BRIDGETOWN, AUGUST 21, 1878.

FARMERS' LOOKOUT.

It may now be said that the moridian of Summer is past, and that we are approximating to the autumnal season, when the fruits of the earth will be matured and stored for use during the long, cheerless months of another Winter. The verdure and glories of Summer are fast fading. The hay-making season is pretty well over, and the harvesters are already busy in the yellow grain-fields. Perhaps never since the first settlement of the country has it produced such an abundant crop of hay as that which our farmers have been busy securing during the last five or six weeks. Every barn is filled to its utmost capacity with the bountiful yield of our exuberant meadows. In the present supply of cattle fodder, the "oldest inhabitant," remembers nothing like it, and the prospect now is, that if Providence vouchsafes the boon of timely showers, the after-math will afford ample facilities for rich autumnal grazing—even till the snow flies.

Our grain-fields, too, are yielding satisfactorily. Oats, barley and rye, which are now being harvested, have fully realized in yield all that was expected. The area of wheat sown is far less than it should have been. The ravages of the weevil, in by-gone years have been so destructive, that most of our farmers have been discouraged in their efforts to raise wheat; and therefore few of them sowed it at all. The destroying insect, already referred to, has nearly, if not altogether, disappeared, and the wheat, though sown on a small scale, looks finely just now. Indian-corn looks remarkably promising at present, and unless it be injured by an early frost, the yield will be above the average. Potatoes are far from looking as well as they did a year ago, and the crop will probably be light. It is too early in the season to say much about the probable yield of other underground vegetables.

Some of our orchards were so seriously infested with caterpillars, worms and other ravenous insects in June, that the boughs of the apple trees were entirely shorn of their leaves, and of course they are now fruitless. But most of our orchardists are congratulating themselves on the prospect of a fair crop of apples. Some of the early varieties are drawing near maturity.

Taking the season all in all, and judging from present appearances, it may be regarded as a year of fair agricultural productiveness. The promised "seed-time and harvest" will be crowned with satisfactory results. The vocation of the husbandman, taking one year with another, is unfailingly successful. It is not subject to those vicissitudes—those "ups and downs"—which are experienced by those engaged in trade and other hazardous enterprises. The farmer's life, though toil some, is comparatively calm and free of perplexing disappointments and anxieties.

"Happy the man, whose wish and care A few paternal acres bound, Content to breathe his native air In his own ground; Whose herds with milk, whose fields with bread, Whose flocks supply him with attire; Whose trees in Summer yield him shade, In Winter fire."

SHADOWS CAST BEFORE.

The great Napoleon, in undertaking conquest and the subversion of surrounding nationalities, was open and demonstrative. He did not conceal his purposes by artful pretensions. His policy and movements were not ambushed behind professed peaceful and friendly relations. His designs were not covered by diplomatic duplicity, and fatuity of amicable utterances. No man ever lived, who was more thoroughly endowed with isolated individuality. During his supremacy in France, his single will was the national policy. He asked no counsel. Consultation with others was a precaution which his proud spirit ignored. Conquest was his object—the means of gratifying his far-reaching ambition and love of power. Of him Byron said:

"His name was empire, and his stakes were thrones— His table earth—his dice were human bones."

For a time—though brief it was—the policy of France centred in him. The policy of Russia is also conquest. It has been so for several generations. No matter who may have occupied the throne, the lust for territorial acquisitions have been the same. This object in view in the traditional centre, around which state matters at the Court of St. Petersburg have long revolved. This national fixity of purpose, descended successfully from Czar to Czar. The rebuffs which Russia has encountered from time to time, have not impaired her steadfastness in adhering to the policy to which we have referred. The humiliation, to which she was subjected at the Crimea twenty-three years ago, and the recent rebuke which her grasping designs have lately received at the Berlin Congress, have not altered or weakened the tendencies of her yearning for enlargement of territory.

In her whole history, her pretext for invasion have been preferred in the language of plausibility. Her armies, according to her own showing, were ever sent forth in the interests of humanity. To redress alleged wrongs and to uphold the claims of religion (her own creed of course) she invades a neighboring country with as little scruple or remorse as does a midnight burglar break into a dwelling on an errand of robbery. If she was to be believed, in her invasion of Turkey, she was as innocent as "Mary's little lamb, whose fleece was white as snow."

It has long been suspected that Russia has fixed a covetous eye on British India; and that silently and somewhat secretly she has been extending her influence in that direction, with the ulterior design of some day pouncing, like a hungry wolf, upon Hindostan. The following telegrams corroborate the suspicion to which we allude:—

BOMBAY, Aug. 12.—The Indian Government has received information confirming the report of the arrival of a Russian mission at Kabul, with letters from the Czar. The mission was received with high honors. It is believed that the Russian desire to establish themselves on the north-west of Afghanistan. Their representatives at Kabul speak of their desire to open up trade with Afghanistan. They will visit Herat and the western frontier.

An English mission, escorted by cavalry, will leave Peshawar for Kabul in September. LONDON, Aug. 14.—In the Commons last night Hon. Robert Bourke, replying to an interrogatory, stated that it was impossible for the Government to say where the Russian forces in Central Asia were stationed. The Government was quite willing to take the responsibility of sending a mission to Kabul, as it could not regard with indifference what had been passing in Central Asia during the last two months. Sir Stafford Northcote also pointed out that it was always understood that England had a greater interest in Afghanistan than had Russia, and was, therefore, bound to send thither a mission of equal weight and influence with that of Russia.

STILL STORMY.

The Austrian army of occupation, which has entered Bosnia avowedly for pacific purposes, is meeting not only with passive opposition, but it is confronted with serious hostility. Armed organized masses are obstructing the progress of Austria's forces in their march into the heart of a Province which has long been groaning under Turkish oppression. There have already been bloody conflicts between these antagonistic parties. It is not impossible that the Berlin Congress made a grave mistake when they sanctioned the military occupancy of Bosnia by the Austrians. If people are forced into a distasteful arrangement with respect to their own internal affairs and interests, it is virtual subjugation. It would appear from intelligence conveyed in a telegraphic dispatch, that deserters (?) from the Russian army, in considerable numbers, are aiding and abetting the refractory Bosnians. It may therefore be legitimately inferred that Russia is secretly playing a game, which may ultimately bring two of the great European Powers into collision with each other. Each has a powerful and well-disciplined standing army, and a war between them would be a fearful struggle. While we do say that such an event at present is not probable, nevertheless, it is not impossible. National jealousies, rivalries and antipathies cannot always be kept in a state of smothered quiescence, when mutual aggravations are prompting them to an exhibition of warlike antagonism. We fear that the permanent peace of Europe has not been consummated by the Berlin Congress.

Y. M. C. ASSOCIATION.

The annual election of officers for the Bridgetown Y. M. C. Association took place at their last meeting held on Tuesday evening, the 6th inst., when the following brethren were elected:— Brother Thos. Shaw, President; Brothers Falconer and Reed, Vice Presidents; Brother Walter Saunders, Secretary; Brother Charles Hill, Treasurer. On Friday evening the Association held a meeting in the Baptist Church, for the purpose of listening to an address from Brother D. M. Stearns, a young man employed by the executive committee of the Maritime Provinces, to visit and encourage the different associations scattered throughout the Provinces. Brother Stearns is the right man in the right place, and his address on Friday night was well received by those present; and will tend to strengthen the good already done by the association here.

BEAR RIVER.

Our correspondent from Bear River reports that Mr. James F. Rice has just completed and put in operation a thrashing and grist mill. The mills were put up under the direction of Mr. Silas Bishop, and are superior to anything of the kind used here before. Mr. A. D. Parker is building a large and commodious new house, and, when finished, it will add another to the numerous fine ones erected recently. The work upon the new road has been suspended, owing to the want of more money to complete it. Mr. G. M. Dutcher paid a visit, on Sunday, the 11th inst., and delivered an address to the inhabitants of the place, in the Baptist Church. Before the meeting broke up some ninety names were added to the pledge.

THE DUTCHER CLUB.

On Thursday evening last the election of officers for the present quarter of the Bridgetown Dutcher Club resulted in the following Brothers and Sisters of the order being chosen as officers bearers:—Wm. Chipman, Esq., President; Messrs. Thomas Shaw, J. B. Reed, and Wm. McLean, Vice Presidents; Miner Tupper, Esq., Treasurer; Samuel K. Mack, Secretary; Walter Saunders, Assistant Secretary; Rev. Caleb Parker, Chaplain; Robert McLean, J. Avard Morse, James E. Fallow, and Charles Longley, Marshalls. Executive Committee.—Brothers Miner Clark, H. Payson, E. A. Craig, Wm. L. Dodge, B. Neely, Chas. Hill; Sisters Mrs. T. D. Ruggles, Mrs. Gordon, Mrs. Wm. L. Dodge, Miss Jossie Chipman, Miss Annie Tupper, and Miss Annie Randolph.

After the election of officers and the usual business of the Club was disposed of, Dr. Bingay, the President of the Annapolis Club, gave a very interesting address on "Temperance," full of burning, heart-reaching thoughts. As we intend publishing the address in our next issue, we refrain from making any comment at present.

RAIN STORM.

For the past three days almost a continuous down pour of rain has prevailed, and we fear, greatly damaged the crop of grass now being out on the late marshes. The side walks in some parts of this town have suffered badly in consequence of the ditches being filled up with grass and rubbish which has accumulated in them since last fall. The commissioners of streets are sadly to blame in this matter, and a better system should be adopted at the next October sessions of the Peace. Three commissioners for a town this size is too many. As it now stands, the town is laid off into three districts, and three persons appointed to look after the streets, some do the work in the fall, others in the spring, and the sequel is that our streets are not half what they ought to be, and we believe would be, under one paid commissioner to oversee and attend to them properly. We do not wish to be too harsh in this matter; but must say that the commissioner for the west end of the town is very remiss in his duty, in allowing the gutters to remain in the state they are so long.

DIGBY.

Had nothing new or important to write you for last week's issue. This week I am able to report that good fares of line fish are being taken in the Basin, but, as yet, very few herring are taken; and I fear that the prospect looks gloomy in that direction.

On Friday night, the 9th inst., the Dutcher Club was addressed by their beloved founder, Mr. Geo. M. Dutcher. The subject being the "Golden Key to Success." It was ably and elegantly handled. At the close of the meeting a donation of $70.00 was handed the lecturer.

During the months of June and July our town has been visited by quite a number of visitors from the States and elsewhere, who have now taken their departure, and before leaving expressed themselves delighted with Digby as a summer resort.

No great stir is manifested, as yet, in politics, but we presume as the elections are to come off shortly, the friends of the several candidates will wake up and make things lively, if possible, for their opponents.

A Base Ball Club called the "Fearnights" has recently been organized at Inglesvale. It has been reported that the Club at Melvern Square has challenged the Conny to play a match game. If true, the "Fearnights" accept it and will be prepared to play as soon as the statements are corroborated. If untrue, they hereby, in turn, challenge the County for a match game. Communications can be forwarded through the columns of the MONITOR or Journal, or the Secretary of the Club. FRANK H. BEALS, Secretary of Club.—Com.

MARGARETVILLE.—Quite a stir has been manifested during the past week by the arrival and departure of our trading vessels. The following are the arrivals spoken of:—Aug. 12, schr. "Talisman," Capt. Harris, from Boston; 13, "Anna," Capt. Parks, Boston; 16, "Diamond," Capt. Stronach, St. John, N. B.; 18, "Windsor," packet, Capt. Reigh, Windsor.

On the 9th inst., a house situated on Stomach Mountain, owned by Mr. Samuel Nixon, of Nova Scotia, and occupied by Mr. James Cook, was totally destroyed by fire.

READING.—Mrs. J. Billip Manger, the popular New Brunswick eclogueist, will give a reading in Temperance Hall, in this town, on Friday evening next, at 8 o'clock. Admission 25cts. The St. John "News" says of her readings in that city as follows: "The readings were an entertainment thoroughly enjoyable. Mrs. Manger being in capital voice, and rendering her selections from the great Bard of English Poetry, in a quite a masterly manner. The fair reader won golden opinions and high praise for her histrionic abilities, which are unquestionably of a high order."

WEEKLY MONITOR.

LAWRENCE TOWN.—The High School at Lawrence town will reopen this Autumn, with enlarged class-rooms, an enlarged staff of Teachers and more accommodation for boarding; and judging from present appearances, a larger number of pupils. In connection with the school there will be a commercial department.—Com.

Miscellaneous.

— One of the big things of the Paris Exposition is a Chinese giant, who is a trifle over eight feet three inches in height. His name is Chang Yu Hsing.

SUDDEN DEATH. — A very sad death occurred at North Mountain, C. B., on Tuesday last. Miss Mary McMillan, daughter of the late Neil McMillan, an estimable young woman, on returning from a short walk, was suddenly seized with vomiting of blood from the lungs, and in the short space of half an hour was dead, all efforts to prevent the effusion being of no effect. — News of the Week.

SAD ACCIDENT. — We are informed a party of five young men were crossing Bradley's Lake, in a canoe, on Sunday last, in a canoe, and when about five rods from where they intended to land, the canoe sank. Two of the party Michael and Cornelius Conway, aged 14 and 16 years respectively, were drowned. Their bodies were recovered a few hours afterwards. They were sons of Mr. John Conway, who was found drowned near the old Toll Bridge, in this river, some years ago. — Liverpool Advertiser.

STRANGE OCCURRENCE. — We are informed that Miss Mary E. Hill of New Tuscot, after swallowing a mouthful of porridge, eighteen months ago, felt a choking sensation; which, during that time, caused her to suffer terribly. Physicians were called and attended her without success in discovering the cause or relieving the sufferer. Last May an eruption near the trachea formed, which interfered with her natural voice; but on the 19th ult. the head of a large size pin was discovered protruding from the excruciating mass, and during the day it worked itself completely out. The patient is now convalescing and fast regaining her usual health. — Courier.

OTTAWA, Aug. 17. — An extra Canadian Gazette issued to night contains three proclamations, the first orders the dissolution of the 3rd Parliament of the Dominion; the second proclamation orders the calling together of the new Parliament, on the 21st of September; the third proclamation authorizes the issue of writs for the election of a new Parliament. Nominations throughout the Dominion to take place on the 10th September, polling on the 17th.

In Manitoba nominations will be held on the 19th September. The writs for Prince Edward Island and more remote counties leave Ottawa to-day.

EUROPE.

LONDON, Aug. 16. — Parliament was prorogued to-day until the 28th of November. The Queen congratulated Parliament on the conclusion of peace by the Berlin Congress, and the Cyprus treaty is referred to as a guarantee of Turkish independence and a pledge of reform. The conduct of troops is highly praised. It is reported that the Fenian Aherm, under sentence of imprisonment for life at Dartmoor prison, will be released this year. The London correspondent of the Scotsman says the Queen has invited Beaconsfield to visit her at Osborne. The Queen, in her speech proroguing Parliament, attributed the pacific solution of the difficulties in the East largely to the support of Parliament, and believes the peace concluded by the congress at Berlin will be satisfactory and enduring. The independence of Turkey has been secured, the integrity of her territory has been secured, and reforms in her administration pledged by the defensive convention between Her Majesty and the Sultan, in accordance with which Cyprus is occupied by British forces. The Queen praises the spirit and alacrity of the land and naval forces, refers with special satisfaction to the conduct of the Indian army and the loyal attitude of the Indian princes. The Queen declares her relations with all foreign powers continue to be friendly. The speech concluded with a reference to supplies and internal legislation, &c.

LONDON, Aug. 17. — At Geneva, the World's Convention of the Young Men's Christian Association is in session. The average attendance is a thousand. Delegates are present from America, Belgium, England, France, Holland, Spain, and Protestant Cantons of Switzerland. BASTIA, Aug. 16. — Hoedel, when informed that his execution had been fixed upon, became despondent. He repulsed the ministrations of the chaplain, declaring them useless, as it would take years to convert him. Fifty persons, including the officials, judges, police and twelve citizens attended the execution, which is generally approved. Official notice of the execution was posted throughout the city as a warning. It required but a single stroke of the axe to decapitate Hoedel. The remains were immediately buried.

Correspondence.

We do not hold ourselves responsible for the opinion of our correspondents. [For the Monitor.] FARMER HARDWARE. I told you in my last all particulars of my visit to the model city of Edinburgh, the gross population of which, in 1872, including its suburban, was estimated to be 209,000 — from Edinburgh to London four hundred miles. The Queen city of London must be seen by all persons, and seen too, on a clear day from the dizzy height of the Gipsy of St. Paul's church, in order that the visitor may have even an inadequate conception of its whole area. You will readily conceive that four millions of inhabitants must require a very extensive space to dwell in, and carry on the multitudinous varieties of its business, which engages the great mass of its citizens and for residences of aristocrats and plebeians. Our party reached the Grand Midland Hotel at dusk, the distance being four hundred miles. I forget whether in my last I told you any particulars of my visit to the ancient Melrose Abbey and Abbotstovew, the country seat of the late Sir Walter Scott, whose pleasing and instructive, as well as voluminous writings, have afforded instruction and pleasure to so many millions of readers, but if I did not, I will do so now. Having left the Cars at the Station of Melrose, our party took a sumptuous breakfast at the chief Hotel and having four hours of time here, our party proceeded to inspect the ruins of the ancient Abbey, which dates its origin from the eleventh century, and was given in its forsaken and dilapidated state. Some of the inscriptions are grand in their religious simplicity of style and sentiment. One of them so much pleased my taste, that I copied it for preservation, and more than half an hundred copies of them from our party have taken copies from me. I saw veritable stone coffins there for the first time. But few of the beautiful and expensive statuary formerly placed in niches constructed for them on the outer wall remain; but those remaining are monuments of the religious devotion of a long past period, as well as of the art of the sculptors. The Abbey is on the edge of the village, Melrose being only five miles distant, and is three miles distant, and our obliging and considerate guide procured coaches for the whole party without expense to any, for one of the most delightful drives of his character and writings from Kings, the oft mentioned River Tweed skirts the Abbotstovew grounds, and most, if not all of our party, saw it for the first time on our visit to the place. We were shown through the principal rooms of the house, the galleries of antiquity stored in the mansion, and the numerous rare and costly presents donated to the former classic occupant of the mansion by all classes of the admirers of his character and writings, from Kings, Emperors and Popes. Among those, and conspicuously too, is a goodly sized private memorandum book with curious velvet cover, and with the monogram of the old Napoleon, which was found in his room at Waterloo, and which was found with other valuables in Napoleon's private carriage when captured by the British, which was escaping from him, the fatal field of Waterloo. After scrutinized our laudable curiosity at the Abbey and Abbotstovew, we resumed our seats in the Cars and were whisked at high speed over the long route to the Capital of the world. Exceeding four and a half hours of rest by breakfast, dinner and the visits aforesaid, and other short stops at stations, our average speed exceeded forty miles an hour from Edinburgh to London.

The section of the party in which I was, were quartered in the Grand Midland Hotel, located at Queen's Cross. This Hotel is really grand in size, architectural design, and interior finish, and capable of accommodating five hundred guests. The room allotted to myself was high up among the hundreds. Access to it, and egress from it to the dining room, and to the street door, was through such a maze labyrinth of corridors and lobbies, that several times lost my way before I got the hang of the new school-house of the city, which school boy told his teacher as an excuse for his bad grammar and spelling. Our party took three days to see London on our way to the continent, reserving several days to be spent on our "back tracks." I moved out early on the morning after my arrival, and having determined to make the most of my time by moving at a high rate of speed, I resolved to separate from the mass of my fellow tourists, but took with me my first trip on the underground railway to Westminster Bridge to visit the Westminister Abbey, the most interesting relic of the building of the oldest portion of this stupendous structure, styled Westminister Abbey, to the Saxon King Sebert in the early part of the seventh century, or the latter part of the sixth century. After having been destroyed by fire, the site of the Danes, it remained in a dilapidated state till the time of King Edward the Confessor, who caused its repair and largely added to the size of the structure. Its dimensions are, length, three hundred and seventy-five feet; breadth, two hundred feet; height, from pavement to roof, one hundred and one feet, and from pavement to roof of lantern one hundred and five feet. Within these sacred walls rests the remains of thirteen Kings and fourteen Queens of England, the second George being the last of those. The Usurper, Cromwell, and four of his family were buried here, but after his usurpation terminated, the remains of all were removed from the Abbey. Among the many monuments to be seen here is a grand one erected by the King in his lifetime, and the nobility to the memory of James Watt, the inventor of the steam engine, and bearing the date 1819. Also monumental tablets are here seen to perpetuate and honor Sir Isaac Newton, and the Revs. John and Charles Wesley. On the latter Tablets are inscribed the following pious utterances of the immortal founder of the sect called "Methodists."

"The best of all is, God is with us, I took upon the world as my parish, God buries His workmen, but carries on His work."

In a future letter I shall refer to a visit I made to his grave in John Road church-yard, as also that of John Bunyan in Dunhill fields. The monument to General Wolfe, Lord Nelson, and the Duke of Wellington, inspired me with thrilling interest and emotion, and I felt myself indebted to thank God that the British people gratefully remember and honor services to the nation and the world, whether in the church, in warfare, in letters, or in the department of mechanical invention and scientific research. The famed "Poet's corner" presents a host of memorials to perpetuate the names of the devotees of patriotic and pious songs from Spencer and Milton and Chaucer, down to those contemporary with the present age, Dickens and Thackeray. In this sacred and venerable edifice the sovereigns of England have all been crowned since King Edward the first, and the coronative chain shows the visitors their attendant, who was draped in a silk robe. Without the trappings which are always placed on those chairs, on occasions of coronations ceremonies, they are plain to a degree and entirely unadorned in appearance. One of them has placed beneath it a stone on which the ancient Kings of Scotland sat when their crowns were placed on their respective heads, and in so placed beneath the principal coronative chair of succeeding British sovereigns to symbolize the union of the two kingdoms. This stone is said to be the same as that used by the patriarch Jacob for a pillow when on his journey to Padan-Aram. The chairs are draped in rich cloth of gold when coronative ceremonies take place, and are in keeping with so great and grand ceremonies. Crossing the street we enter the Houses of Parliament, or Westminster palace, as it is properly called. This noble structure, and truly noble in all respects, is superior to anything of its kind in the world, is placed on the same site as the palace of Edward the Confessor stood, till the present structure was resolved on by the nation in 1835; but the corner stone was not laid till the 27th of April, 1840; and its completion for the use of the House of Parliament was effected, and the edifice first occupied in 1853. The east front is nine hundred and forty feet in length, the projecting wings extending to within thirty feet of the Thomas monument, projecting from the main line of the river facade of the main building, one hundred and twenty feet. The principal or Victoria Tower is seventy-five feet square, and three hundred and thirty-six feet high to the top of the pinnacles. The clock tower is placed in the opposite corner of the land front of the palace, and is three hundred and sixteen feet high to the topmost pinnacles; the dial of the clock being twenty-six feet. The central, or third tower rises from the centre of the great main structure but its height is less than either of the others. In the south end of the building the visitor enters from the capacious lobby, the apartments appropriated for the Queen's Robing Room. It is fifty-four feet long, by thirty-six feet wide, and twenty-four feet high, in the east end of which is placed the richly gilded canopy of state, beneath a rich and beautifully designed canopy of crimson and gold. From this room and through a larger one, one hundred and ten feet long, by forty-five high, and as many wide, we enter from this room the majestic pinnacles in state with their attendants, in their way to the House of Lords, through another grand apartment where she opens or closes Parliament in person. It is termed the Royal Gallery, and to it the public are admitted to view the royal pageant. The royal seats rising one above another being provided for visitors. The walls above those seats are decorated with splendid paintings, one of these representing to the life a marvellous scene, the brave Nelson as he lay wounded on the deck of his flag ship, the "Victory," and the other also representing to the life, the meeting of Wellington with the brave old general Blucher on the plains of Waterloo. It is a grand effort of the artist, I tell you; and having had the rare privilege of personally viewing the field where the great fight occurred, I can tell you something of it in a future letter. From the Royal Gallery are two entrances to the Prince's Chamber, a beautiful and richly ornamented room of rather capacious dimensions; "Her Majesty's state sitting room," in which the principal entrance from it to the House of Lords. In the panels in the walls of this chamber are also placed the full length portraits of many of the Kings, Queens and Princes of England, Scotland, and the Kingdom, including the unfortunate, though amiable and good, Lady Jane Grey. From the Princess chamber we may enter the House of Lords, by either ascending the stairs, or by a right of passage through the Throne, the Royal chair of State or Throne is a gem of itself, for its appropriate, though plain style of construction and its rich gilt finish throughout with gold and crystal. It is placed on a dais, and the throne is placed on a dais on the side, leading to the surface of the dais, being covered with richest crimson velvet. On either side of the Throne is seated a pair of State rich gilt finish, one for the Prince of Wales, and the other for the late Prince Consort's and the whole brilliant collection is beneath a canopy of great beauty and design, and of the richest finish. The seating for the Peers are arranged in either side being placed over the plain in construction and present rather the idea of comfort than of grandeur. The room is lighted at night by three magnificent candelabra of most artistic design, the material being the finest brass, and highly polished of course, and the whole state room presents to the visitor a view of surpassing grandeur — as to rich finish and splendid paintings and to ceiling, rich gilding, and the finest and other fittings of the superb room of the Peers of the realm. The Peers Lobby library, robing room, and corridor are all in their way, apartments grand in finish and appropriate ornamentation.

Saint Stephen's Hall, another apartment of the palace, is set yet plain in its finish, but rows of marble statues of England's monarchs and other illustrious personages on high pedestals along each side of the grand structure I am describing, is inconceivable. The peculiar position of this place of holding the late Law-Courts of England since the year 1224 to the present time. Good-bye for now, ANAPOLIS FARMER, on furlough.
