THIS book is a companion volume to the edition of Books V. and VI., published in 1894. The notes on Book II. are entirely new matter; those on the other books, while based upon the edition of Books III. and IV. published in 1892, have been altered in the resetting, wherever there seemed possibility of improvement.

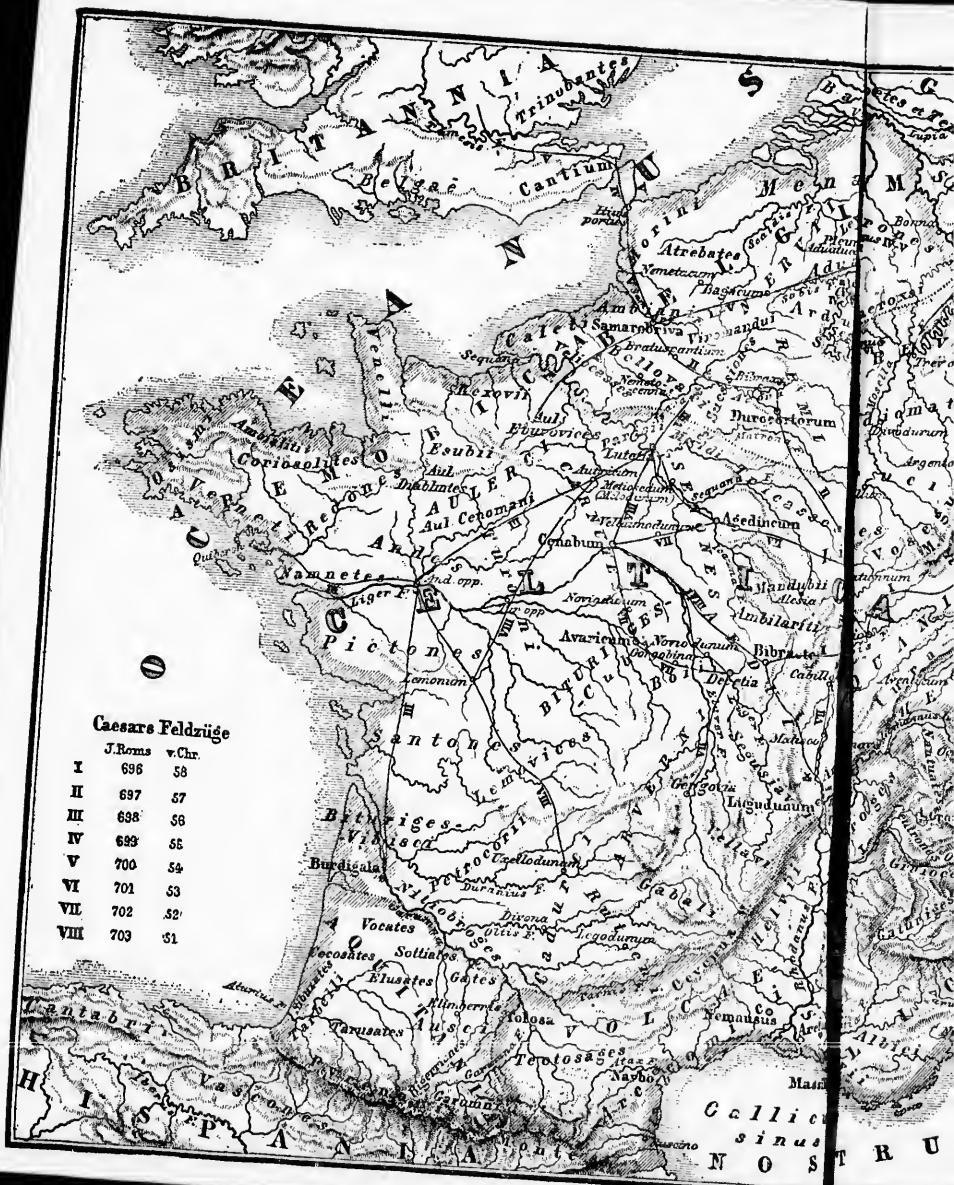

The purpose and point of view maintained through these various editions may be given in the words of the preface to the first of the series. "In the editor's opinion, the first aim of a teacher of Latin is to enable the student to read Latin with accuracy, appreciation and speed as the only means of reaching the higher ideals of classical study. In this edition therefore the constant aim has been to further the intelligent translation of the text into idiomatic English, and to build up a sound knowledge of Latin as a language to be read." While fortunately it is not so necessary now to emphasize this view as it was four years ago, it is still worth while for classical teachers to remember always that whatever peculiar benefits come from the study of Latin come through the power to read and understand the language.

In the notes the editor has tried to keep the via media between the two common faults of giving help where the student is better without it, and withholding it where there are (at least to him) real difficulties; and in the exercises has collected material for class-work that may for some teachers serve as a standard of the work to be done in that direction, and for all may lighten the labor of preparing such material for their own classes.

I.—LIFE OF CÆSAR.

AT the time of Cæsar's birth Rome had become mistress of all the lands bordering on the Mediterranean, so that foreign wars of conquest had virtually ceased, and during his boyhood commenced that struggle for supremacy in the State called the civil wars. This was at first a contest between the aristocratic and the popular party, but, as time went on, it became practically a struggle between individuals for personal supremacy. Caius Julius Cæsar was born in 100 B.C. (or, as the historian

INTRODUCTION.

Mommsen holds, in 102 B.C.), of one of the oldest of the patriotic or aristocratic families of Rome. The family was, however, closely connected by marriage with the great popular leader Marius, and Cæsar himself in 88 married the daughter of Cinna, Marius' leading supporter. His sympathies were thus from the first with the popular party, and on the defeat of that party by Sulla in 82, he barely escaped with his life.

For several years after this Cæsar served in the Roman army in Asia Minor, returning to Rome after Sulla's death in 78. At first he devoted himself to public oratory in the law courts, and in 76 went to Rhodes to study rhetoric under the famous teacher Molo. For several years after his return to Rome in 74 he busied himself in strengthening his position with his party, and soon came to be looked on as one of its leaders. The senatorial party was at this time supreme, and Cæsar had to win his way to power gradually. He went through the various grades of office by which Roman citizens rose to the rank of Consul, being in succession Quaestor, Curule Aedile, and Praetor. In 63 he was elected Pontifex Maximus, becoming technically the head of the Roman religion. This success over the aristocratic party showed clearly that its power was waning, and that Cæsar was now one of the leaders of the Roman state.

In 61, immediately after his Praetorship, he went to Spain as Propraetor or Military Governor. Here, in his first command, he at once showed his ability as a general, in quelling the rebellious native tribes. His manner of living at Rome (for he was not only one of the ablest but one of the most dissolute of men during the earlier period of his manhood), and the means by which he had obtained office and ingratiated himself with the people, had plunged him heavily into debt. But the Governor of a Roman province had plenty of opportunities for enriching himself at the expense of the provincials, and one year in Spain freed him from all his debts, as well as making him known as a brilliant commander.

eldest of the patriarchal family was, however, the great popular party. The daughter's sympathies were divided on the defeat, and with his life. The Roman army at its death in 78. In the law courts, under the famous turn to Rome in position with his party of its leaders. Pompey and Cæsar had fought through the ranks rose to the Curule Aedile, becoming his success over who was wanted of the Roman went to Spain for his first command, in quelling a rebellion at Rome (the most disastrous), and then situated himself in Sicily. But the opportunities for naval, and one all as making

In 60 he returned to the city and was elected Consul for 59, with a colleague of the aristocratic party, who was, however, too weak and insignificant to be able to thwart his measures.

The three leading men of Rome at this time were Pompey, representing the nobles; Cæsar, the leader of the popular party; and Crassus, whose influence was largely due to his immense wealth. Cæsar persuaded the other two to form a coalition with him, and thus get the practical supremacy of the state in their own hands. In the end this bargain proved to be entirely to Cæsar's advantage, as it prevented any active opposition to him during the next few years while he was absent from Rome securing for himself experience, prestige, and a veteran army to assist him when the final struggle for supremacy came. For one of the results of the coalition was that Cæsar was appointed for five years (58 to 54) governor of Illyricum and the two Gauls, Cisalpine and Transalpine, (the former being the northern part of Italy above the peninsula proper, and the latter the southern part of France). In 55 his command was extended for another period of five years, by an agreement with Pompey and Crassus, who were consuls that year.

For eight years (58 to 51) he was engaged in the conquest of Gaul. At the end of that time the whole of Gaul, from the Rhine to the Pyrenees, had been subjugated and made part of the Roman empire, and Cæsar had an army of experienced and devoted veterans, such as the Roman state had never before witnessed. Crassus had fallen in battle in the far East, and Cæsar and Pompey remained to compete for absolute supremacy in Rome, Pompey having the somewhat lukewarm support of the Senate and the aristocratical party.

Civil war soon arose from the jealousy between these two rivals, and in 49 Cæsar advanced with his legions into Italy. Pompey was not ready to oppose him, and crossed to Greece where the Senatorial party gathered its forces. Meanwhile Cæsar hastened to Spain, where Pompey had strong supporters.

and quickly reduced them to submission. Returning to Rome he was made Consul for 48 and then crossed over to Greece. After a short summer campaign Pompey was decisively defeated at Pharsalia, and fleeing to Egypt was assassinated there.

After short campaigns in Syria and Asia Minor (47) and Africa (46), in which all remaining opposition was crushed, Cæsar returned to Rome and occupied himself in securing his power and settling affairs of state, surprising many by the clemency he showed to those who had lately opposed him.

Pompey's sons meanwhile had raised a revolt in Spain, but this was speedily crushed in the spring of 45.

Cæsar was now practically (though not nominally) supreme ruler of the Roman world, and it seemed as though under the absolute rule of so brilliant an administrator there would now be lasting peace and prosperity. But a conspiracy to assassinate him was formed by a number of eminent Romans, actuated some by jealousy, others by an honest but short-sighted desire to bring back republican freedom, and in 44 B.C., on the 15th (the Ides) of March, he fell, pierced with the daggers of his murderers, at the base of Pompey's statue.

The result was that the struggle for supremacy was soon renewed, and terminated only when, fourteen years later, Cæsar's nephew (Octavianus, or Augustus) became sole ruler of the Roman world and established the empire of the Cæsars.

"In person, Cæsar was tall and slenderly built, his face rather long and thin, his eyes black, vivacious, and keen, his nose prominent, of the Roman type, his head somewhat bald in later life."—Allen and Greenough.

"His powers and genius were simply astonishing, a brilliant leader, a skilful engineer, a profound jurist, a scientific astronomer, an eloquent orator and accomplished poet—there was no region, practical or theoretical, in which he did not travel with the greatest success."—Walpole.

II.—GAUL AND THE GAULS.

LONG before Cæsar's time the Gauls had come into collision with the Romans. Before Rome's power extended over more than the immediate neighborhood of the city, large numbers of Gauls had crossed the Alps and occupied the whole of the northern portion of Italy. By the beginning of the fourth century B.C. they had made their way down into Central Italy, and in 390 laid Rome in ashes. For more than a century Rome was almost constantly engaged in wars with the neighboring tribes and states of Italy, and in many of these wars the Gauls of Central and Northern Italy, either alone or in alliance with the Etruscans and Samnites, were opposed to Rome. In 283 a crushing defeat was inflicted on the Gauls, and until 225 there was no more trouble with them. By that time Rome had gained secure possession of the whole peninsula. By the end of 224 she had conquered the country of the Gauls south of the river Po, and in two years more had extended her power to the Alps. The district extending from the Alps to the peninsula was formed into a province called Gallia Citerior, or Alpina, being politically quite distinct from the peninsula, proper.

The first steps towards the conquest of Transalpine Gaul were taken in 154, when a Roman army crossed the Alps to repel an attack by the Gauls on two coast-settlements subject to Massilia (Marseilles), a city which had been founded near the mouth of the Rhone by Greek traders, and which had formed an alliance with Rome. In 125 these attacks were again renewed, and again the Romans interfered, and after several years fighting, in which the Romans defeated the leading tribes of the southern part of Gaul, they became masters of the whole territory extending from the eastern end of the Pyrenees to the Alps, with the exception of Massilia, which still remained independent but in alliance with the Romans. Colonies were planted and the district organized into a province,—the ‘Provincia’ of Cæsar—called Gallia Transalpina, or at a later period Gallia Narbonensis.

INTRODUCTION.

Until Cæsar’s time no further extension of territory was made by the Romans. The rest of Gaul was inhabited by a large number of independent tribes of similar origin and language, with the exception of the south-western part inhabited by the Aquitani, who were of a different race and akin to the Spaniards, and the north-eastern portion belonging to the Belgæ, who were largely of German extraction.

In 118 an invading host of Cimbri entered Gaul from the east. These fierce warriors swept everything before them in Gaul, and in 109 came in collision with the Romans, completely defeating their forces under the Consul Silanus. A portion of the Helvetians, called the Tigurini, pressed southward to join the invasion, and in 107 defeated the Consul Lucius Cassius, and in 105 a third defeat was sustained by the Consul Mallius. There was great alarm in Rome, for the barbarian hordes were threatening Italy, and another host, of Teutoni, had also appeared on the scene. These latter were, however, defeated in 102 by Marius in the province, and the next year the Cimbri, who had crossed the Alps into Cisalpine Gaul, were completely routed by Catulus.

This invasion of Gaul by the Cimbri and Teutoni seems to have paved the way for Cæsar’s conquest, by weakening the tribes and breaking up the strong confederacies that had existed.

For some years the only disturbance that arose in Gaul was the revolt, quickly suppressed, of the Allobroges, a tribe in the north of the province. This was in 61, and about that time there came other disquieting news.

The independent tribes of Gauls, lying to the north of the province, were divided into two leagues, headed, the one by the Ædui, the other by the Arverni and Sequani. The former were in alliance with Rome, and to offset this the Arverni and Sequani had a few years before invoked the aid of some of the German tribes living just across the Rhine. These were only too ready Gallia Transalpina, to get a footing in Gaul, and soon the Sequani found that their new allies were fast becoming their masters. Further, in 60 the Helvetii, living in what is now known as Switzerland, began to prepare for a wholesale emigration into the more pleasant country of south-western Gaul.

The Romans' experience of the Gauls in Italy, and the more recent terror caused by the invasion of the Cimbri and Teutoni made them feel alarm at these extensive and threatening movements of population. The Helvetians' route would lie close to the province, and it was hazardous to allow the Germans to become firmly established in Gaul. The Romans did not at once, however, respond to the Ædui's request for aid, but seem to have preferred to keep on good terms with Ariovistus, the German leader, till the moment for action came.

Matters were in this position when Cæsar in 58 assumed the governorship of the three Roman provinces, Gallia Cisalpina, Gallia Transalpina (or Provincia as he generally calls it), and Illyricum.

Of these he depended mainly on the first for troops and supplies. It was practically part of Italy, as populous and nearly as wealthy and prosperous as the peninsula to the south. Gallia Transalpina had not yet been so thoroughly assimilated, and, with the exception of the neighborhood of the colonies and trading cities on the coasts, doubtless differed little from "Free Gaul" to the north and west.

"The Gauls were an intellectual and prosperous people, far more civilized than either Germans or Britons. The country, though extensively covered with forests, especially towards the north, was well provided with roads and bridges. The entire population has been reckoned at about seven millions. The people of the Gallic race were tall, fair-complexioned, of restless sanguine temperament, and addicted to fighting, but skilled in many arts.....They had numerous flourishing cities, which, however, had no political or corporate character like those of Greece and Italy, but were merely places of residence and trade.

"The Gauls were not a nation, but a group of nations or tribes, about sixty in number, . . . the smaller ones often maintaining only a nominal independence under the protection of some larger one. They were for the most part ruled by a turbulent and oppressive aristocracy, sometimes with an elected chief magistrate, while sometimes an ambitious leader succeeded in establishing for a time a kingly power.

"The Britons were, like the Gauls, of Celtic race, and resembling them in every respect, except that living further from the civilized world, they were ruder, freer, and more warlike.

"The Germans, less advanced in civilization than the Gauls, were still far from being savages. They appear to have been just emerging from what is known as the barbarous state,—beginning to acquire fixed habitations, and to cultivate the ground; they had no cities."—Allen and Greenough.

III.—CÆSAR'S CAMPAIGNS IN GAUL.*

I.—B.C. 58. Cæsar, hearing in Rome that the Helvetii are on the eve of setting out on their projected emigration (see page ix), hastens to Transalpine Gaul and there takes measures to prevent them from going through the province. They at first ask his permission to take this route, but failing to get it, try to force their way over the Rhone into the province. Cæsar repels them and they decide to take a more northerly and more difficult route. Cæsar at once obtains five legions from Cisalpine Gaul (there was but one in the Province), and follows them up on the ground that they were likely in their new home to prove dangerous neighbors to the province. He surprised and overcame one of their four divisions at the river

Arar, and soon after near Bibracte inflicts a crushing defeat on the remainder, and orders the survivors to return to the homes they had abandoned.

The presence of so large a body of troops and so successful a commander causes the leading men of several of the Gallic tribes to ask his assistance against Ariovistus and his German followers (see page viii.) Caesar undertakes the task, and at first tries argument and diplomacy, but in vain. The Roman soldiers are afraid to venture into unknown lands against so formidable an enemy as the Germans were reported to be, but Caesar calms their fears, and as soon as he can come to a decisive engagement with Ariovistus, completely routs the Germans and drives them back across the Rhine.

By this campaign the Roman influence was extended over the territory to the north of the province as far as the Treveri.

II.—B.C. 57. Caesar advances into the territory of the Belgae, who, with the exception of the Remi (who form an alliance with the Romans), combine to resist any attack on their country.

The combined forces meeting a repulse disband and Cæsar advances farther into the country. Here he is surprised by the Nervii with some other tribes, and after a most desperate engagement, in which Cæsar's inspiring example alone rallies the troops, the Nervii are driven back with immense loss.

After the siege of an important town in this neighborhood, which capitulates when the enemy perceive the efficiency of the Romans' siege artillery, several other tribes submit, and as a result of this second campaign Cæsar's power extended from the Province northward to the English Channel and along the whole northern coast of Gaul as far as the Veneti.

III.—B.C. 56. During the winter Cæsar sends one of his lieutenants to open up a new route between Italy and Gaul over the Alps, near the northern part of the Province, but the hill tribes offer such a resistance that the Romans are forced to retire. by the Veneti, combine to recover their liberty. The campaign is carried on along the coast, both by land and sea, and the Romans at last conquer the Veneti in a sea fight by a combination of ingenuity and good fortune.

Meanwhile Sabinus, a lieutenant of Cæsar, succeeded in quelling the revolt among the Venelli, and about the same time another lieutenant, Crassus, advanced southward into Aquitania, and after a hard fight against overwhelming odds came off victorious, and the different tribes of the Aquitani submitted to the Romans.

This campaign secured the results of the second year's work in the north-west of Gaul, while by the conquest of Aquitania the entire south from the Atlantic to the Alps acknowledged the Roman sway.

IV.—B.C. 55. For some time the growing power of the Suebi, a German tribe, had been oppressing the neighboring tribes, and at last the Usipetes and Tencteri resolve to cross the Rhine into Gaul. Cæsar advances to the Rhine, and after several conferences fights two battles with the invading Germans and repulses them. To prevent any further inroad, Cæsar builds a bridge across the Rhine, lays waste the lands of the Germans, and thus at once punishes and intimidates them.

He then resolves on making an expedition to Britain, which had close relations with the Belgae, and for this purpose collects a fleet and sets sail in the early autumn. In the face of a stubborn resistance he effects a landing, and receives the submission of a few states. Heavy losses to the Roman fleet, caused by a storm and high tides, encourage these states to revolt again. A Roman legion is surprised, but the attack is repelled and soon after, owing to the lateness of the season, Caesar returns to Gaul without having ventured inland. On his return he puts down a rising of the Morini.

No new territory was added by this campaign, but the north-east of Gaul was rendered secure from German invasion and the sphere of Roman influence was extended to Britain.

V.—B.C. 54. With a larger fleet and stronger army than before, Cæsar again invades Britain and advances into the interior a little beyond the Thames. The native tribes combine against him, but are defeated and compelled to promise tribute. In the autumn Cæsar returns to Gaul, having made a display of his power and enterprise, but without adding any new territory.

On account of a drought and consequent scarcity of supplies in Gaul, the forces are divided for the winter into several portions and quartered among various tribes. The Gauls, who had been beaten but not subdued, take advantage of this to attack three of the camps. The garrison (a legion and a half) of one is lured from the camp, falls into an ambush and is annihilated. Another camp is besieged by the Nervii, but when reduced to the last extremity relieved by Cæsar. A third is attacked by the Treveri, who are however beaten back with severe loss. Affairs are in so desperate a condition that for the first time Cæsar spends the winter in Gaul instead of Italy.

VI.—B.C. 53. Cæsar, with three additional legions, sets about crushing out all resistance in Northern and North-eastern Gaul. A brief expedition is made across the Rhine into Germany to stop all interference with Gaul. The extreme north-east, where the legion and a half had been cut off the year before, is completely devastated and an invasion by the Sugambri (a German tribe) is repelled. This portion, at least, of Gaul has been now pretty effectually subdued.

VII.—B.C. 52. A general uprising of the central tribes of Gaul, joined even by the hitherto faithful Ædui, is headed by Vercingetorix, who on several occasions gains some advantage over Cæsar but is in the end overcome. The greater part of the fighting (including three noteworthy sieges) takes place in the country of the Arverni and the Ædui and the districts to the north. After the defeat and capture of Vercingetorix the different tribes are speedily reduced to submission.

VIII.—B.C. 51. (The story of this campaign is told by Aulus Hirtius). A few risings in various parts of Gaul are quelled, and Cæsar, having by the middle of 50 completed the conquest of Gaul, proceeds soon after to Italy and becomes engaged in civil war with Pompey.

IV.—THE COMMENTARIES OF CÆSAR.

Commentarii means sketches, jottings, memoirs, and 'Cæsar's Commentaries are memoirs written by himself, descriptive of his different campaigns, in which he treats of himself in the third person, and tells his story as it might have been told by some accompanying scribe or secretary.' That Caesar himself was the author, is amply proved by the fact that his contemporaries ascribed it to him. It is uncertain whether it was written as the war went on and issued book by book, or whether it was composed towards the end of the war.

Each book contains the history of a single year's campaign. There are seven books in all, the history of the eighth year's operations having been composed after Caesar's death by Aulus Hirtius, Cæsar being doubtless too busy preparing for the coming war with Pompey to find time for literary work.

As for the literary style of the Commentaries, the best judges among Caesar's contemporaries praised it for its purity of diction and its business-like directness of expression. Cicero, the best literary critic of his day, writes of Caesar's Commentaries, "I pronounce them to be, in fact, entirely commendable: for they are simple, straightforward, of a charming elegance, stripped of all rhetorical adornments;" and while speaking of them as intended not for a history but as materials for a history, says that their purity, brilliance and conciseness are such as to deter any man in his senses from attempting a history based on these materials.

Hirtius also bears witness to the ease and speed with which Caesar wrote these books.

It should be borne in mind that Caesar was one of the most eloquent and polished orators of his day, and that he also gave attention to the rhetorical study of language, having written a work on the Latin language, from which Gellius quotes the advice, 'to shun an uncommon or out of the way word as a ship would a rock.'

An eminent modern writer says, "To us who love to make our language clear by the number of words used, and who in writing rarely give ourselves time for condensation, the closely-packed style of Cæsar is at first somewhat difficult of comprehension. It cannot be read otherwise than slowly till the reader's mind is trained by practice to Cæsarean expressions, and then not with rapidity.... Skipping is out of the question."

The only other work of Cæsar which has survived to us is a history of the war between him and Pompey, Commentarii de Bello Civilis, in three books.

V.—THE ARMY AND METHODS OF WARFARE.

(a) The Roman Forces. Cæsar's army consisted of (a) several legions of Roman soldiers, mostly enlisted in Gallia Cisalpina, (b) light-armed troops (slingers and archers), levied in some of the Roman provinces (Numidia, Crete and the Balearic islands are mentioned), and (c) auxiliary cavalry furnished by or levied from the native tribes in alliance with the Romans.

The legion (legio) consisted nominally of 5,000 or 6,000 men, in reality of about 3,000 or 4,000. Losses incurred in a campaign were not made up by adding recruits to the legion, thus impairing its efficiency, but when necessary, new legions were levied. Each legion was made up of ten cohorts (cohors), each cohort of three maniples or companies (manipulus), each maniple of two centuries (centuria or ordo), but the division into cohorts is the important one in Cæsar's time, the cohort being thus the unit of his army. The cavalry were divide-

(b) Arms and Equipments. The heavy armed soldier of the legion (miles legionarius), was equipped as follows:

Defensive armor. 1. The helmet (galea), of leather, to which were attached crests (insignia) to distinguish the soldiers of the different legions. 2. The cuirass (lorica), of leather with a small iron breast-plate.

3. The shield (scutum), oblong, 4 feet by  $2\frac{1}{2}$ , and half cylindrical, of wood covered with leather, with metal rims at the top and bottom. [N.B.

—The round shield (clipeus) shown in the preceding cut had long before Caesar's time been discarded for the oblong scutum shown in the accompanying cut.]*

* At an earlier time greaves (ocreae) had been worn, but they seem not to have been used in Caesar's time.

Offensive armor. 1. The sword (gladius), about two feet long, straight and two-edged, for thrusting not for cutting down. It hung in a sheath (vagina) by a belt (balteus) on the right side, that the shield might not interfere with its being drawn. 2. The javelin (pilum), always used as a missile, not for thrusting, about six feet long with a wooden shaft and iron head.

The clothing of the soldier was a cloak (sagum or sagulum) reaching to the knee, under which was a tunic or shirt (tunica). A girdle or belt, and boots reaching half way to the knee completed the dress.

The light-armed soldiers (miles levis armaturae) had for their weapons of offense the bow and arrow (archers, sagittarii) or the sling (slingers, funditores). As a defense they seem to have used a small round shield.

(c) Officers of the Army. 1. The Commander-in-chief (imperator), who was at the same time governor of the province which formed the army's headquarters. 2. The staff officers, adjutants or lieutenants (legatus), appointed by the Roman senate, but practically chosen by the commander. Caesar had ten legati, who were often assigned to the temporary command of troops either in an engagement, in winter-quarters, or on expeditions sent out by him. 3. The paymaster-general (quaestor), who managed the finances of the province, and in war the payment of the soldiers and the sale of booty and prisoners of war. There was but one quaestor with the commander-in-chief, and he was now and then entrusted with a command. 4. The tribunes of the soldiers (tribunus militum), of whom there were six belonging to each legion. They were chosen probably by Caesar himself (though at an earlier period elected by the people) from young men of good birth (they belonged to the equestrian order), but generally of little military ability or experience. As a consequence they do not occupy a prominent position in the cam-

The prefects or commanders (praefectus) were also of equestrian rank and were placed in command of the allied troops, for as a general thing the cavalry contributed by the native tribes was officered by Romans. 6. The centurions (centurio) were chosen from among the regular troops, there being 60 to each legion and six to each cohort. The centurions of a legion were not all of the same rank. There was a regular grade of promotion by which a centurion was advanced until he became the senior centurion of the legion (called primipilus or primi pili centurio)* The centurions were the ordinary officers of the legion upon whom depended mainly the efficiency of the troops. 7. The decurion or sub-commander of cavalry (decurio), occupying a position inferior to the praefectus and commanding a small detachment of cavalry.

(d) The Camp. "A Roman army never halted for the night without entrenching itself. Towards the end of the day's march a detachment was sent out in front to select a spot for encampment. A favorite site was the slope of a hill, especially if wood, water and grass were abundant in its neighborhood." The camp was square, the defenses consisting of a wall or rampart (vallum), and outside of this a trench or moat (fossa), from which much of the material for the wall was obtained. The tents (tentoria) of the soldiers were of skins (pelles). The camp had four gates (porta), those at the side being a little forward of the centre, and those in front (i.e. facing the enemy) and rear in the centre.† Before each gate

* The name was given at an earlier period when the army was divided into maniples rather than cohorts, and into three ranks (hastati, principes and triarii, the last being the veterans.) Each maniple had two centurions (senior and junior, prior and posterior) and the chief centurion was the senior centurion of the first maniple of the triarii. The name pilus was given to a maniple of the triarii.

a picket or outpost (statio) was placed to guard against surprise.†

(e) Baggage and Standards. The heavy baggage (impeditamenta), including the tents, hand mills for grinding corn and engines of war, were carried in wagons or on beasts of burden. Besides this each soldier had his pack (sarcinae) to carry. Besides his heavy armor (of which the helmet for convenience was hung round his neck) he carried provisions for two or three weeks, a vessel for cooking his grain when ground into meal, and some of the implements used in throwing up entrenchments—such as stakes, saws, spades, hatchets, and baskets. This pack he would carry upon one of the stakes over his left shoulder, the left arm bearing the shield and the right grasping his javelin. The weight of the pack would be as much as 45 pounds. Hence the soldier in this heavy marching order is called impeditus, when freed from his pack and in light marching order, expeditus.

The standards of the army included (1) the eagle (aquila), one to each legion, borne by the standard bearer of the legion (aquilifer) who was under the immediate command of the first centurion of the legion ; (2) the standard or ensign (signum), of which each manipulus had one, borne by a signifer, of different devices, to enable the soldier to distinguish his own place; and (3) the banner (vexillum), a square piece of colored cloth attached by a crosspiece to a pole, and serving as the standard for the cavalry and perhaps also for the auxiliaries, being also used for detachments of legionary soldiers sent out for special duties. A red vexillum was displayed from the general's quarters as a signal for battle. For this same purpose, as well as for other signals, a straight trumpet (tuba) was also used.

(f) The Army on the March and in Action. The army on the march (agmen) advanced in a single column, with the baggage of each legion immediately behind it. When near the enemy, the baggage of all the legions was thrown together along with the packs of the soldiers, who thus marched in fighting order. The vanguard is called primum agmen, the rear novissimum agmen.

When drawn up in line of battle (acies), each legion was generally arranged in three lines (triplex acies), four cohorts (the pick of the legion) in the first line, and three in each of the others. These were stationed something like the following order, so that the second line could come into action without interfering with the first. The men stood 10 deep in the cohort. Occasionally other arrangements are mentioned—the single line, the double line (acies duplex) the wedge-shaped (cunens), and the square (ratis).

The right wing is called dextrum cornu, the left sinistrum cornu, the centre media acies. The cavalry and light-armed troops were stationed generally on the wings.

The place for drawing up the line of battle was by preference sloping ground, that the soldiers might have the advantage in making the charge and might throw their weapons down, not up.

In attacking a town three methods were employed. If weakly fortified, it might be taken by a sudden rush, the trench being filled up, the gates broken in, the walls undermined or torn down, and scaling ladders (scalae) brought up to the walls. At other times it was completely surrounded and the garrison starved out. The third method is the regular siege, carried on by means of certain siege works and engines (the artillery of the Romans). Of these siege works the chief one is the mound (agger), raised near the town and gradually growing higher and nearer the wall until it was on a level with it. The side remote from the town formed an inclined slope up which towers (turres) could be rolled, from the shelter of which missiles were hurled at the defenders until men working beneath could undermine or batter down the walls, or others could place bridges from the mound to the wall and rush across.

To protect those who were building the mound or battering down the wall various devices were used—the screen (pluteus), the shed or mantlet (testudo § lit. tortoise shell, vinea lit. vine-arbor.)

The battering ram (aries) was a huge beam tipped with iron, suspended from above, and set in motion from behind by pulling

§ The term testudo was also used to describe a peculiar shelter formed by a body of soldiers holding their shields over their heads, thus forming a continuous cover, sloping towards the rear, so as to shed all missiles hurled down at the soldiers beneath.

Engines (tormenta) for hurling huge stones or darts were also employed.

(g) Roman Vessels. Those used in war were of two kinds, the ship of war or galley (navis longa) and the transport (navis oneraria). The former were long and narrow, rigged with sails, but at the same time equipped with rowers. A special feature was the beak (rostrum), a sharp projection at the bow covered with metal for running down an enemy's ship.
We also read of towers being built on the decks from which missiles could be hurled on the enemy.

1   12. Postridie ejus diei Caesar, priusquam se hostes exterrere ac fuga reciperent, in fines Suessionum, qui proximi Remis erant, exercitum duxit, et magno itinere [confecto] ad oppidum Noviodunum contendit. Id ex itinere oppugnare conatus, quod vacuum ab defensoribus esse audiebat, propter latitudinem fossae murique altitudinem, paucis defensionibus, expugnare non potuit. Castris munitis, vineas agere quaeque ad oppugnandum usui erant comparatae coepit. Interim omnis ex fuga Suessionum multitudo in oppidum proxima nocte convenit. Celeriter vineis ad oppidum actis, aggere jacto, turribusque constitutis, magnitudine operum, quae neque viderant ante Galli neque audierant, et celeritate Romanorum permoti legatos ad Caesarem de ditione mittunt, et potentibus Remis ut conservarentur impetrant.

1   13. Caesar, obsidibus acceptis primis civitatis atque ipsius Galbae regis duobus filiis, armisque omnibus ex oppido traditis, in ditionem Suessiones accepit, exercitum que in Bellovacos duxit. Qui cum se suaque omnia in oppidum Bratuspantium contulissent, atque ab eo oppidum Caesar cum exercitu circiter milia passuum quinque abesse omnes majores natu, ex oppido egressi, manus ad Caesarem tendere, et voce significare coeperunt, sese in ejus fidem ac potestatem venire, neque contra populum Romanum armis contendere. Item, cum ad oppidum accessisset castaque ibi poneret, pueri mulieresque ex muro passis manibus suo more pacem ab Romanis petierunt.

ex dediticiis Belgis reliquisque Gallis complures Caesar
secuti una iter facerent, quidam ex his, ut postea ex canostri exercitus perspecta, nocte ad Nervios pervenerunt atque his demonstrarunt inter singulas legiones impementorum magnum numerum intercedere, neque esse quod que legiones magnum spatium abessent, hanc sub sarcina

etiam eorum consilium qui rem deferebant, quod Nervi antiquitus, cum equitatu nihil possent (neque enim ad hoc tempus ei rei student, sed, quicquid possunt, pedestribus velut copiis), quo facilius finitimorum equitatum, si pra-dandi causa ad eos venisset, impedirent, teneris arboribus incisis atque inflexis, crebrisque in latitudinem ramis enatis et rubis sentibusque interjectis effecerant, ut insta-

Nam, quod ad hostes ap- propinquabat, consuetudine sua Caesar sex legiones ex- editas duebat; post eas totius exercitus impedimenta collocarat; inde duas legiones, quae proxime conscriptae erant, totum agmen claudebant, praesidioque impedimen- s erant. Equites nostri, cum funditoribus sagittariisque hanc sub sarcina transgressi, cum hostium equitatu proelium com- ireptis, futurum diserunt. Cum se illi identidem in silvas ad suos reci- debant, quod Nervios enim ad hoc possunt, pedestribus cava aperta pertinebant, cedentes insequi auderent, interim giones sex, quae primae venerant, opere dimenso castra munire coeperunt. Ubi prima impedimenta nostri exer- citus ab iis, qui in silvis abditi latebant, visa sunt, quod tempus inter eos committendi proeli convenerat, ut intra silvas aciem ordinesque constituerant, atque ipsi sese effecerant, ut instans confirmaverant, subito omnibus copiis provolaverunt im- petum. His rebus cunctumque in nostros equites fecerunt. His facile pulsis, proturbatis, incredibili celeritate ad flumen decucurre- nt, ut paene uno tempore et ad silvas et in flumine et in manibus nostris hostes viderentur. Eadem autem declivis celeritate adverso colle ad nostra castra atque eos, qui in us, vergebant.

1   20. Caesari omnia uno tempore erant agenda: vexillum propondendum, quod erat insigne, cum ad arma concurri oporteret, signum tuba dandum, ab opere revocandi milites, qui paulo longius aggeris petendi causa processerant arcessendi, acies instruenda, milites cohortandi, signum dandum. Quarum rerum magnam partem temporis brevitas et successus hostium impeditiebat. His difficultatibus duae res erant subsidio, scientia atque usus militum, quod superioribus proeliis exercitati, quid fieri oporteret, non minus commode ipsi sibi praescribere, quam ab aliis doceri poterant; et quod ab opere singulisque legionibus singulos legatos Caesar discedere, nisi munitis castris, vetuerat. Hi propter propinquitatem et celerritatem hostium nihil jam Caesaris imperium exspectabant sed per se, quae videbantur administrabant.

1   21. Caesar necessariis rebus imperatis ad cohortandos milites, quam in partem fors obtulit, decucurrit, et ad legionem decimam devenit. Milites non longiore oratione cohortatus, quam uti suaे pristinae virtutis memoriam retinerent, neu perturbarentur animo, hostiumque impletum fortiter sustinerent, quod non longius hostes aberant, quam quo telum adjici posset, proeli committendi signum dedit. Atque in alteram partem item cohortandi causa prefectus, pugnantibus occurrit. Temporis tanta fuit exiguitas, hostiumque tam paratus ad dimicandum animus, ut non modo ad insignia accommodanda, sed etiam ad galeas induendas scutisque tegimenta detrahenda tempus defuerit. Quam quisque ab opere in partem casu devenit, quaeque prima signa conspexit, ad haec constitit, ne in quaerendis suis pugnandi tempus dimitteret.

hostibus occurrebat, ac rursus aliam in partem fugam

 bant, clamor fremitusque oriebatur, aliique aliam in parequites Treveri, quorum inter Gallos virtutis opinio est singularis, qui auxilii causa ab civitate ad Caesarem missi venerant, cum multitudine hostium castra compleri nostra, legiones premi et paene circumventas teneri, calones, equites, funditores, Numidas diversos dissipatosque in omnes partes fugere vidissent, desperatis nostris rebus, 5 domum contenderunt; Romanos pulsos superatosque, cas-tris impedimentisque eorum hostes potitos, civitati ren-

Cujus adventu spe illata militibus ac redintegrato animo, 3 cum pro se quisque in conspectu imperatoris etiam in extremis suis rebus operam navare cuperet, paulum hostium impetus tardatus est.

26. Caesar, cum septimam legionem, quae juxta con-cum ex equitum et calorum fuga, quo in loco res esset, quantoque in periculo et castra et legiones et imperator fecerunt.

27. Horum adventu tanta rerum commutatio est facta, 1 ut nostri, etiam qui vulneribus confecti procubuisserent, scutis innixi proelium redintegrarent; tum calones, per-territos hostes conspicati, etiam inermes armatis occurre-runt; equites vero, ut turpitudinem fugae virtute delerent, 2 omnibus in locis pugnarunt quo se legionariis militibus praeferrent. At hostes etiam in extrema spe salutis tantam 3

virtutem praestiterunt, ut, cum primi eorum cecidissent, proximi jacentibus insisterent, atque ex eorum corporibus pugnarent; his dejectis, et coacervatis cadaveribus, qui supereressent, ut ex tumulo tela in nostros conjicerent, et 5 pila intercepta remitterent: ut non nequiam tantae virtutis homines judicari deberet ausos esse transire latissimum flumen, ascendere altissimas ripas, subire inquinissimum locum; quae facilia ex difficillimis animi magnitudo redegerat.

1 28. Hoc proelio facto, et prope ad internectionem gente ac nomine Nerviorum redacto, maiores natu, quos una cum pueris mulieribusque in aestuaria ac paludes conjectos dixeramus, hac pugna nuntiata, cum victoribus nihil 2 impeditum, victis nihil tutum arbitrarentur, omnium, qui supererant, consensu legatos ad Caesarem miserunt seque ei dediderunt: et, in commemoranda civitatis calamitate, ex sescentis ad tres senatores, ex hominum millibus sexaginta vix ad quingentos, qui arma ferre possent, sese 3 redactos esse dixerunt. Quos Caesar, ut in miseros ac supplices usus misericordia videretur, diligentissime conservavit, suisque finibus atque oppidis uti jussit, et finitimus imperavit, ut ab injuria et maleficio se suosque prohiberent.

1 29. Hi post eorum obitum multos annos a finitimis exagitati cum aliis bellum inferrent, alias illatum defenderent, consensu cum omnium pace facta, hunc sibi domicilio locum delegerunt.

Ac primo adventu exercitus nostri crebras ex oppido excusione faciebant, parvulisque proeliis cum nostris contendebant; postea vallo pedum duodecim in circuitu quindecim millium crebrisque castellis circummuniti, oppido sese continebant. ### Chap. 1-35.—Caesar's campaign against the Belgae.

1. Caesar learns that the Belgae are preparing to resist him.

CAP. I.

1. cum esset, etc.—At the end of Bk. I. we read that Caesar left his army for the winter among the Sequani (see map) under the charge of his chief officer Labienus, while he himself went to hither Gaul, the province where he used to spend each winter attending to its administration. (For Caesar's provinces see Introduction, p. ix., and the map, p. xi.) hibernis,—regularly of an army's quarters, so that many editions omit the words here. But Caesar probably had some troops with him. ita uti,—lit. 'in such a way as,' freely, 'as.' supra,—referring to last lines of Bk. I.

afferebantur,—impf. denoting repeated action, so fiebat. Trans. 'kept coming in,' (App. 26.c.), and add 'repeatedly' to the trans. of fiebat. Labeni,—we should say 'from,' not 'of.' Belgas...conjurare,—acc. and infin. after certior fiebat. App. 34. (RC. 101.8. HF. 109.1.) quam...dixeramus,—lit. 'which we had stated to be,' etc.; freely, 'who, as we have said, form,' etc. The reference is to Bk. I.c. 1. where we are told that Gaul is divided into three parts, inhabited respectively by the Belgae, Galli or Celtae, and Aquitani.

The indic. mood shows this is a parenthetic addition by the writer, not part of Labienus' report. (RC. II.215.e. HF.207. 4.N.2.) Notice that quam agrees with partem, not with its antecedent Belgas. (RC.93.ii.) Inter se dare,—‘were giving to one another,’ or ‘exchanging.’

2. Conjurandi...enras,—‘that the reasons for...were as follows (lit. these).’ The acc. and infin. shows that he is still quoting Labienus’ information; so too the subjunctives vererentur and sollicitarentur, for which see RC.99.g.i. HF. 206.4. ne...adduceretur,—‘lest,’ etc. (RC.99.a.1.ii. HF. 185.3.) pacata Gallia,—abl. absol.; trans. by clause w. ‘when,’ or ‘after.’ App.5.a.ii. Gallia here is but one of the three divisions of Gallia three lines above, and in the first line still a different force is found. See Vocabulary under Gallia. ad,—‘against.’

3. partim qui,—lit. ‘partly (by those) who’; freely, ‘some of whom’; in which case trans. partim qui below by ‘while others.’ ut...ita,—lit. ‘as...so’; freely, omit ‘as,’ and replace ‘so’ by ‘and in the same way.’ Germanos versari,—trans. by ‘for’ and infin., or by ‘that...should.’ Notice that the indicatives here and to the end of the chapter show that Caesar is giving facts known to himself, and not reporting Labienus’ statements. Cf. on dixeramus, § 1. hiemare,—trans. by ‘that...should.’ mobilitate,—trans. by ‘though,’ or ‘by reason of.’ (RC.85.m. HF.71.3.) novis imperiis,—dat.; freely, ‘a change of government’; lit.?

4. ab nonnullis,—a third class in addition to those of § 3. Supply the verb sollicitarentur, or rather perhaps, on account of the change of mood throughout, sollicitabantur. potentioribus,—used substantively. conducendos,—‘take into their pay.’ For gerundive constr. see App.40. (RC.104.b. HF.170.3.) vulgo regna occupabantur,—‘royal power was constantly being seized’; the plur. regna because of the many states in which this happened. rem,—‘end or object.’ imperio nostro,—trans. by ‘under.’ (RC.85.b. HF.82.1.)

[Generally in Caesar, the first words of a sentence form a connecting link in the thought, by beginning the new sentence with something known to us from the preceding one, and then leading up to the new matter. This is clear at the beginning of § 2. In the case of esset there seems direct reference to the last words of Bk.I., ipse in citeriore Galliam profectus est; 'and when he was in Gaul.] The three meanings of Gallia, §§1.2. Agreement of relative with predicate noun, §1. [RC.99.II. BA.83. H.445.4. AG.199.] Tense of dixeramus, §1. [The change from the perfect that we should expect seems due to Caesar's making the time of the action i: the parenthetic clause relative to the time of the events just mentioned; these events were subsequent to the writing of the statement in Bk.I., which is thus regarded as a completed work.] The use of inter se, §1. [This is the Latin substitute for a reciprocal pronoun. Generally, as here, inter se = 'one another' with some preposition.] Ad eos for ad se, §2. [The slight irregularity, often occurring in Caesar, seems to arise here from his writing from his own, not the Gauls', point of view.] Change from indirect to direct narration, §3. Ut with indic. §§1.3. Nolo and moleste jero with acc. and infin. §§3. Change in construction, §4. [We might have expected a third partim nō. The change is due less to desire for variety than to the difficulty of continuing the relative clause so as to bring out the desired meaning. The nōnullis are of course the potentioribus.] The plural of an abstract noun, regna, §4. [RC. 54.e. H.130.2. AG.75.c.] The use of the imperf. throughout.

2, 3. Raising two new legions, Caesar advances into the country of the Belgae, where the Remi join him.

CAP. II.

1. duas legiones,—Caesar had already six legions. inita aestate,—abl. absol.; freely, 'at the beginning of summer'; lit.? These, with the following words, depend on deduceret. interiorēm,—'central,' i.e. north of the province, but still near the Alps. qui deduceret,—trans. as in App. 29.b. The antecedent is Pedium. For the mood see RC.II.25. HF.184.1.
2. pabuli,—so as to allow the cavalry and baggage to move. Inciperet,—‘there was beginning.’ The grammatical subj. is copia.

3. negotium,—freely, ‘instructions,’ or more lit. ‘a commission.’ finitimi Belgis,—‘neighbors of,’ more lit. ‘adjacent to.’ uti cognoscant,—trans. as in App. 29.b. (RC.99. a.2. HF.181.3.) en quac,—App. 12.b.N.B. gerantur,—for mood see RC.99.e. HF.206.4. se,—referring to the subj. of dat. App.14.b.

4. manus,—evidently smaller bodies which went to make up the exercitum. eogl, conducti,—note the tense. App. 34.d.

5. Tum vero,—vero emphasizes tum and can be translated only by emphasizing ‘then.’ dubitandum,—App.41.34.c. Trans. ‘he must not hesitate to set out (or delay his departure.)’ quin profisceretur,—lit. ‘so that he should not set out.’ (RC.99.b.i.)

6. movet,—‘breaks up.’ diebus,—abl. of time within which. (RC.85.b. HF.82.2.)

N.B.—Trans. use of ineo, §1. [So always in Caesar; but Cicero in time phrase uses it intransitively, e.g. ineunt aestate.] Subj. with cum primum, §2. [Usually w. Indic., especially when a point (rather than, as here, a period) of time is indicated. Here the causal sense may predominate over the temporal. The other passages where cum primum occurs are in Bk.III.c.9. and c.11.] Syntax of gerantur, §3. [As the antecedent ea shows, this is a relative, not an interrogative clause.] Dubito=hesitate, with quin, §5. [With this meaning the regular construction is the pres. inf.; quin is regularly used when dubito=doubt. RC.II.156. BA.130-133. H.504.3.2. AG.332.g.]

CAP. III.

1. Eo,—adverb. omni opinione,—lit. ‘than all expectation’; freely, ‘than any one had expected.’

2. ex Belgis,—trans. by ‘of’; with proximi. Galliae,—dat.; used in limited sense of c.1. §2. legatos,—‘as ambassadors,’ in apposition w. Icium, etc. primos,—as subst. = principes.

It is expressed w. the next infin. Note the tense of permittere. neque,—‘and...not.’ conjurasse,—a contracted form for conjuravisse. (RC.66.)

3. et obsides,—et is lit. ‘both’; omit in trans. imperata,—‘his bidding.’ oppidis,—we should say ‘into their towns’; Latin says ‘in’ (or rather ‘with’) their towns.’ (RC.85.a. ii.g.) The object ‘him’ is easily supplied from the context.

4. incolant,—for mood see RC.99.e. HF.206.4. sese,—object of conjunxisse, and referring to Germanos. cum his,—referring to Belgas. English says ‘they join us,’ Latin ‘they join themselves with us.’

5. eorum,—is not partitive gen. after omnium. ne... quidem,—with the emphasized word between. In English ‘not’ will go with the verb. Suessiones,—as consanguineos shows, is acc., not nom.; it is the object of detergere. qui ...utantur,—as the clause tells why they might have been expected to act differently, trans. by ‘although they,’ etc., and for the mood see RC.99.i.iv. HF.196.8. isdem,—for eisdem. (RC.61.) unum...habeant,—in English supply a connective ‘and’; the verb is co-ordinate w. utantur. qui...consentirent,—‘from combining’; cf. on c.2. § 5. (RC.99.b.i. HF.185.2.N.)

N.B.—Relative clause of purpose, §2. [cf.c.2. §2.] Change of mood in indirect discourse, §§2-5. [Of the subjunctions, only incolant represents an original indic.; the others are in no sense influenced by being in oratio obliqua.] Omission of pronominal subj. of infin., §2. [Not infrequent in the best Latin writers, when it is easily understood from the context. Here the omission is practically unavoidable on account of the necessity for expressing the object se.] Paratus w. infin., §3. [Less common than with ad and gerund or gerundive. Caesar has it also w. ut and c. b.j., e.g. c.9. §2.] The abl. of means, oppidis, frumento, §§3. Tenses of subj. in §§4.5. [Although the principal verb is in a secondary tense, the original primary tenses are retained throughout, as is often the case, especially for the sake of emphasis or vividness. RC.107.a.ii. H.525.1. Notice especially the perf. subj. potuerint, in a result clause. This, where it is not the true perfect, is used chiefly to call attention to the independent fact rather than to dwell on the relation of cause and effect. RC.II.39. BA.113. AG.287.c.R.] Quin and subj. w. deterreo. [In Bk.I.e.17. and 31. deterreo in affirmative sentences has ne and subj. Here the sentence is negative, because of ne... quidem.] Ipsis, for se, §5. [Doubtless because of the emphasis here desired.]

4. The strength and numbers of the Belgae.

CAP. IV.

1. hīs,—the legatos of c.8. § 1. quantaeque,—trans. freely by 'and how large they were' after in armis essent. quid... possent,—'what was their strength.' See note on c.8. § 2. For the subj. essent and possent see RC.99.d. HF.176.2. For the case of quid see RC.83.e. sic,—'as follows.'

Germanis,—the truth of this statement is uncertain. Their language seems to have been Gallic, not German. Rhenum,—depending on trans in traductos. (RC.II.72. HF.96.3.) locl, loca,—'country.' incolement,—for the mood see RC.99.e. HF.206.4.

2. solos esse,—'were the only ones.' memoria,—time within which; trans. after omni... vexata. omni Gallia,—i.e. all the rest of Gaul. As both the Province and Aquitania were overrun (according to Livy), Caesar cannot be referring to Celtic Gaul alone. Teutonos,—see Introduction, p. viii. ingredi,—'from entering.' prohibuerint,—for the mood see RC.II.35. HF.188.4.

3. qua... fieri,—'the result of this was'; lit. 'from which circumstance it was coming about.' memoria,—trans. by 'because of'; cf. on mobilitate, c.1. § 3.

magnam... sumerent,—freely, 'they were putting on airs of superiority in matters of war'; lit. 'they were taking on themselves (or assuming) great importance and great pride.'

4. omnia habere explorata,—‘had complete information’; lit.? conjuncti,—with causal force, ‘as they were,’ etc. quisque,—implying each tribe, but the masc. sing. refers specially to the deputy representing the tribe. ad,—‘for.’ pollicitus sit,—for subj. see on essent, § 1. cognoverint,—‘they knew,’ or ‘they had learned.’ For the mood see RC.99.g.i. HF.206.4.

5. plurimum valere,—‘were the strongest.’ virtute,—for the abl. see RC.85.d. conflore,—‘muster,’ ‘put in the field.’ armata milia,—lit. ‘armed thousands’; freely, ‘thousand armed men.’ pollicitos,—infin., supplying esse. electa,—supply millia; ‘picked troops.’ sibi,—trans. by ‘for.’

6. snos,—i.e. of the Remi.

7. fuisse,—notice the change later on to esse. memoria,—as in § 2. Galliae,—trans. by ‘in’; lit.? potentissimum,—add in trans. ‘man,’ or ‘king.’ cum...tum,—see Vocabulary under cum. partis,—like Britanniae, depending on imperium.

sumnam,—not the adjective. omnium voluntate,—‘by common consent,’ lit.? deferriri,—notice the tense. numero,—for the abl. see RC.85.d.; better omitted in trans.

8. totidem,—object of polliceri understood. maxime feri,—‘the fiercest’; notice the form of the superl.; for the case see RC.79.c.i. HF.90.2. Ipsos,—the Belgae. Inter ipsos goes w. habeantur. longissimo,—‘farthest,’ at least towards the north. In Bk.I.c.1. Caesar says that one reason of the war-like character of the Belgae was their remoteness from the refining influences of civilization.

9. Atrebates,—with all these nouns supply polliceri.

10. qui...appellantur,—for the fact cf. c.8. § 4. The mood shows that this is an addition by Caesar to the statement of the Remi; cf. on noluerant, c.1. § 3. uno,—‘common.’ arbitrari,—the subject is se, i.e. the Remi. Supply polliceri, so that Condruos polliceri millia will depend on

arbitrari; or if a positive statement is avoided because these tribes were not represented at the conference, supply passer conficere instead of polliceri. ad,—‘about.’

N.B.—Tense of quaereret and reperiabat, §1. [A series of questions is implied; cf. our expression ‘in the course of his inquiries.’] Tense of incolerent, §1. as compared w. incolant, c.3. §4. [Here it represents an original incolebant.] Relative clause of characteristic, §2. Infin. w. prohibeo. [The only construction in Caesar.]

The expression habere explorata, §4. [The meaning is not the same as that of exploravisse. Such phrases as the former (from which arose the use of the modern auxiliary ‘have’) call special attention to the continuance of an act already past; they have always the effect of two verbs, not one; here e.g. the force is ‘they had inquired into the matter and were in possession of information.’]

The use of propterea quod, §4. [It is more rhetorical than the simple quod, and for this reason probably, Caesar very soon dropped it in his composition of the Commentaries. It occurs 14 times in Bk.I., and once each in Bks.II.III.IV.V. and VII.]

Tense of cognoverint, §4. [cf. N.B. to c.3. §5.] Abl. of cause, §3. and of specification, §§5.7. The phrase armata millia, §5.

[Only once, I.k.IV.c.1., does Caesar use the genitive millia armatorum in similar phrases.] The difference between fines and agros, §6. [Several times we have these words brought together, with the same reference in fines to extent, and in agri to character of territory.]

Cum...tum, §7. Irregular use of nunc, §7. [The retention of this word from the direct form emphasizes the contrast, also brought out by fuisse and esse.] The superlative maxime feri, §8. [The only form found.] The parenthetical clause in indic., §10. The use of ad w. numerals, §10. [Used by Caesar and other historians, practically as an adverb= circiter.]

5. Caesar sends the Aedui against the Belloraci, to divide the enemy's forces, and himself takes up a strong position on the further bank of the Axona.

CAP. VIII.

1. opinonem virtutis,—‘their reputation for,’ etc. For the genitive see App.2.c. precello,—here ‘a pitched battle’; in § 2. proeliis means ‘skirmishes.’ For the abl. see RC. 85.h. HF.158.2.

2. quid posset,—lit. ‘what strength the enemy had in valor,’ freely, ‘what the enemy’s valor amounted to.’ For the acc. quid see RC.83.e.; for the mood of posset (and audenter) RC.99.d. HF.176.2. Possunt without an infin. means ‘to have power,’ with which an adverbial acc. tells the extent of the power. periclitabatur,—‘kept trying to find out’ or ‘kept testing.’ App.26.c.

3. inferiores,—i.e. man for man; the extra fortifications were because of the difference in numbers. loco...idoneo,—‘as the ground...was,’ etc. App.5.a.N (RC.85.o. HF. 102.3.N.) natura,—‘naturally,’ lit. ‘by nature.’

For the right understanding of this passage, see the plan at the end of the notes on Book II. In 1862 traces of Caesar’s fortifications at this point were discovered by excavations.

quod,—‘for,’ lit.? is,—‘the.’ ubi,—‘where or on which.’ editus...putebat,—freely, ‘rose...and extended.’ adversus,—adj. agreeing w. collis; ‘facing or opposite (the enemy)’ or freely, ‘in front.’ tantum quantum loci,—lit. ‘over that amount which amount of ground,’ freely, ‘as far as’ or rather, to bring out the meaning, ‘just (or only) as far as.’ For the acc. tantum see RC.83.c. HF.69.9.; quantum object of occupare. loci,—RC.81.b. HF.69.10. In sense it goes with tantum also.

This usage is found with adveni (e.11. §4.) and frons (e.23. §4.) as well as with *par*s and tutus. In is also used; cf. in fronte, §3.] The mood of instruxisset and poterant, §4. [The former is more directly a part of the purpose Caesar had at the time, the latter is an explanatory clause by the writer. ## CAP. X.

1. equitatum pentem traducit,—cf. on c.5. § 4. levi armaturae,—‘light-armed,’ lit. ‘of light equipment.’ (RC. 81.e. HF.180.7.)

2. pugnatum est,—‘they fought.’ App.24. (RC.96.7 HF.164.2.) Hostes,—object of aggressi, which may be translated by a principal clause. App.37.a.N.B.

3. Per,—‘over,’ lit. ‘by means of’; with transire. cannantes,—trans. by relative clause. App.38. multitudine,—freely, ‘a shower.’ circumventos,—cf. on eductas, c.8. § 5.

4. Hostes,—the main body, not those of § 2. ubi,—wi intellexerunt, viderunt and coepit. spem se fecellisse,—from fallo; ‘that they had been disappointed in their expectation of,’ etc.; lit. ‘that the hope had disappointed them.’ prægredi,—‘were not advancing,’ or freely, ‘would not advance.’ ipsos,—‘them themselves’; emphatic, in contrast with the Romans whom they had hoped to cut off from supplies, c.9. § 5.

which requires neve in adding a negative final clause. RC.II.30.
HF.186.6. BA.103. H.497.1.N. It is not a new final clause representing a distinct action that is here added, but a clearer statement of what was involved in the first clause. So the translation ‘and so,’

CAP. XI.

1. ea re, etc.,—‘having decided on this plan or course,’ or ‘having come to this decision.’ Vigilia,—the time from sunset to sunrise was divided into four equal periods called vigilize or watches, and the time from sunrise to sunset into twelve equal periods called horae or hours. The length of the vigilia and hora would thus vary with the season. egressi...fecerunt,—‘they left...and thus brought it about.’ castris,—RC.85.h. HF.158.2. nullo...imperio,—‘without any regular arrangement (order) or control (discipline).’ (RC.85.e. HF.71.8.)

cum,—‘since, as, for.’ itineris,—‘on the march.’ The meaning is that each sought to get away first (as that was safest), and this increased the confusion. fecerunt ut...videretur,—lit. ‘they brought it about that...seen’, freely, ‘they made...seem’ or ‘they gave...all the appearance of.’ (RC.99.b. HF.187.2.) consimilis,—‘quite like’; stronger than similis. fugae,—dative.

2. Caesar,—subject of continuit. cognita, veritus,—to bring out the full meaning, trans. ‘although C. learned... yet, as he feared,’ etc. speculators,—the spies are here clearly distinguished from the exploratores or scouts of § 3. qua,—interrogative adj. w. cause. discederent,—notice the tense. (RC.90.d. HF.176.2.) exercitum,—often of the Roman legions as distinguished from the cavalry, who were native auxiliaries. castris,—RC.85.a.ii.g.

3. qui...moraretur,—trans. by ‘to’ and infin. (RC.II.25. HF.184.1.) His,—the plur., following the meaning, though not the form, of equitatum. For the dat. see RC.II.56. HF.120.1.

4. Hi,—referring to both cavalry and legions. eorum fugientium,—‘of them in flight,’ lit. ‘of them while fleeing’; not ‘of those fleeing.’ (RC.II.144. HF.100.4.) cum, etc.,—from this point to the end of § 5. explains how it happened that so many were slain; those in the rear because they stopped to make a useless resistance, those in the van because the sound of fighting in the rear threw them into greater confusion than ever. With cum, which we may trans. 'for,' go consisterent, sustinerent and ponerent. (RC. 99.g.ii. HF.203.1.)

ab extremo...erat,—freely, 'those in the rear, with whom our men had come up'; quos refers to the plural implied in agmine and expressed in the verb consistēt. ventum erat,—impersonal pass. (RC.96.b. HF.164.2.)

5. prioresque,—trans. que by 'while.' viderentur,—i.e. to themselves; so freely, 'they thought.' For the mood see RC.99.k.; so continerentur. necessitate,—'compulsion.'

exaudito clamore,—depends on perturbatis, for which it gives the reason. Trans. 'on hearing the shouting, broke their ranks and,' etc. sibi ponerent,—'sought,' lit.?

6. sine,—freely, 'without incurring.' quantum...spatiū,—'as the length of the day allowed,' lit. 'as there was length of day.' erat imperatum,—impers. pass. App.24. Trans. personally.

N.B.—Consimilis fugae*, §1 [The old rule that similis takes the gen. of internal, the dat. of external resemblance, is at variance with the facts. The only rule that can be laid down is that the gen. is generally found in the case of nouns or pronouns denoting persons.] Position of Caesar, §2. [Not infrequently the subject of the whole clause is placed within some subordinate member, as here an abl. absol. clause. In such cases it serves to bind the various clauses more closely; as here the position says almost explicitly that Caesar is the logical subject of the abl. absol. clause.] Movor used transitively, §§3. [In c.7. §3. and c.10. §5. used intransitively. Such a twofold use of verbs is far rarer in Latin than in English.] Rel. clause of purpose, §§3. Difference between eorum fugientium and fugientium, §4. [In the former case the participle force remains, in the latter we have the substantival force. RC.II.148.b. HF.219.f. BA.73.74.]

Subjunctive by attraction, §§5. [The subj. is used in the quod clause here because of its dependence upon cum and the subj. RC. 99.k. H.529.II AG.242. At the same time it is possible that quod...

viderentur may be an example of that peculiar confusion with the subj. of virtual indirect narration described in RC.II.220.b, BA p.280, fn.1. H.516.II.1.; this explanation will not apply to continerentur which, however, would even more easily be assimilated to viderentur than to ponerent.] Relation of the two abl. absol. clauses in § 5. [Generally two such successive and unconnected clauses are coordinate, denoting successive steps, e.g. c.8. § 5., c.12. § 5.; less frequently one is distinctly subordinated to the other, as here.]

12-15. Caesar now enters one state after another, receives the submission of the Suessiones, Bellovaci and Ambiani, and at last reaches the Nervii, the bravest of all the Belgic tribes.

CAP. XII.

1. Postridie ejus diei,—‘on the very next day,’ lit. ‘or the morrow of that day.’ (RC.81.i.) priusquam...reciperent,—‘before...should (or could) recover.’ For the mood see RC.II.175. HF.201.5. magno itinere,—‘by a forced march’; omitting confecto. oppidum N.,—in apposition; connect by ‘of’ in trans.

2. ex itinere,—cf. on c.6. § 1. conatus...non potuit,—‘attempted...but...was unable.’ ab,—‘of.’ propter, etc.,—with expugnare non potuit. pancis defendantibus,—abl. absol.; ‘though but few were defending it.’ (RC.II.49.N.B.)

3. vineas,—on this and other similar terms below see Introduction, p. xxii. Quaque,—‘and whatever’; supplying ea as antecedent of quae. oppugnandum,—notice the difference between this verb and expugnare of § 2. usui,—cf. on c.9. § 5.

4. ex fuga,—with convenit; trans. ex either ‘from’ or ‘after.’ proxima nocte,—defining interim more nearly. This would be the second night after their hurried disbanding.

5. actis, jacto, constitutis,—trans. as in App.5.a.ii. Agere=push forward; constituere=set up, or put in position.

RC.99.a.2. HF.181.8.; impetrant has no dependent clause, the context making this unnecessary.

N.B.—The redundant phrase, postridie ejus diei, § 1. Priusquam with the subj. of purpose, § 1. [So always in Caesar (whether in this form or when divided, e.g. c.32. § 1.) except in Bk.I.c.53. (where the reading is uncertain) and Bk.VII.c.25. RC.II.175. HF.201.5. BA.

[defendentibus, § 2., petentibus, § 5. RC.II.49.N.B.] The latter kind is very common with the perfect participle, being often connected with the notion of time, e.g. c.11. § 3. Similarly the concessive sense may be found in connection with that of time, e.g. c.11. § 2.] The position of ex fuga, § 4. [While grammatically it goes with convenit,] its position suggests the idea ‘all the crowd of fugitive Suessiones.’]

Force of Galli, § 5. [In a sort of causal apposition. The lack of a present participle in Latin is most noticeable in such a case as this.] Dependence of ut conservarentur, § 5. [So placed as to make easier the omission of an object clause with impetrant.] Siege works among the Romans.

CAP. XIII.

1. obsidibus,—‘as hostages’; in apposition with primis.
primis,—here = principibus. acceptis, traditis,—as the agents are different, it is best to trans. both clauses by ‘when.’
in deditioinem, etc.,—‘received the surrender of,’ etc., lit.?
2. Qui,—‘these’; subj. of contulissent. App.11.b. se

—‘by their tones,’ as they could not speak a language Caesar understood. in...venire,—‘put themselves under

3. accessisset, poneret,—Notice the change of tense. pueri,—‘children,’ not ‘boys.’ ex,—freely, ‘on.’ passis,—abl. absol. suo more,—with passis manibus. Trans. by ‘according to.’ (RC.85.e. HF.71.3.)

N.B.—The co-ordinating relative, qui, § 2. [This common usage has been very rare, so far, in Book II., the only previous examples being in c.4. §§ 3., c.5. §§ 1.5., c.6. § 3., c.7. § 4., in none of which is the use of the relative as idiomatic, or as impossible in English, as in the present passage. RC.II.195. BA.78. H.453. AG.180.f.] The difference between pluperf. and imperf. subj. with cum. #### CAP. XIV.

1. Pro his,—‘on their behalf.’ dimissis,—the object sought having been attained, viz., the breaking up of the Belgian army. See c.5. §§ 2.3. and c.10. § 5. eum,—Caesar. facit verba,—‘speaks’ or ‘intercedes.’

2. The remainder of the chapter is in indirect narration, depending on facit verba. For the subjunctives (with the exception of intulissent, § 4.) see RC.II.214.a.2. HF.206.4.

omni tempore,—‘always’; the time within which. (RC. 85.b. HF.82.2.) in fide, etc.,—‘had been in alliance and friendship with,’ etc. Aeduæ,—an adjective.

often when this change occurs it is found to accompany a change from more general considerations to those of special moment. Here it coincides with the change from setting forth extenuating circumstances to pressing Caesar to spare the Bellovaci, as a matter of good policy.] The emphatic use of sua= 'his usual or well-known,' § 5. The difference between clementia and mansuetudo, humanity).] General conditional clauses si inciderint, § 6. [Here in indirect narration for the original si inciderunt, consuerimus.

Besides the four usual classes of conditional sentences, we have in Latin another, where, referring indefinitely to any of a given class of acts, it is stated that something habitually occurs. If the reference is to the present, we have si with the perf. indic., and in the apodosis the present indie. or some equivalent form (e.g. here consuevimus); if the reference is to the past, we have si with the pluperf. Indic., and the apodosis is in the imperfect or some equivalent form; where the reference is to the future, the sentence takes the same form as the regular future conditions with si and fut. perf. indic. Cf. clauses introduced by whoever, wherever, whenever, which follow a like construction.]

CAP. XV.

1. honoris...causa,—‘out of respect (regard) to D.’ or ‘as a compliment to D.’ For the genitive Divitiae see RC. 81.d. in fidem,—‘under his protection.’

quod,—add the connective ‘but.’ auctoritate,—RC. 85.c. HF.131.9. multitudine,—RC.85.d. sescentos,—an unusually large number.

3. quorum,—‘their.’ cum quaereret, etc.,—cf.c.4. § 1. and N.B.

4. nullum...mercatoribus,—‘that traders are not allowed to visit them,’ or, ‘are not admitted into their country’; more lit. ‘traders have no access.’ Aditum is subj. of esse; for the dat. mercatoribus see RC.82.g. HF.120.3.

pati,—for this and succeeding infinitives supply eos es subject. nihil vini,—‘no wine’ or ‘not...any wine.’ (RC. 81.b. HF.69.10.) que,—trans. by ‘or.’ iis rebus,—‘by this means,’ ‘in this way.’ relanguescere animos,—the reference is general, so that the present tense should be used in English.

5. magnaे virtutis,—modifying homines. (RC.81.e. HF. 130.7.) qui se dedidissent,—‘for having surrendered’ or ‘because they had,’ etc. For the subj., which is not due to the dependence on reperiebat, see RC.99.e.i.; so projecissent.

6. sese,—subject of missuros (esse).

'had brought it about that'; freely, 'had made these hedges present (or form)', etc. (RC.99.b. HF.187.2.) quo...posset,—adv. with the force of in quae, referring to munitamenta. quo...posset,—freely, 'which not only could not be entered (penetrated) but could not even be seen through,' or 'which one could not only not enter,' etc. For impers. pass see App.26. (RC.96.b. HF.164.2.) For the mood see RC.99.c. HF.188.4.

5. non omittendum, etc.,—'they must carry out the plan, or follow up the suggestion,' lit? App.41. sibi,—RC.82.d.i. HF.173.4.

B.—Relative clause of purpose, § 1. [So in c.2. § 1., c.3. § 2., c.11. § 3., c.35. § 1. In all these cases it comes after mitto or praemitto, with which it is most frequently found in Caesar.] Triple genitive dierum, itineris, exercitus, § 2. Cum and subj. in indirect narration for cum and indie. of direct, § 2. [Venisset for fut. perf. venerit, abessent for fut. aberunt. RC.II.168. BA.432. H.521.I. AG. 325.c.] Substantival use of infin., adoriri, § 2. The choice of the encampment, the baggage and the soldier pack. [Introduction, p. xix., xx.]

18. A description of the place where the attack was to be made.

CAP. XVIII.

1. haec,—as in e.6. § 2. quem locum,—omit 'place' in trans. castris,—as in e.17 § 1. summo,—'the summit' of the neut. adj. used as subst.; ab summo goes with declivis.

The plan given at the end of the notes on Book II. will make this and the succeeding chapters more intelligible.

2. pari acclivitate,—'with a similar slope.' (RC.85.c. HF.131.9.) Caesar's point of view in this description is the Roman camp. Hence the slope of the hill on which the camp lay is expressed by declivis ('sloping downward'), that of the hill rising opposite him by acclivitas ('upward slope'); nascebatur,—'rose.' adversus hule et contrarius,—'facing this and just opposite it.' The former means that the slopes of the two hills were in opposite directions, thus: hule the latter that the two hills were exactly opposite each other, one on each side of the stream.

passus ducentos,—with infimus apertus. (RC.83.c. HF.69.9.) The distance is measured from the river up the slope.

1.B.—Various uses of the ablative. [The most difficult is adverso collo, § 8., on which see the note above. Cf. adverso fulmine. Bk.VII.60. 61. On copitis, §§ 1.6., see N.B. to c.7.] The use of ae after aliter, § 1. [Caesar has ac (or atque)=‘as’ or ‘than’ after aliter, alius, idem, par and similis. BA.91.] Adjectives with predicative force. [So expeditas, § 2., and (according to one reading) porrecta, § 5.] Cum, of both friends and foes, § 4. Incorporation of the antecedent in the relative clause, § 5. [Quem ad finem=ad eum finem ad quem.] The idiom primae venerant, § 5. [For this adverbial use of the adj. see RC.88.d. BA.62. H.442.N.,443.N.1. AG.191. The best trans. generally is to make the adj. the predicate of the verb ‘to be’; here e.g. ‘were the first to come.’] Deponent participle with passive force, dimenso, § 5. [RC.68.c. AG.135.f.] The impersonal use of coneunxit, § 6. Ipse emphasizing the subject rather than the reflexive, § 6. [RC.92.f.1. BA.356.II. H.452.1. AG.195.l.] The difference (though it is not always observed) between e.g. se ipse interfecit, and (the rarer) se ipsum interfecit is that the former means ‘it was himself and no other that killed him’; the latter ‘it was himself and no other that he killed. The former would answer the question ‘who killed him?’; the latter, the question ‘whom did he kill?’ Cf.e.20. § 3 and e.25. § 1.] Poly-syndeton in emphatic enumeration, et...et...et, § 7. The phrase in manibus nostris, § 7.

20-22. The Romans are completely surprised, and in spite of their discipline and Caesar's energy, the utmost confusion prevails.

CAP. XX.

1. Caesari omnia, etc., —‘C. had to do everything at once,’ lit.? App.41. (RC.104.a. HF.172.173.) vexillum, etc., —the rest of the section is explanatory of omnia; with each gerundive understand erat or erant. Trans. ‘to dis- play...to give,’ etc. insigne, —‘the signal.’ coneurri porteret, —impers. pass. App.24. Trans. ‘they (or the soldiers) were to run.’

opere, —the making of the camp. qui, —‘those who.’ App.11.d.i. Understand as antecedent ei, the subject of processandi (erant). paulo longius, —‘some little distance,’ lit. ‘a little farther,’ i.e. than the rest. [Others take it to mean 'a little too far.] aggeris,—here 'material for the rampart,' i.e. branches, sods, stones, etc. cohortandi,—was the custom in ancient times to inspire the soldiers to battle by a short address. signum,—this signal must be made before making the attack. Notice that the details in this section are given in the natural order of time.

2. Quarum...partem,—'much of this.' impediebat,—'interfered with.' The verb is singular because the two subjects form but one idea, viz., 'the short time allowed by the enemy's approach.'

3. His...subsidio,—'these difficulties were relieved (or lessened) by two circumstances,' lit.? For the datives dif cultatibus and subsidio see RC.82.b.c. HF.184.1. duae res,—these are, first, scientia atque usus; second, quod ab ope...vetuerat. scientia,—'skill.' quid fieri oportet,—'what was to be done,' or more freely, 'what to do'; depending on praescribere (and doceri). (RC.99.d. II.F.176.2.) non minima de quam,—'just as well as,' lit.? ipsi sibi præscribentur,—'give themselves directions,' lit.? doceri,—'be told.' poterant,—repeat in trans. with each infin.

quod,—'the fact that.' singulis, singulos,—trans. by 'different' or 'several.' These words tell us that to each legion there had been assigned a legatus. nisi muniti castris,—'until after...had been,' etc.; more lit. 'except after,' etc. (RC.II.51. HF.102.2.)

4. nihil jam,—'no longer,' lit. 'not at all now.' (RC.88.e.) quae videbantur,—'whatever seemed necessary,' above 'said no 'what seemed best.' Understand administranda esse to complete the phrase.

It need not be supposed, however, that the ellipse was a conscious one in such cases.]

CAP. XXI.

1. necessarilis ... imperatis, — 'having given only the necessary (or indispensable) orders,' lit.? ad...milites, — with decucurrit. quam in partem, — for in eam partem quam; 'in that direction which,' or 'on the side which.' Chap.23. § 1. shows that it was the left side of the camp. Notice the accus. with in. devenit, — lit. 'came down.'
2. non longiore, etc., — lit. 'with no longer a speech than (urging them) to keep,' etc.; freely, 'saying nothing further than to urge the soldiers to remember,' etc. neu, — 'and not.' animo, — 'at heart.' For the subjunctives see RC.99. n.2. HF.181.3.

quod...posset, — explains the following, not the preceding, words. To avoid ambiguity, trans. 'he encouraged' (or as above 'said nothing further')..., then because; quam quo, nda esse to come, — lit. 'than to what point a weapon could be thrown'; trans. 'than the distance to which,' etc., or more freely, 'than the cast of a weapon.' For the subj. see RC.99.c. HF.188.4. committendi, — trans. by 'for.' App.2.c.

4. alteram, — 'the other,' i.e. towards the right. pugnantibus occurrit, — 'he came upon (or found) them (already) fighting.' Understand eis. (RC.II.56. HF.120.2.)
5. Temporis, etc., — freely, 'so short was the time.' para is ad, — here 'bent on.' animus, — 'spirit.' insignia, —

CAP. XXII.

1. ut,—‘as’; the verb of this clause is postulabant, supplied from the next clause. If expressed twice in English trans. ‘demanded...required.’ loci,—‘the ground’; loci natura is explained by dejectus collis. rei...ordo,—‘the science and method of the art of war.’

cum,—‘since.’ For the subj., resisterent and impediretur, see RC.99.g.ii. HF.203.1. diversis legionibus, etc.,—‘as the legions were separated, they were resisting the enemy in different quarters,’ or more fully, ‘some in one quarter, others in another.’ For the abl. see RC.85.o. HF.102.2.; for hostibus, RC.II.55. HF.105.9.

neque ... neque,—‘not (lit. neither)...nor.’ The principal clause begins here. certa,—‘definite.’ Caesar could not tell at what point they might be of most use. neque ... provideret,—supply poterat from poterant; the impers. pass.; ‘nor could it be foreseen what was needed in each direction.’ opus esset,—RC.99.d. HF.176.2. administrari,—here ‘be attended to,’ not ‘be carried out.’

2. rerum iniquitate,—‘unfavorable position of affairs,’ or perhaps ‘inequality of circumstances,’ which will give more point to quoque. eventus,—nom. plur. ‘issues.’

N.B.—Que adding an explanatory phrase, §1. [The difference in effect between et, que, and atque may be studied in the first three lines.] The abl. absol. where the nom. might have been used, diversis legionibus, §1. [This usage is not to be imitated in prose composition (RC.II.52.c. HF.219.e. BA.422.b.), although it occurs in Caesar more frequently than might be supposed; cf. Bk.III 14.4., Bk.IV. 12.1. and 21.6. More stress doubtless is laid in this way on the scattered position of the legions.] The phrase alia et alia in parte, §1. [This represents but one half of the English equivalent ‘one in one direction, another in another (direction).’ Cf. c.24. §3. and c.26. §2.] The use of ante in quoting a previous part of the work, §1. [Caesar uses supra more than four times as often as ante.] The phrase opus est, §1. [Here with a subject nom., which in the case of a neuter pron. or adj. is more common than the regular abl. BA.286. H.41.Iv.N.4. AG.293.e.R.]

23. On the left of the camp the Atrebates are completely routed by the 9th and 10th legions; in front the 11th and 8th legions are fighting with the Viromandui down by the river; more serious is the position of the 12th and 7th legions on the right, who are being surrounded by the Nervii.

CAP. XXIII.

1. Legionis,—to be repeated w. decimae; trans. freely by plur. ut,—‘when.’ (RC.99.; i. HF.200.2.) acie,—an irregular form of the gen. (RC.51.c.) Atrebates,—the object of comulerunt. his,—the Atrebates. ea pars,—i.e. the sistra pars acie. Trans. ‘for it was these that that division had encountered.’

conantes,—acc. agreeing with eos (i.e. Atrebates) understand as object of insecuti. impeditam,—as in c.9. § 1.

2. Ipsi,—the soldiers of the legions just mentioned. dubitaverunt,—cf. on c.2. § 5. loenm iniquum,—viz. the slope of the opposite hill. resistentes hostes,—object of comjecerunt. Trans. the participles in this section by principal clauses; e.g. ‘advanced..., then when... resisted and... was renewed.’

3. alia in parte,—this was in front of a camp. divise,—‘separated (from the others);’ or freely, ‘separately’; cf. c.22. § 1. congressi,—agreeing in gender w. milites implied in legiones. ex loco superiore,—with profligatis ipsis,—‘very’; lit.?

4. totis,—agreeing w. castris; emphatic by position trans. freely by adv. ‘wholly.’ a fronte, ab... parte,—‘in front, on the left.’ intervallo,—RC.85.g. HF.58.6. constitisset,—agreeing with the nearer of its two subjects duce,—freely, ‘under the leadership of,’ lit.? App.5.a. (RC.II.50. HF.102.3.N.) summan imperii,—‘the supreme (or chief) command,’ lit. ‘the chief part of the command;’ cf. c.4. § 7.

N.B.—The genitive acie, § 1. [Great irregularity prevailed in the form of the gen. sing. of the 5th decl. adopted by various writers. We have the testimony of Gellius (a grammarian of A.D.175.) that Caesar in a work on grammar upheld the form in e.] Ut temporal, § 1.

3. eorum,—this does not include the two legions serving as rearguard; see c.26. § 3. Trans. freely ‘from those allii aliam, etc.,—see on c.22. § 1. ferebantur,—‘we were rushing.’

The imperfect and perfect tenses. [The former is used in the principal clauses of §§1.-3, the latter in §§4.5. Evidently Caesar in the first part is depicting the condition of affairs in other quarters while the main action was in progress; at §4 he resumes his narrative.]

The infin. with verbs of perception, §§2.4. [In Cicero and later Latin the participle was often used ‘to express the actual condition of the object’ perceived. But at all times, as in Caesar, the infin. was more common. The present participle is found e.g. Bk.IV.c.26. §§2.4. with conspicio. The perfect participle, as in c. §1. is generally indistinguishable from the perfect infinitive with esse omitted.]

Asyndeton between two relative clauses, 1.4. [In §1. the reason is obvious; qui refers to pedites only, of both equites and pedites. In §4. quorum may refer more to Treveri as a whole than to the equites merely.]

CAP. XXV.

1. Caesar,—the subject of processit in § 2. The length of the sentence, which is the chief cause of its difficulty, is due to the long clause ubi...posset, stating the condition of affairs when Caesar came to the right wing. In this clause we have ubi vidit on which depend the infinitives urgeri;
esse (impedimento) preceded by a causal abl. absol. clause;
esse (tardiores) preceded by six causal abl. absol. clauses;
excedere, vitare, intermittere, instare; (rem) esse, with which vidit is repeated for clearness’ sake, and (ullum) esse. Then in § 2. another abl. absol. clause precedes the main verb.
In English this should be broken up into shorter sentences.
Trans. profectus by a principal clause; ubi, lit. ‘when,’ by ‘there’; the abl. absol. and infin. clauses after quartae cohortis by principal clauses, omitting vidit at the end of the section; and begin the trans. of § 2. by ‘so’ or ‘then.’

ab...cohortatione,—‘from encouraging,’ etc. *signis...
ollatis*,—i.e. the cohorts no longer kept their proper inter-

—this would be at the end of the front line, a very exposed position. signifero, signo,—i.e. of the fourth cohort.

in his,—‘among them.’ primipilo,—see Introduction,
xix. and Vocabulary under pilus. ut,—‘so that. Jam
non,—‘no longer.’ sustinere,—‘support.’ ab novissimis,

3. spe...animo,—freely, ‘the soldiers were inspired with hope, and their spirits revived,’ lit. ‘hope having been put in the soldiers.’ militibus,—dat. (RC.82.b. HF.5.4.) pro se,—‘on his part.’ etiam...rebus,—‘even in his own extremity.’

N.B.—The structure of the Latin period. [The sentence beginning in § 1. is unusually long for Caesar. For good examples of the shorter period more common in Caesar see c.12. § 2., c.19. § 5., c.33. § 2. For longer passages, more like the present, see c.8. § 3., c.17. § 4. RC.II. 238. H.573. [This is extremely rare in Latin, found nowhere else in Caesar and rejected by many editors here.] The force of ab novissimi §§ 1.2. [Caesar nowhere else uses ab in the partitive sense like ex or de, and as it is exceedingly rare in Latin and another explanation is possible here, it seems best to take it as in the notes. Many who retain uni defend it by making ab novissimis dependent on it.]

trans. with 'to' and infin. is impossible. Trans. 'that... should come together,' or 'to have the legions come together.' conversa signa inferrent,—the exact nature of the movement is uncertain, but it seems probable that they formed a square either by portions of each legion facing about, or by one legion forming in rear of the other and then facing round. Trans. 'wheeling round, advance,' lit. 'bear forward the standards turned about.'

5. Qui,—the soldiers of the tenth legion; connected in sense, though not agreeing in form, with legionem. quo...eset,—freely, 'the position of affairs.' For the subj. see RC.99.d. HF.176.2. So versaretur. versaretur,—agreeing with the nearest of the three subjects; trans. 'were' or 'were involved.' nihil...reliqui fecerunt,—'made all possible haste,' or 'hastened forward as fast as they could,' more lit. 'left nothing undone with respect to speed.' For reliqui see RC.81.b.i. HF.69.10.; sibi, lit. 'for themselves.'

The only classical prose writer who certainly uses quo thus is Sallust, and this is a serious objection to the genuineness of the text.] Ut='as,' in comparisons, §4. [Other examples in Caesar are Bk.I.38.4., V.12.5., VI.31.7., VII.8.3. So also with indic. clauses, e.g. c.19. §6.] Asyndeton in §5. Use of redigo, §5. [Cf. Bk.IV.3.4. Used in this way, i.e. with the double accus. (direct and factitive), it is very rare in Latin, redigo being much commoner, although occurring in this sense in Caesar only in c.5. §5. Elsewhere Caesar uses redigo with ad (e.g.c.28. §§1.2.), in (e.g.c.14. §3) or sub (Bk.V.29.4.) In the present passage doubtless the idea of reduction (from difficult to easy) was present in the writer's mind.]

N.B.—Qui supererant, § 2., as contrasted with qui superessent, c.27, § 4. [It is often optional with a writer whether in rel. clauses he shall use the Indic. (those very persons who) or the subj. limiting to a class (such persons as).] The order of vix ad quingentos, § 2. [Vix is not, as in Bk.III.4.1., placed for emphasis out of its natural order. Latin usage would not have allowed vix to come between the preposition and its object; the rule is that these are separated only by adjectival modifiers, or by adverbs modifying a participle, or gerund, or rarely by certain particles such as que, enim, vero.] The personal use of videor, followed by Infin. with predicate nom. usus videbatur, § 3. The difference between the constructions with jubeo and impero, § 3. [Quos at the beginning of the section goes also with jussit.] The phrase se suosque prohibere, § 3. duplici attissimo,—change order in trans. mulerant,—at some previous time. tum collocabant,—notice the change of tense; ‘at this time (or now) they were engaged in placing.’ Tum refers to the time Caesar is dealing with. The stones and beams were not to strengthen the wall, but to throw down on the heads of its assailants.

4. Cimbris Teutonisque,—see Introduction, p. viii. agere,—‘drive’; of the cattle. citra,—i.e. on the western side. depositis,—trans. by a principal clause. custodium ac praeviduum,—the former to keep watch over the impedimenta; the latter to hold the place where they were left. Trans. by ‘as.’ una,—i.e. with the impedimenta.

5. Hi,—‘the latter,’ referring to the sex millia hominum. exagitati,—App.37.a.N.B. cum...defenderent,—‘while at one time they were attacking others, and at another time defending themselves against the attacks of others,’ or ‘now invading, and again repelling invasion.’ illatum defenserent,—supply bellum; lit. ‘warding off war brought on (them).’

corum omnium,—all the neighbors. domicilio,—RC. 82.c. HF.134.1. hunc locum,—the whole district, not the town alone.

N.B.—Reverto, active, § 1., and revertor, deponent, c.10. § 4. [The former in Caesar only in the perfect tenses, the latter, with but one exception (reversus, Bk.VI.42.1.) only in the present tenses. Caesar by

[So the phrase of plundering, ferre agere; here Lewis and Short hold the phrase means merely 'load and carry.'] The use of prognati, §4., and obitus, §5. [In former a poetical word; the latter elsewhere (as the verb obeo) is of individuals.] The phrase alias...alias, §5. [In classic authors, of time, not place.] The phrases bellum inferre, bellum illatum defendere, §5. [Of offensive and defensive war respectively.] The former is a regular rendering for 'invade,' invadō being rather 'attack.'

80, 81. Their confidence turns to dismay when they realize the Romans' skill in siege-works, and they seek to make their peace with Caesar.

CAP. XXX.

CAP. XXXII.

1. consuetudine, merito,—trans. by ‘in accordance with.’ (RC.85.m. HF.71.3.) aries,—see Introduction, p. xxii. attigisset, dedidissent,—for original fut. perf. indic.; trans. by past tense.

2. nisi armis traditis,—‘unless they had previously surrendered,’ etc., or ‘except after,’ etc. Cf. on c.20. § 3. in Nervilis,—‘in the case of the N.’; see c.28. § 3. This is explained by finitimisque...inferrent. quam,—the indefinite adj. (RC.II.189.N.B.) dediticiis,—‘those who had surrendered to,’ etc.

3. ad suos,—as distinguished from suis, implying their return to the citizens. quae,—subj. of imperarentur. facere dixerunt,—the subj. of dixerunt is legati; with facere understand either se (the envoys speaking for the people), or eos referring to suos. Facere is more emphatic than facturos; the latter is but a promise for the future, the former a statement that already they were carrying out his orders.

4. jacta, celata, retenta,—trans. by principal clauses in the active. App.5.a.iii. prope,—adverb. aggeris,—that mentioned in c.30. § 3. adaequarent,—RC.99.b. HF.187.2. eo die,—contrasted with sub vesperum, c.33. § 1. pacc sunt usi,—‘they kept quiet’; the subject being the Adu-tuci. This phrase is generally best rendered ‘they enjoy peace.’

N.B.—Tense of attigisset, § 1. [The imperf. subj. representing a original subj. of purpose might have been used. RC.II.175. H. 201.5. BA.412. H.520.I.2. AG.327. N.B. to c.21. § 1.] Distinguish carefully from quae (accus.) imperaretur (impers. pass. facere). The mood shows that it is part of the original statement; quae imperabantur would have been a phrase of the writer replacing the original.] The tense of facere, § 3. [See note above.] Eo die, § 4. [The point of time, where we might have expected duration of time. Cf.c.6. § 1.]

CAP. XXXIII.

1. quam,—as in c.32. § 2. ab,—cf. on a, c.31. § 6.
2. Illi,—subject of fecerunt, at the end of the section, and referring to oppidani, § 1. App.18.b. autē initio consilio,—‘according to a prearranged plan,’ lit.? ut...est,—a reference to ut postea perspectum est, c.32. § 4.
3. praesidia deducturos,—from the castella on the wall of circumvallation; c.30. § 2. servaturos,—‘would keep watch’; or supplying praesidia, ‘would maintain.’ his,—‘the’; with armis. scutis factis,—abl. absol.; freely, ‘with shields made,’ etc. viminibus intextis,—also abl. absol., but dependent on, rather than co-ordinate with, factis; trans. ‘or of twigs woven together.’ quae,—referring to scutis.

qua,—adverb. minime arduus,—predicate of videbatur (esse). Evidently the Roman wall was on higher ground than the space between the wall and the town.

N.B.—The accus. plur of the 3rd. decl. in ās, Curiosolitas. [Caesar often uses Greek endings in the declension of names of Gallic tribes. Cf. N.B. to c.7. § 1., Cretas, which is a pure Greek word.]

CAP. XXXV.

Trans. by 'to' and infin. (RC.101.b.iii. HF.110.1.) imperata,—'his bidding.'

2. properabat,—as is shown by § 3., means here 'was anxious to go,' or 'was in a hurry to go.' inita aestate,—cf. on c.2. § 1.

N.B.—The mood of incoherent, §1. [Explained above as subj. by attraction to mood of mitterentur. RC.II.220.c. H.529.II. AG.342. Some editors, however, explain it as a rel. clause of characteristic, meaning 'even such as dwelt.'] Qui se daturas, §1. [If se, referring to nationes, is justified by qui, meaning the envoys who represent the states, we should have expected datus. That is, either se datus or eas datus would seem more consistent. But probably nationibus is felt as the logical subject of the main clause, as if we had nationes legatos mitterent, in which case se is regular.] The position of que in ob easque, §4. [Cf. sub occasumque, c.11. §6. This is the regular order in Latin, though occasionally que is appended to monosyllabic prepositions; cf. inque eam rem, Bk.V. 36.2. Notice also that the use of que to introduce a new period is exceedingly rare in Caesar.] The accus. of duration of time attached to a noun, §4. [This is explained by the verbal force of supplicatio. Still the more regular genitive is the construction used in the two other passages where Caesar has the phrase (IV.38. and VII.90.)] Quod for id quod, §4. Emphatic position of nulli, §4. [Cf. nulli, c.6. §3. and nemo, c.33. §6.] The use, as in English, of a connective between the last two only of three words, §8. [This is not incorrect, as is often stated; cf. III.1.1.; II.4.IV.4.2.; 17.2.; 19.2. The connective in Caesar in such cases is que.]

LIBER TERTIUS.

1. CUM in Italiam proficeretur Caesar, Servium<sub>1</sub> Galbam cum legione duodecima et parte equitatus in Nantuates Veragros Sedunosque misit, qui a finibus Allobrogum et lacu Lemanno et flumine Rhodano ad summas Alpes pertinent. Causa mittendi fuit, quod iter<sub>2</sub> per Alpes, quo magno cum periculo magnisque cum portoriis mercatores ire consuerant, pates fieri volebat. Huic<sub>3</sub> permisit, si opus esse arbitraretur, uti in his locis legionem hiemandi causa collocaret. Galba secundis aliquot proeliis<sub>4</sub> factis castellisque compluribus eorum expugnatis missis ad eum undique legatis obsidibusque datis et pace facta constituit cohortes duas in Nantuatibus collocare et ipse eum reliquis ejus legionis cohortibus in vicis Veragrorum, qui appellatur Octodurus, hiemare; qui vicus positus in<sub>5</sub> valle non magna adjecta planicie altissimis montibus undique continetur. Cum hic in duas partes flumines divideretur, alteram partem ejus vici Gallis concessit, alteram vacuam ab his relictam cohortibus ad hiemandum attribuit. Eum locum vallo fossaque munivit.

2. Cum dies hibernorum complures transissent, frumenti<sub>1</sub> unque eo comportari jussisset, subito per exploratores certior factus est ex ea parte vici, quam Gallis concesserat, omnes noctu discessisse montesque, qui impenderent, a maximis

 2 multitudine Sedunorum et Veragrorum teneri. Id aliquo de causis acciderat, ut subito Galli belli renovante 3 legionisque opprimendae consilium caperent: priunum quod legionem neque eum plenissimam detractis cohortibus duabus et compluribus singillatim, qui commeatus petendi 4 causa missi erant, propter paucitatem despiciebant; tunc etiam, quod propter iniquitatem loci, cum ipsi ex montibus in vallem decurrerent et tela conjicerent, ne primum quidem 5 posse impetum suum sustineri existimabant. Accedebat quod suos ab his liberos abstractos obsidum nominis dolabant, et Romanos non solum itinerum causa, sed etiam perpetuae possessionis culmina Alpium occupare conari et ea loca finitimae provinciae adjungere sibi persuasum habebant.

1 3. His nuntiis acceptis Galba, cum neque opus hibernorum munitionesque pleno essent perfectae, neque de frumento reliquoque commeatu satis esset provisum, quod deditio facta obsidibusque acceptis nihil de bello timendum existimaverat, consilio celeriter convocato
 2 sententias exquirere coepit. Quo in consilio, cum tantum repentinae periculi praeter opinionem accidisset, ac jam omnia fere superiora loca multitudine armatorum completa conspicerentur, neque subsidio venire neque 3 commeatus supportari interclusis itineribus possemus, prope jam desperata salute nonnullae huiuscmodi sententiae dicebantur, ut impedimentis relictis eruptione facta isdem itineribus, quibus eo pervenissent, ad salutem contendenter.
 4 Majori tamen parti placuit hoc reservato ad extrellum consilio interim rei eventum experiri et castra defendere.

hostes ex omnibus partibus signo dato decurrere, lapides caesaque in vallum conjicere. Nostri primo integris viribus<sup>2</sup> fortiter repugnare neque ullum frustra telum ex loco superiore mittere, ut quaequo pars castrorum nudata defensoribus premi videbatur, eo occurrere et auxilium tene, sed hoc superari, quod dinturnitate pugnae hostes:
despositi proelio excedeant, alii integris viribus succedebant, quarum rerum a nostris propter pancitatem fieri nihil poterat, ne non modo defesso ex pugna excedendi, sed ne sanctio quidem ejus loci, ubi constiterat, relinquendi ac sui recipiendi facultas dabatur.

5. Cum jam amplius horis sex continenter pugnaretur<sup>1</sup> ac non solum vires, sed etiam tela nostros deficerent, atque hostes acris instant languidioribusque nostris vallum occurruunt atque unam esse spem salutis docent, si eruptione facta extremum auxilium experirentur. Itaque<sup>3</sup> convocatis centurionibus celeriter milites certiores facit, paulisper intermitterent proelium ac tantummodo tela missa exciperent seque ex labore reficerent, post dato signo ex castris erumperent atque omnem spem salutis in virtute

fortuna eos, qui in spem potiundorum castrorum venerant, undique circumventos interficiunt et ex hominum milibus amplius triginta, quem numerum barbarorum ad castra venisse constabat, plus tertia parte imperfecta reliquos perterritos in fugam conjiciunt ac ne in locis quidem superioribus consistere patiuntur. Sic omnibus hostium copiis fusis armisqne exutis se in castra munitionesque suas recipiunt. Quo proelio facto, quod saepius fortunam temptare Galba nolebat atque alio se in hiberna consilio venisse meminerat, aliis occurrisse rebus viderat, maxime frumenti commeatusque inopia permotus postero die omnibus ejus vieti agdificiis incensis in provinciam reverti contendit ac nullo hostile prohibente aut iter demorante incolumem legionem in Nantuates, inde in Allobroges perduxit ibique hiemavit.

orum venerant, minum millibus orum ad castra perfecta reliquos in locis quidem unibus hostium munitionesque superius fortunam iberna consilio derat, maxime postero die principiam reverti ter demorante in Allobroges runt, et scientia atque usu nauticarum rerum reliquos antecedunt et in magno impetu maris atque aperto paucis portibus interjectis, quos tenent ipsi, omnes fore, qui eo mari uti consuerunt, habent vectigales. Ab his fit initium retinendi Silii atque Velanii, quod per eos suos se obsides, quos Crasso dedissent, recuperaturos existimabant. Horum auctoritate finitiimi adducti (ut sunt Gallorum subita et repentina consilia), eadem de causa Trebium Terrasidiumque retinunt, et celeriter missis legatis per nos principes inter se conjurant, nihil nisi communi consilio acturos euodemque omnis fortunae exitum esse laturos, reliquiasque civitates sollicitant, ut in ea libertate, quam a majoribus acceperint, permanere quam Romanorum servitutem perferre malint. Omni ora maritima celeriter ad suam sententiam perducta communem legationem ad P. Crassum mittunt, si velit suos recipere, obsides sibi remittat.

9. Quibus de rebus Caesar ab Crasso certior factus, quod ipse aberat longius, naves interim longas aedificari in flumine Ligere, quod influit in Oceanum, remiges ex provincia institui, nantas gubernatoresque comparari jubet. His rebus celeriter administratis ipse, cum primum per anni tempus potuit, ad exercitum contendit. Venetiæ reliquaque item civitates cognito Caesaris adventu, simul quod, quantum in se facinus admisissent, intelligebant, legatos, quod nomen ad omnes nationes sanctum inviolatumque semper fuisse, retentos ab se et in vincula conjectos, pro magnitudine periculi bellum parare et maxime ea, quae ad usum navium pertinent, providere instituunt, hoc majore spe, quod multum natura loei confidebant. Pedestria esse itinera coneisa aestuariis, navigationem impeditam propter inscientiam locorum

 5 paucitatemque portuum sciebant, neque nostros exercitum propter frumenti inopiam diutius apud se morari posse 6 confidebant: ac jam ut omnia contra opinionem acciderent tamen se plurimum navibus posse, Romanos neque ullam facultatem habere navium neque eorum locorum, ubi bellum 7 gesturi essent, vada, portus, insulas novisse; ac longam aliam esse navigationem in concluso mari atque in vastis 8 simo atque apertissimo Oceano perspiciebant. His initio consiliis oppida munimur, frumenta ex agris in oppidis 9 comportant, naves in Venetiam, ubi Caesarem primus bellum gesturum constabat, quam plurimas possunt 10 cogunt. Socios sibi ad id bellum Osismos, Lexovios, Namnetes, Ambiliatos, Morinos, Diablentes, Menapii adsciscunt; auxilia ex Britannia, quae contra eas regione posita est, arcessunt.

10. Erant hae difficultates belli gerendi, quas supra ostendimus, sed multa Caesarem tamen ad id bellum
 2 incitabant: injuria retentorum equitum Romanorum, rebello facta post deditioinem, defectio datis obsidibus, tota civitatum conjuratio, imprimis, ne hac parte neglecta
 3 reliquae nationes sibi idem licere arbitrarentur. Itaque cum intelligeret omnes fere Gallos novis rebus studere et ad bellum mobiliter celeriterque excitari, omnes autem homines natura libertati studere et conditionem servitutis odisse, priusquam plures civitates conspirarent, partiendum sibi ac latius distribuendum exercitum putavit.

11. Itaque T. Labienum legatum in Treveros, qui 2 proximi fluminis Rheno sunt, cum equitatu mittit. Huic mandat, Remos reliquosque Belgas adeat atque in officio

ecim et magno numero equitatus in Aquitaniam cisei jubet, ne ex his nationibus auxilia in Galliam autur ac tantae nationes conjungantur. Q. Titurium 4 num legatum cum legionibus tribus in Venellos solites Lexoviosque mittit, qui eam manum distin bus, quas ex Pictonibus et Santonis reliquisque pacatis convenire jusserset, praeficit et, cum primum t, in Venetos proficisci jubet. Ipse eo pedestribus s contendit.

2. Erant ejusmodi fore situs oppidorum, ut posita in 1 remis lingulis promontoriisque neque pedibus aditum erent, cum ex alto se aestus incitavisset, quod bis edit semper horarum viginti quatuor spatio, neque ribus, quod rursus minuente aestu naves in vadis ictarentur. Ita utraque re oppidorum oppugnatio 2 pediebatur; ac si quando magnitudine operis forte serati, extruso mari aggere ac molibus atque his oppidi reibus adaequatis, suis fortunis desperare cooperant, igno numero navium appulso, cuius rei summam ultatem habebant, sua deportabant omnia sequo in proxima oppida recipiebant: ibi se rursus isdem opportuni 4 tibus loci defendebant. Haec eo facilius magnam 5 rtem aestatis faciebant, quod nostrae naves tempestatibus stinebantur, summaque erat vasto atque aperto mari, agnis aestibus, raris ac prope nullis portibus, difficultas vigandi.

13. Namque ipsorum naves ad hunc modum factae 1 mataeque erant: carinae aliquanto planiores quam

nostrarum navium, quo facilius vada ac decessum aet 2 excipere possent; prorae admodum erectae atque i puppes ad magnitudinem fluctuum tempestatum
 3 accommodatae; naves totae factae ex robore ad quan
 4 vim et contumeliam preferendam; transtra ex pedali in altitudinem trabibus confixa clavis ferreis digiti pol
 5 crassitudine; ancorae pro funibus ferreis catenis revinct
 6 pelles pro velis alutaeque tenuiter confectae, sive pro lini inopiam atque ejus usus inscientiam, sive eo, quod magis verisimile, quod tantas tempestates Oceani tantos impetus ventorum sustineri ac tanta onera navium 7 velis non satis commode posse arbitrabantur. Cum navibus nostrae classi ejusmodi congressus erat, ut celeritate et pulsu remorum praestaret, reliqua pro natura, pro vi tempestatum illis essent aptiora et acc
 8 modatiora. Neque enim his nostrae rostro nocere potera (tanta in iis erat firmitudo), neque propter altitudinem facile telum adiegebatur, et eadem de causa minus commo 9 copulis continebantur. Accedebat, ut, cum saevire vent coepisset et se vento dedissent, et tempestatem ferre facilis et in vadis consistenter tutius, et ab aestu relicta nihil saxa et cautes timerent; quarum rerum omnium nostris navibus casus erat extimescendus.

1 14. Compluribus expugnatis oppidis Caesar, ubi int

 captis oppidis reprimi neque iis noceri posse, statu

centurionibusque, quibus singulae naves erant attributae, constabat, quid agerent aut quam rationem pugnae insisterent. Rostro enim noceri non posse cognoverant : <sup>4</sup> turribus autem excitatis tamen has altitudo puppium ex barbaris navibus superabat, ut neque ex inferiore loco satis commode tela adigi possent et missa ab Gallis graviss acciderent. Una erat magno usui res praeparata a nostris, <sup>5</sup> falces praecutiae insertae affixaesque longuriis non absimili forma muralium falcium. His cum funes, qui antennas <sup>6</sup> ad malos destinabant, comprehensi adductique erant, navigio remis incitato praerumpabantur. Quibus abscisis <sup>7</sup> antennae necessario concidebant, ut, cum omnis Gallicis navibus spes in velis armamentisque consisteret, his erectis omnis usus navium uno tempore eriperetur. Reliquum erat certamen positum in virtute, qua nostri <sup>8</sup> milites facile superabant, atque eo magis, quod in conspectu Caesaris atque omnis exercitus res gerebatur, ut nullum paulo fortius factum latere posset ; omnes enim colles ac <sup>9</sup> loca superiora, unde erat propinquus despectus in mare, ab exercitu tenebantur.

1 17. Dum haec in Venetis geruntur, Q. Titurius Sabinus cum iis copiis, quas a Caesare acceperat, in fines Venetorum peruenit. His praeerat Viridovix ac summam imperii tenebat earum omnium civitatum, quae defecerant, ex quibus exercitum magnasque copias coegerat; atque his paucis diebus Aulerci Eburovices Lexoviique senatu suo imperfecto, quod auctores belli esse nolebant, portas clauerunt seque cum Viridovice conjunxerunt: magna quo praeterea multitudo undique ex Gallia perditorum hominum latronumque convenerat, quos spes praedandi studiumque bellandi ab agricultura et quotidiano labore revocabat. Sabinus idoneo omnibus rebus loco castris sese tenebat; cum Viridovix contra eum duum millium spatio conselisset quotidieque productis copiis pugnandi potestatem faceret, ut jam non solum hostibus in contemplationem Sabinus veniret, sed etiam nostrorum militum vocibus nonnulli carperetur; tantamque opinionem timoris praebuit, ut jam ad vallum castrorum hostes accedere audenter. 18. Hac confirmata opinione timoris idoneum quandam 1 hominem et callidum de legit, Gallum, ex iis, quos auxilii causa secum habebat. Huic magnis praemiis pollicitationi- 2 busque persuadet, uti ad hostes transeat, et, quid fieri velit, edocet. Qui ubi pro perfuga ad eos venit, timorem 3 Romanorum proponit, quibus angustiis ipse Caesar a Venetis prematur, docet, neque longius abesse, quin 4 proxima nocte Sabinus clam ex castris exercitum educat et ad Caesarem auxilii ferendi causa proficiuntur. Quod 5 ubi auditum est, conclamant omnes occasionem negotii bene gerendi amittendam non esse: ad castra ire oportere. Multae res ad hoc consilium Gallos hortabantur: superi- 6 orum dierum Sabini cunctatio, perfugae confirmatio, inopia cibariorum, cui rei parum diligenter ab iis erat provisum, spes Venetici belli et quod fere libenter homines id, quod volunt, credunt. His rebus adducti non prius Viridovicem 7 reliquosque duces ex concilio dimittunt, quam ab his sit concessum, arma uti capiant et ad castra contendant. Qua re concessa laeti, ut explorata victoria, sarmentis 8 virgultisque collectis, quibus fossas Romanorum compleant, ad castra pergunt.

19. Locus erat castrorum editus et paulatim ab imo 1 acelivis circiter passus mille. Huc magno cursu contend- erunt, ut quam minimum spatii ad se colligendos armandosque Romanis daret, exanimatique pervenerunt. Sabinus suos hortatus cupientibus signum dat. Impeditis 2 hostibus propter ea, quae ferebant, onera subito duabus

3 portis eruptionem fieri jubet. Factum est opportunitate loci, hostium inscientia ac defatigatione, virtute militum et superiorum pugnarum exercitatione, ut ne unum quidem nostrorum impetum ferrent ac statim terga verterent. 4 Quos impeditos integris viribus milites nostri consecuti magnum numerum eorum occiderunt; reliquos equites 5 consecutati paucos, qui ex fuga evaserant, reiquerunt. Sie uno tempore et de navalni pugna Sabinus et de Sabini victoria Caesar certior factus est, civitatesque omnes se 6 statim Titurio dederunt. Nam ut ad bella suscipienda Gallorum alacer ac promptus est animus, sic mollis ac minime resistens ad calamitates perferendas mens eorum est.

1 20. Eodem fere tempore P. Crassus, cum in Aquitaniam pervenisset, quae pars, ut ante dictum est, et regionum latitudine et multitudine hominum ex tertia parte Galliae est aestimanda, cum intelligeret in iis locis sibi bellum gerendum, ubi paucis ante annis L. Valerius Praeconinus legatus exercitu pulso interfectus esset, atque unde L. Mallius proconsul impedimentis amissis profugisset, non mediocrem sibi diligentiam adhibendam intelligebat. 2 Itaque re frumentaria provisa, auxiliis equitatunque comparato, multis praeterea viris fortibus Tolosa et Narbone, quae sunt civitates Galliae provinciae finitimae his regionibus, nominatim evocatis in Sontiatum fines exercitum 3 introduxit. Cujus adventu cognito Sontiates magnis copiis coactis equitatunque, quo plurimum valebant, in itinere agmen nostrum adorti primum equestre proelium 4 commiserunt, deinde equitatu suo pulso atque insequentibus nostris subito pedestres copias, quas in convalle in insidiis collocaverant, ostenderunt. Hi nostros disjectos adorti proelium renovarunt.

21. Pugnatum est diu atque acriter, cum Sontiates superioribus victoriis freti in sua virtute totius Aquitaniae salutem positam putarent, nostri autem, quid sine imperatore et sine reliquis legionibus adolescentulo duce efficere possent, perspici cuperent: tandem confecti vulneribus hostes terga vertere. Quorum magno numero interfecto Crassus ex itinere oppidum Sontiatum oppugnare coepit. Quibus fortiter resistantibus vineas turresque egit. Illis alias eruptione temptata, alias cuniculis ad aggerem vineasque actis (cujus rei sunt longe peritissimi Aquitani, propterea quod multis locis apud eos aerariae secturae sunt), ubi diligentia nostrorum nihil his rebus profici posse intellexerunt, legatos ad Crassum mittunt seque in dedicationem ut recipiat, petunt. Qua re impetrata arma tradere jussi faciunt.

22. Atque in ea re omnium nostrorum intentis animis alia ex parte oppidi Adiatumnus, qui summam imperii tenebat, cum sexcentis devotis, quos illi soldarios appellant, quorum haec est conditio, uti omnibus in vita commodis una cum iis fruantur, quorum se amicitiae dediderint, si quid his per vim accidat, aut eundem easum una ferant aut sibi mortem consciscant; neque adhuc hominum memoria repertus est quisquam, qui eo imperfecto, cujus se amicitiae devovisset, mori recusaret: cum his Adiatumnus eruptionem facere conatus, clamore ab ea parte munitionis sublato, cum ad arma milites concurrisserent vehementerque ibi pugnatum esset, repulsus in oppidum tamen, uti eadem dedicationis conditione uteretur, a Crasso impetravit.

23. Armis obsidibusque acceptis Crassus in fines Vocatum et Tarusatum profectus est. Tum vero barbari commoti, quod oppidum et natura loci et manu munitum

paucis diebus, quibus eo ventum erat, expugnatum cognoverant, legatos quoquoversum dimittere, conjurare, obsides inter se dare, copias parare coeperunt. Mittuntur etiam ad eas civitates legati, quae sunt citerioris Hispaniae finitimae Aquitaniae: inde auxilia ducesque arcessuntur. Quorum adventu magna cum auctoritate et magna cum hominum multitudine bellum gerere conantur. Duceverii diliguntur, qui una cum Q. Sertorio omnes annos fuerant summamque scientiam rei militaris habere existimabantur. Hi consuetudine populi Romani loca capere, castra munire, commeatibus nostros intercludere instituerunt. Quod ubi Crassus animadvertisit, suas copias propter exiguitatem non facile dilduci, hostem et vagari et vias obsidere et castris satis praesidii relinquere, ob eam causam minus commode frumentum commeatumque sibi supportari, in dies hostium numerum augeri, non cunctandum existimatavit, quin pugna decertaret. Hac re ad consilium delata ubi omnes idem sentire intellexit, posterum diem pugnae constituit.

NOTES ON BOOK III.

For the events described in the preceding books, see the Introduction, § III., p. x.

Chap. 1-6.—Galba's experiences among the Alpine tribes.

1. Galba is sent to keep the northern route over the Alps open.

CAP. I.

1. Cum in Italianam, etc.,—At the end of Book II. we read, “Caesar was anxious to go to Italy and Illyricum...He himself led his legions into winter-quarters...and then set out for Italy.” Italy here means Caesar’s province of Gallia Citerior or Cisalpine Gaul; see Introduction, p. v., and map, p. xi. proflcisceretur in,—‘was setting out for,’ or perhaps ‘was on his way to.’

in Nantuates...qui...pertinent,—‘into the country of ...which extends’; lit. ? App. 6. summas Alpes,—‘the summits of the Alps,’ lit. ‘the Alps (where) highest.’

2. Causa mittendi,—‘the reason for,’ etc. Add ‘him’ or ‘them’ in trans. quod,—‘that,’ lit. ‘because.’ iter per,—‘the route (road) over,’ lit. ‘through.’ [This route, (now known as the Great St. Bernard Pass), being well to the north, was especially useful for leading troops into Central Gaul.]

quo,—not adv., but abl. of relative pron. magnō cum, etc.,—‘(though) at great risk and subject to heavy tolls,’ lit. ‘with.’ ire,—‘to travel.’ consuerant,—for consueverant. Note that consuevi=I have become (i.e. I am) accustomed.

3. Huic,—i.e. Galba. permisit...utl,—lit. ‘he gave permission to the end that’; trans. by infin. with ‘to.’ (RC. 99.a.2. HF.181.3.)

opus,—see Vocabulary; not from opus, operis. arbitraretur,—App.32. For the subj. mood see RC.99.h.iii. HF.209.2. his,—implying that it has just been mentioned: where? hiemandi causa,—App.39.b.

4. secundis,—lit. ‘successful.’ Proelium facere, to fight a battle; secundum proelium facere, to gain a victory. factis,—App.5.a: so expugnatis, missis, datis, facta; but a series of participles like this must not be translated all in one way. castellis compluribus eorum,—‘several strongholds of theirs,’ or ‘several of their strongholds.’ Notice the difference between the Latin and the English idiom.

In,—‘among.’ reliquis,—‘the other;’ how many would these be? Introduction, p. xvi. ejus,—‘of that;’ why not ‘his?’ qui...Octodurus,—‘which’; why not quod? (RC. 93.2.)

5. qui,—App.11.b. positus...continetur,—‘is situated ... and is surrounded, (shut in).’ App.87.a.N.B. non magna, etc.,—‘with a small plain lying close to it,’ lit. App.5.a. altissimis,—App.10.

6. Cum,—‘since,’ or ‘as.’ vacnam relletam,—‘vacated’; lit.? concessit, attribuit,—what is the difference? ad hiemandum,—App.39.b.

N.B.—Order of Opening Words. [Generally in Caesar, the first words of a sentence form a connecting link, by beginning the new sentence with something known to us from the preceding one.] The two modes of joining three words (or phrases) occurring in §1. [It is not incorrect to couple (by que) the two last only: cf.III.11.4; also IV. 4.2; 17.2; 19.2; but in enumerations, or in checking off facts, et is generally placed between each two.] The phrase summus Alpes, §1. [In this idiom the adj. regularly precedes; cf.VII.69.1., in calle summo, a much rarer order. RC.88.c. HF.59.1. BA.60. H.440.2.1. AG.193.] Magno cum periculo, §2: note order. Pateferi, §2. [For the form see RC.71.c. HF.156.3. AG.142.a.b. In English the active voice would do equally well, but Latin prefers the passive inf. with verbs of desire.]     Galba; why in first place?     Five Ablatives Absolute together, §4. [The two first, coupled by que, give the cause of the action expressed by the next three; these are coupled by que and et, et marking off the last as the final result, while between the two groups there is asyndeton. Note that as usual the order of time is followed by the verbs.]     Ad eum, where se might have been expected, §4, [explained probably by its being in an absolute clause, whose virtual subject is not the subject of the main verb.]     Repetition of vicius in §§ 4, 5, 6. [A sacrifice of elegance to clearness.]     Various ways of expressing purpose.

2. His legion is suddenly threatened by a superior force of mountaineers.

CAP. II.

1. hibernorum,—here not ‘winter-quarters’ but ‘the time spent in winter-quarters, (their wintering.)’ trans- is-ent,=transient (RC.66.); transeo is here intransitive, with subject dies.     eo,—adv. ‘to that place, (thither),’ referring to the village just mentioned.

certior,—for the case see RC.79.b.     certior factus est,—‘learned,’ lit.?     discessisse, teneri,—RC.101.b. HF.109.1.     qui impenderent,—may be rendered by one word in English. Montes is applied to low hills as well as to mountains or mountain chains. For the mood see RC.99.e. HF.206.4.

2. Id...acciderat,—id refers to what has just been told us, but is explained more fully by the clause ut...caperent.     Id,—‘this,’ not the impersonal ‘it.’     ut,—‘namely that.’     subito,—emphatic from position, ‘so suddenly.’     belli...opprimentiae,—App.40. (RC.104.b. HF.170.3.)     caperent,—for the mood see RC.99.b. HF.182.4.     Consilium capere, to form a design, adopt a plan. Trans. freely, ‘this sudden resolve to...had been taken for several reasons.’ Three reasons are given, primum §3, tum etiam §4, accedebat §5, the last giving the real motive.

3. primum,—adv. quod,—conj. legionem.—‘a single (or more) legion.’ Before legionem trans. propter...despiciebant.

neque eam plenissimam,—‘and one too that was not up to its full strength,’ lit. ‘very full (quite complete).’ detractis...erant,—explains why it had not its full strength, and may be rendered by a parenthetic clause beginning with ‘for.’ There is no reference to the normal strength of a legion. detractis,—Where were they? See c.1. §4. compluribus,—as well as cohortibus goes with detractis. That it means ‘many of the men,’ (not many of the cohorts) is shown by singillatim, ‘by themselves,’ that is, in small detachments. commeatus,—gen. sing. panctatem,—‘its small size, (slenderness),’ not as a legion, but as compared with the numbers of the mountaineers.

4. tum etiam,—‘further also.’ iniquitatem loci,—‘unfavorable nature of our position,’ explained by the opposition of ex montibus and in vallem. cum,—‘when.’ ipsi,—in opposition to the Romans. decurrerent, deflerent,—trans. by ‘were’ or ‘should be.’ existimabant,—trans. immediately after quod.

5. Accedebat quod,—freely, ‘besides this,’ lit. ‘there came also (i.e. there was added) the fact that.’ (RC.109.i. HF.181.2.) abstractos,—the infin. with esse understood. (RC.101.b. HF.109.1.) obsidum nomine,—‘under (lit. by means of) the name (guise, pretence) of hostages.’ For the fact see c.1. §4.

Romanos,—subject of conari, depending on persuasum habebant. Itinerum causa,—explained by c.1. §2. possessionis,—depends on causa. ea loca,—‘that country (or district).’ The plural of locus is seldom to be translated ‘places’; see the Vocabulary. For the gender see RC.54.b. HF.280. provinciae,—dat. The Roman province of Gaul. adjungere,—depends on conari.
sibi persuasum habebant,—‘were persuaded,’ lit. ‘had

CAP. III.

1. Galba,—(subject of coepit) should not be so far from its verb in English as in Latin. neque...neque,—‘not...or,’ lit. ‘neither...nor.’ opus hibernorum,—a general term, ‘the construction of the winter-camp.’ munitiones,—a particular part of the work. perfectae,—agreeing with the nearer of the two subjects. (RC.79.a.b.i.)

de...provisum,—freely, ‘sufficient corn...had been secured,’ lit. ‘there had been sufficient preparation with regard to, etc.’ reliquo,—‘the rest of,’ or ‘the other.’

quod...existimaverat,—gives the reason for the neglect just mentioned. facta, acceptis,—if rendered by the active voice, the subjects will be different. nihil...timendum,—understand esse; ‘that there was no ground for fear’; for the acc. nihil=‘not at all,’ see RC.83.e. consilio,—‘council (of war)’ i.e. of the officers.

2. cum,—‘since,’ or ‘as’; goes with accidisset, conspicerentur and possent. tantum periculi,—App.2.d. (RC.81.b. HF. 69.10.) Trans. tantum, ‘such.’ praeter opinionem,—‘unexpectedly,’ lit.? The idea (practically the same as in repentini) is repeated for emphasis’ sake.

ac,—‘and further.’ superiora loca,—‘the higher ground, or the heights.’ completa,—with loca; ‘filled,’ or ‘covered.’

neque,—see on §1; here, as often, neque=‘and neither.’ subsilio,—App.3.e.; freely, ‘to aid them.’ (RC.82.e. HF. 134.1.) venire, supportari,—depend on possent. But with venire the subject of possent is understood (i.e. their friends), while with supportari it is commates. [Most editions read veniri, App.24., with which understand posset.]

3. desperata,—trans. by principal clause; App.5.a.iii. hujusmodi,—RC.81.e. HF.130.7. Trans. ‘opinions were expressed to the effect that,’ lit. ‘opinions of this sort were expressed, namely that.’

relietis, fletu,—trans. by clauses co-ordinate with contenderent; App.5.a.iii. isdem,=eisdem. (RC.61.) quibus,—‘by which,’ or ‘as.’ (RC.11.197.f. HF.127.2.) pervenissent,—for the mood see RC.99.e. HF.206.4. ut...contenderent,—‘that they should make their way to a place of safety.’ (RC.99.a.2. HF.181.3.)

4. Majori parti placuit,—‘the majority decided,’ lit.? reservato,—trans. by infin. active co-ordinate with experiri; App.5.a.iii. rei eventum experiri,—‘to await the issue of events,’ lit.?

CAP. IV.

1. interjecto,—'having intervened,' lit.? vix ut,—'so that scarcely'; vix (like brevi) emphatic from position.
Trans. freely, 'after an interval so short that, etc.' constituissent,—for the mood see RC.99.k. collocandis,— dative, (RC.104.b.); trans., 'for arranging,' or 'to arrange.'
App. 40. daretur,—RC.99.b. HF.187.2.

partibus,—do not trans. 'parts.' signo dato,—App.5.a.;
'at a given signal.' decurrere,—historical inf., App.36; so conicere, repugnare, mittere, occurrere, ferre, and superari.
(RC.101.d. HF.216.3.N.2.) gaesa,—a native word; cf.
assegai. in,—App.6.

2. primo,—adv. No word meaning 'afterwards' follows, but this is implied in the opening words of c.5. integris viribus,—App.5.a.N. Trans. by 'so long as,' or 'while,' (RC.85.o. HF.100.5.)

neque ullum,—'and no,' lit.? loco superiore,—see on c.3. § 2. The Romans were on the ramparts, the Gauls in the plain.

ut quaeque,—‘(and) whenever any,’ lit. ‘when each’; from quisque. nudata defensoribus,—‘by being stripped of its defenders,’ lit. ‘having been cleared from, etc.’ (RC. 85.h. HF.158.2.) eo,—adv.

3. hoe superari quod,—‘were inferior (over-matched) in this point that.’ For the abl. see RC.85.g. defessi,—‘when exhausted.’ excedeant,—trans. by ‘would’; App. 26.c. proelio,—(RC.85.h. HF.158.2.); proelio excedere, to leave the field.

alii,—‘(while) others.’ integrī virībus,—different from §2; trans. by ‘with.’ (RC.85.c. HF.131.9.) succedebant,—‘kept coming up to take their place,’ or ‘would relieve them.’ App.26.c.

nihil,—‘none,’ lit. ‘nothing’; trans. before quarum rerum.

4. ac,—‘and further,’ intensive. non modo,—as often, for non modo non. Trans. ‘not only was no opportunity of...afforded...but none was given even to...for leaving, etc.’ defesso,—‘to one who was exhausted,’ ‘to an exhausted soldier’; similarly saucio.

relinquendi recipiendi,—gerundive constr.; App.40. (RC.104.b. HF.170.3.) eius,—‘the,’ lit.? ubi,—‘where,’ not ‘when.’ constiterat,—‘stood,’ lit.? sni,—lit. ‘himself.’

CAP. V.

1. Cum jam, etc.,—lit. ‘when the fight by this time was going on continuously for more than six hours’; freely, ‘after more than six hours’ continuous fighting.’ pugnare-tur,—App.24. (RC.99.f.v. HF.161.2.) amplius horis sex,—horis may be the abl. of comparison, equivalent to quam horas (RC.85.f. HF.55.5.), or the omission of quam, may, as is customary with amplius, have no effect on the case (RC. II.123.c.2.) and horis be the abl. of time within which. (RC. 85.b.iv.)

vires...nostros deflecent,—lit. ‘strength was failing our men’; freely, ‘the strength of our men was failing, (becoming exhausted).’ languidioribusque nostris,—App. 5.a.n. (RC.85.o. HF.100.5.) Trans. ‘and while, (or and as) our men were becoming less active,’ lit.?

resque esset, etc.,—‘and when matters were come (lit. had been brought) to the last extremity.’ The extremus casus would be the camp’s falling into the enemy’s hands.

2. primi pli centurio,—‘chief (or senior) centurion’: also called primipilus. For the phrase see Introduction § V. c., p.xix, and Vocabulary under pilus.

quem,—subject of confectum (esse), which depends on diximus. Trans. ‘who, as we have stated, was exhausted, etc.’; lit.? Nervico proelio,—the battle described in Book II. c. 16-27; see Introduction, p. xii.

et consilii magni et virtutis,—here, as often, it is better to omit ‘both,’ in trans. From magni understand magnae with virtutis. For the case see RC.81.e. HF.130.7.

unam,—emphatic from position, ‘but one.’ esse,—‘there is.’ si...experientur,—for the mood see RC.99.h.iii. HF. 209.2. For the tense see RC.107.a.iii. eruptione facta,—trans. by clause co-ordinate with experientur, App.5.a.iii. extremum auxilium,—‘last resource,’ (i.e. means of help.)

3. milites certiores facit...intermitterent,—‘lets the soldiers know that they were to give up’; freely ‘tells the soldiers to give up.’ Ut might have been used with intermitterent, (RC.99.a.2.i.); so exciperent, reficerent, erumperent, ponerent.

ae...reficerent,—adds a fuller statement of what is meant by intermitterent proelium. exciperent,—‘ward off,’ lit. ‘receive’; this seems better than ‘catch or gather up,’ as some explain it. missa,—‘hurled at them.’ ex,—‘from or after.’

post,—‘(and) afterwards’; adv. referring to paulisper signo dato,—cf. c.4, § 1. atque...ponerent,—this is the extremum auxilium of § 2. Pono=‘rest.’

N.B.—Imperfect tense with jam=Eng. pluperfect, § 1. [Similarly the present=Eng. perfect. Where an action has been going on and still continues, Eng. uses a tense referring to the past, Latin a tense referring to the present. RC.97.a.v., b.IV. HF.216.2.b. BA.181. H.469. II.2. AG.277.b.] The use of amplius with numerals, § 1. [So plus, minus and tongius. RC.II.123.c.2. BA.318.Obs. J'.417.X.2. AG. 247.c.] Sequence of tenses with historical present. [RC.107.a. iii. BA.179. II.495.II. AG.287.c.] Cons’ action of intermitterent. [This may be classified as subj. of indirect command (RC.106.a. HF. 207.5. BA.522. H.523.III. AG.359.), or as subj. of substantival clause of purpose with ut omitted (as above).] In reality it illustrates the transition from the independent subjunctive of wish or command to the dependent subjunctive of purpose.] Asyndeton before post, § 3. [Very common in cases of contrast.]

6. The Romans succeed in driving back the enemy, but think it prudent to return at once to the province.

For the peculiar syntax see RC.11.184. relinquunt,—‘allow (give),’ lit. ‘leave.’

2. Ita,—with commutata. In spem venerant,—note the accus.; ‘had begun to have hopes,’ lit.? potiusdorum castrorum,—for the form see RC.66; for the gerundive construction w. potior see RC.104.b.ii. circumventos,—agrees with eos and in time precedes interficiunt. Trans. by verb in active voice, co-ordinate with interficiunt, as in App.37.N.B.

hominum millibus,—App.2.d. (RC.81.b. HF.69.10.) amplius, plus,—‘more (than)’; see note on amplius, c.5. § 1. quem numerum,—the subject of venisse, with which it forms the subject of constabat. Trans. ‘the number...acknowledged as having come, etc.,’ lit.? tertia parte,—may be rendered by one word. reliquos perterritos,—‘the panic-stricken survivors.’ conjiciant in,—‘put to,’ lit.? quidem,—be careful to connect w. locis superioribus.

3. Sic,—with fusis. armisque exutis,—exutis agrees with copis, not with armis. Exure armis is to follow one so closely as to make him throw away his arms, to escape more easily. For the abl. armis see RC.85.h. HF.158.2.

4. quod,—conj. saepius,—‘any further’; lit. ‘oftener,’ i.e. than this one time.

alio consilio,—‘with one object’; see c.1. § 2. (RC.85.m. HF.71.3.) meminerat,—‘remembered’; pluperf. with force of imperf. (RC.72.b. HF.145.3.)

alii rebus,—dat., ‘another (a different) state of things.’ viderat,—‘saw,’ lit.?; both meminerat and viderat go with quod: in Eng. supply ‘but,’ or ‘whilst,’ as connective.

maxime,—with permotus. postero die,—with contendit, but not with perduxit or hiemavit. contendit,—‘started.’

nullo...prohibente,—App. 5.a.N.; ‘without any enemy opposing him.’ Incolunum,—with legionem; ‘without loss,’ lit. ‘safe.’ In,—as in c.l. § 1. h̄emavit,—this tense means ‘went into winter quarters.’

Galba’s expedition was evidently a greater failure than Caesar cares to show clearly.

by superatis... Sedunis. omnibus... existimaret,—freely,
'had every reason to think.' punctum,—understand esse.

superatis, etc.,—the order is not chronological, but seemingly geographical. The conquest of the Belgae is told in Bk.II.c.1-33, the war with Ariovistus in Bk.I.c.30-54, the defeat (?) of the Alpine tribes (of whom the most important alone is mentioned) in Bk.III.c.4-6. See Introduction, § III. No reference is made here to the defeat of the Helvetians.

atque Ita,—'and as accordingly'; for cum above goes also with profectus esset. Inita hincem,—abl. absol.; freely, 'at the beginning of winter,' lit.? Illyricum,—part of Caesar's province; see Introduction, p. v. ens,—'those,' viz. of Illyricum. regiones cognoscere,—'become acquainted with the country.'

2. Ejus,—'this,' the one just mentioned; lit. 'that.' haec,—'as follows,' lit. 'this.'

adolescens,—'the younger,' to distinguish him from his father (the triumvir), and his brother, M. Crassus, who also was with Caesar. The term adolescens was applicable up to 30 or 35, and even 40, years of age.

proximus mare Oceanum,—'very near the ocean.' (RC. 83.f.iii.) Proximus, an adj. with Crassus; mare the general term, Oceanus particularizing, as we say Lake Huron, River Thames, etc. In,—'among.'

3. Is,—'he'; in Eng. should be nearer the verb. locis,—see on c.2. § 5. praefectos,—these were Roman commanders of allied (i.e. Gallie) troops. complures,—with civitates.

4. quo in numero,—'of these,' lit. 'in which number.' Curiosolitas,—the accus. plur. of Curiosolites. (RC.19.d. HF.274.) Venetos,—not to be confounded with the Veneti at the head of the Adriatic.

N.B.—Transitive use of ineo, § 1. [So always in Caesar in time phrases, e.g. inita aestate; but Cleero uses it intransitively, ineunte aestate.]

Caesar's jurisdiction and previous campaigns in Gaul. [See Introduction, § III.] Use of is, referring back, and of hic, looking forward or referring back. [RC.92.a.] Syntax of prox- imus, § 2. [Here used, as still oftener the adverb is used, with the acc. as though a preposition.] The accus. plur. of Decl. III. in ās, § 4. [Caesar often uses Greek endings in the declension of names of Gallic tribes.]

CAP. VIII.

1. Hujus est civitatis,—that just mentioned, viz. of the Veneti. Trans. ‘this state possesses (enjoys),’ lit. ‘is of (i.e. belongs to) this state.’ omnis,—genitive. orae maritimae,—‘sea-coast.’ (RC.81.b. HF.69.10.) earum,—viz. in that neighborhood.

et...et...et,—‘both...and...and.’ consnerunt,—see on c.1. § 2. scientia,—for the case see RC.85.d. ‘in skill and experience in (lit. as regards) seamanship.’

in magno, etc.,—lit. ‘in the great and open (i.e. unchecked) violence of the sea’; freely, ‘since the sea is very rough and also without shelter (open).’ pauca...interjectis,—‘as but a few harbors occur at intervals.’ (RC.85.o. HF.100.5.) quos,—i.e. portus. omnes...habent vectigales,—lit. ‘have all tributary’; freely, ‘force (oblige) all to pay tolls or tribute.’

2. Ab his fit initium,—‘these set an example,’ ‘take the first step’; lit.? initium retinendi, etc.,—a condensed expression for ‘example of seizing the envoys by seizing S. and V.’ Trans. freely, ‘by seizing.’ dedisserunt,—for the mood see RC.99.e. HF.206.4.

3. auctoritate addneti,—‘influenced by their example.’ ut,—‘as’; comparing their present with their usual conduct. Subita et repentina (lit. ‘quick and unexpected’) is the predicate. Trans. freely, ‘according to the usual custom of the Gauls to form resolutions rapidly and unexpectedly’; lit.?

per principes,—with conjurant. inter se conjurant,—lit. ‘take an oath together among themselves’; trans. ‘pledge themselves (by a joint oath).’

communi consilio,—‘by concerted action,’ lit. ‘by a

N.B.—Predicative gen. of possession, [Hujus est civitatis, §1. The order is against taking amplissima as the predicate.] Force of atque; [§1, twice. RC.101.b.i.] Here the use of the phrase inter se helps to explain the omission, which causes no ambiguity or lack of clearness.] Difference between aceperint, §4, and the common reading aceperant. [The latter would no longer be regarded as part of what the Gauls said, but an addition of the author's stating an historical fact; a very unlikely turn of expression in this case.] Use of suos and se, especially in §5. [Suam in an abl. absol. clause referring to the logical subject (i.e. the real agent) of its verb perducta; contrast missis ad eum legatis, c.1. §4, and N.B. For suos and sibi (both regularly used) see RC.91.ii.] Use of dat. sibi, not ad se, with remittat, §5. [The idea of giving back, (dat. of interest), predominates over that of sending back, (limit of motion).] Subjungetive in indirect narration for imperative of direct; [§5, remittat. See also N.B. to c.5. §3.]

9. The preparations on either side, and the difficulties of the campaign.

CAP. IX.

1. aberat,—from absum. longius,—App.10. ‘too far,’ i.e. too far to be able to attend to the matter in person. See c.7. § 1.

naves longas,—‘ships of war (galleys),’ lit. ‘long ships,’ in opposition to the merchant vessels and transports (naves onerariae) which were broader, and less swift.

quod,—takes its gender from flumine, not Ligere. institui, comparari,—the former of unskilled laborers, ‘to be organized (almost=trained),’ the latter of skilled seamen, ‘to be procured.’

2. cum primum,...potuit,—‘as soon as the time of year (the season) allowed,’ lit. ‘when first he could (do so) by means of, etc.’

3. cognito,—trans. by ‘as,’ not ‘when.’ simul,—‘(and) at the same time,’ ‘(and) also,’ connecting the two reasons cognito...adventu, and quod...conjectos.

intellegebant,—App.26.a.; so confidebant, sciebant, perspiciebant. in se admisissent,—‘they had committed,’ lit. ‘had admitted to themselves,’ i.e. allowed themselves to be guilty of. (RC.99.d. HF.176.2.)

legatos...retentos, etc.,—explaining facinus, and (with esse understood) depending on intellegebant; freely, ‘in detaining ambassadors,’ lit. ‘namely, that ambassadors... had been detained.’ quod nomen,—referring to legatos, trans. ‘a title which,’ or ‘whose title,’ lit.? Caesar dignifies these foraging-officers with the title of legati, seemingly that he may have a better pretext for the coming campaign. ad,—‘among.’ fuisset,—RC.99.e. HF.206.4.

hoc maiore spe,—‘and all the more confidently,’ lit. ‘their hope (being) greater by this (i.e. for this reason).’ For hoc see RC.85.g.ii. HF.58.6.; for spe see RC.85.o. HF.100.5. multum confidebant,—‘they trusted greatly.’ App.9. natura,—RC.85.k.iii.

4. Pedestrin...conclsa,—‘the land approaches were interrupted.’ impeditam,—understand esse. inscientiam,—‘our lack of acquaintance (with).’

5. neque,—‘and...not.’ dintus,—‘any length of time, (or very long),’ lit.? App.10.

6. ac jam ut...accidenter,—‘and even if in the end everything turned ... etc.’ (RC.99.i.ii. HF.196.7.) Ct here=‘although et granting that,’ a rare use in Caesar.

posse,—depending on confidebant, or rather on a verb of thinking to be understood from confidebant; so habere and novisse. plurimum posse,—‘were strongest.’ Romanos,—‘(while) the R.’ cornu...essent,—freely, ‘of the seat of war,’ lit.? novisse,—‘were (lit. had become) acquainted with.’

7. longe aliam,—‘far different.’ concluso mari,—meaning the Mediterranean. vastissimo,—trans. by positive, with or without ‘exceedingly.’ App. 10.

8. His consiliis,—those mentioned in §3.

9. ubi,—‘where,’ not ‘when.’ primum,—adv. constabat,—‘it was understood.’ quam plurimas possunt,—‘as many ships as possible (lit. as they can).’ (RC.88.b. HF.143.N.)

10. socios sibi,—‘as their allies,’ lit. ‘as allies for themselves.’ (RC.77. HF.83.2.) ad,—‘with a view to.’ posita est,—‘lies (is situated).’ This illustrates the reason Caesar gives in Bk.IV.c.20. for invading Britain—that ‘he knew that in almost all the wars with Gaul auxiliaries were furnished to the enemy from that country.’

N.B.—Idiomatic use of comparative with standard of comparison omitted. [longius, § 1; cf. saepius, c. 6, § 4. RC.88.b. BA.57.b.] Asyndeton in enumeration, § 1. Cum primum, § 2. [with indic. of point of time; less frequently, as in II.2, with imperf. subj. of period of time.] Use of per with possum, § 2. [So with licet. The absence of obstruction is regarded as assistance.] Use of ipse, when there is no change of subject, §§ 1.2. [RC.92,f.1v. BA.355.Obs.1.] Incorporation of antecedent in relative clause. [quod nomen, § 3.] Use of hoc anticipating a quod sentence, § 3. [So eo. This is found chiefly with comparatives, or words implying a comparison, (cf. superari, c. 4, § 3.); it seems in such cases to be an abl. of measure of difference, approaching, if not finally identical with, the abl. of cause.] Contrast emphasized by position and asyndeton. [Pedestria and navigatioem, § 4; se and Romanos, § 6.] Posses with future force, § 5. [Very common with verbs of hoping. RC.101.a.li. BA.91.] Use of quam possum with the superlative, § 9. [RC.88.b. HF.143.N. AG.93.b.] Various uses of ad.

10, 11. The reasons for undertaking so difficult a war. Troops are sent to keep other parts of Gaul quiet, while Caesar by land and Brutus by sea attack the Veneti.

CAP. X.

1. Erant,—‘existed.’ gerendi,—trans. by ‘in’; App.2.c. multa,—explained by the words injuria...arbitrarentur.
2. injuria retentorum, etc.,—‘the wrongful detention of R. knights,’ lit. ‘the wrong as regards the detained R. knights,’ i.e. ‘the wrong consisting in (or done by) detaining.’ [Most editions read injuriae, to be translated in the same way; the plur. referring to the several cases of seizure.] equitum,—the ‘knights,’ or members of the equestrian order (to which rank the tribuni militum generally belonged), were the second order in the state, coming after the ‘senators.’

facta,—may be omitted in trans. ne...arbitrarentur,—a substantival clause co-ordinate w. the preceding nominatives; ‘(the fear) lest...should think.’ (RC.99.a.1.ii. HF. 185.3.) neglecta,—trans. by ‘if.’ parte,—‘district or quarter.’ sibi idem licere,—‘they might do the same,’ lit.? 3. intellegeret,—‘knew.’ (RC.99.g.ii. HF.203.1.) novis rebus studere,—‘were fond of change.’ (RC.82.e. HF.105.9.) mobiliter,—i.e. on slight pretexts.

autem,—‘while.’ odisse,—trans. by English present, as stating a universal truth; so the second studere. For the defective verb odi, see RC.72.b. HF.145.1.

priusquam...conspiraret,—‘before...should (or could) join the conspiracy.’ (RC.99.f.iv. HF.201.5.) partiendum,—understand esse; App.41. sibi,—RC.82.d. HF.173.4.

N.B.—Emphatic position of erant, [really existed, were actually present], and of tamen [which gains strength from being so far from its usual place; cf.c.9. §6.] Asyndeton in enumeration, §2. [cf.c.9 §1.]

AG.292.a.] Facta used with rebellio, but omitted (and not to be understood) with injuria, defectio, and conjuratio, §2. [This is because of the addition of post deditioinem, the connecting of nouns with nouns by prepositions being very restricted in Latin.]

Intellego=scio, §3, ['know' rather than 'perceive'; so only in pres. and imperf. tenses.] Use of priusquam with subjunctive of purpose; [denoting something to be prevented. RC.99.f.iv. HF. 201.5. BA.412.] Tense of incitabant, §1, and putavit, §3. [The imperf. of deliberation, the perf. of final resolve.]

CAP. XI.

1. equitatu,—‘some cavalry’; see § 3.
2. adeat,—trans. by infin. with ‘to’; so contineat and prohibeat. (RC.99.a.2.i. HF.181.3.) officio,—‘allegiance.’ The Belgae had submitted to Caesar in his campaign of the previous year; see Introduction, p. xii.

Germanos,—depends on prohibeat, not on contineat.
auxilio,—App.3.c.; freely, ‘to their aid,’ lit.? (RC.82.c. HF.134.1.) arcessiti,—understand esse, ‘to have been called in.’ per vim,—‘forcibly (by force).’ conentur,—trans. by ‘should.’ (RC.99.h.iii. HF.209.2.)

3. legionariis,—not implying that Caesar had any other cohorts than those of the legions, but in contrast to the cavalry, who were native auxiliaries, while the legions were from the Roman provinces. Introduction, p. xvi.

ne...mittantur,—App.29.a.; so conjungantur. (RC.99.a. 1. HF.183.2.) his nationibus,—i.e. of Aquitania. Galliam,—see the Vocabulary for the various meanings. tantae nationes,—i.e. the Galli and the Aquitani. There was so little intercourse between them that there was no justification, except perhaps ignorance, for Caesar’s action.

4. qui...curet,—trans. by infin. with ‘to.’ App.29.a. (RC.99.a.1. HF.184.1.) eam...curet,—‘see that that body of troops was kept at a distance,’ lit. ‘kept apart,’ not from each other, but from the Veneti.

5. adolescentem,—cf.c.7. § 2. classi praeficit,—‘he puts in command of,’ etc. (RC.82.e. HF.120.1.) pacatis,—‘friendly or subject,’ lit.?

cum primum posset,—cf.c.9. § 2.; for the mood see RC. II.214.a.2. HF.206.4. eo,—i.e. in Venetos; adv. pedestribus copiis,—‘with the land-forces.’ (RC.85.e.i.)

N.B.—Syntax of proximus, § 1. [See N.n. to c.7. With the adj. the dat. is the usual constr.] Subjunctive after mandat, § 2. ## CAP. XII.

1. eiusmodi fere,—‘for the most part such.’ situs,— trans. by sing. The plur. refers (according to Latin usage) to the several towns. posita,—‘being situated (situated as they were); it agrees with oppida supplied from oppidorum. extremis, etc.,—‘the ends (extremities, points) of, etc.’ (RC.88.c.)

pedibus,—RC.85.a. HF.71.3. aditum haberent,—‘were accessible,’ lit.? (RC.99.b. HF.187.2.) cum,—‘whenever.’ quod,—‘which,’ referring to the whole clause, cum...incitavisset. semper,—may be rendered by ‘every,’ lit.? spatio,—‘in the space.’ (RC.85.b. HF.82.2.)

quod,—‘because.’ minuente,—App.5.a.N.; trans. ‘when ... was ebbing.’ afflictarentur,—trans. by ‘would be.’ (RC.98.c.)

2. utraque re,=‘by both circumstances or in either case.’
3. ac si quando,—‘and even if at times (or, more freely, and even when).’ operis,—‘of the siege-works,’ explained by extruso...adaequatis. superati,—‘being overmatched,’ agreeing with the subject (Veneti understood) of cooperant.

extruso, adaequatis,—trans. by ‘when’ clause. App. 5.a. his,—i.e. aggere ac molibus, not w. moenibus, which is dat. moenibus adaequatis,—‘built as high as (raised to the height of) the walls,’ lit. ‘made equal to the walls.’

suis...desperare,—‘to despair of (lit. lose hope for) their chances of success.’ For the dat. see RC.82.b.

appulso,—trans. by clause co-ordinate with deportabant. cujus rel,—‘of which,’= quarum. [This is also taken as objective gen. ‘for which operation.’] facultatem,—according to the translation of cujus rei, either ‘abundance’ or 'facilities.' deportabant,—trans. by 'would'; App.26.c.; so recipiebant and defendebant.

4. Isdem,—cf. on c.3. § 3. opportunitatibus loci,—'advantages of position.'

5. eo facilius,—'the more easily,' lit. 'more easily by this (for this reason);' cf. on hoc, c.9. § 3. partem,—RC.83.c. HF.82.4.

summa,—with difficultas. vasto...portibus,—App.5.a. N. raris, etc.—'as there were few and indeed scarcely any (lit. almost no) harbors.'

N.B.—Position of erant, § 1. [The copula rarely begins a sentence; when it does it either emphasizes the fact stated (cf.c.10. § 1.), or is used (as in § 1. apparently), as the most general word in the clause, to serve as the introductory word in beginning to speak of a new topic, cf. Eng. 'now there was.']. Cum=whenever, with pluperfect subjunctive, § 1. [This is rare in classical Latin, where the indic. is the rule. Here it is probably due to attraction. RC.99.k. H.529.II. AG.342.] So-called potential subj.; [afflitterentur, § 1. This may be regarded as the apodosis of an incomplete conditional sentence; se. 'if they were to try to approach.' The imperfect tense is due to the thought of the whole sentence being referred to the past; 'the potential of past time.']. Use of tenses in § 3. [RC.II.204.a BA.192. AG.280.277.] Case constructions with despero. [Dat.; Abl. with de (more frequent in Caesar than in Cicero); Acc. (in Caesar only with perf. part. pass. in abl. absol.)] Eo with comparative anticipating a quod clause. [See N.n. to c.9. on hoc.] Abl. Absol. with adjective as quasi-predicate, § 5. quaeritis,—‘any’; from quivis.

4. transtra,—generally means the cross-benches for rowers, but the Veneti did not use oars in these vessels.
pedalibus in altitudinem,—‘a foot thick.’ confixa,—i.e. to the sides of the vessels. digitii pollicis crassitudine,—‘of the thickness of one’s thumb.’ (RC.85.c. HF.181.9.)

5. pro,—‘instead of.’

6. pelles,—i.e. rough hides. tenuiter confectae,—‘thinly dressed (worked thin).’ ejus usus inscientiam,—‘lack of acquaintance with its (i.e. lini) use.’ (RC.81.d.)

eo...quod,—‘for this reason...that.’ impetus ventorum,—‘violent winds,’ lit.? sustineri, regi,—depend on posse, which has a different subject in the two cases. tanta onera navium,—‘such heavy vessels,’ lit.? non satis commodo,—‘not very easily.’

7. congressus,—a noun. Trans. ‘an engagement between these ships and our fleet was such,’ lit. ‘an engagement with these ships was to our fleet of such a nature.’

una celeritate,—‘in speed alone.’ (RC.85.d.) prae-startet,—‘it (i.e. our fleet) had the advantage.’ (RC.99.b. HF.187.2.)

reliqua,—‘all else.’ pro,—‘considering (or in view of).’ Replace the second pro in trans. by ‘and.’ illis,—femibine, referring to navibus; ‘for them,’ that is, the enemy’s ships; emphatic by contrast. accommoda*tora,—‘more convenient.’

8. Neque,—‘not.’ his,—i.e. the ships just referred to in illis, § 7.; for the case see RC.82.e.i. HF.105.9. nostrae,—supply naves. rostro,—see Introduction, p. xxiii. in his,—freely, ‘their,’ lit.?

adliegebatur,—lit. ‘was thrown on them’; freely, ‘could reach them.’ minus commode,—‘not very well’; cf. non satis commode, § 6.

9. Accedebat ut,—with same force as accedebat quod, see note on o.2. § 5. With ut connect ferrent, consisterent and timerent. (RC.99.b. HF.187.2.) se vento deditissent,—‘they (i.e. the ships) ran before the wind,’ lit.?

et...et,—‘both...and.’ In vadis consisterent,—‘rode in shallow water’; others, not so well, translate ‘grounded on the shoals.’ ab aestu relictæ,—‘when -left (stranded) by the tide.’ nihil,—‘not at all or not in the least.’

quarum rerum omnium...easus,—lit. ‘the [happening] (or the risk) of all which things’; trans. freely, ‘while in all those respects...an accident (mishap).’ navibus,—trans. by ‘by.’ (RC.82.d. HF.178.4.) erat extimescendus,—‘was to be, etc.’; more forcible than erat timendus.

N.B.—Absence of principal verb in §§ 1-6. [The passage is in the nature of an inventory or catalogue.] The phrase quam nostrarum navium, § 1. [Eng. would supply ‘the keels’ or ‘those’; Latin does not repeat a word common to both members of a comparative clause when it would be in the same case in each. The use of a pronoun with a genitive in such cases is also contrary to the Latin idiom. RC.II.188. BA.945.] Quo with the subj. of purpose, § 1. ## CAP. XIV.

1. ubi intellexit,—‘perceiving,’ tantum,—‘all this,’ lit. ‘so great.’ neque,—‘and neither,’ cf. c.3. §2. captis,—trans. by ‘after’; App.5.a. reprimi, noceri posse,—trans. by active ‘that he could,’ etc., lit.? Or if the passive is kept, ‘that no harm could be done them.’ Its noceri,—for the dative and impersonal passive see RC.82.e.iii.; 96.b. HF.164.1. App.8.b.; 24. exspectandam,—understand esse. Trans. ‘that he would have to, etc.’

2. ubi primum,—‘as soon as,’ lit.? visa est,—‘was caught sight of.’ ducentae viginti,—connect by ‘and.’ (RC.58.b. HF.68.6.) eorum,—‘of theirs.’ paratissimae,—‘fully equipped.’ ornatissimae,—‘finely furnished.’ armorum,—‘tackling.’ nostris,—understand navibus.

3. neque...vel,—‘but neither...nor.’ satis Bruto ... constabat,—‘B... was quite certain,’ lit.? singulae,—‘individual,’ opposed to classi. quid agerent,—‘what to do,’ lit. ‘what they were to do’; so insisterent. (RC.98.b. HF.189.a.) rationem...insisterent,—‘plan...to adopt.’

4. restro,—abl. not dat. noceri non posse,—‘no injury could be inflicted (or no harm done),’ lit.? cf. on § 1. eognoverant,—in previous unimportant engagements, cf. c.13. §8.

turribus autem excitatis,—‘while even when towers were built,’ i.e. on the Roman vessels. has,—i.e. turres. ex,—‘on,’ lit. ‘on the side of.’ superabat,—‘overtopped.’

ut,—‘so that’; so in §§ 7.8. neque,—‘not.’ satis commode,—see on c.18. § 6. possent,—RC.99.b. HF.187.2. missa,—‘those hurled.’

5. Una,—‘only one,’ emphatic from position. magnus usul,—App.3.c. (RC.82.c. HF.134.1.)

non absimili forma, etc.,—‘of a shape not unlike that

6. His cum,—‘when (whenever) by means of these.’ adnucti,—‘pulled to (drawn taut).’ navigio...praerumpabantur,—‘the boat would be...and the ropes snapped.’ App.26.c.

7. cum,—‘since or as.’ navibus,—trans. by ‘for.’ (RC.82.f.i. HF.184.2.) consisteret,—‘rested on (depended on).’ his,—i.e. the antennae. usus,—‘usefulness.’ uno tempore,—‘at once,’ referring to omnis, (better than ‘at the same time,’ referring to his erectis). eriperetur,—‘was lost (was gone).’

8. erat positum in,—‘depended on’; cf.e.5. § 3. qua,—‘in which.’ (RC.85.d.) superabant,—‘were superior.’

eo magis,—‘all the more,’ ‘the more so,’ lit.? cf.e.12. § 5. res,—‘the action or fight.’ ut nullum, etc.,—‘so that no deed of unusual bravery, etc., lit. ‘a little braver (i.e. than usual).’ (RC.88.b.)

9. unde,—‘from which.’ propinquus...mare,—‘a near view over the sea.’

N.B.—Passive of verbs governing dat. [noceri, §§ 1.4. RC.II.57. HF. 161.1. BA.5.217.] Combination of numerals. The deliberative subjunctive, § 3. ## CAP. XV.

1. ut,—'as.' cum singulas, etc.,—'whenever two or (lit. and again) three ships had surrounded one of the enemy's.' summa vi,—'with all their might, (with the utmost vigor).' (RC.85.e.) contendeabant,—trans. by 'would'; App.26.c.

2. Quod,—subject of fieri. expugnatis, etc.,—trans. by 'as,' and replace cum by 'and.' ei rei...noxillum,—'remedy for (or against) this'; ei rei means the capture of the vessels. fuga,—trans. by 'in.'

3. in eam partem quo,—'in the direction in which,' lit.? ferebat,—intransitive; 'was blowing.' malacis,—a foreign word (Greek) made more definite by the addition of tranquillitas. exstitit,—'came.' se ex loco movere,—'stir from the spot,' lit.?

4. res,—'circumstance.' quidem,—can be rendered only by emphasizing 'this.' maxime opportuna ad,—'most favorable for.' negotium,—'engagement.'

5. interventu,—RC.85.b. HF.82.1. pervenerint,—for the mood and tense see RC.II.39.

cum...pugnaretur,—'for the fight lasted'; App.24. For the voice see RC.98.b. HF.164.2. hora quarta,—The time from sunrise to sunset was divided into twelve equal periods, called horae or 'hours,' though in the summer the hora would be longer than our hour, and in the winter shorter.

N.B.—Use of distributive numerals, §§ 1.5. [RC.58.c. HF.69.8.a. H.174.2. AG.95.] Force of tenses. [Note esp. circumstetabant (cf.c.14. § 6.); contendeabant as compared with contenderunt; possent and pervenerint in clause of result, (RC.II.39. BA.113. AG.287.c.); and pugnaretur (cf.e.5. § 1.)] Use of relative adverbs in place of rel. pronoun with a prep. [quo, § 3.=in quam; cf. unde, c.14. § 9.=ex quibus, and ubi, c.4. § 4.=in quo. So also eo and ibi=demonstr. pron with prep.]

Division of day and night among the Romans. Ablative of manner. [summa vi, § 1.] Difference between movere and Eng. 'move,' § 3.

16. The survivors of the nation on surrendering are severely punished by Caesar by way of example.

CAP. XVI.

1. Venetorum,—trans. by ‘with’ or ‘against.’
2. cum...tum,—‘not only...but also.’ gravioris ac-tatis,—‘more advanced in years,’ lit. ‘of more advanced age.’ (RC.81.e. HF.130.7.)

In quibus, etc.,—‘who possessed some judgment and rank,’ lit. ‘in whom there was something of, etc.’ For the gen. see RC.81.b. HF.69.10.; so navium.

navium quod, etc.,—‘all the ships they had had anywhere,’ lit. ‘what (or whatever) of ships there had been anywhere.’

3. quibus amissis, etc.,—‘when these were lost the survivors had neither any place to which to retreat, nor any means of defending (or by which to defend) their towns.’

quibus,—i.e. navibus. quo...quemadmodum...habebant,—lit. ‘had neither whither to...nor how to...’ (RC. 99.a.i. HF.184.1.) [Another way of rendering is to translate habebant by ‘knew,’ the subj. being like agerent, c.14. § 3.]

4. In quos...vindicandum,—‘that these were to be punished’; understand esse; impersonal passive, App.24. eo gravius quo,—‘the more severely that.’ conservaretur,—RC.99.a. HF.189.5.

sub corona,—‘at auction,’ lit. ‘under the garland.’ Prisoners of war sold as slaves by auction wore garlands on their heads during the sale. There is perhaps some connection with the garlanding of animals offered for sacrifice.

N.B.—Use of cum...tum=‘both...and,’ ‘not only...but also,’ § 2. [In this usage cum has no effect on the mood of the verb.] Partitive genitive after neuter. [RC.81.b.i. BA.294.] Relative clauses of purpose, § 3. [RC.99.a.i. H.497.1. AG.317. Non habeo is also followed by interrogative clauses (dubitatively question) such as in c.14. § 3.] Eo anticipating a clause of purpose, § 4. ## CAP. XVII.

1. Sabinus,—see c.11. § 4.
2. his...ac,—freely, ‘these were governed by V., who,’ lit.? summam imperii,—‘the supreme command (or chief authority) over,’ lit. ‘the chief part of the command’; so in § 7.

exercitum, copias,—the former a regular (lit. trained) army, the latter irregular (unorganized and untrained) forces. Copias cannot mean ‘supplies,’ judging from c.18. § 6.; moreover elsewhere Caesar always uses copias cogere of troops. [It is just possible that -que may be explanatory= ‘consisting of,’ as in § 4. and c.3. § 1.]

3. atque,—‘moreover,’ adding something important. his panceis diebus,—‘within the last few days,’ i.e. after Sabinus’ arrival. (RC.85.b.iii. HF.82.2.) Auterel Eburovices,—but one tribe; see Vocabulary.

auctores,—not ‘authors,’ but ‘approvers’; trans. ‘to approve of (sanction, consent to.)’ nolebant,—understand as subject senatores from senatu. se...conjunxerunt,—‘joined V.’ lit.?

4. undique ex Gallia,—‘from all parts of G.’; lit.? bellandi,—App.2.c. revocabat,—‘drew away’; not on this occasion only (as the tense shows, App.26.a.) but habitually.

5. omnibus rebus,—‘in all respects,’ lit. ‘by means of all things.’ idoneo loco,—‘being in a suitable place’; (RC.85.k.) castris sese tenebat,—‘remained in the camp,’ lit. ‘confined himself by means of the camp’; (RC.85.a.ii.g. HF.71.8.)

cum,—‘although.’ For subj. see RC.99.i.iii. HF.204.5.

duum millium spatio,—‘at a distance of only two miles.’ For duum=duorum, cf. RC.48.c.; with millium understand passuum; for spatio see RC.85.g. HF.58.6. faceret,—‘gave.’

ut Jam,—‘so that by this time.’ hostibus, etc.,—‘was beginning to incur the enemy’s contempt,’ lit.? Cf.c.6. § 2. in spem venerant; for hostibus (here=in the eyes of the enemy) see RC.82.f. HF.184.2. nonnihil,—‘to some extent.’

6. tantam opinionem praebuit,—‘created so strong an impression.’ Jam,—‘at length.’

7. Id,—‘this,’ referring to castris sese tenebat, § 5. fælebat,—for the tense see App.26.a.iv. eo absente...teneret,—‘in the absence of the commander-in-chief,’ i.e. Caesar; lit.? App.5.a.N. teneret,—RC.99.e. HF.206.4.

nisi aequo loco...non,—‘only on favorable ground,’ lit.? legato,—see RC.82.d. HF.173.4. dimicandum,—understand esse. App.41.

N.B.—Dum=‘while,’ with present tense even in connection with past time. [Commonly explained as an instance of the historical pres. RC.II.173. HF.201.3. BA.180. H.467.III.4. AG.276.e.] The perfect in § 3. coming between the pluperfects in §§ 2. and 4. [The pluperfects refer to what has occurred before Sabinus’ arrival; the statement of this is interrupted for a moment to tell of an increase in Viridovix’ forces occurring at the time of Sabinus’ arrival; this is put in the tense used in speaking of his arrival.] The phrase his paucis diebus, § 3. [Time within which. His regularly refers to the time of the speaker, but here to the time of Sabinus’ arrival just spoken of.] Difference between conjungo, § 4. and ‘join.’

Tense of revocabat, § 4. Ablative of place, §§ 5.7. The syntax of mille, and the phrases mille passus, millia passuum. [RC.58.f. HF.68.5. H.178. AG.91.e.] The word passum is seldom omitted in Caesar, except after the gen. millium, as in § 5.]

Dative of reference. [hostibus, § 5.] Tense of faciebat and existimabat, § 7. Dative of apparent agent. Mood of teneret, § 7. [Part of Sabinus’ thought. 3. Qui ubi...venit,—‘this man, coming,’ lit.? quibus...prematur,—depending on docet; premere=‘to beset.’

4. neque longius abesse quin...educat,—also depending on docet; ‘and that not later than...will lead out;’ more literally, ‘and that Sabinus’ leading out his army on the next night is not farther off.’ educat, proleseatur,—RC.99.b.1.

5. negotii bene gerendi,—App. 40. ‘of successfully carrying out their enterprise.’ ire oportere,—‘they must go’; understand se as subj. of ire. [Some editions read iri, App. 24.]

6. res,—‘considerations,’ explained by the four nouns following (in apposition) and the quod clause. Cf. for the structure of the sentence, c.10. §§ 1.2.

superiorum...cunctatio,—‘Sabinus’ delay on the previous days.’ For Sabini see RC.81.c.; for dierum, RC.81.e. HF.130.7.

cui rei, etc.,—‘for which they had not made arrangement with sufficient care;’ cf.c.3. § 1. belli,—App.2.c. ‘founded on the war.’ quod,—‘the fact that.’ volunt,—i.e. credere.

7. non prius...dimittunt quam,—‘they do not let...go until,’ lit. ‘at an earlier time than.’ Prius quam are often written as one word. ab his sit concessum,—App.24.; trans. ‘they give them permission.’ RC.99.f.iv. HF.201.5. capiant,—EC.99.a.2. HF.181.3.

8. Qua re concessa,—‘on this permission being given,’ lit.?

ut explorata victoria,—‘as if victory were certain,’ lit. ‘as (they would have rejoiced) victory being assured.’ App.5.a. (RC.85.o.) quibus compleant,—trans. by inf. with ‘to.’ App.29.b. (RC.99.a.i. HF.181.1.); cf.c.16. § 3. fossas,—there would be but one trench in reality, but the trench on each of the four sides may be regarded as a separate fossa.

N.B.—Difference between quidam and aliquis, §1. [The former unspecified, and unnecessary that it be specified, though it need not be indefinite to the writer; the latter indefinite and unnecessary that it be definite. RC.95.1.iii.] Relative and substantival clauses of purpose. [§§ 2.7. and 8.] Subjunctive of indirect question. [§§ 2. and 3.] Use of oportet, § 5. Priusquam and ut [Junctive, § 7. [Here, as generally, the subj. expresses the end k. t. in view.]

Emphatic position of arma, § 7. [Show the priority of the emphasis.] The phrase ut explorata victoria, § 8. [Equivalent to a clause with ut si, the si clause being replaced by a conditional abl. absol.] Historical present, with primary sequence of tenses, §§ 7.8.

CAP. XIX.

1. passus mille,—App.4.d. (RC.83.c. HF.69.9.) magnocursu,—‘at full speed.’ (RC.85.e. HF.71.3.) ut,—‘so that.’ quam minimum spatii,—‘as little time as possible.’ exanimatique,—‘and so...breathless, (or out of breath.)’

cipientibus,—dative, with eis (i.e. suis) understood, and depending on dat. Trans. freely, ‘who were all et cetera’ as though it went with suis.

2. portis,—those on each side of the camp (cf. Introduction, p. xix., xx.), so that they would not only be resisted at the ramparts in front, but be assailed on each flank. For the ease cf.c.6. § 1.

3. Factum est opportunitate, etc.,—‘the result of the favorable position...was, etc.’ lit. ‘it was brought about by, etc.’ pugnarum exercitacione,—‘practice gained in or training of, etc.’ unum,—‘a single,’ with impetum. ne...ferrerent,—‘did not stand.’ ac,—we may trans. by ‘but’ in such a case.

4. Quos impeditos,—depending on consecuti. integris viribus,—causal abl. absol. with consecuti; cf.c.4. § 2. Trans. freely, ‘as they were hampered, (or these, hampered as they were) our men, whose strength was fresh, followed and slew, etc.’ equites,—nom. paukos qui,—‘only a few of those who.’

5. uno,—‘one and the same,’ ‘the same.’ Sabinus,—understand certior factus est, which then need not be translated after Caesar. Titurio,—i.e. Sabinus.

6. ut...sic,—‘as...so,’ more freely, ‘while...yet.’ animus,—‘spirit,’ referring to impulses. mens,—‘resolution,’ referring to determination of purpose. minime resistens,—‘incapable of steadfastness.’

N.B.—Use of se referring to a word which is not the subject of the clause. [§ 1. Romanis. This in Caesar is chiefly in familiar reflexive formulas, cf.e.4. § 4. and e.6. § 1. RC.91.iii. [See also c.18.] Use of quam with superlative, § 1. [cf.e.9. § 9. with possum.] Difference between English and Latin usage in the position of a verb common to two parallel clauses. [§ 5. In English placed with the first clause and understood with the second; in Latin repeatedly, if not generally, placed with the second, the sense of the first being held in suspense until both can be completed at once.]

Chap. 20-27.—The war with the Aquitani.

20, 21. Crassus, entering the country of the Sontiates, after a hard fought battle, attacks their chief town and takes it.

CAP. XX.

1. P. Crassus,—see c.11. § 3. cum...pervenisset,—‘on reaching,’ depending on cum intellegeret, ‘understanding.’ ante,—in Bk.I.e.1., where we read: ‘Gaul as a whole is divided into three parts; one inhabited by the Belgae, another by the Aquitani, the third by those called in their own tongue Celts, i. ours Gauls.’

et regionum, etc.,—‘both in extent of territory and number of inhabitants.’ (RC.85.d.) ex tertia parte,—can only be translated, ‘as a third part’; but the form of expression cannot be paralleled or satisfactorily explained. Caesar’s geographical statements are often incorrect, as is the case here.

sibi...gerendum,—understand esse; so adhibendam. paucis ante annis,—22 years before, in the war with Sertorius, the leader of a revolt in Spain. For the abl. see RC.85.g.i. HF.58.6. Interfectus esset, profugisset,—RC.99.e. HF.206.4. non mediocrem,—‘no slight.’

2. comparato,—agreeing with the nearer of the two words it goes with. Tolosa,—‘from T.’ depending on evocatis. (RC.85.h.i. HF.85.2.)

Galliae provinciae,—in apposition. finitimae,—with civitates. evocatis,—often (and perhaps here) of inviting back to service veterans who had received their discharge.

3. equitatu,—also with coactis. quo plurimum vale-

CAP. XXI.

1. Pugnatum est,—App.24. (RC.96.b. HF.164.2.) cum,—‘since or for.’ victorilis,—those referred to in c.20. § 1. (RC.85.k.iii. HF.61.4.) positam,—understand esse. putarent,—RC.99.g.ii. HF.208.1.

autem,—‘while.’ quid... possent,—RC.99.d. HF.176.2. reliquis legionibus,—what forces had Crassus? cf. c.11. § 3. adolescentulo duce,—‘under the leadership of a mere youth,’ lit. ‘a youth (being) leader.’ App.5.a.N. (RC.85.o. HF.102.3.N.) perspici,—its subject is quid... possent; trans. freely by act. ‘were anxious to show,’ lit.?

vertere,= verterunt (RC.66.), a form rarely occurring in Caesar. Others read it as vertire, an historical infin., but this seems out of place here, (see N.B. to c.4.)

2. ex Itinere,—‘on the march,’ i.e. turning aside from his march. resistentibus,—App.5.a.N. Trans. by ‘when’ or ‘since.’ vineas,—see Introduction, p. xxii. egit,—‘brought up,’ i.e. to the walls; from ago.

3. Illi,—App.18.b. temptata, actis,—trans. by principal clauses; supply ‘but’ in trans. before ubi... intellexerunt.

ejus rei,—‘in which,’ App.2.c. (RC.81.f.i.) multis locis,—RC.85.k. apud,—‘among.’ secturae,—another reading is structurae, to be translated in the same way, but referring rather to the props and galleries than to the excavations.

diligentia,—‘on account of the alertness.’ (RC.85.m. HF.71.3.) ut se... recipiat,—‘accept their surrender, (submission),’ lit.? (RC.99.a.2. HF.181.3.)

impetrata, jussi,—‘on gaining this request and being ordered.’ facient,—‘they do so’; freely, ‘they obey.’

N.B.—The impersonal passive use of intrans. verbs, § 1. [RC.98.b. HF. 161.2. BA.217. II.301.1. AG.146.c.] The local ablative; (literally, multis locis, § 3.; figuratively, victoriis, § 1.) Abl. absol. with noun as quasi-predicate, § 1. Dependent clause introduced by interrogative word, § 1. [Subj. of indirect question, but found after many other verbs than those of asking.] Difference between in itinere (c.20. § 3.), and ex itinere, § 2. [The former=while still on the march; the latter=turning aside from the march, but not stopping to fortify a camp or set up regular siege-works.] The phrase alias-alias, § 3. [In classical authors, of time, not place.] Abl. of cause, [diligentia, § 3.] Cujus rei and qua re referring to a whole clause, § 3. Use of eos and se of same persons, § 3. Difference between operator and dux. [The former the Roman commander-in-chief, formally invested with military power, the latter not a military title, but used of any leader of any body of troops.]

22. An attempt to escape on the part of some of the citizens who had surrendered is frustrated.

CAP. XXII.

1. Atque,—‘now,’ introducing something new and noteworthy; cf. ac, c.15. § 3. intentis animis,—‘while the attention was engrossed with,’ ‘while the minds were intent on.’ App.5.a. summam imperii,—cf.c.17. § 2.

devotis,—‘devoted followers,’ pledged by a solemn oath. illi,—App.18. soldarios,—the native term (of unknown derivation) of the devoti; to be retained untranslated, but in the nom. case.

3. memoria,—‘within the memory.’ repertus est,— trans. by ‘has.’ eo interfecto, etc.,—‘on the death of the one to whose friendship.’ qui...recusaret,—‘who...would refuse.’ (RC.99.c. HF.188.4.5.)

4. cum his A.,—on account of the long parenthesis about the soldurii the subject is repeated, and cum his, ‘with these then,’ resumes cum sescentis devotis.

conatus...repulsus...impetravit,—trans. by three coby ‘and yet.’ App.37.a.N.B.

ab,—‘at.’ sublato,—trans. by ‘when.’ pugnatum

 Subjunctive with impetro ut. [It is impossible to class the subj. after verbs of effecting as either purely final (RC.99.a.2. HF.183.3. H.498. AG.381.) or purely consecutive (RC.99.b. HF.187.1. H.500. AG.392.) The negative, for example, has sometimes ne, and at other times ut non. With personal subjects the idea tends to that of the end in view, i.e. the subj. clause expresses the design, the verb of effecting, its accomplishment. This fluctuation illustrates the development of the consecutive subj., the idea of tendency suggesting that of result.]

23. The other tribes combine to defend themselves, and send for experienced troops from Spain to help them.

CAP. XXIII.

2. Tum vero,—‘then’; vero to be rendered only by the emphasis; so in § 5. et natura, etc.,—‘by its natural position and by art,’ lit.? oppidua...expugnatum,—understand esse.

pavcis diebus, etc.,—‘within a few days after his coming to it,’ lit. ‘within the few days, within which.’ ventum erat,—App.24. Inter se dare,—‘exchange.’ parare,—‘raise.’

3. quae sunt, etc.,—‘which belong to (lit. are of) hither S. (and are) next to A.’ or ‘border on A.’ The Cantabrians especially are meant. Hither Spain means northern Spain; finitimae is nom.

4. Quoram adventu,—‘on their arrival.’ Abl. of time (suggesting also the cause.) auctoritate,—‘prestige or impressiveness.’

5. Duces,—‘as generals,’ the predicate. (RC.79.c.1.) Sertorio,—the leader of a revolt in Spain from B.C. 80-72. omnes annos,—‘all along,’ lit. ‘all the years,’ i.e. of the revolt. que,—‘and so’; cf. c.19. § 1.

6. consuetudine,—‘according to the custom.’ (RC.85.c. HF.71.3.) The Gauls were always negligent in such matters, while Sertorius, who was a Roman and had many Romans in his army, had introduced the Roman methods of warfare.

CAP. XXIV.

1. productis,—trans. by principal clause followed by ‘and.’ duplici ncie instituta,—‘drawing up a double line,’ i.e. two cohorts deep. His troops were too few for the usual triplex acies. medium aciem,—‘the centre.’ The reason for this can be gathered from c.25. § 1.

quid consiliis,—App.2.d. caperent,—trans. by means of ‘would,’ the future reference being required by exspectabat. (RC.99.d. HF.176.2.) exspectabat,—‘waited to see.’

2. III,—App.18. belli,—trans. by ‘in.’ App.2.c. tutio, tutius,—the former an adv., the latter an adj. obsessis, intercluso,—trans. by infin. with ‘to,’ co-ordinate with potiri. sine ulla vulnera,—‘without a blow,’ or ‘bloodless,’ lit.?

3. sese recipere,—i.e. from Aquitania. impeditos, etc.,—‘them, while hampered when on the march and bearing their packs.’ infirmiore animo,—had better be omitted; if kept, trans. ‘(and so) less spirited.’ (RC.85.c. HF.181.9.) cogitabant,—‘intended or were planning.’

4. a duabus,—with probato. productis,—trans. by ‘although.’ castris, etc.,—see on c.17. § 5.

5. sua,—refers to hostes the subject of effecissent. opinione timoris,—‘the impression of fear (they had created).’ cf. c.17. § 6.

omnium,—freely, ‘on all sides,’ lit.? exspectari...iretur,—‘that they should not delay any longer going to the camp,’ lit. ‘that there ought not to be waiting, so that there would not be going’; for exspectari and iretur see App.24. (RC.96.b. HF.164.2.); for quin cf. on c.23. § 7.

29. The season for campaigning closes before anything effective can be done.

CAP. XXIX.

1. Reliquis, etc.,—‘during the remaining days that followed.’ Reliquis, because the summer (the time for campaigning) was nearly over, (c. 28. § 1.) Instituit,—‘proceeded.’ silvas eadere,—i.e. to cut a broad road through the forest.

ne quis,—with impetus, ‘that no,’ lit.? militibus,—abl. absol.; trans. by ‘while.’ ab,—‘on.’ posset,—‘might.’ (RC. 99. a. 1. HF. 183. 2.)

materiam,—‘timber.’ conversam ad,—‘facing,’ lit.? The trees felled were piled on each side of the road, with the branches cut away next the road, but left on the side next the forest. collocabat,—‘placed or arranged.’ App. 26. c. pro,—‘as.’ ad,—‘on.’

2. cum jam,—‘just as,’ or more lit. ‘when now at length.’ extrema impedimenta,—‘the rear of the baggage,’ lit. ‘the hindmost baggage.’ tenerentur,—‘were being seized,’ or more freely, ‘were getting within reach.’ ipsi,—the enemy in person, as contrasted with their baggage and cattle. Supply ‘while’ as connective.

continuazione imbrium,—‘because of the incessant rains,’ lit.? (RC. 85. m. HF. 71. 3.) dilutius,—‘(any) longer.’ sub pellibus,—‘under canvas, or in tents,’ lit. ‘under hides,’ with which the tents used in summer were covered.

3. In,—‘among.’ reliquis item,—‘and the other...also’; what states are meant?

N.B.—Abl. of time within which, §§ 1. and 2.      Quis=any, § 1. [Cf. N.B. to c.22, § 2. Notice that here quis is used as an adj.; as in Bk.I. c.48, § 6. we find st quis used substantively.]      Accumulation of ablatives of three different kinds in § 2. [Cf. Bk.IV.c.4, § 5.]
 Asyndeton with ipsi, § 2., and with item, § 3. [With the former it is the rule in Caesar, but cf.c.1. § 1.; with the latter et or -que is generally found, cf.c.9, § 3.]      Imperfect tense with intermitteretur, § 2. [Many editors say this is to express the idea of constant interruptions, and that the perf. would have been used of a complete cessation of work. The difference however between the perf. and the imperf. subj. in consecutive clauses is so slight (the imperf. being the favorite tense), that there is room for doubt.]      The causal abl. [continuatione, § 2.; cf. also c.21, § 3.]      Et non, § 2. [cf. ac non, c.25, § 1. The almost invariable rule is to connect two co-ordinate sentences (or two similar phrases) of which the second contains a negative, by neque (cf.c.4, § 2., c.22, § 3. and c.28, § 3.) Exceptions occur chiefly where, as in c.25, the negative is closely connected with a single word (forming with it one idea), or where, as here, emphasis is gained by the use of non.]

C. JULII CÆSARIS
DE BELLO GALLICO.

Sueborum gens est longe maxima et bellicosissima<sup>3</sup> Germanorum cænium. Hi centum pagos habere dicuntur,<sup>4</sup> ex quibus quotannis singula millia armatorum bellandi causa ex finibus educunt. Relqui, qui domi manserunt,<sup>5</sup> se atque illos alunt. Hi rursus in vicem anno post in armis sunt, illi domi remanent. Sic neque agricultura<sup>6</sup> nec ratio atque usus belli intermittitur. Sed privati ac<sup>7</sup> separati agri apud eos nihil est, neque longius anno remanero uno in loco incolendi causa licet. Neque multum<sup>8</sup> frumento, sed maximam partem lacte atque pecore vivunt multumque sunt in venationibus; quae res et cibi genere<sup>9</sup> et quotidiana exercitacione et libertate vitae, cum a pueris nullo officio aut disciplina assuefacti nihil omnino contra voluntatem faciant, et vires alit et immani corporum

10 magnitudine homines efficit. Atque in eam se consuetudinem adduxerunt, ut locis frigidissimis neque vestitus praeter pelles haberent quicquam, quarum propter exiguitatem magna est corporis pars aperta, et lavarentur in fluminibus.

1 2. Mercatoribus est aditus magis eo, ut, quae bello ceperint, quibus vendant, habeant, quam quo ullam rem
2 ad se importari desiderent. Quin etiam jumentis, quibus maxime Galli delectantur, quaeque impenso parant pretio, Germani importatis non utuntur, sed quae sunt apud eos nata, parva atque deformia, haec quotidiana exercitatione
3 summi ut sint laboris efficiunt. Equestribus proeliis sene ex equis desiliunt ac pedibus proeliantur, equosque eodem remanere vestigio assuefecerunt, ad quos se celeriter, cum
4 usus est, recipiunt; neque eorum moribus turpius quicquam aut inertius habetur, quam ephippiis uti. Itaque ad quemvis numerum ephippiorum equitum quamvis pauci
6 adire audent. Vinum ad se omnino importari non siunt, quod ea re ad laborem ferendum remollescere homines atque effeminari arbitrantur.

1 3. Publice maximam putant esse laudem, quam latissime a suis finibus vacare agros: hac re significari magnum
2 numerum civitatum suam vim sustinere non posse. Itaque una ex parte a Suebis circiter millia passuum sexcenta agri
3 vacare dicuntur. Ad alteram partem succedunt Ubii, quorum fuit civitas ampla atque florens, ut est captus Germanorum, et paulo sunt ejusdem generis ceteris humaniores, propterea quod Rhenum attingunt, multumque ad eos mercatores ventitant, et ipsi propter propinquitatem Gallicis sunt moribus assuefacti. Suebi multis saepe bellis experti propter amplitudinem gravitatemque civitatis finibus expellere non potuissent, tamen vectigales sibi fecerunt, ac multo humiliores infirmioresque redegerunt.

4. In eadem causa fuerunt Usipetes et Tencteri, quos supra diximus, qui complures annos Sueborum vim sustinuerunt; ad extremum tamen agris expulsi et multis locis Germaniae triennium vagati ad Rhenum pervenerunt; quas regiones Menapii incolebant et ad utramque ripam fluminis agros, aedificia vicosque habebant; sed tantae multitudo inis adventu perterriti ex iis aedificiis, quae trans flumen habuerant, demigraverunt et cis Rhenum dispositis praesidiis Germanos transire prohibebant. Illi omnia experti cum neque vi contendere propter inopiam navium neque clam transire propter custodias Menapiorum possent, reverti se in suas sedes regionesque simulaverunt, et tridui viam progressi rursus reverterunt atque omni hoc itinere una nocte equitatu confecto inscios inopinantesque Menapios oppresserunt, qui de Germanorum discessu per exploratores certiores facti sine metu trans Rhenum in suos vicos remigraverant. His interfectis navibusque eorum occupatis, priusquam ea pars Menapiorum, quae citra Rhenum erat, certior fieret, flumen transierunt atque omnibus eorum aedificiis occupatis reliquam partem hemis se eorum copiis aluerunt.

5. His de rebus Caesar certior factus et infirmitatem Gallorum veritus, quod sunt in consiliis capiendis mobiles et novis plerumque rebus student, nihil his committendum existimavit. Est enim hoc Gallicae consuetudinis, uti et viatores etiam invitatos consistere cogant et, quid quisque eorum de quaque re audierit aut cognoverit, quaerant, et mercatores in oppidis vulgus circumsistat quibusque ex regionibus veniant quasque ibi res cognoverint, prouinciare cogant. His rebus atque auditionibus permoti de summis saepe rebus consilia ineunt, quorum eos in vestigio poenitere necesse est, cum incertis rumoribus serviant, et plerique ad voluntatem eorum ficta respondeant.

1. 6. Qua consuetudine cognita Caesar, ne gravior<sup>4</sup> bello occurreret, maturius, quam consuerat, ad exercitum proficisciatur. Eo cum venisset, ea quae fore suspicatus erat facta cognovit: missas legationes ab nonnullis civitatibus ad Germanos invitatosque eos, uti ab Rheno discederent, omniaque, quae postulassent, ab se fore parata. Qua spe adducti Germani latius vagabantur et in fines Eburorum et Condrusorum, qui sunt Treverorum clientes, pervenerant. 5 Principibus Galliae evocatis Caesar ea, quae cognoverat, dissimulanda sibi existimavit eorumque animis permulsiis et confirmatis equitatique imperato bellum cum Germanis gerere constituit.

1. 7. Re frumentaria comparata equitibusque delectis iter in ea loca facere coepit, quibus in locis esse Germanos audiebat. A quibus cum paucorum dierum iter abesset, legati ab his venerunt, quorum haec fuit oratio: Germanos neque priores populo Romano bellum inferre nequo tamen recusare, si laccessantur, quin armis contendant, quod Germanorum consuetudo sit a majoribus tradita, quicumque bellum inferant, resistere neque deprecari. Haec tamen dicere, venisse invitos, ejectos domo; si suam gratiam Romani velint, posse iis utiles esse amicos; vel sibi agros attribuant vel patiantur eos tenere, quos armis possederint: sese unis Suebis concedere, quibus ne dii quidem immortales pares esse possint; reliquum quidem in terris esse neminem, quem non superare possint.

8. Ad haec quae visum est Caesar respondit ; sed exitus<sup>1</sup> fuit orationis : Sibi nullam cum his amicitiam esse posse, si in Gallia remanerent ; neque verum esse, qui suos fines<sup>2</sup> tueri non potuerint, alienos occupare ; neque ullos in Gallia vacare agros, qui dari tantae praesertim multitudini sine injuria possint ; sed licere, si velint, in Ubiorum<sup>3</sup> finibus considerare, quorum sint legati apud se, et de Sueborum injuriis querantur et a se auxilium petant : hoc se Ubiis imperaturum.

9. Legati haec se ad suos relatuos dixerunt et re deli-<sup>1</sup> berata post diem tertium ad Caesarem reversuros : interea ne propius se castra moveret, petierunt. Ne id quidem<sup>2</sup> Caesar ab se impetrari posse dixit. Cognoverat enim<sup>3</sup> magnam partem equitatus ab iis aliquot diebus, ante praedundi frumentandique causa ad Ambivaritos trans Mosam missam ; hos exspectari equites atque ejus rei causa moram interponi arbitrabatur.

10. Mosa profluit ex monte Vosego, qui est in finibus<sup>1</sup> Lingonum, et parte quadam ex Rheno recepta, quae appelllatur Vacalus, insulam efficit Batavorum, neque longius<sup>2</sup> ab eo millibus passuum octoginta in Oceanum influit.
Rhenus autem oritur ex Lepontiis, qui Alpes incolunt, et<sup>3</sup> longo spatio per fines Nantuatum, Helvetiorum, Sequanorum, Mediomaticum, Tribocorum, Treverorum citatus fertur et, ubi Oceano appropinquavit, in plures defluit<sup>4</sup> partes multis ingentibusque insulis effectis, quarum pars magna a feris barbarisque nationibus incolitur, ex quibus<sup>5</sup> sunt, qui piscibus atque ovis avium vivere existimantur, multisque capitibus in Oceanum influit.

11. Caesar cum ab hoste non amplius passuum duode-<sup>1</sup> cim millibus abesset, ut erat constitutum, ad eum legati

revertuntur ; qui in itinere congressi magnopere, ne longius <sup>2</sup> progrederetur, orabant. Cum id non impetrassent, pete-bant, uti ad eos equites, qui agmen antecessissent, praemitteret eosque pugna prohiberet, sibique ut rotesta<sup>3</sup> tem faceret in Ubios legatos mittendi ; quorum si principes ac senatus sibi jurejurando fidem fecisset, ea conditione, quae a Caesare ferretur, se usuros ostendebant : ad has <sup>4</sup> res conficiendas sibi tridui spatum daret. Haec omnia Caesar eodem illo pertinere arbitrabatur, ut tridui mora interposita equites eorum, qui abessent, reverterentur ;
 tamen sese non longius millibus passuum quatnor aquati-<sup>5</sup> onis causa processurum eo die dixit ; huc postero die quam frequentissimi convenirent, ut de eorum postulatis cognos-<sup>6</sup> eret. Interim ad praefectos, qui cum omni equitatu antecesserant, mittit, qui nuntiarent, ne hostes proelio lacerherentur, si ipsi lacerherentur, sustinerent, quoad ipse cum exercitu proprius accessisset.

 quorum erat quinque milium numerus, cum ipsi non amplius octingentos equites haberent, quod ii, qui frumentitandi causa ierant trans Mosam, nondum redierant, nihil timentibus nostris, quod legati eorum paulo ante a Caesare discosserant atque is dies induitiis erat ab his petitus,

Hic cum fratri intercluso ab hostibus auxilium ferret, illum ex periculo eripuit, ipse equo vulnerato dejectus, quondam potuit, fortissime restitutus: cum circumventus multis vulneribus acceptis cecidisset, atque id frater, qui jam proelio excesserat, procul animadvertisset, incitato se hostibus obtulit atque interfactus est.

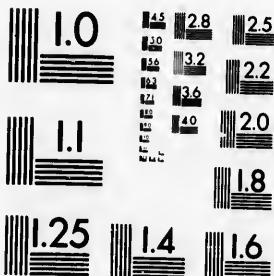

13. Hoc facto proelio Caesar neque jam sibi legatos audiendos neque conditiones accipiendas arbitrabatur ab iis, qui per dolum atque insidias petita pace ultra bellum intrulissent: exspectare vero, dum hostium copiae augentur equitatusque reverteretur, summae dementiae esse judicabat, et cognita Gallorum infirmitate, quantum jam apud eos hostes uno proelio auctoritatis essent consecuti, sentiebat; quibus ad consilia capienda nihil spatii dandum existimabat. His constitutis rebus et consilio cun legatis et quaestore communicato, ne quem diem pugnae praetermittaret, opportunissima res accidit, quod postridie ejus dici mane eadem et perfidia et simulatione usi Germani frequentes omnibus principibus majoribusque natu adhibitis ad eum in castra venerunt, simul ut dicebatur, sui purgandi causa, quod contra atque esset dictum et ipsi petissent, proelium pridie commisissent, simul ut, si quid possent, de induitiis fallendo impetrarent. Quos sibi Caesar ollatos gavisus illos retineri jussit, ipse omnes copias castris eduxit equitatumque, quod recenti proelio perterritum esse existimabat, agmen subsequi jussit.

discessu suorum, neque consilii habendi neque arma capiendi spatio dato, perturbantur, copiasne adversus hostem ducere, an castra defendere, an fuga salutem petere praestaret. Quorum timor cum fremitu et concursu significaretur, milites nostri pristini diei perfidia incitati in castra irruperunt. Quo loco qui celeriter arma capere potuerunt, paulisper nostris restiter int atque inter carros impedimentaque proelium commiserunt: at reliqua multitudine puerorum mulierumque (nam cum omnibus suis domo excesserant Rhenumque transierant) passim fugere coepit; ad quos consecrandos Caesar equitatum misit.

15. Germani post, tergum clamore auditio, cum suos interfici viderent, armis abjectis signisque militaribus relictis se ex castris ejecerunt, et cum ad confluentem Mosae et Rheni pervenissent, reliqua fuga desperata magno numero imperfecto reliqui se in flumen praecipitaverunt atque ibi timore, lassitudine, vi fluminis oppressi perierunt. Nostri ad unum omnes incolumes per pauc's vulneratis ex tanti belli timore, cum hostium numerus capitum quadringentorum triginta millium fuisset, se in castra receperunt. Caesar iis, quos in castris retinuerat, discedendi potestatem fecit. Illi supplicia cruciatusque Gallorum veriti, quorum agros vexaverant, remanere se apud eum velle dixerunt. His Caesar libertatem concessit.

16. Germanico bello confecto multis de causis Caesar statuit sibi Rhenum esse transeundum; quarum illa fuit justissima, quod, cum videret Germanos tam facile impelli, ut in Galliam venirent, suis quoque rebus eos timere voluit, cum intelligerent et posse et audere populi Romani exercitum Rhenum transire. conjunxerat. Ad quos cum Caesar nuntios misisset, qui postularent, eos, qui sibi Galliaeque bellum intulissent, sibi dederent, responderunt: Populi Romani imperium Rhenum finire: si se invito Germanos in Galliam transire non aequum existimaret, cur sui quicquam esse imperii aut potestatis trans Rhenum postularet? Ubii autem, qui uni ex Trausrhenanis ad Caesarem legatos miserant, amicitiam fecerant, obsides dederant, magnopere orabant, ut sibi auxilium ferret, quod graviter ab Suebis premerentur; vel, si id facere occupationibus reipublicae prohiberetur, exercitum modo Rhenum transportaret: id sibi ad auxilium speinque reliqui temporis satis futurum. Tantum esse nomen atque opinionem ejus exercitus Ariovisto pulso et hoc novissimo proelio facto etiam ad ultimas Germanorum nationes, uti opinione et amicitia populi Romani tuti esse possint. Navium magnam copiam ad transportandum exercitum pollicebantur.

17. Caesar his de causis, quas commemoravi, Rhenum transire decreverat; sed navibus transire neque satis tutum esse arbitrabatur, neque sua neque populi Romani dignitatis esse statuebat. Itaque, etsi summa difficultas facienda pontis proponebatur propter latitudinem, rapiditatem altitudinemque fluminis, tamen id sibi contendendum aut aliter non traducendum exercitum existimabat. Rationem pontis hanc instituit. Tigna bina sesquipedalia paulum ab imo praeacuta dimensa ad altitudinem fluminis intervallo pedum duorum inter se jungebat. Haec cum machinationibus immissa in flumen defixerat fistucisque adegerat, non sublicae modo directe ad perpendicularum, sed prone ac fastigate, ut secundum naturam fluminis procumberent, his item contraria duo ad eundem modum juncta intervallo pedum quadragennum ab inferiore parte contra vim atque impetum fluminis conversa statuebat. Haec utraque insuper bipedalibus trabibus immissis, quantum eorum tignorum junctura distabat, binis utrimque fibulis ab extrema parte disiungebantur; quibus disclusis atque in contrariam partem revinctis tanta erat operis firmitudo atque ea rerum natura, ut, quo major vis aquae se incitavisset, hoc artius illigata tenerentur. Haec directa materia injecta contexebantur ac longuriis cratibusque consternebantur; ac nihilo secius sublicae et ad inferiorem partem fluminis oblique agebantur, quae pro ariete subjectae et cum omni opere conjunctae vim fluminis exciperent, et aliae item supra pontem mediocri spatio, ut, si arborum trunci sive naves dejiciendi operis causa essent a barbaris missae, his defensoribus earum rerum vis minueretur, neu ponti nocerent.

possent, unum in locum convenientem : hunc esse delectum 3

Romanorum adventum exspectare atque ibi decertare

iis confectis, quarum rerum causa traducere exercitum constituerat, ut Germanis metum injiceret, ut Sugambros ulcisceretur, ut Ubios obsidione liberaret, diebus omnino decem et octo trans Rhenum consumptis satis et ad laudem et ad utilitatem profectum arbitratus se in Galliam recepit pontemque rescidit.

20. Exigua parte aestatis reliqua Caesar, etsi in his 1 locis, quod omnis Gallia ad septentriones vergit, maturaæ sunt hiemes, tamen in Britanniam proficiisci contendit, quod omnibus fere Gallicis bellis hostibus nostris inde sub-ministrata auxilia intelligebat et, si tempus anni ad bellum 2 gerendum desiceret, tamen magno sibi usui fore arbitra-batur, si modo insulam adisset et genus hominum perspexisset, loca, portus, aditus cognovisset; quae omnia fere Gallis erant incognita. Neque enim temere præter 3 mercatores illo adit quisquam, neque iis ipsis quicquam præter oram maritimam atque eas regiones, quae sunt contra Gallias, notum est. Itaque vocatis ad se undique 4 mercatoribus neque quanta esset insulae magnitudo, neque quae aut quantæ nationes incolerent, neque quem usum

botti haberent aut quibus institutis uterentur, neque qui essent ad majorum navium multitudinem idonei portus, reperire poterat.

1   21. Ad haec cognoscenda, priusquam periculum ficeret, idoneum esse arbitratus C. Volusenum cum navi longa praemittit. Huic mandat, ut exploratis omnibus rebus ad se quam primum revertatur. Ipse cum omnibus copiis in Morinos proficiuntur, quod inde erat brevissimus in Britanniam trajectus. Huc naves undique ex finitimis regionibus et quam superiore aestate ad Veneticum bellum efficerat classem jubet convenire. Interim consilio ejus cognito et per mercatores perlato ad Britannos a compluribus insulae civitatibus ad eum legati veniunt, qui policeantur obsides dare atque imperio populi Romani obtemperare. Quibus auditis liberaliter pollicitus hortatusque, ut in ea sententia permanerent, eos domum remittit et cum iis una Commium, quem ipse Atrebatibus superatis regem ibi constituerat, cuius et virtutem et consilium probabat et quem sibi fidelem esse arbitrabatur, cuiusque auctoritas in his regionibus magni habebatur, mittit. Huic imperat, quas possit, adeat civitates horteturque, ut populi Romani fidem sequantur, seque celeriter eo venturum nuntiet. Volusenus perspectis regionibus omnibus, quantum ei facultatis dari potuit, qui navi egredi ac se barbaris committere non auderet, quinto die ad Caesarem revertitur quaeque ibi perspexisset renuntiat.

1   22. Dum in his locis Caesar navium parandarum causa moratur, ex magna parte Morinorum ad eum legati venerunt, qui se de superioris temporis consilio excusarent, quod homines barbari et nostrae consuetudinis imperii bellum populo Romano fecissent, seque ea, quae imperas-

Hoc sibi Caesar satis<sup>2</sup> opportuno accidisse arbitratus, quod neque post tergum hostem relinquere volebat neque belli gerendi propter anni tempus facultatem habebat neque has tantularum rerum occupationes Britanniae anteponendas judicabat, magnum iis numerum obsidum imperat. Quibus adductis eos in fidem recepit. Navibus circiter octoginta onerariis coactis<sup>3</sup> contractisque, quot satis esse ad duas transportandas legiones existimabat, quod praeterea navium longarum habebat, quaestori legatis praefectisque distribuit. Huc<sup>4</sup> accedebant decem et octo onerariae naves, quae ex eo loco ab millibus passuum octo vento tenebantur, quo minus in eundem portum venire possent<sup>5</sup>; has equitibus distribuit. Reliquum exercitum Q. Titurio Sabino et L. Aurunculeio<sup>6</sup> Cottae legatis in Menapios atque in eos pagos Morinorum, ab quibus ad eum legati non venerant, ducendum dedit; P. Sulpicium Rufum legatum cum eo praesidio, quod satis<sup>6</sup> esse arbitrabatur, portum tenere jussit.

ostendit monuitque, ut rei militaris ratio, maxime ut maritimae res postularent, ut quao celerem atque instabilem motum haberent, ad nutum et ad tempus omnes res ab iis administrarentur. His dimissis et ventum et aestum uno tempore nactus secundum dato signo et sublatis ancoris circiter millia pussuum septem ab eo loco progressus aperto ac plano litoro naves constituit.

1. 24. At barbari consilio Romanorum cognito praemisso equitatu et essedariis, quo plerumque genere in proeliis uti consuerunt, reliquis copiis subsecuti nostros navibus egredi prohibebant. Erat ob has causas summa difficultas, quod naves propter magnitudinem nisi in alto constitui non poterant, militibus autem ignotis locis, impeditis manibus, magno et gravi onere armorum oppressis sinu et de navibus desiliendum et in fluctibus consistendum et cum hostibus erat pugnandum, cum illi aut ex arido aut paulum in aquam progressi omnibus membris expeditis, notissimis locis audacter tela conjicerent et equos insuefactos incitarent. Quibus rebus nostri perterriti atque hujus omnino generis pugnae imperiti non eadem alacritate ac studio, quo in pedestribus uti proeliis consuerant, utebantur.

1. 25. Quod ubi Caesar animadvertisit, naves longas, quarum et species erat barbaris inusitator et motus ad usum expeditior, paulum removeri ab onerariis navibus et remis incitari et ad latus apertum hostium constitui atque inde fundis, sagittis, tormentis hostes propelli ac submovebri jussit; quae res magno usui nostris fuit. Nam et navium figura et remorum motu et inusitato genere tormentorum permoti barbari constiterunt ac paulum modo a pedem retulerunt. aquilam ferebat, contestatus deos, ut ea res legioni feliciter eveniret: 'Desilite,' inquit, 'milites, nisi vultis aquilam hostibus prodere: ego certe meum reipublicae atque imperatori officium praesttero.' Hoc cum voce magna dixisset, se ex navi projecit atque in hostes aquilam ferre coepit. Tum nostri cohortati inter se, ne tantum dedecus admitteretur, universi ex navi desiluerunt. Hos item ex proximis navibus cum conspexissent, subsecuti hostibus appropinquarent.

26. Pugnatum est ab utrisque acriter. Nostri tamen, i quod neque ordines servare neque firmiter insistere neque signa subsequi poterant, atque alius alia ex navi, quibuscunque signis occurrerat, se aggregabat, magnopere perturbabantur; hostes vero, notis omnibus vadis, ubi ex litore aliquos singulares ex navi egredientes conspexerant, incitatis equis impeditos adoriebantur, plures paucos circumsistebant, alii ab latere aperto in universos tela congiebant. Quod cum animadvertisset Caesar, scaphas longarum navium, item speculatoria navigia militibus compleri jussit et, quos laborantes conspexerat, his subsidia submittebat. Nostri, simul in arido constiterunt, suis omnibus consecutis in hostes impetum fecerunt atque eos in fugam dederunt, neque longius prosequi potuerunt, quod equites cursum tenere atque insulam capere non potuerant. Hoc unum ad pristinam fortunam Caesari defuit.

3 Hunc illi e navi egressum, cum ad eos oratoris modo Caesaris mandata deferret, comprehendernerunt atque in 4 vincula conicerant, tum proelio facto remiserunt. In petenda pace ejus rei culpam in multitudinem contulerunt, et propter imprudentiam ut ignosceretur petiverunt.
 5 Caesar questus, quod, cum ultro in continentem legatis missis pacem ab se petissent, bellum sine causa intulissent, 6 ignoscere imprudentiae dixit obsidesque imperavit; quorum illi partem statim dederunt, partem ex longinquieribus locis arcessitam paucis diebus sese daturos dixerunt.
 7 Interea suos remigrare in agros jusserunt, principesque undique convenire et se civitatesque suas Caesari commendare coeperunt.

1 28. His rebus pace confirmata post diem quartum, quam est in Britanniam ventum, naves decem et octo, de quibus supra demonstratum est, quae equites sustulerant, 2 ex superiore portu leni vento solverunt. Quae cum appro-pinquarent Britanniae et ex castris viderentur, tanta tempestas subito coorta est, ut nulla earum cursum tenere posset, sed aliae eodem, unde erant profectae, referrentur, aliae ad inferiorem partem insulae, quae est proprius solis 3 occasum, magno sui cum periculo dejicerentur; quac-tam ancoris jactis cum fluctibus completerentur, neces-sario adversa nocte in altum profectae continentem petierunt.

1 29. Eadem nocte accidit, ut esset luna plena, qui dies maritimos aestus maximos in Oceano efficere consuevit, 2 nostrisque id erat incognitum. Ita uno tempore et longas naves, quibus Caesar exercitum transportandum curaverat

afflictabat neque ulla nostris facultas aut administrandi aut auxiliandi dabatur. Compluribus navibus fractis reliquae eum essent funibus, ancoris reliquisque armamentis amissis ad navigandum inutiles, magna, id quod necesse erat accidere, totius exercitus perturbatio facta est. Neque enim naves erant aliae, quibus reportari possent, et omnia deerant, quae ad reficiendas naves erant usui, et, quod omnibus constabat hiemari in Gallia oportere, frumentum his in locis in hiemem provisum non erat.

30. Quibus rebus cognitis principes Britanniae, qui post proelium ad Caesarem convenerant, inter se collocuti, eum equites et naves et frumentum Romanis deesse inteligerent et paucitatem militum ex castrorum exiguitate cognoscerent, quae hoc erant etiam angustiora, quod sine impedimentis Caesar legiones transportaverat, optimum factu esse duxerunt rebellione facta frumento commeatus nostros prohibere et rem in hiemem producere, quod his superatis aut redditu interclusis neminem postea belli inferendi causa in Britanniam transiturum confidebant. Itaque rursus conjuratione facta paulatim ex castris discedere et suos clam ex agris deducere coeperunt.

31. At Caesar, etsi nondum eorum consilia cognoverat, tamen et ex eventu navium suarum et ex eo, quod obsides dare intermisserant, fore id, quod accidit, suspicabatur. Itaque ad omnes casus subsidij comparabat. Num et frumentum ex agris quotidie in castra conferebat et quae gravissime afflictæ erant naves, earum materia atque aere ad reliquas reficiendas utebatur et quae ad eas res erant usui ex continenti comportari jubebat. Itaque, cum summo studio a militibus administraretur, duodecim navibus amissis, reliquis ut navigari commode posset, effecit.

1 32. Dum ea geruntur, legione ex consuetudine una frumentatum missa, quae appellabatur septima, neque ulla ad id tempus belli suspicione interposita, cum pars hominum in agris remaneret, pars etiam in castra ventitaret, ii, qui pro portis castrorum in staticne erant, Caesari nuntiaverunt pulvereum majorem, quam consuetudo ferret, in ea parte videri, quam in partem legio iter fecisset. Caesar id, quod erat, suspicatus, aliquid novi a barbaris initum consilii, cohortes, quae in stationibus erant, secum in eam partem proficisci, ex reliquis duas in stationem cohortes succedere, reliquas armari et confestim sese subsequi jussit.
 2 Cum paulo longius a castris processisset, suos ab hostibus premi atque aegre sustinere et conferta legione ex omnibus
 3 partibus tela conjici animadvertisit. Nam quod omni ex reliquis partibus demesso frumento pars una erat reliqua, suspicati hostes huc nostros esse venturos noctu in silvis
 4 delituerant; tum dispersos depositis armis in metendo occupatos subito adorti paucis imperfectis reliquos incertis ordinibus perturbaverant, simul equitatu atque essedis circumdederant.

1 33. Genus hoc est ex essedis pugnae. Primo per omnes partes perequitant et tela conjiciunt atque ipso terrore equorum et strepitu rotarum ordines plerumque perturbant, et cum se inter equitum turmas insinuaverunt, ex essedis
 2 desiliunt et pedibus proeliantur. Aurigae interim paulatim ex proelio excedunt atque ita currus collecant, ut, si illi a multitudine hostium premantur, expeditum ad suos receptum habeant. Ita mobilitatem equitum, stabilitatem peditum in proeliis praestant, ac tantum usu quotidiano et exercitatione efficiunt, uti in declivi ac praecipiti loco incitatos equos sustinere et brevi moderari ac flectere et

3 hiemi navigationem subjiciendam non existimabat. Ipso
4 idoneam tempestatem nanctus paulo post medianam noctem naves solvit; quae omnes incolumes ad continentem pervenerunt; sed ex iis onerariae duae eosdem quos reliqui portus capere non potuerunt et paulo infra delatae sunt.

1 37. Quibus ex navibus cum essent expositi milites circiter trecenti atque in castra contenderent, Morini, quos Caesar in Britanniam proficiscens pacatos reliquerat, spe praedae adducti primo non ita magno suorum numero circumsteterunt ac, si sese interfici nollent, arma ponere 2 jussérunt. Cum illi orbe facto sese defenderent, celeriter ad clamorem hominum circiter millia sex convenerant.
Qua re nuntiata Caesar omnem ex castris equitatum suis
3 auxilio misit. Interim nostri milites impetum hostium sustinerunt atque amplius horis quatuor fortissime pugnaverunt et paucis vulneribus acceptis complures ex 4 his occiderunt. Postea vero quam equitatus noster in conspectum venit, hostes abjectis armis terga verterunt magnusque eorum numerus est occisus.

1 38. Caesar postero die T. Labienum legatum cum iis legionibus, quas ex Britannia reduxerat, in Morinos, qui

NOTES ON BOOK IV.

For the events described in the preceding books see the Introduction, § III., p. x.

Chap. 1-19.—The repulse of German tribes who were threatening Gaul.

1-4. Driven from their lands in Germany by the Suebi, whose power and customs are described, the Usipetes and Tencteri cross the Rhine and seize the possessions of the Menapii.

CAP. I.

1. quae secuta est,—may be rendered by one word. qui suit, etc.,—‘which was the year when...were consuls,’ lit. ‘Pompey and Crassus being consuls.’ App.5.a.N. (RC.II. 50. HF.102.3.N.) For the relations between Caesar, Pompey and Crassus, see Introduction, p. v.

Germani,—not a single tribe, but the larger division to which Usipetes, Tencteri and Suebi all belonged. quo,—adverb, ‘into which,’ lit. ‘whither.’ marit,—really means ‘that part of the sea.’

2. quod,—‘that,’ lit. ‘because.’ annos,—App.4.c.; with exagitati. (RC.83.c. HF.82.4.) bello,—with premebantur. agricultura,—RC.85.h. HF.158.2.

4. Hi,—the Suebi. ex quibus singula millia,—lit. ‘from which...one thousand each’; freely, ‘from each of which ...a thousand.’ armatorum,—App.2.d.

5. mancerunt,—‘remain,’ lit.? illos, illi,—‘the others.’ App.18. Hi,—the same persons as illos. in vicem,—‘in their turn.' nuno post,—'the next year,' 'the year after,' lit.? (RC.85.g. HF.58.6.)

6. belli,—with both ratio (science, systematic conduct) and usus (practice.)

7. agri... nihil est,—'there is no... land.' App.2.d. (RC.81.b.i. HF.69.10.) longius nuno,—'longer than a year.' (RC.85.f. HF.55.5.) Heet,—'they are allowed,' lit.?

8. frumento,—trans. by 'on,' lit. 'by means of.' maximum partem,—'for the most part (principally).' (RC.88.e. HF.98.3.) sunt in,—'are engaged in or are occupied with.' venationibus,—'hunting,' lit. 'hunts.'

9. quae res,—'this fact,' i.e. the frequent hunting; it should be placed much nearer its verb in Eng. than it is in Latin. gener,—'from (or because of) the character.' (RC.85.m. HF.71.3.)

cum... faciant,—explaining libertate vitae; trans. by a parenthetical clause with 'for'; lit. 'since.' a pueris,—'from childhood,' lit.? multo... assuefacti,—'as they are not accustomed to any obedience or discipline'; for the abl. see RC.85.a.i.f. HF.71.3. faciant,—RC.99.g.ii. HF.203.1.

nit,—'increases.' Immani, etc.,—understand eos, homines being a factitive or predicate accus. (RC.11.70. HF.90.2.); 'makes them men of huge stature,' lit. 'of huge size of bodies.' magnitudine,—RC.85.c. HF.131.9.

10. Atque,—'moreover,' adding something of special significance. In eam, etc.,—lit. 'have brought themselves to that (=such a) custom,' freely, 'have so accustomed themselves.' Iocis frigidissimis,—App.5.a.N.: 'although the climate is very cold.' (RC.85.o. HF.102.3.N.)

neque vestitus quiequam,—'no clothing,' lit.? (RC.81.b.1. HF.69.10.) haberent,—(RC.99.b. HF.187.2.) Here to be translated exceptionally by the present tense, so lavarentur. quarum,—trans. with and after exiguitatem. aperta,—'exposed, bare.'

N.B.—Choice of opening words of each section. [Generally in Caesar, the first words of a sentence form a connecting link, by beginning the new sentence with something known to us from the preceding one. The last words of Book III. are "Caesar...placed his army in winter quarters."] Method of dating years among the Romans.

Magna cum multitudine, uno in loco, §§1.7; note emphatic order. Emphatic position of omnium, §3. Partitive genitive with neutrals such as nihil, §7., milia, §4., and quicquam, §10.

Agreement of relative with predicate rather than antecedent, [qui fuit annus, §1. RC.93.II. BA.83. H.415.4. AG.199.] Various uses of tunc, §§1.3.7. Elsewhere in Caesar only twice of time, us in §7., (Bk.VII.c.9. and 71.), dum being the regular word.] Adverbial accusative, [maximam partem, §8. Not a common prose construction; ex...parte being more frequent.] Use of tenses. [Especially premebantur and prohibebantur, §2., (either describing an existing state of affairs, or possibly under the influence of complures annos='had been, etc.); manserunt in a frequentative clause (prior to alunt), and haberent, lavarentur after adduxerunt='have brought.' In the last case, as in similar passages, the original intention is in the writer's mind. BA.105.fn.1. H.495.1. AG.287.a.]

Difference between privati and separati, §7., [belonging to an individual; marked off by itself], and between rursus and in vicem, §5. [the repetition of the act; the change of persons.] Use of connectives atque, et...et, neque...nec, neque...et.

Latin passive=Eng. intransitive, where Latin active=Eng. transitive, [lavarentur, §10. The so-called middle or reflexive use of the passive. RC.93.c. BA.20. H.465. AG.111.N.1.] Force of hic, ille, and is. [RC.92.] Concessive ablative absolute, and abl. absol. with adjective as quasi-predicate, §10.

CAP. II.

1. Mercatoribus est aditus,—'Traders are admitted,' lit.? eo,—adv., 'for this purpose,' explained by ut...habeant; better omitted in trans. quibus vendant,—'(persons) to whom to sell,' freely, 'purchasers for.' The object of the verb is quae bello ceperint. (RC.99.a.1. HF.184.1.) ceperint,—RC.99.k.

quam quo,—'than because.' ad,—'among.' desiderent,—RC.99.g.iv. HF.199.6.

2. Quin etiam,—'nay even,' 'moreover.' jumentis,—'horses,' of all kinds, generally beasts of burden. Jumentis depends on utuntur and importatis agrees with it: to keep the Latin order, trans. freely, 'as for the horses...use imported ones.'

quibus, etc.,—'in which...take particular pleasure,' 'for which...have a special fancy,' lit. 'with which.' quaeque,—two words: trans. 'and for which they pay a high price,' lit.? pretio,—RC.85.i. HF.150.1.

quae...haec,—'those which.' App.11.d.iii. quae...nata,—may be freely rendered 'the native ones.' parva, etc.,—'which are small, etc.'

summi...efficiunt,—trans. 'they make capable of the utmost toil,' lit. 'render so that they are of the utmost endurance.' laboris,—not 'toil' as in § 6., but 'capability of toil.' (RC.81.e. HF.180.7.)

3. eodem vestigio,—'on the same spot' (RC.85.k. HF. 85.3.) quos,—'and...them.' App.11.b. cum usus est,—'when there is need.'

4. moribus,—abl.; trans. by 'according to.' (RC.85.d.) turplus,—pred. nom. (RC.79.b.v.) habetur,—'is regarded.' ephippiis,—the saddle proper was a much later invention.

5. quemvis,—from quivis, with numerum. adire ad,—'advance against.' quamvis pauci,—'however small their numbers,' 'no matter how few.' Notice the case of pauci.

6. quod,—conj. ea re,—'by it, by that means,' lit.? effeminari,—'become enervated or effeminate.' homines,—accus.

N.B.—Mood of ceperint, § 1. [The subjunctive is used because quaes bello ceperint is an essential part of the thought or purpose of others than the narrator. This usage is frequent in indirect narration (actual or virtual) and in final clauses. RC.90.e.1.,k. AG.342. and fn.]

Mood of desiderent. [In clauses rejecting an imaginary suggestion the subjunctive is used. The form is generally non quo (quod, quin, quia)...sed quod (quia). The subjunctive is due to the suggestion's being imaginary (sc. 'as one might suppose') not to its being rejected. RC.90.g.iv. BA.485. H.516.II.2. AG.341.d.R.]

The tense is peculiar.] Difference between quisquam, quicvis and ullus, all=any. [Quisquam and ullus='any, even one,' excluding all; quicvis='any, no matter who or what,' including all; quisquam 'anyone, anything' (substantively), and ullus 'any' (adjectively), in negative sentences or, as in §1., sentences with force of negative: quicvis, 'any (at all)' in affirmative sentences regularly. RC.95.vii.viii. BA.358,359.] Various uses of, and ways of translating, the ablative.*

CAP. III.

1. Publice,—not 'publicly,' but 'as a state,' 'on the part of the state,' in contrast with what is a merit in individuals. quam latissime,—'as far as possible.' (RC. 88.b. HF.143.N.) vacare agros,—App.35.a.

hac re significari,—'that this indicates,' lit.? The clause magnum numerum... posse forms the subject of significari.

2. ex,—'on.' a Suebis,—with millia passuum sescenta, not with una ex parte. millia,—RC.88.c. HF.69.9. agri,—nominative, not genitive.

3. Ad alteram, etc.,—'on the other side the Ubii adjoin them,' lit. 'come up to them.' There would doubtless be some unoccupied country between them.

fuit,—'has been,' not 'was'; see §4. ut est captus G.,—freely, 'according to German notions (or standards)', lit. 'as the capacity of the G. is,' i.e. 'as far as German ideas go.'

et sunt,—contrasted with fuit, 'and who even now are.' ceteris,—'than the rest.' (RC.85.f. HF.55.5.)

multum ventitant,—'often resort,' or with ad 'often visit.' Both ventitant and sunt depend on quod. moribus,—for the case cf. or. c.1. §9. sunt assuefacti,—'have been brought up according to,' etc.

4. Hos,—with expellere. cum,—'although.' experti,—App.37.a.N.B. inibus,—RC.85.h. HF.158.2. potuissent,—RC.99.i.iii. HF.204.5.

vectigales,—accus., with eos understood. humiliores infirmioresque,—‘less important and powerful,’ lit.? (RC. 79.b.v.)

N.B.—Various uses of infin. found in §§1. and 2. Construction of mille, and millia, and phrase millia passuum. Three common uses of ut [c.1. §10. c.2. §1. c.3. §3.] Quam with superlative, §1.

Position of hos, §4. [Repeatedly in Latin an important word (such as a connecting link with the previous sentence, or the subject of the clause, or a word to be emphasized by contrast), is placed before the conjunction introducing the clause to which this word belongs. In Eng. of course it must be placed later in the sentence.]

Cum concessive, §4. Factitive object [or accusative in predicate after verb of making, rendering, §4., twice; cf.c.1. §9.] Difference between ad eos, §3., and sibi, §4. [RC.91.ii.b.] Various uses of the ablative case.

CAP. IV.

1. causa,—‘condition.’ supra,—c.1. §§ 1.2. annos,—App.4.c. (RC.88.c. HF.69.9.); so triennium, §2.

2. ad extremum,—‘at last,’ with pervenerunt only, not with expulsi or vagati.

agris,—cf. on finibus, c.3. § 4. multis locis,—‘through many parts,’ lit. ‘in many districts.’ (RC.85.k.)

quas,—‘these’; meaning the districts near the Rhine. incolebant,—App.26.a.; so habebant. ad,—‘on.’

3. adventu,—‘by,’ not ‘on.’ iis,—‘the’; App.12.a. trans, cis,—from Caesar’s point of view. dispositis praesidiis,—App.5.a. Trans. ‘by placing,’ etc.

transire,—‘from crossing.’ prohibebant,—App.26.d.

4. Illi,—App.18.b. omnia experti cum,—‘tried every plan (device), but when or as,’ etc. App.37.a.N.B. possent,—RC.99.g.ii. HF.203.1. vi contendere,—‘use force,’ or ‘force a passage,’ lit. ‘make their way by force.’

reverti se,—‘to return,’ lit.? App.34. suas,—‘their own,’ i.e. their original (or rightful) country.

tridui viaui,—‘a three days’ journey,’ lit.? For the gen. see RC.81.e. HF.180.7.; for the acc. RC.88.c. HF.69.9.

6. qui...facti,—‘for when these learned...they’; more lit. ‘who, on learning.’

7. priusquam...certior fieret,—‘before...could be informed,’ depending on transierunt. (RC.99.f.iv. HF.201.5.) partem,—RC.83.c. HF.69.9. copiiis aluerunt,—‘maintained...on...stores,’ lit. ‘by means of.’

N.B.—The natural means of narration, perf. part. (in nom. or abl. absol.), and perf. indic. Use of imperf. and pluperf., §§ 2. and 3.

Diximus, § 1., the author’s we. [See N.N. to c.27.] Absence of connective before qui in § 1. [This is because the two relative clauses are not of the same nature. The second, qui...sustinerunt, refers to the whole phrase, U. et T. quos supra diximus. Similarly in Eng.] Accus. of duration of time, §§ 1.2.7. The use, as in Eng., of a connective between the last two only of three words, [§ 2. This is not incorrect, as is often stated: cf. III.1.1.; 11.4.IV.17. 2.; 19.2. The connective in Caesar in such cases is que.] Construction of verbs with prohibeo, § 3. [only the infin. in Caesar], and simulo, § 4. [regarded as one of the verbs declarandi et sentiendi.]

The simple ablative, as in § 5, without ab or cum, of the troops by whom or with whom a march is made. Reverto, active, and revertor, deponent, § 4. [The former in Caesar only in the perfect tenses, the latter, with but one exception (reversus, VI.42.1.) only in the present tenses. Caesar by no means confines his use of the word to cases where one turns back before his journey is finished; cf. e.g. c.21. § 2.] Suis and eorum=their. The phrase certior, factus est. Use of ille to mark a change of subject, § 4. [RC.92.c.] Priusquam with subjunctive [to mark an end kept in view, § 7. RC.99.f.iv. HF.201.5. BA.442. H.520. AG.327.]

5, 6. Caesar, distrusting the Gauls and unwilling that they should ally themselves with the Germans, decides to make war on the newcomers.

CAP. V.

1. His de rebus,—‘of this.’ capiendis,—‘forming or deciding upon.’ novis rebus,—‘political changes,’ ‘changes in the government,' lit.? For the dative see RC.82.e. HF. 105.9.

nihil,—'not at all.' (RC.83.e.) committendum,—understand esse; the impersonal passive, App.24. (RC.96.b. HF. 154.2.) Hic is dat. Trans. 'that no confidence should be put in them,' lit.?

What Caesar feared was that the Gauls, soon wearying of Roman rule, would combine with these powerful neighbours, and revolt.

2. Est enim, etc.,—lit. 'for this is of (i.e. belongs to) G. custom'; trans. 'for it is a G. custom.' hoe,—explained by uti with its verbs cogant, quaerant, circumsistat and cogant, cogant, quaerant,—trans. by 'to' and infin.' (RC.99.b. HF.187.2.)

et...et,—in trans. omit 'both.' audierit,=audiverit (RC.66.) For the mood see RC.99.d. HF.176.2.; so cognoverit, veniant and cognoverint.

et...vulgaris circumsistat...cogant,—'and for a crowd to surround...and compel.' The second verb is plur. through a sense construction; vulgaris being equal to a plural. (RC.79.a.i.) quibusque,—two words; so quasque.

3. rebus,—'statements,' or perhaps 'facts'; strictly the 'things' learned by their questioning. summis,—'most important.' saepe,—with summis not with ineunt.

quorum eos, etc.,—'which they have to repent of at once,' lit. 'on the spot.' paenitere,—with object, not subject, eos. (RC.11.68. HF.165.1.) necessere est,—lit. 'it is necessary,' with infin. (RC.101.c.)

enim,—'since.' serviant,—'they followed blindly (or are slaves to).' (RC.99.g.ii. HF.203.1.) So respondeant. plerique,—i.e. of the traders and travellers. ad voluntatem eorum,—i.e. of the Gauls, 'to suit (lit. with a view to) their pleasure,' i.e. 'to please them.' ficta respondeant,—'invent answers,' more lit. 'give answers invented.'

CAP. VI.

1. graviori,—‘too serious,’ lit. ‘more serious (i.e. than he could manage).’ App.10. He was afraid of the Gauls and Germans combining. consuerat, = consueverat. (RC.66.) Consuevi=‘I have become accustomed,’ hence, ‘I am accustomed.’ exercitūm,—the army had been stationed during the winter among the Aulerici and Lexovii and other states in the north-west of Gaul. Bk.III.c.29.

2. Eo,—adv.; ‘to it,’ (i.e. to the army.) ea quae,—‘what’; each word is subj. of an infin. fore,—‘would be the case.’ facta,—understand esse; ‘had happened.’

3. missas, invitatos,—understand esse; depending on cognovit, and explaining ea...facta. uti...discederent,—trans. by ‘to’ with infin. (RC.99.a.2. HF.181.3.) To leave the Rhine means here to come farther into Gaul.

omnia,—App.8. postulassent,= postulavissent (RC.66.); ‘they asked,’ lit. ‘they should have asked’ not ‘they had already asked.’ For the mood see RC.99.e. HF.206.4.; for the tense (in the original words fut. perf.) RC.107.b. HF.207.7. fore parata,—a sort of future perf. infin. pass.

depewding in an idea of promising easily supplied from invitatos; 'that everything...would be made ready.'

4. vagabantur, pverenerant,—i.e. by the time Caesar appeared on the scene. Observe the difference in tense.

5. en quae,—cf. §2. dissimulanda sibi,—understand esse; App.41.

animis, etc.,—'having calmed and re-assured their hearts.' imperato,—this verb with the accus. means 'demand.' constituit,—the context requires the meaning 'announced his resolve.'

N.B.—The co-ordinating relative, §§1.4. [RC.93.III. BA.78.] Idiomatic use of comparative with standard of comparison omitted. [Gravio? 4. §1. RC.88.b. BA.57.b.] Order of eo cum venisset, §2. [postulassent, §8.]

Perfect tense of existimavit, §5. [So c.5. §1. Generally 'he thought' would be expressed by the imperf., but the perfect is used when speaking of a decision to which one has come. See App.26.a.1.]

CAP. VII.

1. delectis,—'levied'; the cavalry are those of c.6. §5. In ea loca... quibus in locis,—'towards the district where,' 'in the direction in which,' lit.? quibus in locis,—App.11. d.ii. audiebat,—App.26.a.

2. quibus,—refers to locis, not to Germanos, for ab his follows referring to the latter. pauorum dierum iter,—'now but a few days' journey.' For the gen. see RC.81.c. HF.130.7.; i.e. the acc. RC.88.c. HF.69.9.

quorum haec, etc.—‘who spoke as follows,’ lit.? haec,—feminine sing. (RC.92.a.i.)

3. For all the subjunctives in §§ 8.4. and 5. except those specially mentioned, see RC.II.214.a.2. HF.206.4. For the primary tenses (to be translated as though secondary) see RC.107.a.ii.

neque priores, etc.—‘were not the aggressors in making war on, etc.’ lit. ‘were not making war the former (of the two parties).’ neque...neque,—here, as often, trans. ‘not ...and not.’ recusare quin...contendant,—lit. ‘offer objections by which (i.e. so that) they do not, etc.’; trans. ‘object (or refuse) to, etc.’ si Iacessantur,—‘if they were attacked.’

quicunque,—freely, ‘if any.’ neque deprecari,—‘and not ask mercy, (lit. beg off.)’

4. Haec,—‘this much’; explained by what follows. With dicare, as well as with venisse and posse, understand se suam,—i.e. the Germans’.

attribuant, patiantur,—trans. by ‘let them (i.e. the Romans), etc.’ The imperative would have been used by the speakers themselves. (RC.106.a. HF.207.5.) eos,—i.e. agros. possederint,—‘they had gained’; from possido. armis,—‘in war,’ lit.?

5. dili,—or di, the nom. plur. of deus. (RC.9. HF.13.2.) relicuum,—‘besides, or else,’ lit. ‘remaining.’ quidem,—adding emphasis to the statement; here, as often, untranslateable by any word. in terris,—‘in the world,’ or ‘on earth.’ possint,—for the mood see RC.99.c. HF.188.5.

M.B.—Abl. absol. clauses coupled by -que, §1. [One abl. absol. may be joined to another by -que, but must not be so joined to any other form of construction.] Loci repeated in §1. [A sacrifice of elegance to clearness.] Tense of audiebat, §1. [The imperf. implies that he continued to hear this during his march.] Hic referring to what follows, §§ 2.4. Oratio obliqua, §§ 3.4.5. [For the general rules see RC.106. HF.209. BA.LXV.] Primary tenses of subjunctive in oratio obliqua after a past tense. [By thus giving the exact tenses used in the original form, the writer can secure greater vividness, as he gives the point of view of the speaker rather than of the reporter. [RC.107.a.ii. BA.525. II.525.1.] Use of quin and subj. [This is the only occurrence of quin in Bk.IV. RC.II.156. BA.132. H.504. AG.319.d. After recuso, quoniam is more frequent than quin, though in Caesar each is found but once.] Infin. with consequendo sit, §3. [cf. N.B. to c.5. §2.] Omission of se, §4. [This is not uncommon in Indirect narrative in Caesar, where the context allows of no ambiguity.] Representation of Imperative in indirect narration, §4. [RC.106.a. HF.207.5. BA.522.] Emphatic position of neminem, §5, and of haec, §4. The position of non, §5. [It belongs to possint, but is placed before superare, because after nemo est, nihil est, or quid est, non is regularly placed immediately after the relative, quem non being the accusative of quin. RC. II.36. HF.188.6. BA.80. H.504.1.]

CAP. VIII.

1. quae visum est,—‘what seemed proper’; quae depends on respondere understood with visum est.

Sibi nullam, etc.,—for the verbs in the rest of the chapter cf. on c.7. §8. sibi...cum his,—lit. ‘to him with them’; trans. ‘between-him and them.’ (RC.82.g. HF.120.3.)

2. neque,—‘and further ... not.’ qui,—App.11.d.i.; understanding eos as subject of occupare. suos,—‘their own.’ App.15.b. occupare,—‘for (those)...to seize.’ App. 35.a. alienos,—‘those of others’; understand agros.

neque ullos,—‘and...no,’ lit.? inuria,—do not trans. by ‘injury.’

3. licere,—freely, ‘they might,’ lit.? apud,—‘with.’ se,—i.e. Caesar. hoc...imperaturum,—lit. ‘that he would give this order to the U.,’ freely, ‘that he would order the U. to do this,’ viz. to allow them to settle among them.

N.B.—Relative with antecedent omitted, §§1. and 2. [cf.c.2. §1.] Impersonal verbs and phrases. [visum est, §1.; verum esse, §2.; licere, §2., cf.c.1. §7.] Shifting of tenses in oratio obliqua; [remaneant, §1., contrasted with the other subjunctives. This change from past tenses to present is very frequent in Caesar in continuous Indirect narration.] Force of sed, §1. [It implies that the first part is omitted as unimportant, perhaps because it would have been a repetition of arguments used and reported on previous occasions, esp. in Bk.I.] Dative of possessor, [sibi, § 1.] Use of alienus. [The genitive of alius is avoided in classical Latin; for the possessive relation alienus is used, for the other relations of the genitive, alterius.] Position of praesertim, § 2. Neque ullus, § 2., rather than et nullus. [As a connective, Latin prefers neque with positive adjective or pronoun, to et followed by a negative.] Impero with cognate accus. and dat., § 3. [In c.6. § 5. there is another use of impervo and the accus., in which sense also the dat may be combined w. the accus., as in c.22. § 2.]

CAP. IX.

1. suos, — App.15.c. post diem tertium, — 'two days later,' lit.? The Romans in reckoning from one day to another counted in the days at both extremes, where we include but one.

ne...moveret, — lit. 'that he should not, etc.,' trans. '(begged) him not to, etc.' (RC.99.a.2. HF.181.8.) se, — the Germans.

2. id, — viz. the proposed delay. ne...quidem, — often means 'not...either'; it refers back to c.7. § 4. impetrari, — trans. by the active voice. Is ab se 'by them' or 'from him'? App.14.b.

3. aliquot diebus ante, — 'a few days before,' lit.? (RC. 85.g. HF.53.6.) trans Mosam, — this would be towards the west, the others remaining between the Meuse and the Rhine.

exspectari, interponi, — trans. by active voice. eius re causa, — 'for that reason,' i.e. in order to have their help against Caesar; lit.?

N.B. — Phrases of time with ante and post, §§ 1.3. [Either the ablative is used, ante and post being adverbs, or the accusative, governed by these words as prepositions. HF.82.8. BA.322. H.430. AG.259.d.]

Proprius with accents, § 1. [The adverbial forms of this word are frequently used with the acc. like prepositions; so sometimes the corresponding adjectives.] Substantive clause of purpose after verbs of asking, § 1. [RC.99.a.2. HF.181.8. BA.118.]

10. Description of the country near the mouths of the Meuse and the Rhine.

CAP. X.

1. monte,—mons is a range of mountains as well as a mountain or hill; trans. by plural. qui, etc.,—as the Vosges mountains are not all in the country of the Lingones, qui may here restrict, instead of defining, and we may trans. '(that part)...which is, etc.'

parte,—'branch.' quadam,—from quidam. insulam efficit,—what were the boundaries?

2. neque longius, etc.,—'and at a distance of not more than, etc.' millibus,—RC.85.f. HF.55.5. eo,—'it,' i.e. the Vacalus (where it enters the Meuse).

3. autem,—'on the other hand,' or 'as for the R. it, etc.' ex,—'in the country of,' lit.? longo spatio,—'in (lit. by) a long course.' citatus fertur,—'flows rapidly,' lit.?

4. plures,—'several,' lit. 'more (than one).' partes,—as in § 1. ingentibusque,—omit 'and' in trans.

5. ex quibus sunt qui,—'among whom are those who.' piscibus,—for abl. cf.c.1. § 8. capitibus,—'mouths,' lit.? Caput is generally the source.

N.B.—The predicate nominative with passive verbs like appellor, § 1. [RC.79.c.1. H.362.2.2. AG.176.] Adjective used in Latin where English has an adverb, [citatus, § 3. RC.88.d. H.443. AG.191.] Enumeration without any connective, § 3. [Eng. usually has 'and' between the two last of the series; Latin, as in § 3., generally omits even this, or else gives the effect of checking off items by inserting et between each two. See also N.B. to c.4. § 2., where there is no enumeration.] Use of que after multi, § 4. [Another adjective, unless it be so closely connected with the noun as to form with it one idea, is regularly connected with multi by que.] The indicative after ex quibus sunt qui, § 5. [This is because the phrase is not the idiomatic sunt qui=some, which regularly has the subjunctive. (RC.II.34. HF.188.5.a. BA.504. H.508.I. AG.320.a.) Caesar is not saying 'some of whom are believed to live on fish.'] Appropinquuo with the dat., § 4. [This is the only construction in Caesar, except with ad in Bk.II.c.19, where the reading is doubtful. The idea of 'nearness to' not 'motion towards' prevails, following the derivation.]

CAP. XI.

1. amplius,—‘more than.’ millibus,—RC.85.f. HF.55.5. ut erat constitutum,—‘as had been arranged’; trans. after legati. The reference is to c.9. § 1., where a promise rather than an agreement was mentioned.

in itinere,—i.e. while he was on his march towards them. ne...progrederetur,—trans. as in c.9. § 1. orabant,—App.26.a.iv.; so petebant.

2. impetrassent,—cf. postulassent, c.6. § 3. petebant uti...praemitteret,—‘asked him to send on.’ (RC.99.a.2. HF.181.3.) antecessissent,—RC.99.e. HF.206.4. pugna,—RC.85.h. HF.158.2. potestatem faceret mittendi,—‘give permission to send.’

3. item feclisset,—‘pledged their word,’ lit. ‘should have made a pledge.’ The verb agrees in number with the nearer of its two subjects. For the mood see RC.99.h.iii. HF.211.N.

ea condicione...usuros,—‘would agree to the terms which were (being) offered,’ or ‘the proposal which was made’; the reference is to c.8. § 3. For the abl. see RC.85.a.ii.d. HF.116.

daret,—cf. c.7. § 4., attribuant. Trans. ‘let him give,’ or ‘(they asked) him to give.’ (RC.106.a. HF.207.5.)

4. codem illo pertinere,—‘looked in that same direction,’ more freely, ‘had the same object,’ i.e. as that mentioned before, in c.9. § 3. This object is explained more fully by the ut clause. Eodem illo are both adverbs.

longius,—‘farther than’; cf. amplius, § 1. causa,—trans. freely by ‘in order to.’

5. huc,—‘to this place,’ i.e. to the one just indicated, four miles farther on, where was a small stream. quam frequentissimi,—cf. c. 8. § 1. convenirent,—‘they were to,’ or ‘let them,’ etc. Cf. daret, § 8. cognosceret,—here with a view to a decision, hence = ‘inquire into.’

6. praefectos,—see Introduction, p. xix. mittit qui nuntiarent,—‘sends men to tell them.’ (RC.99.a. HF.184.1.) ne...lacesseret,—‘not to provoke to (lit. by), etc.’ (RC. 99.a.2. HF.181.3.) So sustinerent. Proelio lacessere, to take the offensive against; sustinere, to keep on the defensive, (to stand firm, hold one’s ground). exercitu,—often of the legions only (the regular army) as opposed to the cavalry (native auxiliaries). accessisset,—‘approached’; lit. ‘should have, etc.’ (RC.106.a.; 107.b. HF.206.4.; 207.7.)

N.B.—The ablative of comparison [milibus, §§ 1.4.; cf. c.10. § 2. In § 1. It is possible, but not so good, to regard the abl. as that of measure of difference which is sometimes used with abesse; see N.B. to c.12. § 1. and c.17. § 10.] The subjunctive with verbs of requesting, (progrederetur, § 1., praemitteret, prohiberet, saceret, § 2.); in clauses of purpose (reverterentur, § 4., cognosceret, § 5., nuntiarent, § 6.); and of indirect command or request (daret, § 8., convenirent, § 5., lacesserent, sustinerent, § 6.) [In reality these are all varieties of the same subjunctive, that expressing a wish or command, which has gradually developed into the dependent subj. of purpose. Accordingly lacesserent and sustinerent may with almost equal right be classed as subj. of Indirect command (RC.106.a. HF.207.5. BA.522. H.523.III. AG.339.) or as subj. of substantival clause of purpose. (RC.99.a.2. H.498.I. AG.331.) Nuntio with subj. is very rare; cf. Bk.III.5.3.]

The subjunctive in relative sentences forming part of a subj. clause of purpose, antecessissent, § 2. [This is virtually the same as the subj. used in all dependent clauses of a quotation or expression of another’s thought. Absent, § 4., is similar, only that the whole purpose clause is dependent on a verb of thinking.] The gerund and the gerundive, §§ 2.3. [RC.104.b. HF.170. BA.395. The reason for preferring the gerund to the gerundive in § 2. seems to be the ground of euphony.] The tense of fecisset, § 3., and accessisset, § 6., as compared with that of lacesserentur, § 6. The pluperf. (here lit.=‘should have’ not ‘had already’), implies that the action of those verbs is to be completed before that of the verbs on which they depend, i.e. usuros and sustinerent; the imperf. (here lit.=‘should’ not ‘were at that time’) that the action is to be contemporaneous with that of the verb on which it depends, i.e. sustinerent. The verbs represent original future perfect and future respectively.] The tense of ferretur, § 3. [This is not, like lacesserentur, § 6., =‘should,’ but =‘was at that time’: the offer previously made still held good.] The subjunctive with quoad. [This is indirect for the original quoad accessero; the tense would have been imperf. if it were the subj. of purpose. RC.99.f.iii. BA. 440.]

CAP. XII.

1. ubi primum,—‘as soon as,’ lit.? quorum, etc.,—‘who numbered, etc.’ lit.? cum,—‘while or although.’ amplius,—‘more than.’

nihil timentibus nostris,—‘while our men had (or felt) no fear’; App.5.a.N. (RC.85.o. HF.100.5.) Nihil,=‘not at all.’ (RC.83.e.i.) quod...petitus,—explaining why there was no alarm. corum,—i.e. the Germans. indutis,—lit. ‘for a truce.’ App.8.c. (RC.82.c. HF.184.1.) facto,—trans. by clause co-ordinate with perturbaverunt.

2. rursus,—i.e. after the first confusion. resistentibus,—understand nostris from the preceding nostros; App.5.a.N. consuetudine sua,—trans. by ‘according to.’ (RC.85.e. HF.71.3.) Cf.c.2. § 3.

subfossis,—add connective ‘and.’ compluribus nostris,—‘several on our side or of our men.’ dejectis,—here dejicio means ‘unhorse’ or ‘dismount’ (used transitively). ita,—with perterritos, not with atque. egerunt,—‘drove them before them.’ fuga,—RC.85.h. HF.158.2. prius... quam,—‘until,’ lit. ‘at an earlier time than.’ in,—though with the accus., trans. ‘in.’ venissent,—RC.99.f.iv. HF. 201.5.

Considering the difference of numbers, it is not unlikely that Caesar’s cavalry were the aggressors. It is even possible that the flight was planned beforehand to give Caesar a pretext for his subsequent course of action.

4. in,—‘among.’ Aquitanus,—not part of the man’s name. genere natus,—‘belonging to (lit. born from), etc.’ For the abl. see RC.85.7. HF.156.4. sua,—App.15.b. amicus,—an honorary title, ranking next to rex, bestowed by the Roman Senate on distinguished foreigners. appellatus,—freely, ‘and had been called.’

5. cum ferret,—‘while bringing.’ intercluso,—trans. by relative clause. App.37.c. illum,—‘him’; emphatic, being contrasted with ipse. Insert ‘but’ before trans. of ipse, etc. equo vulnerato,—‘on or through his horse being wounded.’

6. id,—‘this,’ referring to cedisset. proelio,—trans. lit. by ‘from.’ (RC.85.h. HF.158.2.) incitato equo,—App.5.a.; ‘spurring on his horse,’ or trans. by principal clause. The subject of the two last verbs is frater. atque,—‘and so.’

N.B.—The use of amplius with numerals, § 1. [RC.II.123.c.2. BA.318. Obs. H.417.N.2. AG.247.c.] So plus, minus and longius also are used. Where the numeral (apart from the modifying adverb) would be in the gen., dat., or abl., this case is retained and the adverbs have no influence upon the construction; but where the numeral would be in the nom. or acc., these cases may be retained or the ablative of comparison used, in which case amplius, etc., will be the nom. or acc. adj. used as subst. Cf. c.10. § 2., c.11. §§ 14., c.37. § 9.] Use of the pres. partic. active, §§ 1.2. [Contrast the time reference with that of the perf. part. pass. RC.102.a.c. HF.100.4.; 102.2. BA.410.411.] Priusquam with subj., § 2. [Cf. c.4. § 7. and N.B.] Ablative of source; genere, § 4. Use of hic, ille, and ipse in § 5. Use of quoad, § 5. [Contrast quoad, c.11. § 6.] Ablative of separation, §§ 2.6. Use of atque, [adding a stronger or more important statement, suggesting a climax, §§ 1.2.6. (twice).] Omission of one member of abl. absol. clause, § 2. [Regularly, each clause consists of two members, a quasi-subject and a quasi-predicate. The omission of a quasi-subject which can readily be understood from the context, becomes common only in later Latin, and when the person is not emphatic. The older writers prefer some other construction when an unemphatic personal pronoun would otherwise be the subject of an abl. absol. clause.]

quibus,—App.11.b.; ‘so that...to them.’ capienda,—cf. on c.5. §1. nihil spatii,—‘no time,’ lit.?

4. consilio cum, etc.,—‘having communicated (announced) his decision to,’ etc. quaestore,—see Introduction, p. xviii. ne quem, etc.,—explains consilio, ‘not to let any chance of fighting be missed,’ lit. ‘pass over any day of battle.’ (RC.99.a. HF.183.2.)

quod,—‘namely that,’ explaining res. postridie ejus diei,—‘on the very next day,’ lit. ‘on the morrow of that day.’ (RC.81.i.) eadem,—i.e. as on the preceding day, in the battle. usq,—‘displaying.’ adhibitis,—probably only those mentioned came. majoribus natu,—‘elders.’ (RC.83.d.)

5. simul...simul,—‘both...and,’ lit.? ut dicebatur,—‘as was alleged,’ ‘ostensibly.’ sui purgandi causa,—‘to exonerate themselves.' quod...commisissent,—'for having,' etc.; lit. 'because (as they said) they had,' etc. (RC.99.g.i. HF.198.2.) contra...dictum,—'contrary to what had been agreed on.' petissent,=petiissent. (RC.66.) si quid possent,—freely, 'whatever they could,' lit. 'if they could (obtain) anything'; quid depends on impetrare understood. de,—'in regard to,' 'in the matter of'; w. impetrarent. fallendo,—'by deceit,' lit.? App.89.

6. Quos,—'these'; subj. of oblatos (esse). oblatos,—'had fallen into his hands.' gavisisus,—'rejoicing.'

castris,—RC.85.h. HF.158.2. quod,—conj. The subject of perterritum esse is easily supplied from equitatum.

N.B.—The tense of arbitrabatur, §1., judicabat, §2., sentiebat, §§3., existimabat, §§3.6. [The imperf. refers to his deliberations, not to his decision, and expresses the thoughts that influenced him.]

The subjunctive of relative clause of characteristic, intulissent, §1. [RC.99.c. HF.188.4. BA.506. H.508.I. AG.320.] Dum with the subj. of purpose or end in view, §2. [RC.99.f.iii. HF.201.4. BA.441. H.519.II.2. AG.328.] Que explanatory, not making an addition, §2. [The number would be increased by the cavalry's return.]

The predicative gen. of possession, dementiae, §2. [Cf. consuetudinis, c.5. §2.] The partitive genitive with neutrals, quantum, nihil, §3. [RC.81.b.1. BA.294. H.397. AG.216.a.] Quis=any, with ne, §4., and st, §5. Expressions like sui purgandi. [Nothing like sui purgandorum ever occurs. RC.II.143. BA.399.Obs.1. H.542.I.N.1. AG.298.a.]

Quod with the subj. of virtual indirect narration, §5. [The subj. commisissent is used, because the words are given as part of the statement of the Germans. Cf.c.22.§1. RC.II.216. HF.198.2. BA.484.b. H.516.II. AG.341.d.] The phrases postridie ejus diei, majores natu, contra atque. Semi-deponent verbs, gavisisus, §6. [RC.68.b. H.465.2.N.2. AG.196.] The use of illos after quos in §6. [Seemingly because of the opposition to ipse, hence illos rather than eos. Cf. illum...ipse, e.12. §5.]

CAP. XIV.

1. acie triplici,—see Introduction, p. xxi. millium,—understand passuum. (RC.81.e. HF.130.7.) prius...quam,—cf. on e.12. §2. quid ageretur,—'what was going on,' lit.? (RC.99.d. HF.176.2.)

2. omnibus rebus,—‘by the whole state of affairs’; explained by et...suorum. et...et,—‘both...and.’ discessu,—‘departure’; freely, ‘absence.’ suorum,—referring to the principibus majoribusque natu of c.18. §4.

habendi,—App.40.; ‘of holding.’ capendi,—App.39. neque...dato,—trans. by ‘without.’

perturbantur,—‘are at a loss,’ lit. ‘are confused,’ (and hence ‘do not know.’) -ne...an...an,—‘whether...or...or.’ The three infinitives depend on praestaret,=‘it would be better.’ (RC.99.d. HF.176.2.)

3. pristini diei,—w. perfidia; ‘of the day before.’ (RC. 81.e. HF.180.7.) incitati,—‘irritated.’

4. Quo loco,—‘there,’ lit. ‘in which place’; referring to castris. (RC.85.k.) qui,—App.11.d.i. nostris,—RC.83.e.i. HF.105.9.

5. puerorum,—‘children,’ not ‘boys.’ suis,—masc.; ‘their families.’ domo excesserant,—‘they had left their homes,’ lit.? (RC.85.h.i.a. HF.85.2.) This showed that it was not an invasion for plunder but an emigration.

For the treachery which Caesar, doubtless for policy’s sake, displayed in this affair, he was severely censured at Rome, and Cato, one of the most prominent of his opponents, declared in the senate that Caesar should be delivered over to the Teneteri.

N.B.—Millium=millium pāssuum*, §1. [In this phrase passum is rarely omitted in Caesar, except after the gen. millium.] Indirect questions. [Simple, §1.; alternative, §2. The latter are rare in Caesar. He uses ne...an three times; utrum...an twice; and once an without any particle for the first part; three times also the first part of the alternative is entirely omitted for rhetorical purposes. ## CAP. XV.

1. Germani,—those spoken of in c.14. § 4. auditō,—trans. by ‘when,’ co-ordinate with cum...vidērēt. abjectis,—App.5.a.iii.

2. reliqua,—‘further,’ lit.? interfecto,—trans. by ‘as,’ giving the reason for fuga desperata. timore, lassitudine, vi,—with oppressi. perierunt,—from pereo.

3. ad unum,—‘to a man,’ lit.? ex,—‘after,’ ‘in spite of.’ tantī,—‘so formidable’; explained by cum...fuisset. numerus...m̄llium,—cf.c.12. § 1. eum, etc.,—may be translated by a parenthetic clause beginning with ‘for.’

4. iis,—the envoys of c.13. §§ 4-6. fecit,—‘gave.’

5. supplicia crueciatusque,—‘vengeance and cruelty,’ lit.? libertatem concessit,—i.e. he kept them with him, but no longer as prisoners.

The fear of the Gauls here mentioned is inconsistent with c.6. § 3., and Caesar’s release of the chief men inconsistent with the charge of treachery.

N.B.—The use of the abl. absol. in narration, and its various translations. [This is well illustrated in §§1.2. Such groupings of the abl. absol. should always be carefully studied. Notice that in this chapter, as appears to be the rule in Caesar, a cum clause is used only where a short phrase in the abl. absol., or some other common participial usage, is impossible.] Cum with the imperf. and pluperf. subj., vidērēt, pervenisset, § 1. [The difference in the tense used will be found to follow very closely the distinctions drawn in App.26.a.] Asyndeton in rapid and emphatic enumeration, § 2.

Transitive force of despero. [So in Caesar in the abl. absol. only.] Se and eum in simple clauses of oratio obliqua, § 5. Iis, illi, his, used of the same persons in §§ 4.5. [RC.92. BA.335.sqq.]

16. Caesar determines to cross the Rhine, and by overawing the Germans prevent further trouble with them.

CAP. XVI.

1. Germanico,—‘with the G.’ sibi...transeundum,—‘that he would have to,’ ctc.

illa fuit justissima,—‘this was the most cogent, (important),’ or ‘the strongest was.’ quod,—‘that.’ cum videret,—‘seeing.’ ut...venirent,—RC.99.a.2. HF.181.3.

rebus timere,—‘fear (be anxious) for...safety (interests).’ (RC.82.b.) cum intellegerent,—‘if they understood,’ lit. ‘when they should understand.’ posse, andere,—be careful to translate in a similar way; transire depends on both.

2. Accessit quod,—‘besides this,’ lit. ‘there came also (i.e. there was added) the fact that.’ (RC.109.i. HF.181.2.) quam commemoravi,—trans. freely, ‘which, as I have stated,’ etc., lit.? supra,—c.9. § 3. —transisse,=transiisse. (RC.66.) proelio,—dat. (RC.II.56.104. HF.120.4.) se cum his conjunxerat,—‘had joined them,’ lit.?

3. quos,—the Sugabri. qui postularent,—RC.99.a. HF.181.1. sibi Galliaeque,—trans. by ‘on.’ intulissent,—RC.II.220. HF.206.4. sibi dederent,—‘that they should surrender to him.’ Ut might have been used with dederent. (RC.99.a.2.i. HF.181.3.)

4. se invito,—‘against his wish,’ ‘without his leave,’ lit. ‘he (being) unwilling.’ App.5.a.N. Germanos...transire,—App.35.; the subject of non aequum, with which understand esse. non aequum,—‘unfair.’ existimaret,—for an original pres. indic. (RC.99.h.iii. HF.206.4.)

sui...esse imperli,—‘was under (lit. belonged to) his sway or power.’ (RC.81.a.i. HF.124.1.) quicquam,—subject of esse. cur postularet,—‘why did he claim?’ (RC.99.d. HF.209.6.)

5. qui unl,—‘who alone’; or more freely, ‘the only ones ... who’; subject of all three pluperfects. ex,—‘of,’ not ‘from.’ ut...ferret,—‘(begged) him to lend,’ lit.? (RC.99. a.2. HF.181.8.) premerentur,—RC.99.e.i. HF.198.2.

6. Id facere,—‘from doing so.’ occupationibns reipublieae,—‘by the pressure of state affairs.’ prohiberetur,—cf. on existimaret, §4. transportaret,—‘let him take... across.’ (RC.106.a. HF.207.5.)

ad, etc.,—lit. ‘with a view to,’ etc.; trans. ‘as an aid and ground of hope,’ or ‘to give assistance and hope.’ rellqui temporis,—App.2.c.; ‘for the future.’ futurum,—supply esse.

7. opinionem,—‘reputation.’ cjns,—i.e. Caesar’s. novissimo,—‘last.’ facto,—cf. on c.18. §1. ad,—‘among.’ possint,—trans. as though it were possent. (RC.107.a.iv.)

N.B.—The impersonal use of accessit, §2. [Virtually accedo is the passive of addo. Its subject is the quod clause following.]
 The subj. of purpose after qui, §3. The subjunctive in oratio obliqua. [Notice especially intulissent, §3., and premerentur, §§5., virtual indirect narration; postularet, §4., representing a question in the indicative; transportaret, §6., representing an imperative. RC.106.a.; II.216. HF.206.4.; 207.5.6. BA.448.520.522.] Indirect petitions, [§3., postularet...dederent; §5., orabant ut...ferret. The omission of ut in §3., and the fact that transportaret could equally well be classed here, show the development of the substantival clause of purpose from the subj. expressing a wish.]
 The infin. with postulo, §4. [Occasionally verbs of asking are treated as verbs of will or desire.] Quicquam in a question virtually equivalent to a negative statement, §4. [RC.II.189. HF.192.3. BA.358] Asyndeton in §5. The tense of orabant, §5., and pollicebantur, §§8. Two accusatives with transporto, §6. The abrupt transition to indirect statements in §§6.7. [The verb at the beginning of the oratio obliqua is orabant. It is not Latin usage to change the leading verb, as English often does, according as a statement, question, request or command is to be introduced; any verb or phrase which virtually implies that something was said is sufficient for introducing any or all forms of reported utterance.]

17. Description of the bridge Caesar builds over the Rhine.

CAP. XVII.

1. transire,—subject of both tutum esse and dignitatis esse. App.85.a. neque...statuebat,—‘and did not consider it consistent with his own dignity or that of the Roman people.’ (RC.81.a.i. HF.124.1.)

The objections urged are that to cross by boats would expose them more to attack while disembarking or reembarking, and would not impress the Germans so much as a more unusual mode.

2. summa difficultas...proponebatur,—‘very great difficulty presented itself,’ ‘the difficulty appeared very great.’ faciendi,—App.2.c. contendendum,—understand esse. Contendere id, ‘to strive earnestly at (for) that’; freely, ‘give all one’s energies to that end.’

3. Rationem, etc.,—‘this was the plan he adopted for the bridge,’ lit.? For the better understanding of the following description see the illustration on p. 21. At the place where Caesar is supposed to have crossed, the river is about 1500 ft. wide and 15 ft. deep.

bina,—‘in pairs,’ ‘two by two’; trans. with jungebat. sesquipedalia,—add ‘thick’ in trans. ab,—‘at.’ dimensa ad,—‘proportioned to,’ lit. ‘measured according to.’ intervallo inter se,—‘with an interval between them,’ ‘leaving a space between’; i.e. each pair of beams was fastened (probably by braces or crosspieces) so that a space of two feet was left between the two beams. Jungebat,—App.26. a.iv.

4. cum,—conj. Immissa,—trans. by active verb co-ordinate with desicerat and aegerat, ‘when he had let these down...and had secured (fastened) them,’ etc. machinationibus,—some floating structure. In flumen,—with immissa.

subliene modo,—‘like piles,’ lit. ‘in the manner of a pile.' directe ad perpendiculum,—‘perpendicularly,’ lit. ‘in a straight manner according to the plumb-line.’ prone ac fastigate,—‘inclined at an angle,’ lit. ‘in an inclined and sloping manner.’ [For these adverbs other editions read directa, prona ac fastigata, adjectives agreeing with haec.] ut...procumberent,—App.30.b. (RC.99.b. HF.187.2.) secundum...fluminis,—‘with (lit. according to) the current.’

5. his,—the tigna of § 4.; w. contraria. duo,—i.e. tigna; the word ‘beams’ may be inserted in trans. ad eundem modum,—‘in (lit. according to) the same way’; with juncta. intervallo, etc.,—‘at a distance of forty feet’; with statuebat. Some consider the difference to be measured at the surface of the water, others on the bottom of the river. quadragenum,= quadragenorum. (RC.58.c.) ab inferiore parte,—‘lower down,’ ‘farther down stream,’ lit. ‘at the lower part,’ i.e. of the river.

contra...conversa,—‘to meet the force and current of the river,’ lit. ‘turned against (facing).’ statuebat,—App.26.c.; ‘would fix.’

6. Haec utraque,—‘these two pairs’; subject of distinebantur. trabibus, etc.,—trans. by ‘by.’ insuper...immissis,—‘laid on above.’ bipedalibus,—cák on sesquipedalia, § 3. quantum...distabat,—lit. ‘as much as the joining was apart’; freely, ‘which was the space left between those beams.’ eorum,—those just described, § 4. binis fibulis,—the nature and the exact position (though not the purpose) of this ‘pair of braces or ties’ are unknown. utrimque...ab extrema parte,—‘at each end,’ lit. ‘on both sides at the end.’

7. quibus disciusis,—referring to the pairs of tigna. Trans. by ‘as.’ App.5.a.ii. in contrarium partem,—‘in opposite directions’; the form of expression seems to refer to the different slope of the opposite piles; others trans. ‘at the opposite ends.’ tanta, ea,—trans. both by ‘such’ rerum,—‘of the structure,’ lit.?

(RC.85.g.ii. HF.58.6.) incitavisset,—RC.99.k. illigata tenerentur,—i.e. the tigna; 'they were held fastened together.' (RC.99.b. HF.187.2.)

8. Haec,—i.e. all the framework described above. directa ...contexebantur,—'were connected by timbers laid upon them lengthwise.'

9. nihilo seciūs,—'none the less,' i.e. although already of sufficient strength; freely, 'besides all this.' et,—lit. 'both,' corresponding to et before aliae, § 10. Omit in trans. ad,—'on.' oblique agebantur,—'were driven obliquely (slanting).'

10. aliae,—understand sublicae agebantur. item,—either 'also,' or, as some think, referring to oblique, 'in the same way.' spatio,—'at...distance.' (RC.85.g. HF.58.6.)

sive,—'or,' lit. 'or if.' dejiciendi,—App.40. [Many editions omit causa, in which case the same translation should be given. (RC.104.b.iii.)] essent missae,—'should be sent down.' (RC.99.k.)

his defensoribus,—lit. 'these (being) defenders.' App.5.a.N. (RC.85.o. HF.102.3.N.) Trans. freely, 'by these defences.' Defensores, though not a technical name, is for brevity's sake used in the plan on page 21, for the aliae (sublicae) supra pontem.

earum rerum,—'their'; referring to trunci and naves; lit.? minueretur, nocerent,—(RC.99... HF.183.2.) The subject of nocerent is to be understood from earum rerum. neu,—'and that...not.' ponti,—App.8.b.

N.B.— Use of Imperf. Indic. [arbitrabatur, statnebat, §1., existimabat, §2., of reflections while thinking' over plans; jungebat, §3., statuebat, §5., distinebantur, §6., conterebantur, consteruebantur, §8., agebantur, §9., of acts frequently repeated.] The force of distributives, §§3.5.6. In other than final sentences neque would be used.] Predicative gen., §1. [Cf. n.n. to c.13.] The phrase inter se. [The substitute in Latin for a reduplicative pronoun. In §3. se refers to the object of the clause. App.11.d.] Force of defensoribus, §10. [Equal to defendantibus, except that it refers to a permanent attribute, not to a transitory act.]

18, 19. After Caesar crosses into Germany, some tribes sue for peace, others flee before him. Having achieved his object he returns in 18 days.

CAP. XVIII.

1. Decem diebus quibus,— 'within ten days after,' lit. 'within the ten days within which.' coepit erat,— 'had begun.' (RC.72.a.) effecto,— App.5.a.iii.

2. ad utramque partem,— 'at each end.'

3. quibus...petentibus,— 'on their asking for,' 'to their request for,' etc., lit.? App.5.a.N. (RC.85.o. HF.100.5.)

4. ex eo tempore quo,—freely, ‘ever since,’ lit.? comparata,—App.5.a.iii. Fugam comparare, ‘to prepare for flight.’ hortantibus iis,—with comparata; freely, ‘urged (instigated) by those,’ lit.? App.5.a.N. ex Teneteris,—with quos; trans. as if closely connected with iis. For the fact see c.16. §2. inibus,—RC.85.h. HF.158.2. in,—though with accus., trans. by ‘in.’

N.B.—The phrase decem diebus quibus, §1. [The two events mentioned come within the same period of a few days, at the beginning and end respectively.] Passive of coepi, §§1.4. [This is used with a dependent infinitive in the passive. RC.72.a. BA.216. H.297.I.1. AG.143.a.] Resumption of historical pres. with resumption of narrative, §1. Combination of the perfect and hist. pres. in the same sentence, §3. [In the abl. absol. in narrative, the former is equivalent to cum with Imperf. subj., the latter to cum with the pluperf. subj]. In §4. hortantibus depends on comparata, and its time is relative to that verb not to the principal verb.] Se abdere with in and accus. [The accus. is due to the implied idea of motion towards (in order to hide).] The pres. part. of dependents, §4. [RC.68.c. II.231.1. AG.135.a.]

CAP. XIX.

1. dies,—App.4.c. (RC.88.c. HF.69.9.) frumentis,—‘the crops.’ si,—‘in case or if.’ premerentur,—for original future indic. (RC.99.h.iii, 107.b. HF.211.3.2.(a.).)

2. fleri,—‘was being built.’ more suo,—‘according to their custom.’ (RC.85.e. HF.71.3.) It goes with concilio habitu, which we may trans. by a clause co-ordinate with dimisisse. App.5.a.iii.

in...partes,—‘in...directions,’ lit.? utl...demigrant,—following on the idea of telling implied in nuntios dimisisse. (RC.99.a.2. HF.181.3.) This idea must be brought out more clearly in English, so trans. freely, ‘instructing (or urging) them to move, etc. . . . and all . . . to gather,' etc. possent,—RC.99.c. HF.188.4. In,—'to.'

3. hunc,—referring to unum locum. esse deiectum,—from deligo. medium,—'in the centre'; really a predicate adj. agreeing with locum. hic,—adv. 'here,' referring to locum. exspectare,—like desertare, depending on constituisse. Ibi,—the same place as hic.

4. Quod,—App.11.b. confectis, consumptis, arbitratus,—trans. by verbs introduced by 'as.' Rem conficere, 'to attain an object,' lit.? quarum rerum causa,—'for which,' lit.? ut,—'namely to.' The ut clauses are explanatory of rebus.

ut Germanis metum inficeret,—'to inspire the G. with fear,' lit.? (RC.82.b. HF.5.4.) obsidione,—'from pressure, (oppression),' lit.? (RC.85.h. HF.158.2.)

satis...profectum,—understand esse; from proficio. et ad laudem, etc.,—'for (lit. with a view to) both glory and actual advantage.'

N.B.—Pauci='only a few,' §1. [Pauci is regularly opposed to multi, a few but not many; a few=some, several, as opposed to none, is non nulli, cf.c.6. §3.] Virtual indirect narration, [premerentur, §1. forming part of the statement made in promising. RC.11.218. BA. 474. AG.311.c.] In and the abl. with deponere, §2. [So regularly with verbs of placing, in spite of the idea of motion.] Substantive clause of purpose after phrase=announce, [nuntios dimisisse, §2., cf.c.11. §6. after nuntiarent, and 111.5.3. after certiores facit. This usage is very rare in Caesar.] The adjective in Latin where English uses an adv. or adverbial phrase, medium, §3. [RC.88.d. BA.61. H.443. AG.191.] Hic and ibi referring to the same place. [It is very peculiar that these occur in the same clause.]

Dactylic ending in constituisse, §3. [According to Cleero a period should not close with the end of a verse. Caesar has the dactylic ending now and then, however; cf.c.26. §3., c.27. §1.] Repetition of rerum, §4. [Cf. N.B. to c.7. §1.] Explanatory clauses introduced by ut, §4. [These are practically substantival clauses of purpose, in apposition with rebus.] The repetition of ut, §4. [This is because the various motives are being enumerated.]

Chap. 20-38.—The first expedition to Britain.

20-22. Caesar determines to make an expedition to Britain. He tries with little success to get information about the island, and gathers his fleet together.

CAP. XX.

1. exigua,—emphatic from position; ‘only a small.’ parte...relliquam,—App.5.a.n. (RC.85.o. HF.102.3.N.) Trans. by clause beginning with ‘although.’ Caesar,—should in English come nearer its verb. matureae sunt hemes,—trans. closely with in his locis.

ad septentriones vergit,—‘lies towards the north.’ loels,—see on o.1. § 10. contendit,—‘made an effort.’

bellis,—RC.85.b. HF.82.1. subministrata,—understand esse. intellegebatur,—‘he knew (was aware).’ App.26.a.i.

2. si,—‘even if.’ deficeret,—‘did not enable him to,’ etc.; lit.?

nsut,—App.8.c. (RC.82.c. HF.134.1.) Usui esse=‘to be of service, to be an advantage, to be useful.’ fore,—‘it would be.’ The subject is really the clause si modo...cognovisset. adisset,—for adisset. (RC.66.) For the mood see RC.99.h.iii. HF.206.4. genus hominum,—‘the character of the inhabitants.’

quae omnia...erant,—‘all of which was,’ lit.? fere,—with omnia. Ineognita,—this must be qualified by the statements in Bk.III.e.8., that the Veneti were in the habit of sailing to Britain, and in Bk.II.e.4., that Divitiacus, king of a Belgian tribe, also ruled over a part of Britain.

3. neque...qulsquam,—‘no one,’ lit.? illo,—adv. neque... quicquam,—‘and ... nothing’; subject of notum est. ipsi,—App.17.; i.e. the mercatores.

Gallias,—‘Gaul.’ The plural with reference to the division of Gaul among the Belgae, Galli, and Aquitani.

4. vocatis,—trans. by ‘although.’ App.5.a.ii. neque... neque,—‘not...or,’ lit.? Trans. the subjunctive clauses after reperire poterat. esset,—(RC.99.d. HF.176.2.) So the subjunctives which follow.

belli,—App.2.c. uterentur,—‘they had.’ qui essent idonei portus,—‘what suitable harbors existed (there were).’ ad,—‘for.’ majorum,—‘larger than usual’; the war-galleys and transports being larger than the coasting vessels of the Gauls.

N.B.—Concessive clauses, [with etsi, § 1., and in abl. absol., §§ 1.4.]

Ablative of time with words not in themselves indicating time, bellis, § 1. [Caesar also uses in with bello or bellis; where in is used the circumstances under which, rather than the time at which, are expressed.] Si clauses in indirect narration, § 2. [RC.99.h.iii.; 107.b. HF.210.3. BA.469.sq. H.527. AG.337. Notice the difference in tense in desiceret and adisset, etc. The advantage is regarded as accruing only after the information is gained.] Emphatic position of quisquam, § 3. Dependent clauses introduced by an interrogative, § 4. [Notice that the sequence of tenses is observed even in expressing what is true at all times, e.g. esest.] Use of aut to couple two closely connected ideas which jointly are connected with the rest of the sentence by neque, § 4. Position and force of essent, § 4. [The order of words shows that idonei is not a predicate, but an attributive adjective, and that essent is not the copula, but=existed.] Connection of words and clauses in § 2. si modo...cognovisset. [Et couples the first clause with the second, to which it is subsidiary; the asyndeton before the last clause marks off the two main ideas. There is also asyndeton between the nouns in the last clause.]

CAP. XXI.

1. ad haec cognoscenda,—with praemittit, not with idoneum. prlusquam faceret,—‘before making.’ (RC.99. f.iv. HF.201.5.) idoneum,—‘a suitable person.’ arbitrus,—App.37.a. navi longa,—Introduction, p. xxiii.

2. ut exploratis... revertatur,—‘after finding out...to return,’ or ‘to find out...and return.’ App.5.a. (RC.99. a.2. HF.181.3.)

3. trajectus,—the straits of Dover are meant.

4. quam...classem,—App.11.d.iv. (RC.98.vii.) ad,—‘for.’ Veneticum bellum,—see Bk.III.c.9. § 1.

mantur,—'embrace the alliance,' depending on hortetur.

9. regionibus,—'country.' quantum, etc.,—freely, 'so far as one could who,' etc.; more lit. 'so far as opportunity could be given to one.' Quantum facultatis (App.2.d.) is equivalent to tantum facultatis quantum, 'according to whatsoever (of) opportunity could be given to him.' navi, —RC.85.h. HF.158.2. auderet,—RC.99.c. HF.188.4. [For

qua...perspexisset,—RC.99.d. HF.176.2.

N.B.—Subj. after verbs of commanding with or without ut, §§1.8. [For the latter, cf.c.16. §3. and N.B.] Incorporation of antecedent into relative clause, §4. The present inf. after pollicor, §5.
[Here the word is irregularly (but in harmony with its derivation) used as a modal verb with the complementary infin. The regular construction is found in c.22, §1. and c.27. §1.] The use of abl.
absol. and acc. in the same sentence referring to the same thing, §6.
[This rare construction is not to be imitated in prose composition, (RC.II.52.c. HF.219.e. BA.422.b.), though found not infrequently in Caesar; cf.Bk.II.22.1., III.11.4. and IV.12.1.] Absence of connective between the first two of the four relative clauses in §7.

[This is because they are not eo-ordinate; the last three refer to the joint idea Communum quem...constituerat.] Gen. of price, magni, § 7. [The gen. is used only where the value is given generally, the abl. where it is specified; the gen. also is used more freely with verbs of valuing than with verbs of buying, etc.] RC.81.g. HF.150.2. BA.305. H.404.406. AG.215.c.] The reference of se, § 8. [Not, as regularly (RC.91.H.a.) to the subject of nuntiet, but to the person for whom the ambassador is speaking. The two are, as often, identified; cf. e.22. § 1.] Relative clause of characteristic, et...qui...auderet, § 9. [Some editors regard qui as causal, 'to him, seeing that he did not venture.' RC.99.g.jii. HF.198.4. BA.500.] Sequence of tenses with historical pres. [Where the pres. follows, the secondary sequence is used, §§ 1.9.; where the pres. precedes, either the primary sequence, §§ 5.8., or the secondary, c.11. § 6., c.14. § 2.]

CAP. XXII.

1. qui...excusarent,—cf. on pollicearantur, c.21. § 5.; so pollicerentur. de...consilio,—'for their previous policy or conduct,' lit. 'with regard to the policy of previous time.' (RC.81.e. HF.180.7.) They had joined the Belgian confederacy against Caesar two years before, and the next year had been in alliance with the Veneti; Caesar had made an unsuccessful attempt to reduce them at the end of the previous summer.

quod, etc.,—'in that (lit. because) being uncivilized,' etc. consuetudinis,—App.2.c. (RC.81.d.f.i.) The 'custom' was, as Virgil, the Roman poet, expressed it, "to lay down the law of peace, to be merciful to the conquered, and beat the haughty down."

populo,—cf. on sibi, c.16. § 3. fecissent,—RC.99.g.i. HF.198.2. se...facturos,—trans. by 'to' and infin. (RC.101.b.iii. HF.110.1.) ea quae,—trans. by one word. imperasset,—for imperavisset. (RC.66.) For the mood and tense see on postulassent, c.6. § 3.

2. satis,—'quite.' post tergum,—'behind him,' lit.? has tantularum, etc.,—'attention to such trifling matters.' Cf. c.16. § 6. (RC.81.d.) Britanniae,—dat.; meaning the expedition against Britain. anteponendas,—supply esse.

App.41. Iis imperat,—‘requires (or demands) of them,’ lit.?

Quibus,—the hostages. eos,—the Morini. in fidem,—‘into alliance,’ ‘under his protection.’

3. onerariis,—see Introduction, p. xxiii. coactis contractisque,—the former of levying, pressing into service, the latter of gathering to one place. quot,—‘the number which,’ lit. ‘as many as.’ duas,—the tenth (c.25, § 3.) and the seventh (c.32, § 1.) satis esse,—omit ‘to be’ in trans.; so in § 6.

quod, etc.,—‘all the ships of war he had besides,’ lit.? App.2.d. (RC.81.b.i. HF.69.10.) This whole clause forms the object of distribuit. quaestori, etc.,—see Introduction, p. xviii.

4. Huc accedebant,—‘besides this there were,’ lit. ‘to this were added.’ ab,—‘at a distance of.’ tenebantur quo minus,—‘were prevented (or kept) from being able,’ lit.? Quo minus may also be written as one word. possent,—RC. 99.a.1.i. HF.185.2.

5. ducendum dedit,—‘he gave...to lead or to be led’; ducendum is gerundive, agreeing with exercitum. (RC.104.c. HF.178.7.)

N.B.—Dum=‘while,’ with present tense, even in connection with past time, §1. [Commonly explained as an instance of the historical pres. Cf. c.32, §1., c.34, §3. RC.II.173. HF.201.3. BA.180. H.467. III.4. AG.276.e.] Qui with subj. of purpose, §1. Quod with the subj. in virtual oblique narration, §1. [RC.II.165.b. HF.198.2. BA.484.b.] Impero with the accus. and the dat. [§§1.2.; cf.c.21, §8.] Ab=‘at a distance of,’ §4. [In all the other cases in Caesar without specifying the place from which the distance is measured, e.g. Bk.II.7.3.; 30.3.; but here ex et loco is added.] The syntax of quo minus, §4. [Elsewhere in Caesar only once, after terrere. RC.II.156.158. HF.185.2. BA.130.131. Quominus is strictly a final particle, but the final idea is often dimmed.] The gerundive expressing the purpose or the object to be brought about, ducendum dedit, §5.; cf.c.29, §2, and Bk.III.11.4. RC.104.c. HF. 178.7. BA.400. H.544.N.2. AG.294.d.] The gerundive with causa and ad expressing purpose, §§1.3.

23. Caesar crosses over to Britain.

CAP. XXIII.

1. constitutis,—trans. by clause co-ordinate with nactus.
tertia vigilia,—the time from sunset to sunrise was divided into four equal periods, called vigiliae or watches, and the time from sunrise to sunset into twelve equal periods, called horae or hours. These periods would vary with the season; at the time here referred to (late in August) the sun rose about 5. A.M., and set about 7. P.M.

solvit,—the full expression is found in c.86 §3. ulteriorem,—‘farther,’ i.e. lying up the coast (to the N.E.) The exact localities are unknown.

2. cum,—‘as.’ tardius,—‘too slowly,’ lit. ‘more slowly (than they should.)’ (RC.88.b.) asset administratum,—App.24. Trans. ‘these set about their work,’ or ‘carried out their instructions.’

ipse,—opposed to quibus. hora,—cf. on § 1. expositas copias armatas,—‘the armed forces displayed’; exposita is chosen to suggest that their mere appearance was expected to overawe the invaders.

3. haec,—‘as follows,’ or ‘such’; more fully explained by atque...continebatur. ita anguste, etc.,—‘so closely bordered.’ [Many editions read angustis (with montibus), which must be translated ‘steep,’ a meaning difficult to account for.] posset,—RC.99.b. HF.187.2.

4. Hunc...arbitratus,—understand esse. dum convenienter,—trans. after ad...exspectavit; ‘till...should,’ etc. (RC.99.f.iii. HF.201.4.) ad,—‘until.’

5. cognovisset, vellet,—RC.99.d. HF.176.2. quae fieri vellet,—‘what he wished done.’

monuit...administrarentur,—‘instructed them to do everything (lit. that all things were to be done) at the [slightest] signal (lit. at a nod) and at the [proper] moment, ut...postularent,—ut=as; for the subj. see RC.99.e.iii. HF.206.4. maxime ut,—this ut need not be translated; it is a repetition of the preceding ut, to introduce the second subject of postularent. ut quae,—'inasmuch as these'; quae refers to maritimae res; ut quae is a little more forcible than quae alone; for the subj., which is not influenced by ut, see RC.99.g.iii. HF.198.4. administrarentur,—depends directly on monuit; ut might have been used to connect them; cf.c.21. § 8. (RC.99.a.2.i. HF.181.8.) ad nutum et ad tempus,—the former referring to celerem, the latter to instabilem motum.

6. dilmissis,—see on constitutis, § 1. dato, sublatis,—trans. by principal clauses. App.5.a.iii. aperto...litore,—'off a...shore'; really an abi. absol. App.5.a.N.

N.B.—The division of day and night. [What time of the day would hora quarta, § 2., and horam nonam, § 4., be?] Dum=‘until,’ § 4. with subj. of purpose, [indicating that for which one is looking or waiting. Cf.c.18. § 2. Caesar does not use donec, and has quoad only with the indic. (or subj. due to oratio obliqua, e.g. c.11. § 6.)] Uses of ut in § 5. [Note also the omission of ut with administrarentur; cf. c.21. § 8. and c.16. § 3. and N.B.] Quia causal,=‘seeing that these,’ with subj., § 5. [Cf. N.B. to c.21. § 9. Here this causal idea is heightened by ut; so ut pote and quippe also are used, though not in Caesar!] Large proportion of participles in § 6.

CAP. XXIV.

1. praemisso,—trans. by principal clause. quo genere,—lit. ‘which kind (i.e. of warriors),’ referring to both equitatu and essedariis; freely, ‘the class of warriors (or the sort of force) that.’ consuerunt,—cf. on c.6. § 1.

copitis,—RC.85.e.1. HF.236.N.11. navibus,—cf. on nave, c.21. § 9. egredi prohibebant,—App.26.d. Cf. on c.4. § 3.

2. has,—referring to what follows. nisi...non,—‘only,’ lit.?

militibus autem...desiliendum,—‘while the soldiers had to leap down’; so consistendum and pugnandum. App.24. (RC.96.b.; 194.a.ii. HF.178.6.) For the dat. see RC.82.d. HF. 178.4. ignotis locis,—‘unacquainted with the ground’; abl. absol.; lit.? impeditis manibus,—trans. by ‘with’; abl. absol. oppressis,—dat. agreeing with militibus.

3. cum,—‘whereas.’ illī,—App.18.b. membris expeditis,—cf. on impeditis manibus, § 2. notissimis locis,—‘perfectly familiar with the ground,’ lit.? Cf. on ignotis locis, § 2. insuetos,—‘(who were) trained (to this).’

4. generis pugnae,—‘style (or mode) of fighting.’ For the case cf. on consuetudinis, c.22. § 1. quo,—rel. pron. with uti; ‘as,’ lit.? uti, utebantur,—here meaning ‘display or show.’ Uti consuerant need not be rendered into English. consuerant,—cf. on § 1.

N.B.—Use of the perfect participle and the abl. absol. to carry on narration. [In narrating a series of actions Latin generally expresses the last only of the series, in which the others culminate, by a principal verb. Cf.c.23. § 6. and c.32. § 5.] Use of Romani in Caesar [Very seldom in Caesar’s own narrative, as in § 1. (nostri being used instead): generally in expressing the words or thoughts of the enemy, as in c.7. § 4., c.19. § 3., c.30. § 1., c.34. § 5.] Omission of cum with copitis, § 1. [So generally only when a march (or similar movement) is mentioned, and when there is an adjectival modifier. But see also c.21. § 3. RC.85.e.i. BA.p.178 fn.2. H.419.1. AG.248.a.]

The conative imperfect, § 1. [RC.97.b. HF.216.3.N.1. BA.181. H.469.II.1. AG.277.c.] The infin. with prohibeo, § 1. [The only modal construction in Caesar.] The gerundive with esse used impersonally, § 2. Polysyndeton in use of et, § 2. [This lends force to the detailed enumeration.] The agreement of eadem and quo, § 4. [In sense each of these belongs to both alacritate and studio; each agrees with the one next it. Caesar as a rule carefully avoids such collocations.]

CAP. XXV.

1. naves,—subj. of removeri, incitari and constitui.
quarum,—‘whose.’ Inusitator,—‘loss familiar,’ i.e. than that of the naves onerariae. et motus, etc.,—‘and (whose) movement was quicker (or freer) for service (or handling).’

ad,—‘on.’ apertum latum,—‘the exposed flank,’ i.e. the right side, unprotected by shields. hostes,—subject of propelli and submoveri. quaes res,—‘a manœuvre which,’ lit.? usui,—cf. on c.20. § 2.

2. remorum motu,—‘the Britons, like the Veneti (Bk.III. 15.3.), used sails only with their large vessels. paulum modo,—‘but only a little’; trans. after pedem retulerunt.

3. atque,—‘moreover,’ ‘and now.’ cunctantibus,—App. 5.a.N.; trans. by ‘while,’ or ‘as.’ qui,—‘he who.’ App. 11.d.i. aquillam,—Introduction, p. xxi. ut...eveniret,—App.29.a. (RC.99.a.2. HF.181.3.) ea res,—‘his act or purpose,’ lit.? legioni,—trans. by ‘for.’

inquit,—‘cried’; trans. before desilite. (RC.72.d. HF. 289.2.) desilite,—an imperative. vultis,—from volo. (RC.43. HF.147.) præstitero,—trans. by the English future. (RC.II.205.b.)

4. cum,—conj. magna,—‘loud.’ voce,—RC.85.e. HF. 71.3.

5. inter se,—‘one another,’ lit.? (RC.60.e.) ne...admitteretur,—‘not to incur,’ lit.? (RC.99.a.2. HF.181.3.) dederetus,—viz. the loss of the eagle. universi,—‘in a body’; § 6. shows that he is speaking only of those on the same ship as the standard bearer.

6. Hos item, etc.,—‘when those in the nearest ships saw them, they also followed and,’ etc.; lit. ‘when also they saw these from the nearest ships.’ subsecuti,—App.87.a.N.B. appropinquarunt,—for appropinquaverunt. (RC.66.)

N.B.—Use of quae res to refer to a preceding clause, §1. Present partic. in abl. absol., §8. Qui=is qui, §3. [The antecedent is thus absorbed in the relative generally only when it would stand in the same case; cf.c.8. §2. (an exception to this), c.10. §5., c.14. §4., c.34. §3.; so also in the neuter, cf.c.8. §1. and c.23. §5.] The use and position of inquit, §3. [RC.II.6.18. HF.289.2.N. BA.40. H.569.V. AG.345.c.] The nom. of a personal pronoun, ego, §3. [Here, as usual, emphatic by contrast; the contrast is further emphasized by certe, and by meum which is placed close to ego.] Position of meum, §3. [There is always a tendency in Latin to place personal and possessive pronouns, or pronouns serving as such, in juxtaposition when occurring in the same sentence.] The future perfect, praestitero, §3. [As the future perfect views a future act as completed, it is often used to express certainty or rapidity of accomplishment. RC.II.205.b. BA.191. H.473.1. AG.281.R.] The use of inter se=‘one another.’ [Here the se, which strictly is required after cohortati, is rendered unnecessary by inter se. Generally, but not here, inter se=‘one another’ with some preposition, cf.c.17. §3., c.30. §1.] Brachylogy in §6. [For ‘when those in the nearest ships saw them from the nearest ships.’]

CAP. XXVI.

1. Pugnatum est,—App.24. (RC.96.b. HF.164.2.)
alius alia ex navl,—‘the men from the different ships,’ lit. ‘[one man from one ship and] another from another ship.’ On account of this change in number, trans. occurrerat and se aggregabat also as through plur. quibuscumque... occurrerat,—‘whatever...they fell in with.’ For the dat. see RC.II.56. HF.120.2. For the tense see RC.II.204.a. So conspexerant, §2., and conspexerat, §3.

2. vero,—‘while.’ notis,—cf. on ignotis locis, c.24. §2.; freely, ‘were familiar with...(and).’ App.5.a.iii. ubi,—‘whenever.’ singulares,—‘in small (or scattered) groups,’ lit. ‘one by one.’ adoriebantur,—trans. by ‘would.’ App. 26.c. So circumsistebant and conjiciebant. plures,—not ‘more.’

3. universos,—‘the main body’; opposed to sing<sup>r</sup> res.
4. item,—‘(and) also.’ quos...his,—freely, ‘to whomsoever,’ transposing the clauses; or ‘whenever...any...to c.28. ad pristinam, etc.,—'to complete Caesar's usual good fortune,' lit.?

N.B.—Combination of pluperf. and imperf. in frequent co-sentences, §§ 1.2.4. [The pluperf. is used to express the relative time of the two actions, the imperf. to express repeated action. In such cases in the pluperf. clause we may generally use 'ever.' RC.II.204.a. BA.192.
H.472.2. AG.290.] Change from perf. jussit to imperf. *submitte-

[In Cicero and later Latin the participle was often used 'to express the actual condition of the object' perceived. But at all times, as in Caesar, the infin. was more common; e.g. Bk.II.24.4.] Simul for the more frequent simul atque, § 5. [ Cf.c.27. § 1.] Frequency of ending -erunt in § 5., at the end of four consecutive clauses. [This is rare, and should be avoided in writing Latin by having fewer co-ordinate clauses of the same structure.]

27. The Britons sue for peace, which Caesar grants after demanding hostages.

CAP. XXVII.

1. simul...recepérunt,—trans. after statim...miserunt.
daturos,—understand esse, and se as subject. quaeque,— two words. imperasset,—cf. on c.22. § 1.

2. quem supra, etc.,—'who, as I stated before, was sent,' etc.; lit? supra,—in c.21. § 6.

6. Huic, illi,—object and subject of comprehenderant, which is to be translated before e navi...deferret. egressum,
—'on his landing,' 'when he landed,' lit? cum,—'although.' modo,—'in the character (or capacity) of'; or freely, 'as' deferret,—RC.99.i.iii. HF.204.5.

4. rei,—‘act.’ App.2.c. contulerunt,—‘laid.’ imprudentiam,—i.e. their ignorance of the customs observed between nations. Cf.c.22. § 1. ut ignosceretur,—‘to be pardoned.’ App.24. (RC.99.a.2. HF.181.3.)

5. quod,—‘that’; with bellum...intulissent. For the subj. see RC.II.165.b. HF.198.2. cum,—‘although,’ or ‘while.’ missis,—App.5.a.iii.; trans. by clause co-ordinate with petissent. petissent,—for petiissent. (RC.66.) For the mood see RC.99.i.iii. HF.204.5.

ignoscere,—understand se as subject; notice the tense. imprudentiae,—App.3.b. (RC.82.e.i. HF.105.9.)

6. arcessitam,—App.37.a.N.B.; trans. by clause in active, co-ordinate with datus; lit.? The tense of arcessitam is relative to datus not to dixerunt.

7. agros,—‘the country, the country districts.’

N.B.—The asyndeton in § 1, obides, etc. [This is because these words were felt to be but an explanation of legatos de pace miserunt.]

The number and tense of demonstraveram, § 2. [This is one of the few cases where Caesar uses the first person sing. The pluperf. seems to be used because the sentence is equivalent to quem C. praemiserat.] Omission of se with the infin., §§1.5. [So not infrequently in quotations in Caesar, when easily supplied from the context. But the beginner in Latin should avoid this omission in Latin prose composition.] Impersonal constr. in passive of intransitive verbs, ignosceretur, § 4. [RC.II.57. HF.164.1. BA.5.217. H.301.1. AG.146.c.] Quod with subj. of virtual indirect narration, § 5. [Cf.c.22. § 1.] 28, 29. A storm does great damage to the vessels carrying the cavalry and to those which had already crossed.

CAP. XXVIII.

1. His rebus,—‘by this means,’ lit.? post diem...ventum,—‘three days after he came’; more lit. ‘on the fourth day after’; cf. on c.9. § 1. est ventum,—App.24. demonstratum est,—‘mention has been made,’ lit.? App.24. sustulerat,—‘had taken on board.’ superiore,—in c.28. § 1. called ulteriorem. vento,—RC.85.o.iv. HF.102.3.n.

2. viderentur,—‘were in sight.’ posset,—RC.99.b. HF. 187.2. So referrentur and dejicerentur. inferorem,—i.e. towards the S.W. propius,—used like a prep. (RC.88.f.iii.) sul,—‘to themselves.’ (RC.81.d.)

3. quae tamen, etc.,—‘and as these, having nevertheless (i.e. in spite of the danger) cast anchor, were filling,’ etc.; or more freely, ‘had cast... and were,’ etc. [Another possible interpretation is to take tamen as applying to the whole sentence and opposed to the words just preceding; in this case trans. by ‘however,’ making this the first word. To regard tamen as opposed to ancoris jactis and connected with complerentur, disregards the natural order of the words, and implies that the ships were more likely to be filled while running free than while at anchor off the open coast.] cum,—conj. necessario...prefatae...petierunt,—‘they were compelled to put out... and make for,’ lit.? adversa nocte,—‘in the face of the night, into the night,’ lit. ‘the night meeting them.’ App.5.a.N.

N.B.—The phrase post diem quartum quam, §1. [Strictly the phrase should be post die quarto quam=‘on the fourth day after’; and the meaning, ‘later (i.e. on the fourth day) than’, post being an adverb. Its position, however, has caused it to influence the case that follows as if it were a preposition. The usage is rare in classical Latin. It must be remembered also that in reckoning from one date to another, the Romans counted both extremes, so that the phrase really=the third, not the fourth, day after.] The impersonal passive construction, in §1. twice. [Cf. N.B. to c.27.]

Lack of connective between de quibus... and quae..., §1. [Cf. N.B. to c.4.] Use of solverunt, §1. [Generally naves is (not as here, the subject, but) the object, expressed as c.96. §3., or understood as c.23. §1.] Appropinquo with the dative, §1. [Caesar uses only the dative, not ad, except in Bk.II.19.2. where the reading is disputed; the idea of nearness to, not motion towards, predominates.] Propius with the accus., §2. [Cf. N.B. to c.9.] Sui, objective gen., with periculo, §2. [This is more emphatic than suo would have been. Notice also that se and suis in a sentence of result refer to the subject of the sentence of result, not to that of the leading verb.] The phrase adversa nocte, §5.

CAP. XXIX.

1. nocte,—that of Aug. 30-31, according to astronomical calculations. A reference to c.28. § 1. will then show on what day Caesar must have crossed to Britain. esset,—‘there was.’ (RC.99.b.ii. HF.182.4.) qui dies,—‘a period (or time) which.’ maritimos, etc.,—‘very high tides.’ consuevit,—‘is wont,’ or trans. by ‘usually.’ incognitum,—the tides at the straits of Dover are 20 or 30 feet high, those in the Mediterranean insignificant.

2. uno,—‘one and the same.’ naves...complebat,—trans. by passive voice. App.23. So onerarias...afflictabat. quibus,—‘in (lit. with) which.’ transportandum,—‘to be brought over.’ (RC.104.c. HF.173.7.) ad,—‘at.’ neque ulla,—‘and no,’ lit.? administrandi, auxiliandi,—the former of those on board, the latter of those on shore. In trans. add ‘them’ (i.e. the ships) with the former.

3. fractis,—trans. by ‘as.’ amissis,—freely, ‘having lost.’ App.5.a. magna, etc.,—‘great alarm inevitably (or as was inevitable) arose throughout,’ etc.; lit.? id quod,—lit. ‘a thing which’; quod is acc., subj. of accidere. exercitus,—lit. ‘of,’ i.e. on the part of.

4. neque,—trans. by ‘no.’ possent,—RC.99.c. HF.188.4. usul,—cf. on c.20. § 2.

omnibus constabat,—‘it was generally understood (or agreed’); omnibus, dative; more lit. ‘among all.’ hiemari oportere,—‘that they must winter.’ App.24. (RC.96.b. HF.164.2.) in hiemem,—trans. in by ‘for.’

N.B.—Luna plena, qui dies, §1. [The incorporation in the relative clause of an antecedent in apposition with another word less general in meaning; cf.c.1. §1.] Gerundive with curo, §2. [Cf. N.B. to c.22. §5.] Id quod, referring to a clause, §3. [Here, as is regularly the case, the clause follows.] Relative clause of characteristic, §4. [RC.99.c. HF.188.4. BA.504. H.503. AG.320.a.] The impersonal passive construction in the infin., hiemari, §4. In and accus. of the time for which arrangements are being made beforehand, in hiemem, § 4. Et non rather than neque, § 4. [This emphasizes the words with which non is directly connected.] Construction with oportet and necesse est, §§ 3. 4. [The infin. is the only mood used by Caesar.]

30, 31. The Britons take advantage of these misfortunes and renew the war. Caesar, suspecting this, makes counter preparations.

CAP. XXX.

1. This long sentence may be conveniently broken into four in English, viz. at collocuti, transportaverat and producere. principes,—subj. of duxerunt, § 2. collocuti,—App.37.a.N.B. inter se,—‘with one another.’ Romanis deesse,—freely, ‘that the Romans were without,’ lit. quaes,—referring to castrorum. hoc angustiora,—freely, ‘all the smaller’; more lit. ‘more contracted for this reason.’ (RC.85.g.ii.)

2. optimum factu,—‘the best thing to do.’ (RC.105.b. HF.175.) duxerunt,—‘concluded, thought.’ rebellione facta,—trans. by clause co-ordinate with prohibere. App.5.a.iii. Rebellionem facere, ‘to renew the war.’ frumento,—RC.85.h. HF.158.2. prohibere, producere,—the subject of esse. (RC.101.c. HF.108.4.) rem,—‘the campaign.’ superatis,—App.5.a.ii.; trans. by ‘ii.’ reditu,—cf. on frumento, above.

3. rursus,—not ‘a second time,’ but referring to the change from pace confirmata (c.28. § 1.) to rebellione facta. agris,—as in c.27. § 7. deducere,—‘to bring down,’ i.e. to the coast, to the place where they were to begin war.

N.B.—Hoc anticipating a quod clause, § 1. [So eo. This use is found chiefly with comparatives, or words implying a comparison; it is in its origin an abl. of measure of difference, but seems often to merge into the abl. of cause.] The supine in -u. [RC.105.b. HF.175. BA.101.] The conditional abl. absol., § 2. The mood of confidebant, § 2. [Caesar is not quoting reasons put forward by themselves.]

CAP. XXXI.

1. ex eventu navium,—‘from what had happened to his ships,’ lit. ‘from the fate of.’ ex eo, quod,—‘from the fact that.’ fore, etc.,—‘suspected (or began to suspect) that that would happen which (actually) did occur.’ ad,—‘for or to meet.’ subsidia,—‘resources.’

2. quae earum,—App.11.d.iv. Trans. ‘of the ships which had been,’ etc. quae,—‘whatever.’ res,—‘purpose.’

3. cum ... administraretur,—App.24.; ‘as the soldiers worked,’ lit.? Cf.c.28. § 2. studio,—RC.85.e. HF.71.3. amissis,—trans. by ‘although.’ reliquis...effecit,—freely, ‘he made it possible to sail satisfactorily with the rest,’ lit. ‘he brought it about (or managed) that there could be sailing,’ etc. navigari,—App.24. posset,—RC.99.b. HF.187.2.

N.B.—A neuter pronoun in apposition with a clause, ex eo, quod, etc., § 1. [Cf. id quod, c.29. § 3.] The mood of accidit, § 1. [Id quod accidit was not the suspicion but the writer's substitute for it, hence the indicative. The idea quod accidit could not possibly have been part of his thought. Cf.c.32. § 2. and c.35. § 1. In this last case, however, the etiam also might be used.] Incorporation of antecedent in the relative clause, quae...naves, earum, § 2. [This is frequent when the relative clause precedes the clause with the antecedent.] Tense of the principal verbs throughout. [In §§ 1.2. imperf., though for different reasons; in § 3. perfect.]

82. The Britons surprise a legion out foraging.

CAP. XXXII.

1. ex consuetudine,—‘as usual,’ lit.? referring only to una. frumentatum,—the supine; trans. by ‘to’ and infin. (RC.105.a. HF.174.3.) missa,—trans. by ‘when’; so interposita. neque ulla,—cf.c.29. § 2. ad,—‘up to.’ interposita,—‘had arisen,’ i.e. between the time of the surrender and the present. cum,—‘as or since,’ explaining the preceding words. hominum,—‘of the natives.’ ventitaret,—‘kept coming.’ App.26.e. (RC.75.III. HF.303.a.) consuetudo ferret,—‘was customary or usual,’ lit. ‘custom allowed.’ (RC.99.e.iii. HF.206.4.) in ea...partem,—‘was visible in the direction in which,’ lit.?

2. id quod erat,—‘as was actually the case,’ lit.? Id is explained by aliquid...consilii. aliquid consilii,—App.2.d. initium,—understand esse. in stationibus,—‘on guard’; the plural because at each of the four gates would be a cohort. in stationem succedere,—‘to take their place on guard.’ more freely, ‘to relieve them’; the sing. of the general idea of guarding. reliquas,—how many? Introduction, p. xvi. armari,—‘to arm themselves. (RC.96.c.)

3. panlo longius,—‘some little distance.’ Cf. on c.26. §5. sustinere,—‘were holding their own (or their ground);’ cf. on c.11. §6. conferta,—trans. by ‘as,’ giving the reason for ex omnibus partibus.

4. demensso,—trans. by clause with ‘because,’ co-ordinate with erat reliqua. erat reliqua,—‘remained,’ lit.?

5. dispersos, depositis, occupatos,—trans. by clauses introduced by ‘when’; nostros is to be supplied from §4. adorti,—trans. by clause co-ordinate with perturbaverant. incertis ordinibus,—trans. by ‘as,’ giving the reason for perturbaverant, namely, that it was difficult for the men to find their own cohorts.

N.B.—Predicate nom. with appellabatur, §1. [RC.II.70. H.362.2.2. AG. 176.] The numbering of the Roman legions. [The numbers given were in the order of their levying. Though Caesar had with him the tenth legion, he had never yet had ten legions under him.]

The supine in...um, §1. [RC.105.a. HF.174.3. BA.402.] Antecedent repeated in relative clause, quam in partem, §1. [Cf. c.7. §1. and c.19. §4. This repetition, which is most frequent with pars, res, locus and dies, is due to a desire for clearness, even at the expense of elegance.] The frequent repetition of reliquas, §§2.4.5. [Caesar does not seem to object, as a modern writer would, to this frequent use of the same word.] The mood of erat, §2. [Cf. N.B. to c.31. §1.] Partitive gen. with neutrals, aliquid, §2. So with nihil, c.1. §7., with quicquam, c.1. §10., with quantum, c.19. §§2., with quod, c.22. §3.] The pluperfect indic. in §§4.5. [Of events prior to Caesar’s arrival in §3.] The middle or reflexive use of passive verbs, armari, §2. [RC.96.c. BA.20. H.465. AG.111.N.1.]

83. The British mode of fighting with chariots.

CAP. XXXIII.

1. Genus,—‘manner.’ hoc,—‘as follows’; the predicate. per omnes partes,—‘in all directions.’ ipso terrorc equitum,—‘by the very (or mere) terror caused by their horses,’ lit.? (RC.81.c.) ordines,—of their opponents. equitum,—i.e. their own, so that after the warriors on the chariots had dismounted, foot soldiers and cavalry alternated. Caesar had no cavalry with him.

2. ita,—‘in such a way.’ illi,—App.18.b.; i.e. those who had dismounted to fight on foot. habeant,—RC.99.b. HF. 187.2.

3. tantum efficiunt,—‘become so proficient or expert,’ lit.? uti...consuerint,—for consueterint. (RC.99.b. HF. 187.2.) loco,—‘ground.’ per,—‘along.’

N.B.—The phrase ex essedis pugnae, §1. [Nouns are joined to each other by prepositions very seldom in Latin, and, as a rule, only when the word on which the prepositional phrase depends is of verbal origin. Cf. in Britanniam trajectus, c.21.§3.] Ipse, §1.—‘very,’ [i.e. Itself and nothing else.] Cum=‘whenever,’ with the perfect indic., §1. [See N.B. to c.26. on frequentative sentences. In such sentences, when the reference is to present time, the perfect and present respectively are used for the pluperf. and imperf.]

84-86. On Caesar's approach the Britons withdraw, and in a second attempt are routed and submit to Caesar, who at once returns to Gaul as the season is getting late.

CAP. XXXIV.

3. haec,—referring to the whole incident of the attack. occupatis,—trans. by 'while'; referring to the return to the camp, the care of the wounded, the preparations for an attack, etc. qui,—App.11.d.i.; i.e. the Britons spoken of in c.32, § 1. erant reliqui,—as in c.32, § 4. discesserunt,—i.e. from the country districts to their strongholds.

4. secentae sunt,—App.1.N.B. continerent,—trans. as if indic. (RC.99.c. HF.188.4.)

5. praedicaverunt,—'announced,' perhaps with the added idea of 'boasting.' quanta,—'what or how favorable.' faciendae,—App.40.; 'for obtaining.' sui liberandi,—'for freeing themselves.' (RC.11.134.) daretur,—RC.99.d. HF. 176.2. expulissent,—cf. on adisset, c.20. § 2. (RC.99.h.iii.; 107.b. HF.211.N.)

6. His rebus,—as in c.28. § 1.

N.B.—The various uses of the abl. in the chapter. [Note especially the heaping of abl. in § 1.] Asyndeton and polysyndeton both used in contrasting clauses, §§ 1.4. Relative clause of result, quae, § 4. [= tantae ut.] Continere and abl. with and without in, §§ 4.2. [The latter, probably an abl. of means, is the more usual construction. RC.85.a.ii.g. and fn.] Dependent Interrogative clauses, § 5. The phrase sui liberandi. [Cf. N.B. to c.13. § 5.] The phrase in perpetuum. [Cf. in hiemem, c.29. § 4. and N.B.] The tense of expulissent, § 5. [For the future perf. of the actual words used.]

CAP. XXXV.

1. idem... fore,—'that the same thing would happen.' ut... effugerent,—'namely that... would escape,' explanatory of idem. (RC.101.b. v. HF.217.5.) essent pulsi,—cf. on adisset, c.20. § 2. dictum est,—App.24.

2. diutius,—‘any longer,’ i.e. than the beginning of the battle. ac,—we may trans. ‘but.’

3. secuti ... occiderunt,—understand nostrī. tanto spatio,—freely, ‘as far,’ lit. ‘within (or over) as great a space.’ quantum...efficere,—‘as their speed and strength allowed,’ lit.?

N.B.—The mood of acciderat. [Cf. N.B. to e.31. §1.] Ut introducing an explanatory clause, with the subjunctive of result, §1. [Here the ut clause is really in apposition with idem, and thus connected with fore.] Tense of effugerent and essent pulki, §1. Comparative with standard of comparison to be supplied from the context. [diutius, §2. = ‘longer’ (than the beginning of the battle); cf. tardius, c.28. §2. = ‘more slowly’ (than they should), and angustiora, c.30. §1. = ‘smaller’ (than usual).] The phrase tantum spatio quantum, §3. [Spatium is not to be understood with quantum, which is used substantively.] A relative and a demonstrative in the same sentence of the same person, quos...ex iis, §3. [This is not infrequent in Caesar, and is more emphatic than a more condensed expression would have been. Notice, too, that in this clause the usual clear indication of a change of subject is wanting.] Position of longe lateque, §3. [Thus in effect an attribute of aedificis.]

CAP. XXXVI.

2. His,—‘for these.’ die,—‘the time or the season.’ die propinqua, infirmis navibus,—App. 5.a.N.; trans. by ‘as,’ subjiciendam,—understand esse.

3. medium noctem,—‘midnight.’

4. quae,—i.e. the ships. ex...duae,—we should say ‘two of the transports,’ lit.? quos reliqui,—‘as the others,’ lit. ‘which the other (crews reached); reliqui, masc., as he is thinking of the men rather than of their vessels. infra,—i.e. towards the S.W.

CAP. XXXVII.

1. Quibus navibus,—the two mentioned in c.86. §4. cas- tra,—that of Sulpicius Rufus, e.22. §6. proflisceens,—'on setting out.' (RC.102.a. HF.100.4.) primo,—adverb. non ita magno,—'with not a very large,' lit.? si...nolent,— 'if they did not wish to be killed'; sese, subj. of interfici.
(RC.II.22.) nolent,—RC.99.h.iii. HF.206.4.

2. ad clamorem,—'at (or in answer to) the shouting.'
hominum,—as in c.82. §1. suis auxilio,—'to aid his men,' lit.? (RC.82.c. HF.184.1.)

3. amplius horis,—'more than,' etc. Horis may be the
abl. of comparison, equivalent to quam horas (RC.85.f.
HF.55.5.), or the omission of quam may, as is customary with amplius, have no effect on the case (RC.II.123.c.2.) and horis be the abl. of time within which (RC.85.b.iv.) pauca,— 'but a few.'

4. postea quam,—generally written as one word; referring to primo, §1.

N.B.—Time reference of present and perf. partic. The accus. and infin. with nolo, §1. [With volo and nolo, when the subj. of both verbs is the same, either the simple (complementary) infin. or the accus. and infin. construction may be used, the former being far the commoner.] The double dative (of purpose and interest) with mitto, §2. The phrase amplius horis quattuor, §3. [Cf. N.B. to c.12. §1.] In conspectum venire, used passively, §4. [In c.12.

CAP. XXXVIII.

1. rebellionem fecerant,—cf. on c. 80. § 2.

2. siccitatem,—trans. by singular; the plural is, according to Latin idiom, due to the plural paludum. The statement here seems inconsistent with c. 34. § 4. que...habe- rent,—'had no place to which to retreat,' lit. 'had not whither they should retreat.' (RC.II.25. HF.184.1.N.) Trans.

quo...haberent before proper...paludum. quo, etc.,—quo referring to paludum, though agreeing in gender and number with the predicative perfugio (RC.II.197.e.), 'which they had used as,' etc. (RC.II.76.) fuerant usi,—RC.97.g.iii. In potestateim venerunt, 'fell into the hands,' lit.?

3. In,—cf. on c.18. § 4.

4. legionum,—trans. by 'for.' neglexerunt,—add in trans. 'to do so.'

5. His rebus,—referring to all the events of the summer's campaign. ex litteris Caesaris,—'in accordance with (or in consequence of) despatches from C.' dlerum,—trans. by 'for' or by English possessive. (RC.81.e. HF.180.7.) sup- plicatio,—'a public thanksgiving,' celebrated by solemn sacrifice in the temples at Rome. At the end of the campaign two years before, Caesar writes, "and for these acts a thanksgiving for fifteen days was decreed, an honor which up to that time no one had received."

N.B.—The plural of an abstract noun, siccitates, § 2. [Here, as often in Latin, the plural of an abstract noun is used referring to the var-

APPENDIX I.

HINTS AND SUGGESTIONS FOR THE TRANSLATION OF CAESAR'S LATIN.

THE CASES.

1. Nominative; always the subject (or in agreement with the subject) of an indicative or subjunctive, [rarely of historical infinitive, 36.] N.B.—Occasionally the subject may be placed after the verb in Eng., and 'there' prefixed to the verb; e.g. erat difficultas, 'there was difficulty.'

2. Genitive; (a) may generally be translated by of;

(b) Often by the Eng. possessive forms;

(c) Where these do not yield satisfactory sense, translate by as regards, for which some preposition, in, for, from, etc., may generally be substituted; e.g. opinio virtutis, 'reputation as regards (i.e. for) valor'; usus belli, 'experience as regards (i.e. in) war.'

(d) With a few words, chiefly neutrals used substantively, such as quid, nihil, tantum, quantum, satis, aliquid, millia, translate without of as though the words were in agreement; e.g. aliquid consilii, 'some prudence,' lit. 'something of prudence.'

3. Dative; (a) translated generally by to, sometimes by for.

(b) Sometimes the verb with which the dative is connected is translated freely, not literally, into Eng., and the Eng. verb requires the omission of to or for; e.g. provinciae imperat, 'he orders the province,' lit. 'he gives orders to the province'; nocet navibus, 'it harms the ships,' lit. 'it is harmful to the ships.'

(c) In a few cases, especially with the words usus, auxilium and praesidium, the dative (which tells the purpose something serves) is to be translated by the Eng. predicate nominative (i.e. without a preposition), or by as, (or sometimes by infin. with to.)

(d) With the gerundive [41] by by.

4. Accusative; (a) the object of transitive verbs, translate without any preposition.

(b) The subject of an infin. [34], translate as if it were the nominative.

(c) With words or phrases referring to time, translate with or without for (telling how long some action has taken).

(d) With words or phrases referring to distance or measurement, translate with or without for, (telling how far some one has gone, is distant, or something extends).

5. Ablative; (a) If connected with a perfect participle also in the ablative and of the same gender and number, these words are without close grammatical connection with the rest of the sentence, and this 'ablative absolute construction' may be translated in a variety of ways; e.g. magno eorum numero interfecto, domum reverterunt (lit. 'a large number of them having been slain, they returned home'), 'having slain, (or) after slaying, (or) on slaying, (or) when they had slain, (or) after they had slain, etc.'; magnis copiis coactis, castra oppugnant (lit. 'a large force having been collected, they attack the camp'), 'collecting a large force, they attack, etc., (or) they collect a large force and attack, etc.'

A literal translation (into the rare Eng. nomin. absolute) is scarcely ever a good rendering. Translate generally by one of the three following ways:

i. By the Eng. active participle in ing, or the Eng. gerund (verbal noun) in ing with a preposition, after, on, sometimes by.

ii. By a conjunction, generally when, as, after, sometimes if, although, since; the verb which follows may often be well turned from Lat. passive to Eng. active voice [23].

iii. By a clause (in the indicative or infinitive as the case may be) of the same grammatical value as the clause with which the ablative absolute phrase is connected; to couple these similar or coördinate clauses, insert and; sometimes but; here also a change to the active voice is often advisable [23].

NOTE.—This ablative absolute construction occurs less frequently with the present participle, or with an adjective or noun in place of a participle. With the present participle, trans. generally by a clause beginning with while, sometimes although, as, if, and containing a verb in the progressive form. Where there is no participle, supply being between the two ablatives, and this will give the meaning of the phrase and suggest a suitable translation. If a negative occurs in the ablative absolute phrase, translate by without.

(b) In most other cases translate by a preposition, by or with, less frequently in or from. The sense of the context will generally indicate which to choose.

(c) With words or phrases relating to time, translate by in, on, at (telling either the time when, or the period within which something has happened); sometimes the Eng. preposition may be omitted altogether. With the adverbs post or ante, the ablative tells how long before or after.

(d) With words denoting a quality, or in some way describing a person or thing just mentioned, translate by of. This ablative is connected with a noun not with a verb, and does not occur without some modifier in the ablative.

6. THE PREPOSITIONS.

(The order of frequency in Caesar is ad, in with abl., in with acc., ex, ab, cum, de, per, inter, pro, propter, apud, sine, post, trans, ante.)

A, ab: (a) by (so only with passive verbs, to express the personal doer of the act.)

(b) from.

(c) at, on, in, (with pars, latus, agmen, cornu, frons, denoting direction).

Ad: (a) to, towards, or of movement with hostile intent, sometimes against.

(b) with a view to, for which for or to may generally be substituted (especially with gerund or gerundive [39, 40]).

(c) near, by.

Ante: before, (generally of time not place).

Apud: among, with.

Contra: (a) against. (b) over against, opposite.

Cum : with [see note to 31].

De : (a) about, concerning.

(b) from; especially with causa, where it is better to substitute for.

Ex, (rarely e) : (a) from.

(b) of, (in speaking of part of a larger number, or of a material)
(c) in, on, at, (with pars denoting direction).

In, with the Accus. : (a) into, to.

(b) against, at, on, (of a hostile act or movement).

(c) into the country of, (with names of native tribes).

In, with the Abl. : (a) in, sometimes on.

(b) among, in the country of.

Inter : (a) among. <sup>1</sup>Inter se=one another, generally with a preposition suggested by the context.

(b) between.

Per : through, by means of, by.

Post : after, behind.

Pro : (a) before, (of place).

(b) in place of, as, in return for, in accordance with.

Propter : on account of, because of.

Trans : across, beyond.

ADJECTIVES.

7. As the adjective (while agreeing in case, gender and number with the word to which in sense it belongs), is often separated from that word (either for emphasis or euphony), it is necessary to be watchful of the indications of agreement afforded by the ending.

8. Sometimes the adjective does not agree with any word, but is used substantively, in the masculine referring to persons, in the neuter to things; e.g. omnes, all; reliqui, the rest; alii, others; omnia, all things, everything; multa, many things, much.

9. In many cases what seems to be an adjective is really an adverb, (the acc. and abl. cases being often used adverbially); e.g. multum, multo, plurimum, facile, facilius, subito, certo, necessario, primum, una.

10. The comparative and superlative forms are often used when no comparison is being made. The superlative is often to be translated by very (exceedingly, fully) with the positive form, and often the positive alone is a sufficient rendering. The comparative is sometimes to be translated by too, rather, unusually, or considerably, with the positive form. This applies to adverbs also, as well as adjectives.

THE PRONOUNS.

(These are arranged in the order of frequency of occurrence.)

11. Qui, quae, quod; the relative pronoun; regularly the first word in the clause, often preceding conjunctions or prepositions, though coming after them in the Eng. translation.

(a) who, which, whom, whose, limiting or defining a noun or pronoun (especially is and hic), which is called the antecedent.

(b) After a pause (even after a period, and at the beginning of a new chapter), used to carry on the narration; translate by this, he, if singular, by these, they, if plural. [Cuius=his, quorum=their.] Sometimes a conjunction, and, but, for, may be used to introduce the sentence. In a few cases, when the pause is a comma, it will be good Eng. to translate by which.

(c) With mitto, praemitto, and occasionally other verbs, followed by a subjunctive expressing purpose. Translate by infinitive with to [29].

(d) Difficulty is sometimes caused by certain peculiarities of the antecedent.

i. The antecedent is often not expressed; qui (plur.)—those who, quod or quae (neuter)—what, or sometimes as.

ii. The antecedent is often repeated with the relative (especially pars, res, locus, dies). Omit in translating.

iii. The antecedent (generally hic, sometimes is) comes after the whole relative clause. In the Eng. it should precede, sometimes being repeated after the relative clause.

iv. The antecedent is often transferred to the relative clause and takes its case from the relative. (This is generally when the relative clause precedes the words it depends on, or when the relative refers to words in apposition). Translate by putting the antecedent before the relative clause ; e.g. quam naci erant praedam, relinquunt, (lit. 'what plunder they had got, they leave')—'they leave the plunder which they had got.' Where, however, the relative refers to words in apposition, a literal translation is often good Eng.

12. Is, ea, id ; (a) in agreement with a noun, that, those. Where a relative clause follows, the is often a good rendering. Sometimes where Latin uses the word for that, Eng. would prefer to use this.

(b) When not in agreement with a noun ; in sing. he, him, if masc., that, it, if neut.; in plur. they, them, or if the antecedent of a relative, those. N.B.—Eius=his, eorum=their, ea quae (neut. plur.)=what, id quod=what or as.

13. Hic, haec, hoc; this, these. N.B.—Hic (neut. plur.), or hic in agreement with res, rerum, rebus=this (lit. 'these things'). Often hic is well rendered by the following. Occasionally hic in sing. without a noun=he, him. Sometimes where Latin uses the word for this, Eng. would prefer to use that.

14. Se, sese, sui, sibi; (a) referring to the subject of the verb with which it is connected : translate by himself, itself, if that subject is sing.; by themselves, if plural.

(b) But when the verb it is connected with depends closely on a verb or phrase meaning 'to say, order, think, ask, wish, point out, etc.', it will refer to the subject of this latter verb ; translate by him, it, if that subject is sing.; by them, if plural.

(c) When se, sese, is the subj. of an infin. [34], trans. by he or they, referring to the subj. of the verb on which the infin. depends.

(d) In long passages of reported speech, the translation of se must be settled by the sense required, though as a rule se refers to the speaker. Exceptions to the above rules are chiefly of two classes : i. in common reflexive expressions such as se colligere, se recipere, to be translated as in (a), or in the phrase inter se=one another; and ii. where the verb with which se is connected only indirectly depends on one of the verbs mentioned in (b). In all such cases the translation may easily be decided by the context.

15. Suus, a, um; (a) his, his own, or their, their own, according as the word it refers to (not the word it agrees with) is sing. or slate by putting

 as with se [14, a, b, d.]

(b) Where not needed for clearness' sake, suis is used for emphasis, especially in contrast; trans. by his, their, emphasized, or by his own, their own.

(c) In the plural without agreeing with any noun; sui (masc.)
 =his or their troops, friends, comrades, people, family; sua (neut.) =his or their possessions, property.

16. Noster, -tra, -trum; our, in Caesar = 'of the Romans.'
 The plural nostri without any noun in agreement = our troops, forces, men.

17. Ipse, a, um; (a) if not in agreement with any noun; translate by he himself, they themselves, or sometimes he, they,
 emphasized.

(b) If agreeing with a noun or pronoun; translate by himself, themselves.

18. Ille, a, ud; (a) contrasted with other persons, just mentioned; translate by he, they, emphasized.

(b) Referring to persons just mentioned, who are not the subject of the last sentence; he, they, often well rendered by the others, the enemy, the latter. (Generally in the plural and at the beginning of a new sentence, to mark a change of subject.)

(c) In agreement with a noun, that.

19. Idem, eadem, idem; the same.

20. Quis, quid (substantival); qui, quae, quod (adjectival);
 the interrogative pronoun : who, what.

21. Quis, quid (substantival); qui, qua, quod (adjectival);
 indefinite pronoun : (a) in agreement with a noun, any.
 (b) Not in agreement with any noun, anyone, anything.

N.B.—Quis, the indefinite, occurs only after si and ne in Caesar.

22. Quisque; each (of several). Uterque; each (of two),
both, either. Aliquis, or aliqui; some one, some, something.
Quisquam; anyone, anything. Ullus; any. Quidam; a certain one, one, certain. Quicunque; whoever, whatever.

THE VOICES.

23. While the Active and the Passive forms of the verb are to be carefully distinguished, it should be noticed that the two voices are merely two ways of viewing the same action, and therefore what Latin expresses in one voice may often be well rendered into Eng. by the other voice. This change is especially frequent in the abl. absol. [5. a.], the impersonal passive construction [24] and the gerundive [40, 41.] Often the subject of the Eng. active must be gathered from the context.

24. With a transitive verb, an act may be expressed by either the active or the passive voice; e.g. 'they sent ambassadors' or 'ambassadors were sent by them.' But with an intransitive verb only the active voice may be used in Eng.; e.g. 'they hesitate.' But in Latin even with intransitive verbs (i.e. such as do not govern an accus.) the passive voice also may be used, expressing e.g. the idea of hesitating, coming, fighting, without mentioning necessarily who hesitated, etc.; e.g. pugnatum est, 'there was fighting' or 'fighting took place'; non dubitandum est, 'there ought not to be hesitating.' Translate such phrases by using the Eng. active, supplying the subject which the context suggests (or which with a gerundive is expressed often by a dative [3. d]); e.g. 'they fought,' 'he must not hesitate.'

THE MOODS AND TENSES.

THE INDICATIVE.

25. Present: translate by the Eng. present tense. Often the present is used for the past, to represent an act more vividly, and as this is commoner in Latin than in Eng. the Latin present may often be translated by the Eng. past.

26. Imperfect: (a) translate in most cases by Eng. past tense, or with negatives by did. This will be a correct rendering where our past tense expresses i. thoughts or feelings (the habitual way of thinking, or the thoughts which influence one in thinking over plans, or considering a situation, but not a thought expressing the decision one has come to); ii. a situation, or condition of affairs; iii. an action in progress (going on); iv. an habitual action, a usual state of things, an act often repeated or persisted in.

(b) To express more clearly an action in progress [ $\alpha$ . iii], translate by was, were, with the verbal form in -ing, (Eng. past progressive).

- (c) To express more clearly an habitual or repeated action [a. iv.], translate by used to, would, or kept.
 (d) Occasionally, to express an attempted action, translate by tried to or began to.

27. Perfect: (a) translate generally by Eng. past tense;
 (b) Occasionally by Eng. perfect with have, (generally where Caesar is referring to something he has already mentioned).

28. Pluperfect: translate by Eng. past perfect, with had.

THE SUBJUNCTIVE.

- 29. A clause introduced by ut (uti), ne, quo, or the relative pronoun [11. e.], and expressing purpose or the end in view: (a) translate by that, in order that, followed by may or might.
 (b) More frequently, and especially after verbs meaning 'to urge, ask, command, advise, persuade,' translate by Eng. infin.

- 30. A clause introduced by ut (uti), and expressing result; (a) translate by that, sometimes so that, followed by the Eng. rendering of the indicative of the same tense [25-28]. This includes ut and subj. after verbs of 'happening.'
 (b) By so as to, with the Eng. infin.

- 31. A clause introduced by cum*<sup>1</sup>, quod, the relative pronoun (except as in [29]), a relative adverb, or by any interrogative word: translate by the Eng. rendering of the indicative of the same tense [25-28], with the following variations:

Often in quoting the words or thoughts of another, the present past perfect, with had.

The imperfect subj. is more frequently to be translated by the Eng. past progressive (was or were with the verbal form in -ing), than the imperfect indic. is.

The pluperfect, especially with cum, is often best rendered by the Eng. past tense. The pluperfect with cum may generally * Cum the conjunction = when, since, and cum the preposition = with are to be carefully distinguished. The latter will be followed always by an ablative. Hence where an abl. does not follow with which cum could go, it will be the conj.; if an abl. does follow, it will probably be the prep., but may be the conj.

also be rendered by the same translations as are given for the perfect participle [37. a]; e.g. cum vidisset, = 'having seen, seeing, on seeing,' as well as 'when he saw.'

32. A clause introduced by si, nisi: translate as though the subj. were an indicative [25-28], but the present is sometimes, and the pluperfect generally, best rendered by Eng. past tense; the imperfect translate by Eng. past tense, or sometimes by were to, should.

THE INFINITIVE.

33. (a) The present inf., active or passive, completing the meaning of a verb; translate by Eng. infin. with to, except after possum (can, could), where to is omitted. The verbs after which this use of the inf. is most often found are: possum, jubeo and coepi; consuesco, volo, conor, audeo and cogo also are frequent.

(b) After the passive of dico, existimo and video, translate a present infin. by Eng. infin. with to, a perfect infin. by to have.

34. (a) Often the present infin., and regularly the perfect infin., the future infin. and the gerundive with esse, are to be translated by a clause introduced by that with its verb in the indicative. In such a case the subject of the infin. will be in the accus. case and is to be translated as if it were the nomin.

(b) This 'accus. and infin. construction' is found after verbs or phrases meaning 'to state, think, learn, know, perceive, etc.', of which those most commonly occurring are dico, video, existimo, arbitror, intelligo, cognosco, certiorum facio and demonstro.

(c) Repeatedly with the future infin. act., the gerundive with esse, and sometimes with the perfect infin. pass., esse is omitted and the infin. appears to be a participle. A future participle in -rus in the accus., or a gerundive in the accus. without a preposition, is in Caesar to be regarded regularly as an infin.

(d) Translate the various tenses as follows: the present by was, were, with the verbal form in -ing (Eng. past progressive); the perfect by had (Eng. past perfect) or by Eng. past tense; the future by would; the gerundive by should, ought, must [41]. [But if the verb of stating, etc. be in the present tense, was or were should be changed to is, are; had to have and would to will.] N.B.—posse = could, esse = was, were.

35. (a) Sometimes the infin. (generally the present) is used as a substantive serving as the subject of some verb. This verb is generally to be translated with the subject it, and the infin. by the Eng. infin. with to. If a subject of the infin. is given it should be placed before the Eng. infin. and be preceded by for.

(b) This same use of the infin. is with licet and oportet better translated more freely; e.g. licet eis venire = 'they may come'; oportet eos venire = 'they ought to (or should) come.'

36. The present infin. sometimes in spirited narrative does not depend on any verb, and is to be translated by the Eng. present or past indicative; or if it indicates repeated (incessant) action it may be well rendered by kept followed by the verbal form in -ing. [The subject of this 'historical infin.' is in the nominative.]

THE PARTICIPLES.

37. The perfect partic. (a) in the nom. case, or in the accus. referring to the subject of an infin., is to be translated, if in the passive voice, by having been, on being, after being, or being (e.g. sent); if a deponent, by having (e.g. set out) or on, after, with the verbal form in -ing (e.g. setting out), or sometimes, especially with verbs expressing a thought or feeling, by the Eng. partic. in -ing (e.g. suspecting).

N.B.—It will sometimes be advisable to translate the partic. in this case by a clause of the same grammatical value as that with which the partic. is connected, joining the two clauses by and (or but): e.g. repulsi ab equitatu se in silvas abdiderunt, 'they were driven back by the cavalry and concealed themselves in the woods,' lit. 'having been driven back .... they concealed.....'

(b) In the abl. case in agreement with a noun, the perfect partic. will be translated as in [5. a].

(c) In other cases translate the perfect partic., if in agreement with a noun or pronoun, by the Eng. past partic. passive or by a clause in the indic. (generally the past perfect with had) beginning with who, which; if not in agreement with a noun or pronoun, by a clause beginning those who had.

38. The present partic. may generally be translated, if in agreement with a noun or pronoun, by while, followed either by the Eng. partic. in -ing, or by was, were with the verbal form in -ing (Eng. past progressive); if not in agreement with a noun or pronoun, by a clause beginning with those who were followed by the verbal form in -ing.

GERUND AND GERUNDIVE.

39. The Latin gerund in -ndi, -ndo, -ndum, is to be translated by the Eng. gerund or verbal noun in -ing. The gen. is the case most frequently occurring, (especially with causū=‘for the purpose’), and is to be translated according to [2. a. and c.] The accusative often occurs with ad=for (‘with a view to’).

(b) Causū with the gen., and ad with the accus. of the gerund express purpose and may often be best rendered by the Eng. infin. with to.

40. The gerundive in -ndus, a, um, in the gen. the accus. with ad, and sometimes the dat. or the abl., is found in agreement with nouns (or rarely pronouns). Although really passive and in agreement, it is to be translated by the active gerund or verbal noun in -ing, governing the word with which in Latin it really agrees. For the translation of the gen. and of the accus. with ad see [39]. The dat. is to be translated by for. The abl. is either used with a prep., especially in, or expresses ‘means,’ to be translated by by.

41. The gerundive in -ndus, a, um in the nom., or in the accus. without a prep. is used with the verb sum, though after verbs of thinking and deciding the infin. esse is generally omitted. Thus used, the gerundive and sum are to be translated by should, ought, must, or had to. A literal rendering would be in the passive voice, but it is generally better to use the active in Eng. The subject of this active verb will either be found in a dative connected with the gerundive [3. d.], or will more often be readily supplied from the context.

APPENDIX II.

TRANSLATION FROM ENGLISH TO LATIN.

I.—SUGGESTIONS AND GENERAL REMARKS.*

1. Case of Nouns and Pronouns without Prepositions.
  - (a) subject of a verb : nom.; but acc. if Latin verb is infin., and dat. with ought, must, expressed by the gerundive (as in § 8. b.)
  - (b) object of a verb : acc.; but abl. after utor, and dat. after impero, praesum, persuadeo, resisto, etc.
  - (c) indicating time : abl., time when, or within which ; acc., time how long.
  - (d) indicating distance or extent : acc.; but abl. with idea of surpassing or separation.
  - (e) after verb to be ; nom.; but acc. if Latin verb is infin. w. subject accus., and dat. of nouns meaning aid, advantage, hindrance.
  - (f) after verbs to be made, be chosen, become, seem, be thought : nom.; but acc. if Latin verb is infin. with subject accus.
  - (g) words in apposition : in the same case.
  - (h) nom. of address : the voc.
  - (i) phrase used absolutely : abl. absol., or cum clause.

* These suggestions deal entirely with usages commonly occurring in Caesar's Latin, and are intended either for help in the translation of sentences or passages based on Caesar, or for the purpose of rapid review. Being largely rules of thumb, they will not of course take the place of a systematic or complete statement of the rules of syntax.

2. Case of Nouns and Pronouns with Prepositions.

NOTE.—Latin avoids joining two nouns by a preposition. In such a case, if as regards can be fairly substituted for the preposition, use the gen.; otherwise a clause (chiefly relative).

3. Pronouns.

(a) who, what, which, whose, whom:

- i. after verbs = ask, learn, find out, know, tell, point out, set decide, quis, quae, quid, w. subjunctive.
[what (substantive) = quid or quae; which (of two) = uter.]

- ii. Referring to an antecedent expressed or necessarily understood, qui, quae, quod, w. indic.; but w. subj. if expressing another's words or thoughts.
[what (substantive) = ea quae or id quod.]

- (b) he, him; they, them.—i. In a clause depending on a verb = say, order, think, ask, wish, point out, if referring to the same person as the subject of that verb, sui, sibi, se (sese).

- ii. In other cases, is, or if emphatic by contrast ille; when there is no contrast and the same persons have been prominently referred to in the preceding sentence, qui, beginning the clause.

- (c) his, their,—i. unless emphatic, not expressed if the omission would cause no obscurity.

- ii. otherwise suus in such cases as b. i. above, and eius, eorum in other cases.

- (d) that,—i. ; or if emphatic by contrast ille.

- (e) this,—hic; or referring to something prominently mentioned in the preceding sentence, qui.

- (f) himself, themselves,—ipse, if purely for emphasis sake; se, if used reflexively.

- (g) his own, their own,—suus, referring to persons already mentioned.

- (h) any,—i. after si, ne, nisi, num; quis, quid (substantival), qui, qua, quod (adjectival).

- ii. = even one, in negative sentences or with vix, sine, quisquam, quicquam (substantival), ullus, a, um (adjectival).

- iii. = every one, quisvis.

- (i) each,—quisque, of several; uterque, of two.

- (k) some,—aliquis = some or other; nonnulli = a few; qui-dam = a certain; alii..alii = some..others.

4. Infinitive with To.

- (a) expressing purpose, or the end in view ;—
ut (or ne for negative clauses) w. subj., or qui w. subj. after verbs of sending, or for short phrases ad or causa w. gerund or gerundive.

N.B.—After urge, ask, command (except jubeo), advise, persuade, try (except conor), use ut (or ne for negative clauses) w. subj. of purpose.

- (b) completing the meaning of a verb, especially after order (if jubeo) begin, be accustomed, wish, try (if conor), venture, compel, resolve, seem ;—pres. infin.
- (c) after verbs = promise, hope ;—accus. w. fut. infin.
- (d) after such as or so as ;—ut w. subj.

5. Subordinate Conjunctions.

- (a) that,—indicating purpose, ut, ne, quo, w. subj.
indicating result and w. verbs = happen, ut w. subj.
after verbs = state, think, learn, know, perceive, accus.
w. infin.

after verbs = fear, ne (or ut = that not) w. subj.

- (b) when, after, as, since, if, although,—i. in a short clause referring to a time previous to that of the clause on which it depends :

(i) if Eng. is act. and Latin verb is transitive,*
abl. absol. (in passive voice).

(ii) if Eng. is act. and Latin verb is deponent, perf. part. in agreement.

(iii) if Eng. is pass. and Latin verb is transitive,*
perf. part. in agreement.

ii. otherwise : when, after, cum w. subj. (rarely ubi or postquam w. ind.)

as, since, cum w. subj.; (sometimes quod w. ind.)
if, si; if not, nisi.

although, etsi.

- (c) because,—quod w. ind.; but w. subj. if expressing another's statement or thought.

- (d) while,—dum (w. pres. ind. in ordinary narrative).

- (e) until,—dum w. ind.; but w. subj. if one's purpose or object is involved.

- (g) lest,—ne w. subj.

- (h) whenever,—cum w. ind. (perf. or pluperf. § 6. a.)

* A transitive verb in Latin is one which in the active voice takes an object in the accus. case.

6. Tenses, where the mood has already been decided.

[Latin is far more logically correct than English in its tenses, especially in indicating the relation of a principal and a dependent clause.]

(a) Indicative.

- i. English progressive past tense = Latin imperf.; (but w. dum, see 5. d.)
- ii. English simple past tense = Latin perfect; but imperfect w. verbs = think, know, feel, or when indicating a condition of things, a situation, or an habitual action; and pluperf. w. when ever or whoever.
- iii. English present tense in clauses w. whenever or whoever, = Latin perfect.

(b) Subjunctive.

- i. Clauses of purpose, present if depending on verb in pres., fut., or perf. (= English perf. w. have); imperf. if depending on verb in imperf., pluperf., or perf. (= Eng. simple past).
[NOTE.—After the historical present either pres. or imperf. may be used.]
- ii. Clauses of result, the same tense as in English, except that Latin imperfect is generally used for Eng. past tense.
- iii. In all other cases (e.g. w. cum, si, quod, or pronouns), the same tense as in English, except that the English simple past is the Latin imperfect, unless it refers to a time previous to that of the clause on which it depends, when the pluperf. is used; in the same case the perf. is used for Eng. simple pres. (Test by substituting had or have.)

(c) Infinitive (in accus. w. infin. construction).

Change the Eng. words so as to get what was actually said or thought, and take the corresponding tense of the infin.; that is:—

If referring to the same time as verb of stating, thinking, etc., present.

If referring to time before that of verb of stating, thinking, etc., perfect.

If referring to time after that of verb of stating, thinking, etc., future.

For would have use fuisse w. partic. in -urus

7. Participles and Gerund (or Verbal in -ing).

- (a) The past participle, with having, or the present part. if = past part. with having, or a clause with since, after, or as, or the gerund (or verbal in -ing) preceded by on, after,
are to be translated as follows:
If the Latin verb is intransitive, by cum w. subj.
If the Latin verb is transitive,
- i. Eng. passive voice, by Latin perf. part. pass.
in agreement.
  - ii. Eng. active voice in long clauses, by cum w. subj.
  - iii. Eng. active voice in short clauses, by perf. part.
pass. in abl. absol., or by perf. part. depo-nent in agreement.
- (b) The present participle is almost invariably to be translated as in a above; in other cases by pres. part. in agreement, in short phrases, qui or dum clause, in long phrases.
- (c) The gerund (or verbal in -ing).
- i. after of or other prepositions replaceable by as regards, gen. of gerund or gerundive construction.
  - ii. after for (=with a view to) by ad w. acc. of gerund or gerundive construction.
  - iii. after on, after, see a above.

8. Miscellaneous.

- (a) It is often of advantage to translate by a different voice.
- (b) Ought, must, and equivalent phrases are generally to be translated by the gerundive with sum, the Latin verb being always passive, and, if intransitive, used impersonally. The person who ought.
or must do something will be in the dative. [Debet, oportet and necesse est w. the infinitive are much rarer.]
- (c) Can, could, = possum w. pres. infin.
- (d) As, w. words = aid, garrison, guard, etc., implying the purpose served, expressed by the dat.
after the same = qui or ac.
where as is repeated, by correlatives, e.g. as great as, tantus quantus.
in phrases like 'as great as possible' by quam w.
superlative.
- (e) Treat clauses with where, why, how, etc., as in § 3, a.

- (f) It with the verb to be where the real subj. follows, and there as an introductory adverb, are not expressed in Latin.
- (g) Where a verb is compounded with a preposition (e.g. ad, ab, ex), this preposition cannot at the same time govern a noun.
- (h) The adjectives more, any, enough, no, and thousand (except one thousand) agreeing with a noun are expressed by the neuters plus, quicquam, satis, nihil and milia followed by the noun in the genitive.
- (i) Where English has a number of co-ordinate clauses, translate those which lead up to some final result, or which state previous or attendant circumstances, by participles, or if of some length by subordinate clauses. In other words reduce the number of verbs connected by and, but, so, etc. [e.g. He gives orders to collect a large force and to attack the camp, = imperat ut magnis copiis coactis castra oppugnet. They had sent ambassadors and sued for peace, but yet made war on Caesar = cum missis legatis pacem petissent, bellum Caesari intulerunt.

APPENDIX III.

EXERCISES BASED ON BOOK II.

PART I.—CHAPTERS I.—III. SIMPLIFIED AS A PRELIMINARY EXERCISE FOR BEGINNERS.

CHAP. I.

NOTES.

1. Ut followed by the indic. has generally the meaning of 'as,' never of 'that.'
2. The subj. after cum (=when, since, as) is as a rule to be translated exactly like the corresponding tense of the indicative.
3. The Imperf. tense is used because the act was repeated. The English simple past tense will have the same force here.
4. Certior fieri, It. 'I become (or am made) more certain,' i.e. 'I am informed.' Notice the predicate nominative.

5. Accus. and Infinitive construction; translate by a clause beginning with 'that', of which Belgas furnishes the subject. App.31.a.d.
Notice the translation of the pres. infinitive by the English past progressive.
6. Lit. 'among themselves'; i.e. 'to one another.'
7. The gerund. App.30.a. Trans. the gen. here by 'for', not 'of,' App.2.c.
8. The adverb not the adj.
9. A deponent verb, i.e. passive in form but with active force.
10. Ne with the imperf. subj. after a verb of fearing means 'lest... should,' or 'that... might.'
11. The ablative absolute construction, App.5.a. Translate as in App.5. a II., using 'after' or 'when.'
12. The accus. with infinitive construction. Translate by 'that... should,' the subject being furnished by the accus.
13. As there was but one Roman people or nation, this must be singular.
14. The abl. expressing cause. Trans. by 'because of their,' etc.
15. 'New rules' means 'a change of rule or of government.'
16. The comparative adjective is here used as a substantive.
17. The gerundive construction; App.40. Translate by 'for hiring,' etc.
18. The abl. of time when; translate by 'under.'

3. Translate qui and subjunctive here by infinit. with 'to'; lit. 'who was to,' etc. App.29.b.
4. Use the introductory adverb 'there' (which has no equivalent in Latin.) App.1.N.B.
5. For the translation of ipse, see App.17.a.
6. For the translation of cum primum see Vocabulary under primum. Translate the subjunctive as in chap.1, note 2.
7. Lit. 'adjacent to the B.'; freely, 'neighbors of the B.'
8. Here translate 'Instructions.'
9. Reliquis is two words; reliquis, really an adjective, to be translated 'the rest of.'
10. Uti (=ut) and the subjunctive, after verbs or phrases of commanding, are to be translated by the infinit. with 'to.' App. 29.b.
11. Do not use 'things' in the English. App.8.
12. Translate as in App.12.b.N.B.
13. Certiorum facere is the active phrase corresponding to certior flo (see chap.1, note 4) and therefore meaning 'to inform.' Notice the fictitive accusative.
14. The accus. and infinit. construction. See chap. 1, note 5.
15. Dubitandum for dubitandum esse, App.34.c. The gerundive is to be translated as in App.41. For the translation of the impersonal passive, see App.24. Freely, 'that he must not hesitate.'
16. Quin proficeretur, lit. 'so that he should not set out'; freely, 'to set out.'
17. The ablative absolute construction.
18. The time within which. Translate by 'in.'

CHAP. III.

NOTES.

1. The adverb, not the pronoun.
2. The ablative is used after comparatives (ceterius is the comparative of ceteriter) to express the idea 'than,' lit. 'than all expectation'; freely, 'than anyone had expected.'
3. The dative. Ex Belgis (of the B.) should be translated before Galliae.
4. In apposition with legatos, and used as a substantive; 'the foremost men.'
5. Translate as in chap. 2 note 8.
6. Se and sua are objects of permittere, with which se is to be understood as subj. App. 14.a.c.; 15.c.
7. Neque...neque, 'neither...nor' or 'not...nor.' Se is subject of both infinitives.
8. Et...et, 'both...and.'
9. Imperata, lit. 'the things ordered'; freely, 'your bidding.'
10. Sese is another form for se. English would not use so many words here.
11. Eorum omium is literally 'of them all' not 'of all of them.'
12. Ut with the subjunctive expressing result, to be translated as in App. 30.a.
13. Quin and the subjunctive are here to be translated by 'from' with the gerund in -ing. For the literal translation see chap. 2. note 16.
14. Translate the abl. without any preposition; utor takes an abl. where we might expect an object in the accus.

They were afraid that we would be unwilling. 9. They are annoyed that Gaul is being subdued. (§§ 1.-4.) 10. The most powerful Belgians can more easily instigate the Germans. 11. After hostages had been given, some were unwilling to seize the royal power. 12. We have stated that the more powerful have means for seizing the royal power. 13. Having taken men into their pay, they very easily attain that object.

2.—(§§ 1. 2.) 1. Alarmed by this news, the legions came to Gaul. 2. After leading the army into Gaul, he came to Caesar. 3. He sends Pedius himself to enlist a legion. 4. Two legions were enrolled. (§§ 1.-4.) 5. He instructs the lieutenants to gather the rest of the Belgians. 6. They announced that they had found out all that was being done in the army. 7. After all the bands have been collected, the army will be led to this place. (§§ 1.-6.) 8. Within about two days there will be plenty of provisions. 9. Alarmed by the things which had been ascertained, the Belgians moved their camp. 10. There must be no delay. 11. After finding out these things they will inform the Belgians. 12. He sent the lieutenants themselves to gather the legions to the camp. 13. The Belgians are neighbours of central Gaul. 14. After enlisting two legions Caesar will set out. 15. It was announced that they had reached the camp.

3.—(§§ 1. 2.) 1. Ambassadors of all the states have come. 2. After sending ambassadors, they combine with the nearest states. 3. They said they would combine. 4. Ambassadors were sent to hand over the state to protection. 5. After combining with him, they sent ambassadors to Gaul. (§§ 1.-5.)

6. They have neither done his bidding nor supplied him with corn. 7. All of them enjoy these laws. 8. Having formed a conspiracy against the rest of the states, and given hostages, they received him into their town. 9. They say that they have not joined their brothers and kinsmen. 10. They who dwell on this side of the Rhine do not possess even the same magistrates. 11. Even the ambassadors said that those who were nearest to the Suessiones were not in arms.

4.—(§§ 1.-3.) 1. He asked who were driving out the Germans, Belgians. 3. Most of the states are in arms. 4. We found out that he had led the Germans across the Rhine. 5. After being driven out by the Belgae, they settle in this country. 6. They prevent the Germans from settling there. 7. They drove out the Gauls who inhabited that country. (§§ 1.-6.) 8. We know what strength they have. 9. After devastating the lands of the Remi, they had entered the country of the Suessiones. 10. He asks what is the number of those who inhabit the district. 11. He said that they had demanded the control of the whole war because they possessed the most extensive territory. 12. He had learned to whom the Suessiones were neighbors. 13. They assume an air of importance because they can put in the field a large number of men. (§§ 1.-10.) 14. On account of their great number they have greater influence. 15. He asked on whom the control of the war had been conferred. 16. Those are fiercer who are far her distant. 17. The lands are regarded as not only the most extensive in all Gaul but the most fertile.

5.—1. Caesar ordered the camp to be pitched on the other bank of the river. 2. After fortifying the camp, he led the rest of the forces across the river which was in his rear. 3. It is of importance to Caesar to encourage the leading men. 4. Everything had to be done punctually. 5. If he leaves six cohorts in the camp, he will not be able to engage with the enemy without danger. 6. The forces began to assemble. 7. He gathered in the camp all the leading men. 8. He has made one side of the camp safe. 9. This cannot be done if they engage all the bands of the Remi at once. 10. That supplies may not be brought up to them, he orders the rest of the army to be led across the river. 11. All the forces of the enemy are coming against him and are now no great distance from the river. 12. The forces of the Belgians must be kept apart, that they may not be able to gather in one place.

6.—1. They began to make a testudo. 2. The town had begun to be besieged. 3. We cannot come close up to the fortifications.

4. Unless stones and weapons are hurled the wall will not be cleared of men. 5. The camp was a mile distant from Bibrax. 6. They are attacking the town of which Iccius is governor. 7. Since aid had not been sent him, he was unable to hold out. 8. The whole of the fortifications were with the greatest difficulty cleared of defenders. 9. After hurling stones and weapons, they began to undermine the walls. 10. They send word that no one has any chance of coming. 11. Whenever night puts an end to their hurling weapons, they throw a large number of men about the town.

7.—1. He sent the same guides that the Remi had used as messengers. 2. On his arrival all the buildings will be set on fire. 3. The camp had been pitched at the distance of a mile. 4. For these reasons the Numidians and Cretans are departing. 5. We cannot approach all the villages. 6. The camp extends for two miles. 7. The messenger that Iccius had sent, waited before the camp till (ad) midnight. 8. With the desire of coming to the aid of Iccius, there came to Caesar also the hope of gaining possession of the camp.

8.—1. On account of the nature of the ground, he refrains from a cavalry battle. 2. After leading out his troops he drew up the line of battle on the hill. 3. He led the enemy into the plain that we might perceive that they could not be surrounded. 4. At first the legion was inferior in numbers. 5. He made a trench from the hill to the camp. 6. After enrolling the legion, he stationed all the forces in that place. 7. This he did that we might not perceive that two legions had been left on either side of the camp. 8. Our men are surrounded. 9. Perceiving that the place was suitable, he pitched his camp at the end of the plain. 10. He leads to the rescue the two legions which had been left on that side of the fort.

9.—1. When the enemy crossed the marsh, the cavalry were led back to the camp of which Titurius was in charge. 2. After breaking down the bridges they attacked the cavalry. 3. The bridge was of great service to Caesar in crossing the marsh. 4. The enemy were waiting to see whether Caesar would attempt to wage war. 5. As the cavalry battles turned out more successfully for the Remi, they attempted to find a ford. 6. If they can cross the river they will lay waste our lands, if they cannot, they will break down the bridges. 7. Crossing the river, they attempted to attack the Remi. 8. After taking the camp by storm, they cross the two rivers. 9. On attempting to break down the bridge so as to cut off our men from supplies, they were unable to do so,

10.—1. Having slain a large number of the cavalry, and routed the army, they returned each to his home. 2. The rest of the Numidians, while boldly crossing the river, were driven back by the light-armed enemy. 3. It is best to use the provisions. 4. He was persuaded to advance into their territory. 5. He informed Caesar that the enemy had assembled from every quarter to repel the army which was attempting to take the town. 6. The cavalry fought most fiercely. 7. Perceiving that supplies were lacking, and being surrounded on every side, they attempted to induce our men to advance to unfavorable ground. 8. They will be disappointed in the matter of surrounding the cavalry. 9. They are unable to bring aid to those whose territories Caesar is approaching. 10. After waiting for a long time, they returned home.

11.—1. At sunset they leave camp. 2. They seem to be throwing into confusion the legion over which he had placed Cotta. 3. Having thus slain a large number of the scouts, they attacked our column. 4. Three legions were sent in advance to attack Labienus. 5. He ordered the cavalry to leave the camp. 6. From sunset to daybreak they held out with the utmost bravery against the attacks of the three legions. 7. For this reason they had determined to depart at once. 8. He sends Labienus in advance to follow up the retreating Belgians. 9. They leave the place with greater tumult because they are restrained by no authority. 10. We have not yet learned why the enemy are betaking themselves to the camp.

12.—1. They saw that a mound was being thrown up and towers built. 2. The ambassadors asked to be defended. 3. Leading his army into their country, he fortifies a camp. 4. Before they could assemble in the town, he began to attack it. 5. On account of the number and swiftness of the enemy, they were unable to rally from their flight. 6. On Caesar's asking that ambassadors be sent, they began to assemble from all the towns. 7. The Gauls began to be alarmed, because the camp was empty of defenders. 8. Hearing that but few were defending the town he attempts to take it by storm. 9. We shall neither send ambassadors nor ask to be spared. 10. On the next day they began to gather to defend their territories.

13.—1. Having received all the elders as hostages, he approached the wall. 2. While they were approaching the camp the hostages were holding out their hands. 3. The two women according to the custom of the Bellovaci betook themselves to the king. 4. When they had come into Caesar's power, they surrendered all their arms. 5. When they sought peace from Caesar he accepted their surrender. 6. While they were betaking themselves to the town, Caesar was about a mile distant. 7. The children themselves will take up arms against the king.

14.—1. The leading men, instigated by Divitiacus, who said that the Aedui were revolting, make war on Caesar. 2. If any war arises, they flee to this state. 3. If he flees to Britain, the Aedui will be reduced to slavery. 4. Caesar asked that Divitiacus should return to him. 5. He says that he will make war on the Belgians. 6. Understanding how great a war they are bringing on Britain, they return to their own state. 7. They are accustomed to dismiss all their troops after a disaster. 8. He was wont to show mercy to those whom he had reduced to subjection. 9. Caesar's influence among them will be increased, if he displays clemency to the ring-leaders in making war.

15.—1. They declare that they will not surrender their arms. 2. On reaching that state he found that the Belgians had sent ambassadors to the Roman people. 3. They do not allow wine to be imported, because they think it tends to relax their courage. 4. Those whose territories adjoin the Belgians excel in valor. 5. He was a man of great influence and of great valor. 6. Having surrendered themselves and all their possessions they were taken under Caesar's protection. 7. He declares that the traders would reach these territories without any delay. 8. He attacked the Aedui for asking why (qua de causa) he had suffered that state to be received into alliance with the Roman people.

16.—1. He persuaded the women to await the army's approach. 2. When he was distant a three days' march, they encamped in the marshes. 3. Both captives seem useless for war. 4. He found that the forces which were on the march could not approach the marshes. 5. He found that they had marched through the territories of the Nervii and were encamping across the same river. 6. The camp is not more than a mile distant from that river.

17.—1. Coming to the army, he reported that the Nervii were plundering the baggage. 2. If the march is hindered by these hedges, the army will easily be routed by our cavalry. 3. All the baggage was between the cavalry, which Caesar had sent in advance, and the first legion. 4. It was afterwards learned that a certain centurion had brought the report. 5. The more easily to attack the rest of the cavalry, they bent down many trees. 6. The cavalry had come for the purpose of choosing a suitable spot for a camp. 7. Those who were following Caesar thought that the Nervii had routed our army. 8. The legions, which they were betaking a mile distant against the king. Divitiacus, who said Caesar. 2. If any dees to Britain, he asked that Divitiacus will make war on war they are bringing. 7. They are a disaster. 8. He had reduced to submit will be increased, if king war.

marched bearing their packs, were a great distance from the spot which had been chosen for a camp. 9. He sends the first legion in advance to attack the infantry forces of the enemy. 10. If we give up this plan, they will easily make a stand. 11. The infantry forces after making an attack on the legion had not ventured to plunder the camp. 12. There is no difficulty in following Caesar's column.

18.—1. The upper part of the hill was clear. 2. The hill rises from wooded ground. 3. The cavalry could not be seen on the sloping ground. 4. This river was of equal depth. 5. Having chosen a place for the camp, the cavalry kept themselves in concealment on the wooded hill.

19.—1. They make an attack on our men while busied at their work. 2. Having engaged in battle with the cavalry, they suddenly began to yield. 3. They ventured to cross the river and measure out the work. 4. The legion which was guarding the camp was easily routed. 5. This is the time for making the attack. 6. They are following the enemy's cavalry too far. 7. The cavalry were the first to retreat to the camp. 8. Caesar followed after the cavalry with two legions in light marching order. 9. When they had run down from the open ground, the battle was begun. 10. Fortifying a camp, he sent the cavalry in advance up stream. 11. When the whole of the line was in sight, they did not venture to make an attack. 12. As the baggage had been placed behind the two legions which Caesar had recently enrolled, the enemy easily routed our army.

20.—1. The soldiers had to seek materials in order to fortify the camp. 2. After drawing up the line of battle and encouraging the soldiers he gave the signal. 3. On the signal being given they ran to arms. 4. Caesar informs the several lieutenants what they must do. 5. Those who have left the camp are advancing too far. 6. In the former battle he had displayed the flag. 7. The legions, on account of their experience of former times, had not waited for Caesar. 8. The lieutenants forbid the soldiers to advance for the purpose of summoning the legions. 9. These difficulties cannot hinder Caesar. 10. The nearness of the camp was a help to the soldiers. 11. He decided for himself what he must carry out.

21.—1. He exhorts the soldiers to fight more bravely. 2. There is not sufficient time to seek their comrades. 3. He was unable to take the covering from his helmet. 4. He urges the legion to remember the orders he had given and not to lose time in putting on their badges. 5. They met Caesar running down to the soldiers. 6. So short is the time that they cannot hurl their weapons. 7. Remember your ancient valor and bravely resist the enemy. 8. He runs down to give these orders. 9. The soldiers having been thrown into confusion by the enemy's assault, Caesar urges them to join battle bravely. 10. Not only time but spirit was lacking.

22.—1. He was unable to draw up the army on account of (propter) the nature of the ground. 2. As the hedges obstructed the view, reserves could not be posted. 3. He places the reserves on different hills.

23.—1. As a large part of the enemy was spent with wounds, our men did not hesitate to advance. 2. Having put the Atrebates to flight, they cross the river. 3. Under his leadership they do not hesitate to engage a legion in close order. 4. Driving the soldiers out of the camp, they engage the two legions which had crossed the river. 5. They surround and slay the right wing. 6. They began to fight in the very river. 7. Those who had taken up their position on the higher ground, when the enemy resist renew the battle. 8. On the left wing the camp was almost entirely exposed. 9. As the enemy were advancing to more unfavorable ground, our men hastened to the right wing. 10. They attempt to pursue the legion, while it is making for the higher ground, and to slay the soldiers while crossing the rivers.

24.—1. They repel the enemy and return home. 2. Having fallen in with the enemy, they were surrounded and conquered. 3. The Numidians whom Caesar had sent, cross the river for the purpose of surrounding the legion. 4. Alarmed by the shouts and uproar the camp follower betook himself to headlong flight. 5. He reports that the cavalry have fled and that the enemy are crossing the river. 6. He said that the light-armed Treveri had a wonderful reputation for valor. 7. Despairing of flight, he betakes himself to the camp of which the enemy had got possession. 8. As the legions were being hard pressed, they sought aid from Caesar. 9. The Treveri who had defeated our men, met another legion which was crossing the river. 10. Raising a shout they flee in different directions.

25.—1. Having advanced to the first rank and taken a sword from a centurion, he inspired the legion with hope. 2. The standard was lost in sight of the soldiers. 3. On the right wing all the centurions were deserting the field. 4. And there are no cohorts which can be sent to their aid. 5. When they had advanced, they easily checked the assault of the enemy. 6.

ordering the standards to be gathered in one place, he encouraged each of the standard-bearers. 9. They cannot use either shields or swords. 10. They were anxious to set out that they might more easily collect the standards.

26.—1. He advises the soldiers to resist boldly. 2. They were afraid that the enemy would get possession of the baggage.
3. The legions which had been sent to protect the rear guard, wheel around against the cavalry. 4. He advised the commander to take up his position at the top of the hill. 5. Learning that the cavalry had joined the enemy, he ordered (jubeo) to advance.
6. Perceiving the position of the rear guard, and fearing that the tenth legion would be sent to the top of the hill, he announced that the camp was surrounded. 7. The legions are a protection one to another. 8. He sent the cavalry to find out what the enemy were doing. 9. He sends all the cavalry to reinforce the two legions.

27. 1. In order to display their valor, they crossed over to more unfavorable ground. 2. It is very easy to hurl weapons at those who are lying exhausted with wounds. 3. The wound was so great that he leaned upon his shield. 4. They were men of such valor that they ventured to dislodge the soldiers of the legion. 5. So (ita) terrified were those who survived that they cannot wipe out the disgrace. 6. Although they had crossed the river, they did not venture to approach the mound. 7. Renewing the battle, the foremost fall. 8. Seeing that even though unarmed he crossed the river, they deemed him to be a man of great valor. 9. The disgrace of flight ought to be wiped out.

28.—1. He orders the Senators to surrender. 2. By consent of the whole (totus) state, the elders were sent as ambassadors.
3. That he might scrupulously spare the elders, he ordered the senators to show them mercy. 4. He ordered all who survived to be surrendered to him. 5. In announcing these things he stated that all who had been placed in the marshes, were incapable of bearing arms. 6. They thought that there was no safety for those who had been preserved by Caesar and sent to their own territories.

29.—1. Having left six thousand men to guard the fort, they return to Italy to aid the Cimbri. 2. After choosing a home, they made peace with all their neighbors. 3. Being unable to carry all their baggage with them, they left a guard of six thousand Nervii. 4. The town, which was protected on all sides by high rocks, they had deserted. 5. For two hundred years they had waged war—now defensive, now offensive. 6. One thousand two hundred Nervii were left in the town. 7. Abandoning the province, they marched to the Rhine. 8. While they were returning home, it was announced that the Nervii had betaken themselves and all their belongings to a stronghold. 9. After choosing this place, they place huge stones on the gently sloping approach. 10. This town was defended by a six-foot wall.

30. 1. They mock our men for raising a mound at a distance. 2. Making a sally they engage in battle with our army. 3. They cannot build a tower of such great size with such small hands. 4. They saw that the mound had been raised and that the tower was being moved. 5. The Gauls are men of such stature that the small size of our men was despised by them. 6. When they saw that the vineae were being brought up, they kept themselves within the tower.

31.—1. They asked that they might not be tortured to death. 2. We will rather (potius) do anything than surrender our arms. 3. He said that he was accustomed to spare those who sent ambassadors to treat for peace. 4. If you determine to deprive them of their arms they will not be able to kill their neighbors. 5. He determined that all who had waged war were to be put to death. 6. It is better to surrender our arms than to be reduced to that extremity. 7. They said that if they were deprived of their arms, their neighbors would put them to death. 8. Ambassadors were sent to ask that if the Aduatuci were spared, Caesar should protect them from their enemies.

32.—1. I will spare them if they surrender. 2. They will surrender before the battering ram touches the wall. 3. He answers that he will do whatever the Romans have commanded. 4. Retaining their arms, they throw open the gates. 5. He ordered the state not to conceal anything. 6. If they do not wrong the neighboring state, we shall make peace with them. 7. When the Nervii had been spared, they threw a third of their arms into the trenches. 8. He orders the Nervii to report these matters to their neighbors. 9. On the third day the battering ram will touch the wall, unless they surrender.

33.—1. Three thousand townspeople ought to have been put to death. 2. Making a sally by night, they fought most fiercely. 3. He ordered the gates to be broken in, that no sally might be made. 4. As Caesar was withdrawing the garrison, they formed this plan. 5. They ran together from the nearest

PART II.—EXERCISES IN RE-TRANSLATION INTO LATIN.

(Based on the Vocabulary of Book II.)

1.—Caesar accordingly places Marcus Antonius the quaestor in command of his own winter camp; he himself with an escort (lit. guard) of horsemen sets out for the thirteenth legion, which he had stationed not far from the Aeduan country among the Bituriges, and joins (adiungo) with it the eleventh legion which was nearest. Leaving two cohorts to guard the baggage, he leads the rest of his troops into the district of the Bituriges, who had extensive territories and many towns, and so could not be prevented by the winter camp of a single legion from forming conspiracies. Through Caesar's sudden (repentinus) approach, many are surprised (opprimo) by the cavalry before they can flee for refuge (confugio) to their towns.

(Based on the Vocabulary of Book II. and Book III., c. 1-6.)

2.—Caesar put a lieutenant in charge of each legion, that each man might have them as witnesses (testis, is) of his own valor; he himself began the battle on the right wing, because he had noticed that that part was the weakest in the enemy's line. So fiercely did our men, on the signal being given, make their attack on the enemy, and so suddenly and quickly did they run forward (procurro), that time was not given them to hurl their javelins at the enemy. Throwing the javelins aside they fought hand to hand (comminus) with their swords. While the enemy's line had been routed and put to flight on the left wing, on the right they were pressing our line hard by reason of the numbers of their men. Noticing this, P. Crassus, who was in command of the cavalry, sent the third to aid our men.

3.—The tenth legion he sends to Italy to protect the garrisons from which the fifth legion was being withdrawn. He himself assigns winter quarters to the army; Caius Trebonius he stations with four legions among the Belgae, Caius Fabius with as many he leads into the country of the Aedui. For he thought that in this way Gaul would be most secure, if the Belgae, who had the greatest courage, and the Aedui, who had the greatest influence, were restrained by armies. He himself set out for Italy, and on coming there learned through the consul Marcellus that the two legions sent back by him had been handed over to Pompey.

4.—While Caesar was in winter quarters, the Bituriges send envoys to him to ask his help against the Carnutes, who they complained (queror, i) had made war on them. When, after he had stayed not more than eighteen days in winter quarters, he was told of this, he led out of their winter camp the sixth and the fourteenth legion, which, as has been stated, had been posted across the Arar to make it easier to bring up supplies. Thus with two legions he sets out to attack (persequor) the Carnutes, who, moved by the disasters of the other Gauls, leave the villages and towns which they were inhabiting and betake themselves to flight.

5.—The town wall was nearly a mile and quarter from the plain. From about half way up the hill the Gauls had made a wall six feet high, of large stones, to retard our onset. All the space at the foot they had left empty, but the upper portion of the hill they had filled with their camps right up to the wall of the town. The soldiers, on getting the signal, quickly reach the fortifications and crossing them gain possession of the camps. And such was their swiftness in seizing the camps that Tentomatus king of the Nitiobriges was surprised in his tent (tabernaculum); his horse was wounded, and he himself with difficulty saved (eripio) himself from the hands of the pillaging soldiers.

6.—Noviodunum was a town belonging to the Aedui, situated advantageously on the banks of this river. To this point Caesar had collected all the hostages given by the Gauls, the corn and supplies, and a considerable part of his own and the enemy's baggage, and had also sent a great many horses which he had purchased (coemo) in Italy because of this war. Eporedorix, on his arrival here, learned of the position of public affairs, how that the Aedui had received Litaviccus into Bibrax, which is a town of great importance among them, that a large part of the senate had come together to meet him, and that envoys had been sent to treat with Vercingetorix for peace and friendship. Accordingly they slew the garrison and not thinking themselves able to hold the town, burned it down, that it might be of no use to the Romans.

7.—When Caésar had conquered the whole of Gaul, and was now anxious that the soldiers should rest themselves after their great toils, several states at one and the same time were reported to him as reviving (renovo) plans for war, and forming conspiracies. The probable reason for this was that all the Gauls had learned that the Romans could not be resisted by massing any large body in one place, while if several states began different wars at the same time, the army of the Roman people would not have sufficient time or strength to attend to (persequor) everything.

8. At daybreak all our men had been taken across and the enemy's line was in sight. Labienus called on the soldiers not to forget their old-time valor and their great successes, and told them to imagine that Caesar himself was with them, under whose leadership they had repeatedly defeated the foe. He then gives the signal for battle. At the first shock, the enemy on the right wing, where the seventh legion was stationed, were driven back and put to flight; on the left, the side occupied by the twelfth legion, though the foremost ranks of the enemy had fallen, yet the survivors offered a most stubborn resistance.
While the issue was as yet uncertain, the tribunes of the seventh legion were told what was going on on the left wing, and advanced against the rear of the enemy. Yet even then no one left his post, but all were surrounded and slain.

(Based on the Vocabulary of Books II. and III.)

9.—In the meantime, with the aid of the legion which he had with him and the soldiers who had gathered from the province, he makes (perduco) a wall sixteen feet high and a trench, extending nineteen miles from lake (lacus, us) Lemannus, which flows into the river Rhone (Rhodanus), to mount Jura, which separates the coun try of the Sequani from the Helvetians. When he had finished this work, he posts (dispono) garrisons and fortifies redoubts, that he may more easily prevent them, if they should attempt to cross. There was left one road, (that) through the country of the Sequani, by which they could not go if the Sequani were unwilling. As they were unable by themselves to persuade these, they send envoys to Dumnorix the Aeduan, who had great influence among the Sequani and was friendly (amicus) to the Helvetians, that by his intercession (use peto) they might obtain their request from the Sequani.

10.—The same day he was told by scouts that the enemy had encamped at the foot of (sub) a mountain, eight miles from his camp. He sent out scouts to find out what was the character of the mountain and of its ascent. Word was brought back that it was easy. In the third watch he orders Labienus to take two legions and those as guides who had become acquainted with the road, and climb the highest point of the mountain. He himself in the fourth watch, taking the road by which the enemy had gone, hastened towards them and sends all the cavalry before him. Publius Considius, who was considered the most skilled in the art of war, and who had been in the army of Lucius Sulla and afterwards in that of Marcus Crassus, is sent in advance with scouts.

11.—At dawn, when the summit of the mountain was occupied by Labienus, and Caesar himself was not more than a mile and a half from the enemy's camp, and when, as he afterwards learned from prisoners, neither his own nor Labienus' approach had been discovered, Considius rides up to him and tells him that the mountain which he had wished Labienus to seize, was held by the enemy; that he had recognized this from the Gallic arms and badges. Caesar withdraws (subduco) his men to the nearest hill, and draws up his line; while Labienus, in accordance with Caesar's instructions not to begin battle unless his forces were seen near the enemy's camp, that an attack might be made from every side at once, had seized the mountain and was waiting for our men.

12.—At first he sends some cohorts under the younger Brutus, then others with the lieutenant Fabius. Finally (poetremo), when the battle was raging more fiercely, he himself brings up reinforcements of fresh troops. Having thus repulsed the enemy he made all haste to the point to which he had despatched Labienus; he withdraws four cohorts from the nearest fort, and orders part of the cavalry to follow him, while the others are to go around the fortifications and take the enemy in the rear. Labienus finding neither embankments nor trenches capable of withstanding the enemy's attack, gathered together forty cohorts, and informs Caesar by a messenger, what he thinks should be done.

13.—The envoys whom the Helvetians had sent to Caesar to treat of a surrender met him (convenio) while he was on the march. Throwing (projicio) themselves at (ad) his feet they begged for peace. Caesar commanded that the Helvetii should await his coming in the spot where they were, which they did. On his arrival he demanded hostages, their arms, and the slaves (servus) who had deserted (perfugio) to them. Meanwhile about six thousand men, thinking that their flight could be concealed (occulto, are), set out at nightfall from the Helvetic camp and made for the Rhine and the German territories. Caesar, learning of this, ordered those through whose district they had gone to seek them out (conquirro) and bring them back, if they wished to enjoy peace. When brought back, he put them to death. All the rest he allowed to capitulate, after they had handed over to him the hostages, arms and deserters.

14.—While Caesar was wintering in the Belgian country, he strove to keep the states in friendly alliance, and to give no one hope or cause of war. For he desired nothing less than that on the eve of (sub w. abl.) his departure some necessity should be laid (impono) on him of waging war, lest when he was about to withdraw his army, some war should remain which the Gauls would gladly undertake without any immediate danger. Accordingly by addressing the states in complimentary terms (honorifice) and promising great rewards to the chief men, he easily kept in a state of peace this country which was exhausted by so many reverses (use adversus, unsuccessful).

15.—When word was brought to Caesar in Italy about these occurrences, he went to Gaul and on reaching that country experienced (use officio, afflict, visit) great difficulty [in deciding] by what means he could reach his army. For he perceived that if he summoned the army to the province, they would be engaged in conflicts on their march without his presence; while if he were to make his way to the army, he saw that he would not be justified (use recte, rightly) in entrusting his safety even to those who seemed peaceful at the time.

16.—News of this is soon brought to Vercingetorix; in terror all the Arverni crowd around him and beseech him to take thought (consulo) for them, that they may not be plundered by the enemy, especially when he sees that the entire war has been shifted (transfero) against them. Influenced by their entreaties (preces) he moves his camp from the country of the Bituriges towards the Arverni. But Caesar, after two days' stay in this vicinity, left his army to gather reinforcements of cavalry, leaving Brutus the younger in charge of his troops. He advises him to have the cavalry roam aliqui as widely as possible; and tells him that he will take care (operam do) not to be more than three days absent from the camp.

17.—He sent out either the legions or the auxiliaries into all parts of Ambiorix' district, and laid waste the whole country with fire and sword; then after slaying or taking captive large numbers of the inhabitants, he sends Labienus and two legions against the Treveri. Meanwhile the lieutenant Caninius learns by despatched messengers from Duratius (who had remained friendly to [lit. in the friendship of] the Romans, although a large portion of his state had revolted) that a great body of the enemy had gathered together in the country of the Pictones, hastened towards the town Lemonum. As he drew near, he was informed by captives that Duratius had been shut up (claudo) in the town, and was being besieged by many thousands of the enemy.

18.—At the same time representatives of both the Aedui and the Treveri came to Caesar; the former to complain because the Harudes, who had lately been brought across into Gaul, were laying waste their land; they had not, they said, been able to purchase (redimo) peace even by giving hostages; the latter to state that a hundred cantons of the Suebi had encamped on the bank of the Rhine, and were attempting to cross it; that they were under the leadership of the brothers Nasua and Cimberinus. Deeply moved by these tidings, Caesar decided that he must make haste, lest, if the new band of the Suebi should combine with the old forces of Ariovistus, resistance might be less easy.

19.—The next night Fabius sent the cavalry in advance to engage the enemy and delay their column, till he himself should overtake it (consequor). That everything might be done as Caesar had instructed, Quintus Varus, the prefect of the cavalry, a man of wonderful courage and discretion, cheers on his soldiers, and overtaking the enemy's army places some of his horsemen in suitable positions, and with the rest of his force engages battle. The enemy's horse fought the more bravely, as they were supported by their infantry, who halting (subsisto) along the whole line brought aid to their comrades against our men. A fierce conflict ensued; for our men, despising the foe they had defeated the day before, and remembering that the legions were coming up behind them, resisted the infantry bravely, partly through shame (pudor) of giving way, partly from the desire to finish the battle by themselves; while the enemy expected that no further troops would come up, and believed they had got a chance to annihilate (deleo) our cavalry.

20.—Caesar arranged his whole force on each side of the fortifications, so that, if need should arise, each man might keep and know his own place, and then ordered the cavalry to be led out of camp and the battle to be begun. From the whole camp (which occupied the highest point of the ridge) there was a [good] view and all the soldiers were eagerly awaiting the issue of the fight. The Gauls had placed at great intervals among the cavalry, archers and light armed troops, to run to the aid of their comrades when they retreated, and to withstand the onset of our troops. Some of the latter unexpectedly wounded by these were withdrawing from the field. When the Gauls were sure that their side was succeeding in the fight, and saw that

21.—The Gauls, twice defeated with great loss, take counsel what they should do; they bring in people acquainted with the country, from whom they learn the position and defences of the upper camp. Towards the north there was a hill which our men had been unable to surround with fortifications on account of the extent of the circuit. They had thus been compelled to pitch their camp on uneven and gently sloping ground. This camp was held by Reginus and Rebibus with two legions. The enemy, after reconnoitering the neighborhood, place Vercingetorix, one of their four leaders, in charge of all their forces. Early in the evening he left camp, and finished his march just before dawn. He then concealed himself behind a mountain and ordered the soldiers to take some rest after their night's work.

22.—Although Caesar thought it a disadvantage (detimentum) to abandon the war and the enemy, he still was not unaware (ignoro) what great disasters usually arise when one part of the state engages in conflict with another. Accordingly, lest this great state, which he had always fostered (alo), should have recourse (descendo) to violence and arms, and the side which had the less confidence in him send to Vercingetorix for reinforcements, he resolved to go himself to the Aedui (for according to their laws, those who hold the chief magistracy are not allowed to leave the country), and summoned the whole senate to come to him at Ducezia.

23.—When the towers had at length drawn near the wall, Caesar ascertained from prisoners that, as his fodder was all spent, Vercingetorix had shifted his camp nearer Avaricum, and had gone in person with his cavalry and the light-armed troops that were accustomed to fight among the cavalry, in order to set an ambush (insidior, deponent) at the point to which our men would next day come to get fodder (pabular, deponent). On receiving this information he started at midnight, and in the morning came to the enemy's encampment. The latter were quickly apprised by scouts of Caesar's approach, and concealed their carts and baggage in denser forests. They then drew up all their troops on rising ground clear of trees.

24.—Thrown into a panic by the new turn of affairs, the enemy were dislodged from the wall and the towers, but made a stand in an open space, with the intention, in case they should be attacked from any quarter, of drawing up their line and defending themselves. When they found that no one came to meet them on the level ground, but that our men were surrounding the entire wall on every side, they became afraid that hope of flight would be completely taken (tollo) from them, and throwing away their arms made for the most distant parts of the town, and there some were slain by the soldiers, as they crowded together (use premo and reflexive) in the narrow gateway, while others who had already passed out of the gates were cut down by the cavalry. Nor was there any one who was bent upon plunder.

25.—This favorable opportunity led those who had already before this been full of grief that they had been brought under Roman dominion, to begin to form plans for war more freely and boldly. The leading men called a council in a thickly wooded and distant (remotus) part of the country. Here they complained of the death of Acco ; bewailed (miseror) the general fortunes of Gaul, and declare that before their plans are disclosed (effero), Caesar must be cut off from his army. This, they held, was easy to do, because the legions in the absence of their commander would not venture from their winter quarters, nor could the commandeur reach the army without a guard. Finally (postremo) it was better to be slain on the field of battle, than fail to recover their ancient glory in war and the freedom which they had received from their forefathers.

26.—From that place Caesar comes to Gergovia in five days. After a trifling skirmish of the cavalry, he makes a reconnaissance of the position of the town. This showed it to be situated on a very lofty mountain, and all its approaches were difficult, so that he despaired of being able to take it by storm. As for blockading it he determined to do nothing until he had secured his corn-supplies. There was a hill at the foot of (sub) the mountain, that was well fortified ; if our men could seize this, it seemed likely that they would cut off the enemy to a considerable extent from water and from foraging. But this place was occupied by a garrison. In the dead (silentium) of night Caesar issued from the camp and before aid could come from the town, drove out the garrison, took possession of the place, and stationed in it two legions. He also constructed (perduco) a double trench ten feet wide from the larger to the smaller camp, so that even individuals could go to and fro (commeo) safe from any sudden attack on the part of the enemy.

27.—After this battle had been fought, that he might be able to follow up the forces of the Helvetians, he has a bridge built over the Arar and thus leads his army across. The Helvetii were dismayed by his sudden approach, when they found that what they had with the greatest difficulty accomplished in twenty days, he had done in one, and send ambassadors to him. The leader of this embassy was Divico, who had been the Helvetian leader in the former war. He stated that if the Roman people would make peace with the Helvetians, they would go wherever Caesar determined and desired them to go and would remain there; but if he harassed them with war, he should remember the ancient valor of the Helvetians. To this Caesar made answer, that if they would give him hostages, that he might be sure they would do what they were promising, and if they would make reparation (satisfac-) to the Aedui for the wrongs they had inflicted on them ~~themselves~~ and on their allies, he would make peace with them.

Cum a meridie (noon) prope (=fere) ad solis occasum pugnaretur, barbari eruptionem (6. 1.) summa vi facere contenderunt. 4. Acriter (5. 1.) usque ad vesperum (evening) pugnatum est. Solis occasu hostes in naves se receperunt (12. 3.)

17.—1. His rebus gestis, jubet portas claudi, ut in summar (12. 5.) contemptione hostibus veniat. 2. Cæsar loco castris idoneo capto (take), cognoverat (14. 4.) quo in loco hostiū copiae consedissent. 3. Certior factus est (9. 1.) reliqua (16. 3.) omnes civitates defecisse, seque cum Germanis con junxisse. 4. Cum multos menses (months) castris se ac paludibus (marshes) tenuisset, neque Gallis dimicandi potestate fecisset, haec opinio timoris confirmata est (strengthen). Interea (meanwhile) Commius, cui summa imperii permis erat (give), cum omnibus copiis ad Alesiam pervenit, et mil passus ab nostris munitionibus (6. 3.) consedit.

18.—1. Defensores (4. 2) oppido (14. 1) idonei diliguntur quos Cæsar edocet quae dici (15. 1.) vellet. 2. His persuadet ne suis (8. 5.) auxilium ferrent non poterat. 3. Hostes poster (=proximo) die majoribus copiis coactis (17. 2.) castra oppugnar (assault), fossam complent. 4. Superiore die Cæsar e castri copiis eductis hostibus pugnandi potestatem fecit (17. 5.). Crassus, cum sua cunctatione atque opinione timoris hosti alacriores (more eager) efficeret (make), ad hostium castra co tendit.

19.—1. Copias omnes in loco edito atque aperto (12. 5.) instruxerant (draw up). 2. Cohortatus (= hortatus) suos, omnibus cupientibus, ad hostium castra contendit. 3. Nostri acriter hostes signo dato impetum fecerunt, ut spatinum tela in verterunt neque prius (18. 7.) fuga destiterunt (cease) quam ad castra pervenerunt.

20.—1. Hostes, collocatis insidiis in silvis (woods) opportuno (15. 4.) loco, Romanorum adventum exspectabant (14. 1.), et cum major pars agminis in magnam convallem descendisset (descend), ex utraque (12. 2) parte ejus vallis (= convallia) subito se ostenderunt atque proelium committere coeperunt (13. 9.). 2. Hac oratione (speech) cognita, nuntios (messengers) mittit ad finitimas civitates, equitesque undique (17. 4.) evocat. 3. Dum haec a Cæsare geruntur (17. 1.), Treveri, magnis coactis peditatus (= pedestrium copiarum) equitatusque copias Labienum adoriri parabant (14. 1.). 4. Cum propter inopiam (13. 6.) rei frumentariae Romani se in provinciam recipere (12. 3.) coepissent (13. 9.), impeditos in agmine adorirunt.

21.—1. Hoc oppidum ex itinere oppugnare conatus (11. 2.), quod vacuum (1. 6.) ab defensoribus (4. 2.) esse audiebat (18. 5.), propter latitudinem (breadth) fossae (18. 8.) murique (wall) altitudinem (14. 4.) expugnare (1. 3.) non potuit. Castris munitis (9. 8.) vineas agere coepit. 2. Celeriter (9. 2.) vineis ad oppidum actis, aggere iacto (throw up) turribusque constructis (build), magnitudine operum (12. 3.) et celeritate (13. 7.) Romanorum pernoti (dismay), legatos ad Cæsarem de ditionemittunt, et potentibus Remis ut conservarentur (spare), impetrant. 3. Hostes cursu examinatos (19. 1.) vulneribusque confessos ex loco superiore in flumen compulerunt (drive), et gladiis (sword) insecuri magnam partem eorum interfecerunt.

22.—1. Eodem tempore clamore sublato duabus portis ab utroque (each) latere (side) turrium eruptio fiebat. Nostri, cognito eorum consilio, celeriter ad arma concurrunt. 2. Quod cum animadvertissent, clamore sublato arma capere, portas claudere, coeperunt. Cæsar ex castris equitatum educi jublet, proelium equestre committit. 3. Respondit (answered) non esse consuetudinem (custom) populi (people) Romani accipere ab hoste conditionem; si arma tradere velint, legatosque ad Cæsarem mittant, quae petierint impetratu.

Interim ii qui ad alteram partem oppidi convenerant, primo auditio clamore, magno cursu ee contenderunt. Romani et cursu et diuturnitate pugnae defessi non facile integros sustinebant.

28.—Qua re nuntiata (announce), Cæsar omnem ex castris equitatum suis auxilio misit. Interim nostri milites impetum hostium sustinuerunt atque amplius horis quatuor fortissime pugnaverunt, et paucis vulneribus acceptis complures ex his occiderunt. Postquam vero equitatus noster in conspectum venit, hostes abjectis (throw away) armis terga verterunt magnusque eorum numerus est occisus.

29.—Hoc inito consilio totius exercitus impedimenta ad Labium in Treveros mittit duasque legiones ad eum proficiunt; ipse cum legionibus quinque in Menapios proficiuntur. Illi nulla coacta manu loci natura freti in silvas paludesque confugiunt (flee) suaque eodem conferunt. Caesar partitis copiis aedificia vicosque incendit, magno pecoris atque hominum numero potitur. Quibus rebus coacti (force) Menapii legatos ad eum pacis petendae causa mittunt.

PART II.—EXERCISES IN RE-TRANSLATION INTO LATIN.

1.—(§ 1.) 1. He had sent the twelfth legion. 2. He sends part of the twelfth legion and the cavalry. 3. The legion was sent into the territories of the Veragri. 4. They extend from Italy to the river Rhone. 5. He set out; he was setting out. (§§ 2, 3.) 6. He gave permission to the legion to winter. 7. He gave permission to the traders to go into this region. 8. They are accustomed to winter in Italy. 9. He wishes to set out. (§§ 4, 5, 6.) 10. After fighting this battle he made peace. 11. After the strongholds had been fortified, they decided to make peace. 12. There were several reasons. 13. Two cohorts of the other legion had wintered in this village.

2.—(§ 1.) 1. He ordered the Gauls to depart from that village. 2. After the corn had been brought into the winterquarters they were informed that the Gauls were departing. 3. He gave the (is) village from which the Gauls had departed to the Seduni. (§§ 2, 3.) 4. It happened that they were renewing the war. 5. It happened that two cohorts had been removed. 6. Two cohorts had been sent to seek supplies. 7. They were sent to destroy the legion. (§§ 4, 5.) 8. They thought that the legion could be destroyed. 9. They cannot seize the summit. 10. The Romans had not attempted to carry off even the children. 11. They despised the Gauls because they had not withstood the attacks of even two cohorts, and those not very complete.

3.—(§§ 1, 2.) 1. They cannot finish the work. 2. They thought that a surrender should be made. 3. On finishing the fortifications they began to make provision for supplies. 4. Having filled all the higher ground with armed men, they began to block the roads. (§§ 3, 4.) 5. Since the majority had decided to surrender, they could not make a sally. 6. They think the camp can be defended. 7. They hastened to the winterquarters by the same road as they had come. 8. On reaching that place they abandoned their baggage. 9. They had abandoned their baggage and begun to make a sally.

4.—(§§ 1, 2.) 1. After carrying out these plans (res), they will bring aid to our men. 2. The matters agreed on have not been carried out. 3. Seeing that our men were hard pressed they had rushed down at a given signal from the higher ground. 4. When the enemy saw that that part of the camp had been cleared of defenders, they rushed down. (§§ 3, 4.) 5. After hurling stones and weapons in vain against the camp, they had betaken themselves (use se recipere) to the higher ground. 6. Nothing can be done; they can do nothing. 7. On account of the length of the battle our men were being hard pressed. 8. They do not give to our men an opportunity of hurling weapons. 9. Our men had left the field and the camp had been stripped of defenders.

5.—(§§ 1, 2.) 1. They inform Volusenus that the enemy's strength was now failing. 2. After filling up the trenches they began to fight most vigorously. 3. There had been continuous fighting for over three hours. 4. They inform the centurion that Volusenus, a tribune of the soldiers, was spent with wounds. 5. The centurion, who, as we have said, was a man of great valor, had been spent with wounds. (§ 3.) 6. Giving up the battle for a short time they refreshed themselves. 7. On the centurions and tribunes of the soldiers being called together, our men give over fighting for a short time. 8. He give the signal for (use genitive) rushing out of the camp. 9. While the enemy were filling up the trenches, our men were resting themselves.

6.—(§§ 1, 2.) 1. He has found out what we are doing; they had found out what he was doing. 2. More than thirty thousand of the enemy were slain, the rest put to flight. 3. They did not allow the enemy to find out what had been done. 4. Fortune changes; the enemy rallies. 5. The barbarians were left no opportunity of making a stand or of doing what they been ordered. 6. It is agreed that more than a third were ordered to be put to death. (§§ 3, 4, 5.) 7. He is unwilling to winter among the Allobroges. 8. Induced by the want of arms and the flight of the third legion they withdrew to higher ground. 9. After leading the legion in safety to the village, he burned all the buildings. 10. Without fighting any battle, they return to the camp because they see that the enemy are obstructing the march. 11. They remember that the forces have been routed and stripped of their arms.

7.—1. He wished to set out for Gaul for the following reasons.
2. Thinking that the Belgians had been conquered, they had set out for this district. 3. After sending out several tribunes of the soldiers, he will winter among the Veneti. 4. He thought that a sudden war had broken out in the neighboring states.
5. As all Gaul had been subjugated, and he wished to become acquainted with all these things, he sent the seventh legion into the neighboring regions.

8.—1. After detaining the Romans, they incite the rest of the Gauls to send ambassadors to this state. 2. In influence they used to surpass all the sea coast. 3. On the hostages being restored they quickly send ambassadors to the neighboring states.
4. After giving up hostages, they take an oath to endure the bondage of the Romans. 5. They had rather recover the hostages they have given to Crassus than bring over their neighbors to their opinion. 6. They thought that because they had very many ships and held almost all the harbors, they surpassed the Romans in skill and experience. 7. They were accustomed for that reason to do nothing by common agreement.

9.—1. He informed Caesar that they were far distant, and lingering among the Morini. 2. Because everything is turning out contrary to expectation, they understand how great the danger is. 3. On account of the greatness of the danger, he hastened to the river Loire. 4. It is agreed that Venetia is situated opposite to Britain. 5. They adopt these plans chiefly because they are very strong in ships. 6. On learning of these things, he orders the town to be fortified, ships to be collected and auxiliaries summoned from the other states. 7. He was confident that on account of the small number of ships these plans (res) could not be quickly carried out. 8. As our army had been unable to build the ships, he ordered Crassus to raise as many sailors as possible.

10.—1. He thought that if the army were divided, the other states would not give hostages. 2. All men hate slavery.
3. He had pointed out these difficulties in dividing the army.
4. The knights must be detained, and the states roused to war.
5. Understanding that the army had been widely distributed, they were anxious for a charge. 6. If the war were renewed, he thought that more states would join the conspiracy.

11.—1. The Belgians, who were nearest to these regions, attempted to cross the river. 2. He himself sent Brutus with the fleet to keep the bands of the enemy apart. 3. As soon as he can he sets out for that place. 4. Labienus, whom he has placed in command of the cavalry, will visit the Belgians. 5. After subduing Gaul, he hastened with all his forces against the Germans. 6. The fleet, over which he had placed Brutus, he sent to Aquitania. 7. After attempting to cross the river by force they had summoned aid from the Veneti themselves.

12.—1. This happens twice in the summer. 2. The tides were of such a sort that there was great difficulty in sailing. 3. If at any time the ships were detained by a storm, there was the greatest difficulty in doing this. 4. The towns are inaccessible either by land or sea. 5. They betook themselves to the nearest ships, the more easily because the sea had been kept back by dams. 6. The tide rushed up to the walls of the town which was situated on the end of a promontory. 7. For most of the summer they had defended themselves by these works. 8. If at any time they were hindered by the tide, they would bring up a large number of ships.

13.—1. Our ships were superior in strength and size. 2. On account of the violence of the storm, they began to fear the shoals. 3. They can not very well run before the wind. 4. That they might the more easily injure our fleet, they had built the ships entirely of oak. 5. Besides this they could withstand any violence of the wind. 6. On account of the strength of the ships, they had no fear of storms. 7. They thought they could injure our ships with the beaks. 8. On account of the speed of the ships, which had been equipped with both sails and oars, they thought they could more easily hurl their weapons. 9. Such was the scarcity of ships, that their attacks could not be withstood.

14.—1. Two hundred and twenty towns had been taken by storm in sight of the fleet. 2. He set out as soon as he learned that all the higher ground was held by the enemy. 3. The towers were a great aid to our men because weapons could be thrown with greater force. 4. The sterns of the vessels surpassed the towers in height. 5. The centurions who were in command of the army learned that several towns had been taken by storm. 6. Cæsar was not quite certain who was in command of the ship. 7. The ships can be the more easily injured that all hope depends on the oars. 8. Perceiving that the ships had set out from the harbors, they decided that all this labor must not be undertaken in vain.

15.—1. When this affair was finished, they turned the ships about. 2. We cannot move; this was being done at the fourth

When they perceived in what direction the wind was blowing, they sought safety by flight. 7. This circumstance is favorable for taking the vessels. 8. With the utmost vigor they pursue the ship right to the shore. 9. Three ships would surround one.

16.—1. After this war had been finished, he decided that the right of ambassadors must be carefully observed. 2. Not only the Veneti, but the whole coast had surrendered to Cæsar. 3. They had no place to which to gather the rest of their ships. 4. That he might the more severely punish the barbarians, he decided that all the senate must be put to death. 5. After all the youth had been lost, the rest had no means of defending themselves. 6. After the ships had been gathered to one place, the rest betook themselves thither.

17.—1. They had joined Cæsar, thinking that the Veneti would not dare to revolt. 2. While the enemy were coming up to the camp, Cæsar was leading out his forces. 3. After doing this they had ventured to put to death Viridovix, who had approved of the war. 4. After closing the gates, they had put the senate to death. 5. As he thought he should encamp only on favorable ground, he was unwilling to do this. 6. Collecting large forces from all parts of Gaul, he daily gave the enemy an opportunity of fighting. 7. As the enemy were keeping themselves in the camp, and creating an impression of fear, they were beginning to be despised by our army. 8. So great was the number of the enemy, that the lieutenant was unwilling to fight in Cæsar's absence.

18.—1. They inform the Gauls that Cæsar has with him certain deserters. 2. They persuade Cæsar to lend aid. 3. On hearing that this deserter had on the previous night crossed over to the enemy, they took arms and hastened to the camp. 4. He informed them that Cæsar would lead his army out of the camp the next day. 5. They wished to set out for the camp, for the purpose of filling the trench. 6. Influenced by the want of arms, they all cry out that Cæsar must lead the army out of the camp. 7. After pointing out what an opportunity had been lost, he persuaded them to set out with him. 8. Choosing a suitable man to persuade them, he told [him] what he wished done. 9. Permission has been given them to go to the camp.

2. On a sally being made, the Gauls at once turned their backs.

3. The result was that few had been left. 4. They made an attack so (tam) suddenly that time was not given our men for arming. 5. They were informed that our men, hampered because of the burdens they were bearing, had not withstood the enemy's attacks. 6. He ordered his men to pursue the enemy. 7. On account of the load which he was carrying, the soldier reached the camp out of breath. 8. He is bearing burdens as large as possible. 9. When our soldiers, who had been ordered to pursue those who had escaped, reached the camp, they were informed of the two wars.

20.—1. On reaching Gaul they had procured supplies. 2. They slay the lieutenant, gather large forces and renew the war. 3. He perceived that an ambush had been set. 4. On learning of their arrival, he perceived that he must join battle. 5. On a cavalry fight being begun, our men were scattered and all the baggage was lost. 6. In the third year of the war the troops were led into the province of Gaul. 7. The enemy are especially strong in infantry. 8. He led his army into the country where war had been waged three years before. 9. When our cavalry had been scattered and the enemy were renewing the battle, suddenly the auxiliaries attack our column on the march.

21.—1. Relying on the former victory, he ordered the town to be attacked and towers brought up. 2. The safety of the whole legion depends on his watchfulness. 3. After the battle had lasted for a long time, he saw that nothing could be accomplished. 4. They did what they had been ordered. 5. On their sending ambassadors and giving up their arms, he accepted their surrender. 6. Under Cesar's leadership they had accomplished nothing. 7. They are anxious to see what can be accomplished by this means.

22.—1. Making a sally, they fought fiercely. 2. On the death of Adiatunus, all who had pledged themselves, committed suicide. 3. On the soldiers being driven back, a shout was raised at another part of the fortifications. 4. They obtained permission to rush to arms. 5. While attempting to drive back the enemy to the town, they were slain. 6. This is the agreement that if any sally is made, all are to die.

23.—1. According to their custom they exchanged hostages and took an oath that they would all agree. 2. Perceiving that the roads had been blocked, and that the enemy would very easily keep our men from supplies, he fortified the camp. 3. Leaving a garrison for the camp he set out for hither Spain.

4. They proceeded to summon allies and wage war. 5. War had been waged for a few years. 6. As the number of the enemy was daily increasing he thought he should lay this matter before the generals. 7. Alarmed because of the large number of the enemy and the small size of the camp, he did not attempt to divide his forces.

24.—1. On account of the enemy's delay, and the large number of our men, he began to blockade the roads. 2. Perceiving the enemy's alarm, our men were eager to fight. 3. Although they keep themselves in the camp, we shall draw up the line of battle. 4. It is safer to place the auxiliaries in the centre. 5. They adopted this plan, attacked the centre, and gained the victory. 6. He thought they would place their packs in the centre of the line of march. 7. By attacking the enemy while on the march we shall gain the victory. 8. At daybreak he drew up the line of battle, exhorted his men, and waited to see what the enemy were planning.

and drive the defenders from the wall. 2. They bring back word that some are fighting stubbornly, others timidly. 3. Some go round the camp, others hurl weapons at the defenders, others bring up turf for mounds. 4. As Crassus trusted the auxiliaries he did not fortify the camp with the same care. 5. They brought back word that many were hurling stones and weapons, and that the defenders had been driven from the wall. 6. At another gate there was stubborn fighting.

26.—1. Leaving the cohorts as a guard for the camp, he pursued the enemy with all the cavalry. 2. He exhorted the cavalry to attack vigorously. 3. Surrounding the enemy, they left scarcely a quarter of them. 4. The cavalry, aroused by the hope of rewards, on hearing the shouts, began to pursue the enemy with renewed vigor. 5. Before the enemy could learn what had been done, our men had begun to surround the cavalry. 6. They could not be seen from the fortifications.
7. He pointed out what he wished done, that they might not be surrounded on all sides before getting a footing in the camp.
8. It is agreed that fifty thousand cavalry had assembled.
9. Despairing of safety, they betook themselves to the camp by longer routes.

27.—1. Sending hostages, they voluntarily surrendered to him. 2. A large part of Aquitania, trusting in their numbers, had neglected to send hostages. 3. This they did for the larger part of this winter. 4. Winter is near at hand.

28.—1. In the same summer they sent ambassadors to treat for peace. 2. He saw that they had betaken themselves to the marshes. 3. On reaching the marsh they proceeded to fortify the camp. 4. Although they are in arms and have not been conquered, yet he thinks he will quickly finish the war. 5. The Merini were the only ones who could not be conquered. 6. Our men, having followed them too far, were scattered. 7. Rushing out of the woods and marshes they made an attack on the camp. 8. When the summer was over, and he had begun to fortify the camp, ambassadors were sent from by far the largest nation of all Gaul.

29.—1. Turning the timber towards the woods, he built a rampart. 2. In order that the work might not be interrupted, he kept the soldiers under canvas. 3. They proceeded to burn the villages and lay waste all their fields. 4. After leading back the army to winter quarters, he cut down the woods on either side. 5. An attack was made on both sides, while the army was off its guard. 6. They placed the baggage and cattle in thicker forests. 7. That the enemy might not make any attack, the timber was heaped up as a rampart. 8. There followed a storm of such a character that an attack could not be made.

23.—1. Secunda cum solvisset vigilia, prima luce (at dawn, lit., first light) terram (land) attigit, omnesque incolumes naves perduxit (brought over). 2. Itaque (20. 4.) dies circiter viginti in eo loco commoratus (=moratus 22. 1.), quod ventus navigationem (sailing) impediens (hinder), tandem (at last) idoneam nactus tempestatem milites equitesque condescendere naves jubet. 3. Quibus rebus adductus (6. 4.) Cæsar non expectandum sibi statuit (16. 1.) iam in Santos Helvetii pervenirent (15. 2.). 4. Cæsar idoncum locum nactus, legatis fieri velit ostendit; imprimis (particularly) monet, ut continant (restrain) milites, ne (lest) spe (6. 4.) praedae (plunder) longius (too far) progrederentur.

24.—1. Impeditis hostibus propter ea, quae ferebant (carry), onera, nostri de navibus desiluerunt. 2. Hostes, notis omnibus vadis (shoals), incitatis equis, impeditos adorierunt (attack). 3. Novo (new) genere pugnae perterritis nostris, hostes per medios (the midst) audacissime perruperunt (broke through). 4. Repulsi (drive back) ab equitatu, se in silvas abdiderunt (18. 4.), locum nacti (23. 6.) egregie (well) munitum (fortified), nosrosque ingredi (enter, v. deponent) prohibebant.

25.—1. Nova (new) atque unusita specie permoti, legatos ad Cæsarem de pace (peace) miserunt. 2. Alii ab latere aperto in universos tela conjiciebant. 3. Reliqui se in castra recipiunt unde (from which) erant egressi. Ex quibus Lucius Petrosidius aquilifer (eagle bearer), cum magna inmultitudine hostium premeretur, aquilam intra (within) vallum (rampart) projecit, ipse pro (before) castris fortissime pugnans inter iterum. 4. 'Vincite' (conquer, carry one's point), inquit, 'si ita (so) vultis,' Sabinus, et id (that too) clariore (=majore) voce, ut magna pars militum exaudiaret (hear).

26.—L. Domitio, M. Claudio consulibus Cæsar legatis imperat uti quam plurimas possent hieme naves aedificarent (build). Eorum modum formamque (shape) demonstrat (explain). Ad celeritatem onerandi (load) paulo facit humiliores (low) quam quibus (those which) in nostro mari uti consuevimus, ad onera ac multititudinem jumentorum transportandam paulo latiores (wide), quam quibus in reliquis utimur navibus. Ea, quae sunt usui ad armandas (equip) naves, ex Hispania (Spain) comportari jubet. Ipse in Illyricum proficiscitur quod a Pirustis finitiam partem provincias (provinces) vastari (lay waste) audiebat.

27.—His rebus gestis (do) Labieno in continente cum tribus legionibus et equitum nullibus duobus relicto, ut portus tueretur (guard, v. deponent), quaeque in Gallia gererentur cognosceret, ipse cum quinque legionibus et eodem numero equitum, quem in continente reliquerat, naves solvit, et eam parte in insulae cepit (reach), qua (where) optimum esse egressum (landing place) superiore aestate cognoverat.

28.—His rebus constitutis, Cæsar ad portum Itium cum legionibus pervenit. Ibi cognoscit naves, quae factae erant, tempestate rejectas (drive back) cursum tenere non potuisse, atque eodem, unde erant profectae, revertisse; reliquas paratas (ready) ad navigandum atque omnibus rebus instructas (equip) invenit (find). Eodem equitatus totius (all) Galliae convenient numero millionum quatuor, principesque ex omnibus civitatibus; ex quibus per paucos obsidum loco (as, lit., in the place) secum ducere decenterat, quod cum ipse abasset motum (uprising) Galliae verebatur (fear, v. deponent).

32.—1. Hi rebus cognitis Cæsar legiones equitatumque revocari (recall) atque itinere desistere jubet, ipse ad naues revertitur; eadem fere, quae ex nuntiis cognoverat, coram (with his own eyes) perspicit, sic (so) ut annisis circiter quadraginta (forty) navibus, reliquæ tamen refici possent. 2. Equites hostium essedariique, imprudentibus (unprepared) nostris atque occupatis in munitione (fortifying) castrorum, subito se ex silvis ejecerunt, impetuque in eos facto, qui erant in statione pro castris collocati (station), acriter pugnaverunt.

34.—His Cæsar imperat obsides quadraginta (forty), frumentumque exercitu. Illi imperata celeriter fecerunt, obsides frumentumque miserunt. Ab his cognoscit non longe ex eo loco oppidum abesse, quo (to which) satis (quite) Magnus hominum pecorisque (cattle) numerus convenerit. Eo proficiscitur cum legionibus: hostes paulisper morati militum nostrorum impetum non tulerunt (withstand), seseque alia ex parte oppidi ejecerunt.

35. 36.—Cassivellaunus hoc proelio nuntiato, vastatis (lay waste) finibus, maxime etiam permotus defectione (falling away) civitatum, legatos per Atrebates Commium de ditione (surrender) mittit. Cæsar cum constituissest hiemare in continentि, neque multum (much) nestatis supercesset (remain), obsides imperat. Obsidibus acceptis exercitum reducit ad mare, naives invenit (find) refectas. Ac sic (so) accidit, uti ex tanto navium numero neque hoc neque superiore anno ulla omnino navis, quae milites portaret (carry), desideraretur (lose); at ex iis, quas Labienus faciendas curaverat, per paucae locum caperent, reliquæ fere omnes rejicerentur (drive back).

37. 38.—1. Quas cum aliquamdiu (for some time) Cæsar frustra (in vain) exspectasset, ne anni tempore a navigatione excluderetur (cut off), quod aequinoctium suberat (be near), necessario angustius (more closely than usual) milites collocavit ac summa tranquillitate (calm) consecuta (follow), secunda cum solvisset vigilia, prima luce (at dawn) terram (land) attigit,

10.—1. The island used to be inhabited by the Batavi. 2. A river (flumen) which is called Mosa, is thought to rise in (ex) the Alps. 3. The Alps are inhabited by a fierce nation which lives on birds. 4. After forming the island, it receives a branch from the Vacalus. 5. Many barbarous nations inhabit a large part of the islands.

11.—(§§ 1, 2, 3.) 1. When the ambassadors were returning to Caesar, the cavalry whom he had sent in advance were twelve miles distant. 2. Caesar, meeting the leading men on the way, gave them three days' time to send ambassadors. 3. As he had not given them an opportunity of advancing, they begged him not to carry out these plans. (§§ 4, 5, 6.) 4. They sent ambassadors to say that the army was approaching nearer. 5. He thought they would not return the same day. 6. They said that as many as possible would assemble, and that as all the cavalry was approaching, he would gain his request.

12.—(§§ 1, 2, 3.) 1. As soon as the cavalry returned, the ambassadors left the enemy. 2. Our men have no fear, because not more than eight hundred horsemen have returned. 3. Having put the cavalry to flight, and thrown the rest into confusion, they return to Caesar. (§§ 4, 5, 6.) 4. He did not cease until his brother was saved from all danger. 5. When he had rescued his brother, he brought aid to his grandfather. 6. While resisting bravely, he was surrounded by the cavalry, and received many wounds. 7. As soon as they could, they brought aid to Piso, whom our senate had called friend.

13.—(§§ 1, 2, 3.) 1. No time was given to the enemy for seeking peace. 2. After these ambassadors had been heard, he waited till they should adopt the plan. 3. He thought that the enemy had gained no prestige by these terms. 4. He perceived that, after accepting these terms, they were making war. (§§ 4, 5, 6.) 5. Caesar is glad that the chief men and the ambassadors have been detained. 6. No time should be given for arranging these matters. 7. The cavalry, having followed up the enemy, had begun battle. 8. Caesar, the next day, after leading out all the cavalry, ordered the battle to be begun.

14.—1. He began to draw up a triple line of battle. 2. The cavalry had been sent to defend the camp. 3. Terrified by the arrival of our cavalry he had sought safety in flight. 4. The forces, alarmed by all this, perceived that they could not cross the Rhine. 5. Taking arms they gave the enemy no time to draw up the line of battle. 6. With the rest of the women and children they fled to their friends.

15.—1. Seeing that a large number of our men had been killed, he threw away his arms. 2. Thirty thousand Germans had perished in that flight. 3. As they wished to depart, he said he would allow them their freedom. 4. Cæsar reached the river Rhine in safety. 5. They said that thirty military standards had been left. 6. Hearing the shouts of his men, and fearing the Gauls, he rushed out of the camp.

16.—1. The Germans had been very easily induced to cross the Rhine and make war on the Roman people. 2. Messengers were sent to promise vessels for crossing the Rhine. 3. After sending ambassadors and giving up hostages, they betook themselves to their friends. 4. As the Suebi had joined the Usipetes, he had, against his will, lent aid to these tribes. 5. Against Cæsar's will they had ventured to carry over the army. 6. He resolved that the war must be finished. 7. Perceiving that they were hard pressed by the Germans, they were alarmed. 8. They answered that they would prevent Cæsar from conveying his army across the Rhine. 9. They thought that they could not be safe without his consent. 10. He besought Cæsar to take part in the battle. 11. The Germans who had made war on Cæsar, were surrendered to him. 12. So great was Cæsar's reputation that the farthest tribes sent ambassadors and gave hostages.

17.—1. There was the greatest difficulty, for two reasons. 2. So great was the breadth of the river that there was the greatest difficulty in crossing. 3. Although he was crossing by boats, he decided to build a bridge. 4. For the same reason the trees did not injure the bridges. 5. He decided to join the boats together to lessen the force of the current.

18.—1. Cæsar began to lead the army across. 2. The army began to be led across. 3. For several days they were bringing in timber. 4. He ordered ambassadors to come to him from both states. 5. He ordered a garrison to be left at the bridge. 6. They began to conceal themselves in the woods. 7. Meanwhile, all the timber having been collected and the army led across, they began to prepare for flight.

19.—1. Cæsar learned that their wives and children had been placed in the woods, and that they were gathering to one place. 2. As the bridge had been torn down, Cæsar resolved to punish the Germans. 3. When the Ubii learned that all the buildings had been burned, and a bridge built, they betook themselves to the woods. 4. All can bear arms. 5. For ten days they had awaited his arrival. 6. He thought that everything, for which he had led the army across, had been accomplished. 7. The Suebi, after learning this through scouts, had determined to burn all their villages and buildings. 8. Eight days in all had been spent in the districts which the Suebi held. 9. They betook themselves to their own territories.

20.—1. He found out that the traders did not visit these islands. 2. Almost all the harbors are suitable. 3. He found out to whom they had furnished auxiliaries. 4. He thought that the traders could find out how large the harbor was. 5. Although the harbors were not suitable, he set out for the island. 6. He knew that the winters were early. 7. All this will be of great service. 8. He found out that all the tribes had these customs.

21.—1. He instructs Volusenus to find out these things. 2. Ambassadors came from the states which he had conquered that summer. 3. Commius, who was faithful to Cæsar, had visited these states on the previous days. 4. They themselves, with all the fleet, assembled as quickly as possible. 5. Him he orders (jubeo) to visit the states. 6. He orders (impéro) the traders to come to him. 7. Having given hostages they return home. 8. He urges Volusenus to leave the ship. 9. He reported what they had promised. 10. Commius had been made king.

22.—1. He ordered about eight ships of war and a large number of transports. 2. They promised to make ready the ships which he had required. 3. While they were collecting the ships, ambassadors came from the Morini. 4. The rest of the ships could not carry over the legion. 5. After the two legions had been taken over, he gave the rest to Rufus to lead against the Morini. 6. When the hostages had been brought, he promised to receive them under his protection. 7. He left a garrison of two legions. 8. He does not wish either to wage war, or to delay for the purpose of collecting cavalry. 9. In the previous year he had had an opportunity of taking over the legions. 10. This happened very opportunely.

23.—1. As the cavalry had advanced to the higher ground, he ordered the rest of the soldiers to follow them. 2. He ordered the anchors to be raised. 3. We cannot throw weapons from the ship to the shore. 4. Thinking the shore suitable, they landed. 5. On the signal being given, they embarked and followed him. 6. He waited until he found a suitable tide for sailing. 7. About the ninth hour of the day he found out what was being done. 8. On the ninth day he ordered the tribunes to set sail from the farther harbor.

24.—1. They kept our men from leaping down. 2. Sending the charioteers in advance, they hurled their weapons more boldly. 3. The soldiers, burdened by their arms, leaped down from the ship. 4. The locality was unknown to our men, who did not show the same zeal as the enemy. 5. They had to advance into the water. 6. On account of the great difficulty, the rest of the forces cannot follow up the cavalry. 7. They were wont to use horses in their battles. 8. The enemy, dismayed by the size of the vessels, could not hurl their weapons.

25.—1. The soldiers were ordered to leap down. 2. As the soldier was leaping down, Cæsar noticed that the enemy had halted. 3. On the ships of war being removed a short distance, the enemy began to retreat. 4. He urged the soldiers not to betray the eagles to the barbarians. 5. He cried with a loud voice that he was willing to do his duty. 6. On account of the unusual kind of vessels, the matter turned out most favorably for Cæsar. 7. "Leap down, Cæsar," he said, "unless you wish to incur disgrace." 8. Our soldiers exhorted one another not to hesitate on account of the appearance of the barbarians.

26.—1. On the vessels being filled, he ordered aid to be sent to those who were in difficulty. 2. Whenever the enemy made an attack, Cæsar would order our men to keep their ranks. 3. Both sides were unable to leave their ships. 4. Whomsoever they attacked, they put to flight. 5. Making an attack, they surrounded the enemy. 6. Having reached the island, the cavalry landed from the ship. 7. Having attacked the enemy, they fought fiercely. 8. This alone is lacking. 9. He had manned the ships of war with the cavalry.

27.—1. On their promising to send ambassadors, they were ordered to send Commius back. 2. He complained because, after promising to send for hostages, they had seized Commius. 3. Having seized Commius and put him in chains, they had made war. 4. They said that they had sent for part of the hostages. 5. As soon as the enemy had done what he required, he forgave their indiscretion. 6. Sending Commius, the Atrebatician, in advance, he ordered the ambassadors to be seized and put in chains. 7. As they have sought peace and given hostages, their imprudence will be forgiven. 8. They seized Commius as he was landing from the ship.

28.—1. So great a storm arose that the vessels could not set out. 2. Having taken the cavalry on board, they had set sail for the continent. 3. Some vessels had been filled with the waves, others had been carried back to the island. 4. When els could not set they had set sail n filled with the sland. 4. When they were taking the cavalry on board, a light breeze sprang up. 5. The camp was reached on the fourth day. 6. The camp is very near the upper harbor. 7. The storm was so great that they put out to sea.

29.—1. The ships of war were being filled with the tide. 2. After the ships had been repaired, the army was carried over. 3. The same winter several ships were lost. 4. On the same day he caused corn to be provided. 5. The ships which had not been drawn up, were being tossed about by the storm. 6. Other vessels were wanting. 7. For several days it happened that the tides were very high. 8. As corn has not been provided, a fact which is unknown to Cæsar, we ought not to winter in Gaul. 9. It is generally agreed that ropes, anchors and other tackling are lacking.

30.—1. As cavalry was lacking to Cæsar, the camp was smaller. 2. The best thing to do is to lead across the legion and renew the war. 3. They had learned that Cæsar had brought the legion over without cavalry. 4. He began to form a conspiracy for the purpose of renewing the war. 5. They are confident that, if the matter is drawn out till winter, Cæsar will not make war. 6. Withdrawing his men gradually from Britain, he began to make war. 7. Understanding that our men had been prevented from returning, they departed secretly after Cæsar's return.

31.—1. Although the rest of the ships had been repaired, he could not sail very satisfactorily. 2. Suspecting that they would fail to give hostages, he ordered the ships to be repaired. 3. As the ships have been seriously damaged, timber and bronze cannot be brought to the continent. 4. He ordered the soldiers to use the corn. 5. Twelve ships had been repaired with the utmost zeal. 6. Having learned Cæsar's plans, they suspected that the rest of the ships had been lost. 7. When hostages had been given, they were ordered to bring in corn. 8. No one will cross over from Britain for the purpose of renewing the war.

32.—1. While the two cohorts were arming themselves, the enemy suddenly attacked the cavalry. 2. Observing that the enemy had marched in that direction, he ordered the legions to surround them. 3. Those who had been sent to reap the grain reported that the enemy had suddenly attacked them and surrounded them with their cavalry. 4. A larger cloud of dust than is usual is visible in the direction in which the legion marched. 5. Suspecting that the cohorts would follow, the barbarians had been ordered to conceal themselves in the woods.

6. He suspected that part of the barbarians kept coming to the camp. 7. Being ordered to lay aside their arms and not to hurl any weapon, they were alarmed. 8. Adopting this plan, they had set out with him. 9. When those who remained in the camp told Cæsar that the ranks had been thrown into disorder, he ordered the cavalry to be sent.

33.—1. They are accustomed to leap down from their horses and fight on foot. 2. Hurling their weapons, they threw the ranks into confusion. 3. Leaping down from their chariots, they betook themselves to their friends. 4. Leaving the battle, they would place their chariots so that they might hurl their weapons. 5. So great was the din of the wheels that the very charioteers were thrown into confusion. 6. The charioteer betook himself in safety to the cavalry. 7. They are so hard pressed by the cavalry and infantry that they are gradually leaving the field.

34.—1. While they were collecting the cavalry, Cæsar kept his men in camp. 2. Having done this, he sent out messengers and pointed out how great was the number of the enemy. 3. As the time was unfavorable the legions were led back to the camp. 4. He thought the time was favorable for bringing aid. 5. The Romans having been driven out, they thought an opportunity was afforded (them) of lending aid to the enemy. 6. Our men were kept in the camp for several days by the storms. 7. After joining battle, while the cavalry was occupied, an opportunity for throwing the infantry into confusion was given.
