A little book entitled the "Private Life of King Victor Emmanuel" is having a great ale in Haby. It is written by a man of ability, who hides himself under the pseudonym of Fauto. He seems to have been any a fenny story about him.

Victor Emmanuel was accustomed to rise at four o'clock a.m., and his life was as regular as a clock. He had fixed hours for receptions, walking, private audiences, for theatres, which he often visited, though he did not like music, and for reading, which he often did not like music, and for reading, which and horses were his favourites. He dimed at midnight dime and horses were his favourites. He dimed at midnight dime and horses were his favourites. He dimed at midnight dime and horses were his favourites. He dimed at midnight before going to bed, and it was often his only meal. He wore the same clothes winter and summer. When he was seen with an overcoat on, he was sick. He detested a dress coat, and looked upon it as a democratic invention to confound master and servants in the same garb. He also disliked new hats, and only on the left hand. He was never seen with an umbrella, and rode in an open carriage, whether it snowed or rained. He was accustomed to go to the theatres in a loose coat, and preferred the popular theatres, where he could smoke, for he was only comfortable when with a cigar in his mouth.

The evening, when he e t red his private box, he was told that the Empress of Russia was in the theatre. What can I do?' said the king; 'I am not dressed, and I cannot go back to the place; but I must visit the empress." All at once an idea struck him. He pulled off his sack coat and put on the dress coat of the Marquis de Baginsso, who was in the baxe. He had been the his himself who had been the his himself who was in the same time, 'I think may be himself and he had been the his himself who was in the same time, 'I think may be himself and he had been the his himself who had been the his himself who had he had been the himself who had he had been the himself who had he had b

"She's got to give me some candy, then," rejoined his young interlocutor. "I can't get any candy here—any American candy. American candy's the best candy.

"And are American little boys the best little boys!" asked Winterbourne.
"I don't know. I'm an American boy," said the child.
"I see you are one of the best!" laughed Winterbourne.

"I see you are one of the best!" laughed Winterbourne.

"Are you an American man?" pursued this vivacious infant. And then, on Winterbourne's affirmative reply—"American men are the best," he declared.

His companion thanked him for the compliment; and the child, whor had now got astride of his alpenatock, stood looking about him, while he attacked a second lump of sugar. Winterbourne wondered if he himself had been like this in his infancy, for he had been brought to Europe about this age.

"Here comes my sister!" cried-the child, in a moment. "She's an American girl." Winterbourne looked along the path and saw a beautiful young lady advancing. "American girls are the best girls," he said cheerfully, to his young companion.

"My sister ain't the best!" the child declared. "She's always blowing at me."

"I imagine that is your fault, not her's," said Winterbourne. The young lady mean-while had drawn near. She was dressed in white muslin, with a hundred frills and flounces, and knots of pale-coloured ribbon. She was bare-headed; but she balanced in her hand a large parasol, with a deep border of embroidery, and she was strikingly, admirably pretty. "How pretty they are!" thought Winterbourne, straightening himself in his seat, as if he were prepared to rise.

"That's the way they come down," said Winterbourne.

"He's an American man!" cried Randolph, in his little hard voice.

The young lady gave no heed to this announcement, but looked straight at her brother. "Well, I guess you had better be quiet," she simply observed.

It seemed to Winterbourne that he had been in a manner presented. He got up and stepped slowly towards the young girl, throwing away his cigarette. "This little boy and I have made acquaintance," he said, with great civility. In Geneva, as he land been perfectly aware, a young man was not at liberty to speak to a young unmarried I aly except under certain rarely-occurring conditions could be better that these?—a pretty American girl coming and standing in front of you in a garden. This pretty American girl, however, on hearing Winterbourne's observation, simply glanced at him: she then turned her head and hooked over the parapet, at the lake and the opposite mountains. He wondered whether he had gone too far: but he decided that he must advance farther, rather than retreat. While he was thinking of something else to say, the young lady turned to the lit be by again. "I should like to know where you got that pole, 'she said.

"I should like to know there you got that pole, 'she said.
"I hought it!" responded Randolph.
"You don't mean to say you're going to take it to Italy."
"Yes, I am going to take it to Italy!" the child declared.
The young glanced over the front of her dress, and smoothed out a knot or two of ribbon. Then she rested her eyes upon the prospect again. "Well, I guess you had better leave it somewhere, 'she said, after a moment.

ARREST OF THE SUSPECTED MURDERER.

KINGSTON, July 27.—Costofrolaz, the man accused of murdering Matheron, the silk pedler, arrived here to-day from the east on the steamer Passport, and was arrested by two Montreal detectives. He had in his possession a gold watch and trunks containing silks and other goods said to have belonged to the murdered man. He will be taken to Montreal to-night.

There is no doubt that Matheron came to his death by having been beaten on the skull with an axe. He had six wounds, four of which were done with the sharp edge and two with the head of the instrument. Any one of the wounds would have been enough to have killed the poor victim. Besides the articles mentioned as having been found on the prisoner was a locket, containing a photograph of the murdered man on one side and that of Madam Costa on the other. It had the appearance of having been violently wrenched from the chain.

Regarding the late spoiling of cheese in New York State the Utica Observer has this to say:—"The case of the Westmoreland poisoning is still fresh in the minds of the people. The cows that were poisoned and died were left unburried in the pasture where the others run. The man who owned them carried his milk to the factory. For some time back the cheese made had not been so good, and an investigation proved that the milk doing the damage was that which was brought by the man who had his cows poisoned. It was not the poison which caused it, but it was caused by the cows inhaling the impure air arising from the dead cows. He was ordered to keep his milk out of the factory, and after this was done no difficulty was experienced in manufacturing good cheese.

Capron, Illinois, July 25.—Last May Geo. W. Burleigh, a man of fine education, came here from Ohio ostensibly to start a tonsorial establishment. He was often in depressed spirits. On Sunday he published a card announcing that he would lecture on Tuesday evening, and at the close shoot himself through the head. The price of admission was to be a dollar and the proceeds were to be used for his funeral expenses, and to buy scientific books for the town library. At the appointed time the hall was crowded. Burleigh delivered an infidel lecture of wonderful power, and at the end, despite the efforts of friends to prevent it, shot himself through the head. The brain was literally torn to pieces.

The Dufferin Testimonial.

Mr. J. P. MacMillan of Guelph, known to many in this neighborhood as a genial, warm-hearted and intelligent gentleman, and an active member of the County Council of Wellington, has originated and carried forward to almost completion the very patriotic and timely idea of presenting Lord and Lady Dufferin, at Quebec, before their departure from Canada, with a joint address from the municipal corporations of Ontario. The intention, we believe, is to have an excursion to the ancient capital, meet their excellencies, and present them with one of the great est proofs they have yet received of the loyalty and affection of the people of Canada to the British Crown and to themselves as representatives of Her They, stylish, and cheap, at Bean Rortan meeting of town Council on Monday night.

[FROM OUR REGULAR CORRESPONDENT.]

The authoritative inklings connected with the great patchwork Congress at Berlin have disappointed public anticipation. Opinion had to the last counted upon the firmness of Austria and England, but these powers have either forgotten their cuaning, or have been afraid of Russia, for the latter has never won such diplomatic trumphs at the expense of Europe as now. There is no reason why General Ignatieff should remain imprisoned on his private estates; more than the kernel of his San Stefano treaty has been upheld. He would be fully justified in setting out on a second opthalmic tour. The Congress has shut the windows on Russia, but left the doors of the house wide open for her. By its concessions the Congress has untied with one hand what it had bound with the other. The Russians having succeeded in including Varna and Sophia in their Bulgaria, at any future time they can shut up the Turkish troops in the defiles of the Bulkans. The Congress has converted Balgaria no a Russian fortrees, and has apparently overlooked the Turks, who are ominously unspeakable, and may bring down the latest house of cards built by diplomacy. Very deep sympathy is felt for the royal family of Spain; the youthfulness of the couple, even were their heads uncrowned, cries for pity. The loss would be greater politically for France, snly there is no reason that the young widower should not later marry his deceased wice's sister—now in her teens. The Roppel, Victor Hugo's paper, observes, the lesson of the girl-queen's death is a significant hint for his Majesty to "abdicate," as the attempt on Emperor William's life means, "reign properly.

M. Gambetta is the impersonation of the successful third Republic; he has further the secret of saying the right thing at the right time, of expressing as an axiom the impressions that all feel. Thus the opposition journals attack him for his splendid speech at the Hoche, banquet, when he held up the life of that dutting when he held up the life of that dutting when he held up the life of that dutting discontent above his country, and did not the less efficaciously defend the Revolution even after its directors had treated him with ingratitude. He never hesitated to obey the Constitution, he saved the Revolution, though his loyal services were on the point of being recompensed by the scaffold. Game here are so many superior officers who deny the Republic the right to be administered and defended by Repub icans.

The question of free-trade is rather suspended than defeated, at present in France, it will vigorously revive, with the resuscitation of business, consequent on the restablishment of European peace, and the Protectionist having no longer mills working half-time, will be unable to find a griovance in foreign importations. The war of tariffs between Italy and France, to commence in a few days, will demonstrate the folly of customs' prohibitions. The question of free-trade is complicated; some of the most sturdy Republicans are opposed to sommercial treatices of all kinds, and the advanced section of that party, led by the dornianter, Louis Blanc, hold that it is more important to establish free trade in the integer of the country, that is, to abolish the arrier dues of cities, than those against foreigners. Hence, why the cabinet is irresone, and why Gambetta meets with only a neasured support. It would, however, be roneous to conclude the third Republic is rotectionist: the first was, in the sense where the country, that is, to abolish the arrier dues of cities, than those against foreigners. Hence, why the cabinet is irresone, and why Gambetta meets with only a neasured support. It would, however, be roneous to conclude the third Republic is rotectionist: the first was, in the sense with a sense soil, ground, and made into bread; may be a sense of the Barnose conclude the third Republic is rotectionist: the first was, in the sense with the sense of the Barnose of the Empire, and was never formally submitted to the nation. The stand-up fight, between Greek and Greek, will come off in November next.

Is the Exhibition engendering too many fetes—the period is of the loujours prefaix character. The preparations for the National holiday form an important political fact; never was such a popular rejoicing equalled in France, or elsewhere; it is the simple outburst of national satisfaction; of a people being for the first time since 1789, the arbitor of its own destiny. It is a variety of carnival. Not only have political sins of commission and omission been largely pardoned, but in barracks and colleges all bad marks have been sponged out. The Exhibition—for Sunday only—charges tive, instead of twenty sous, for admission; the statue of the Republic by Clessinger, will be manufacture flags of all nations. It is estimated that at least one million of visitors are within our walls. The heat is terrible, so much so that the Shah complains of it, and keeps his rooms—till late in the evening.

The Champ de Mars building proper, is deserted for the annexes, out-of-the-way sections that believed they would be lost to sight. If refreshment stalls are few and far between, the free fountains are as numerous as the seats, and if people do not drink water, they bath their hands, and the both their hands, and drink water, they bath their hands, and drink water, they bath their hands, and drink water, they are within our walls. The heat is terrible, so much so that the Shah complains of it, and keeps his rooms—fill late in the evening.

The Champ de Mars building proper, is deserted for the annexes, out-of-the-way sections that believed they weuld be lost to sight. If refreshment stalls are few and far between, the free fountains are as numerous as the seats, and if people do not drink water, they bath their hands, and wet their heads—hoys lending a servictic for two sous to dry the weary and heavy laden. I noticed one distinguished foreigner take a piece of sponge out of an india-rubber bag wet it at the fountain, pass it over his face and hands, replace it in the bag, look at the head—weight 8 tons—destined for the New York statue of "Liberty," and then regale himself with a sous eigar. Naturally, the pavilion devoted to the collection of mineral waters is a favourite; there are models or paintings also of bathing-villages, as refreshing to the eye as a picture of Christmas day, with snow talling, and a robin-redbreast pecking at the pane for crumbs. Within the last forty years mineral water doctors, who are so complaisant that under the genericiname of anemia, they can order the sufforer' to any spring he or she may reduce the sufforer' to any spring he or she reduced the sufforer' to any spring he or she reduced the sufforer' to any spring he or she reduced the sufforer' to any spring he or she reduced the sufforer' to any spring he or she reduced the sufforer' to any spring he or she reduced the sufforer' to any spring he or she reduced the sufforer' to any spring he or she reduced the sufforer' to any spring he or she reduced the sufforer' to any spring he or she reduced the sufforer' to any spring he or she reduced the sufforer's to any spring he or she reduced the sufforer's to any spring he or she reduced the sufforer's to any spring he or she reduced the sufformation of the sufforer's to any spring he or she reduced the sufformation of the sufformation of the sufformation of the sufformation of the suff bitional public," that despite the heat, it crowds to the leading theatres. To enjoy it er persentations? Not a bit of it, but to see the artistes—whose names are household words—just as it goes to the new opers, not to listen to bad singers, but to view the grand staircase, which will be free, by the way, to the public, every Sunday, like the Luvre. With this pronounced taste for matters theatrical, let the visitor not neglect a promenade in the long parallelogram, on the first entrance on the left of the Alley des Nations; here are reduced models and drawings of the chief operatic scenery from 1869, down to the present. There are also the original sketches or maguettes of the scenery by the most celebrated artists; for a scene painter must not be confounded with a sign painter. This chronological panorams of opera history, has also a series of models of continues, etc.; of Greek stages, as well as those of a more modern date. The original model of the ship in the opera of a L'Africaine is there.

Printers have their composing machines at the Exhibition; so have reporters their stenographic apparatus. An Italian, Michela, exhibits, box 18 inches high by 30 wide; it its furnished with a kind of piano-board, on tuching a key a word is registered, as in the click of a Morse telegraph machine. It can be thumped as rapidly as one can the republican journal faithfully, and all its af lattis included.

Ladies f.tigued by admiring the di plays of French silks and satins and of hata—if such could ever happen—will find relief by studying the collection of cofifures, of modes of dressing the hair by the first arbites capillaires of Paris. One case has a picture of Eve, admiring her hair, apparently before her fatal visit to the appletree; there are wigs so fine as to be almost "invisible" that would deceive even the elect; but a wig, it is said, only deceives the wearer, and those in fine lace and a little hair, may be excused the pious fraud. There is a virine that young men upon town cannot pass over, namely, the head dresses of all the charming actresses, as, worn in their popular characters; the actress herself is unfortunately absent, but her picture is there, with a few autographic lines, thanking the lady who made them, if not beautiful for ever, at least painted the hily successfully for some hours. A filly of another kind paid a visit here; the lady of the Chinese Ambassaot to the English Court. Cinderella did not drop a slipper, but this did not prevent the aimond-eyed princess from gratefully accepting bouquets of artificial flowers, from fingers, as tiny, relatively, as her mouse-like feet, popping in and out, beneath her pettiosat.

Now that Holland is in applepie order, her colonial exhibits are very much admired; there is a savage mark about them that no similar productions in the Palace possess. The Malays at home are not only represented on the vif. but the neighbouring archipelago also. The curnosites are shown in the trophy form; odoriferous woods and spices that leave in the background those of Araby the blest; one feels almost the whiff of balmy breezes; but what dreadful insects, what devil lishes, what droll junks! The collection of selels is vast, varied, and beautiful. Why are the conchological wants of Parisians not catered for; the main for pretty shells is gast tong as for Japan lacquer-ware, bamblow hat-nots, and ching selection of selels is vast, varied, and beautif

The New York World suggests that hereafter there be an American Henley, a spring meeting each year, in the neighbourhood of some large city, of the prominent crews and scullers. The suggestion is certainly a very good one. Will it be carried out?

Cornell received a new shell from Troy on the Fourth, with which they are particularly pleased, and expect to reduce their records somewhat. The stretchers were put in according to each man's measurement, the boat rides the water well, weighs, 225 pounds rigged, is 57 feet long, and cost $350.

Proposals have been made for a couple of matches to be rowed between Higgins and Elliott, of Pegsavood. Higgins has expressed his willingness to row Elliott in two matches.

A prize of $100 has been offered for a flying match between carrier-pigeons from Columbus, O., to New York, a distance of 500 miles. The contest will probably occur this month.

A Queer Lattle Beast.

The Norwegian lemming is an animal about the size of a mouse. It lives under stones in the summer — under snow in the winter. About once in ten years they emigrate in the autumn, in large armies. They march in a straight line, crossing lakes and rivers. They go through hay-stacks rather than go round. Nothing stops them, not fire, cased and show the state of the state o

The Brougham Annuity Fund.

The Brougham Annuiry Fund.

A decision was rendered by Judge Goepp, in the suit of William T. Phipps against the New York Life Insurance company. Phipps sued to recover five per cent. of the $10,000 invested with the insurance company to secure an annuity for the veteran actor, Mr. John Brougham. His allegations were that he caused the annuity fund to be invested with the insurance company, and was promised by its Vice-President the percentage he sued for. The defendant answered that Phipps did some preliminary work toward procuring the investment of the Brougham fund, but that the application for the annuity was finally made through an agent named Dix, to whom the commission was paid. Judge Goepp gave judgment in favour of the plaintiff for the full amount claimed, with costs, an extra allowance of 5 per_cent., and also interest on the amount.

was made from pale and yellowish green silk. The front consisted of a vest of the yellow silk cut low in the neck and pointed at the bottom, and a skirt of the plain green shirred from hem to waist. The trained princess was of the plain green but had princes was of the plain green but had revers of the yellow which extended from neck to hem. These revers were finished with a vine of pale pink roses. The bottom of the train was trimmed with plaitings put on in the form of Vandykes and edged with narrow bands of the yellow. The elbow sleeve was finished in a similar manner.

ODDS AND ENDS:

The great novelty of the season is the long flower-agrafe, which is placed at the side of the skirt by way of porte-jupe, so as to loop it up gracefully while danning is going on.

Flowers are also worn in profusion in plastrons, tabliers, and au moniere-pockets, besides the numerous bouquets for the cor-age and scarf tunic, or for looping up the train. Nor should we complain of such a profusion of blossoms. Flowers and lace are more lovely even than jewels for a lady's parure.

Ribbons are also in great favor for fastening flowers, and for trimming dresses and chapeaux. This gives a dainty and coquettish style—somewhat Spanish—to the toilet, and everything Spanish is very much a lamode just now in Faris. The Spanish style admits of streaming ribbons of several colors, while the Louis XVI. style, also in great vogue, favors shaded, watered, and satin ribbons in such shades as bronze, wood-color, pale-blue, ruby, scarlet, silver-grey, beige, emerald-green, old-gold, etc.

There is also the bouquettere ribon of satin and moire in all shades, broaded with miniature sprays of flowers, and double satin and moire, or satin and faille ribbon, either of camises or of -altogether contrasting tints. One of the prettiest-fantasises of the month is the bouquetiere fichu of white silk grenadine, with a wreath of blue corn-flowers and roses, worked in chain-stitch with moss-like foliage, as in patterns of the period, and finished with deep Mechlin lace, put on plain. Most dressy is the coquetith bouquetiere fichu. It is fastened either at the waist or in the boson with a large bouquet of mixed flowers.

The bouquetiere cravat is in the same style, either in black or white silk grenadine, with Mechlin lace border, edged with a framing of blue, pink, or moss-green silk, according to the color prevailing in the embroidery pattern. Sometimes dasies and violets, or butter-cups and forget-me-nots, or any other blossons, are selected, instead of roses and corn-flowers.

Sleeve links are again coming into fashion in place of the solitaire cull futtons, but they are made of two dissimilar ends, instead of alike, as formerly.

Caps for matrons are very dressy, and present several new ideas. For breakfast caps, bighop's lawn, trimmed with torchon lace, gives a dressy head-gear.

Ribbon bows for the neck, at the Palais Royal, have the ends ornamented with handpainted flowers. One pretty bow had a spray of lilies of the valley on the ends.

Delicately pretty are the new tinted veils; all complexions are suited, and even defects are hidden—too florid a colour toned down and the sallow ones made to bloom like the rose.

Very long gloves increase in favour, and are worn out of doors, as well as in the evening to meet the three-quarters sleeve. The many-buttoned glove should be made specially for the wearer, just as the boot or shoe should be; for, though a certain size may fit many different hands, the same cannot be said for the arms. To obviate this difficulty some French houses are making gloves with laces twisted round hooks in the style of gentlemen's shooting boots. Others, such as the long gant de Suede, are laced with a fine slik cord through eyelet holes; the cord is finished with tassels.

Small Debts.

There is many a man who would shrink from putting himself under heavy obligated to be a business acquaintance, to his trademan or a friend, but whose little debts in the aggregate amount to a sum sufficiently large to keep his mind in conditional to the sum of the sum of the latter who, while not at all gensitive about incurring large obligations, and quite willing to blorrow from any one man and line is willing to blorrow from any one and any order to make a respectable appearance in a cicty. If one should drop the lying works of esteem, frendsh p and at which the south of the latter to make a respectable appearance in a cicty. If one should drop the lying works of esteem, frendsh p and at which the hought to make a respectable appearance in a cicty. If one should drop the lying works of esteem, frendsh p and an incident on the state of the same and in the hint to incur no more little debts till they have managed to clear off those they have already.

But there are others who incur these snall obligations without the excuse of thoughtlessness, and who do not pay, though they are well able to do it. There are plenty of people who have no excuse for owing any man anything yet are in debt all round, and when asked to "settle up," either tell a lie and say they can't, or make some frivo'ous excuse which plainly means they will not. The hard times have been a godsend to these mean people, whom the hard times did not pinch in the least. They have kept their servants, their employes, and those with whom they have dealt out of their dues by the lying excuse that they could not possibly do what, if they chose, they could have done at any time without the least effort or self-denial.

A lady in Port Jervis—a remarkable town by the way, for strange occurrences — whose house way overrun with water-bugs, ockroaches and bed-bugs, and who had tried all known remedies to rid the premises of them, took the advice of a book agent as follows: She procured a pound of brimstone, placed it in an iron pot in the cellar, closed all the suter doors and windows, fired the brimstone and started on a week's visit to her friends. When she returned there was not a bug in the house, but there was such an overpowering odour of brimstone that it was upwards of a week before the rooms were fit to live in. The fumes had penetrated every nook and corner, even to the bureau drawers and wardrobes. The valuable plants in the conservatory were dead, and the foliage bleached as white as snow; the delicate curtains and upholstery were bleached and ruined. It was an expensive way to kill bugs, but seems to have been effectual, and the life of the book agent who gave the recipe is safest out of that lady's reach.—

I am reminded of a naval story, not a discovery years old, which reveals the amusing ignorance of a senior officer in matters sut side his profession. A lieutenant on board one of the guard-ships applied to his captain for leave to go on shore. It was refused. He saked again: the same answer, more peremptory than before. He repeated his request, and asked for reasons of refusal. Both were still obstinately withheld. "But, sir,' he expostulated, "if I ask for leave, and yor refuse it, without giving me any reasons, I shall wak about the deck with a stigma or my back." "By George, sir," cried the irate and rather unreasonable captain, "if catch, you walking. up and down her Majesty's deck with anything but he Majesty' uniform on your back, I'll have you tried by court-martial!"

Shakespeare and his Family

Shakespeare and his Family.

One anecdete among many will be sufficent to show how entirely he threw himself ito the character he was performing, and ow well he appreciated what was becoming in an actor. It is said that Queen E'izbeth was fond of witnessing plays from thind the seemes; and on one occasion thile Shakespeare was acting, she walkee cross the stage; the audience loudly applanded her and the queen, turning to the oct, bowed very politely. Shakespeare iowever, went on with his acting, taking notice of her majesty, who, returing behing the seeme did her best to attract his attestion. When he was about to leave the stage the again appeared, and this time droppe her plove, Shakespeare, who was playin the King, in Henry IV., stooped to pick up, at the same time adding these lines in speech he was making:

"And though now bent on this high embiney, Vet stoop we to take up our coulin a glove."

Leaving the stage he handed the glove

"And though now bent on this high embrary, Yet stoop we to take up our cousin a glave."

Leaving the stage he handed the glove ther majesty, who exclaimed with delight is the dignity of his behaviour.

In 1609 Shakespeare left London for thome he had bought at Stratford-on-Avoi He was then in his forty-fifth year; his mins still at its best; but we fancy that the death of friends had subdued him. He ratined a strong affection for his native tow and his home there is described as a larg comfortable dwelling of brick and plaste the garden of which he specially enjoyed His two daughters, Susanna and Judit lived with him; the former, we are tol was his favourite, a girl of quick perception and natural sweetness of disposition; but its a singular fact that, while the ladies the important that, while the ladies the important of the day, his own daughte were left with comparatively slight eduction.

About 1793, the bust was whitewashe over; but years afterwards the whitewash was removed, and the original colours were found to remain inta-t, as they do to this day. The bust is supposed to be a faithful likeness of the poet, and the fact that one side of the face is somewhat larger than the other, indicates that it was probably copied from a plaster cast actually moulded upon Shakespeare's face.—Mrs. Lille, in July Wide Acake.
