Rough Spring Predicted.
The thunder and lightning on Monday evening was so unexpected that it was looked upon as a phenomenon. The temperature was quite cool, and frost seemed more in line than a thunder-storm. A storm of this nature usually betokens a long spell of very rough weather. We are having some of it.

Charlie Wendt is also leaving excellent business prospects behind him. These two men are to be commended for their splendid example, and it is hoped that others may step forward and don the khaki.

After a sojourn of three years he came to Carrick, where he purchased the settler's rights to lot 33, concession 7, from a man named Lanz. He was married to Miss Elizabeth Baetz, who survives him. Mr. Hill has been a resident of Carrick for sixty years, and has seen a devise forest converted into one of the finest agricultural sections of Ontario. War Summary.

Driving hard against the French lines northwest and southeast of Verdun, the Germans have been enabled to make additional gains at Verdun, but with extremely heavy casualties, according to Paris. Hill 625 to the southeast, and a portion of Corbeaux wood, directly south of Forges, has been occupied by the Germans through strong infantry attack which were preceded by extremely heavy bombardments. The town of Fresnes, in the Woivre, has also been captured. The German attack was over the entire front west of the Meuse, extending from Bethincourt to the river, but except in Corbeaux wood and at Hill 265 the French held back the attackers at all points. Thus the French still occupy the important strategic points on the heights of the Cote de L'Oie, for the possession of which numerous sanguinary engagements have been fought. The occupation of a portion of the Corbeaux wood would indicate that the Germans have advanced over three miles since they took the town of Forges. The Germans succeeded in penetrating a French redoubt in the region of Douaumont, but immediately were thrown out in a counter-attack. The recapture by the Germans of a position from the French in Champagne, the pushing of the German line farther forward in the Argonne forest, and the expulsion of small British detachments from captured German trenches northeast of Vermelles, are related in the latest German official report. The British are defending the famous Hohenzollern redoubt position against German bombing attacks.

Prize Oats for Sale.

Andrew Schmidt has 100 bus. of O. A. C. No. 72 White Oats to sell for seed purposes at 85 cents per bushel. This grain took second prize at Ottawa and fourth at Guelph, and is a better quality than that for which the Seed Companies are charging $2 per bushel.

Probably A Referendum.

An apparently inspired article in the Mail and Empire announces that the Ontario Government will probably adopt the second of the requests made in the petition recently submitted for prohibition in Ontario, and submit the question to a referendum of the people. If favorable prohibition would then be enacted without further legislation. This is the line of action suggested some time ago as likely to be followed by the Legislature.

Shooting Affray at Paisley.

A report from Paisley states that a serious shooting affair took place at that village last Wednesday. It appears that during an altercation between Klondyke McArthur and Angus McKay, the former accused the latter of pro-Germanism. McKay flourished a revolver and fired point blank at his adversary, the bullet passing through McArthur's face. The latter, with the blood streaming from his eyes, seized the gunman and held him until the police arrived. The latter was taken to the court house and the gunman was released.

Mildmay Out Of N.H.L.

The Mildmay Star hockey club is out of the running for the senior series of the Northern Hockey League, having been defeated by Warton in the fourth round of the semi-finals. The first encounter with the Wartonians was on their own ice last Friday evening, the northerners walloping our fellows to the tune of 13 to 4. The Stars scored first but about that time big Dad Ashley struck his stride, and by his fast skating and clever stick handling he succeeded in sewing the visitors up. The first period resulted in five goals for Warton and 2 for Mildmay. Mildmay scored two more soon after the commencement of the second period, but they were unable to hold Ashley. The game was fast and clean throughout. Munro of London refereed the game. The return game here on Monday evening threw a bad scare into the Warton camp, the Stars putting it over them by a score of 12 to 6. It was the finest exhibition of hockey ever witnessed in Mildmay, both teams going at top speed all the way. Warton got the first two tallies and it looked like an easy thing for the visitors, but the Stars got their bearings, and they outplayed their opponents, scoring five to one, making the half time score 5 to 3. Harold Godfrey had his eye gashed in this period, and had to lay off for repairs, Warton dropping a man to even up. The visitors got the best of the deal, and before many minutes had elapsed they made the score 6 to 5. Matheson of Warton was injured by a heavy body check with Pletsch and was carried off the ice, and Godfrey came back into the game, replacing Kunkel. From that time it was all Mildmay's, the locals driving in six goals while their opponents secured only one, which was a long drive by Ashley. Zinn and Pletsch rained shots on the Warton goal, and only the good work of Nimmo in goal saved Warton from a worse defeat. As it was Mildmay was three goals down on the round which gives Warton the right to enter the finals. No other team has scored so many goals on Warton in years, and the visitors were quite relieved when the time was up, for another ten minutes play would almost certainly have meant a defeat. Diemel in goal played an excellent game, while the defence men, Berry and Pletsch, gave a splendid account of themselves. Harold Godfrey is a marvel for his size, and to his great work is due in a large measure the success of the Club this season. Charlie Wendt played a steady, consistent game, and uses head to great advantage. Dr. Zinn is the boss goal getter in the league, he and Pletsch having them all trimmed in shooting on goal. Clarence Kunkel, for a young player, has shown up wonderfully, and will make a speedy wingman.

A Tenderfoot's Wooing

By CLIVE PHILLIPPS WOLLEY

(Author of "Gold, Gold in Cariboo," Etc.)

CHAPTER IV.—Cont'd.

For a moment he was non-plussed, but the devil of island insolence had possession of him, and he knew that Kitty was watching him. Still on his knees he reached for a long stick from the fire, and bending forward, tossed it so the hot end of it fell upon the nearest Indian's bare foot.

Quick as thought the Chilcoteen turned, and for a moment the women drew their breath and feared for what was to come, but the camera clicked and the fire still divided the aggressor from his victim.

"Got you my beauty," said the unconscious artist, "with quite your most engaging smile on," and utterly careless of the dumb wrath in the man's eyes, he put his camera into its case and walked back, laughing, to his friends.

Mrs. Rolt and Jim, who had returned too late to interfere, did not join in his laughing, but they smiled.

crept nearer to the fire listening, until their back leaves were tipped with red light, swallowed him up and for a full minute the droning ceased. The silence which followed was more ominous even than that incessant muttering. The intent scrutiny of those watching eyes made itself felt. At last the chief spoke.

"The white dog dreams in his sleep," he said, "but his eyes are shut," and at once the figure returned and took its place in the muttering circle. Good hunter as Khelowna was, he made a mistake. His forest training should have taught him that the hunted feign often. If he had remembered that, Jim Combe might not have recognized in the fifth figure Davies' murderer, the Indian who had been wanted by police for that last three years. It was, Jim Combe knew what his gang was.

Just before the grey dawn came into the sky, he saw Khelowna hand something to his visitor, who put it into his shirt front and rising stole away.

One of the dogs, which had lain all night just outside the edge of the firelight, rose and attempted to follow him. It was his own dog probably, for though it covered at the chief's low growl, it took no other notice of his command. Stealthily one of the younger bucks, reached for a billet of wood, and hurled it with so sure an aim, that the beast rolled over screaming with pain.

With a well feigned start Jim Combe sat up in his blankets, but he was too late. Davies' murderer had vanished.

"Cutliss dog," said the Indian who had thrown the billet, and rising went after the beast, which was crawling away on its belly, dragging its hind leg after it and howling at every movement.

The dumb beast is not allowed to complain in an Indian camp, and as this one would not cease howling, the bigger brute clubbed it over the head with a great tent peg; clubbed it until it lay very still.

That is the Indian method of making a sleigh dog obedient and one reason perhaps why no Indian dog ever shows any sign of affection for its master. When the beast lay still the Indian passed a rope round its neck and tied it up to a tree. The dog was not dead yet, and as it might possibly be made to work again, he did not want to lose it, but it was too nearly dead to bite, so he took one of its hind legs and moved it sideways. The leg moved easily from the thigh in a ghastly unnatural fashion, and the Indian laughed.

"Leg broke," he said. His shot with the pine billet had been a good one. Under that grey blanket by the white man's fire a lover of dogs felt his flesh creep and his hands clench, but Jim Combe, having been trained in a hard school, had learned when to interfeere and when to bide his time. He could not help the poor beast now, and his first duty was to look after his boss' wife and that dear curly little head under the blue robe. After this the grey dawn began to come, a sad weird light, sifting through the pine trees, whilst the fires died down, and the tink chick-a-dees began to call among the boughs, warning their woodmates that those silent footed things who use the "fire-stick" were moving again in their lairs, and would soon be creeping up towards the high places whither the full-fed stags were already sauntering for a day's siesta after a long night's feed.

With the first hint of light, a busy stir began in the Indians' camp, even before the dawn had come, the Indian camp was completely dismantled, the pack-horses loaded with hides and meat, and everything ready for a start.

Then the lean-tos came down, and they too were dissolved into packs, and before the dawn had come, the Indian camp was completely dismantled, the pack-horses loaded with hides and meat, and everything ready for a start.

The Indians were apparently not going to stay to cook breakfast. It had been a successful hunt even for the Chilcoteens, and every living thing in camp, except the braves, carried packs. Of course the braves would neither pack any thing nor allow their saddle horses to be packed so long as there was a tottering old woman, a child, or a dog in camp, which could possibly be made to stagger under another pound.

When the procession had wound away into the woods, the toothless old princess leading, bending under a mountain of rigs, followed by bundles under whose bare legs tottered, and whose bare feet clattered, the man who had been watching still was in the forest. He had seen the man who had been wanted by police for that last three years. It was, Jim Combe knew what his gang was.

Just before the grey dawn came into the sky, he saw Khelowna hand something to his visitor, who put it into his shirt front and rising stole away.

Of Interest to Farmers

The Man Who Did It.

"He never will win out. He can't. If he should dig nuggets of gold out of his potato hills and raise a hundred bushels a year he never could pay for that farm. It's so steep he would break his leg if he should fall off."

So they said, and went away shaking their heads as if they had figured it all out. And yet, he did pay for the place and bought another fifty for the man adjoining him on the north. How? Why? It was a big mystery to the neighbors who had prophesied his utter failure when he first came on the farm. Somebody thought he might have had a windfall from some unknown source. "Wife may have had some money fall to her." But those who had lived near him and kept their eyes open knew this was not so. They could tell you just how it was all done.

They had watched and they had wondered, and they had become more and more ashamed of themselves the more they watched and the more they wondered. For what they never had done, this quiet man had accomplished as easily as falling off a log. Listen. This is the secret of that man's winning out:

He found out what his farm was good for and then made it do it. He sent a little package of the soil of his farm to the experiment station for analysis. The report came back: "Grow potatoes." Now, he never had made a specialty of potato growing; he was not particularly struck with the outlook; but the wise men had said potatoes were the thing, so potatoes it should be, and he went at it. He learned the potato business to the last syllable. He could tell people more about potatoes than they ever knew. If the message had come to him to raise wheat on his place, wheat it would have been. He would have mastered the wheat business. But how those hills did roll out potatoes! No need that the fields should turn out nuggets of gold. They did yield potatoes, and potatoes bring the gold. And gold was what he needed to pay for the farm.

The folks about him were buying automobiles and other expensive things. The young folks spoke to father about it once or twice that it would be fine if they had a machine too. "Let's pay for the farm first, boys," he insisted, and that was the end of it. They knew that the old wagon and harness would be the thing until the last payment was made on the mortgage.

Then, too, he held a steady man on his job. He did not make a great splurge this year and next year (drop down to two or three acres, just because the price was low the year before. Every year he had just about the same acreage, and the long run found him with a profit on the right side. When the neighbors said they were sick of raising potatoes to give away, he smiled and said, "Let's stick to it, boys! We'll come out all right if we do." And when they followed his lead, they found him to be a true prophet.

The finest part of it was—and don't you think it was this that helped him to win out?—that he forgot to sit up nights worrying. There were those who sometimes went around with their under lips hanging down, mourning because everything was going to the dogs. Might as well give up farming. The more gurgled they looked, the more he smiled. "No, boys, it never paid to find fault and give up. Sticking is what wins! Might be a great deal worse with us than it is. This is a pretty good old world. Let's make it a little bit better. We can do it!"

That kind of talk is catching, and before they knew it the folks round about were just as cheery as the new man. They were beginning to see that that sort of a thing gets a grip on success. They went over and made inquiries into the simple art of getting there. Now was the time when we might suppose that a man would turn on his neighbors and say things; but he did not. He only smiled the more and told them all about it the very best he could.

That is the way he did it.—Edgar L. Vincent in Canadian Countryman.

A Lesson in Economy.

Two years ago I visited a young farmer in the northern part of Ontario county; a cousin of mine, by the way. My first visit had been made nine or ten years previously, writes C. C. L., in Farm and Dairy. "You have a fine line of new implements," I remarked on our first inspection of the buildings.

"I had the most of them when you were here 10 years ago," was the astounding reply. "There is nothing new on them, but the paint. I calculate to keep the implements looking new. If you want to get comfortably wealthy on a farm, you must do it by economizing. The best way to economize in implements, I have found, is to spend a little more on paint."

Almost unbelievably, I examined all of that machinery. There was no checks in the wooden parts, no rust on the metal parts. Every place there had been paint when the implement left the factory, paint had been applied ever since as needed. At the time of my visit the spring plowing was over and the plows stored in the implement shed. I found them all carefully cleaned, the bright parts greased to prevent rust, and a dab of paint applied here and there as needed on the plow handles.

The average life of an implement on the farm I am told by implement dealers, is about five years. I should estimate that on a 100-acre farm similar to that run by my cousin, the investment in machinery runs about $800. At that rate the young fellow has already saved himself $800 on implement bills by using paint and grease judiciously. Perhaps this explains in some measure why he got rid of his mortgage so rapidly.

A House for the Farm Butchering.

Farmers' hog killing for home consumption is not usually done until quite cold weather. It is generally done out of doors, and it frequently happens that the day appointed is cold, raw, and snow-squally. In bad weather butchering out of doors is very disagreeable work, causing people to catch cold, making butchering day dreaded. I am of the opinion that on every farm where there is much butchering to be done, there should be a building on purpose for it, says a writer in Michigan Farmer. It should stand as near the water supply as possible, and if not built in a conspicuous place, may be a plain, cheap structure.

My father built such a one, in which we could scald, dress and cut up our hogs, and be warm and comfortable, even on the coldest day. At one end there was a chimney, a big fire-place, and crane, that would hold two big kettles for heating water. One end of a large scalding barrel was let down through the floor to the ground, in order to make it stand firmly, with the top leaning against the platform on which the hogs were dressed. There was a rope and pulleys attached to a rafter overhead for hanging up the hogs, that could be used for handling large hogs in the scalding barrel. The building was also used for cutting up the hogs, trying out the lard, as well as washing clothes, making soap, boiling potatoes, and pumpkins for hogs, and cider for apples butter and mince pies.

their forty-six quarters, furthermore, 35,536 fat, when churned forty-four pounds of butter. At 35 cents per pound, day-butter yield of this cow would be worth about $15.00.

While Ormsby Jane Segis Aaggie breeding is not remarkable in ultra-fashionable lines, she traces to some splendid individuals of the great "black and white" breed.

She weighs 1,500 pounds, has a straight back line and is well shaped enough to please the most exacting critic as to fulfilling the requirements of the ideal Holstein type. Naturally she is a great feeder, consuming large quantities with apparent relish. Her ration consisted of bran, ground oats, oil meal, hominy meal, cotton seed meal, salt, powdered charcoal, beets, ensilage and alfalfa.

There are now seven Holstein cows that have produced over 40 pounds of butter in seven-day tests and their average is 40.96.

Telling the Tale.

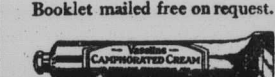

The old soldier was telling his thrilling adventures on the field of battle to a party of young fellows, one or two of whom were very sceptical as to his veracity. "Then," he said, "the surgeons took me up and laid me carefully in the ammunition wagon, and—" "Look here," interrupted one of the doubtful listeners, "you don't mean the ammunition wagon. You mean the ambulance wagon." But the old man shook his head. "No," he insisted; "I was so full of bullets that they decided I ought to go in the ammunition wagon."

It is a curious trait of the Indians, at any rate of the Far West, that they themselves seldom or never laugh, whilst the merest hint that you are laughing even in the mildest way at them, puts their backs up immediately. Like the vast plains and dumb forests through which they roam, they are by nature sombre, and a laugh is as much of an outrage to them as a thrush's song would be to the forest silence.

CHAPTER V.

If Anstruther had not been young and reckless, and the ladies accustomed for years to look upon all Indians as inoffensive, there would have been but little sleep in the white people's camp that night.

The Indians did not sleep. Through all that long night the hunters of the Chilcoteens sat round their fire, smoking and muttering among themselves, casting now and again evil glances toward the spot where the white people lay.

Constant contact with men, armed with weapons of precision, has taken the courage out of the grizzly; it has had the same effect upon a tribe which is naturally one of the boldest and fiercest in Western Canada, but the instincts of the savage remain, and anyone with half an eye would have recognized that dull glow in the forest gloom as a storm centre.

An hour or two passed by, the night deepened, the drone of growling voices went on and then a figure detached itself from the gloom and slipped without a sound into the firelit circle.

Just then Jim Combe stirred in his sleep, and throwing one arm restlessly from his blankets, turning over on his side towards the Indian's fire, muttering in his sleep.

As he did so, the figure glided back into the shadows. The bushes which seemed to have Kisheewew, for it was the chief's son, struggled to his feet. "Want more do you?" drawled the English voice, now quiet and steady, and again the fellow went down and Anstruther stood over him heady to repeat the dose as often as the man should require it.

But a woman's voice cried to him. "The rifle, Frank; the rifle," and he was only just in time to put his foot upon it before the figure at his feet had got possession of it.

At that moment a man who had come running back from tending his horses stepped, white-lipped and stern, in front of Kitty Clifford, so that she saw neither Kineeshaw nor the other Indians who had returned at the sound of the fighting, but she heard a rifle shot ring out, and if she could have seen from where she stood, she might have seen Jim square his shoulders and put his head back like a man who prepares to take a shock. But neither Anstruther nor Jim fell. Khelowna, though he had fired point blank into the group, had not dared as much as that yet. It was only the wretched dog which, with a strange instinct, had crawled for preservation to Mrs. Rolt, that turned over under her very feet, and stretched itself in death. The blood of it splashed her skirt.

Then Jim jumped forward. "Drop them guns, you dogs," he roared. "Anstruther, cover those men and stand still. If they stir, shoot. Now Khelowna, drop that gun, or—" and his rifle said the rest.

Presentation and Address.

A number of the friends and neighbors residing east of Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Dosman assembled at their home in Culross one evening recently, prior to their removal to Mildmay, and presented them with some cut glass and silverware and the following address, which was read by Mrs. L. Kieffer. Mr. Dosman replied in well-chosen words, thanking his friends for the expressions of their good will. The guests spent a very enjoyable evening.

Dear Friends—
It is with sentiments of sincere friendship and respect that we, your neighbors and friends, are assembled here this evening to give expression to our deep regret at your departure from our midst. Indeed, the quality of true and neighborly love and friendship which you have ever displayed is the most eminent degree during your happy and blessed career in this world.

cheerfully assistance. It is these characteristics that endear gentlemen and ladies to their fellow men, and these you have shown in many and tangential ways—hence our respect and friendship.

You have worked honestly and dealt honorably during all these years, and you have reaped the well earned reward of a good share of temporal blessings, so that you can now retire, after your years of labor and industry to enjoy the years of the sunset of life in ease and comfort which we sincerely hope will be your lot for many more years. We also wish to congratulate you on leaving a son to fill your place, who is worthy of his inheritance as well as on the other members of your family whom you have raised to be good and useful citizens. This is no doubt the greatest satisfaction that you now enjoy for all your cares and your kind parental solicitude. While we deeply regret your departure there is never-the-less a certain amount of joy mingled with our regret, because we know that you are going to enjoy the remaining years of your lives in greater comfort than you could with the responsibilities of your past years upon you. We wish therefore to assure you that you are bearing with you our sincere good wishes for many comfortable and happy years of retired life and that we will ever be pleased and happy to meet you and greet you on your visits to our neighborhood. As a slight token of our esteem for you and of our true and lasting friendships, we will ask you to accept this cut glass and silverware which we trust will remind you of the years spent with us and that it may serve to bring back to your memories many fond recollections of us,
(Sgd) Your sincere friends.

Malicious Stories.

Mr. H. Filsinger visited his eldest daughter, Mrs. L. G. Wildfang of Moorfield, and his youngest daughter, Mrs. Mrs. Angus G. Munn, of Chesley last week. On the way home, Mr. Filsinger spent the week over in Harrison visiting at the home of our former townsmen, Mr. Will Hardy. While away, some malignant stories have been circulated regarding a supposed meeting held by pro-Germans at which Mr. Filsinger was represented as attending. As it is quite impossible to be in two places at once, and Mr. Filsinger was enjoying himself with the Hardys, it is absurd to say he was hatching plots here. Mr. Filsinger is a Canadian citizen, a Christian, and a gentleman, and feels justly indignant that anyone would attribute him with disloyal motives. No stone will be left unturned to trace the story to the originator, who will be properly dealt with.—Teaswater News.

Mother And Babe Dead.

A sad event occurred in Brant on Sunday morning last, when Mrs. Andrew Waechter, a young and highly esteemed resident of the township, passed suddenly away from heart failure following a week's illness of the grippe. Further paths were lent to the event by the fact that her husband was lying helpless in bed at the time with two broken ribs sustained by being thrown out of his sleigh in Walkerton about a week previous. Two days after his mother's death, their two months' old son succumbed to convulsions and was laid at rest with its parent in the casket. The sight of the deceased infant reclining on the arm of its dead mother in the coffin was one of the saddest sights ever witnessed in Brant. Born in Carlsruhe nearly forty years ago, the deceased, whose maiden name was Elizabeth Montag, was the fourth youngest daughter of the late Henry Montag. She was married in Formosa about fifteen years ago to Mr. Andrew Waechter of Brant, who survives her with three sons and two daughters. She also leaves an aged mother in Walkerton and three brothers and four sisters. The funeral which took place to the Walkerton R. C. Church and cemetery on Wednesday morning last, was largely attended. Rev. Fr. Montag of Deemerton, cousin of the deceased conducted the ceremony.—Herald-Times.

Sheriff Puts One Over.

Sheriff Jermyn is a wily scout and occasionally pulls off something that makes the people sit up and stare. Warton, where he lives, has ike Walkerton, a large number of retired farmers, who having given up growing crops, have settled down in town to grow old. One of these had two husky sons which the Sheriff thought should be in khaki, but on approaching the father, was smartly informed that these were needed to run the farm. As a come back, however, the Sheriff suggested that the father take the place of one of the lads and that he himself would take the place of gathering in the crop. The old agriculturist was game, and went out with the Sheriff and got his two sons to enlist for the King. A pair of 6 foot stalwarts are now training to meet the foe at Flanders, and Sheriff Jermyn, who was in Walkerton last week, feels prouder of this modest little recruiting feat than anything he has yet pulled off against the Kaiser.—Times.

More Smoking Less Drinking.

Since license fee for selling cigarettes in Walkerton has been reduced from $50 to $20 a year, licenses for the sale of cigarettes have been taken out by A.
McCartney of the Pool Room, A. Cunio, barber. Formerly these smokers were sold only by the Walkerton hotelmen, who are privileged under the Liquor License Act to sell the nicotine without which has increased the antipathy

the aversion against tobacco, and more smokers are less drinking threat-

Justice (?)

A Toronto landlord sued a tenant for $25 rent, which the latter claimed he had paid. When the case was heard in court the tenant appeared without a lawyer, probably not only believing in the justice of his cause, but reasoning that the fee a lawyer would demand would exceed the amount at issue. He lost his case, but the judge told him that he would certainly have won, if he had retained counsel.

Is the popular idea that courts are tempered with justice to be thus rudely shattered? Is a man to get justice only when he can invest in a high class of legal talent? Are our judges simply mere arbitrators to pass on the merits of a debate between lawyers, just as an umpire in a school or church society does?

When members of a debating society grapple with such a question as: "Resolved that General Grant was a greater military leader than Napoleon," and the judge decides in favour of the negative, we have never believed that the decision settled for once and all the point in dispute, but that the winning speakers were most skilled in the use of oratoric weapons than their opponents.

Now, with the decision of the Toronto judge before us, it appears that when John Smith beats Tom Jones in a legal action, the merits of the case do not figure, but simply that Smith had a better lawyer than Jones was able to retain.

Timely Advice To Potato Growers.

Late Blight and Potato Rot caused considerable damage last season to the potato crop particularly throughout the Eastern section of the continent of America. In many instances, the loss amounted to 25% of the total crop, and more in certain localities. In consequence, farmers were induced to part with their potatoes more readily this winter owing to the high prices paid for this commodity for domestic use. This, it is probable, will result in the scarcity of superior seed, since the general practice is for farmers to use for that purpose the remainder of their potatoes in storage towards spring. Seeing that the crop was much diseased at the commencement of the season and considerably affected by storage rots, and with all or most marketable potatoes sold for the table use, the quality on hand for seed purposes will be very inferior, when the time for planting comes.

We would, therefore, urge farmers to immediately reserve for seed purposes the quantity, and a little more to make allowance for further losses through rot, required for seed purposes. These should be hand-selected tubers, sound, and free from any sign of rot or decay,
of uniform size and pure in variety.
Tubers slightly larger than a hen's egg are most economic for seed purposes.
They should be kept until planting time in a dark, well-ventilated and cool place of storage, spread out in a layer not more than three potatoes deep.

Simple Facts About Cocoa.

Cocoa which is really a corruption of the word "cacao," has become a permanent food supply. Not every one knows that the cocoa of powdery familiar form is a residue from the manufacture of chocolate. Both cocoa and chocolate are taken from the bean or seed found in a pod in a most odd-shaped gourd-like pod which grows on the bark and trunk of the cocoa tree. These huge pods are cut from the bark and the bean taken out. The beans are then treated to various processes of sweating and drying and roasting, and a final process of grinding. This ground material is full of oil. When this ground material is allowed to solidify at a proper temperature it forms the bitter chocolate of commerce which we generally use for icings and candy.

But in making cocoa a great deal of the oil is separated from the ground portion, and we thus have a dry substance or powder which we call cocoa. Thus cocoa is far less rich in fat than chocolate, although it has the familiar chocolate flavor. It contains a property similar to the stimulating theobromine of tea and coffee, but its nutritive value is very high—an average bean containing 49 per cent. of oil, 18 per cent. of protein, 10 per cent. of starch and other carbohydrates.

In Various Forms.

In 1910 more than 115,000,000 pounds of cocoa beans were used in the United States. Besides the familiar powdered cocoa, there is the so-called "cocoa nibs," which is merely the cracked cocoa bean. This is often recommended, especially for children because it gives them the lemon juice, and then add one egg white beaten stiff.

Fig Pudding—Run three ounces of beef suet and one-half pound figs separately three times through meat chopper and work thoroughly with the hands afterward. Have ready two and one-third cups stale breadcrumbs which have been soaked in one-half cup with milk thirty minutes, two well-beaten eggs, one cup sugar and three-fourths teaspoon salt. Combine mixture. Butter individual molds, garnish bottom of each with four strips of figs radiating from center. Fill molds two-thirds full, place on trivet in kettle containing boiling water and let steam one and one-half hours. Water should reach two-thirds of way up side of molds. If steamed in one large mold time required is three hours.

Fig Paste—Chop 1 pound figs coarsely and reduce to a pulp by boiling in 1 pint of water. When soft pass the whole through a fine sieve; add to it 3 pounds powdered sugar; mix well and evaporate the whole over boiling water until the paste becomes quite stiff. While evaporating process is going on make a mold that will hold it by removing the nails from the sides of a wooden box, tying the parts minus the bottom together with string. Stand this on the marble slab or dish and pour the warm fig mass into it, letting it remain until cold; then remove the strings and open the frame, leaving the paste in square mass. Now with a knife, cut the mass into squares and roll them in sugar.

The end of the rib roast can be sawed off and corned. If boiled with cabbage it will make a good lunch dish.

The better way is to dissolve the sugar, cocoa and water together and allow this to boil to a syrup, then add the milk and bring to a scald, but do not boil.

A Healthy Winter Beverage.

All cocoa is much improved by being beaten with an egg-beater for several minutes before serving; also most varieties are improved by the addition of a pinch of salt and a few drops of vanilla extract before serving. As a winter beverage, cocoa takes foremost place. The child comes home hungry from school, the grown person chilled from an evening outdoors, the diet of a growing child will all be improved by the use of good cocoa, properly made. If the digestion is rather weak or if the child is under five years of age, it would be better to use the drink of nibs or shells which contain less oil.

A by-product of cocoa, is cocoa butter, which is the solid fat extracted from the cocoa bean. This butter is used extensively in making confectionery like chocolate creams—or for toilet preparations—wherever a pure vegetable oil is desirable.

Tested Recipes.

Ham, Country Style—Place one pound slice of ham, cut one-third-inch thick, in baking pan. Cover with milk—about two-cupfuls. Bake slowly, basting frequently and turning once or twice until ham is tender, has absorbed most of the milk and is brown on top. This will take about one-half hour.

Spanish Steak—Select piece of round of sirloin steak, cut about two inches thick, and brown in little dripping or bacon fat in frying pan. Add one can tomatoes, two sliced or chopped onions, two green or red peppers chopped small (with seeds and white fibers removed). Cover closely and let cook two hours. Season with pepper and salt and serve. Do not add water.

Baked Cabbage—Trim medium-sized head of cabbage, cut in two and put on to cook in cold water. After fifteen minutes' boiling, drain off water and cook for twenty minutes. Drain dry, chop fine, season with salt, pepper and butter and put in buttered baking dish. Have ready two beaten eggs, mixed with four tablespoons cream. Pour over cabbage and set in dish in oven to cook for twenty minutes, or until well browned over the top.

Feamy Sauce—Beat yolk of one egg until thick and lemon-colored and add three-fourths cup powdered sugar gradually, beating constantly. Mix one-fourth cup powdered sugar with one teaspoon corn starch and one-eighth teaspoon salt and pour on gradually one-half cup scalded milk. Cook in double boiler three minutes, constantly until mixture thickens and occasionally afterward, add nutmeg, vanilla, grated rind of one lemon juice, and then add one egg white beaten stiff.

THE SUNDAY LESSON

INTERNATIONAL LESSON, MARCH 12.

Heroes and Martyrs of Faith—Heb. 11. 1 to 12. 2. Golden Text: Heb. 12. 1, 2.

Verse 1. Assurance—Of various renderings of this somewhat doubtful word—which occurs in Heb. 1. 3 as "substance"—the best seems to be suggested by a legal use found in papiri. The docket of papers in a public office, bearing on the possession of land, was called by this word, which answered etymologically to the Latin substantia: the papers "substantiated" a claim. Faith accordingly is the "title-deeds" of our promised possession. Throughout this chapter we find it describing the spiritual faculty which enables its possessor to treat the unseen and still future good as a present reality, when guaranteed by God's promise. This is quite distinct from Paul's use of "faith" as trust, or James's as creed. Conviction—"Test" (margin). The Greek is elenchos, which became a technical term for the method of Socrates, who exposed sham knowledge of cross-examination. Faith is accordingly the faculty which can sift things unseen, and select those which are real. The chapter is to show how the men and women of the canonized past—immensely different in character and spiritual achievement—exhibited this faculty in their lives.

2. 1. Witnesses—Not the word is attached closely to the keyword of the last chapter, but great names there have received their names from inspiration that they stand on the roll of examples to mankind. In their turn they witness of the power of that faculty by which they did their deeds. Lay aside—The figure of the footrace in this verse is a link with Paul, whose perpetual use of it is characteristic of his lively sympathy with everything that was healthy in other people. The weight is hardly superfluous fat, of which a modern athlete would think; it is rather clothing, which a Greek gymnast (as the word itself implies) put away altogether. The sin is similarly pictured as a graceful robe which "closely clings to us" (margin). Patience—Rather, endurance, which should be substituted everywhere except in places like James 5. 7, 8, where a word describing "long-mindedness" occurs. It is important to keep the close connection with endured in verse 2.

2. 3. Author and perfecter—For the faith is "begun, continued, and ended" in him whose earthly life was the supreme example of it, and his living Spirit the one power that can produce it in us. Hence the human name Jesus, for we are to realize the Unseen as he did in the days of his flesh. The lesson of Calvary here is that the joy of our Lord, in the present reality of redeemed humanity, a new heaven, and a new earth, empowered him to endure the most appalling torture man's fiendishness ever devised, and to treat as nothing the scorn and contempt with which men regarded the sufferer. Every example of faith recounted in the last chapter is only a broken light of him. Note that the supreme agony of the cross was the "gainsaying of sinners against themselves" so margin, beyond all question the right reading—the knowledge that men for whom he died would not let him same them. So if he despised shame it was not through proud indifference to men's thoughts of him. It was for their sakes that he cared, not for his own.

BURDEN OF THE WAR.

Britain Can Finance a Debt of Twenty-five Billion Dollars.

Even if Britain should end the war with a debt of £5,000,000,000 (approximately $25,000,000,000) the burden would not be crushing according to Lord Inchcape, the English financier and statesman.

Such a load, said his lordship at a National Provincial Bank of England stockholders' meeting over which he presided recently, would mean an annual charge of only $300,000,000 (about $1,500,000,000) reckoning 5 per cent. interest with a 1 per cent. sinking fund.

To this his lordship added an estimated £100,000,000 ($500,000,000) annually in pensions. Before the war, he remarked the country's annual expenditures were £200,000,000 ($1,000,000,000) making the total:

Interest and sinking fund	£300,000,000
Estimated pensions	100,000,000
Fixed charges on pre-war basis	200,000,000
	£600,000,000

Present English taxation, continued Lord Inchcape, is bringing in nearly £400,000,000 ($2,000,000,000) annually. He explained that this would mean another £200,000,000 (1,000,000,000) would have to be provided every year and expressed the opinion that this could be done either by "additional taxes or by a reduction in extravagant expenditures not only private but public."

His Lordship appeared to think a $25,000,000,000 debt a possibility but about the maximum.

Tired of It.

The men about whom London Answers tells the following story were the roughest, rawest lot of recruits the sergeant had ever had to tackle. He worked hard at them for three hours, and at last thought they were getting into some sort of shape. He decided to test them.

"Right turn!" he barked. Then before they had got fairly under way he gave the order: "Left turn!" One burly yokel slowly left the ranks and mad off toward the barracks room.

"Here, you!" yelled the sergeant angrily. "Where are you off to?" "Ah've had enough," replied the recruit in disgusted tones. "Tha doesn't know tha own mind for two minutes more!"

"What a distinguished-looking man your father is. His white hair gives off a glow like a star." "Tha's a lie," said the Dissipated Son—"Yes, and he'd thank me for it."

word recurs in Heb. 11. 25.

38. No worthy—For the subconsciousness of worthiness which prompts to be cruellest to men and above its own standard.

39. Witness borne—The verse 2, repeated at the end of the chapter, is now proved. —For the best is always only imperfect religion in the golden age in the past.

40. The thought is fully blest till we are together in spirit of Paul's picture of the destiny of Rom. 8. "Thou wouldst be alone"—Matthew Arnold's his great father—has the same application.

The Fashions

FUR STILL IN EVIDENCE.

For taffeta and the printed silks which are now so high in Fashion's favor, for the crisp organdies and daintily figured voiles and crepes, there is no more practical or effective trimming than cording, smocking or shirring.

Many of our dance frocks for summer will be of organdy or net; an unusually pretty imported frock of net, shown recently in one of our exclusive shops, made with an extremely full skirt, gathered at the waist, equally wide top and bottom; the skirt was hung over a crinoline hip stiffening, and the entire dress was trimmed effectively with quaint, pleated ruffles. Another effective summer evening gown displayed at the same time was of white Georgette crepe beaded with opaque white beads. The bodice was cut in bolero effect, and the skirt was a charming contrast to the full skirt of the net dress, being pleated to fall straight and narrow-looking from waist to ankles. A narrow beaded girdle encircled the waist and caught up a straight panel in the back, to carry out the bolero effect.

Fur Trimmed Costumes.

The velvet suit, combined with faille or broadcloth, is a general favorite, and fur is still its trimming. The notion of combining cloth and silk or velvet is a practical and effective one; often, as in our illustration, the lower section of skirt is of broadcloth. This show a bit of wear near the end of the season, and such an addition will freshen it and make it serve the season out.

The second suit illustrated is fashioned of dark blue gabardine. It is a simple, youthful model which could easily be made at home. The high collar with turned-back revers, which may also be closed if preferred, is a new touch which is becoming and smart.

One of the most effective suits is of dark blue velvet, with a knee-deep flounce, and chin collar, and muff cuffs of moleskin. A broadcloth or faille costume with flounce, cuffs and collar of velvet would also be effective and much less expensive. These patterns may be obtained from your local McCall Dealer or from The McCall Company, Dept. W., 70 Bond St., Toronto, Ont.

LIVE STOCK MARKETS TORONTO.

Receipts of live stock at the Union Stock Yards since Saturday morning were 144 carloads, comprising 2087 cattle, 467 hogs, 147 sheep and lambs, 115 calves and 916 horses. The bulk of the horses were in transit to France.

Butchers Cattle—After deducting the feeders and milkers there would be about 1000 offered as fat. The quality of these was much improved over last Monday week that is, there were good, to choice lots and smaller number of the common and medium classes. Trade was good and steady all afternoon with prices 10c higher, especially for good quality cattle. Straight loads of choice cattle sold at $7.75, $7.80 and $7.85. A choice lot of five steers, 1450 lbs. each, sold at $10.40.

There were not enough hogs to make a market, not more than 1000 being offered.

A Slam That Told.

While at a recruiting meeting in Paisley on Wednesday of last week, Mr. John Rowland was rather nettled at the verbiage of the seven preachers who occupied the platform and who took up the time vociferating almost to the exclusion of the two noted recruiting speakers who had been brought all the way from London and Sarnia to address the meeting. Bubbling over with enthusiasm for the cause and chagrin at the verbosity of the sermonizers, Mr. Rowland hit them a slam when he said that if they were as tenacious at fighting as they were at talking they would be marvels on the firing line. So many preachers had volunteered to go as Chaplains to the Bruce Battalion, that he thought with Sam Hughes that the Clerics should get together and form a regiment of their own. Whatever respect he might have for clerical robes, Mr. Rowland said at present he had greater admiration for khaki clothes, and suggested that the preachers take the hint and get into them. This slam had a telling effect, for next day one of the preachers enlisted as a private at Port Elgin, and it is reported some of the others may follow.—Times.
