are of course "colored," too as a Chinese eloquently indicated during the Harlem riots of 1935 when he hung a sign in his store window, "Me cullud too." Generally however, they are called by the name of their nationalities, as Japanese, Burmese, Korean. The English in general have a prejudice against ALL the colored races, and that prejudices only in the degree of intensity. Some colored persons, especially in the West Indies, congratulate themselves on the superior status which they occupy above the shades darker than their own color. They are too stupid to observe how lowly is their position, which hardly provides them a vantage point from which to look down upon anybody. On the other hand, some Japanese, having no African blood, in turn despise all West Indian colored people as dependent subjects to British rule, and look with contempt upon American Negroes as the descendants of bonded slaves. All this nonsense has been slowly disappearing with the increase of knowledge among all races and racial varieties. For centuries savage enemies of people of African white and colored thinkers have labored to destroy the abysmal ignorance of the masses all over the world. Opposed firmly by reactionary politicians who profit from inter-racial and intra-racial hate, the thinkers had won signal victories before the advent of Hitler to powers and the enforced return of millions to barbarism. Nazis, in theory and practice, are blood. Hitler's own statements read like the ravings of a Georgia crack-er. Yet, because Hitler needs an ally in the Far East to harry Russia's eastern frontier while his armies push East to attack the western border of the Soviet Union, the Nazis have not scrupled to make overtures to Japan for a military alliance.
