MRS. DAVIS NERVOUS WRECK

Tells Women How She Was Restored to Perfect Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Winnipeg, Man.—"I cannot speak too highly of what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I was a nervous wreck and I just had to force myself to do my work. Even the sound of my own children playing made me feel as if I must scream if they did not get away from me. I could not even speak right to my husband. The doctor said he could do nothing for me. My husband's mother advised me to take the Vegetable Compound and I started it at once. I was able to do my work once more and it was a pleasure, not a burden. Now I have a fine bounding baby and am able to nurse her and enjoy my work. Write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Cobourg, Ont. This book contains valuable information."

Lady Wyverne's Daughter.

CHAPTER X.

Before Philip had time to reply, Inez, seated at the piano, her rich voice filling the room with the melody of the old Venetian song. When that was finished, she began another—a love-song this time—taking every note a sigh, low, soft, and taking with it the fire of her genius, and the love of her heart. She sang on until Philip rose from his seat and began to pace the room. He could not withstand the charm of this strain; she seemed to sing his heart away from him; his whole being thrilled with the sweet fancies that came to him with the music.

"He is half won," she murmured to herself, as she watched the changes that passed over his face in the evening gloaming; "a little more patience, a little more skill, and he will be mine."

This skill she displayed still more adroitly by seeming to avoid him during the last two days of his stay. He had professed himself charmed with her society; she knew that she amused and fascinated him. Now he should learn what it was to be without her. During those two last days she only saw him at rare intervals; and when he was leaving Lynneville he bade her adieu with real regret, for she had been a most delightful companion.

"Send me a message, sometimes," he said, "when my mother writes;—remember, I shall be a lonely bachelor on the Scottish moors;—send me a little news."

During the first week she sent merely a little piquant message through Mrs. Lynne; then she enclosed a sketch of his favorite hunter. Lord Lynne wrote to her, and in less than two weeks he began to look for her letters more eagerly even than for his day's sport. Not that he loved her. Love and Inez Lynne never entered his mind together; but these letters were infinitely charming. A woman's genius shows itself in her letters, and those of Inez were matchless. They were witty, sparkling and amusing; yet a veil of melancholy hung over them. Sweet, simple Agatha could never have written such letters; she would not perhaps have understood them even; the graceful imagery, the daring wit, the poetical fancy, that revealed themselves in every line, were all unknown to her. So for nearly three months they corresponded, while Agatha regained her lost roses, and strove hard to find peace and tranquillity. Then Christmas came round, and Lord Lynne replied to spend it at Lynneville. They wrote and asked Agatha to come home—Allan Leigh was at the Chase, and Mr. Bohun was again at the Court—but she declined to leave Evelyn, who clung to her society, and seemed to love her better than any one else upon earth.

Christmas was to be very gay. There was to be a grand ball at Lynneville, and another at Bohun Court. Lord Lynne determined that this year at least he would be gay; no one should know that he was a rejected lover—rejected by a fair-haired, gentle girl, too, who seldom said, "No." He did not know where he should be next year—abroad, most likely. Time was passing quickly; and all hope of his uncle's legacy died with his rejection. He was a Lynne and a gentleman. It did not enter his imagination to marry Inez without loving her, and so secure his fortune. He loved Agatha. He would have married her, even if in going so he had lost instead of gained his inheritance; but she had refused him. Love and money had failed him, and Philip began to make up his mind to the loss. He was too honorable, too noble to think of marrying without love. Not even to win a crown would he have done it; and Inez Lynne, who read him rightly, knew that if she won him it would be apart from all mercenary motives.

He was pleased to see her again. He met her frankly, and kindly thanked her for her charming letters, which had cheered and amused his solitude. That very frankness and kindness were like a death-blow to her. If his face had flushed, his voice had trembled, or his hand had clasped hers more warmly as it lay in his grasp, she would have known that he loved her. That frank, open kindness, the clear eyes that looked into her own, the calm, steady voice that thanked her, all told the same story—she interested, amused, charmed him, but he did not love her.

"I will not lose heart," she said—"not even yet. I will succeed or I will die."

Lord Lynne showed that he remembered her words. During all the Christmas festivities he thought of her constantly. He was resolved that she should never feel lonely or neglected again. So they resumed their old familiar intercourse. She sang to him, rode with him, and poured out the treasure of her genius at his feet. She grew to love him. Oh Heaven! save us from such love—so wild, so Molotovian, so blind!

The grand ball at Lynneville was a great success. Inez was the belle. She had never looked more lovely. She wore a dress of rose-colored silk, shaded and softened by costly, cloud-like lace. She wore no jewels; a wreath of white starry jasmine crowned her queenly head.

There were many at Lynneville that evening, who, in long years afterward, spoke of her as she looked then. Bertie Bohun was there, but he said no more of love to her. The bright sun did not seem further from him than this beautiful girl. She was undoubtedly the belle of the ball; and those who saw her that evening never forgot her. When the guests all departed, she went with Mrs. Lynne into her boudoir. It was a charming little room, but one that was seldom used. On this evening Mrs. Lynne had ordered fire and lights there; she liked, when a ball or party was ended, to talk it over with her son.

"Let us rest a few minutes," she said, drawing an easy-chair to the fire for Inez. "I always require half an hour's quiet talk to make me forget the glitter of lights and the sound of music. Have you enjoyed the ball, Inez?"

"Yes," she replied. "Inez always enjoys where she reigns," interrupted Lord Lynne, with a merry laugh. "What are you going to do with Bertie, Inez?" he continued. "I never saw a more severe case in my life. Your beaux you have done mischief there."

"I am not accountable for it," she replied, coldly. "How could you be?" he rejoined. "No amount of homage moves you. Have you no heart, Inez?" She raised her eyes to his face. Was he blind that he could not read what they told? Was he blind that he did not see how the beautiful face, cold and haughty to others, softened and brightened for him? When Mrs. Lynne went away, they were speaking of the coming spring. "I do not say anything to my mother," said Lord Lynne to Inez, "but I have serious thoughts of going abroad in the spring." "Abroad!" she said; "for how long?" "I do not know," he replied; "for years, in all probability, Inez. I want something to fill up my life." There was a profound silence for some minutes, and when Inez spoke again, Lord Lynne did not know her voice. "It is late," she said. "Thinking she wished to be alone, he rose and held out his hand to say good-night. He saw her face perfectly white, with a startled look in her large, dark eyes. "You are tired, Inez," he said gently. "Good-night! pleasant dreams!" He did not notice that the little jeweled hand he touched was cold as death; he did not see the quiver of the white lips; he took the wax taper placed ready for him, and went away. Inez sat still and motionless for some minutes. Then she rose, intending to go to her room, but her strength failed her. She threw up her arms, and fell upon the ground upon her face. "He is going!" she cried; "and I love him so—I love him so!" She did not hear Lord Lynne returning, she did not hear him open the door, she did not know that he saw her passion of grief and heard her wild words. She loved him—that proud, beautiful, imperious girl. He was literally astounded. She loved him, and he had never even guessed it. How much she must love him! Why was she lying there. What did those long, bitter sobs mean? Did she—could any one living love him so much as that? He had returned for his watch, which he had left upon the table, and he thought she had gilded the boudoir. Slowly and gently he withdrew, and closed the door. He knew enough of her to understand that she would rather have died than be should have seen her. He never stopped to think. "She loves me," he said, "and loves me so."

HAZARDOUS.
Our lives these days are full of danger, we know not when the end may come; at any hour some sinful stranger may shoot us, from his native slum. We know not when the airship over us may drop a bomb, or a crowbar or a we shall join the shining chorus beyond the rippling Jordan stream. At any hour some creaking rigger may climb our tree and saw our frames, and we shall share, across the river, the airship victims' endless games. At every step death yields its cleaver, and epidemics dog our trail; the flu may get us if the fever should haply leave us well and hale. So when men say, "You're getting fatter, you ought to take more exercise," I make reply, "What does it matter? What boots it how a voter dies? I might go into ardent training, and tramp the hillsides to and fro, and wade in water when it's raining, and drill through forty leagues of snow. By eating fodder from a silo, and dictating as does prescribe, I might become a modern Milo, the marvel of the village tribe. And then some heavily truck or lorry would run me down, upon a day, and, saying, 'I'd be sick and sorry for all that labor thrown away.' My fat would abound in folds and creases, my contour isn't strictly nice; but, as I say to aunts and nieces, a shapely form's not worth the price."

There are 4 grades of roofing felt selling in Newfoundland, "BARRETT'S" is guaranteed the highest grade.

"Barrett's" 1, 2 and 3-ply felts have been in use in Newfoundland for more than 50 years.

The best roof known in America is a "Barrett" roof, "Barrett's" felt ONLY is used in putting on a "Barrett" Roof. Ask any Architect.

"Barrett" 1, 2 and 3-ply felts are really made of felt saturated with genuine coal tar--the 2 and 3-ply felts have a layer of coal tar pitch between each ply.

"Barrett's" felts are made to give good wear, therefore they cost more than roofings made of paper saturated with diluted asphalt.

If you use "Barrett's" felt instead of common felt, a new roof covering for your house may cost you $2.00 more for the whole roof.

Roofs covered with "Barrett's" felt are secure, the extra cost of one or two dollars (for the entire roof) is money well spent.

Which felt do you intend to use?

Architects, Builders and Contractors prefer "Barrett's" Felt.

Bonar Law's Health Gives Concern.

Stanley Baldwin Will Likely Succeed Him as Prime Minister--Coal Miners on Strike in Cape Breton.

BALDWIN LIKELY SUCCESSOR.

Some fears have arisen regarding the condition of Bonar Law, and it is expressed whether he will be able to retain the premiership. Nothing authoritative can be said as to the nature of his ailment, but it is believed to be a throat affection which has rendered him almost voiceless. Mr. Thomas Horder who is a specialist in cancer and bacteriology, has been called to Paris for consultation with French specialists. It is believed that he is still maintained in the Premier's health is good, but that his voice is attributed to laryngitis. Apparently, however, his physicians have advised a further long stay in Aix les Bains and he is going to Aix les Bains at least another fortnight, and he is looked upon as pointing to Stanley Baldwin as his likely successor. It seems probable that when Bonar returns to London he will do so for the formal purpose of arranging a reconstruction of the Ministry. Political gossip names Foreign Secretary Marquis Curzon or Stanley Baldwin, Chancellor of the Exchequer as likely successors to the Premiership. Curzon by political eminence and experience as well as seniority appears the natural successor. He has the disadvantage of being a member of the Lords. The last time he sat in the Lords was in 1918, but that was more than 20 years ago, and at the present time it is thought that neither Parliament nor the country would take kindly to a Premier. Hence the chances are considered to favor Baldwin. There are so many conflicting rumors and ambitions within the Conservative Party that it is impossible to predict the course.

LAW'S RESIGNATION NEAR.

PARIS, May 18. Andrew Bonar Law is in such a condition of health, according to those closely associated with him, that his retirement is only a matter of weeks, if not days. The longest period rumor has allowed him is one month, for the purpose of re-arranging the Cabinet.

A CAPE BRETON STRIKE.

SYDNEY, May 18. Between six and seventeen hundred coal miners of the Inverness Railway and Coal Company have walked out, complaining of a breach of contract on the part of the operators, according to information reaching U. M. W. headquarters to-day. Just what definite complaints are made has not been made public.

TRI-NATIONAL STEAMERS FOR ST. JOHN'S ROUTE.

HALIFAX, May 18. It is learned here that the Tri-National Steamship Co., of New York, have acquired the steamers Advance and Alliance from the Panama Railway and the Steamship Co. and will use them on their Boston-Halifax-St. John's Nfld. route.

THE CLEVELAND SCHOOL TRAGEDY.

CAMDEN, South Carolina, May 18. Seventy-three persons are dead and one is missing, according to the latest check up after the holocaust in the Cleveland village school near here. Fire followed the explosion of a lamp on the stage where the school children were giving a playlet in connection with school closing. Victims are mostly children and their parents, brothers and sisters. Many cases are recorded where whole families were wiped out, and scarcely a home for miles around that has not been stricken. The panic-stricken rush of three hundred fear-crazed people broke the stairway which went down under a mass of struggling humanity, impaling and pinning down many, who might otherwise have escaped. Others jumped from the windows suffering broken limbs and other injuries. The school was a forty foot frame building and the concert was being held on the second floor. Forty children, eighteen men and fifteen women were burned to death.

BANK GENERAL MANAGER'S DEATH.

TORONTO, May 18. H. A. Richardson, General Manager of the Bank of Nova Scotia since 1910, died here this morning after three months illness. He was born in Nova Scotia, educated mainly at Liverpool in that Province, and entered the bank at Liverpool at the age of eighteen. He was sixty-one years old.

ST. JOHN'S BOYS' SUCCESS.

HALIFAX, May 18. Thomas Hinson Winter, St. John's, was awarded degree of Civil Engineer at the Annual Convocation to-day of the Nova Scotia Technical College.

EASTER ISLAND'S DISAPPEARANCE.

MELBOURNE, May 18. A wireless message, apparently from a vessel, picked up here, states that Easter Island has disappeared. Reports that Easter Island has disappeared have been prevalent since the disastrous Chilean earthquake of November. The population was about one hundred.

He Found Them a Great Benefit

Mr. Alphonse Cote Praises Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Quebec man who suffered from indigestion and stomach trouble found relief in Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets. St. Flavian, P.Q., May 18th.—(Special)—Relieved of the aches and pains of dyspepsia, Mr. Alphonse Cote, who resides here, is loud in his praises of Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets. "I can tell you frankly, that after taking your tablets, I found a change in my health at once," Mr. Cote states, "I have taken other remedies, but they did me no good." The result was wonderful. Eating is now a pleasure to me, and I hardly ever have any pains at all. "Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets certainly add to the joy of living. They make eating a pleasure and insure against the after effects of meal or banquet. Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets have provided the most successful treatment for Dyspepsia and Indigestion yet discovered."

Our Dumb Animals.

REPORT OF CHIEF AGENT S.P.A. WEEK ENDING MAY 18TH.

Attended to the landing of 46 head cattle from S.S. Sable I., all in good condition. Saw that they were watered and taken away to Mr. Halliday's stables. Asked by the Impounder to humbly destroy two dogs. Examined 7 horses that came in on the train from the lumber woods to the Government farm. The horses were in a very poor condition, very thin. I understand from Mr. Reid at the farm that they are to be kept there for the use of the farm. Requested by a city butcher to use the humane killer on a large beef animal. The butcher was more than pleased with the result. I may state here that I shall be willing, at any time, to explain the working of the machine to anybody. Attended the sale of 46 head cattle at Campbell & McKay's and found everything satisfactory. Asked to look after a man on CHI's wharf who was roughly using his horse; also spoke to another in Beck's Cove. Had 4 horses taken off the street for rest, others were suffering from lameness, having picked up nails. Two reports received about 2 dogs annoying residents in the neighbourhood of Cook and Charlton Streets. I visited these places and will have the dogs destroyed unless the dogs are properly fed and cared for. Received several reports from friends of the Society, all names and reports strictly confidential for which assistance I am grateful. Road Inspectors are having the stones taken away from the various inclines. Two men were arrested by the police for furious driving and fined $1 each. The Society thanks these members of the Constabulary for doing their duty as well as interesting themselves on behalf of those "who cannot speak for themselves." Phone all information to No. 653. JONAS BARTER, Chief Agent.

Obituary.

ISABELLA STEVENSON.

Helen Isabella Stevenson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Stevenson, of this city, died on Saturday, May 12th, at Montreal, where she had been in training as a nurse. The passing of her fair young life has been heard of with deepest regret by all who were privileged to know her. Gentle and sincere, a true and loyal friend, a girl lovingly devoted to her family, whose unselfish devotion was a joy and a benediction, she will be greatly missed and mourned. Scarcely more than a month ago word was received that Isabella had contracted typhoid fever. The most tender nursing by her friends in hospital, and the best skill by the most noted specialists in Canada, proved unavailing. Her last weeks were gladdened by the presence of her mother, who left for Montreal immediately the tidings of her daughter's illness reached the city. She has left the home circle to join the bright throng around the Throne of God, but the memory of her pure and loving life below will remain. Tennyson well said: "It is better to have loved and lost, than never to have loved at all." Her useful life work which she had so covetly held dear, but God who doeth all things well has called her to a larger life, and to greater things on high.—Daily News. St. John's May 18th, 1923.

Little Boy Run Over.

TAKEN TO HOSPITAL WITH LEG BROKEN.

Yesterday afternoon a 7-year-old boy named Squires was run over on Bates' Hill by a horse driven by Captain Volsky. The rear wheel of the wagon passed over the boy's legs breaking one of them. The little chap was taken to Dr. A. Carnell's surgery for a preliminary examination, after which he was removed to hospital. Last night the patient was resting easy, but it will be some weeks before he will be well enough to leave the institution.

LIFE'S REWARD.
 I have run it over.
 I have run it through.
 I have trod the clover
 Under skies of blue;
 I have heard the thunder.
 Seen the lightning flash.
 Seen my hopes go under.
 Heard my castle crash;
 But from every sorrow
 And from every pain.
 Always some to-morrow
 Smiled on me again.
 Bitter days and lonely
 I have had to face.
 Days when anguish only
 Seemed to rule the place;
 But the storms abated,
 And I rose to see
 Orchards blossom-freighted,
 Birds in every tree.
 Sunshine dancing round me,
 Joy beside my door.
 And the care which bound me
 Fretted me no more.
 I have run it over.
 All that life has meant.
 I have played the rover.
 Dreaming as I went:
 Laughed and loved and neighbored.
 Wept and suffered pain.
 With the throng I've labored,
 With them shared the rain;
 But for all the trouble,
 And for every tear,
 Life has paid me double
 In fellowship and cheer.

Russia's Experiment.

"Stead's Review" has never looked with unkindly eye upon Sovietism; yet in a recent issue appears this item:—
 "The school teachers of the Don Basin have addressed an impassioned appeal to the All-Russian Executive Committee, begging it to prevent them from dying of starvation. Judging by the fact that two previous appeals have been left without response, it is all too probable that the Soviet Government will treat this one with equal contempt. In this appeal the teachers describe their misery. "Does in Soviet Russia get better food than we," they say. Their families have left the district, seeking to save themselves from death by starvation, but they themselves have stuck to their posts, and are suffering the dreadful pangs of hunger. Day by day they are growing weaker. Can it be, they ask, that the Commissariat of Education, to which they have appealed time after time, does not realize that by staying at their posts they are fulfilling public service, and deserve just a little bread in return? They implore the Government to give them bread and their pay for the last six months, and agree that the cost of the bread should be deducted from their salaries. The Bolshevik press seems to be beginning to realize the danger of a complete extermination of the schools. To-morrow there will be no schools in Russia," says the writer of an article in the Investia. "Education is in the last stages of collapse."

The St. Bonaventure's College Sports will be held on Wednesday, June 13th.—may 18, 21

Demetri Joaonovic, the Rumanian engineer who claims to be able to keep the St. Lawrence river open for navigation from Quebec to Montreal all the year round, is setting out shortly on his series of cruises along the river to study currents, ice formation, etc., using the vessels of the Cunard line, for which he has been given free travelling and every possible facility, between Montreal and Father Point.

When he has completed his study he will put his complete proposals before the Federal Government. Meanwhile, Mr. Joaonovic has written to the Soviet Government in Moscow, offering to give them the benefit of his invention to keep the Baltic and Black seas open all the year round.

Municipal Council

WEEKLY MEETING.

The regular session of the Municipal Council was held yesterday afternoon. Mayor Cook presided and Councillors Martin, Vincombe, Ryan and Dowden were present.

The claim of the Longshoremen's Protective Union for loss incurred in endeavoring to locate sewer trouble at their Hall, Duckworth Street, was taken up. The Council acknowledged no liability in the matter.

William White called attention to road conditions, LeMarchant Road, and to the necessity of having same treated with oil, as in previous years, so as to preserve the road-bed. This was referred to the City Engineer.

M. J. Wadden asked that the retaining wall, rear of his premises, Water Street, be given attention. The question of liability for upkeep of this wall was referred to the City Engineer.

T. Green applied for position of assistant on the Motor Sprinkler Truck. His application will be placed on file.

Messrs Colvin Campbell Ltd., complained of the condition of open space near their premises, Water Street East, which they stated was an eye-sore to the many visitors going to and from passenger steamships. They asked the Council to arrange for the cleaning up of same, and intimated they were prepared to do a certain amount of work themselves, with a view of putting it in a respectable condition. The City Engineer was instructed to see the adjoining property owners with regard to the matter.

The application of the Royal Stores Ltd., re placing of concrete sidewalks fronting their premises, Duckworth Street, was referred to the City Engineer.

The following plans were passed, subject to the Engineer's approval, conditional upon the Municipal Act being adhered to, particularly as to the material used in the roofing of proposed buildings:—

Extensions—Michael Hall, Knight Street.
 Dwellings—Dr. Fallon, LeMarchant Road.
 Outhouse—George Pike, Cavell St.
 Andrew Payne, Franklyn Ave. and Pynn & Spurrel, Prince of Wales St.
 must submit ground plan for the approval of the Council before building permits can be issued.

Tenders for the supply of uniforms for the inspectors, as deferred from the last meeting, were then taken up. The contract was awarded Mr. Mark Chaplin.

Specification in connection with the piling of Bowring's Cove was submitted and tenders were ordered to be called for same. Repair for the piling of Steer's Cove were also ordered.

The following streets are to be repaired:—Monkstown and Circular Roads and Cavell Street.

The City Engineer informed the Board that in making the necessary preparations in connection with the swimming pool, Long Pond, for the coming season, it was found that the boat, which was stored on the bank after last year, had been stolen, and the bathing house broken into and other property removed therefrom. It was ordered that a reward of twenty dollars be offered for information that would lead to the conviction of the person or persons guilty of same.

Henry Cook offered to supply iron railing for Bannerman Park. This was referred to the Park Committee.

The Health Officer reported seven new cases of scarlet fever in the city during the past week.

Councillor Dowden gave notice that at the next regular meeting, he will introduce Resolutions prohibiting the use of water for the purpose of washing windows or sprinkling sidewalks, Water Street, at any time other than that defined by the Council.

The Sanitary Supervisor submitted reports dealing with the cleaning up of the city, and other matters in connection with his Department.

Sprains and Bruises

A sprain or strain is the stretching or tearing of the ligament about a joint or the fibres of a muscle. Besides the soreness there is inflammation shown in redness and swelling. Prompt rubbing with Dr. Chase's Liniment brings the blood to the surface of the skin, reduces the inflammation and congestion and takes out the soreness.

After applying the liniment for Sprains or Bruises the sore parts should be bandaged or wrapped with cloth.

Relief comes almost like magic when Dr. Chase's Liniment is promptly used for Sprains and Bruises and it is equally effective in the relief of other forms of pain such as rheumatism, lumbago, backache, etc.

Gold Prospects in Labrador.

By VICTOR GORDON.

"Is there gold in Labrador? Undoubtedly there is, for traces of the precious metal have been found there, as they have been found in many lands. There is gold in Newfoundland. That has been proved beyond question. The Till Cove Mines made an appreciable increase in the world's wealth from the gold extracted. The question to be decided is not so much whether there is gold, but whether it is in sufficient quantity to make its search and development a paying proposition."

The above is from the Daily News of St. John's, Newfoundland, and the answer to the question will be awaited with interest when the result of the forthcoming expeditions are made known.

The best one can do in forming a judgment as to whether gold does exist in commercial quantities in Labrador, is to weigh the evidence of people who have lived in that country, and whose knowledge of the conditions entitles them to speak. But this is not so easy as it might seem, for the Labrador peninsula is a sparsely populated place at best, and there are very few people who can speak with authority about its geological characteristics. Mr. A. P. Low, formerly Deputy Minister of Mines in Canada, who conducted a survey of Labrador in 1892-95, reported that no free gold was actually found by his party, but that the gravels of the river beds should be examined, and they might easily contain the greatly-prized metal.

According to all accounts, there will be upwards of 20,000 people making tracks for this remote territory when navigation opens in a few weeks' time. Whether they are wise in going there or not, is debatable, for there is very little information in existence that would justify the extravagant reports that have been circulated by the promoters of various expeditions. On the other hand, unless the waste lands of our Empire are examined and explored, how can we ever know the real value of our inherent resources?

It may be of interest briefly to describe the conditions that exist in Labrador. Whatever knowledge we have is mostly gained from a few noble exemplars of our pioneer race who have spent their lives in the country, such as Dr. Wilfred Grenfell, C.M.G., the well-known medical missionary; the Rev. Henry Gordon; E. C. Robinson, F.R.G.S.; the Hudson's Bay Company's agents at various posts along the coast, of whom the late Lord Strathcona was one; and last, but by no means least, from the Moravian Fathers, who, for long years, have ministered in lonely self-effacing charity to the Eskimos and the Indians who dwell behind the shores of this limit and cheerless land.

The name of Labrador is said to be derived from the French Le Bras d'Or ("The Arm of Gold"), and this may give fresh heart to prospectors. A large portion of the peninsula, amounting to about 120,000 square miles or more, is under the jurisdiction of the Government of Newfoundland, and has been so, with only one interruption, since the Treaty of Paris in 1763, when the rule of the Government of France in North America came to an end.

Like the island of Newfoundland, Labrador is a country having great waterways, and rich areas generously forested with timber suitable for the manufacture of pulp and paper. It is, however, a highly mineralized country, belonging to the geologists to a formation, or series of formations, older than any other on the world's surface. The people who inhabit the country are of three kinds—the Eskimos, the Indians, and local white residents called "hiviers," and, in addition, there is each summer an influx of Newfoundlanders who catch and cure codfish, and who return to the island at the end of the fishing season.

The scenery of Labrador is very much like that of Norway, and consists of a rugged and forbidding coastline, dotted here and there with innumerable islands. It is interrupted at intervals by great openings in the land in the shape of bays and fjords, which extend, in many cases, far back into the country. The great Hamilton Inlet, just north of which is Stag Bay, where gold is said to have been discovered, is probably one of the greatest watercourses in the world. Near the source of the Hamilton River are the Grand Falls, which, according to the reports of travellers, have no equal for picturesque beauty, and for volume of power.

One of the great disadvantages of Labrador is that for about six or seven months of the year it is closed to navigation. Ice coming down through the Straits of Belle Isle in winter, and in the spring, renders navigation difficult and dangerous.

Put very briefly, these are some of the facts about Labrador. As to its gold-containing possibilities, who can say? The geologists are agreed that the rivers in this rugged land may easily contain gold, and as to this it is interesting to quote Mr. E. H. Cunningham Craig, who says as follows:—

meet with the warmest approval of every experienced geologist and mining man, are, unfortunately, still too frequently ignored by those who embark on mining ventures with insufficient technical qualifications.

"The trained observer would be able to begin his work before reaching the country. From previous researches he would find that the coast of Labrador has affinities with the Newfoundland and St. Lawrence regions, so that there is at least a probability that the same conditions will be favorable in both places. Investigation of the records of known occurrences of gold in Newfoundland shows that they belong to the well-known type, Archæan rocks intruded and intercalated with acid and intermediate masses and their offshoots. Extant reports upon Labrador indicate that similar formations are well developed there; so that already the method of occurrence is fairly certain. The subsequent examination on the field would rapidly settle this question, and the range of enquiry would be further narrowed by the precise determination of the particular types of intrusives and country which seem locally most favorable.

"Acquaintance with the general theory of gold deposition would here enable essential to be distinguished from chance features. Armed with this knowledge, the geologist would be able to select sites with discretion and describe them with accuracy, or should the conditions at a particular place seem insufficiently promising, he would have a valuable weapon with which to attack the problem elsewhere."

Whatever the result of the various expeditions to Labrador in the coming summer, one feels confident that so vast a country cannot but contain some meritorious substances utilisable for mankind's industrial needs.

So much then for the "gold rush." The casual prospector with modest capital should be cautious, but there is no harm in hoping that the "Bonanza" days of the Klondike and Australia will be seen again this year in Labrador—Canada, April 28.

Appreciation of Firemen's Services.

Chas. H. Hutchings, Esq., K.C., J.P., O.B.E., Inspector General, City.

Dear Sirs—We enclose herewith our cheque for $100.00 (one hundred dollars) as a slight token of appreciation of the valuable services rendered by the Firemen, in connection with the fire in our plant on Duckworth Street on Sunday last.

By the heroic work of the members of the Fire Brigade, the fire, which for a time threatened to assume alarming proportions, was confined to our plant, and the adjoining one of Dicks & Co.

We would also like to congratulate you on the addition of the pump to your fire equipment, without the aid of which it is doubtful if the fire could have been got under control without considerably more damage.

Yours sincerely,
THE TRADE PRINTERS & PUBLISHERS LTD.,

INSPECTOR GENERAL'S REPLY.

Dear Sirs—I beg to acknowledge receipt of yours of to-day's date, enclosing cheque for $100.00, in appreciation of the services rendered by the firemen, in connection with the fire at your plant, on Sunday last. I assure you that the members of the Department feel very grateful for this recognition, and for your kind words of praise.

Personally I thank you for your congratulatory references to the new Pumper. Only since its introduction have I felt that the city has anything near adequate protection, and I feel that my agitation for its introduction, if it has not already done so, will, before long, receive public appreciation.

Yours sincerely,
(Sgd.) CHAS. H. HUTCHINGS,

Extraordinary Attraction at the Nickel Monday.

NORMA TALMADGE HAS FINE CAST IN "SMILIN' THROUGH."

Norma Talmadge has a splendid supporting cast appearing with her in her latest starring vehicle, "Smilin' Through," which will be the First National attraction at the Nickel Theatre next week.

The two principal male roles are portrayed by William Standing and Harrison Ford and other well-known screen artists in the cast are Alec B. Francis, Glenn Hunter, Grace Griswold, Miriam Battista and Eugene Lockhart.

The production is an adaptation of Allen Langdon Martin's highly successful stage play and has an unusually dramatic plot, in which the romance of a young couple is upset because of the tragic act years before of one of the parents.

Made under the direction of Sidney Franklin, it is said to lead all Miss Talmadge's previous productions in artistic and dramatic achievement.

THE EMPIRE'S COUNCILS.
 London Times: Mr. Mackenzie and Mr. Bruce will be new members of the Council of the Empire. Both young men, both are products of the same school of statesmen which grew up overseas during the last century. They may be representatives of widely different shades of political thought, but it is in the very nature of their political opinions that Empire finds one of its main sources of strength, and it is under stimulus of mutual discussion that its mingled elements may best be blended in a composite whole.

TAXED TWICE.
 London Daily Chronicle: The taxation is a manifest hardship to the individual, and it is the trade interests of both the home and foreign countries. It would be an injustice to all concerned to avoid the tax by taxing the individual in one country only, or dividing the tax between the two. But how to make a very complicated adjustment? A committee of experts appointed by the League of Nations has been examining the question and its report shows how difficult the problem is.

THE CITY BEAUTIFUL.
 Canada: It is time we thought of forming this commission; not because we have waited long and it is also time because we cannot any longer neglect the beautification of our city. It is our duty to develop it, to become one of the most important cities of the continent and it is our duty to do this development in a harmonious, with cohesion, that the more we progress the more beautiful will Montreal become. In dealing with this question we are not to our disadvantage, but to our benefit.

INDIA'S FINANCING.
 London Times: India's money has developed greatly during the last few years, and the country which once was a net importer of capital has now more than a hundred million sterling invested in British securities. Whereas, further, before it was thought impossible to raise in India itself more than ten millions sterling a year for the expenditure, and that too by the methods of finance, a sum of twenty millions sterling has become a commonplace and is now subscribed from Indian resources.

SUGAR AND COLOR.
 London Mail (Australia): The people are prepared to pay, liberally, for the support of industry on which the maintenance of the White Australia policy in small measure depends. This is not to say that they are prepared to pay any price, and that exporters, millers and refiners have to make in their impatience for the present agreement that the people are paying dearly for their white. This agreement terminates with the conclusion of the marketing of the present crop, but under it consumers have been and still are paying over wholesale for raw sugar.

Majestic Announcement.

Beginning Monday there will be screened at the Majestic what certainly can be claimed to be one of the greatest film productions ever seen by St. John's audience, "The Orphans of the Storm."
 The name of D. W. Griffith is always associated with everything that is excellent and superior in the screen world. St. John's audiences have had the pleasure of seeing several of his masterpieces, such as "Broken Blossoms," "Way Down East," "Birth of a Nation," etc., but it is acknowledged by all competent judges that the work in the Orphans of the Storm excels that in any of the previous efforts. Nearly eighteen months were spent in the study of historical situations, costuming and the marvelous scenes occurring during the period of the French Revolution, to have the picture historically correct in every detail. It has involved an expenditure of nearly three million dollars.
 The leading parts are taken by actors and actresses selected from an assemblage of the players. The cast is headed by the two sisters, Dorothy and Lillian Gish, and is noted for the first appearance on the screen of Joseph Schildkraut, said to be the handsomest actor in all Europe, while such outstanding characters of the Revolution as King Louis, Danton, and Robespierre are taken by actors of note.
 Apart from its value as an entertainment, the picture affords a rare opportunity of securing a correct knowledge of the many incidents that occurred during this tremendous period. There will be but one show, commencing at 8:15. Admission 30c. We say to every admirer of a real picture, don't miss this treat.

As Others See Us
And as we see Ourselves.
(By OBSERVATOR.)

Give to Caesar what is Caesar's! Yes, but tell me, if you can, is this subscription Caesar's here upon our brother man? Is not here some other's image, dark and dull as though it be, is this fellow-soul that worships, struggles Godward even as we?

Think you Truth a farthing rushlight to be pinched out when you will With your deft official fingers, and your politician's skill? Is your God a wooden fetish, to be hidden out of sight That his block eyes may not see you do the thing that is not right?

AN OUT-AND-OUT RADICAL PARTY
One thing the recent general election has placed beyond doubt, and that is the existence in the Colony of an out-and-out Radical Party. The Liberals and Conservatives (call them Whigs and Tories if you will) in the past have fought with each other, have criticized and condemned each other. But that was no more than the maintenance of the particular principles of government to which they were attached, and a criticism of the acts of the party to which they were opposed. Solely or greatly under certain leadership, a change has come over the action of our political parties. The Radical party has come to the front, a party whose power feeds and depends on the existence of discontent, so they are not only quick to find it out, but eager to encourage and promote it when it does appear. If they find anywhere a crack that is tending to divide two classes in the community, they hasten to drive in the wedge and to split it into a chasm. Their office, their function seems to be to exasperate every animosity between class and class, to fan it into flame, and derive for it that electoral support which is the object of their industry and their action. Of course, they will tell you that their mission is to hear of grievances and to obtain their redress. Yes; but a party whose mission it is to live entirely upon the discovery of grievances are apt to manufacture the element upon which they subsist.

THE COMMON INFORMER A COMMON NUISANCE.
It is very good that political and other crimes, if they exist, should be informed against and public justice should act against them; but still the common informer is a common nuisance! Some time ago there was a man brought up for the crime of arson, and he was discovered to pursue this curious industry. It was the practice of the police at that time to give every man half a dollar who should be the first to inform them of any fire that might occur. This practice of this man was first to set fire to a building and then to rush off to the police and earn half a dollar for informing them of the fire. Now, that is precisely the position of the Radical party in Newfoundland to-day. It is, no doubt, their function to detect and redress grievances, but if you watch them you will observe that their entire industry is devoted to the aggravating and inflaming of any animosities or grievances that may exist. This party is a very different thing from the old Liberals and Conservatives. It is a party whose action cannot in any country be continued for any length of time without seriously compromising that unity between the various classes of the community, on condition of which alone success and prosperity can be sustained. Let me here say to those who are likely to suffer by this peculiar form of political activity, which has been developed into the foundation of a party in our time, that it tells more severely against the humble classes of society than against the richer. Among their favorite topics are those subjects which may tend to inflame the poorer and the well-to-do against each other. Some of the prominent men in public life here to-day are not above this weakness.

GREAT DIFFICULTIES TO CON-TEND WITH.
At the present time we have great difficulties to contend with, we have great evils to remove, we require for the purpose the united efforts of all men of goodwill and of all classes in the country. It is a mistake to say anything merely to produce dissension and bitterness between those who ought to co-operate for our country's good. Take the housing of the poor here in St. John's. I hope that much good may eventually be done in that direction, and that it may be the privilege of the present generation to assuage a vast amount of human misery. But I see symptoms in one quarter at any rate of an inclination to turn men aside from the practical question, how to relieve these evils in order to set up a fight between the property-owning class and the rest of the people—a question on which I do not desire now to express an opinion, but which will certainly place powerful classes at issue and interfere with the object which we have in view, and may defer for a generation or more the remedy which we seek. There is a peculiar error, to my mind, which the Radical politician constantly commits in his efforts to ameliorate the condition of the people of this country. He appears to approach every question in order to find out exciting material for hounding on one class against the other. I do not believe that this is progress. We have enormous difficulties to encounter; we have a population of 200,000; the sources of prosperity are not flowing so abundantly as in the past, and we find that the opportunities of industry are not numerous, and, therefore, the means of keeping the people from great suffering are engaging the minds and thoughts of all patriotic men at the present time. It is a great, arduous, and almost superhuman task, and it is a task to which we can only prove equal if we pull together and act together in trying to fulfil it. They are no true friends of progress who try to persuade us that these objects are to be reached by generating quarrels. If we really wish to make things better, we must do all we can to act together, and it must be our task to discourage the policy which assists in the manufacture of grievances and increases the animosities which exist among the various sections of the community. It is a great mission which the present generation has to perform to make the conditions of life more tolerable to all who exist in "this island home of ours." It is only by hearty co-operation, it is only by maintaining harmony and good-will among all classes of the community, that we can make Newfoundland, not only respected abroad, but happy, prosperous and contented at home.

TRINITY

STREET, OF POOLE, DORSET, WHO CONDUCTED A BUSINESS IN TRINITY FROM 1789 TO

Writing an outline history of the place, the writer has endeavored to do justice to the important part which came to Trinity in the nineteenth century, and in various ways contributed towards the upbuilding of the town: one is reminded again of the important part which played either in the work of the business men themselves, or in the imparting to young men of other places, a practical knowledge of the fundamental principles, as made them thorough business men. This, of course, was largely a result of the fact that from the earliest days of the settlement, Trinity, Newfound, was a large and important business center. It was largely a result of the fact that from the earliest days of the settlement, Trinity, Newfound, was a large and important business center. It was largely a result of the fact that from the earliest days of the settlement, Trinity, Newfound, was a large and important business center.

His marked usefulness caused him to take a deep interest, not only in his employees, but also in everything that meant for good to Trinity. As a boy he had been carefully taught that the Church was a Divine Institution seeking the salvation of men, and he set a good example to his employees, and to others, by moulding his daily life in accordance with the Church's teaching, which included a generous use of his money to assist in providing for its work. Trinity had just begun to emerge from a very rough and immoral period, and several of those who had been the leaders in this kind of life had gone away from the place, a marked improvement in moral and spiritual life was noticeable, and the coming of such a man as Mr. Peter Street, as a leading citizen was decidedly opportune. After two years Mr. Street decided to marry, and the following entry is found in the Church Register: "1789. Married. Peter Street (son of Thomas Street of the town of Poole, England) merchant, and Hester Whitte of this Harbour." The years that followed were successful ones in the general business of Trinity. In this Mr. Street secured a proportionate share, and was thus encouraged to more fully equip his premises, and to extend his operations.

Just as the public had begun to appreciate the person and work of Mr. Street, and to regard him and his business as a permanency for many years of come, it was shocked to find that after a few days of illness—with which it never associated danger—he was called to his eternal rest, and in the old Register in the following entry: 1801. January 4th. Interred, Mr. Peter Street, merchant, aged 34 years." So far as I know, the death of Mr. Street was followed by the closing down of the business, and the sale and removal of the stores and other buildings. There are still, I believe, the tops of some posts visible in the land-wash near the building once stood, and doubtless they constitute the only material reminders of the person, and doings of Mr. Street, over a hundred years ago. An old store that for many years stood on the property of Mr. Cross, in Trinity, had been bought, and brought over the ice from Mr. Street's premises. That store, however, was taken down some years ago, and the material of it has gone into the make-up of other less important buildings in town.

That which was intended to perpetuate the memory of Mr. Street, and to tell the future generations what those who had known him personally in Trinity thought of him, was a large and beautiful marble tablet, that was placed on the wall in the first St. Paul's Church, that stood in the middle of the present churchyard. When that church was taken down, the tablet was removed and placed on the north wall for the second St. Paul's Church. When the second St. Paul's was being taken down, to be replaced by the present church, the mural tablets were carefully and successfully removed (except that of Mr. Street) and are now in the Mortuary Chapel. The man who undertook to remove that of Mr. Street, miscalculated its weight, and when it was detached from the wall, it fell and broke into a hundred pieces. Thus was frustrated the intentions of the people of Trinity to tell to future generations the story of Mr. Street's life and work. By this accident, too, was destroyed the one thing that would have been a link between the first St. Paul's and the third. Were it not for the two entries in the old Church books, that I have quoted—with the passing of the old people in Trinity, the fact that such a man as Peter Street lived and died here would soon be entirely forgotten. I cannot find any reference to Mr. Street's widow in either the Marriage or the Burial Register, and it looks as if she left Trinity after her husband's death. Thus, within ten short years—in the bloom of manhood—Mr. Peter Street came to Trinity as a stranger; became an important part in the integral life of the town, and then passed out for ever. Sic transit. May God be good to him in the intermediate life.

The time "to which the old cow died" was, I believe, in "beef-flat." The words were adapted for use in the winter, or early spring, as follows: "Consider good cow, consider! This is no time for grass to grow." Soon after that the cow died.

OUTLINE HISTORY OF THE RANDLE FAMILY, FORT REXTON.

I have been asked for some information re the family pedigree of the Randalls of Port Rexton (Ship Cove) as supplied by old Church Registers. I give it, as follows:—The first of the name was John Randall, who came from Simons-bury, Dorset, England. He married Patience Phillips of Kerley's Harbour in 1785. There were born to them seven sons and one daughter, viz: William, George, Absalom, John, Thomas, Isaac, Charity, Robert. Following are their marriages, respectively, together with the name, and date of baptism of one child born to them. There were other children in every family, but I give only one. William married Honor Cook in 1819, and John was born in 1823. George married Mary Cook in 1824, and Elizabeth was born in 1826. Absalom married Mary Butler in 1828, and John was born in 1829. John married Elizabeth Fowlow in 1834 and Patience was born in 1836. Thomas married Elizabeth Butler in 1834, and Mary was born in 1840. Isaac married Anne Hogarth in 1837 and John was born in 1833. Charity married Joseph Cook in 1836, and Jane was born in 1837. Robert married Jane Ploughman in 1840, and John was born in 1841.

Collectively and individually they look their full share of the responsibilities of citizenship, and by their industrious habits they materially assisted in laying the foundations of a settlement, that to-day is ideal as a picturesque fishing and agricultural village. Thus, where in 1785 the first Randall from Dorset brought his bride and settled down as the only two persons of the name in the place, to say the name stands well in the forefront of numbers and respectability; and at the last general election, the names of 60 Randalls were found on the list of voters. The original Christian Name John was perpetuated in four of the first eight families, and as the boys grew up into manhood it became necessary to add another word suggested by the occupation, or some association, etc., in order to distinguish one John from another. They were all good men and true, but the John who was best known in Church and State was the son of Isaac and Anne. He was the eldest of the children and was known as John of Isaac, and also because he was the owner and captain of a schooner called the Mariner, he was familiarly known as "Mariner John." He was a leading man in Ship Cove and was largely instrumental in getting the two places—Ship Cove and Robin Hood officially united under the present name of Port Rexton. In his later years he became increasingly known in Newfoundland, and is remembered to-day as the captain of the Church Ship of the Diocese, in the days of Bishop Jones. In 1868 he was married to Mary, daughter of Thomas and Catherine Fowlow (and sister of Capt. Robert Fowlow, who also is married to Captain Randall's sister). Captain John Randall, and his wife, Mary, were the first persons married in the old church that stood on Half-Way Hill, between Trinity East and Fort Rexton. He died a few years ago and is survived by his wife and the following children:—Capt. Isaac Robert Randall, M.H.A., Capt. John Randall, Capt. Egbert Randall, Mrs. Hodder, Mrs. Shears, Mrs. Cooper, and Mary F. Randall. The boys of Captain Isaac Robert and Capt. John, represent the fifth generation, and probably there is a sixth generation represented in the line of some of the other children of the original John and Patience. There are several interesting events in connection with each of the other seven of those children, which I should refer to if I were writing a more exhaustive history than that of the outline that has been called for.

SHIPPING PAPERS IN TRINITY, 1811—1880.

I have already given some extracts from Shipping Papers of 1840. They were of local interest, as the names in them were familiar to the older people of Trinity, and some of the recollections brought back to them recollections of comedy and tragedy that well might be forgotten. Since I wrote them I have found another volume of the same kind of documents dating from 1811 to 1820. They are the same stereotyped printed agreements with the necessary blanks for names, wages, etc., as those of 1840; but the names of the persons are largely unknown to the oldest of our people and are uninteresting, other than same peculiarities they contain. For example: Cornelius Scully was hired as a splitter and his wages were thirty-three pounds and one blue jacket, lined.

Edward Richards, as a carpenter, was to receive twenty pounds, three pounds of Bobes Tea and three gallons of molasses. Edward Meagher, as a fisherman, was to receive twenty-one pounds and a spotted rag. Thomas Cavill, as a fisherman, was to receive twenty-eight pounds and one man's common hat. Evidently Mr. Nelson knew the individual peculiarities of the men; hence, whilst John Kennedy, as a cooper, was to receive thirty-six pounds providing that he abstained from all kinds of intoxicating liquors; Thomas Drake as a blacksmith was to receive thirty-eight pounds, and six gallons of rum. James Dwyer, as the Master of a sealing schooner was to receive nine pounds for every seal landed, in addition to thirty-six pounds wages.

TRADESMEN IN TRINITY A HUNDRED YEARS AGO.

In looking over the names of the cooper and blacksmiths in Trinity in those days, I find, that both at Garland's and Slade's, the great majority of them were Irishmen. Doubtless this was a result of the heavy export trade of Ireland in pork, butter, etc. Hundreds of tons of this came to Newfoundland every year, besides that which went to other parts of the world. This called for barrels, and the result was a demand for coopers in Ireland. They were fine tradesmen, as was evident from the well-made barrels, and other packages in which the pork and butter came to us. With the heavy requirements of barrels, casks, etc., in those days in Newfoundland, in connection with its export trade, coopers were in demand in Trinity. Those who came to us from Ireland found profitable employment, whilst we, as a community, secured some fine tradesmen. I can recall the names of at least twenty coopers who were Irishmen, but I mention just a few of them of whom I heard my father refer to. John Power was the Master Cooper at Garland's, and my father learned the trade from him.

Denis Kitt, of Trinity East (who married a widow Jones) was a well known cooper, and ever since nearly all the Jones men have been, and still are coopers. James Roach was a well known cooper in Trinity sixty years ago, and from him Mr. Pittman learned the trade.

William Power was one of the coopers at Slade's and from him James Coe and others learned the trade. Robert Lawlor (an Irishman's son) of Trinity East was a cooper, and his sons worked in the shop with him, and one, Martin, in a cooper to-day. James Ludrigan was Master-Cooper at Slade's in 1840; and John Pinn was blacksmith there at the same time. Thus, whilst nearly all the coopers were Irishmen; nearly all the sail-makers, riggers and ship-builders, were Englishmen. There were no "handy men" doing such work in those days. Every man was a tradesman and a good one at that.

Obituary.

JENS JENSEN.

"Died at Tucson, Arizona, on April 8th, 1923, Jens William Jensen, Deacon of the Missionary District of South Dakota. Mr. Jensen was a native of Newfoundland who served with the Nfld. troops at Gallipoli. Notwithstanding severe wounds and other terrible experiences, his heart was bent on entering the Ministry, but he got no further than the deaconate and was able to do but little active service. A courageous soul and a loving disciple of his Master, he was one of the martyrs of the war. He was buried at Tucson on April 18th. May he rest in peace in the presence of the Captain of his soul."

The above notice is taken from the "Living Church" of April 28th, and refers to the brother of Capt. Phillip Jensen, to whose untiring efforts Jensen's Camp was mainly due. The deceased was a native of Hr. Breton and served with "Ours" in Gallipoli.

The Jaquette and overblouse will be worn as much as ever this Fall. Fancy materials will be popular.

My Favorite Nightmare.

FAMOUS MEN TELL OF THEIR HAUNTING DREAMS.

Distinguished men contribute their experiences to a remarkable symposium on "Haunting Dreams" to the April number of the Strand Magazine. Many of them have the recurring dream about the fear of losing a train which Mr. John St. Louis Strachey described in his recently published autobiography. He said: "I am worried by the sense of not being able to pack in time to catch my train, or else I am compelled to go back to Oxford and try to pass an examination under impossible and humiliating conditions."

SIR OLIVER LODGE.

Sir Oliver Lodge says that his usual nightmare relates to the losing of trains. He goes on to say: "Another recurrent dream used to trouble me at the beginning of Term, namely, that I had forgotten a lecture. Sometimes I found myself apparently listening to a distant noise which, it gradually dawned on me, was made by the students stamping in impatience; but in hurrying, in an obstructed manner, to the theatre, I found them just dispersed. This may have happened in real life, but it certainly happened in dreams, and waking was a relief."

Mr. G. B. Burgin, the novelist, specializes in flying dreams:—

"I built a flying machine of my own invention, make wings fastened with something more durable than wax, and have surprising adventures in procuring the materials to fasten the machine to me. It always assumes the shape of a swallow-tailed butterfly, and I start gaily off, visiting all sorts of wondrous places, and I am always, or nearly always, invisible to the human eye."

"But once a blind man heard by whirring wings, stretched forth a startled and motored hand, and crushed my hand in. Just as I was on the point of giving up the ghost I fell to the ground, felt a sharp pain, and woke to find a small brother dancing round me, and gleefully shouting: "I've got him by the toe in my steel bird-trap!"

Mr. William Archer, dramatic critic and playwright, says:—

"I dream that I am going to play a part on the stage. I am quite happy about it, and anticipate a great success—when suddenly, just as the curtain is rung up, I realize to my consternation that I have totally omitted to learn my lines. I may add that since my boyhood I have never acted, even as an amateur; nor have I ever felt the smallest ambition to go on the stage."

MR. BERNARD SHAW.

Mr. Bernard Shaw says: "My experience is practically the same as Strachey's, except that instead of his occasional examination ordeal I find myself madly about to walk on to the stage to perform a part of which I do not know a word, or to sing an operatic role without knowing a note of it."

"This is clearly a variation of the examination dream. No examination could cause me the slightest anxiety, partly because the result would be a foregone conclusion (in the negative), and partly because I have no ambition in that direction. These dreams are overwork dreams. With me, as I gather, with Mr. Strachey, they are nearly always connected with travelling, and are confined to railway and hotel difficulties. Motoring never comes into them."

Mr. Shaw's experience suggests that a certain novel phase of life, such as motoring must have had a pretty long run before it enters into the substance of our dreams."

SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE.

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle has never had a recurring dream. "But," he adds, "I have several times had prophetic dreams, exact in details. In sleep the soul is freed and has enlarged knowledge. This it endeavours to pass on to the body, but it seldom succeeds. When it does, it is just at the moment between sleeping and waking."

"The dream which most often recurs to me," says Mr. E. Temple Thurston, "is that of finding myself in the streets of New York, quite alone, entirely friendless, without any possibility of returning to my own country. My sufferings on these occasions are not worth recording, but they are very acute. What relation this dream has to fact I cannot say, as I have never been in America."—John O'London's Weekly.

The sleeveless blouse will be in great demand this Summer, especially in white.

Among the Boxers.

"I'VE GOT A PUNCH, TOO," SAYS GIBBONS.

ST. PAUL, Min., May 9.—Everyone is asking me what prompted me to sign up with Jack Dempsey for a heavyweight championship bout in Shelby, Mont., on July 4.

It seems to be general opinion that I am sure to lose or those questions would not be put to me.

Everyone has the ambition to reach the top of his own profession and for years I have had the hope of becoming the heavyweight champion. So when the opportunity offered itself and I felt that I was ready for the best bid I could make, I accepted.

ALSO HAS PUNCH.

They tell me Dempsey is one of the most powerful hitters in the ring. I think my record of thirty victories in thirty-four bouts by knockouts will be sufficient proof that I also have a punch. The force of the punch doesn't mean so much as it counts just as much to put an opponent down for ten seconds as it does for a hundred and ten.

"It is said that I am a better boxer than Dempsey and I believe I am. But I am going in to fight Dempsey and not to box him. For three years I have been pointing for this chance. I never bothered Dempsey with challenges and I made no effort to get a match with him until I felt certain that the time had arrived and that I was in my best possible form. I feel that way now and for that reason I accepted the bout."

SAYS DEMPSEY TO RETIRE IN 8 MONTHS.

NEW YORK, May 10.—After ridding the field of all contenders and bagging more than a cool million in cash in the next eight months, Jack Dempsey will retire from the ring and become a coal baron, intimates of the heavyweight champion say.

Jack Kearns, who handles the business affairs of Jack Dempsey, the fighter and William Harrison Dempsey the coal baron, will not say that his charge is contemplating a retirement, but he does admit:

"After we have taken Gibbons, Willard and Firpo there will be no others to fight and we will have to occupy our time with other matters."

Harry Wills, the big colored fighter, will be permitted to join the list of victims and contributors to the Dempsey-fortune if he so chooses. Kearns added. The only other name long talked of by Dempsey-Wills backers, he said, is a promoter who sums the contract that the two men a long time ago.

Some doubt exists here that he would have the opportunity of time to raise a mighty heavy discrimination. With the exception of those who might profit by a Dempsey-Wills match, very few colored heavyweight as a serious contender for the championship. It has even been reported that he has decided to quit the game.

CARPENTIER TO QUIT SIKI BOIT, SEPT. 14.

PARIS, May 9.—George Carpentier's bout with Battling Siki on September 16 next will be his last according to L'Auto. "I leave the ring for good," Carpentier is quoted as saying.

Georges is scheduled to fight Beckett on June 14, but the condition of his hands may prevent the meeting.

"I hurt my left hand in the round of the Nilles fight, and right too in landing the right which ended the bout," Carpentier is reported.

According to present plans will fight Mike McTigue in London on July 14.

WEEK-END NOTES.

CHAPTER XX.

OLD TIME SEALING CONDITIONS.

It was in the sixties that steam was introduced into Newfoundland, and began to develop in the different industries of the country. At that time the sealing voyage may be said to have been at its height, and a very large fleet of sailing vessels were engaged in its prosecution; not only from the port of St. John's, but from ports of Conception Bay, such as, Bay Roberts, Brigus, Harbor Grace and Carbonear and also from Trinity. The total catch of that time usually averaged some four hundred thousand seals, and all the ports from which the ships sailed had large manufacturing plants in which the oil was rendered, and in due time shipped to market. There was therefore a much larger industry in those outport centres than is possible at present.

The ships engaged in the sealing voyage at that time were chiefly of the brig and brigantine rig, with several topsail schooners, known as beaver-hat-men. Among the largest ships, Capt. Keen's barque Barbara was prominent, and her record was a very successful one, and she was the subject of many a song and chorus. Amongst the brigs there were the Hannah, and Beards, the William, the Glenavry, and Kate Cummings, and others. Amongst the brigantines the foremost names were the Leader, the Dawn, the Sea Flower, the Balclutha, the Glenora, the Oban, and the Fanny Bloomer. The brigantines were fitted with main topsails. These vessels and many others of their class were amongst the most successful of the fleet, and it was not uncommon for the crews to share forty and fifty, and as high as sixty pounds each for the voyage.

It must of course be remembered that the sealing voyage then occupied a much longer period of time, than it does at present; and while those sums stated represented what was called "a big bill," there was nevertheless a great deal of work performed and many hardships endured. The ships sailed earlier than at present, as the first of March was the proper date of sailing. The ships began to be put in order in February and the crews did all the work gratis. The crew usually numbered about fifty or sixty men, and they generally had to ballast the vessel, to pound her off, and get her in order; and bend the sails, and sometimes saw her out. Under such conditions not many would be clear of the voyage before the middle of April, and very many much later. The hardships endured by those men can scarcely be imagined by the present generation. True it is that the voyage still has its dangers; and it also necessitates a certain amount of hardihood, but even those who now prosaically the voyage have but a dim conception of what the conditions were fifty and sixty years ago. Men would not do to-day what their forefathers did; but such was the custom of the times, not only at the sealfishery, but in the industrial world generally, and bare armed labor paid a tremendous price for bread.

The introduction of steam has entirely changed these conditions, and the application of machinery has relieved labor of its drudgery. There was of course strong prejudice against the introduction of steam in the sealing voyage, and many people predicted that it would spell the ruin of the voyage, and kill out the smaller ships. Whether those people spoke prophetically, or from mere prejudice may be debatable, but their fears have been realized, and the fleet of sealing ships has disappeared; and the voyage is almost of the past; but then there was no other way out of it. Inventions can not be hindered, and like all other centres of industry, and like all other countries, Newfoundland availed of what was considered a better and more expeditious means of prosecution.

To the honour of our merchant princes of the sixties, be it said that they were ever ready to engage in what seemed advanced methods for the prosecution of the sealing voyage. These men were very enterprising, hence, it came about that they invested heavily in the steamers, which gradually supplanted the sailing ships, and which when at their height, numbered almost forty. There was certainly a great deal of wealth made by the prosecution of the sealing voyage in the fifties and sixties and seventies, and even since that time. But whether there was a more even division under the steamers is another debatable question. A great many of the captains who prosecuted the voyage with the sailing vessels were the sole owners of their ships, and they represented a class of men who were well to do, and very independent. Those men were a valuable asset to the country, and the homesteads which they built in the different outports, as well as in St. John's, are monuments to their independence and enterprise. Brave and fearless were those men, and their record, though never fully written, and therefore but partially known; and it may be said that future historians will discover some of this data, and tell to future generations the history of the Vikings, who, in the middle of the Victorian age, commanded our ships amidst the dangers of ice and storm.

SIDE TALKS.

By Ruth Cameron.

FAME AND GREATNESS.

Does fame entitle one to special privileges of temperament? We were discussing a note that had been written by a certain famous woman; and that seemed to be susceptible of various interpretations. One thought the note was the result of an odd sense of humour which we did not share; another still said that it was merely ungracious. But the question, after all, was whether the certain famous woman's fame should of itself entitle her to forgiveness for what in a lesser personage would certainly have been considered factious at best.

Speaking Theoretically—
You may say, as some of us did, that famous people are usually very busy and preoccupied, and haven't the time to be scrupulously careful of the way they express themselves or their treatment of others in unimportant matters. That they are a bit "queer" anyway, and we ordinary mortals must overlook it. Or you may say, as others of us who were discussing the certain famous woman's note did, that those who have travelled the road of experience to the heights of fame might be expected to have learned kindness, tact, graciousness and generosity on the way.

Should we include in our appreciation of greatness a permit to use "temperament" as a cloak for selfishness? Or should we demand of greatness the bigness to be worthy of our appreciation and admiration? What do you think?
"But she is a very great and famous woman," one of our group argued, in extenuation of the social blunder. "All the more reason she should know better," another insisted. And then one who had not spoken before said quietly: "It seems to me—though I do not know her—that she must be merely famous, and not really great, after all."

The Difference.

And there's the point, perhaps! Fame is sometimes just a fling of fate that gives a talent or a bit of cleverness to some lucky one as a key to high place and rich reward (temporarily, at least). But greatness is true bigness—real bigness—real worth. That is why famous folk often disappoint us, I think, while the really great ones rarely do.

Fame may be arrogant; it is often conceited, inflated with its own importance, and consequently humiliates others. But greatness, don't you think, is usually humble. Only the great know how much there is to be known, and how little of it all any one of us can ever learn. Fame has often been lucky and had a very easy time of it. But greatness has had to live and work and suffer and learn—and that is why greatness is usually sympathetic, tolerant and helpful. Don't you agree with me?

If one is going to draw the fine distinction between fame and greatness in this respect, might one not say that famous people are those who demand privileges and distinctions; while great people are those who do not expect them, but who accept them graciously and gratefully when they are accorded.

The S.S. "Nevarra" has brought us a large cargo of "Westmoreland" double-screened GAS COAL. This coal is mined in Pennsylvania, and is unexcelled for Gas Works operations. The coke is of very high quality, and is a fine substitute for hard coal. Our Ammonium Sulphate is the best fertiliser extant. We are prepared for increased business, and cordially invite inquiries. A Habit That is Spreading.

BY THE RT. HON. LORD MORRIS, P.C., K.C.M.G., K.C.

Industry is steadily groping its way towards a new ideal. No one engaged in it sincerely claims that under its present constitution its results represent the highest possible achievement. The expression of conflicting opinions of extremists on one side and the other reflect a steady growth of general dissatisfaction. Everyone connected with industry feels the necessity for a new orientation or aim, and real difference of opinion exists only as to the method to be adopted. The common interest as consumer of all the parties to successful trade—of Capital, Management and Labour—emphasises the need for real co-ordination, and for the formulation of a policy which will hold the balance fairly between the varying interests involved in industry.

On one essential to real progress all parties are in entire agreement. Improved relations between employers and employed are undoubtedly one of the greatest needs of our time. With the industrial machine growing not only in size and power, but also in complexity, the old relations which existed when industry was in its infancy are almost impossible of recapture. The gradual drifting apart of the employer and his workers has led to innumerable and lamentable disputes. These have arisen, not perhaps so much from any inherent falling on either side, but rather from misunderstanding of personal motives and mistrust of the ultimate aims of industry. The object to be aimed at is the devising of a really effective means of bridging the gulf which unfortunately exists between employers and employed to-day. How this is to be achieved is a matter of growing discussion. The support given to such bodies as the Industrial League and Council, whose avowed object is the improvement of relations between employers and employed, indicates the interest which enlightened men on both sides take in this serious problem.

The difficulties which lie in the way of reconciliation between employers and employed are great. The misunderstandings of generations have increased these difficulties. Yet on both sides in industry are men of vision who lament the sundering of two parties whose interests are so closely allied, and who see in the gulf between them one of the gravest dangers to the future of a country which depends entirely on the expansion and efficiency of its manufacturing industries. The approach between Labour and Capital involves the sifting of personal interests in the search for communal benefit, but once the first step has been taken, far-reaching and significant development is certain. All experience of the many conferences which have been needed for the settlement of disputes since the war proves that some such means must be adopted if the many problems with which industry and trade abound are to be solved to the public advantage, and to the gain of those most intimately concerned in industry. Discussions on highly controversial topics have shown most clearly how small is the real difference between the two sides, though lack of intercommunication and confidence has magnified it until it seemed almost an unbridgeable gulf. The fact that such conferences have almost invariably found a satisfactory solution under highly unfavourable conditions strengthens one's confidence in the potentiality of conferences which start under more favourable auspices.

When the conference habit spreads, as it is bound to spread, into every corner of industry in this and other countries, Capital and Labour will find that their interests are really one. Those who have the direction of industry in their hands by virtue of their possession of the machinery of production will find how vitally important it is that they should have the assistance, both physical and mental, of the men whose labour enables that machinery to produce the goods that we have been taught to expect as necessities of life. Those who work the machines will realize that without wise direction and foresight neither the machinery nor the raw materials which feed it would have been available for them to use. Without capital, labour's efforts are wasted. Without labour, capital becomes a mere accumulation of useless buildings and idle machinery. It has been one of the greatest failings of industry that those who direct its various interests are wont to be ultra-cautious in regard to reform. There has been considerable reluctance on both sides to initiate fresh processes of manufacture and distribution, chiefly because of a suspicion that any change would be resisted actively or passively by the other side. There has been no disposition to approach such proposals in such an amicable manner as to ensure their ultimate success. If by constant association employers and employed could be brought to look at such matters from a communal point of view, it would be impossible to conceive a limit to the reforms which could be introduced into industrial practice.

We cannot afford to lose any opportunity of increasing our industrial efficiency. Conditions of world-wide competition demand that we should strive with all our might to hold our own. And as long as our efforts in that direction are hampered on every hand by unnecessary squabbles between employers and employed, we are losing ground which we must retain if Great Britain is to keep her place in world trade.

The Call to Prayer.

(By Major H. Rayne.)
This little British Somaliland town of Zella lies still asleep; it is nearly 4 a.m. From the mosque comes clearly the call to prayer.

Wake! Muslims, awake.
Allah-h-h-h is the greatest.
I bear witness that Mahomed is the prophet.
Come to prayer. Come to success.
Prayer is better than sleep.
Allah is the greatest.
La ilaha ill-Allah. (There is no God but Allah).

The pigeons grumble; the servants bestir themselves; there is a bright moon; I, too, shall rise and watch for dawn from my high verandah.

Below, in the compound, my men make the ablutions necessary after sleep and before prayer enjoined by the Koran.
The hands are washed, mouth and nostrils cleansed; now the face after that the right arm, then the left.
The wet hands, joined, are drawn across the head. Last of all the feet right foot first, are bathed.
Needless of my curious eyes, they will pray here in the open. Has not the Holy Prophet said that the whole earth is a mosque?

They stand in line, facing Mecca, both hands raised to the ears; Adam, the cook, bent veiled in Koran-lore, acts as Imam, or leader.

The prayers proceed; the hands are dropped, right upon left, to the breast; again to the knees as heads are bent and lowered. "Allahnak-bar," the deep voices softened and reverent.

Prostrate—toes, knees, hands, forehead press the ground—they call upon Allah for protection. Sitting, they reflect on I know not what.
Prostrate again, they glorify their Maker. Kneeling, they pray for the Holy Prophet, themselves, and brother Muslims.

"Peace and the mercy of Allah be on you!"
The prayers are finished; and so every morning of their lives, whatever ill they do, they never neglect their prayers.

The pigeons are wide awake now; I call for early tea; the servants scatter cheerfully to obey the Christian-Islam orders all men to respect those set in authority.

I stand reflecting on what I have witnessed until I realize that I have missed the sunrise and allowed my tea to get cold.—Daily Mail.

Large, quaintly shaped Summer hats are in such shades as bright red, yellow, royal, and copper tones. Twill frocks use hand painting as an effective decoration. Braids are also popular for this type of dress. Summer hats of soft, dark straw are trimmed with bands and long, graceful streamers of white crepe.

Friendly Football Arranged.

FELDIANS VS. S.S. GLENCORRIE.
A friendly football game has been arranged to take place on next Monday night between our local Feldian team and an eleven of the ship's crew of S.S. Glencorrie. The match will be played at Calver's Field. Kick-off at 7.15 p.m. The latter team are said to have excellent material in their ranks, several of which are soccer players of repute, having figured on the gridiron in Newcastle-on-Tyne. The Glencorrie's team won two games during the past week, trimming a local aggregation by a score of 2-1, and 6-1. The try-out with the Feldian team should be a good game and the final outcome will be awaited with interest. The Glencorrie's team has been selected as follows:—Goal, Goddard; full backs, Henderson, Stuart; halves, Douglas, Maxwell, Bateson; forwards, Jack Hunter, Stumps Mulrhead, Profit, (Capt.) Norman and Hallyard. Reserves, Williamson, Watts, McDavid.

A Wistful Girl's Timid Smile

Her beauty, dainty grace and lissome figure stirred the pulse of a rich nobleman whose hirelings stole her away from her blind sister and took her to his midnight fete. A handsome young aristocrat lost his heart, avenged her with his sword, took her to safety. She met another—a leader of the People. He, too, loved her. The fatal duel in the midst of the gorgeous splendors of a regal orgy as thousands of the starving rabble clamored at the palace gates; the love of the young aristocrat for the country-bred Henriette, and the love she inspired in the heart of Danton, leader of the uprising against the French Monarchy—These things, each punctuated by a life, formed a chain of circumstances that quickened the seditious People into open and armed rebellion—that brought the Fall of the Bastille—the "Feast of Reason" when all Paris went mad—the "Dance of the Carmagnole" when woman led the wild revel. Then came the Commune—the Reign of Terror—the Guillotine—the downfall of Danton, leader—the sentence of death—the reprieve—Peace! And so, all because of Love, a King was deposed, a great monarchy fell, a great republic came into being.

Woman Suffrage.

"THE GOOD OLD DAYS—AND NOW"

TRENCHANT REPLY TO CRITICISMS, AND FORCEFUL APPEAL FOR THE LIBERTIES WOMEN THROUGHOUT THE EMPIRE ENJOY. BOERS AND NEWFOUNDLANDERS EXCEPTED.

One would expect a prominent city clergyman—one who hails from the great sister Dominion where women vote—to be the least little bit broad-minded; but alas no. We find him using last Sunday, "Mother's Day" as an opportunity to bore his listeners with the narrowest kind of a discourse. He evidently thinks a woman's only reason for existence is to bear children and to do the cooking. But the thinking woman of today knows that it is not enough to prepare children for the world, but feels it her duty to prepare the world for the children. She wants to ascertain whether the meat and milk she gives her family comes from tuberculous animals or not. If she has to buy bakers' bread she wants to make sure that it has not been dropped into the streets and handled by unclean hands. One would expect a man abreast of the times and show how the life of our Colony is hampered and hindered because the mothers of our land have not the vote.

"Equal Rights—Woman suffrage may be alright," he cries, "but give me the good old days when the house was chock full of children and mothers did all the cooking! When sometimes twelve, sometimes fourteen guests—all dear friends—would drop in to dinner. Oh! Those were the happy, happy days! And how the children used to love to help! Well, perhaps they did, but wasn't it rather rough on poor mother? She was supposed to have enough intelligence to prepare a meal for fourteen unexpected guests at a moment's notice, but as for gridding about—neglecting her home and children for five minutes once in every four years, whilst she cast her vote, why it would mean the downfall of the home, and women would have to come down off the pedestal that men have made for them. How sad! How extremely sad! And one would think that the Reverend gentleman would let poor mother have a little rest after supper, but not a bit of it. Let mother do all the cooking, stretch the table out—fill it with guests, and then in the evening, turn off the gramophone and listen instead to mother and the kids stinging. By all means let her sing, we say, if she has any song left in her! Could anything be sweeter? he asks emotionally. Well, really not in this household. You see we're awfully fond of mothers and all that sort of thing, but we simply couldn't listen to her stinging. We couldn't stand it, and all the kids take after mother. We'd much rather listen to Caruso or Galli-Curci! Oh my! " "Could anything be sweeter than the smile of a happy healthy baby?" asks the clergyman. And that is what every woman in Newfoundland will agree with him. That is what we suffragists are working for. So that every little child in Newfoundland may be happy and smiling. The woman who is opposed to Woman Suffrage is a traitor to her race. Women Suffrage is the root of every Reform Social Service—Girl Guides (why teach girls to be good citizens when by the law of Newfoundland they are classed with imbeciles and criminals) Child Welfare, etc., etc., are all branches of the Woman Franchise Movement. We are told, "A woman's place is in the home," by women who are never in their homes. The thousand and one societies and clubs in this town all have their women's auxiliaries. What for? To raise funds. There is never any objection raised to a woman's being out of her home all day as long as she is working for these Societies. Women work hard, cook and brew and make a lot of money but they are not asked how it shall be spent. The men take it and spend it as they think fit. How many women are there on the various school and church boards, and how many churches and schools would survive without the Women's auxiliaries? An interest in politics goes hand in hand with the welfare of the home. In St. John's women property owners have the Municipal vote, but the suffragists are working for the Parliamentary vote. Many splendid mothers own no property but could vote wisely at elections—as wisely as we suggest, as the seventy-five unfortunates from the Poor Asylum or as wisely as the Chinese laundrymen. What kind of justice allows this to continue whilst the women of our country have not the vote. Illiterate men and women should be given a certain time to learn to read and write. There are more illiterate men than women in Newfoundland. Corrupt politicians, vice interests, and all the forces that drag down, fear the woman's voice in politics for the reason that they know she would strip her powers against them. Straightforward representatives welcome the woman in politics because they have nothing to fear, and they know that the women will make every effort to cut out graft and squandering. Women are incensed that they and their families are taxed so outrageously on everything they eat and wear so that politicians and their families may travel on the most expensive steamers, and live abroad in the most expensive hotels instead of giving honest service at home in the departments for which they are paid; $80,000 for scrip! If mothers had the vote some of this money would be spent on larger schools. Every school is overcrowded. Children are packed 50 in one room with one teacher. If women had the vote, some of this money would be spent on machines to clean up our filthy streets. Spring after spring we wade about ankle-deep in the mire and the only attempts to clean up are made by a few men with small garden hoses. As soon as the sun dries it up we are smothered with clouds of disease-spreading dust which blows into every crevice of our homes making five times as much work as is necessary to keep them clean. Watch our little babies out in perambulators. See the clouds of dust that cover the poor mites from every passing motor. If women had the vote, Miss Hurst—our child welfare representative—would not have the door of a Government department slammed in her face. She would be listened to with respect and her wishes carried out, because a vote means power. A vote is the greatest possession anyone can have because it safeguards his rights.

How absurd it is to hear people long for the good old days! This is 1923. Why long for the days when women lighted and had a dozen or more children. Look in the old cemeteries and see the rows of these small unfortunates died in infancy because these were the days when it was a sin to kill a fly—"poor little things, their day is short enough." Grandmas used to say as she hung little clover balls up to the ceiling for them. The days when milk and molasses remained uncorroded. The days before chloroform and anti-toxin and vaccine, when whole cities were wiped out by diphtheria and smallpox. The days before electricity and sewerage, before motors and trains and aeroplanes. When it took six weeks to cross the Atlantic! In those days daughters stayed at home and spun and made randles, etc., etc. They did not get to school or business or train for amuse. But in 1923 they do, and sending them to school and to earn their own living has taught them to reason or think. With the invention of machinery man took woman's work out of the home and woman began to follow her work. The invention of machinery gave women leisure to go to school. When we think of the short number of years it is since the first woman entered college—not a hundred years ago—the marvel is that women have done so well. If men think conditions here cannot be improved upon and are content with things as they are we women decidedly are NOT, and if help does not come from within, the eight-thousand Newfoundland women who signed the franchise petition are determined that it will come from without. The Women's International Suffrage Alliance is meeting at present in Rome, and the eyes of the world are turned on our little Dominion.

What a wonderful opportunity for the Liberal party with "the Premier worth while"—to bring Newfoundland into line with the rest of the world and grant this Reform, the greatest Reform that Newfoundland will ever know—franchise her women and remove the stigma that now rests upon her of being the only one of Britain's Colonies (except that of the Boers) where the women have not the ballot.

A Cool Kitchen.

JUST TURN A VALVE.
The Oliver Oil-Gas Burner makes cooking in summer a pleasure instead of a task. Gives heat when you want it, and only when you need it. Does away with coal and wood—cheaper. Makes your stove or range a gas stove. No fire to make. No ashes, dirt, smoke, odor, chopping, shoveling—scurrying coal or wood. Makes your stove bake better, cleaner, quicker. Thousands in use over 10 years. Doesn't change your stove, just sits in fire box, absolutely safe. Lasts lifetime. Makes gas from coal oil (kerosene). Saves money, time, labor. Burners to fit all kinds of stoves. Call and see it demonstrated at 304, Prescott Street. If you cannot come tell us and we will demonstrate it in your own home. may12,13

EARLY MARKET CABBAGE—This variety is praised by all who have grown it. It is uniformly to type, is marvellous—every row and every head in the row looks as nearly alike as if all had been turned out of a mould; and the yield per acre is greater than any other variety. We use this variety on our farm, and usually have the first Cabbage on the market. Price $8.00 per lb.

DANISH BALLHEAD CABBAGE—This type of Winter Cabbage has unequalled keeping qualities. Produces large, round, compact heads, almost as hard as iron. Weighing, when trimmed, fully one-fourth more than any other cabbage of equal size; consequently it keeps in choice condition until Spring. Price $2.50 per lb.
