

To Acadia.

Once more to thee, Acadia, we turn,
Inspired anew, our duties to perform;
Newly resolved, whatever lot's in store
Of gain, or loss, therewith to be content;
To take success in humble frame of mind,
And count each failure but a stepping stone,
Which Heaven gives the man who nobly strives.
To do the duty lying nearest him.

Strong in our faith in thee, Acadia,
Proud of thy fame and jealous of thy name,
Guarding thine honor as we would our own,
And loyal to thy noblest ideals,
We turn once more to thy time-honored halls.
