

CANADA

HOUSE OF COMMONS DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SECOND SESSION—TWENTY SEVENTH PARLIAMENT

16 ELIZABETH II

VOLUME VI, 1967

COMPRISING THE PERIOD FROM THE TWENTY-SECOND DAY OF JANUARY, 1968, TO THE TWENTY-THIRD DAY OF FEBRUARY, 1968, INCLUSIVE

INDEX ISSUED IN A SEPARATE VOLUME

ROGER DUHAMEL, F.R.S.C.
QUEEN'S PRINTER AND CONTROLLER OF STATIONERY
OTTAWA, 1968

27053—363½

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Monday, January 22, 1968

The house met at 2.30 p.m.

[Translation]

THE LATE HON. RENÉ TREMBLAY AND THE LATE MAURICE RINFRET

EXPRESSIONS OF REGRET ON PASSING OF FORMER MEMBERS

Hon. Jean Marchand (Minister of Manpower and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, it is with deep dismay that I learned, as most members, of the death of Hon. René Tremblay which occurred just before noon today. We knew that he had been ill, but we expected that he would still be with us for a long time.

Mr. Tremblay had a rather brilliant career. He studied in Canada and in Europe. He was at first professor at Laval University and then became deputy minister of the department of industry and trade in Quebec. In 1963 he was elected member for Matapédia-Matane. Soon afterwards he was appointed Minister for Citizenship and Immigration—he was thus one of my predecessors—to become eventually Postmaster General.

Mr. Tremblay was not only our colleague, he was everyone's colleague and he was also a personal friend. We are of the same generation not only as far as age is concerned but also from a political standpoint.

You will understand, Mr. Speaker, that as other members of this house, we are particularly affected by this sudden demise, particularly when it is realized that it follows upon the death of Hon. Mr. Favreau and our friend, Maurice Rinfret. This might lead us to ponder on the effects on health of political tensions which may possibly be felt more particularly by the group to which I have the pleasure and the honour to belong.

The death of Hon. René Tremblay is surely a loss for the province of Quebec but it is also a loss for the whole country. I am sure that the members of this house will be unanimous in expressing to his wife and to his children their most sincere condolences.

Personally, I regret that, before leaving us, he did not have the good fortune of seeing certain injustices committed against him repaired as they should have been. But this is probably what one can expect in politics; we are in a ring where the opponents do not always pull their blows and it is in circumstances such as those that we realize that we are mere human beings.

As I have already said, Mr. Speaker, to the name of Hon. Mr. Tremblay we must add that of another friend, a sincere friend of all, that of the hon. member for Saint-Jacques, Maurice Rinfret. He presided over the proceedings of the house with a great deal of humour, of kindness. I do believe that regardless of political affiliations everyone liked Maurice Rinfret. I think, therefore, that the house should also agree to express its condolences to Mrs. Rinfret.

Mr. Rinfret was ill for a very long time. He was seriously ill when he was last with us here, and yet he never complained and no one even noticed it.

At this moment of our political history, Mr. Speaker, when there are so many problems which we must face collectively, it is particularly painful to witness events such as these.

• (2:40 p.m.)

[English]

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I should like to associate myself and the members of the official opposition with the comments of the minister regarding the late Maurice Rinfret and Hon. Mr. Tremblay.

I was shocked to learn during the recess of the death of Mr. Rinfret who served in this house as the member for Saint-Jacques and as Deputy Chairman of Committees. Although it was not my privilege to serve with him in the house for any length of time, I quickly became aware of the position of respect and esteem that he held among members of all parties in the House of Commons. I was not aware of his illness and it was a great shock to me when he passed away during the recess of the house. Certainly we would wish to extend our sympathies to Madame Rinfret and members of the family.

Mr. Tremblay, as the minister indicated, served his province and the country in both elective and non-elective offices, having been in the public service of the province of Quebec before he entered the House of Commons. He was educated in both official languages and his education spanned two continents. He attended Laval and McGill Universities and completed his education on the continent of Europe.

Although he resigned from the cabinet over two years ago he continued to take an active part in and make a positive contribution to political life in this country, particularly with regard to leading questions of our day concerning national unity and economic affairs, which he was particularly well qualified to discuss by reason of his background and education.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the members of the opposition I should like to extend my deepest sympathy to Mrs. Tremblay and her children, as well as to the members of the Liberal party.

[English]

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Burnaby-Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the members of this party I should like to join with those who have already spoken in expressing our very deep and sincere regret at the passing of two of our colleagues.

Mr. René Tremblay, who was for some time the Minister of Citizenship and Immigration, we came to know very well. I can speak for members of this party in saying that we always found him accessible and courteous. He approached the problems of his department with a deep sense of humanity and with a fine compassion, which we greatly appreciated.

The passing of our colleague Maurice Rinfret is also to be regretted, Mr. Speaker. Many of us came to know him quite well during his time in the house. Personally I had the privilege of being with a Speaker's delegation which visited the Soviet union and Czechoslovakia something over two years ago. We found him a delightful companion and a person who was deeply motivated for the welfare and benefit of this country.

We are exceedingly sorry at the passing of these two members of this house. We should like to extend, through you, Mr. Speaker, to their wives and families our deepest sympathy in their hour of bereavement.

[Translation]

Mr. C.-A. Gauthier (Roberval): Mr. Speaker, the members of this group wish to join their colleagues in regretting the loss of two men who have laboured in this house. It is said that life is full of surprises and we have another demonstration of this truth this afternoon. I also believe that the two men whose passing we regret have served our country well.

In fact, Mr. Speaker, I had the honour of sitting with Hon. Mr. Tremblay on the committee on the national anthem of Canada and that is where I had the opportunity of realizing his good sense, his good judgment, the firmness of his decisions, as well as his deep convictions.

As for the lamented Mr. Maurice Rinfret, I could not imagine on Friday before Christmas, when he came to shake my hand at Montreal Central station before I took my train, that I was shaking his hand for the last time. Maurice Rinfret was a great friend and I am not aware that he had a single enemy in the house. His passing is a real loss for his party and for this house.

So, in the name of this group, I wish to offer my most sincere condolences to the two bereaved families and assure them that the memory of these two men will long remain in the hearts of French Canadians as well as of all Canadians labouring in this house.

[English]

Mr. A. B. Patterson (Fraser Valley): Mr. Speaker, as we think of our two colleagues who have been removed from our midst we share the sense of loss and the feelings of deep regret which have been expressed in the house this afternoon. Though we knew that Maurice Rinfret had been seriously ill, we hoped that he would return to the house and that he would be spared for a considerable time. It was a shock to hear that he had passed away.

It has been said that every member of the house held Mr. Rinfret in the deepest respect. I say that for many of us the feeling went beyond respect; we held him in affection, especially when we considered his qualities of character and the attitudes that he evidenced on many occasions.

We are reminded again of the shortness of life in the passing of Hon. René Tremblay, which was perhaps more unexpected than that of Mr. Rinfret.

• (2:50 p.m.)

I want to assure the house again that we share the sense of loss felt on the passing of these two colleagues and we join in expressing sympathy to the loved ones who are left, trusting that divine grace will be vouchsafed to them in this their hour of sorrow.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker: While joining, on behalf of all hon. members, in the words of regret we have just heard at the passing of Hon. René Tremblay, may I speak very briefly about the man who for two years was associated with the functions of Speaker of the house and Chairman of the Committees. A loyal colleague and a wise adviser, a faithful worker of the first hour and the last, Maurice Rinfret gave himself completely to his parliamentary responsibilities. In the discharge of his duties in the chair, he set at all times and in all circumstances an unfailing example of impartiality and honesty. The house will remember Maurice Rinfret as a good and fair man.

[English]

PRIVILEGE

MR. WINTERS—ALLEGED INACCURACY IN NEWSPAPER REPORT

Hon. Robert Winters (Minister of Trade and Commerce): I rise on a question of privilege. On Friday, January 12, the Toronto Daily Star misquoted me in a headline as saying of the government that "it lacks integrity". Mr. Speaker, I said no such thing. In fact, I said nothing which could be considered as meaning that the government lacks integrity, fiscal or otherwise.

In replying to a question I said that whoever becomes the new leader must attach great importance to fiscal integrity—the fiscal soundness of the country as a whole. In this, of course, the role of the federal government is just one part of the national fiscal structure. I was speaking of the country, not of the government, and in any event I did not say anything which would justify the attribution to me of a quotation such as that which appeared in the newspaper.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

FINANCE, TRADE AND ECONOMIC AFFAIRS

CONCURRENCE IN EIGHTH REPORT OF STANDING COMMITTEE

Mr. H. E. Gray (Essex West) presented the eighth report of the standing committee on finance, trade and economic affairs and moved that the report be concurred in.

Motion agreed to.

[Editor's Note: For text of report see Votes and Proceedings.]

FINANCE

STATEMENT ON FOREIGN EXCHANGE SITUATION

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Minister of Finance): I should like to make a brief statement on the foreign exchange situation and table a press announcement made during the week end.

During the ten days preceding this week end there have been abnormally large sales of Canadian dollars in the foreign exchange markets, and we have had to meet these demands by sales of United States dollars from our reserves. This has been evident to those in the market and has been reported in the press.

This selling pressure resulted in part from widespread nervousness in international financial circles about currencies generally following the devaluation of sterling and the abnormal demands for gold. More immediately, however, it appears to have resulted in part from highly exaggerated fears of the effects on Canada of the United States balance of payments regulations, and misunderstanding of the intention of the United States authorities in that regard. In order to clarify this situation, we discussed it with the Secretary of the Treasury and his officers during the week end and they have issued a statement on the matter which has been reported in the press, and a copy of which I wish to table.

Mr. Speaker: Has the hon. minister permission to table this document?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Sharp: On our side the Governor of the Bank of Canada, following discussions with the chartered banks, issued a statement last night saying it had been agreed that the banks would discourage the use of bank credit to facilitate abnormal transfers of funds abroad by Canadian subsidiaries of foreign companies and would also discourage the use of bank credit by such companies to meet requirements in Canada which in the past have normally been met by parent companies. These discussions with the banks were undertaken by the governor after he and I had discussed the matter and agreed that such action was desirable.

The governor also increased the bank rate yesterday from 6 per cent to 7 per cent in the light of recent developments in the exchange market. He had consulted me as usual before taking this action. I believe this move was appropriate and prudent to protect the Canadian dollar against speculation and strengthen our position. I regret, as we all will regret, that external circumstances have made this step necessary.

Today the market situation has improved. The value of the Canadian dollar in the market has risen and we have bought some United States dollars to ensure that the market readjustment was an orderly one. It is of course too early to draw definite conclusions, but the change is distinctly encouraging.

Our present exchange parity is appropriate to our economic situation and should be and will be maintained. We have very large exchange and gold reserves to defend it, and we also have access to large supplementary sources of finance through the International Monetary Fund and through a reciprocal support arrangement between the Bank of Canada and the federal reserve system, which was increased last fall to $750 million. Our basic position is safeguarded by our unrestricted access to the long-term capital market of the United States, where Canada and Canadian borrowers enjoy high credit ratings. We are fully prepared, if this should be necessary, to use our reserves and the other resources available to us, to defend the Canadian dollar in the exchange markets.

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, this is a subject on which, of course, one must weigh his words with some care. I am pleased at the reassurance of the minister regarding the determination to maintain the value of our dollar. I am also pleased that he is able to report to the house that the initial results, at least, of the increase in the bank rate appear to be favourable, and certainly I know every member of the house hopes most fervently that these initial, apparently beneficial, results will continue and that nothing further will be required.

I am sure we all have a tremendous confidence in the future of our country, and it should be a matter for all of us who are responsible to make certain that we realize the potential of our country. However, Mr. Speaker, I do not think it would be inappropriate for me to say that the results in the country of the increase in the bank rate are not likely to be very desirable from a domestic point of view, and that consequently it is regrettable that the Governor of the Bank of Canada found it necessary to make this decision.

I emphasize that in the circumstances I am not criticizing his decision. I am quite prepared to accept his judgment in this regard. Nevertheless I think that this is a further indication of the importance of confidence in government or, if you like, in the country—confidence in our willingness and readiness to assure that our country will maintain its economic strength.

Just as I had occasion in the course of the so-called mini-budget debate to suggest that the Canadian people were being asked to pay higher taxes as a measure of trying to restore confidence in the government, I now think that the increase in the bank rate is a further price that the Canadian people will pay with regard to confidence in and credibility of the government.

I do not wish, Mr. Speaker, to appear to be lecturing the government in any pedantic way, but I think it would be appropriate for me to remind members of the government that they have a heavy responsibility during coming months, or for at least as long as it remains their responsibility to form a government.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

• (3:00 p.m.)

Mr. Stanfield: I hope they will make every effort to demonstrate to all concerned that they are prepared to do what is necessary to ensure the economic future, strength and stability of our country, because it is really a question of confidence. I hope the government will pursue policies and attitudes which will inspire confidence. As I take my seat I again repeat that I hope the measure that is taken by the Bank of Canada will have not only the initial result but the continuing results that are considered necessary in this situation.

Mr. Colin Cameron (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, like the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Stanfield), I am well aware that this is a very delicate matter on which to speak and that one must weigh one's words very carefully, because the basis of the operation of a modern monetary system is confidence. I myself am very disturbed by the inevitable results of the action the government has taken, action which it was obliged to take because of its previous policy decisions about which I have spoken on previous occasions; that is, the incompatible policies of the fixed exchange rate plus the agreement on exchange reserves which are continually coming in conflict.

I am not at all sure that the people of Canada will be satisfied with the way in which the government and the Bank of Canada have dealt with this problem of protecting the Canadian dollar, because the Canadian people will have to suffer for it. There is no question but that the general level of interest rates will rise, that our already acute situation in respect of housing will become worse, that government financing will become more expensive and as a consequence our economy will slow down even more.

I would have hoped that in view of the critical situation in which we find ourselves the government would be prepared at this time to re-assess its whole policy with regard to our exchange rate and its whole policy with regard to our relations with the United States. I and some of my colleagues have suggested earlier in this house that the situation at the present time, even before this immediate crisis had arisen, called for rethinking in respect of our attitude with regard to the fixed exchange rate. It is demonstrated by the present economic problem in this country that we should go back to the floating interest rate and the control of the inflow and outflow of capital from Canada.

The government's present action seems again to be placing the burden on the ordinary Canadian citizen, because it has tied its hands with regard to the monetary and fiscal policy so that it is unable to cope with this problem without curbing the development of the Canadian economy in a way which, in the end, must fundamentally undermine our position internationally far more than any temporary attack on the Canadian dollar,—and which attack would be very severe if continued for any length of time.

I would again point out, as I did a few weeks ago in this house, that when we were on the floating exchange rate which lasted for 12 years the fluctuations were all within a very narrow range of 3 cents United States during that whole period. I would hope that somewhat the same situation would occur now. But in order to prevent anything more drastic in the way of upward pressure, which is equally as dangerous as downward pressure, I would suggest that the government consider the imposition of emergency exchange controls.

Mr. R. N. Thompson (Red Deer): Mr. Speaker, I share the concern the minister has expressed in saying he regrets the external circumstances which exist that have made it necessary for the Bank of Canada to step up the interest rates, as it has done. I would just like to add that this serves as an additional reminder that the economic situation both within and outside the country is most serious at the present time. The policy of raising federal housing interest rates to the present level, instead of drawing more capital out of the private sector, has served only to push interest rates still higher. This action today will have the same effect. One wonders just how high interest rates can go.

I should like to remind the minister as he seeks to deal with these problems, many of which are outside his own direct control, that never since 1929 have we faced a problem of high interest rates such as that we have now, and that this action, which may have been necessary at the immediate moment, will serve only to increase further our financial problems. In this regard it relates also to the continued policy of those who control international monetary values in respect of gold being held at the present price. One wonders how long in the future it will be before the price of gold will have to be increased, its having held the same price it holds now while other commodities have doubled or even quadrupled in price.

We share the expression of regret the minister has made in his statement, but we hope he will use every possible effort to bring about some more permanent and more satisfactory solution to the problems of international liquidity and stability of our own dollar, and the problem of the continual rise in the cost of interest and the continued tight money policy which makes Canada's development so difficult.

[Translation]

MEAT INSPECTION ACT

AMENDMENT TO PROVIDE FOR INSPECTION LEGEND IN ENGLISH AND FRENCH

Mr. Fernand-E. Leblanc (Laurier) moved for leave to introduce Bill No. C-196, to amend the Meat Inspection Act (inspection legend).

Some hon. Members: Explain.

Mr. Leblanc (Laurier): Mr. Speaker, according to the Canadian Meat and Canned Foods Act and regulations, meat must be prepared in establishments approved by the government and under the constant control of government veterinary inspectors.

However, section 68 of the regulations provides that the legend on meat inspected shall be marked in English only. This bill provides that the legend shall be bilingual and decorated with the maple leaf appearing on the Canadian flag.

Motion agreed to and bill read the first time.

[English]

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE ACT

MEASURE TO BROADEN COVERAGE

Hon. J. R. Nicholson (Minister of Labour) moved that the house go into committee of the whole at its next sitting to consider the following proposed resolution which has been recommended to the house by His Excellency:

That it is expedient to introduce a measure to amend the Unemployment Insurance Act to increase the coverage provided by the Act; to establish a new schedule of contributions to be paid by employers on behalf of employees covered by the Act; and to establish a new schedule of benefits corresponding to the new schedule of contributions.

Motion agreed to.

QUESTIONS

(Questions answered orally are indicated by an asterisk.)

PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND PENAL INSTITUTION CONSTRUCTION

Question No. 527—Mr. McQuaid:

1. Has the government any immediate plans for the construction of either a maximum or minimum security penal institution in Prince Edward Island?

2. Has the Department of the Solicitor General, or any department of government, ever acted on the suggestion of Premier Campbell to visit Prince Edward Island and look over potential sites for the establishment in that province of a maximum security penal institution and, if not, for what reason?

3. Has a request been received from the government of Prince Edward Island for financial assistance towards the construction and operation of a jail farm or some other type of minimum security institution in that province and, if so, has favourable consideration been given thereto?

4. Does any agreement exist between the government of Canada and the government of Prince Edward Island under section 16 (1) of the Penitentiary Act which provides that the government of Canada may enter into an agreement with the government of any province for the confinement in penitentiaries of persons sentenced under a criminal law of Canada to imprisonment for more than 6 months but less than two years and, if so, what would be the approximate cost per prisoner to the province?

Hon. L. T. Pennell (Solicitor General): 1. No.

2. Officials of the Department of the Solicitor General met with Premier Campbell and the deputy attorney general of Prince Edward Island at Charlottetown on Monday, October 2, 1967 and discussed the penitentiary and gaol situation. No further action was taken because the federal government does not propose to alter the policy to establish its maximum, medium and minimum security institutions for the Atlantic provinces in the Dorchester-Springhill area of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia.

3. The government of Prince Edward Island has discussed with the government of Canada the possibility of financial assistance towards the construction and operation of a minimum security institution on Prince Edward Island. For the reasons given in paragraph 2 no action was taken.

4. No.

FRENCH AND ENGLISH SPEAKING DIRECTORS IN CORPORATIONS

Question No. 528—Mr. Caouette:

1. How many directors are there for each "proprietary corporation"?

2. How many of the directors in each corporation are (a) French-speaking (b) English-speaking?

3. Are any steps being taken by the government to assure a distribution of the two groups and, if so, what are they?

Hon. Judy V. LaMarsh (Secretary of State): All the proprietary corporations advise as follows:

1 and 2. See attached list.

3. In making appointments to the boards of directors of proprietary corporations, the government gives the most careful attention to all the qualifications necessary for these positions, including linguistic ability.

1 and 2. Farm Credit Corporation: 1. Five. 2. (a) One; (b) Four.

Canadian Broadcasting Corporation: 1. Eleven. There is one vacancy at present. 2. (a) Three. (b) Seven.

Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation: 1. Ten. 2. (a) Three. (b) Seven.

Polymer Corporation: 1. Nine. 2. (a) One. (b) Eight.

Note: Three of these nine directors speak both English and French.

Eldorado Mining and Refining Limited: 1. Seven. 2. (a) None. (b) Seven.

Note: The Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources hopes to appoint one French speaking member on the above mentioned corporation in the near future.

Eldorado Aviation Limited: 1. Five. 2. (a) None. (b) Five.

Note: The Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources hopes to appoint one French speaking member on the above mentioned corporation in the near future.

Cape Breton Development Corporation: 1. Seven. 2. (a) One. (b) Six.

Note: The Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources hopes to appoint one French speaking member on the above mentioned corporation in the near future.

Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation: 1. Five. 2. (a) Two. (b) Three.

Note: Two of these three directors speak both English and French.

Northern Transportation Company Limited: 1. Six. 2. The mother tongue of all six directors is English. No information is available as to their facilities with the French language.

Export Credits Insurance Corporation: 1. Eight. 2. (a) Four. (b) Four.

Air Canada: 1. Nine. 2. (a) Two. (b) Seven.

Canadian National Railways: 1. Twelve. 2. (a) Four. (b) Eight.

Canadian Overseas Telecommunication Corporation: 1. Seven. 2. (a) Two. (b) Five.

The St. Lawrence Seaway Authority, 1. There are no directors. The St. Lawrence Seaway Authority Act provides only for a president and two other members. 2. (a) One. (b) Two.

The Seaway International Bridge Corporation: 1. Eight. Four Canadian and four United States citizens. 2. Of the four Canadians, three speak both English and French, and one speaks English only.

27053—364½

Questions

CENTENNIAL TRAIN VISITS

Question No. 593—Mr. Dinsdale:

1. Will the centennial train be kept intact for (a) further visits to Canadian communities, and also (b) to undertake promotional tours in the United States?

2. Will one of the centennial caravans be sent to the United Kingdom and Europe for promotional purposes?

3. Is it the government's intention to retain any of the other caravans for continued educational and promotional purposes?

Hon. Judy V. LaMarsh (Secretary of State): I am informed by the centennial commission: 1. Serious consideration has been given to the feasibility of maintaining the confederation train for further visits to Canadian communities and promotional tours of the U.S.A., and decision has been made, in view of the heavy cost involved, not to maintain the train for either purpose.

2. No.

3. Yes.

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS FREIGHT LOSSES

Question No. 608—Mr. Coates:

1. Has the Minister of Transport received any explanation from the Canadian National Railways for the loss of freight loadings by that company and, if so, what is the nature of such explanation?

2. What are the comparable freight loading figures for the Atlantic provinces by the Canadian National Railways for September and October, 1967, and September and October, 1966?

Mr. J. A. Byrne (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): 1. Yes, the management of Canadian National Railways advises as follows: Effective early in the year, there was an unusual and unexpected drop in demand for transportation services prevailing in Canada and the United States. The falloff became more pronounced in September and October. In the nine months from January to September, Canadian National was down about 100,000 carloads of revenue freight compared with the same period in 1966. In October, traffic dropped 12 per cent. Canadian National carried 226,000 carloads in October 1966 which represents a significant drop of 27,000 cars. Other railroads in Canada and the United States have had a similar experience. For example, net income for Class 1 railroads in the United States dropped nearly 30 per cent in the first three months of 1967, 45 per cent in the second three months and 65.7 per cent in the months of July, August and September. In the Atlantic provinces in particular, carloads of forest products, grain, mine products, coal, steel, gypsum and crushed rock were all down.

2. The management of the railways also advises that it is not possible to answer the question in the form asked as the system is not administered by provinces but by regions. The figures for the Atlantic Region, which includes lines in the provinces of New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Newfoundland and Prince Edward Island and those in the province of Quebec, east of Riviere du Loup and the NTR line east of Charny, are as follows:

	1967	1966
September	21,668	25,417
October	23,623	25,604.

OTTAWA-HULL—FEDERAL BUILDINGS

Question No. 674—Mr. Caouette:

1. What federal buildings does the government intend to build in (a) Ottawa (b) Hull, during the next three years and what will be the cost of each?

2. What federal buildings were built in (a) Ottawa (b) Hull, during the last three years and what was the cost of each?

Hon. Judy V. LaMarsh (Secretary of State): I am informed by the departments of Public Works and National Defence as follows: 1. No accurate information can be provided in respect of Part 1 of the question as every new federal building project is subject to the provision by parliament of funds in the departmental annual estimates.

2. The following is a list of the new federal buildings within the city of Ottawa for which construction was completed in each of the last three fiscal years. No such buildings were completed in the city of Hull during those years.

Fiscal Year 1964-65
Agriculture Processing and Service Building	$ 165,406
Radio Testing Laboratory	542,362
Animal Breeding Building	426,655
Fiscal Year 1965-66
Department of Veterans Affairs Records Storage and National Film Board Stills Laboratory	2,324,045
Radiation Protection Building	1,825,056
Fiscal Year 1966-67
Environmental Health Centre	3,117,350
Administration Building for National Research Council	3,204,932
Fiscal Year 1966-67
National Library and Archives	13,121,485*
Administration Building for Department of National Health and Welfare (Brooke Claxton Building)	7,507,639*
Administration Building for Department of Agriculture (Sir John Carling Building)	11,426,986*
Supply and installation of four transportable classrooms at Canadian forces base, Uplands	29,454
Addition to operations building—(Leitrim)	516,609

*The amounts shown include estimates of final costs which have not yet been paid.

*EXPO '67—RENTAL PAYMENTS TO QUEEN ELIZABETH HOTEL

Question No. 681—Mr. Smallwood:

1. What was the total government expenditure on the rental of guest accommodation in the Queen Elizabeth Hotel, during Expo '67?

2. Did the federal government lease an entire floor of the Queen Elizabeth Hotel, Montreal, for the duration of Expo '67?

3. What other accommodation was leased by the federal government for visitors during the period April 27 to October 29, 1967?

Mr. Albert Béchard (Parliamentary Secretary to Secretary of State): Mr. Speaker, I am informed by the Privy Council office and the Department of the Solicitor General as follows: 1. The total expenditure, as at November 20, 1967, on rental of guest accommodation at the Queen Elizabeth Hotel during Expo '67 amounts to $137,048.83. Guests include the official visiting parties and the accompanying Canadian officials. The above figure includes prearranged staff gratuities.

Eight thousand, eight hundred forty-eight dollars by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police for the accommodation of police personnel responsible for the security of visiting heads of state and other state visitors during Expo '67.

2. An entire floor of the Queen Elizabeth Hotel was not leased for the duration of Expo '67. A block of rooms, however, was leased by the Commissioner General for Visits of State 1967 from April 27 to October 20 inclusive. By agreement with the hotel these rooms could be rented out if they were not required by the Commissioner General.

3. No accommodation was "leased" in the same sense at other hotels. However, normal reservations were secured well in advance at the Windsor Hotel, Ritz Carlton Hotel and the Chateau Champlain in Montreal when the need arose. The same arrangements were made for accommodation at the Chateau Laurier in Ottawa.

DEUTERIUM OF CANADA LIMITED HEAVY WATER PRODUCTION

Question No. 716—Mr. Basford:

1. Regarding the answer given to question 484 on November 8, 1967, what quantity of heavy water was stipulated for production by Deuterium of Canada Limited between July 31, 1966, and March 1, 1968?

2. What is the estimate of the cost of the heavy water that will have been purchased from abroad between July 31, 1966 and January 1, 1968?

3. Did the government of Canada expect to sell abroad any heavy water acquired by Atomic Energy of Canada Limited from Deuterium of Canada Limited and, if so, what was the estimate of the total price of the heavy water that was to have been sold between July 31, 1966 and January 1, 1968?

4. What are the basic terms of the contract made on September 9, 1966?

5. What provisions do the two contracts with Deuterium of Canada Limited contain for compensating Canada for extra costs and losses incurred because of failure of Deuterium of Canada Limited to produce on schedule?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): 1. Approximately 300 tons.

2. Approximately $2,800,000.

3. Not prior to January 1st, 1968.

4. The basic terms of the contract are that Deuterium of Canada Limited will construct a heavy water production plant and produce stipulated quantities of heavy water and that Atomic Energy of Canada Limited will underwrite the sale of such heavy water by guaranteeing to purchase unsold heavy water at stipulated prices. Atomic Energy of Canada Limited has an option to purchase all or any part of such heavy water.

5. Although two contracts have been executed only the September 9th, 1966 is in force since the 27th February, 1964 merges in the later contract. The September 9th, 1966 contract contains no provision for compensating Canada for any costs or losses incurred because of late delivery. The contract does contain a schedule of prices dropping from $20.50 per pound for the first 1,000 tons in four steps to $16 per pound for the fifth 1,000 tons. Should Deuterium of Canada fail to meet the delivery schedule spelled out in the contract, the next lowest price will become applicable on the date when in accordance with such schedule delivery should have been effected.

* APPLICATION OF INCOME TAX TO GIFTS TO PROVINCES AND MUNICIPALITIES

Question No. 721—Mr. Bell (Carleton):

1. Would the Minister of Finance consider recommending to parliament an amendment to section 27 (1) (b) of the Income Tax Act so that gifts made by a taxpayer to Her Majesty in the right of a province or gifts made by a taxpayer to a municipal corporation would enjoy the same status of deductibility as gifts made to Her Majesty in the right of Canada?

2. Have representations for an amendment to this effect been received from (a) any provincial government (b) any municipal corporation?

3. If so, from which ones?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, the answers to the three parts of this question are as follows: 1. This question concerns budget policy. If the government proposes any change in the Income Tax Act affecting deductions in computing taxable income it will be announced at the appropriate time.

2. No, but representations have been received directly from several museums.

3. Not applicable.

HAMILTON, ONT., POST OFFICE—PURCHASE OF TROLLEY CONVEYOR

Question No. 758—Mr. Howe (Hamilton South):

1. Was a trolley conveyor purchased by the Hamilton post office in 1961 for which a contract was let on January 16, 1962?

2. What was the quoted cost of the conveyor, and what was the actual cost including additions?

3. What has been the cost of maintenance up to February, 1965?

4. What firms tendered and what were the amounts tendered?

5. Is this conveyor still in use?

6. If not, on what date was its use discontinued and for what reason?

7. What was the total cost of this equipment to the taxpayer?

Hon. G. J. McIlraith (Minister of Public Works): 1. Yes, the Department of Public Works purchased a trolley conveyor for the Hamilton post office.

2. The price quoted on July 13, 1961 was $81,745 exclusive of taxes. The ultimate price covering the cost of mechanical and electrical alterations, protection against falling mail bags, and taxes, was $126,481.60.

Questions

3. $165.

4. No tenders were received for this installation. At the request of the Post Office Department, a contract was negotiated with G. W. King of Canada Limited, Burlington, Ontario, who were the sole manufacturers of the Stanrun chain trolley type of conveyor. I am informed that officers from the engineering branch of the Post Office Department had seen applications of the conveyor in the United Kingdom postal service. They believed that it would not only solve the special requirement at the Hamilton post office, but was the type of conveyor they wished to install as an experimental unit.

5. No.

6. I am informed by the postal authorities that the use of the conveyor was discontinued on February 22, 1965, because it could not be kept in a reliable working condition. Continued efforts to operate it would have disrupted the handling of mail in the Hamilton post office.

7. $126,646.60.

EXAMINATION OF PRICE-SALARY SITUATION

Question No. 763—Mr. Godin:

1. In the framework of the proposed government program to reduce expenditures, have any persons been employed to date to assess the price and salary situation in Canada and, if so, how many?

2. How many other persons will be so employed?

Hon. Judy V. LaMarsh (Secretary of State): I am informed by the Department of Finance as follows: 1 and 2. Officers of the Department of Finance do this as part of their regular duties, although this year more than normal attention has been given to it.

EXTERNAL AID BY CANADA

Question No. 769—Mr. Rynard:

1. What was the total amount of external aid given by Canada for the year 1966-67?

2. What are the names of the countries receiving the above external aid and what was the amount each country received?

Hon. Paul Martin (Secretary of State for External Affairs): 1. Parliament appropriated $207.7 million in 1966/67 for Canada's bilateral aid programs. In addition, credits authorized for developing countries under Section 21-A of the Export Credits Insurance Act amounted to $61.7 million. Total allocations to developing countries in 1966/67 also included $11.7 million in uncommitted development loan funds appropriated in earlier fiscal years. The total bilateral aid program consequently amounted to $281.2 million.

2. See accompanying table giving bilateral external aid allocations 1966/67.

	Allocations Under Canada's External Aid Program 1966/67 (000,000)
Bilateral allocations
South East Asia
India	156.2†
Pakistan	27.4
Ceylon	4.5
Malaysia	2.7
Others	4.3	195.1
Africa
Francophone countries	11.1
Nigeria	6.5
Ghana	4.0
Tanzania	2.3
Kenya	2.0
Uganda	1.0
Other Commonwealth countries	2.7	29.6
Europe
Greece	4.8*	4.8
Commonwealth Caribbean
Jamaica	3.5
Trinidad	3.6
Guyana	2.0
Little Eight and British Honduras	4.0	13.1
Latin America
Mexico	15.2*
Argentina	3.2*
Other countries	10.0	28.4
Other allocations
CUSO, UN food program contingency	10.2	10.2
Total—bilateral		281.2
Multilateral allocations—Total		39.3
Grand Total		320.5‡

* Figures represent ECIC commitments only.

† This includes an ECIC commitment of $38.5 million.

‡ This figure includes a carryover in uncommitted funds of approximately $11.7 million from previous years, while the current year's appropriation totalled $308.8 million.

SALARIES PAID TO NATIONAL DEFENCE PERSONNEL

Question No. 771—Mr. Ormiston:

What was the gross annual salary paid to (a) civilian and (b) military personnel employed either temporarily or permanently in the Ottawa area at National Defence Headquarters, Canadian Forces Headquarters, Materiel Command, Defence Research Board, Canadian Forces Base at Rockcliffe, Canadian Forces Communications System, Canadian Forces Base at Uplands, as of December 1, 1966, and as of December 1, 1967?

Hon. Léo Cadieux (Minister of National Defence): Information is not now available to provide an accurate answer to this question and the necessary expert staff is not available to undertake the large amount of work which would be required to gather the necessary information.

ST. LAWRENCE RIVER ICEBREAKING SERVICE

Question No. 775—Mr. McCleave:

1. Is it the policy of the Department of Transport to carry out icebreaking between Quebec City and Newfoundland for the purpose of flood control in the Gulf of St. Lawrence?

2. If not, for what purpose is such icebreaking carried on?

3. What has been the mileage for each year since 1962, including the projected program for 1967, covered by icebreakers in the waters east of Quebec City?

4. What has been the annual cost of such icebreaking operations since 1962, by year, including the projected program for 1967?

5. What studies have been carried out with regard to flood control for St. Lawrence River communities, and what were the recommendations?

6. Have studies been carried out by the Department with regard to the effect that flood control or other icebreaking measures on the St. Lawrence River will have (a) west of Quebec City (b) east of Quebec City?

7. If the answer to part 6 is yes, what were the results and what, if any, the recommendations?

8. Has the Department considered whether such icebreaking operations have had an adverse effect on the port business of Halifax, Saint John and other ports in Atlantic Canada and, if so, what steps has it proposed to overcome such effects?

Mr. J. A. Byrne (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): 1. No.

2. Between Newfoundland and Quebec, Department of Transport icebreakers are employed in support of shipping when ice conditions in shipping routes and in approach channels to harbours make it necessary.

3. 1962, 56,802 nautical miles; 1963, 56,812 nautical miles; 1964, 73,786 nautical miles; 1965, 86,464 nautical miles; 1966, 56,809 nautical miles; 1967, 80,850 nautical miles.

Estimated mileage for 1967-68 season, 75,000.

4. 1962, $1,394,000; 1963, $1,384,000; 1964, $1,608,000; 1965, $1,545,000; 1966, $2,157,000; 1967, $1,707,000.

Estimated cost for 1967-68 season, $1,750,000.

5. Ice control for flood prevention in the St. Lawrence river at Montreal and downstream is under continuing study by the department.

In recent years the problem has become somewhat more complex because of man made changes such as development of the world's fair site, and the presence of commercial shipping in the channel opened by icebreakers for flood control. In recognition of this the department last year initiated an intensive investigation of ice problems, including an expanded program of systematic data collection and observance of ice conditions. As a result of preliminary studies, recommendations were made regarding the use of floating ice booms as an ice control measure and an experimental installation has now been completed in Lake St. Peter. The booms are designed to facilitate icebreaking operations by helping to prevent the ice cover breaking up and drifting into the open channel, due to wind action and ship generated waves. As an additional ice control measure, dredged material is being used to construct several artificial islands in the general area of the ice booms. The performance of the booms and the islands will be carefully observed during the winter months.

The operation of the Laprairie Basin ice control structure is being studied in conjunction with other control measures to obtain the most efficient control of the ice in that area.

The phenomena of ice formation and movement are also being studied on the department's scale model of the St. Lawrence river at Lasalle. These studies are preliminary in nature but it is hoped they will eventually provide a useful link in advancing the knowledge of ice formation and methods of control in the river downstream of Montreal.

6. No.

7. Not applicable.

8. The icebreaking operations have facilitated winter navigation to ports of the Atlantic region and the Gulf of St. Lawrence and to ports on the St. Lawrence river as well as providing flood control.

Questions

CYPRUS—COST OF MAINTAINING CANADIAN TROOPS

Question No. 780—Mr. Thomas (Middlesex West):

1. What is the average cost per day of maintaining Canadian troops on the island of Cyprus?

2. How many days were Canadian troops stationed on Cyprus prior to December 1, 1967?

Hon. Léo Cadieux (Minister of National Defence): 1 and 2. From 27 March 1964 to 31 December 1967, a period of 1,375 days, the total out of pocket expenses absorbed by Canada over and above the costs which would normally be required to maintain these forces in Canada, is estimated at $11,559,000. This includes the initial positioning of the troops in Cyprus and subsequent rotation costs. Costs have varied, as the number of troops have been reduced and Canada has asked the United Nations to assume more of the out of pocket costs associated with maintaining the Canadian contingent in Cyprus. Although one could divide the out of pocket estimated costs by the number of days in Cyprus to arrive at an average cost per day, it would not provide a true picture.

BILINGUAL BONUS TO PUBLIC SERVICE EMPLOYEES

Question No. 784—Mr. Caouette:

1. How many public service employees receive the 7 per cent bonus paid to bilingual employees, and how many in each department?

2. Under what conditions is the bonus granted?

Hon. Judy V. LaMarsh (Secretary of State): I have been given the following information by the Public Service Commission: 1. The attached list indicates the number of employees under the Public Service Employment Act, in each department, who receive the 7 per cent bonus. (There are other public service employees who receive this bonus, but they do not come under the jurisdiction of this act.)

2. The bonus is granted to employees in respect of positions in the secretarial, stenographic and typing group in which adequate performance of duties and/or effective service to the public requires the use of both official languages, who are actually using a second official language at least 10 per cent of their time in the performance of their duties, and who are qualified by the Public Service Commission as meeting an appropriate standard of competence in the two official languages. The responsibility for certifying that the required conditions have been met rests with the deputy head.

[Mr. Byrne.]

Department	Number receiving 7 per cent bonus
Agriculture	49
Auditor General's Office	1
Board of Broadcast Governors	5
Canada Emergency Measures Organization	3
Canadian Maritime Commission	—
Canadian Penitentiary Service	4
Canadian Transport Commission	2
Air Transport Board	4
Board of Transport Commissioners	6
Chief Electoral Officer	3
Comptroller of the Treasury	27
Defence Production	46
Dominion Bureau of Statistics	22
Dominion Coal Board	—
Energy, Mines and Resources	6
External Affairs	90
External Aid Office	23
Finance	6
Fisheries	10
Forestry and Rural Development	21
Government House	3
Indian Affairs and Northern Development	2
Industry	24
Insurance	1
Justice	45
Labour	19
Manpower and Immigration	215
National Defence	149
National Energy Board	3
National Gallery of Canada	3
National Health and Welfare	62
National Parole Board	—
National Revenue—Customs and Excise	77
National Revenue—Taxation	129
Post Office	57
Privy Council Office	16
Public Archives	—
Public Printing and Stationery (Queen's Printer)	13
Public Service Commission	47
Public Works	44
Registrar General	25
Royal Canadian Mounted Police (Headquarters)	43
Secretary of State	99
Tariff Board	3

Department	Number receiving 7 per cent bonus
Tax Appeal Board	4
Trade and Commerce	13
Transport	66
Unemployment Insurance Commission	162
Veterans Affairs	128
Total:	1,780

2.

	Commitment	Expenditure
Newfoundland (Oct. 31/67)
Middle Brook Falls	$ 13,000	$ 12,089
12 other rural parks	219,000	147,553
Prince Edward Island
Throughout the province	139,730	42,143
Nova Scotia
Various counties	291,900	151,380
New Brunswick
Various locations throughout the province	204,800	72,624
Quebec
Infrastructure in Laurentide park	100,008	100,008
5 other various locations	41,475	19,767
Ontario
Muskoka, Prescott, Leeds, Bruce and Haliburton counties	1,724,000	—
Manitoba
Spruce Woods provincial park	750,000	31,604
Recreational infrastructure in public recreational areas	244,925	119,425
Saskatchewan
Saskatchewan recreation and tourist program	316,425	305,050
Alberta
Forest recreation area development program	255,600	12,850

3. No.

CONTRIBUTIONS TO UNIVERSITY OF MANITOBA FOR GRAIN DEVELOPMENT

Question No. 804—Mr. Horner (Acadia):

1. Did the federal government contribute financially to the University of Manitoba for the development of the new grain Triticale?

2. Has the federal government any responsibility in the distribution of the new grain called Triticale and, if so, for what reason were the Alberta seed growers not given an opportunity to test the new grain in that province?

3. Is the federal government contributing anything toward the development of a hybrid wheat and, if not, for what reason?

4. Is the federal government doing any experimenting for the development of plastic coating for winter wheat which would prevent winter kill?

Hon. Judy V. LaMarsh (Secretary of State): I am informed by the Departments of Defence Production and Agriculture as follows: 1. Yes, through assisted research grants.

2. No.

3. Yes.

4. No.

PAYMENTS FOR ESTABLISHMENT OR ENLARGEMENT OF PARKS

Question No. 785—Mr. MacDonald (Prince):

1. Is money or other forms of assistance being made available by the Department of Forestry and Rural Development to enlarge or establish provincial parks in any of the provinces of Canada?

2. If so, which ones and how much money has or will be expended?

3. Are other parks or areas being considered and, if so, which ones?

Hon. Maurice Sauve (Minister of Forestry and Rural Development): 1. Yes.

Questions

YUKON—STORAGE DAM SITES

Question No. 805—Mr. Nielsen:

1. What storage dam sites in the Yukon, if any, have been examined during each of the years 1960 to 1967 inclusive?

2. In each case, has a report on such site been submitted to the government and, if so, what is the nature of the contents and recommendations, if any, of each such report?

Hon. Judy V. LaMarsh (Secretary of State): In so far as the Department of Energy, Mines and Resources is concerned: 1. Upper and Lower Porcupine Canyon on Porcupine river, 1962 and 1964; Bell Site on Porcupine river, 1963 and 1964; Summit Lake on Porcupine and Rat rivers, 1962 and 1963; Selwyn on Yukon river, 1960; Fort Selkirk Draw on Yukon river, 1960; Upper Ogilvie on Yukon river, 1961; Lower Ogilvie on Yukon river, 1961; Gerc on Pelly river, 1961; Hoole on Pelly river, 1965; Detour on Pelly river, 1966; Granite Canyon on Pelly river, 1966; Aberdeen Falls on Peel river, 1962 and 1964; Wind River on Peel river, 1962 and 1964; Bonnet Flume on Peel river, 1962 and 1964; False Canyon on Frances river, 1961 and 1962; Lower Canyon on Frances river, 1962; Upper Canyon on Frances river, 1965; Upper and Lower Liard Canyon on Liard river, 1961 and 1962; Lower Canyon on White river, 1961; Kluane Canyon on Kluane river, 1962; Ross Canyon on Ross river, 1962; Prevost Canyon on Ross river, 1967; Fraser Falls on Stewart river, 1965; Five Mile Rapids on Stewart river, 1965; Kathleen Lake on Kathleen river, 1961; Otter Falls on Aishihik river, 1967.

2. No. These reports were prepared for departmental use only.

In so far as the Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development is concerned: 1. and 2. The only relevant information which is in the possession of the Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development concerns the study of the Yukon's hydroelectric requirements on a long term basis as dictated by the area's existing and potential non-renewable resources developments. This study is being carried out by the firm of T. Ingledow and Associates Limited and, although a preliminary copy of the Ingledow report has been received, the full report will not be available for some time.

HIGHWAY IN PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND NATIONAL PARK

Question No. 807—Mr. Macquarrie:

1. When did construction commence on the gulf shore highway in the Prince Edward Island national park?

2. When did construction cease?

[Miss LaMarsh.]

3. What is the total length of this highway?

4. What was the total cost of the highway so far completed?

5. Is it intended to construct the portion of the highway across Rustico harbour?

6. Has the National Research Council completed its study of the feasibility of constructing this portion of the highway?

7. How long has the project been under study?

8. What government departments have been involved?

9. What is the distance by existing highways between portions to gulf shore highway on either side of Rustico harbour?

Hon. Judy V. LaMarsh (Secretary of State): I am informed by the Departments of Indian Affairs and Northern Development and Defence Production as follows: 1. Work commenced on this highway on April 25, 1956.

2. Work ceased November 6, 1965.

3. The highway is 20.0 miles in length.

4. Construction costs were $2,955,743.38. In addition, engineering fees of approximately 5 per cent were paid to the Department of Public Works.

5. Due to the high cost, it does not appear to be practical to construct the bridge at this time.

6. The division of mechanical engineering carried out engineering studies during 1962 and 1963 and submitted laboratory memoranda to the Department of Public Works containing tentative proposals of various schemes of constructing a highway across the entrance of Rustico Harbour.

7. Answered by 6.

8. The Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development, the Department of Public Works and the National Research Council.

9. The distance from Brackley beach to Rollings Pond, around Rustico Harbour, is 12 miles.

FOOD OUTLOOK—DISTRIBUTION BY DEPARTMENT

Question No. 812—Mr. Hales:

1. How many Food Outlook bulletins are circulated each month by the Canadian Department of Agriculture, economics division?

2. What is the approximate cost, including postage, of this circular?

3. Are these bulletins mailed to private individuals?

4. To what groups or organizations are they mailed?

Hon. J. J. Greene (Minister of Agriculture): 1. 1,140.

2. $22 per issue.

3. Yes.

4. The publication Food Outlook is mailed to hospitals, colleges, schools, clubs, orphanages, correctional institutions, dieticians, food buyers and others upon request.

OLD AGE SECURITY PAYMENTS INCREASE

Question No. 816—Mr. Howe (Wellington-Huron):

1. Is there to be an increase in old age security payments in the near future?

2. If there is such an increase, how much is it and why are these payments being increased?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Minister of National Health and Welfare): 1. Yes, in January 1968. This information was made known to the house on October 18 when the Minister of National Health and Welfare tabled a press announcement concerning pension increases.

2. The Old Age Security Act provides for an increase in the basic amount of the pension related to increases in the Pension Index. As a result of the Pension Index increasing by two per cent for 1968, Old Age Security pensions will increase from $75 to $76.50 in January. In addition, the maximum supplement payable under the Guaranteed Income Supplement portion of the Old Age Security Act will rise from $30 to $30.60 a month. For those receiving the maximum supplement their combined benefit will be $107.10.

Questions

EXPENDITURES BY COMMISSION ON BILINGUALISM AND BICULTURALISM

Question No. 825—Mr. Godin:

1. What were the total expenditures incurred by the royal commission on bilingualism and biculturalism?

2. What were the total expenditures incurred by each of the members of the commission since their appointment?

3. How much will the work of the commission cost the federal treasury?

4. How many copies of the preliminary report of the commission were printed (a) what was the total cost (b) how many copies were printed in French (c) how many copies were printed in English?

5. How many copies of the first report of the commission were printed (a) what was the total cost (b) how many copies were printed in French (c) how many copies were printed in English?

6. How is the distribution being made of the first report of the commission?

[Translation]

Hon. Judy V. LaMarsh (Secretary of State): I am informed by the Prime Minister's Office and the Department of Public Printing and Stationery as follows: 1. The total expenditures incurred by the Royal Commission on Bilingualism and Biculturalism from August 1963 up to November 30, 1967, were $6,601,-531.06.

2. The total expenditures incurred by each of the members of the Commission since their appointment in July 1963 up to November 30, 1967 were as follows:

Commissioners	Living & Travel Expenses*	No. of days at $100 per day	Total Honoraria Payments	Total Expenditures
C. Cormier, Moncton, N.B.	$ 12,579.94	321½	$ 32,150.00	$ 44,729.94
D. Dunton, Ottawa	4,256.08	528½	52,850.00	57,106.08
R. Frith, Toronto	15,321.74	530	53,000.00	68,321.74
J.-L. Gagnon, Montreal	16,312.35	823½	82,350.00	98,662.35
Mrs. G. Laing, Calgary	25,098.09	416½	41,650.00	67,748.09
P. Lacoste, Montreal	2,393.05†	203	20,300.00	22,693.05
A. Laurendeau, Montreal	16,747.10	903	90,300.00	107,047.10
J. Marchand, Quebec	5,215.03†	144½	14,450.00	19,665.03
J. Rudnyckyj, Winnipeg	18,133.65	394½	39,450.00	57,583.65
F. Scott, Montreal	8,136.44	381	38,100.00	46,236.44
P. Wyczynski, Ottawa	3,967.66	392½	39,250.00	43,217.66
Total	$129,161.13		$503,850.00	$633,011.13

*Reimbursement of actual travel expenses plus allowance of $20 per diem to cover living expenses while absent from home city on Commission business.

†J. Marchand resigned as Commission member September 1965. P. Lacoste appointed Commissioner November 1965.

Questions

3. It is estimated the work of the Comsion will cost the Federal Treasury up to March 31, 1968, $6,957,382.31. This figure is arrived at as follows:

Expenditures up to November 30, 1967	$ 6,601,531.06
Balance of estimates for 1967-68	355,851.35
	$ 6,957,382.31

4. 35,343 Copies (including 4,513 bilingual copies): (a) $33,829.13; (b) 10,398 French copies; (c) 20,432 English copies.

5. 17,131: (a) $36,402.47; (b) 5,700 French copies; (c) 11,431 English copies.

6. Distribution made by the B and B Commission and sales copy through Q.P.'s Mail Order Services, Q.P. Bookshops and Agencies.

[English]

*NATIONAL DEFENCE—FATALITIES WHILE IN TRAINING

Question No. 834—Mr. Herridge:

What are the statistics relating to the number of men in the Canadian Armed Forces who were killed while in training during the year 1966?

Hon. Léo Cadieux (Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, the answer is 13.

ROYAL CANADIAN NAVY—PERSONNEL STRENGTH

Question No. 838—Mr. Lambert:

1. As of November 30, 1967, what was the strength in (a) officers (b) non-commissioned officers, and (c) ratings, of the Royal Canadian Navy?

2. What were the related strengths as of (a) November 30, 1966, and (b) May 31, 1967?

3. In the period May 31 to November 30 (1967), how many releases from service were made in the R.C.N., how many re-engagements, and what was the number of recruits for the same period?

Hon. Léo Cadieux (Minister of National Defence): 1 and 2.

	November 30, 1966	May 31, 1967	November 30, 1967
(a)	3,118	3,068	3,187
(b)	9,127	9,363	9,369
(c)	5,857	5,998	5,855

3.

Releases	Re-engagements	Recruits
1,272	1,074	1,254

[Miss LaMarsh.]

NATIONAL DEFENCE—PURCHASE OF JET TRANSPORT AIRCRAFT

Question No. 839—Mr. Lambert:

1. Has consideration been given to the acquisition by the Department of National Defence of one or more C-5A jet transport aircraft and, if so, what is the nature of the proposal as to the numbers, cost per copy, schedule of delivery and purpose?

2. Has a decision been reached and, if so, what is the nature thereof?

Hon. Léo Cadieux (Minister of National Defence): 1 and 2. The production of the C-5A jet transport for the United States forces is being watched with interest. However, no decision has been made regarding the acquisition of such aircraft by the Department of National Defence.

NATIONAL DEFENCE—PURCHASE OF DYNAVERT AIRCRAFT

Question No. 842—Mr. Lambert:

1. Do the Canadian Forces propose to acquire a number of CL-84 Dynavert aircraft and, if so, how many, at what cost per copy, and what is the schedule of delivery?

2. What role is to be assigned to such an aircraft?

Hon. Léo Cadieux (Minister of National Defence): 1. and 2. Three prototype aircraft are being procured as a joint development program supported by the Department of Industry and the Department of National Defence. The aircraft will be used to conduct technical evaluation and operational trials to determine the potential and military applications of the vertical take off and landing concept in support of land forces, in the maritime environment and for search and rescue. Delivery is expected to commence a year from date of contract. The estimated program cost is $13,-100,000 including development, manufacture, evaluation and support of the three test aircraft.

NATIONAL DEFENCE—TRIAL OF NEW SALUTE

Question No. 847—Mr. MacEwan:

Are Canada's Armed Forces now using a new salute on a trial basis and, if so (a) what ranks are using this salute (b) how is the salute physically effected (c) will all members of Canada's Armed Forces be using this salute?

Hon. Léo Cadieux (Minister of National Defence): Yes, (a) selected members of the Canadian forces of all ranks are now using the proposed new salute; (b) the proposed salute is effected as follows:

(1) To salute to the front, bend the right elbow and bring the right hand by the shortest route to the position at the headdress. (2) During the movement, the back of the hand is uppermost with the fingers together and straight. Continue the upward movement with the palm of the hand down. In the position of the salute, the fingers are extended, together, with the tip of the forefinger approximately in line with the right eyebrow, the upper arm (from shoulder to elbow) horizontal. The forearm, wrist and fingers are straight from the elbow to the point where the forefinger touches the cap. (3) To return to the position of attention, cut the hand to the side by the shortest route. The hand is closed after the forearm is lowered below shoulder level. The salute is held for a regulation pause before returning to the position of attention.

(c) If considered acceptable and when authorized, all members of the Canadian forces will use a common salute.

DISTRIBUTION OF CENTENNIAL MEDALS

Question No. 849—Mr. Prittie:

1. Did all the members of the legislatures of all the provinces receive centennial medals?

2. Were centennial medals awarded to all members of civic governments (city councils, municipal councils, school boards, park commissions, etc.)?

3. If the answer to Part 2 is no, what criteria were used to determined which persons in civic government were awarded centennial medals?

4. Who, in each province, was given the responsibility for recommending the names of persons, elected or appointed, in civic government to receive centennial medals?

Hon. Judy V. LaMarsh (Secretary of State):
1. Yes.

2. No.

3. By the terms of reference of the centennial medal, persons nominated for the medal must have given specially valuable service to Canada. Further criteria employed by public and private bodies submitting nominations are at the discretion of such bodies.

4. The government decorations committee formally requested the lieutenant-governor in each province to invite nominations through appropriate channels of provincial and civic governments. No further information is available about the recommending procedures followed.

BISSETT, MAN.—R.C.M.P. DETACHMENT

Question No. 851—Mr. Schreyer:

Has the Government of Canada received any representations in 1967 from the Government of Manitoba requesting the re-establishment of an R.C.M.P. Detachment at Bissett?

Hon. L. T. Pennell (Solicitor General): Answer in so far as it relates to the Department of the Solicitor General, is as follows: no.

"WAITING FOR CAROLINE"—EXPENDITURES ON C.B.C. PRODUCTION

Question No. 853—Mr. Howe (Wellington-Huron):

What was the total expenditure by the CBC for "Waiting for Caroline", a production on the national network, which was shown on Wednesday, November 29?

Hon. Judy V. LaMarsh (Secretary of State): I am informed by the C.B.C. as follows: Final payments have not yet been made. The indicated total cost to C.B.C. is $255,628.18.

LONDON, ENGLAND—PRESENCE OF CANADIAN TREASURY OFFICERS

Question No. 855—Mr. Godin:

Are there any Canadian Government Treasury Officers in London, England and, if so (a) what are their names (b) what are their duties (c) what are their annual salaries?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Minister of Finance): Yes; (a) J. S. Sutherland; C. A. Zimmerling; and a staff of 23 locally engaged clerical and stenographic employees; (b) To act on behalf of the Comptroller of the Treasury to control all payments out of the consolidated revenue fund on behalf of Canadian government departments in accordance with the provisions of the Financial Administration Act; (c) J. S. Sutherland, $15,931 per annum. C. A. Zimmerling, $7,433 per annum.

TRAVEL EXPENSES TO DOCTORS FROM FRENCH SPEAKING COUNTRIES

Question No. 856—Mr. Isabelle:

1. Did the federal government pay travel and residence expenses for certain delegations of doctors from some French-speaking countries in Africa and Asia at the time of the international congress of French-speaking doctors held in Montreal at the end of September, 1967?

2. If so (a) what countries were involved (b) what expenditures were incurred for each country?

Questions

[Translation]

Hon. Paul Martin (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Insofar as the Department of External Affairs is concerned:

1. Yes.

2.

(a)	(b)
Ivory Coast	$2,520.94
Upper Volta	1,128.79
Togo	1,203.58
Dahomey	2,263.58
Niger	75.00
Malagasy	3,230.56
Congo (Brazzaville)	1,245.29
Tchad	1,208.79
Gabon	1,245.29
Rwanda	1,420.29
Burundi	1,419.89
Congo (Kinshasa)	1,245.28
Senegal	2,011.58
Cameroun	3,737.37
Tunisia	2,634.87
Laos	3,929.66
Vietnam	3,089.56
Morocco	2,438.00
Central African Republic	1,245.38

[English]

CANADIAN TUNA COMPANY LIMITED—FEDERAL SUBSIDY ON SHIPS

Question No. 857—Mr. MacRae:

1. How many ships have been built for the Canadian Tuna Company Limited to which a federal government subsidy was paid?

2. Where were these ships built?

3. Where will they be used?

4. What were the total construction costs?

5. What was the total amount of the subsidy?

6. Do Maritime Provinces shipyards have a permanent percentage of federal shipbuilding contracts?

7. If so, what is the percentage allocated to Maritime Provinces shipyards?

Hon. Judy V. LaMarsh (Secretary of State): I am informed by the Departments of Industry, Defence Production, and Transport as follows: 1. There is no record of any federal government subsidy paid or to be paid in respect of fishing vessels built to the order of Canadian Tuna Company Limited.

2. Not applicable.

3. Not applicable.

4. Not applicable.

5. Not applicable.

6. No.

7. Not applicable.

[Mr. Isabelle.]

REMOVAL OF PERSONNEL FROM NATIONAL DEFENCE TO TRANSPORT

Question No. 859—Mr. Orlikow:

1. As of December 1, 1967, how many persons in the Department of National Defence moved to the Department of Transport, and on what dates were they moved?

2. Of these, how many were employed in the Information and/or Public Relations Services of the Department of National Defence?

3. Of these, how many were military personnel?

4. Of those who moved, how many years of service with the Department of National Defence did each have?

Hon. Léo Cadieux (Minister of National Defence): 1. As of 1 December, 1967, ten persons in the Department of National Defence moved to the Department of Transport as follows: 6, 19 September, 1967; 3, 20 September, 1967; 1, 1 December, 1967.

2. One.

3. Two.

4. Mr. W. M. Lee, 24 years 2 months; Corporal J. Y. Gleason, 20 years 4 months; Acting Wing Commander R. Turner, 19 years; Mrs. J. T. Lafleche, 19 years 9¾ months; Mrs. M. B. E. Drolet, 14 years 4 months; Miss M. M. M. Bulger, 4 years 5 months; Mr. R. G. Edwards, 2 years 11 months; Mr. R. G. Gairns, 1 year ½ month; Mr. R. J. McDowall, 2 months; Mr. R. P. Stone, 1 month.

COURSES UNDER MANPOWER AND TECHNICAL-VOCATIONAL LEGISLATION

Question No. 860—Mr. Orlikow:

1. How many adults in each province took courses under the provisions of the Manpower Training Act in each month in the years 1965, 1966 and 1967?

2. How many adults in each province took courses under the provisions of the Technical-Vocational Training Act in each month in the years 1965, 1966 and 1967?

Mr. J. C. Munro (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Manpower and Immigration): 1. The Department of Manpower and Immigration's adult occupational training program has ben in operation only since April 1, 1967. Enrolments are not separated by provinces because some people are referred to training across provincial boundaries. By region, enrolments from April 1 to November 30, 1967, were as follows:

Region	In training on Apr. 1/67	New Enrolments						Total in training during period Apr. 1–Nov. 30/67
		Apr. 1–June 30	July	Aug.	Sept.	Oct.	Nov.	Total
Atlantic region	10,254	1,097	514	173	3,523	2,226	1,282	8,815	19,069
Quebec region	26,862	196	525	189	1,626	4,526	2,087	9,149	36,011
Ontario region	25,390	8,991	562	1,764	5,320	5,272	5,975	27,884	53,274
Prairie region	10,225	3,413	374	272	3,311	2,576	1,776	11,722	21,947
Pacific region	3,799	1,411	185	83	946	393	571	3,589	7,388
Canada Total	76,530	15,108	2,160	2,481	14,726	14,993	11,691	61,159	137,689

2. Under the technical and vocational training agreements enrolments in the major programs, including apprenticeship, for the years 1964-65, 1965-66 and 1966-67 in each province, were as follows. These provincially operated courses included a considerable number of youths who are now training in provincial programs rather than under the O.T.A. program.

Province	1964-65	1965-66	1966-67
Nfld.	1,361	1,314	4,246
P.E.I.	194	374	656
N.S.	2,348	2,874	6,123
N.B.	2,267	938	4,473
Que.	11,872	12,355	33,410
Ont.	34,478	42,102	70,800
Man.	3,702	4,210	8,003
Sask.	2,712	3,131	6,205
Alta.	6,795	7,873	10,539
B.C.	5,452	4,853	6,839
Y.T.	130	87	146
N.W.T.	23	35	17
Total	71,334	80,146	151,457

	Ontario	Manitoba
April-June	776	—
July	110	—
August	131	149
September	202	—
October	383	—
November	455	—
Total	2,057	149

In the Atlantic region and Quebec language training is included in basic education upgrading courses and not separated from mathematics, science, etc. Similarly, there were no separate (special) language classes under O.T.A. in Saskatchewan.

2. Prior to March 31, 1967, these courses were provided by the provinces under the shared cost technical and vocational training agreements. In statistical reports Special English courses were not separated from general basic education upgrading.

ENGLISH COURSES UNDER MANPOWER AND TECHNICAL VOCATIONAL LEGISLATION

Question No. 861—Mr. Orlikow:

1. How many new Canadians in each province took courses in Special English under the provisions of the Manpower Training Act in each month in the years 1965, 1966 and 1967?

2. How many new Canadians in each province took courses in Special English under the provisions of the Technical-Vocational Training Act in each month in the years 1965, 1966 and 1967?

Mr. J. C. Munro (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Manpower and Immigration): 1. Under the occupational training for adults program, which began to operate on April 1, 1967, the enrolments in language training courses, by province, were as follows:

Alberta	British Columbia	Total
—	93	869
—	—	110
—	—	280
—	—	202
65	—	448
15	7	477
—
80	100	2,386

DONATIONS TO ENGLAND

Question No. 864—Mr. Grégoire:

1. Have donations been made to England in the form of food, merchandise, armaments, or any other form since 1938?

2. If so (a) in which year was each of these donations made (b) what was the value of each of these donations?

[Translation]

Hon. Paul Martin (Secretary of State for External Affairs): 1. Yes.

Questions

2. (a) and (b) Details by individual years are not available. As far as can be determined, Canada made no donations in kind to Britain from 1939-42, from 1946-49 and from 1964-67 (however in 1942 a contribution of 1 billion was made for the purchase by Britain of Canadian war supplies for its own and other Allied use); from 1943-45, goods worth approximately $720 million were made available to Britain each year as part of Canada's Mutual Aid program, under which contracts were signed with allied nations to provide foodstuffs, war materials and other supplies without payment; and between 1950 and 1963, military equipment worth $170,465,000 was donated to Britain under the Mutual Aid program by which NATO allies were provided, at their request, with material surplus to Canadian requirements.

[English]

DISCONTINUATION OF RURAL MAIL DELIVERIES ON SATURDAYS

Question No. 870—Mr. Scott (Victoria (Ont.)):

1. Is it the intention of the Post Office Department to discontinue urban mail deliveries on Saturdays?

2. Will the Post Office Department continue the delivery of rural mail on Saturdays?

Hon. Jean-Pierre Côté (Postmaster General): 1. Preliminary studies concerning the curtailment of postal service on weekends have been initiated. These studies are in line with recommendations 58 and 59 of the royal commission on working conditions in the Post Office Department.

Studies to date have dealt with the effect these recommendations would have on staff needs. Studies are under way to assess the full impact of the recommendations on such problems as storage space, delays to mail and other related considerations. There is also the question of public reaction to be resolved.

Only after a detailed analysis has been made of all factors concerned will it be possible to make concrete proposals as to the course of action, if any, that will be taken with regard to the curtailment of urban mail deliveries on Saturdays.

2. Any possible effect that a curtailment in postal services upon the weekends might have on rural mail delivery will be thoroughly examined.

EMPLOYMENT OF IMMIGRANTS BY CANADIAN MINES

Question No. 871—Mr. Orlikow:

Are any Canadian mining firms or mining associations now recruiting immigrant miners, and mine labourers, overseas, through the facilities of the Department of Manpower and Immigration, or are they hiring those immigrants on their own and then having immigration officials approve their entry into Canada?

2. What are the names and addresses of each mining firm and mining association that are taking part in this overseas recruitment program?

3. (a) What are the European countries visited by representatives of each mining firm and mining association (b) are the Branches of the Department of Manpower and Immigration in each one of those countries assisting or participating in this recruitment?

4. (a) Has the Department of Manpower and Immigration any information as to the total number of immigrant miners and mine labourers each firm will be bringing into Canada during the next six months (b) how many miners and mine labourers have been brought into Canada to date this year by the Department of Manpower and Immigration for employment in the mines as miners and mine labourers?

5. What is the exact location of each mine in Canada where those immigrant miners and mine labourers are to be employed?

6. (a) Have any or all those mines listed their labour requirements with the various Canada Manpower Centres (b) what are the possibilities now of recruiting Canadian workers for employment in the mines as miners and mine labourers instead of bringing into Canada immigrants for this work?

7. (a) Did the Department of Manpower and Immigration discuss with the mining association or with the individual mine officials the possibility of training Canadian workers for this work (b) if so, what was the result (c) can mine workers or prospective mine workers be given training under present training programs?

8. (a) Did the Department of Manpower and Immigration discuss with the unions which have organized the workers in Canadian mines and which have agreements with the mining companies, the attitude of the unions in respect to bringing in immigrant miners and mine labourers to work in Canadian mines (b) if so, what was the attitude of the unions concerned?

9. (a) Did the Department of Manpower and Immigration discuss with the unions which have organized the workers in Canadian mines the attitude of the unions to the training of Canadian workers to work in Canadian mines (b) if so, what was the attitude of the unions concerned?

10. (a) Did the Department of Manpower and Immigration discuss with the mining firms or mining associations the possibility of meeting part or all of their recruitment problems through the hiring and/or training of Canadian Indians and Eskimos (b) if so, what was the attitude of the companies to such a proposal?

[Mr. Martin (Essex East).]

Mr. J. C. Munro (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Manpower and Immigration): 1. Yes. Three mining firms have been recruiting miners and mine labourers abroad and several other firms are completing arrangements to send representatives overseas for recruitment through the facilities of the Department of Manpower and Immigration.

2. The three mining companies who have been recruiting overseas are: Little Long Lac Gold Mines Ltd., 112 King Street W., Toronto, Ont.; International Nickel Co. of Canada Ltd., Sudbury, Ontario; Patrick Harrison and Company, Montreal, Quebec.

3. (a) Germany—(Little Long Lac Gold Mines Limited) (Patrick Harrison and Company) United Kingdom—(International Nickel Co. of Canada Ltd.) (b) Yes.

4. (a) The three companies have indicated that they hope to recruit: Little Long Lac, 100 miners; International Nickel, 275 miner trainees; Patrick Harrison and Company, 50 miners. (b) 250 were admitted to Canada up to September 30, 1967.

5. It is expected that the immigrant miners and mine labourers who will be recruited as a result of current activity will be employed at the following locations: Little Long Lac group of mines: Macassa Gold Mines Limited, Kirkland Lake, Ontario. Wilroy Mines Limited, Manitouwadge, Ontario. Willecho Mines Limited, Manitouwadge, Ontario. Renabie Mines Limited, Renabie, Ontario. MacLeod-Cockshut Gold Mines Limited, Geraldton, Ontario. Wasamac Mines Limited, Rouyn, Quebec. East Malartic Mines Limited, Norrie, Quebec. Malartic Gold Fields (Quebec) Limited, Fourniere and Dubuisson Townships, Quebec. Marband Gold Mines Limited, Fourniere and Dubuisson Townships, Quebec. Norbeau Mines Limited, Chibougamau, Quebec. International Nickel Co. of Canada Limited, Sudbury, Ontario. Patrick Harrison and Company, contract mining anywhere in Canada.

6. (a) Yes. (b) Canadian workers are continually being recruited for employment in the mines as miners and mine labourers. The supply has been insufficient to meet the need.

7. (a) Yes. (b) In 1966 and 1967 the federal government contributed 50 per cent to 75 per cent of the instructional costs for 22 training projects operated by mining companies. These projects involved the training or upgrading of about 5,300 mine workers. In addition there has recently been a sizable movement of mine workers from other parts of Canada under the department's manpower mobility program. (c) Yes.

8. The unions have not expressed views to the department. If they did so, they would receive full consideration.

9. The unions have not indicated any views. If they did so, they would be received with great interest.

10. (a) Yes. The Department of Manpower and Immigration has discussed with mining firms and the mining association the recruiting of miners and mine trainees in all surplus labour areas of Canada, and has actively promoted the recruiting of Canadian Indians and Eskimos. (b) The attitude of the companies has been to accept suitable candidates obtained through such programs.

CAPE BRETON DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION—PURCHASE OF SHARES

Question No. 877—Mr. Caouette:

1. Will the Cape Breton Development Corporation purchase the shares or the assets of the nationalized companies?

2. Will the Corporation indemnify the former owners with money or with interest-bearing bonds?

3. Has the Corporation completed the inventory of the assets to be expropriated and will this inventory be submitted to the registry office?

4. What will be the method of assessment of the amounts of the assets in the balance sheet, the direct evaluation of the assets, the stock exchange capitalization, etc.?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): 1. The corporation has made no decision concerning the method of acquisition of lands and personal property of the companies.

2. No decision has been made.

3. The preparation of an inventory of assets is continuing actively, but is not completed. The provisions of sections 9 and 10 of the Cape Breton Development Corporation Act will govern future action in this regard.

4. No decision has been made.

EQUALIZATION PAYMENTS TO PROVINCES

Question No. 878—Mr. Bell (Saint John-Albert):

1. What is the estimate of the equalization payments to the provinces for the current year ending March, 1968?

2. Have any estimates been made for the year ending March 31, 1969 and, if so, what are the figures in each case by provinces?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Minister of Finance): 1. The equalization payments to the provinces under the Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements Act, 1967, for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1968, are estimated as follows: (in thousands of dollars) Newfoundland, $67,781; Prince Edward Island, $14,071; Nova Scotia, $77,133; New Brunswick, $66,317; Quebec, $249,560; Ontario, $——; Manitoba, $43,456; Saskatchewan, $26,438; Alberta, $——; British Columbia, $——.

2. The estimate of equalization payments to the provinces for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1969, will be contained in the estimates of government expenditures for the 1968-69 fiscal year when those estimates are submitted to parliament for approval.

PERSONNEL OF COMMISSION ON STATUS OF WOMEN

Question No. 881—Mr. Caouette:

1. Who are the members of the commission dealing with the status of women, and (a) when were they appointed (b) for how many days did they meet?

2. What are the names of the members of the staff of this commission and what are their salaries?

3. How much has been spent by the commission since its inception?

4. When does the commission expect to submit its report?

5. What contracts were awarded by the commission, what was their purpose, and when will they be completed?

Mr. John R. Matheson (Parliamentary Secretary to Prime Minister): I am informed by the royal commission on the status of women in Canada as follows:

1. Mrs. John Bird, Miss Elsie Gregory MacGill, Mrs. Ottomar Lange, Miss Jeanne Lapointe, Mrs. Robert Ogilvie, Mr. Jacques Henripin. (a) February 16, 1967; (b) 15 days.

2. Miss Monique Bégin, $22,000 per annum; Dr. H. David Kirk, $22,000 per annum; Miss Monique Coupal, $17,500 per annum; Miss R. Cass-Beggs, $13,500 per annum; Mrs. Trudy Kassner, $35 per diem; Mrs. Martha Hynna, $6,600 per annum; Mrs. Isabelle C. Desjardins, $6,500 per annum; Mrs. Nancy Ross, $6,400 per annum; Miss Maureen J. Spencer, $5,640 per annum.

3. $218,946.16.

4. A report will be submitted with all reasonable despatch, as soon as possible after completion of the commission's research program, public hearings, etc., as is customary with commissions of inquiry.

5. Contracts:

Awarded to	Purpose	Completion date
Me Bérengère Gaudet Notary, Montreal, Quebec.	Study entitled "Family Affairs"	October 1, 1967
Canadian Centre for Community Studies, 151 Slater Street, Ottawa, Ontario.	Research project for the purpose of evaluating the relevance and suitability of existing research instruments and methods for the subsequent conduct by the commission of a sociological survey on roles and functions of women in Canada at various ages of their lives	August 31, 1967
Professor Ronald D. Lambert, B.A., M.A., Ph.D., University of Waterloo, Waterloo, Ontario.	Study entitled, "The Formation of Sex-role Conceptions in Young People"	January 31, 1969
Mrs. Patricia Cockburn, B. Com, Consultant in Economics, Ottawa, Ontario.	Study entitled, "Women University Graduates in Continuing Education and Employment 1966"	September 1, 1967
Canadian Association of University Teachers, 77 Metcalfe Street, Ottawa, Ontario.	Special report entitled, "Discrimination in Promotion for Women University Teachers"	February 15, 1968
Miss Marianne Bossen, Professor of Economics, United College, Winnipeg, Man.	Study entitled, "The Status of Female Employees in Department Stores"	February 29, 1968

[Mr. Sharp.]

SAINTE-ANNE-DE-SOREL, QUE.; BREAKWATER

Question No. 884—Mr. Godin:

1. What is the estimated quantity of stone, in tons, required to build the breakwater now being constructed at Sainte-Anne-de-Sorel?

2. What was the amount of the contract awarded?

3. To what company was it awarded and where is its head office?

4. What is the name of the chairman of the club which will administer this marina?

[Translation]

Hon. G. J. McIlraith (Minister of Public Works): 1. 37,000 tons.

2. The contract was awarded on a unit price basis, as follows: excavation, $0.50 per cubic yard; earthfill, $0.31 per cubic yard; stone, $1.50 per ton; plain concrete, $13.50 per cubic yard; reinforced concrete, $28.50 per cubic yard; galvanized steel pipe-arch, $20.00 per lineal foot.

3. Les Entreprises J. R. Denoncourt Enrg., Nicolet, Que.

4. The marina will be administered by L'Auberge de la Rive Ltée, the president of which is the Hon. Lucien Cardin.

[English]

APPLICATIONS FOR MEDICAL RESEARCH EQUIPMENT

Question No. 889—Mr. Brand:

1. Under what circumstances and for what points in time are applications for major equipment for medical research considered for approval by (a) health resources fund (b) Medical Research Council?

2. Is there any limit on the number of applications for major equipment for medical research for the same laboratory or the same investigator eligible for approval under the health resources fund?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Minister of National Health and Welfare): 1. (a) Contributions from the health resources fund are paid to provinces in an amount up to 50 per cent of the reasonable costs of all basic equipment necessary for the operation of a newly acquired, constructed or renovated health training facility. Applications are received from provinces at any time and are generally approved within a few days, provided the projects are included in provincial five year programs approved by the health resources advisory committee in accordance with the act; (b) Applications are received by the Medical Research Council at any time from individual investigators for the support of all research equipment not eligible for support by the health resources fund.

2. The only limits to support by the health resources fund of the costs of basic research equipment required by a new health training facility are: (a) Equipment is ineligible if it is delivered before the date on which the contract is signed for the construction, renovation or acquisition of the facility; (b) Equipment is ineligible if it is not installed and ready for use within 18 months of completion of the facility.

"HATCH'S MILL"—PAYMENT BY SPONSORS

Question No. 891—Mr. MacEwan:

What are the names of the sponsors, referred to on page 5663 of Hansard, December 20, 1967, and what do the two sponsors pay for each half-hour of the C.B.C. production "Hatch's Mill"?

Hon. Judy V. LaMarsh (Secretary of State): I am informed by the C.B.C. as follows: The two alternating sponsors of "Hatch's Mill" referred to on page 5663 of Hansard were General Foods and Chrysler. In addition, a third sponsor, Procter and Gamble, was involved on a weekly basis. It has not been customary to require the corporation to disclose payments from sponsors as this would affect the position of the C.B.C. in the competitive business in which it is engaged.

MAIL COLLECTION IN HIGH-RISE BUILDINGS

Question No. 893—Mr. McCleave:

1. Does the Post Office Department provide for collection of mail inside all high-rise apartment buildings?

2. What is the policy with regard to mail collections in or from such buildings?

3. Has the Department turned down a request for in-site collection of mail from tenants of buildings of 15 storeys or more in height?

Hon. Jean-Pierre Côté (Postmaster General): 1. No.

2. The department places street mail receptacles as conveniently as possible outside of large apartment buildings where they will be accessible to the apartment dwellers as well as to other patrons in the same vicinity.

3. Yes. Because of the difficulties of collection the department does not normally place receptacles inside apartment buildings. However, apartment buildings of this size would usually be served by receptacles placed in the immediate area.

Orders for Returns

QUESTIONS PASSED AS ORDERS FOR RETURNS

QUEBEC—JURISDICTION OF ATLANTIC DEVELOPMENT BOARD

Question No. 417—Mr. Caouette:

1. Does the government intend to give the Atlantic development board jurisdiction over the eastern Quebec area?

2. Has the government received representations from the province of Quebec with regard to Quebec's Atlantic region?

3. What subsidies have been granted to the provinces under this program?

4. Has the government requested, or does it intend to request an opinion from the Supreme Court as to the constitutionality of expenditures of a regional nature?

Return tabled.

BRIDGES—FEDERAL FINANCIAL CONTRIBUTIONS

Question No. 533—Mr. McCleave:

1. Has the federal government or any department or agency thereof made financial contributions towards the building of bridges within Canada or on the Canadian border in the past 10 years?

2. If so, in what amounts and where?

3. On what authority are such contributions made, and what, if any, is the formula to share the costs with other levels of government or non-federal bodies?

Return tabled.

HOUSING—RESEARCH TO REDUCE COSTS

Question No. 699—Mr. McCutcheon:

1. Has the government undertaken research programs to reduce housing costs through the use of (a) new designs (b) new materials (c) new production techniques?

2. If so (a) what are the programs (b) what budget has been allotted?

Return tabled.

PUBLIC BUILDINGS—OFFICE SPACE IN CAMPEAU TOWERS

Question No. 746—Mr. Harkness:

1. What government departments have secured office space in the Campeau Towers?

2. What is the amount of space secured by each?

3. What is the cost of this space per square foot?

4. What is the cost of new furniture, carpeting, drapes, etc., for these offices?

5. What has been done with the furniture, carpets, drapes, etc., used in the offices which have been vacated as a result of these moves?

Return tabled.

[Mr. Côté (Longueuil).]

POTATOES—FEDERAL ASSISTANCE TO GROWERS

Question No. 789—Mr. MacDonald (Prince):

1. From 1950 to 1967, what federal assistance has been provided to potato growers either in subsidy payments, preferential tariffs, or transportation assistance, in what amount and in what years?

2. What has been the amount received by each province during that period and how many potato growers by province have been assisted?

3. In 1966-67, how many applications for assistance were received?

4. From 1950 to 1967, how many potatoes were marketed by each province and what amounts of revenue were received by potato growers, and during that time how many potato growers have there been per province per year?

Return tabled.

EXTERNAL AID—ASSISTANCE TO VIET NAM

Question No. 790—Mr. MacDonald (Prince):

1. How much money was spent on aid to Viet Nam in 1963, 1964, 1965 and 1966?

2. What form of aid was provided during those years?

3. How many persons served in Viet Nam as part of the external aid program, in what capacity and for what length of time?

4. During that period how much aid was requested, what amounts and by whom?

5. Was any aid requested that was not made available and, if so, what kind?

6. Was any aid refused?

7. How much is it estimated will be spent on aid to Viet Nam in 1967, and (a) what form of aid (b) how many persons are or will be involved (c) in what capacity and who are they?

Return tabled.

APPLICATIONS UNDER EXPLORATION ASSISTANCE PROGRAM

Question No. 813—Mr. Nielsen:

1. For the fiscal year ended March 31, 1967, how many applications for assistance were received under the northern mineral exploration assistance program of the government?

2. From whom, for what purpose and for what amount was each such application received?

3. How many of such applications were approved, in what amount in each case and for which specific applicants?

4. Since March 31, 1967, how many such applications were received, from whom, for what purpose and for what amount in each case?

5. Since March 31, 1967, how many of such applications were approved, for what amount in each case and for which specific applicants?

6. Has there been any cut-back in the amount available for the program for the current fiscal year or for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1969, and, if so, what is the amount of the cut-back in each case?

7. Is it the intention of the government to amend the regulations under which applications for assistance are made so as to broaden the qualifications of those eligible to apply for assistance under the program and/or have such amendments been made?

8. If so, what is the nature of such intended amendments and/or amendments in fact?

Return tabled.

SUBSIDIES TO SHIPYARDS ON STEEL HULL CONSTRUCTION

Question No. 846—Mr. Tucker:

1. What was the total amount of subsidy paid to individual shipyards on steel hull construction for the years ending March 31, 1962, 1963, 1964, 1965, 1966 and 1967?

2. What was the amount paid to similar shipyards from April 1, 1967 to date, and what is the estimate of the amount to be paid between now and March 31, 1968?

Return tabled.

FINANCE

FOREIGN EXCHANGE—DIRECTIVE TO U.S. SUBSIDIARIES TO LEAVE FUNDS IN CANADA

On the orders of the day:

Hon. Marcel Lambert (Edmonton West): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Finance. With respect to the statement he made on motions, will the minister advise the house whether the week end directive of the United States treasury department to Canadian subsidiaries of United States companies to keep their funds in Canada was made at the specific request of the Canadian government and, if so, when was that request made?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I discussed with the Secretary of the treasury of the United States, and my officials discussed with the officials of that department, the advisability of issuing a statement in view of the uncertainties that apparently existed in the Canadian market about the intent of the United States regulations. These discussions took place in the last few days while I was in Winnipeg. I cannot say exactly the hours at which I had these discussions with the secretary but they did occur within the last two or three days.

Mr. Lambert: Mr. Speaker, will the minister advise whether he has made any other requests of the United States government for assistance of any other sort, as he outlined in his statement, so that the Canadian authorities will get some form of assistance in maintaining the stability of the Canadian dollar in the international monetary market?

Mr. Sharp: Mr. Speaker, I should be glad to attempt to answer the question but I am not quite sure I understood it. Perhaps the hon. gentleman would be good enough to put it another way.

Mr. Lambert: The minister has referred to certain types of recourse the Canadian government would have with regard to maintaining the stability of the Canadian dollar. Has the Canadian government or the minister made specific requests to the United States government in respect of any of these forms of assistance, or is this simply something that one sets up like on a balance sheet of potential assets?

Mr. Sharp: I think my statement was quite clear. In addition to the foreign exchange and gold reserves that we have held we have access to large supplementary sources of finances through the International Monetary Fund. These involve a matter of the terms of agreements of the fund.

In addition to that, we have a reciprocal arrangement between the Bank of Canada and the federal reserve system whereby we can draw $750 million. These matters have been arranged for many months; they are not of recent arrangement. I also mentioned of course that under arrangements we have with the United States,—and this is a rather unique position,—we have unrestricted access to the United States long term market.

Hon. J. W. Monteith (Perth): Mr. Speaker, the minister mentioned in his statement a moment ago that some United States dollars had been purchased by Canada. Can he give us any specific figure in this respect?

Mr. Sharp: No, Mr. Speaker, I do not think this would be advisable. In due course, when the figures come out at the end of the month, the exact position of the exchange fund can be revealed.

Mr. Colin Cameron (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, will the minister tell us whether in the course of his discussions with the secretary of the treasury in Washington he dealt with the proposed legislation which will put an embargo on imports into the United States and subsidize exports from the United States, and which, if it goes into effect, will be tantamount to a devaluation of the United States dollar?

Mr. Sharp: I had some discussions with United States officials when they came to Ottawa for discussion of the balance of payments program. There have also been other discussions between officials of the Canadian government and the United States government. In reply to questions by the press I also indicated that if the United States were to put into effect a system similar to that of European countries, namely a surcharge on imports and a rebate on exports, we would take parallel action. I think this kind of action on the part of the United States is regrettable, and I must add that the same thing can be said about that kind of action by other countries. The United States is not taking the initiative in this matter; it is following a pattern established in Europe.

Hon. George Hees (Northumberland): Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask the minister whether he can give the house the government's estimate of the volume of earnings of United States subsidiaries operating in Canada which has been repatriated to the United States since January 1 as a result of that government's program to correct its balance of payments problem?

Mr. Sharp: No, Mr. Speaker. I do not think there is anyone in the world at the present time who would know that figure.

Mr. Hees: I have a further supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. I should like to ask the Minister whether on January 1 or immediately thereafter the Canadian government advised the United States that Canada has a yearly current account deficit of about $1 billion with respect to the United States and that therefore there is no justification for including this country in any United States program to correct its balance of payments program.

Mr. Sharp: Yes, Mr. Speaker. The Canadian government had many long discussions, and had them over the years, with the United States on this subject. The United States recognizes that Canada does not contribute to the foreign exchange difficulties of the United States. That is why Canada has such a special place and is exempted from most of the restrictions applied by the United States to other countries.

[Mr. Cameron (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands).]

Mr. Hees: Was this done immediately after the United States government announced its program?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Hon. D. S. Harkness (Calgary North): I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. I wonder if the minister could tell us whether the drain on Canadian reserves has been almost entirely due to the transfer of funds to the United States or whether a considerable proportion of this drain is a result of the transfer of funds to other countries?

Mr. Sharp: It is very difficult to answer this question with certainty. The information we have is that the funds were flowing from Canada to the United States and not abroad. We have no evidence that there was any particular drain, or any drain at all, arising from transfers outside the continent.

REPORT RESPECTING FOREIGN INVESTMENT IN CANADA

On the orders of the day:

Hon. R. A. Bell (Carleton): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a question to the President of the Privy Council, and in doing so may I express the pleasure of all hon. members at his obviously complete recovery from surgical ministrations. Could the President of the Privy Council tell the house when the report of the task force studying foreign investment in Canada will be available and whether it will be laid on the table of the house at this session?

Hon. Walter L. Gordon (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I thank my hon. friend for his kindly remarks. I did not know my recovery was so obvious, but we will just have to wait and see. The report of the task force has been completed and I hope it will be presented to and discussed by the cabinet this week, after which I may have more to say.

[Translation]

HOUSING

CENTRAL MORTGAGE AND HOUSING CORPORATION—STEPS TO PREVENT INCREASED INTEREST RATE

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Gilles Grégoire (Lapointe): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a supplementary question to the Minister of Finance?

Can he tell us if, following the decision taken by the Bank of Canada to increase its discount rate from 6 to 7 per cent, the government is contemplating steps to prevent the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation or the chartered banks from increasing their interest rate?

[English]

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Minister of Finance): No, Mr. Speaker. The long term reaction of the market to the increase in the bank rate has been very small so far.

ABOLITION OF INTEREST CEILING ON LOANS

On the orders of the day:

Hon. J. W. Monteith (Perth): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a question to the President of the Treasury Board.

An hon. Member: Bring him back.

Mr. Monteith: As the minister indicated in a speech to the annual convention of the National House Builders Association at noon today that he believed the interest ceiling on government guaranteed house building loans should be abolished, when will this move be implemented?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I remind the hon. member that questions relating to statements made outside the house may only be asked of the Acting Prime Minister in the sense that the hon. member asking the question seeks to ascertain whether the statement which was made outside the house represents government policy.

Mr. Monteith: Mr. Speaker, I wish to ask the Acting Prime Minister whether the statement I have referred to, which was made by the President of the Treasury Board, represents government policy.

Hon. Paul Martin (Acting Prime Minister): This matter will be considered, Mr. Speaker.

HEALTH AND WELFARE

MEDICARE—POSSIBILITY OF DELAY IN IMPLEMENTATION OF PROGRAM

On the orders of the day:

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Burnaby-Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a question to the acting Prime Minister. In view of the conflicting statements that have been made by ministers regarding medicare, and in view of the Prime Minister's repeated assurances that the medicare program is now law and would be carried out, I should like to ask the acting Prime Minister whether he can assure the country that any provinces desirous of proceeding with medicare will be able to do so on or after July 1.

Hon. Paul Martin (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, parliament has passed an act with respect to medicare. It is now the law of the land. It is permissive legislation. Its implementation depends on action by the provinces. Some provincial governments have asked the federal government to hear their views. Notwithstanding the fact that the law of the land is clear, no government could ever refuse to hear the provinces. The law is clear, however.

Mr. Douglas: I have a supplementary questino, Mr. Speaker. In view of the fact that the Prime Minister said a few days ago that this matter was being reconsidered by the cabinet, may I ask whether that reconsideration has been given and whether the government is now in a position to give a definite assurance that there will be no delay in allowing the provinces to proceed with medicare under the present legislation. I should also like to ask whether the government is ready to hand down a decision on how soon it will be able to give the provinces a definite assurance that they may proceed on July 1 or later.

Mr. Martin (Essex East): It must be clear to my hon. friend that no government has the right, nor has any political party the right, to ignore what is the law of the land.

Mr. Douglas: I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. I am sure that the minister under the strain of his recent travels is somewhat weary and probably did not catch the import of my question.

Mr. Knowles: He is not the white haired boy any more, either.

An hon. Member: Does he or doesn't he?

Another hon. Member: Only his hairdresser knows.

Mr. Douglas: Mr. Speaker, I will take no notice of these comments about the transformation in the Secretary of State for External Affairs and will confine myself to the question. In view of the Prime Ministers' statement that the cabinet was giving reconsideration to the matter, I should like to ask now whether the government has given reconsideration to it and whether it has reached a decision and, if not, how soon will it reach a decision?

Inquiries of the Ministry

Mr. Martin (Essex East): I have given an answer. I hope my hon. friend will conclude that that answer meets this question or any other similar question, and I do not think there is anything further that I need add. I know my hon. friend's purpose in asking this question. It is not to elicit information: He is seeking to embarrass the government, but without much hope.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I too was away from the nation's capital, but I have the impression that the Prime Minister had stated he was going to make a statement on the subject this week. Was I correct in that impression?

Mr. Martin (Essex East): The Prime Minister did make a statement.

Mr. Stanfield: I understood the Prime Minister was going to make a statement on this subject this week in the house. Is this a correct impression or is it not?

Mr. Martin (Essex East): I said, Mr. Speaker, that the Prime Minister made a statement at his press conference on Friday. I know of nothing further that can be added to what he said. The law of the land is clear. The house has passed the medicare legislation.

Mr. Stanfield: Mr. Speaker, some of us had the impression that the Prime Minister had stated he was going to make a statement on this subject in the house this week. Is this or is this not a correct impression?

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question which I should like to direct to the acting Prime Minister. He said that the law of the land is clear. Will he say if the government will leave that law alone?

Mr. E. Nasserden (Rosthern): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question for the Minister of National Health and Welfare. How many provinces have indicated their intention to go ahead with the medicare program on July 1?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Minister of National Health and Welfare): There is no formal procedure by which provinces officially notify the government at this stage of their intention to enter the medicare plan.

Mr. Nasserden: I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Could the Minister of National Health and Welfare indicate whether there has been any change. I believe he reported to the house some time ago that certain provinces—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Could the hon. member put his question.

Mr. Nasserden: My question is this: Have any provinces, which previously indicated that they would go ahead with medicare, now indicated that they are not going ahead with it?

Mr. MacEachen: There has been no formal procedure at any stage by which provinces indicate their intention of coming in. My hon. friend realizes that from time to time heads of provincial governments have stated their intention of entering the medicare plan and later have stated an opposite intention.

Hon. Michael Starr (Ontario): I have a supplementary question for the Minister of National Health and Welfare. I should like to ask him whether medicare will come into effect on July 1, 1968.

Mr. MacEachen: This question has been answered several times by the Acting Prime Minister.

Mr. Starr: I should like to ask the Minister of National Health and Welfare whether he has any supplementary comment to add to the answer given by the Secretary of State for External Affairs.

Mr. MacEachen: No, Mr. Speaker, the answer was lucid.

[Later:]

Mr. L. M. Brand (Saskatoon): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Acting Prime Minister related to the question on medicare that was raised earlier. Since the Acting Prime Minister has indicated that the government intends to go ahead with medicare on July 1, does this indicate a change in government policy regarding adherence to the four basic criteria that were laid down in the medicare bill?

Mr. Speaker: Order. I suggest that this is a question of debate and not the type of question that can be asked at this time.

Mr. Brand: Mr. Speaker, may I point out that I am merely asking for information. I am asking whether there is any indication that there has been a change in government policy in this regard. It is not a matter of debate at all unless the government wishes to make it so.

[Later:]

Mr. Nasserden: I have a supplementary question for the Acting Prime Minister relating to medicare. Have dominion-provincial relations deteriorated to the extent that the federal government now has no clear indication from the provinces of the extent to which medicare will be implemented in July next?

Mr. Speaker: I suggest to the hon. member that this question, as asked, is highly argumentative.

[Translation]

AGRICULTURE

ARDA—ACCESS ROAD BETWEEN LA SARRE AND JAMES BAY

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Gérard Laprise (Chapleau): Mr. Speaker, I should like to put my question to the hon. Minister of Forestry and Rural Development.

Can he tell us whether he has received from the Quebec minister of agriculture, a request for a financial contribution to the development of an access road from La Sarre to James bay in northwestern Quebec?

Mr. Speaker: I think that the question, in its present form, does not comply with the rules of the house and that it should be placed on the order paper.

[Later]

Mr. Réal Caouette (Villeneuve): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Forestry and Rural Development who is responsible to the house for ARDA.

Would the minister be prepared to consider the possibility of granting some assistance to build a road connecting the northwestern area of Quebec with James bay, a road which would permit the development of extraordinary resources in that region.

Hon. Maurice Sauvé (Minister of Forestry and Rural Development): Mr. Speaker, the hon. member knows that the provinces must submit those requests to the federal government.

Inquiries of the Ministry

Mr. Speaker: Order. The hon. minister has already replied to the question of the hon. member. But there again it seems to me that the question is rather general; I fail to see how it may be put verbally at this point.

Mr. Caouette: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order.

My question was not put today and is not general in nature. It refers specifically to a northwestern region of Quebec which has been neglected by both Ottawa and Quebec. I would like to know from the minister what steps are to be taken so as to obtain satisfactory results.

Mr. Speaker: Order. The hon. member knows that he can get a reply by putting his question on the order paper.

[English]

FERTILIZER—PURCHASES IN CONNECTION WITH DELIVERY SCHEME

On the orders of the day:

Mr. George Muir (Lisgar): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Trade and Commerce. In view of the importance of fertilizer in farmers' operations, would he discuss with the Canadian Wheat Board the advisability of including the purchase of fertilizers as well as seed grain under the special spring over-quota delivery scheme?

Hon. Robert Winters (Minister of Trade and Commerce): I will be very happy to do that, Mr. Speaker.

TURKEYS—POSSIBILITY OF LIMITING IMPORTATION

On the orders of the day:

Mr. J. N. Ormiston (Melville): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Agriculture concerning the continued importation of United States turkeys into Canada. Since the imposition of value for duty on United States birds has had no effect on the adverse situation of Canadian growers, will the minister now consider introducing limitations on the volume of imports?

Hon. J. J. Greene (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, no such action has been taken at this time but I shall be pleased to consider the hon. member's suggestion.

Inquiries of the Ministry

NATIONAL DISASTERS

SICILIAN EARTHQUAKES—ASSISTANCE BY CANADA

On the orders of the day:

Mr. A. B. Patterson (Fraser Valley): Mr. Speaker, I direct my question to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. Would he advise the house whether Canada has made any contribution to assist the survivors of the Sicilian earthquakes and, if so, what is the nature and extent of that assistance?

Hon. Paul Martin (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, my friend the hon. member for Spadina gave me notice of his intention to ask the same question. In reply to the question now put I would simply say that we are keeping in touch with the Canadian Red Cross and the League of Red Cross Societies as to a possible Canadian contribution for the relief of the earthquake victims in that section of Italy. However, at the moment it appears that Italian resources are adequate to meet all the requirements. The matter is being looked into further.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

VIET NAM—EXTENSION OF ACTIVITIES OF CONTROL COMMISSION

On the orders of the day:

Hon. E. D. Fulton (Kamloops): Mr. Speaker, I, too, have a question for the Secretary of State for External Affairs which is related to his own field of responsibility, where I am sure he will be much happier to remain.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Fulton: The question is, can the Secretary of State for External Affairs tell us the present position with regard to the work of the International Control Commission in Viet Nam and, specifically, can he say whether the suggestion that it be assigned increased responsibility for the policing of the borders of Cambodia and Laos so as to prevent infiltration from those countries has been accepted or is likely to be accepted?

Hon. Paul Martin (Secretary of State for External Affairs): No, Mr. Speaker, the suggestion has not been accepted and at the moment the prospects do not seem good for its acceptance, although the Canadian government has indicated its willingness to comply with the request of Prince Sihanouk.

Mr. Fulton: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Has the Canadian government had any direct consultation with the governments of Poland and/or India in an attempt to have our views prevail with respect to the work of the commission?

Mr. Martin (Essex East): We have been in contact with these governments, Mr. Speaker.

VIET NAM—EFFORTS BY CANADIAN GOVERNMENT TO EFFECT CESSATION OF BOMBING

On the orders of the day:

Mr. David Lewis (York South): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Acting Prime Minister in his capacity as Secretary of State for External Affairs. It is related to the one just asked. Can the Secretary of State for External Affairs inform the house what steps the Canadian government has taken or is planning to take to persuade the government of the United States to treat the recent Hanoi statements in a positive way and to cease immediately the bombing of North Viet Nam in the hope that it may at last become possible to end that disastrous war by negotiation?

Hon. Paul Martin (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, there was a reported statement of the foreign minister of North Viet Nam on January 6 that if the bombing stopped North Viet Nam would be prepared to enter into discussions. There are some questions about this declaration that the Canadian government would like to have answered. I instructed our representative on the commission to proceed to Hanoi where he now is. I am now awaiting a report.

Mr. Lewis: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. In view of the fact that the present administration of the United States has refused to cease the bombing, and also in view of the fact that the war threatens to spread into Laos and Cambodia, has the Canadian government considered joining with other governments to bring this matter, either through the United Nations or otherwise, to the attention of the American government so that the bombing may stop and an opportunity may be taken for an end to that war?

Mr. Martin (Essex East): There are limitations on the jurisdiction of the United Nations, as my hon. friend knows, but the Canadian government has not opposed discussion of this matter in the general assembly and would welcome an opportunity for the discussion of this whole question within the terms of the Geneva conference.

Mr. Lewis: Why don't we take the initiative?

COMPANY OF YOUNG CANADIANS

IMPROVEMENT OF PUBLIC RELATIONS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. J. N. Ormiston (Melville): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Acting Prime Minister. Could he tell the house what action is being taken by the government to improve public relations between the people of Canada and the Company of Young Canadians?

[Later:]

REQUEST FOR CESSATION OF FINANCIAL SUPPORT

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Robert Simpson (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Acting Prime Minister which is related to a previous question asked by the hon. member for Melville and not answered. In view of reports that three provincial premiers in western Canada have indicated that they may be interested in requesting that the Company of Young Canadians be withdrawn from their provinces, and in view of reports that the Quebec branch of this organization has broken away from the parent body and is still spending federal funds, will the government take the necessary steps to discontinue this unjustified and unnecessary spending of public funds?

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Hon. Paul Martin (Acting Prime Minister): I will note that question, Mr. Speaker.

TRADE

TOBACCO—IMPORTS FROM SOUTH AFRICA AND RHODESIA

On the orders of the day:

Mr. W. B. Nesbitt (Oxford): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of National Revenue. If I may, before putting the question I should like to congratulate him on his new appointment and wish him every success.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Nesbitt: The question is one of some urgency but perhaps the minister could take it as notice. Is he in a position to tell the house now what appropriate steps are being taken by his department to deal with the importation of tobacco from the Union of South Africa and from Rhodesia, which is presenting an immediate threat to the Canadian tobacco growing industry?

Inquiries of the Ministry

[Translation]

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of National Revenue): Mr. Speaker, first I should like to thank the hon. member for his good wishes, and I hope to be equal to the task which was entrusted to me by the right hon. Prime Minister.

With regard to tobacco imports, I shall get the necessary information and I shall give an answer to the hon. member in a few days.

[English]

CANADA PENSION PLAN

TOBACCO—INCREASED EXEMPTIONS TO ASSIST GROWERS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. W. H. A. Thomas (Middlesex West): Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the Minister of National Revenue whether he has any plans to assist the tobacco growers of Canada by obtaining from the provinces permission to increase the exemption under the Canada Pension Plan in regard to casual labourers from the present maximum of 24 days or $250 to the maximum requested of 40 days or $600.

[Translation]

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of National Revenue): Once again Mr. Speaker, I will take note of the hon. member's question but I think that part of that problem comes under the jurisdiction of the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. MacEachen).

[English]

INDUSTRY

SYDNEY, N.S.—INQUIRY AS TO GOVERNMENT ASSISTANCE TO STEEL INDUSTRY

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Donald MacInnis (Cape Breton South): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Acting Prime Minister. Has the government reached a decision in respect of assistance to the Sydney steel industry and is it prepared to make an announcement today as promised?

Hon. Paul Martin (Acting Prime Minister): I am not prepared to do so today, Mr. Speaker, but it will not be very long before we can say something definite.

Mr. MacInnis (Cape Breton South): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. If I may be permitted to do so, I direct it to the Minister of National Health and Welfare, to whom the Acting Prime Minister turned for information. Has this decision been finalized and, if so, when does he expect to make it known to the house?

Inquiries of the Ministry

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I suggest that it is not sufficient for the Acting Prime Minister to turn to the Minister of Natural Health and Welfare to give the latter the authority required to answer that question.

Hon. Robert Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Can the Acting Prime Minister give us any idea as to precisely what is meant by "not very long" in regard to announcing this decision?

Mr. Martin (Essex East): I would hope this week, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. MacInnis (Cape Breton South): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker, to the Minister of National Health and Welfare. Since the cabinet dealt with the question on Thursday last I would ask the minister whether it reached a final decision and, if so, what is that decision?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I suggest to the hon. member again, that this question should really be answered by the Acting Prime Minister.

Mr. Starr: Was he at the cabinet meeting?

[Later:]

Mr. Robert Muir (Cape Breton North and Victoria): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Acting Prime Minister. In view of the fact that many weeks have now gone by since the blow that struck the Sydney steel industry on October 13, to be exact, and in view of the fact that the cabinet representative from Nova Scotia has intimated time and time again both to the press and at public gatherings that an announcement that something would be done was going to be made, would the minister advise the house whether this most serious question was dealt with at the last cabinet meeting, and could he give the house a clear reply?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The very important question now asked by the hon. member is, to my understanding, pretty well the same question as that asked a moment ago by the hon. member for Cape Breton South.

Mr. Muir (Cape Breton North and Victoria): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Perhaps I can clarify my question. Is it the intention of the government to phase out the steel industry, as indicated by the minister of rural development in a speech he made in western Canada a few weeks ago?

Hon. Paul Martin (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, may I say that my hon. friend can be assured that my hon. friend the Minister of National Health and Welfare has been very vigilant in this matter, having in mind the interests of the people of Nova Scotia and of the area of that province particularly concerned.

Mr. Donald MacInnis (Cape Breton South): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question for the Acting Prime Minister. Will the Acting Prime Minister now make the statement that the government definitely promised would be made today?

Mr. Muir (Cape Breton North and Victoria): If you are so worried about the steel workers, answer.

BRITISH COLUMBIA—DEVELOPMENT OF SECONDARY MANUFACTURING CAPABILITY

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Frank Howard (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a question to the Minister of Industry. Inasmuch as British Columbia, according to the latest report has the second highest level of unemployment in Canada, what plans does the minister have for the promotion or development of secondary manufacturing industries in that province?

Hon. C. M. Drury (Minister of Industry): Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I do not propose to intervene in or interfere with the minister's proposed answer, but I have the impression that the hon. member is asking for a statement which might more properly be made on motions.

Mr. Howard: It was not my intention, Mr. Speaker, that the minister should make a statement on motions because that would be at some indefinite time in the future. Can he tell us now, because now is the crucial time? I point out that the minister was indicating his desire to say something about this matter.

Mr. Drury: Mr. Speaker, I would agree that to recite the steps being taken would take too long in the question period. I will be glad to advise the hon. member directly, though.

LABOUR RELATIONS

MARITIME UNION TRUSTEES—APPEARANCE BEFORE STANDING COMMITTEE

On the orders of the day:

Mr. H. W. Herridge (Kootenay West): Mr. Speaker, I wish to address a question to the Minister of Labour. In view of the latest reported interest of the United States department of labour, the F.B.I. and the R.C.M.P. in the operations of the Seafarers' International Union in both the United States and Canada, would the minister be prepared to have the maritime trustees appear before the standing committee on labour and employment so that the members of the house can be informed of their stewardship and of the facts relating to the latest developments?

Hon. J. R. Nicholson (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, there are no maritime trustees at the moment, the legislation having expired on December 31 last. I might say that I am expecting a written report from the maritime trustees on their activities up to December 31 last. When the report is received it will, of course, be tabled. Even though their trusteeship has expired it might be appropriate for them to appear before the committee, but until I have received the report I cannot say whether I should ask them to do so.

PICARD REPORT—DISAGREEMENT BETWEEN LONGSHOREMEN AND SHIPPING FEDERATION

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Warren Allmand (Notre-Dame-de-Grâce): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Labour. Would the minister report on the status of the disagreement between the longshoremen in Montreal and the shipping federation relating to the Picard report, and is any action being taken to resolve this dispute before the spring shipping season opens?

Hon. J. R. Nicholson (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, the series of collective agreements between certain unions of the International Longshoremen's Association, and the shipping federation, as modified by the Picard report, expired on December 31 last, and there are now no collective agreements in existence. I might say that negotiations between the unions and the shipping federation have opened with a view to a new series of agreements and, as one might expect, the recommendations of the Picard report are being considered in the course of these negotiations. Very recently—last week in fact—I assigned a senior official in the Department of Labour, Mr. Charles Poirier, to assist in the negotiations. He is the senior official of my department in the province of Quebec, and should be able to assist the parties in their discussions and negotiations.

POSSIBILITY OF PROCEEDING WITH LEGISLATION IN LIGHT OF OPPOSITION

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Robert Muir (Cape Breton North and Victoria): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Labour. In view of the widespread and violent opposition across the country to Bill C-186, is it the intention of the minister and the government to proceed with this legislation?

Hon. J. R. Nicholson (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, as hon. members know, this bill has been referred to the committee on labour and employment of this house. It has not had second reading. I hope that as soon as the committee is organized it will begin its hearings at as early a date as possible.

VETERANS AFFAIRS

MEANS TEST FOR APPLICANTS UNDER LAND ACT

On the orders of the day:

Mr. G. L. Chatterton (Esquimalt-Saanich): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Minister of Veterans Affairs may I direct this question to the Acting Prime Minister. According to a departmental directive, starting April 1 a means test will be applied to veterans who wish to become established under the Veterans Land Act. In view of the serious inequities and hardships to veterans that may result, will the Prime Minister give immediate consideration to revoking this directive?

Hon. Paul Martin (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, my hon. friend's question included not only a question but also a statement of fact that I will refer to my colleague the Minister of Veterans Affairs who will be in the house tomorrow, I believe.

NATIONAL DEFENCE

BURRARD DRY DOCK COMPANY—CONTRACT FOR DESTROYER RECONVERSION

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Harold E. Winch (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, may I ask a most urgent question of the Minister of Finance, who is ultimately responsible for government expenditure. In view of the fact that the shipbuilding industry on the west coast is now suffering from a 50 per cent unemployment rate, will the minister give immediate and serious consideration to reinstating the contract that was awarded to Burrard Dry Dock Company Limited in connection with destroyer conversion?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, if all questions involving financial matters were addressed to the Minister of Finance I think he would answer nearly every question put in the house. I suggest that this question should be directed to the minister responsible.

Mr. Winch: Mr. Speaker, prior to the recess we were told during our discussion of the budget by the Minister of Finance and by the then minister of national revenue that consideration would be given to industries that were in serious difficulty. Therefore I thought the minister was the logical person to direct my question to.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Winch: The minister did not tell me to whom to address it so may I address it to the Minister of National Defence. In view of the unemployment level prevailing in the shipyards will the Minister of National Defence take under serious consideration the reinstating of the destroyer conversion contract that was allocated to Burrard Dry Dock in North Vancouver?

Hon. Léo Cadieux (Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, the conversion of the "Restigouche" class was deferred for an indefinite period as a result of the budget restraints imposed upon the Department of National Defence along with other departments. I am very sorry, therefore, but I cannot at this time agree to the suggestion of the hon. member.

Mr. Winch: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. I was not referring to general policy. May I ask the minister a question about the contract which was allocated with respect to the conversion of the destroyer Chaudière. Will it be reinstated?

Mr. Cadieux (Terrebonne): It will not be, not at this time.

Mr. Robert McCleave (Halifax): A supplementary question for the Minister of Industry. Can the minister advise us whether the processing of the tenders for the four DDH's—destroyer escorts—has been completed? If so, how soon may we expect the award of these tenders?

Hon. C. M. Drury (Minister of Industry): Mr. Speaker, I think I indicated it was expected that a contract could be entered into early in the spring, in March or April. We are working to that deadline.

SHIPPING

BRITISH COLUMBIA—CONSTRUCTION OF RESEARCH AND COASTGUARD VESSELS

On the orders of the day:

Mrs. Grace MacInnis (Vancouver-Kingsway): I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. I hardly know which minister to direct my question to, which minister is "it", so to speak. Will the appropriate minister give immediate attention to not delaying the construction of research and coastguard vessels in British Columbia so that we may keep in Canada many hundreds of skilled shipyard workers who at present are being invited to go to the United States to work under guaranteed employment contracts?

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member has made her representations and I assume that the minister who is "it" has noted them.

[Translation]

WINTER NAVIGATION ON ST. LAWRENCE RIVER

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Gilles Grégoire (Lapointe): Mr. Speaker, I wished to put a question to the Minister of Transport but in his absence I shall put it to the Acting Prime Minister.

As ice-jams which have formed and are still forming on the St. Lawrence between Montreal and Quebec have caused floods, and as navigable waters like the St. Lawrence come under federal jurisdiction, could the Acting Prime Minister tell us whether the government intends to compensate the victims of these floods?

Hon. Paul Martin (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I will refer that question to the Minister of Transport.

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask a supplementary question.

Since those ice-jams and floods are due in the first place to the weather and second, mainly to the almost criminal negligence of the Minister of Transport who fails to solve those problems—

Mr. Speaker: Order. The hon. member should not take advantage of a question to make charges; he must limit himself to asking a question or requesting information.

Mr. Grégoire: In that case, Mr. Speaker, here is my supplementary question: Can the Acting Prime Minister tell us if the government has given or will give the people responsible for the use of those icebreakers instructions to intervene effectively instead of remaining idle, as has been the case this year, when ice-jams begin to build up?

Mr. Speaker: Order. Orders of the day.

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Speaker, I should like to put another question to the Acting Prime Minister. Could he tell us whether he also intends to draw that matter to the attention of the Minister of Transport to make him alter the policy of his department concerning the activities of the icebreakers on the St. Lawrence during the winter?

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member is making a representation which will be noted by the minister.

Mr. Grégoire: It is not a representation, Mr. Speaker, it is a question.

[English]

Mr. Thomas M. Bell (Saint John-Albert): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. In view of the extreme ice conditions in the St. Lawrence river this year will the government now realize that there is no future in icebreaking, forget about icebreaking in the St. Lawrence in the winter and use the ports of Halifax and Saint John?

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Speaker, I should like to put a supplementary question.

Since there are great possibilities for winter navigation on the St. Lawrence, could the Acting Prime Minister tell us whether he intends to take that problem into consideration instead of preventing the economic development of one region in favour of another?

Mr. Speaker: Order.

[English]

GRAIN

WHEAT—POSSIBILITY OF DELAY IN NEW INTERNATIONAL AGREEMENT

On the orders of the day:

Mr. R. R. Southam (Moose Mountain): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Trade and Commerce which is of deep concern to western grain growers. Can the minister report to the house on the present status of the international world wheat agreement? Can he assure us that the tardiness of a number of countries in not signing the agreement will not delay its coming into effect on July 1 next?

Hon. Robert Winters (Minister of Trade and Commerce): Mr. Speaker, the situation remains unaltered. It is still difficult to sell wheat in world markets. We are in constant touch with the producing countries of the world. I have been in touch with them about this matter. I feel that wheat prices will be such as to encourage the implementation of the international wheat agreement. As the hon. member will recall, the date for the ratification of the agreement is in mid-1968, and I am still hopeful that that will be the case.

WATER RESOURCES

POLLUTION BY OIL ON PACIFIC COAST

On the orders of the day:

Mr. T. S. Barnett (Comox-Alberni): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Acting Minister of Transport concerning water pollution on the Pacific coast. Can the minister tell the house whether pollution by oil has resulted from the sinking of the motor vessel Schiedyk in Nootka Sound just off Vancouver Island? Has the vessel been salvaged or destroyed?

Mr. Speaker: I doubt that the question is in order, but if a reply is ready perhaps the house will hear it.

Mr. J. A. Byrne (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, realizing that the minister was indisposed I asked for a report on this matter over the week end. Summarizing the extensive report I wish to say that all necessary steps and precautions are being taken to prevent the pollution of coastal waters. A log boom has been thrown around the area and absorbent straw is available. Degreasing solvents are also available. Of the 600 tons of oil that were reported to be in the tanker approximately 300 tons have escaped, at a rate of about three gallons per minute. That oil is not causing serious pollution at this time. There has been no loss of marine life and no loss of life on land among wildlife or water fowl.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I was wondering whether the hon. member was going ahead with the full report.

Inquiries of the Ministry

EXTERNAL AID

INDIA—CANADIAN CONTRIBUTION FOR POPULATION CONTROL

On the orders of the day:

Mr. R. W. Prittie (Burnaby-Richmond): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Secretary of State for External Affairs, and I gave him notice of it. During the visit to Ottawa last week of the minister of health and family planning of India did he make a request, formally or informally, for a Canadian contribution to India's population control program?

Hon. Paul Martin (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the minister from India visited the external aid officials. I have not had a report from them but when I get it I shall be glad to discuss it with my hon. friend.

FISHERIES

APPLICATION OF LAW RESPECTING STRAIGHT BASE LINES

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Frank Howard (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, I wish to address a question to the Acting Prime Minister. Knowing how he likes to hew to the law of the land and maintain it to the letter, may I ask him when he will adhere to the law of the land with respect to the declaration of straight base lines which parliament passed some years ago?

Hon. Paul Martin (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, as my hon. friend knows, we have already begun the process of marking straight base lines and there will be further progress in this regard. This is a matter that must be carried out in a way that will observe the alleged rights of other countries. We are observing these so as not to defeat the purposes which my hon. friend and I both have in our minds.

Mr. Howard: I thought the government recognized those rights some time ago—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE

POSSIBILITY OF PASSING AMENDMENTS AT CURRENT SESSION

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a question to the Minister of Labour. My question relates to the amendments to the Unemployment Insurance Act forecast in the resolution which was introduced today. Is it the intention of the government that these amendments should be considered and the bill passed during the course of the present session?

Hon. J. R. Nicholson (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, in reply to that question I can say that that is the government's present intention since this is an item of high priority.

BROADCASTING

IMPLEMENTATION OF CANADIAN POLICY

The house resumed, from Thursday, December 21, consideration in committee of Bill No. C-163, to implement a broadcasting policy for Canada, to amend the Radio Act in consequence thereof and to enact other consequential and related provisions—Miss LaMarsh—Mr. Batten in the chair.

The Chairman: When the committee rose on Thursday, December 21, clause 2 of the bill was under consideration together with an amendment thereto proposed by the hon. member for Lapointe.

On clause 2—Broadcasting policy for Canada.

Mr. Sherman: Mr. Chairman, shortly before the house recessed for Christmas on December 21 I was making some remarks about this proposed legislation. Since then the leadership contest has, of course, been resolved—not the leadership contest within the government but the contest for the leadership of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation—with the appointment last week of Dr. Davidson and Mr. Picard as the chief executive and operating officers of the corporation. I am sure all of us who took part in the events leading up to the introduction of this proposed legislation into this chamber, as well as all who served on the broadcasting committee and are interested in broadcasting even in a peripheral way, wish the new officers every success in what will be a difficult and responsible task, especially in the context of the constitutional situation we are experiencing at this time.

I realize I have only about two minutes of my speaking time remaining at this stage in the examination of the bill. In my remarks on December 21 I drew attention to a number of provisions in the bill with which I did not find myself completely in agreement, weaknesses which I hoped could be corrected in the course of our clause by clause study. In the seconds remaining to me I should like to say there are other areas in the bill which leave me in a state of anxiety.

My criticisms and comments of December 21 did not express my point of view completely. For example, I am not happy about the provision which authorizes a five-year capital budget for the corporation, though I believe a period longer than one year would be valuable. I realize that the new officers would have to operate under severe restrictions if they were obliged to return year after year for approval of their capital budget, and I believe they deserve more than one year of leeway in this regard. Nevertheless I am not happy about the five year provision and it seems to me an acceptable compromise could be worked out that would be satisfactory both to the officials of the corporation and to those of us here who must try to exercise control over the affairs of the C.B.C. My feeling is that we should agree on a three year rather than a five year period.

Again, I am disturbed about the clause calling for fines up to $100,000 should broadcasters violate certain provisions of the bill. In my opinion this is unnecessarily harsh and, by implication, discriminatory inasmuch as it implies that broadcasters in the private sector make sufficient money to enable them to withstand penalties of this kind. This, I submit, is both untrue and unfair.

I realize, Mr. Chairman, that I have reached the limit of the time allotted to me. I look forward to the clause by clause examination of this measure and hope that constructive amendments will be accepted by the government. In conclusion, I wish Dr. Davidson and Mr. Picard every success in the discharge of their new responsibilities.

Mr. McCleave: Mr. Chairman, last year my Christmas present to the Secretary of State who is piloting this legislation through the house was a promise not to speak in order that the bill could pass quickly. Unfortunately it did not, so my Christmas present this year will come early. I shall make a speech but I promise to make it a reasonably short one.

• (4:10 p.m.)

First, I should like to join with my hon. friend from Winnipeg South, a former broadcaster, as I am, in expressing good wishes to Dr. Davidson and Mr. Picard on their appointments to head the C.B.C. I would like to offer only one or two caveats about the danger of appointments of this kind where neither of the parties has had direct experience in the broadcasting field. It seems to me that the problems of the C.B.C. arise primarily in Toronto and Montreal, the originating points for the two language networks in this country. Yet these gentlemen who are being brought in are being posted to Ottawa. Therefore they have the formidable task of not only learning about the broadcasting industry but also of dealing with problems in the C.B.C. arising 100 miles away in the one case and in the other several hundred miles away from their seat of operations. I know both gentlemen will prove in time to be excellent people in these positions. But I am concerned about whether shock treatment is not needed now to help the C.B.C. and whether the public can afford on the job training for people who have great potential but have had no direct experience in this industry.

Sir, it should be a great season for television and radio. Canadian minds will be diverted to other matters than the settling-in problems of Dr. Davidson and Mr. Picard. We should have new programs this year. One will be "The Perils of Paul," an educational, lighthearted series on the constitution and, more particularly, one man's jousting with the doctrine of cabinet solidarity. Another program I can see coming up is "The Perils of the Other Paul," subtitled the story of a man who goes through life proving that what matters is not what a fellow has in his head but what is on his head a case of dye and do. Then there could be "Mitch's Marauders," the story of a gang which takes money from rich and poor alike, leaving everybody poor. I would not like to leave out a Canadian version of "Green Acres," the story of a man trying to prove that his kind of corn can grow in the cities and, finally, "Mission Impossible," which will turn out to be the case for most of the Liberal party leadership aspirants.

With regard to the broadcasting bill I want to make three points and I shall do so briefly because later they will be the subject of amendments. I would like to indicate to the minister what some of us in the official opposition would like to see by way of change in this legislation. The first point deals with clause 2(h) which states:

> (b) where any conflict arises between the objectives of the national broadcasting service and the interests of the private element of the Canadian broadcasting system, the objectives of the national broadcasting service must prevail;

My quarrel with that is that it could be a guide to the Canadian radio and television commission and to the cabinet when the issuance of licences is dealt with. If the C.B.C.

puts in a claim for a particular area the licence might very well be awarded to the C.B.C. even though, as we know in the case of Saskatoon, the C.B.C. is not immediately able to erect a station in the area. The danger of this form of statement of broadcasting principle is that when the public purse is slim, and it is pretty slim now, the C.B.C. could tie up many areas in Canada. The other station in Moncton, New Brunswick, is an obvious example in the maritimes, and there are five or six altogether across Canada. This subclause could be considered a direction to the commission that these licences be held for the C.B.C., and yet the public would not have the protection of the C.B.C. having to erect the stations immediately and give service to the people in those areas. In short, there are areas in Canada which could be denied the option of choice.

I do not see why we cannot change this provision so that the issue would be resolved in favour of the public. For example, I can see that in Saskatoon and other places both stations might be owned by private companies but one would be on the C.T.V. network and the other on the C.B.C. network. I do not think it is necessarily public ownership of the second station that we are looking for in all places. Surely what we want is to give the public the right to choose between two networks. I hope the minister will be good enough to consider an amendment when that part of clause 2 is considered.

My second point deals with clause 29. The maximum fine that can be imposed on malefactors is set forth in this clause as $100,000. I suggest that this places a stigma on the industry and really tags it with deliquency. In my opinion a smaller amount would do the job just as well. After all, surely nobody seriously thinks that any magistrate would impose a fine of $100,000. I cannot see that any station would break a regulation to the extent that it would profit by as much as $100,000 by so doing. Therefore I suggest we take a second look at this clause and bring the proposed maximum fine down to a more reasonable amount.

My final point deals with clause 47 which covers the drawing up of a five year capital program and a five year operating budget. The evidence of the minister's very capable deputy minister, Mr. Steele, was to the effect that one could forecast operating budgets reasonably well for three years and that thereafter one could not foresee the difficulties that could arise in the fourth and fifth years. I simply suggest that we make the legislation fit the facts and that when this clause is considered we amend it to set the term at three years instead of five.

[Mr. McCleave.]

I know that some people would like to have the budgets introduced on a year by year basis and debate them year by year. But undoubtedly a look can be taken at broadcasting every year because we will have the estimates of the Canadian radio and television commission before us and therefore will not be sloughing off C.B.C. affairs for three years or five years. On balance I think it is a good idea to try for long-range planning but a five-year period is impractical. A three-year period has been found to work and in my opinion we should strive for that. These are the points that I or somebody else will be raising and that I will be supporting as the debate proceeds.

[Translation]

Mr. Caouette: Mr. Chairman, just a few words on clause 2 dealing with general provisions of Bill No. C-163 which provides in paragraph (d) that—

> —the programming provided by the Canadian broadcasting system should be varied and comprehensive and should provide reasonable opportunity for the expression of conflicting views on matters of public controversy, and the programming provided by each broadcaster should be of high standard, using predominantly Canadian resources—

• (4:20 p.m.)

Mr. Chairman, I understand that Bill No. C-163 has not yet carried but on the French network of the C.B.C. television we too often see Russian, Polish, Ukranian films with subtitles or translated. When we read the subtitles printed at the bottom of the picture—when we care—we realize that the translation is a language that almost no Canadian can understand. I believe it is abusing the Canadian public to present such films which may have some value, I admit. We are given, for instance, Italian, or Russian or Polish films of high quality which Canadians cannot understand because quite often the subtitle below the picture is the same colour as the picture, white on white; so you can imagine if it is easy to read. And they are shown to us nearly every week. Not later than last week, I was watching one of those movies, following the national and international news, at the end of the evening. Frankly, I must say that the management of the C.B.C. or those who are responsible for such programs do not choose too adequately the movies presented to Canadian audiences as far as quality is concerned.

Mr. Chairman, I believe that the responsible people of the C.B.C. should, as Bill No. C-163 recommends, choose top quality movies, movies that Canadians are able to understand. Let them show English movies to English Canadians and French movies to French Canadians.

Subsection (e) of the bill mentions that:

—all Canadians are entitled to broadcasting service in English and French as public funds become available;

This is the reply given by the minister every time we ask for the extension of the C.B.C. French network to British Columbia. When we call for C.B.C. television in areas such as Chibougamau-Chapais, in northern Quebec, or English television in northern Ontario, the minister always replies that as public funds become available, the network will be extended to the areas not served at present by the C.B.C.

Mr. Chairman, since 1962, we have been asking the C.B.C. and the Secretary of State (Miss LaMarsh) to carry out the objective of the government, that is, to provide the C.B.C. programs in remote areas, to offer, for instance, French programs to French Canadians in British Columbia and English programs to Quebec residents who do not understand French. We have no objection to that.

We have been asking for those services for the Canadian people since 1962 but the necessary funds have not yet been made available.

However, Mr. Chairman, when we listen, for example, to the C.B.C. evening news at 11 o'clock, either on the English or on the French channel, we notice that the C.B.C. sends thousands of emissaries or employees all over the world. The fact, Viet Nam in the national news has a more prominent place than Canada itself.

We have emissaries in Japan, China, Africa and India. We have people in Moscow, in London and in Europe, in short in every country in the world. We also have some in Cuba.

However, Mr. Chairman, we do not have the means to provide television coverage for the Canadians who live in Canada. How can such an inconsistent argument be conceived? We spend unsparingly in every country of the world but we cannot provide television coverage for our Canadian people. Then, we are told: When funds are available, we shall provide television coverage for the Canadian people who are without it. I have never heard in my life such an argument.

We spend millions. The C.B.C. costs a fortune to the Canadian people. It is not the Africans nor the Vietnamese who pay our taxes but the Canadian people. Instead of giving services here in Canada, we spend moneys abroad. We send people abroad to stroll about under tropical suns. In the meantime, our people, in northern British Columbia, in northern Ontario, in northern Manitoba and in northern Saskatchewan are without television. Let us shiver! Let us pay taxes! Let us send C.B.C. employees to warm up their hides in fairer climes! Now, that is the logic of the government.

Mr. Chairman, I know there are C.B.C. people who will not appreciate what I am now saying. I see some of them every evening, people who are in Viet Nam. At this time of year, in January, February, they are in bathing suits. It is warm. Millions are spent to have those people travel. This week in Viet Nam, the next in Japan, and the following, in some other country. He may even be transferred to Africa. And the Canadian people are asked to wait for the services of the C.B.C. in their own homes.

Mr. Chairman, it is time to stop public funds from being wasted in other countries. Television programs show us photographs of North or South Vietnamese being killed or of Americans imprisoned after falling into a trap. This may be important, but in my opinion there are more important things in Canada which should be shown to the Canadian public. However, that is how things are in Canada.

Canadians are more interested in what is happening in British Columbia than in what is happening in India. One should know what is happening in India. But when you ask a Canadian: Do you know British Columbia? He answers: No. When you ask someone in British Columbia: Do you know the province of Quebec? He answers: It is the province which wants to separate from the rest of the country. With the exception of cities such as Toronto, where many people visit the province of Quebec, or Montreal and Quebec, where people often go to Toronto, what is known of Quebec? Nothing. What do we know of New Brunswick, of Prince Edward Island? Almost nothing.

Further on, it is said that the C.B.C. should strive to maintain national unity. The purpose of the national broadcasting system must prevail. National unity will be brought to the attention of the people. In fact, the bill provides that. I have it here:

—contribute to the development of national unity and provide for a continuing expression of Canadian identity.

(4:30 p.m.)

What is happening in Japan may to a certain point be of interest but not only that; what is happening in China may also be of interest but not only that. I have mentioned it and I am saying it for the hundredth time. On the national news of the C.B.C., out of approximately 15 minutes, we are given ten minutes of foreign news, when it is not twelve, with only three minutes of national news. And there are other tricks too. We have news at six o'clock or 6.30 and other news at 11. At 6.30, there are regional news—which are called national—that do not reach all corners of the province of Quebec nor all French-speaking areas as far as the French network is concerned. The eleven o'clock news bulletin is different from the 6.30 p.m. newscast, which is often of national interest. The latter is disregarded and another bulletin is given, consisting mostly of foreign news.

Mr. Chairman, this is beyond me, since the corporation is supposed to serve the Canadian people. Why should our farmers, workers, miners be interested in foreign countries? What they want to know is what is taking place in their own district. Let us call back our officials travelling throughout the world in order to serve the Canadian people and inform them about national events. I do not object to those people keeping their jobs. I am not suggesting that they should be dismissed, but let us stop paying their plane fares and prevent them from travelling from one country to another and let us put them to work here in Canada to inform our population. It is up to the C.B.C. to inform the Canadian people about national events. Such is the task that the corporation should perform in our country.

Mr. Chairman, paragraph (f) stipulates and I quote:

—there should be provided, under the management of a corporation established by parliament for the purpose, a national broadcasting service that is predominantly Canadian in content and character;

That meets my views. If the bill is passed, put into force and respected, then perhaps we will have more Canadians in the C.B.C., instead of having outsiders, or some of our own people who are rather outsiders.

[Mr. Caouette.]

Clause 2(g)(ii) stipulates as follows:

—be extended to all parts of Canada, as public funds become available,

It is always the same old story—

—as public funds become available,

Mr. Chairman, it is physically possible to give C.B.C. radio and television service to the country. Is it more difficult to give television service to Vancouver than to show televised programs on Viet Nam in Canada? If it is physically possible to show us films taken by Canadians in Africa, do not tell me it is more difficult to extend to Vancouver English and French programs of the C.B.C. It is certainly not more costly but, Mr. Chairman, the hon. Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Martin) should practise in Canada what his department or what the C.B.C. practise in foreign countries. We are accusing nobody.

We now have a new management in the C.B.C.

I congratulate the new chairman and his assistant or deputy chairman and I feel that, in view of their competence in that field, we can expect them to take attitudes, to reach decisions that will satisfy the Canadian citizens and take their aspirations into consideration. It is only on that condition that the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation will further the understanding that is so important for all Canadians whatever their origin.

Mr. Chairman, paragraph (i) of clause 2 reads as follows:

—facilities should be provided within the Canadian broadcasting system for educational broadcasting.

We agree. There are various ways of educating the people, the young, the adults, men, women. Education includes a lot of things.

These last few years, for example, the only people invited to appear on C.B.C. educational programs such as "Conférence de Presse", "Point de Mire", "Tous pour Un" or "Deux plus Un", are those who advocate separatism or a socialist state, the nationalization of all private enterprise or almost, and the nationalization of all means of production and distribution. These people are always appearing on C.B.C. programs.

Mr. Chairman, in my opinion these programs are not truly educational. I do not object to the fact that those people are invited, but other opinions should be equally represented.

Mr. Grégoire: Would the hon. member allow me a question?

Mr. Caouette: Certainly, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Grégoire: Does the hon. member have some statistics or specific facts available indicating how many they are—either Liberals, Conservatives, Social Crediters, independentists or socialists—what are the specific facts or statistics in that connection.

Could the hon. member for Villeneuve (Mr. Caouette) supply them to us?

Mr. Caouette: Mr. Chairman, in answer to the hon. member for Lapointe (Mr. Grégoire), I wish to say that I do not have a specific figure, but I know that all those programs on public opinion which I see on television present most of the time separatists or socialists as guests. Each time a socialist arrives from Europe he is immediately interviewed on the C.B.C. It always happens like that and such has been the situation for three or four years.

Mr. Grégoire: Would the hon. member allow me another question?

Mr. Caouette: Yes.

Mr. Grégoire: Even though the hon. member for Villeneuve does not have the exact figures—granting he does not have them—could he give us some approximate statistics? What is the basis for such an assertion? Could we have—

Mr. Caouette: Mr. Chairman, I have already said this but I shall repeat it again: I have been watching television programs and even now—

An hon. Member: Almost all of them?

Mr. Caouette: —yes, almost all of them, on television.

Mr. Grégoire: I do not have time. Even in the evening?

Mr. Caouette: Even in the evening, certainly. On public opinion programs, I notice that the Liberals, who are in office, are perhaps invited less frequently by the C.B.C. than Conservatives, the members of the N.D.P. or of the Social Credit party. It is the separatists we are seeing there—maybe not the hon. member for Lapointe yet, because he is not taken seriously by the separatists of the province of Quebec—

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Caouette: —and he knows it.

Mr. Grégoire: Figures should be given.

Mr. Caouette: I understand, but we can obtain some directly from the C.B.C. We only have to put questions to the Secretary of State who will tell us the names of those invited by the C.B.C. to take part in public opinion programs.

Mr. Grégoire: Will you put that question?

Mr. Caouette: Yes, we shall. The minister is not aware of it, I am sure, but we can put questions on the order paper and obtain replies. I shall certainly do so to know exactly what persons have been invited by the C.B.C. and what political views they expressed. For instance, the leader of the sovereignty-partnership movement in the province of Quebec, Mr. René Lévesque, has appeared three days in a row on the C.B.C. network. I heard him last night on the program "Deux plus un". He said he did not know where he was going but that this would not stop him.

• (4:40 p.m.)

The day before yesterday, it was Mr. René Lévesque in Victoriaville; the other day he was shown in Chicoutimi. I think it was Victoriaville first, and Chicoutimi next. The following evening, there was a half hour television program.

Have you seen a Liberal, a Conservative, a member of the N.D.P. or a Créditiste speak on television on the same subject or in similar circumstances? No. We have seen the hon. member for Lapointe (Mr. Grégoire) on television, when he was a Crédististe, because he was taken seriously then. Nobody takes him seriously today.

Mr. Grégoire: Would the hon. member for Villeneuve allow me another question?

Mr. Caouette: Certainly.

I admit, Mr. Chairman—

Mr. Grégoire: The hon. member for Villeneuve says exactly what I admit: That I am not seen as often now as when I was a Crédististe.

Then, that means that independentists are victims of discrimination.

Mr. Caouette: Mr. Chairman, there is no discrimination.

There was a party recently in Montreal during the holiday season. All evening, the hon. member for Lapointe ran after the cameras to be photographed. I saw him in action. He will say that it is discrimination—

Mr. Grégoire: Was the hon. member for Villeneuve invited?

Mr. Caouette: Certainly I was. However I stayed home. I did not run after the television cameras, as the hon. member for Lapointe usually does.

Then, Mr. Chairman, that does not mean that the hon. member for Lapointe must never be invited by the C.B.C. No. He must be invited just like the others. He is the leader of a political group; very well. The C.B.C. can invite him. However, the C.B.C. airwaves must not be used to serve one cause more than another. I am against that, not againt the C.B.C. but against some individuals in the corporation who decide what invitations will be sent out.

Therefore, I think that if Bill No. C-163 is applied reasonably, if its spirit is respected, it will help to make the C.B.C. management understand that this corporation must serve all the people and not only a group of people, in short that this corporation is dependent on the public funds of the whole country—not only of one region, of one group of people, but of all the people—and that it must aim at serving the Canadian people as a whole.

[English]

Mr. Thompson: Mr. Chairman, first of all I wish to offer my congratulations to Dr. Davidson and Mr. Picard on their appointments to administer the affairs of the C.B.C. I am sure there is no one in this house who does not wish them the very best of success in their new assignment. We all know their tasks will not be easy. There is a tremendous challenge before them not only to administer the affairs of the C.B.C. in an effective way, particularly in view of the prospect of budgetary allotments being approved for a longer period than they have been in the past, but also to lay out the policy for program management in the C.B.C. So at the outset of my brief remarks I wish these two gentlemen well and I trust that as they assume the responsibility for broadcasting by the publicly owned corporation they will be able to meet effectively the challenge and responsibility which face them.

What concerns me most of all in this bill is that the changes it will implement so far as the C.B.C. is concerned offer little prospect for improvement in the area of the managerial control of programming. I think this legislation very definitely improves the technical side of the C.B.C. and of broadcasting in general, both in television and radio. But it disturbs me that I can see very little in it that gives any assurance at this time that there will be an improvement in programming.

Some of those responsible for the production aspect of programming believe that the right to freedom of speech gives them authority to express themselves as they see fit over the public broadcasting services of the country. In fact there are many producers who believe that the country owes them large budgets in order to permit them to express their own ideas. I believe this has been one of the great weaknesses of management in the past years. It is imperative under the democratic process that when public money is spent on public broadcasting everyone involved in the process of broadcasting must be responsible to a higher authority. It is only in fulfilling our responsibility to the people who supply the wherewithal to cover the cost of the C.B.C. that we can ever expect to bring about effective policies in relation to programming as well as management.

I should like to bring to the attention of the committee the fact that in my belief Germany has worked out a more satisfactory basis for a programming policy than any other public broadcasting system in the free world. They have done so by establishing a body of people numbering 70 who give advice on programming policy and who reflect public opinion by themselves being representatives of various organizations. These organizations include the federal and provincial parliaments, organizations such as the home and school organization and the German counterparts of the Canadian teachers federation, the Legion, workers unions, agricultural organizations, civic clubs, and the like. In other words, the programming policy on the public broadcasting system reflects the views of a cross-section of the public.

This bill provides for a full time executive body of five members and a part time body of ten members. It is my opinion that while these men may be able to supervise the technical aspects of broadcasting in a very effective way they will have little time left to give proper attention to the programming policy. It also seems to me that the number of members is not large enough to give true representation of a cross-section of the population of Canada so as to arrive at a proper consensus. There should have been within the bill some means of providing a more satisfactory sounding board for public opinion in this regard. In fact this is one of the most difficult areas that I believe Dr. Davidson will face simply because he will find it extremely difficult to find enough time to devote to this area of management. Furthermore, he will not have the necessary support from a cross-section of public opinion, support which he will need to effect proper supervision of the corporation.

When I spoke on this bill previously my remarks were made from the standpoint of a parent and I raised the important problem of family life in relation to the bill. I think there is no more important aspect of this bill than programming and its effect on family life. Our late Governor General Vanier was moved to establish the Vanier Institute of the Family in this country. In my view television could be a most effective means of assisting in achieving or preventing the achievement of this goal.

I do not wish at this time to deal with programming at any length. A great deal of time has already been devoted to this subject in this debate. However, I could not help but think that last night on the program "The Way It Is" there was a deliberate attempt to mock one of the most important aspects of family life and the whole moral fibre of this country. The program concerned religion but in fact it was nothing more than a straight, deliberate mockery of Christianity and religious issues. Very often it seemed that the reaction of the audience was what I can only describe as hyena laughter. The program was intended to make a mockery of religion and create controversy.

• (4:50 p.m.)

When we go back to the early history of the C.B.C. and in particular consider some of the recommendations of the Aird commission in 1929, which were actually a very important factor in the emerging of the C.B.C. at a later date, we find it was agreed then by those who took part in the debate in this house that the Aird commission had stated something very important so far as public broadcasting was concerned in saying that where religious broadcasting was allowed there should be regulations prohibiting statements of a controversial nature.

It seems to me that those responsible for the type of show that was seen across this nation last night—I refer to "The Way It Is"—and especially that part of the program making a mockery of Christianity, are acting in defiance of what has been accepted as a most important principle. It was announced last night on this program that next week a portion of the program will be devoted to drugs. In fact, it was announced that part of the program would be on the drug culture of Canada. A statement was made to the effect that whether we like it or not we live in a drug culture. I ask this question: Is there any assurance to the parents of this country that this program will not be yet another promotion for l.s.d. and marijuana, as has been the case in previous programs?

Where is there that chain of responsibility that will effectively guide those responsible for management and program production and make sure that this type of program does not do further damage to the young people of this country? Will the program bring out such reports as I read just the other day in the Globe and Mail where it was reported that in New York city alone 250 young people have been committed to mental institutions because they are suffering from insanity caused by the use of l.s.d.? Will it bring out some of the other dangers in the general use of drugs, in the smoking of pot or the use of other drugs so easily available to our young people? Will the program encourage our young people to participate in this kind of harmful activity?

We contend that we must have some assurances as we consider this bill because I repeat that I can see nothing in the bill that will place the new management of the C.B.C. in any better position. There is nothing in the bill that we can see which will control or direct programming policy so far as our public broadcasting system is concerned. For this reason I intend, as I said before—and I think there are many in this house who will agree with me and I hope the minister will also agree—to move an amendment that will strengthen the bill by giving those responsible for the management of the C.B.C. more specific direction and guide lines.

Tragically, the C.B.C. has had a strong tendency to produce plays, interviews and in-depth stories which can only be interpreted by parents as intended to undermine family life. This is why I appeal to the committee and the minister to see whether it is possible to amend the wording of the bill in such a way that the operations of the corporation and the responsibility and authority of those charged with its management will be strengthened. The amendments to which I have referred will be put forward to this end.

I would again remind the committee that unless there is a channel of responsibility for everyone who sits in any kind of position of authority we can expect what has been happening all too often in the pattern of events in the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation. I refer to those who are able to commit a constant assault on character, undermine faith in God or in religion in general, undermine respect for law and authority and destroy sound home life and the knowledge of right and wrong. It seems to me this has come about because of the domination of a minority who misuse the C.B.C. to spread propaganda and perversion of whatever kind it may be.

More and more of the money of the taxpayers of this country is being diverted to deal with the increasing social wreckage. It seems to me that our national broadcasting corporation ought to have as one of its basic aims the strengthening of this aspect of Canadian life. I am reminded of the fact that only two years ago 80,000 Canadian mothers and citizens presented members of this house with a challenge. What are we going to do about it? Are we going to listen to the recommendations that they made? The home and the family must be given some consideration in our deliberations in this house on the bill before us.

Therefore, Mr. Chairman, I tell the committee that we intend to introduce amendments which we hope will receive favourable consideration. In our view our amendments will strengthen the bill. We do not wish to destroy it. We do not wish to block it or prevent it from being passed by the house. It is necessary that the bill be passed as quickly as possible. However, we are very sure that in this and other areas the bill must be strengthened. In this respect I agree with the hon. member for Winnipeg South who has spoken about other aspects of the bill which need strengthening. Therefore, in spite of all the time that has already been spent in the house and the committee on this matter we should not think we have done all we can to make this bill what it ought to be in regard to responsibility, proper control and lines of authority so far as the management of our public broadcasting service is concerned.

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, if you recall, the last time we discussed the Bill No. C-163 we were on an amendment which I moved on Wednesday, December 20, 1967. I then moved to replace the word "should" in clause 2 (b) in which it is provided that:

—the Canadian broadcasting system should be effectively owned and controlled by Canadians—

I moved to replace the word "should" by the word "shall", because in fact, in the former legislation, there was also a proviso that the radio and television stations should be owned by Canadian citizens, in view of the fact that airwaves are limited and, consequently, so are the licences. And I asked that the wording be changed to the word "shall" so that radio and television stations would be effectively owned by Canadian citizens and residents.

I was also complaining about the fact that the only two private television stations in the city of Quebec were owned in majority by foreign interests, that is Famous Players Canadian Corporation Limited, an American company, and I was asking to change this wording in the new legislation so that such things would not happen again.

At that time, Mr. Chairman, I gave a list of the shareholders, directors and officers of the two Quebec television stations, namely channel 4 CFCM-TV and channel 5 CKMI-TV, which both belong to the same company, foreign interests. I also mentioned who the shareholders were and how the law was being circumvented.

Since then, Mr. Chairman, I have received several letters from citizens living in Ontario, out west and in the maritimes—I could produce those letters—who tell me: you have managed to get the names of the real owners of the Quebec TV station; we find that in an underhanded way it belongs to American interest; could you send us a list of the owners and shareholders of the privately-owned television stations in Toronto and in Hamilton, I believe. I even have two letters coming one from the west and the other from the maritimes.

Therefore, Mr. Chairman, I am wondering if the Secretary of State (Miss LaMarsh), before the end of the consideration of this bill, could ask her officials to prepare as quickly as possible, in order that she may table it, the list of shareholders of radio and television stations. Somebody may ask why radio and television? Well, Mr. Chairman, the reason can be found specifically in clause 2 of Bill No. C-163, which reads as follows, and I quote:

It is hereby declared that

(a) broadcasting undertakings in Canada make use of radio frequencies that are public property and such undertakings constitute a single system,—

Licences to operate a radio or a television station cannot be granted to all those who request them, because in order to operate such stations, they must have a wave length and wave lengths are not numerous; as a matter of fact, they are even scarce.

This is why freedom does not necessarily exist in that field; only those who obtain a permit from the federal government and the Department of Transport following the approval of the Board of Broadcast Governors can operate television and radio stations. The members of that organization do not grant many permits, because the airwaves are scarce. And it is precisely on account of the exclusiveness, the scarcity in that field that a permit is necessary and that consequently, the public must exercise greater control on the operation of those radio and television stations.

Since the airwaves are part of the public property, since they are controlled and restricted, it seems to me it is essential to know who uses them and how they do it.

Subclause (b), the one which I would like to have amended, states:

—the Canadian broadcasting system should be effectively owned and controlled by Canadians so as to preserve and strengthen the cultural, political, social and economic fabric of Canada;

But if our airwaves, our operating permits for radio and telvision stations are left in the hands of foreigners, then, Mr. Chairman, the law no longer applies. Here, in the case of the two Quebec stations, we have seen that the majority holders of shares in those stations are Famous Players Canadian Corporation Limited. With such a name, one would think that Famous Players Canadian Corporation Limited is a Canadian corporation.

But when one looks at the ownership of Famous Players Canadian Corporation Limited, one finds that 51.834 per cent of the shares are held by American citizens, that is 900,390 shares out of a total of 1,737,072. Therefore, in this indirect way American citizens can control television programs.

• (5:00 p.m.)

Mr. Chairman, I believe that, according to the requests and to the letters I have received not only from Quebec but from other provinces, the Secretary of State should table in the house the list of shareholders, of the owners, and the number of shares each holds in these radio and television stations.

I see for instance that in the two television stations of Quebec, CHRC Limited holds 1999 shares out of a total of 10,000. CHRC Limited is a radio station. Who owns CHRC Limited? These are all intermediary companies that become owners of the television stations and it is also noted that station CKCV a competitor of CHRC Limited, also owns 1,998 of the 10,000 common shares of Television-Québec-Canada Ltée station.

So I should like to know if all these intermediary radio and television companies are amalgamated with each other. I should like to know who really owns each of these radio and television stations and this is all the more important since airwaves are public property and the allocation of wave lengths is very limited and these companies must obtain a licence, and furthermore all these data are already available to the Board of Broadcast Governors.

Then I shall ask the hon. minister whether she is prepared to table as soon as possible to-day or to-morrow, the list that her officials will be able to let us have for each television station. As far I am concerned, I would be interested in a list of all the radio and T.V. station owners and shareholders in Quebec, as well as the number of shares they own.

Would the hon. minister be prepared to table a list of the shareholders of radio and television stations in Quebec? And if other members are interested in getting a similar list regarding other provinces, would the hon. minister also be prepared to table such a list?

[English]

Miss LaMarsh: Mr. Chairman, I do not think there is any particular reason for my department to go to all the difficulty of getting this information just for purposes of idle curiosity. If the hon. gentleman has some reason for asking for certain information in connection with a particular station then I will, of course, undertake to do my best to get that information. However, it may not be available instantaneously. I hope this debate is not going to drag on for many more days, but if it does I might have time to get the information for him before it concludes.

If the hon. member is asking for information about a particular station I will be glad to undertake to try to get it if there is any point in doing so. All kinds of questions have been put on the order paper and other information has been requested, but we cannot have the time of civil servants occupied in unproductive ways on questions which arise out of curiosity, the answers to which are not really intended to be made use of in one way or another. If the hon. member is serious about this and makes his request, then I will certainly give it my attention.

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, I think I have a very serious reason to ask that.

In my last intervention on that subject, in December, many citizens—I do not say thousands, but several citizens from Quebec and other provinces—mentioned the following point, that in the majority of Canadian television stations, American film companies own great numbers of shares, so that they can impose films they want to show and which our television stations, even though they are controlled in a majority by Canadian shareholders, are forced, by these American companies, to show; precisely because they own so many shares.

Another reason I would like to mention would stem from what the hon. member for Lotbinière (Mr. Choquette) said last December 21, as reported at page 5744 of Hansard. I quote:

> —all the programs on channel 4, otherwise he would have noticed that the programs broadcast are typically programs of interest to Quebecers.

And the hon. member for Lotbinière added:

> Consequently, I do not believe that from a social and cultural point of view, the threat is as great as the hon. member would lead us to believe.

The cultural aspect comes up. If, in the other stations, such as in the Quebec stations, Famous Players Canadian Corporation Limited holds a majority of shares, it is obvious then that Famous Players would much rather have the television stations in Quebec show American films dubbed in French instead of original French movies which are inevitably of a greater cultural value if they come to us in the original version.

It is obvious, Mr. Chairman, that if we are continuously buried under translations of American films simply translated into French, where everything is arranged for technical rather than for artistic or cultural reasons. Then, in such cases, cultural and social values are not protected on channel 4, in Quebec, simply because a film company holds many shares in the Quebec television station and, for strictly financial purposes, it chooses to show its own films.

I was told—and this is the answer I want to get from the hon. Secretary of State—that according to the list of the shareholders of privately owned television stations not only in Quebec but everywhere in Canada, companies such as Famous Players Canadian Corporation Limited have tremendous interests in almost every such television stations, so that the culture which we think we are developing in Canada is influenced by American companies, by film producers instead of the Canadian and Quebec firm.

If those figures could be obtained in order to prove that if Canada is being increasingly Americanized by a medium as important as television, it is precisely because American interests and film producers have their say in cultural matters in Quebec and in Canada.

I feel therefore, Mr. Chairman, that the Secretary of State will agree with me that such an investigation is essential. It is important that we be enlightened about this matter, because it is not only of matter of safeguarding economic values, but actually of preserving cultural and social values.

I should also like to point out to the hon. Secretary of State that such a report need not take that long to prepare. There are not that many T.V. stations in Canada; there are barely 10 in Quebec. Moreover, that information is already in the files of the Board of Broadcast Governors. It is just a matter of getting them out. We could then check the facts and, as early as tomorrow, resume our study. We could then see whether Famous Players really control culture in Canada, whether they can impose upon us in Quebec mere translations of American films which do not have, by far, the value of original films in the language of origin.

I think that the minister will then understand that my argument has a serious basis. If the minister agrees to supply these data only for the Quebec stations I will be satisfied. I believe that there are possibly 10 private stations in Quebec. It would suffice to bring out photostats of the shareholders lists on file with the bureau of broadcast governors and we could have them on hand when this bill is taken into consideration tonight at eight o'clock or tomorrow at 2.30.

Citizens from other provinces have written to me to have the same information concerning their own television stations. They should ask their own members to ask for this if they think it is appropriate.

So, in view of the serious reason I have given, would the Secretary of State, be willing to supply us, let us say by tomorrow at 2.30, with the lists of shareholders and the number of shares owned by each in private television stations of Quebec? Can the minister give us this?

• (5:10 p.m.)

[English]

Miss LaMarsh: Mr. Chairman, I would be willing to find out whether such information is available. I do not know how long it will take to get it but I shall try to do so. In the meantime I cannot accept as valid some of the points which my hon. friend has raised.

He said that dubbing in French in films that have been made in the United States constitutes a usurpation of the cultural air waves. Clearly, he would prefer to see films that were originally made in French. I take it he would like to see films that have been made in Belgium, France or other French speaking countries instead of films which have been made in the United States. He was not referring to Quebec films because few films have been made in Quebec which can be shown over the French television network. My hon. friend knows that even when Radio Canada makes films, such as the three which were made and shown in December and January, there is considerable outcry about their cost. It is not very likely, therefore, that enough full length feature films will be produced in Quebec to meet the demand of French network television stations for French speaking movies.

Indeed, French radio and television have been faced with problems and have received benefits. One of the problems has been that it has been difficult to obtain original material in the French language from outside Quebec. Accordingly, there has been considerable initiative to produce more films in Quebec in the French language. There has not been so much initiative in English speaking Canada to produce its material in this country because so much material is available at cheaper rates from the United Kingdom and the United States.

With respect to the suggestion that motion picture companies which own large blocks of shares in broadcasting networks may affect the programming of network stations by requiring them to carry company films instead of films made elsewhere, may I say that the private French stations are not affiliated in a network. I think my hon. friend knows that most English stations are in a network. I believe there is only one independent English station in Canada. Films are purchased by the network and used throughout the network, but the individual stations within the network may be individually owned and there is no relationship between them.

With respect to the C.B.C., of course, films are purchased by the C.B.C. and offered to its affiliates. I am not certain whether the case which my hon. friend has suggested is true for Quebec. It may be. Before I allow these allegations to stand I should like to know at this juncture whether the information he seeks is readily available. I do not know whether it is. In any event, I do not think that the point is sufficiently important to delay the discussion of the bill. If my hon. friend does not think it is all that important perhaps, if we come to the appropriate clause before six o'clock, he might agree that we stand that clause and that I bring some report to the house at eight o'clock.

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, I am quite satisfied with the answer of the hon. Secretary of State. If she tells us that she will do her best, I think we must believe her. Besides, if there are special points like these, we can come back to them on the motion for third reading or at some other stage.

I would only like to make a distinction between what the hon. Secretary of State has said and perhaps the actual situation of the French T.V. station. It is obvious that the C.B.C. is doing its best. Mr. Chairman, I must congratulate the French network of the C.B.C. for doing its very best to produce as many original programs in the French language as possible and to present French language motion pictures. I do not in the least blame C.B.C. employees. On the contrary, I think they should be congratulated for they succeed very well in presenting good programs. Since there is less material available in French than in English, the French network has a more difficult task.

But, for the private stations, the problem is different. I should like to mention at this point that my remarks concern the private television stations in Quebec rather than the C.B.C. which, I admit, is doing all it can. I am thinking mainly about private stations such as the one in Quebec city, for example. When a station belongs to Famous Players, an American company which produces American films, it is obvious that the company which owns this station prefers to show American films translated into French and then sell them to the Quebec stations rather than show films which would have a greater cultural value. It is obviously normal for an American company to try to show its pictures before others. But all this derives from the fact that an American company has been granted operating permits for the two television stations in Quebec city. I object against that Mr. Chairman. I understand quite well that the Famous Players company, which is a film producer, wishes to show its own pictures but then those pictures have been dubbed and the station is not interested in showing original pictures, since their own pictures are American pictures dubbed in French.

• (5:20 p.m.)

Since the Secretary of State recognizes the fact that our television and radio stations should belong to Quebecers and to Canadians, I should not like to see any loopholes left in the act such as the word "should." If we recognize the merits of the argument advanced by saying "should," we have the responsibility to avoid all loopholes by saying: the stations shall or must be owned by Canadian residents and citizens.

That is why in my amendment, I said that the stations shall and not should be owned by Canadian citizens.

I should like to make a few remarks with regard to a comment made by the hon. Minister of Manpower and Immigration (Mr. Marchand) on December 21, 1967, which I did not have the opportunity to rectify. As can be seen on page 5744 of Hansard for December 21, 1967, the minister said and I quote:

> However, I know that some Quebecers should be interested in making profits, in having that station under their control, but I do not think that it is the responsibility of the government to decide which members of the company are going to make profits.

Mr. Chairman, I agree with the Minister of Manpower and Immigration. It is not the responsibility of the government to decide who is going to make profits, but the question is: Who will make profits with a television station such as the one in Quebec which is very profitable, foreigners or Canadians? I do not want to know who will make profits as between Quebecers and Canadians, but I nevertheless think that it matters very much that such a television station be owned by Quebec or Canadian interests and that those profits go to Canadians or Quebeckers, not to foreigners who will impose their culture upon us.

On the other hand, during the same debate, and while I had not yet had the opportunity to make a correction, the hon. member for Lotbinière (Mr. Choquette) stated precisely what I quoted earlier and I repeat:

> —he would have noticed that on channel 4, the programs broadcast are typical programs of interest to Quebecers.

The hon. member for Lotbinière should provide us with statistics in that respect.

Mr. Choquette: Does the hon. member want to provide statistics? How many American films and how many French films are shown on channel 4? Does the hon. member have statistics?

[Mr. Grégoire.]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, I am very happy that the member for Lotbinière should ask this question.

Obviously, the owners of television station channel 4 in Quebec are not required to give out the information I seek. But if the member for Lotbinière will join me, we could petition the Board of Broadcast Governors which could obtain a reply from the owners of channel 4, because channel 4 operates under a licence from the Board of Broadcast Governors, not from the member.

Mr. Choquette: I am asking whether you have any statistical data?

Mr. Grégoire: I repeat that I can hardly obtain statistics, because I am not the one who grants the licence. It is different when the C.B.C. is involved. The C.B.C. is a crown corporation and we can obtain replies from them; it is different with a private station. The request must be made through the bureau of broadcast governors.

I look at the Quebec television station on occasion and no one can call me that it is a typical Quebec station when according to what I have been able to see at least, we are more often given French translations of American films than original French films. We should get statistical data and that is why I am again putting a question to the Secretary of State to satisfy both the member for Lotbinière and myself.

Could the Secretary of State ask the Board of Broadcast Governors to inquire into this matter in order to determine what programs are mere French translations of American programs and what programs are essentially French?

It would be most interesting to know from a cultural point of view. Now, the member for Lotbinière cannot make assertions such as he made on December 21. Nor can I any longer make any and that is why I carefully avoided them. But since the station belongs to American interests, I think that we are then perfectly justified in asking the Board of Broadcast Governors to investigate this matter.

Mr. Choquette: May I add a word?

Mr. Grégoire: Yes. Certainly.

However, all I wish to add to what I have said to the hon. member for Lotbinière—and I will certainly allow him to speak about that —is that he cannot make assertions about the proportions nor can I, because we do not have the statistics.

Now, if the Secretary of State of Canada is agreeable, she can require the Board of Broadcast Governors to conduct an investigation on that matter in order to have definite statistics. Then we will be able to discuss them.

As the hon. member for Lotbinière is anxious to raise the problem, I yield the floor immediately, but I may return to that subject, as it is one of my amendments.

Mr. Choquette: Mr. Chairman, I will be very brief.

First of all, I want to point out to the previous speaker that unlike him, I am not making charges against channel 4. He claims that channel 4 is broadcasting American-inspired programs. He is the one who makes the charge and then he tells us that his allegation is not founded on any statistics. Therefore he is illogical, not me.

Personally—

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, I think the hon. member would allow me to make a correction. If the hon. member for Lotbinière takes the trouble to read the official report tomorrow, he will notice that never at any time this afternoon or during the debate last month did I make any charges against channel 4.

I simply raised this matter: since that station is owned by Americans, is French culture in Quebec really protected? I was very careful to say that I did not have any accurate statistics and to ask that they be produced though.

But I did not accuse anyone. Moreover, I pointed out a statement of the hon. member for Lotbinière who said:

"I note that especially on channel 4, the programs are typical of Quebec."

There are some, but are they a majority or a minority?

Now, the hon. member for Lotbinière should read Hansard tomorrow and he will realize what I have just said.

Mr. Choquette: Now, Mr. Chairman, I do not wish to carry on that discussion because I know that the minister would like to expedite the proceedings.

However, the hon. member mentioned the broadcasting of American pictures. But although he made that suggestion, he is unable to give specific figures or statistics to support his assertions.

However, I am going to make a little suggestion to him. Should he care to go to the reading room, to take a look at L'Action or Le Soleil of Quebec and see what programs are on channel 4, he will see that apart from dubbed films, films of French origin, essentially French productions are often shown. I myself can bear witness that films are shown which are essentially French productions; I have no statistics but I know it very well.

As far as the establishment of programs is concerned, it is very easy. The only thing the hon. member has to do is to take a look at Le Soleil or L'Action, to look at the movie section. Indeed, on the first page, there is an index showing on what page he will find the list of television programs. The hon. member knows how to read and he will realize that the programs on channel 4 are essentially, basically Quebec ones. He knows that; it is useless to make believe that it could be otherwise.

Secondly, when the hon. member says that channel 4 is controlled by American interests, I unfortunately have to say, Mr. Chairman, that this does not correspond to the facts, because channels 4 and 5, which are two television stations, are largely controlled by Canadian interests.

• (5:30 p.m.)

Here is the breakdown: 50 per cent are Quebec interest and the member knows it. Mr. Gaston Pratte, a French Canadian is president.

Mr. Grégoire: He only has only one share out of 10,000.

Mr. Choquette: Granted, but he is the chairman of the board of directors.

The general manager of channel 4 in Quebec is Mr. Jean Pouliot, and it ill becomes the member for Lapointe (Mr. Grégoire) to insinuate that Jean Pouliot might find it in his own interest to promote a culture other than the French culture; he is the son of Doctor Adrien Pouliot, former vice-president of the C.B.C., one of the pioneers of the French radio network out West. I will not be told, Mr. Chairman, that the Pouliots are opposed to the expansion of the French culture.

Mr. Grégoire: That is demagoguery!

Mr. Choquette: I say it is demagoguery on the part of the member to make such insinuations.

Here is the breakdown of the shares of channels 4 and 5: 50 per cent are held by Quebecers. The member himself said so on page 5740 of the Hansard for December 21: 50 per cent of the shares are Quebec-owned.

The other 50 per cent are held by Famous Players. Now, only half of the interests in Famous Players are American; therefore, 75 per cent of the interests in channels 4 and 5 are Canadian, and 25 per cent American.

I also want to point out to the hon. members that, in 1954, we Quebecers were happy to see TV stations inaugurated in the Quebec City. I should like to remind the member that at that time, few were interested in investing in television, that few believed in the eventual prosperity of a television station.

The hon. member knows very well that without the help of Famous Players, we would not at that time have had our television stations in Quebec city. Heaven knows how much television, and particularly the C.B.C., which after all is a federal agency, have helped to spread French culture. There are separatists who want to pull down everything, overthrow all federal institutions. However, French culture is flourishing in Quebec precisely because a federal agency, the C.B.C., has allowed it to flourish and develop more than ever.

Mr. Chairman, channels 4 and 5 are thus 75 per cent owned by Canadian interests, 50 per cent Quebec owned, 25 per cent Canadian owned in the general sense of the word, and 25 per cent American owned. The situation is explained by the fact that at the time when these television stations were opened, very few people were willing to invest in them because they believed it was too risky.

Mr. Chairman, the hon. member is well received when he applies to channel 4 to buy time; at least, the last I have heard is that, he is supposed to appear on that channel. Therefore, let nobody tell me that channel 4 is impervious to new ideas.

I admit that editorials can be acceptably oriented. They have a right to express their views. I admit that the hon. member has been ill-treated in some editorials on channel 4, because he was asked to resign when he declared himself a separatist. It was said on channel 4 that the hon. member had no right to become a separatist after securing a federal mandate from his electors. He could never forgive channel 4 for asking him in an editorial to resign, go back before his electors and tell them: I am no longer a federalist but a separatist, what do you think of me? The hon. member will know at the next election what his electors think of him, and I should not want to be in his shoes, Mr. Chairman.

Therefore, I conclude these few remarks because I wanted to tease the hon. member a little. He will forgive me, because he knows how to tease also. But speaking objectively, the hon. member knows very well that channel 4 programs are basically and essentially Quebec ones. He knows very well that channels 4 and 5 are stations controlled by a great majority of Canadian interests. Therefore, his assertions must be refuted and that is why I thought it was my duty to correct his statements.

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, there are of course several points to be challenged in the statement just made by the hon. member for Lotbinière. He says that I bear channel 4 in Quebec a grudge, and that is the very word he used, for having asked me to resign when I became a separatist.

If the hon. member for Lotbinière will consult Hansard, he will see that I asked identical questions in 1963. Therefore, the statements of the hon. member for Lotbinière are far from being true. Obviously, he is not aware of the efforts we have been making for some time to try to canadianize the means of developing our culture here in Quebec and to make them more truly representative of the province.

Mr. Chairman, the hon. member for Lotbinière shows that he does not understand much about business, when he says that it is 75 per cent Canadian and that Famous Players Canadian Corporation Limited is 50 per cent Canadian, 50 per cent American.

According to the figures given, Americans own 900,390 shares of Famous Players Canadian Corporation Limited out of a total of 1,737,072 shares, that is 51.834 per cent.

The hon. member for Lotbinière should know that between 50 per cent and 51.8 per cent, that means control or no control. In owning 51.8 per cent of the shares, Americans have the complete control, and those who own 48.2 per cent do not have much to say. That is the difference between 50 per cent and 51.8 per cent. If it were 50-50 in round figures, in sonorous and flowery language, that would mean equal partners, as the hon. member for Lotbinière said, but as soon as one has 51 or 52 per cent, that means that he has the control. That is as clear as day. Whoever holds 50 per cent of the shares plus one has the last say. If the hon. member for Lotbinière wants to tell me that it is the one who holds 49.9 per cent of the shares, I will tell him then that he is wrong.

Mr. Choquette: I wish to ask a question, Mr. Chairman. It is estimated that 50 per cent of the shares of Famous Players are held by Quebecers but 50 per cent of the stations are Canadian. That makes 75 per cent. Now I ask the hon. member...

Mr. Grégoire: No, I refuse to accept what the hon. member is saying.

Mr. Choquette: ... who is the administrator of the television station? Is it an agent from Paramount or a French Canadian from Quebec?

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, I refuse to accept what the hon. member has just said. It is all very well to utter high sounding sentences but let us keep our feet on the ground. It is not fifty-fifty in the case of Famous Players; it is 51.8 per cent American and 48.2 per cent Canadian. Therefore the Americans have the last say.

That is crystal-clear.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order, please. It seems that we are now discussing remarks made by an hon. member to another hon. member. If we want to make any progress, we should come back to clause 2.

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, we are considering clause 2 and my amendment which states that radio and television stations should be owned by Canadian citizens.

51.8 per cent of Famous Players is owned by Americans; therefore, they hold the majority of votes. If Paramount Pictures holds 51.8 per cent of the votes, Paramount Pictures have the upper hand in the company. Mr. Chairman, if there were in this house 133 liberal members against 132 members in the opposition, one could say that it is 50-50, but nothing would be approved, since there would be one member more on one side; that makes all the difference in the world.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order. The bill now under consideration is not a legislation stating how Famous Players is made up and to whom their shares belong, but it is a bill which specifies that funds for television stations must be mostly invested by Canadians. I would ask the hon. members to come back to that clause.

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, it so happens in the present case that Famous Players is the majority owner of both television stations in Quebec City and since the hon. member for Lotbinière denies that foreigners are effectively the owners, I am trying to convince him—if it is finally possible to make him see the light—that in fact foreigners are owners of the television station in Quebec city.

Mr. Choquette: It is completely false.

• (5:40 p.m.)

Mr. Grégoire: It is Famous Players who control the majority of the shares of the Quebec station. The member for Lotbinière means 50-50, but it is not so. It is 51.8 against 48.2 It is the same for a government; it has the majority when there are 133 members and not 132. It is only one unit short, but it makes all the difference in the world.

Mr. Choquette: I shall teach the member to count. It is 75 per cent and 25 per cent.

Mr. Grégoire: It makes all the difference in the world or else the member cannot count. Because Famous Players are entitled to 50 per cent of the votes—and even more, as we shall see later—it is the American interests being in the majority who make the decisions in the name of Famous Players at voting time.

Mr. Choquette: There has never been any American intervention.

Mr. Grégoire: It is clear that the majority American interests are the ones who decide through their vote on behalf of the Famous Players Canadian Corporation Limited.

Mr. Choquette: On a point of order, Mr. Chairman, this debate is dragging on unnecessarily. There has never been any American intervention on channel 4 or 5, and the hon. member has no right to insinuate such a thing. This debate should end here and now. The hon. member has made his point, so did I, and any further talk is useless. If he refuses to understand, there is nothing to be done. There never has been any American intervention on channel 4 or 5. Let it be known once and for all that the interests are in majority Canadian and the administrator is Mr. Jean Pouliot, a French Canadian from Quebec city.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order. The Chair has tried as far as possible to hear both members. We are not discussing the situation of the television stations in the province of Quebec or Quebec city, but discussing the amendment moved by the hon. member for Lapointe whereby subclause (b) of clause 2 would be amended by the substitution of the word "shall" for the word "should". I would suggest to the hon. member that he stay with the amendment he moved himself.

Mr. Grégoire: Of course, Mr. Chairman. But the rest of the amendment should be read also, because when you say that I want the word "should" replaced by "shall", the matter may not be very clear. The amended subclause would read as follows:

—that Canadian broadcasting system shall be effectively owned and controlled by Canadians so as to preserve and strengthen the cultural, political, social and economic fabric of Canada;

It is not, then, the management of the station—

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order. The amendment I have read is the amendment that has been written by the member himself. I have read it exactly as written by the member.

Mr. Grégoire: Yes, Mr. Chairman, I read the clause when I introduced the amendment and I shall read it again:

—the Canadian broadcasting system must be effectively owned and controlled by Canadians—

There is no mention of administration and the administrator, Mr. Jean Pouliot of Quebec city. The member from Lotbinière said a moment ago that I had something against Mr. Jean Pouliot, and I wondered where he got that impression. I have absolutely nothing against Mr. Pouliot. Far from it. I think he is a good fellow, a good Quebecker, and I have absolutely nothing against his father, who has done much in the setting up of French stations in Western Canada. I admit it, Mr. Chairman, and that was demagogy on the part of the hon. member for Lotbinière to have me say that I had something against the father of the director who had shares or a few shares—hardly 5 per cent—in the television station. The hon. member for Lotbinière may laugh. The hon. member for Lotbinière would like the debate to end, precisely because he has no more arguments. Because he realizes that his arguments were false and erroneous, he would like that the debate to end.

Mr. Chairman, I say that television and radio stations should belong to Quebeckers.

[The Assistant Deputy Chairman.]

The Quebec station does not belong in majority to Quebeckers, and that is so true that the present cabinet recognized it when, in order to legalize the situation of Paramount Pictures, interests in western Quebec, it had to pass exceptive legislation and an order in council in 1965. I challenge the Secretary of State to say anything to the contrary. The Secretary of State can contradict the hon. member for Lotbinière because she was a member of the cabinet of the present government when it became necessary to pass exceptive legislation through a special order in council to legalize the operations of the two private stations in Quebec city. Why was this necessary? Simply and only because they contravened the previous broadcasting act which stipulated that the majority stockholders in a private television station must be Canadian citizens. The Secretary of State knows that. In order to progress more rapidly, the Secretary of State has only to put the record straight and tell the hon. member for Lotbinière that he is wrong; nothing more. I hope that the hon. member for Lotbinière will admit at least that he is wrong since the cabinet, the Prime Minister, the then Secretary of State and the then Minister of Transport had to introduce and pass a special order in council in 1965 to legalize that situation.

I put the question on the order paper, and tonight at eight o'clock I will answer the hon. member for Lotbinière. He will see then that an order in council was issued, not only for the private Quebec station, but for five private radio and television stations throughout Canada. Exceptive legislation was passed concerning five private stations, and the two private Quebec stations were among those five. A special order in council was issued because these stations did not conform to the law stipulating that these radio and television stations had to be Canadian-owned.

The hon. member for Lotbinière should apologize and correct the mistake he made earlier. I realize that he cannot know everything. But that does not mean I accuse the directors of the two private Quebec stations. That is false.

Mr. Choquette: Would the hon. member allow me a question?

Mr. Grégoire: If the hon. member is only asking questions, as he said earlier, to tease me, well I think that the house has no time to waste. If it is a serious question, that is fine, but if it has to do with the father of somebody or the father of a producer on channel 4, I could not care less. Such things do not matter; only the principle is important.

Mr. Choquette: Could I ask the hon. member a question? Does he know that I have been advised that channel 4 is controlled by Canadian interests and that its programs are truly representative of Quebec? Does the hon. member know that? If not, I will tell him so.

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, if the hon. member for Lotbinière has some information which is not available to us, I would be pleased to obtain it. If, at the present time, channel 4 is owned by Canadian interests, I should be very happy. However, I have in hand the figures which were supplied to us by the hon. Secretary of State.

Secondly, the cabinet passed an order in council to legalize the situation of channel 4.

The hon. member for Lotbinière says that the ownership is 50 per cent American and 50 per cent Canadian when the figures say this: 51.8 per cent American and 48.2 per cent Canadian. We say fifty-fifty in round figures: 133 Liberals, 132 Conservatives, 50-50 no prime minister. It is simple as that.

On the other hand, if the hon. member for Lotbinière tells me that he knows that, that he has other statistics, I am prepared to resume my seat and to have him give us those figures. Would the hon. member for Lotbinière have figures other than those we were given by the hon. Secretary of State? The hon. member for Lotbinière has often put questions to me; I, in turn, ask him if he has figures other than those which were supplied to me by the hon. Secretary of State.

Mr. Choquette: Mr. Chairman, it is certainly unfair to discuss in this way. The hon. member admits himself that he cannot prove that there is American influence on channel 4. He quotes figures, and I have mine. I know clearly that 75 per cent of channel 4 belongs to Canadian interests. I know clearly that all the programs on channel 4 are Quebec programs. I would suggest to the hon. member that he take a walk on the Champs-Élysées in Paris; he would see that there are many theatres where American films translated into French are shown. This is not detrimental to French culture. Let the hon. member be serious once and for all and let him stop bringing charges indiscriminately. He has been repeating the same thing for about three hours.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order. I am sorry to interrupt the debate but the hon. member is out of order since the amendment before the committee at the present time says: "that the television stations shall be controlled by Canadians" but not necessarily the number of shares of each company.

Mr. Choquette: Could we now vote on the amendment?

Mr. Grégoire: As far as I am concerned, Mr. Chairman, it is not a question of shares, but of control, as it is said in the bill. I am satisfied with the legislation as it stands; as a matter of fact, clause 2 (b) which I seek to have amended, says here, in part:

> the Canadian broadcasting system should be effectively owned and controlled by Canadians—

There is no mention there of the number of shares, but it is stated that it should be effectively owned and controlled by Canadians, in a proportion of 52, 53 or 51 per cent. The moment Canadians have 51 per cent, they own, they control effectively.

I am glad, Mr. Chairman, that you reminded us that the hon. member was out of order, because he would have drawn me in an altogether different field. You understand, I am sure, that when the hon. member for Lotbinière talks about Mr. Adrien Pouliot who is responsible for the opening of French C.B.C. stations in the West, twenty-five years ago, I agree with him, but he leads me astray.

Therefore, I revert to my topic, hoping that the hon. member for Lotbinière will not lead me further off the track.

I say it is fine, because it was provided for by the words "should be owned". But what happened is that the cabinet passed orders in council and exceptive measures to legalize the situation of television stations not owned and controlled effectively by Canadians. The Quebec station is one of those and is being operated under an order in council. The Secretary of State cannot deny it, because she is the one who gave that reply herself in answer to a question I put last fall. If the situation has changed, let the Secretary of State say so right now and I shall take her word for it, but that was the situation less than three months ago when that television station was being operated under an order in council. So I submit that instead of saying "should", which allows exceptive legislation and orders in council enabling Americans—in this case Famous Players—to control the Quebec station, we should say "shall"; it would then become the law. What does "should" mean? It made possible all the exceptions we have had in the past and that is what we are trying to avoid. We do not want any exceptions. We want it to be as when the Minister of Finance (Mr. Sharp) took his responsibilities. At one time, he said that all chartered operating in Canada had to be owned by Canadian residents and citizens in a proportion of 75 per cent of the common shares and voting shares. He had the legislation enacted and did not write in it "should" but "shall" and there are no exceptions. He can grant them a delay to sell some of their shares. In the case of Famous Players, it does not mean that the directors would require to sell the whole television station; they could sell 2 or 3 per cent of the shares and it would solve the problem. It is as simple as that and that is what we are asking for. Perhaps the Secretary of State would be ready to accept that?

• (5:50 p.m.)

[English]

Miss LaMarsh: Mr. Chairman, I have listened with considerable interest to the discussion between the two hon. members, particularly since the hon. member for Lapointe seems to be talking about ownership by Quebecois and not by Canadians. This is, of course, a considerably different issue and one with which the legislation does not deal at all.

Mr. Grégoire: Would the hon. minister allow me to speak?

[Translation]

In my amendment, I did not suggest that the words "effectively controlled and owned by Canadians" should be changed. I did not alter those words. I merely asked that the word "should" replaced the word "must" and I did not ask at all that the word "Canadians" be deleted. As long as we are part of the Confederation, Mr. Chairman, and I have always said so, I will accept the standards of the country and I will consider myself a Canadian citizen. We are still members of the Confederation, that is true, but when we no longer belong to it, the word Quebecker will apply. I did not ask that the word be changed, I only asked the substitution of "must" for "should". I hope that the Secretary of State will accept it.

[English]

Miss LaMarsh: I am glad my hon. friend did not because he would have found himself in the minority, had he proposed that, not only in this chamber but probably in the country. There was another piece of information for which my hon. friend asked which relates to the sheet of paper he has before him. I provided him with that some weeks ago and it relates to channels four and five in the city of Quebec. I do not have the opportunity to watch or listen to those channels but I have been told by my friend, the hon. member for Quebec East, that he has had the opportunity in the last 15 days to watch them almost nightly. Almost all of the programs to which he has listened have emanated from a European country, not from either Canada or the United States. These are obviously not programs which were manufactured or owned by the Famous Players Corporation of the United States.

The other information asked for by the hon. member is in respect of other Quebec radio and television stations. I must confess at once to a very serious lapse. I did not remember where I had obtained the information which I provided my hon. friend and which has formed the basis of the stimulating conversation of the last hour and the basis of the stimulating but perhaps not so acceptable charges against the operators of Quebec radio and television stations.

The hon. member wanted me to spend the period from six to eight o'clock industriously calling upon members of the B.B.G. to scurry down to the office and dig up information for me to produce at eight o'clock in order that the debate would not be held up. He suggested alternatively that the debate be held up until some time tomorrow so I could produce this information. Perhaps he will forgive me if I do not do that this evening between six and eight but instead advise him, and I appreciate that advice from a woman is never well received, particularly when publicly given, to go to the returns branch and ask for the return to the motion for the production of papers No. 122, which was tabled in the House of Commons on May 4, 1966 by the then minister of transport, Mr. Pickersgill. I am sure the hon. member will find that the sheet he has before him is one of the sheets of that particular tabled document and all the other sheets, which have been a matter of public knowledge now for almost two years by virtue of being in the public annals of the house, will be laid bare before his eyes and when we return at eight o'clock he will have enough further material for another hour's speech. May I call it six o'clock?

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: It being six o'clock it is my duty to leave the chair in order that the house may consider private members' business.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

SUBJECT MATTER OF QUESTIONS TO BE DEBATED

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It is my duty, pursuant to provisional standing order 39A, to inform the house that the questions to be raised at the time of adjournment tonight are as follows: The hon. member for New Westminster (Mr. Mather), Unemployment Insurance—inquiry as to inclusion of hospital employees; the hon. member for Carleton (Mr. Bell), Public Service—pensions of retired civil servants—request for reconsideration of increase refusal; the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles), Public Service—pensions of retired civil servants.

Mr. Knowles: Mr. Speaker, I understand it is the wish of the government, or at least of the President of the Treasury Board, that the second and third questions which Your Honour has read out be held over until tomorrow night. I am sure the hon. member for Carleton would join with me in acceding to that request if I have stated it accurately.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is it agreed that questions two and three on today's list be deferred until tomorrow?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I understand also that there is a disposition on the part of hon. members to dispense with private members' hour today. Is that agreed?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Does the house now agree to resuming the business interrupted at six o'clock?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

BROADCASTING

IMPLEMENTATION OF CANADIAN POLICY

The house resumed consideration in committee of Bill No. C-163, to implement a broadcasting policy for Canada, to amend the Radio Act in consequence thereof and to enact other consequential and related provisions—Miss LaMarsh—Mr. Batten in the chair.

The Chairman: It being six o'clock I do now leave the chair.

At six o'clock the committee took recess.

AFTER RECESS

The committee resumed at 8 p.m.

The Chairman: Order, please. House again in committee on Bill No. C-163, an act to implement a broadcasting policy for Canada.

On clause 2—Broadcasting Policy for Canada.

Miss LaMarsh: Mr. Chairman, as we rose at six o'clock a number of questions were put by the hon. member for Lapointe and, I suppose, a challenge was hurled at me to support the position taken by the hon. member for Lapointe with respect to the television stations CFCM-TV and CKMI-TV in Quebec city. It is not my function to support private broadcasting stations. Indeed, as all hon. members know, my function is to report to parliament on broadcasting in general. Normally I am not expected to take up the cudgels for any station, whether it be private or public. However, because of a number of things which were said by the hon. member for Lapointe in December, and again now, I did check on some information which I had received as a result of his earlier speech. I have to inform the house of these facts which, to the best of my knowledge and information, are correct and which are vouched for by Mr. Pouliot, the manager of that station who is a good Canadian. I am told that these two stations which are owned and operated by a Canadian company, namely Télévision-Québec-Canada Ltée, are not owned in any way by United States subjects. I am informed that not one share of that company is owned by a United States subject. In fact, my information is that 50 per cent of the shares of Télévision de Québec are owned by Quebec companies or individuals, and these Quebeckers are still, and proudly so, Canadians, whether they be corporate or private. The other 50 per cent of the corporation is owned by Famous Players Canadian Corporation Limited which I am told is a Canadian company incorporated under the laws of Canada. Of its shares, 51 per cent are owned by United States subjects or companies, but that is of course not 51 per cent with respect to Télévision de Québec.

Furthermore, my information is that when in 1954 a licence was granted for CFCM-TV it was under the express condition that control of the company would not fall into the hands of Famous Players Canadian Corporation Limited. I am informed that the structure of Télévision de Québec is such that Famous Players cannot have more than 50 per cent of the shares, and effective control is and must remain in the hands of Quebeckers. The president of Télévision de Québec is a Canadian and a Quebecker, and so is the managing director. I am further informed that the managing director has the final say in matters of management, including approval of editorial matters.

I do not propose to interpose myself between the hon. member for Lapointe and Télévision de Québec in what appears to be a strenuous difference of opinion over editorial content of that television station's program. I am informed that the public affairs programming has been many times under scrutiny by the B.B.G. and has been commended as being particularly Canadian.

I am further informed by Télévision de Québec that their editorial policy favours freedom as against communism, private enterprise as against socialism and Canadian unity as against separatism. It may be because Télévision de Québec is in the heart of a province which my hon. friend seeks to take out of the confederation of Canada, that he has lodged his complaint. But if my information is correct—and I would not place it before the house if I did not have every reason to believe it was correct—then I think that the hon. member should not attempt to mislead members of the house by indicating that this corporation and these stations are in any way under United States control.

Mr. Herridge: Well said.

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, I am very pleased with the explanations given to us by the hon. Secretary of State, except that when she refers to the policy followed by the private Quebec television stations in their programming, their editorials, or this or that orientation I must tell the hon. Secretary of State, that I did not introduce this matter in the conversation. The one who slipped the subject of the policies, or ideologies or editorials of the Quebec television stations, into our debate is the hon. member for Lotbinière (Mr. Choquette) who threw into that debate an allusion to an editorial that the Quebec television station has reportedly written against me and which I have never heard of and never seen and which has quite failed to impress me.

Therefore, the hon. Secretary of State should not raise this argument: I did not raise the problem of the political ideology of the Quebec television station. It was raised by the hon. member for Lotbinière.

• (8:10 p.m.)

I should also correct the impression some people may have got, of whom, Mr. Adrien Pouliot, father of the general manager. I never introduced that into the debate. Because I speak of channel 4 in Quebec city, all of a sudden, the hon. member for Lotbinière rises and intervenes saying: You don't speak against channel 4 in Quebec city, because its manager is Mr. Jean Pouliot, son of Mr. Adrien Pouliot who, years ago, contributed to the setting up of C.B.C. French stations out west.

I am not the one who introduced that in the debate. I have nothing against Mr. Adrien Pouliot; far from it, for I know him very well, perhaps even better than the hon. member for Lotbinière. I have often met him. I have eaten with him and I admire him very much; he has contributed tremendously to French radio out west. But why bring this up? Why take the Quebec station to task? The general manager is the son of Mr. Adrien Pouliot who 15 years ago was a member of the Board of Governors of the C.B.C. I do not know who is the grandfather of the second cameraman of channel 4 in Quebec but it does not matter.

The Secretary of State mentions the editorials of the Quebec station. I have never mentioned them. I am not the one who brought this up in discussion, it was the member for Lotbinière. I am not at all concerned with the editorials of the Quebec station. They are entitled to their opinions, it is freedom of thought, freedom of speech, freedom of the press. That I believe in, and I would not blame them for this.

Now when the Secretary of State tells me that the whole editorial policy is under the president of the Quebec station, she is saying that the president runs everything. But the president, Mr. Gaston Pratte, owns one out of 10,000 shares. Possibly, it is the vice-president Mr. J. J. Fitzgibbons, but he has also one share out of 10,000. Now, as far as the treasurer is concerned, Mr. Boldstad—I do not know where he comes from—but he owns only one share out of 10,000. It may be the secretary, Mr. Henri Lepage—whom I know too as a very good guy. I have nothing against him as secretary of the company—but he too, owns only one share out of 10,000.

[English]

Miss LaMarsh: Mr. Chairman, would my hon. friend permit a question? I apologize for asking it in English. Does my hon. friend recall the debate on December 20 last to which he made a very valuable contribution, beginning at page 5679 of Hansard, and does he remember saying this, as reported at the bottom of page 5680:

In Quebec, the only two private television stations are owned by American subjects. The result is that those two television stations present regularly news commentaries, three times a day on the French station and three times a day on the English station, and they are identical commentaries, translated back into English, since those two stations are owned by the same American company. When comments are made on a decision taken by the federal government or by the Quebec government or by a municipality, it is always the American point of view which is put forward during the news commentaries of those two Quebec stations, either the English or the French station. It is always the American point of view on, or reaction to, the events occurring in Canada and Quebeckers, as a result, are overwhelmed by American reactions.

Mr. Choquette: That's a shame.

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, this is precisely what I said because I submit that, according to the statistics provided by the Secretary of State, according to the order in council passed in 1965, the two private television stations in Quebec belong to American interests.

The Secretary of State claims that is not the case. So I would ask her why did the cabinet, the 25 ministers and the Prime Minister, and everybody, pass an order in council in 1965 making it legal through exceptive legislation to operate two private television stations in Quebec contrary to legislation providing that a majority of shares in a Canadian television station had to be in the hands of Canadian citizens. If the majority of shares were owned by Canadians, why did the cabinet bother to pass an order in council to make the situation legal and in accordance with the act?

That is the answer the Secretary of State gave me in October or November 1967, in reply to a question I had placed on the order paper. If things have changed in the last two or three months, let the Secretary of State tell me and I shall sit down. But we have not been notified of any changes, the order in council has not been rescinded and so far the two Quebec private stations are still in operation under that order in council. Has the minister been bothered for nothing or what? Perhaps the Secretary of State could tell me what the situation is concerning that order in council?

[English]

Miss LaMarsh: Mr. Chairman, I would be happy to answer my hon. friend. He said that he did not deal with editorials and was not concerned with them. I ask him if he also remembers this passage, which is to be found on page 5680, the right-hand column, the same date, December 20. The hon. member said:

There is a young squirt who reads these editorials, possibly with some assurance, but everyone knows that he is not writing them;—

Mr. Grégoire: What page is that?

Miss LaMarsh: Page 5680.

Mr. Grégoire: Which column?

Miss LaMarsh: The right-hand column.

There is a young squirt who reads these editorials—

The hon. member is there referring to editorials which are prepared according to United States ideas and reactions of stations belonging to United States citizens.

—possibly with some assurance, but everyone knows that he is not writing them; nevertheless, they are regularly given over the Quebec television, either on the French station or on the English station.

Then my hon. friend goes on to indicate that he believes the former legislation, which must be the 1958 legislation, stated that television and radio stations in Canada "should belong to Canadians." Today my hon. friend has been talking about 50 per cent ownership. I would refer my hon. friend to the provisions of the 1958 act and particularly to section 14 (1) which required, and at the moment still does, licencees to have 75 per cent Canadian shareholders. The 1958 act provides under section 14 (2) for an exemption if there is less than 75 per cent.

Accordingly, these stations were granted the exemption under section 14 (2). But that does not mean—and my hon. friend has been using the word "majority", or at least that is the word the translators have been using —that more than 50 per cent is owned even by a United States corporation, much less that the ownership is comprised completely of United States citizens. I think my hon. friend has perhaps been misled by a too careless reading of the legislation or perhaps by an understanding of it without actually checking the language. It seems clear that in the 1958 act the requirement was that at least 75 per cent be Canadian unless there be an exemption. This not being the case here, there being only 50 per cent Canadian and 50 per cent United States, it appears that management decisions are made for Canadians by Canadians, and in this case there was an exemption.

I am sure my hon. friend would want the record to be set straight because I have noticed in the years I have been in the house that he is a man of very generous propensities and would want to be very fair to a corporation that has no other way than this of making its voice heard on the floor of the house.

Mr. Lambert: You are very generous.

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, I agree with everything the Secretary of State has just said. What I have been trying to explain from the beginning, however, is that the present act can be very easily evaded. I put a question on the order paper last September asking how television stations were exempted by order in council from complying with section 14(1) just mentioned by the minister. She answered then that five television stations were exempted, including two in Quebec. Under the former act, television stations had to be owned by a clear majority of Canadian citizens. Why? Because wave lengths are public property and their number is restricted. It is not like a newspaper. When someone wants to found a newspaper, all he needs is sufficient funds to do so. But things are different when it comes to a T.V. station. He may not operate a station unless some wave length is available and there are none left.

Let us now revert to clause 14 (1) of the former act which stipulated that 75 per cent of the shares were to be Canadian-owned while subclause (2) of the same clause mentioned that the owner of a T.V. station might be exempted from that requirement by order in council. The new act changes all that, as subclause (b) of clause 2 reads as follows:

b) the Canadian broadcasting system should be effectively owned and controlled by Canadians so as to preserve . . .

It says "should be effectively controlled". Now, effective control means that 51 or 52 per cent of the shares are in the hands of Canadian citizens. That means therefore, less than in the former legislation which set the figure at 75 per cent, unless otherwise provided by order-in-council. The new legislation says "effectively controlled" but does not even mention the figure of 75 per cent any longer. The previous legislation imposed a percentage but the cabinet could turn around and favour American companies at any time. The new legislation requires only effective control that is 51 or 52 per cent but it does not even quite require that since it says "should be owned". My amendment seeks to modify the act so that it would read:

—That the Canadian broadcasting system shall be effectively owned and controlled by Canadians.

This amendment would prevent the cabinet from eluding the act as it used to do formerly and as the new legislation would still allow it to do. The new act gives even more leeway to American companies which would like to take over our television and radio stations. The 75 per cent limit is lifted. Further, the compulsory feature is removed by using the word "should" which should be replaced by "shall". The Secretary of State objects although the previous legislation said 75 per cent. The new legislation lowers the standards to an effective control which means only 51 per cent and even then, the minister does not want to be too strict since the term "should" is used. There is the Quebec television station which not only did not meet the provisions of subsection (1) of clause 141 of the previous legislation but was operating under an order in council. However, the Secretary of State says that the Quebec television station is owned by a Canadian company incorporated in Canada. It is true that the chairman is a French Canadian, a Quebecker, but he owns only one out of 10,000 shares. 50 per cent of the shares belong to Famous Players Canadian Corporation Ltd. It has been pointed out that the company is Canadian, but nevertheless, American interests hold 51.8 per cent of the shares of Famous Players Canadian Corporation Ltd. It is true that the said company is incorporated in Canada, and that the word Canada appears in its trade name, but it is controlled by American interests and the Secretary of State is aware of the fact. That company holds 50 per cent of shares of two private television stations of Quebec city and this is why I object because I would like us to have the effective control as required in the legislation and I quote:

The Canadian broadcasting system should be effectively owned and controlled by Canadians—

If the Americans own 50 per cent of the shares, Canadians have no effective control, that is clear. I suggest we substitute to the words "should be controlled" the words "shall be controlled."

• (8:20 p.m.)

Mr. Chairman, as I said a moment ago, airwaves are publicly owned. Wave lengths are not only limited, they are scarce. Anyone wanting to start a new television station in Quebec could not do so because there are no free wave lengths. If there are only two wave lengths available, let us not turn 50 per cent of them to the Americans but rather let us keep them for Canadians and I close by quoting the last two lines of this paragraph (b):

—and effectively controlled by Canadians so as to preserve and strengthen the cultural, political, social and economic fabric of Canada—

Do we want to enrich and strengthen it or not? It is said that effective control by Canadians is necessary to strengthen and enrich it yet effective control is given to the Americans. It is nonsensical, contradictory, and Canada and the present government have complained of this nonsense and these contradictions in the legislation and the facts.

Between the act and the facts, there are always good intentions but good intentions which are not reflected in reality. Now, when the Secretary of State, with all her charm and competence, tells us: Well, in order to preserve, enrich and strengthen the cultural, political, social and economic fabric of Canada, and I now quote clause 2:

It is hereby declared that

b) the Canadian broadcasting system should be effectively owned and controlled by Canadians...

"Should" implies no compulsion; indeed not. Therefore, the wording is at variance with the facts and the facts are inconsistent with the wording. The words reflect the good intentions, the facts are always contrary to the words.

When we tell her: Do you really insist on that, do you stick to your opinion, to your objectives? Then, make the necessary decisions. That is all. But, they are afraid to make them.

It is just a matter of saying "shall" instead of "should", which is a mere statement of good intentions. Good intentions: hell is full of or paved with good intentions. In Quebec City there are two private TV stations and they are not effectively controlled by Canadians since 50 per cent of the interests are American. That is why the word "shall" should be substituted to "should".

Why not? It must be like that? Indeed, when the Minister of Finance (Mr. Sharp) introduced his bill, he did not say: The chartered banks should belong to Canadian interests in a proportion of 75 per cent. He said: This is how it shall be. It must be like this. It shall be like this. And his law was passed. The Minister of Finance had made up his mind. He did not say: It should. He said: It shall, it will be so. When the Americans decided to buy the Mercantile Bank, they did so. Later the minister came along with his act. He said: No. Chartered banks must belong in a proportion of 75 per cent to Canadian citizens. This should be the case and it is.

The Secretary of State, in the field of culture, uses the word "should". But, Mr. Chairman, why does the Secretary of State hesitate?

Mr. Béchard: The fact of the matter is that such is the case.

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, the parliamentary assistant to the Secretary of State says: Such is the case. Well, if so, let him put in the proper word. Why hesitate? But no, they do not want to add this word because they know full well that it is not so. And so, the word "should" is left in.

Continue to use "should"; keep your "should". It should be this, it should be that. But nobody does anything about it. Nobody moves. Let them continue like that, Mr. Chairman, and everything will be in a fine pickle, I can assure you.

Mr. Choquette: Mr. Chairman, give me thirty seconds.

I live in the city of Quebec, and I cannot allow such things to be said because they are completely false and prejudicial to an enterprise controlled by a French Canadian and managed by a French Canadian. In fact, I would be remiss in allowing assertions as misleading and as contrary to the facts as those.

I ask the hon. member for Lapointe (Mr. Grégoire) to show a certain sense of responsibility. No citizen, Mr. Chairman, would dare to deny that channel 4 is not essentially a Quebec and a French-Canadian station. The remarks repeated twenty times at least by the hon. member are unacceptable. He made his first speech on December 20 and repeated it the next day. Now, this afternoon, he repeated the same thing at least five times. Mr. Chairman, a provision of the standing orders prohibits constant repetition, and it should be applied so that the hon. member be prevented from continuing his series of insults towards an enterprise managed by a French Canadian who is a credit to us.

The Secretary of State quoted some very interesting excerpts where the hon. member was making charges against channel 4. As reported at page 5741 of Hansard for December 21, 1967, he said:

> We, in Quebec, would like to see an end to Americans ingrafting their ideas into our heads.

Mr. Chairman, an allegedly responsible member should be ashamed to make such serious charges, so detrimental to that institution, channel 4, which gives satisfaction to all the people of Quebec city. I will not stand for anything more in the same vein from the hon. member. I say again that channels 4 and 5 are controlled by Canadian interests. I say again that channel 4 in its editorial, its films and its programs in general, is truly a Quebec station and I say again that the general manager of channel 4, Mr. Jean Pouliot, is a serious and competent man, such more concerned than the hon. member about promoting French culture. He is much more responsible than the hon. member for Lapointe.

If the hon. member is honest, he will withdraw the charges he has laid. If he is serious, let him convene the committee on broadcasting, films and assistance to the arts and Mr. Jean Pouliot will testify. Let him convene the committee on privileges and elections, we will see who is right. In my opinion, the hon. member for Lapointe is decidedly in the wrong and I think, Mr. Chairman, that it is time to vote on the motion introduced by the hon. member.

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, I shall continue afterwards.

[English]

Mr Wahn: Mr. Chairman, I am concerned about the wording of subclause (g) and also subclause (h) of clause 2 of the bill now before us, and if it is in order I should like to direct my remarks to these subclauses rather than to the amendment which I believe has been moved by the hon. member for Lapointe.

I am concerned about subclause (g) because...

• (8:30 p.m.)

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, I rise on a point of order.

[Mr. Choquette.]

I realise that the hon. member would like to go on to paragraph (h) or (j), but there is an amendment before the committee concerning paragraph (b) of the act. Are we discussing the amendment to paragraph (b) which I have introduced? If so, I would ask that we deal with this amendment first, and then go on to paragraph (j) or (i) as the hon. member wishes. I think that according to the rules, Mr. Chairman, we should deal with my amendment.

[English]

Mr. Prittie: On a point of order, Mr. Chairman. Could the Chair give us some guidance. The amendment proposed by the hon. member for Lapointe deals with clause 2 (b) We have not yet passed 2 (a), and there will be other amendments which will affect the various subclauses of clause 2. I wish to know if we are to pass each subclause in order; or are we dealing with the whole of clause 2 at the one time?

The Chairman: Order, please. The only question the Chair has before it at the moment is clause 2 of this bill. If the committee wishes to discuss clause 2 under its different subheadings, that is a decision which the committee must make. But there is only one question before the Chair at the moment, and that is with respect to clause 2.

Miss LaMarsh: Mr. Chairman, clause 2 is the heart of the whole bill. There have been differences of opinion about clause 2 in the standing committee and in this committee of the whole. It seems to me that it might meet the wishes of all members of the committee, and enable the committee to deal with the matter expeditiously, if we were to deal with each subclause seriatim. We have spent considerable time discussing general topics. We spent some time on that just over a month ago, as well as today. Some of the subclauses are wide enough in scope to permit hon. members to make general speeches, should any hon. member wish to make a general speech at some later point. I suggest, nevertheless, that it would sharpen the debate if Your Honour would see fit to put the question, in order that hon. members may decide whether they wish to deal with the subclauses one after another. Then, we may have some resolution of the matter.

Mr. Lambert: Mr. Chairman, with the greatest respect, I do not think the committee has any choice in how to proceed. If Your Honour consults the authorities Your Honour will find that it is impossible to deal with a clause which is composed of a number of subclauses in any way, shall we say, that is higgledy-piggledy. The subclauses must be passed seriatim. For instance, the committee might pass subclause (d), having stood subclauses (a) and (b), only to have someone come along and move an amendment to subclauses (a) or (b), which amendment would make nonsense of (d). Yet the committee would have accepted (d), and it would be necessary to backtrack. Now that we have had the general debate, we must deal with the subclauses seriatim.

The Chairman: If it is the wish of the committee to proceed with clause 2, and I presume we are talking only about clause 2, that is quite agreeable to the Chair. Does the committee agree?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Cowan: Mr. Chairman, part 1, clause 2 carries the subtitle "Broadcasting Policy for Canada". As the Secretary of State has remarked, this clause is the heart of the whole bill. I believe, until the members of this house have had an opportunity to express themselves on behalf of the whole bill that we should deal with and discuss these clauses seriatim. We should do that until the house has heard the opinion of its various members on the heart of the whole bill. That is, there should be general discussion on clause 2, which is labelled "Broadcasting Policy for Canada".

Miss LaMarsh: I agree with that entirely. I am sure that no member of the committee wishes to stifle the debate which has already been pretty far ranging. If no one else has a contribution to the general discussion, perhaps we might hear from the hon. member for York-Humber. I always listen with interest and with a great deal of patience to his speeches. I have always considered his speeches brilliant. I do not always agree with him, but I find him well worth listening to. I have not heard of any other hon. member wishing to make a general contribution. I should be happy if we could conclude the general remarks. Perhaps we could deal with the amendment proposed by the hon. member for Lapointe when we reach clause 2 (b).

Mr. Fairweather: Are we not to have a speech by the hon. member for York-Humber?

The Chairman: Does the committee agree to deal with the subclauses of clause 2 seriatim or does the committee wish to proceed further with the general debate?

Mr. Fairweather: Give us a speech.

Mr. Cowan: I am prepared to yield the floor to the hon. member for St. Paul's, who was speaking a moment or two ago.

Miss LaMarsh: He was speaking on the amendment.

The Chairman: Is the committee ready for the question?

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, I must make a correction. Contrary to what has been suggested by the hon. member for Lotbinière, this is not an appropriate occasion to indulge, to allow oneself to indulge in personalities. I wish to repeat that I do not criticize the manager of the Quebec television station, Mr. Jean Pouliot: The fact that he is a good Quebecer is irrelevant. I admit that he is a very good manager and that his father did a lot for the promotion of French radio in western Canada. I wonder why the hon. member for Lotbinière is trying so hard to make of that issue a matter of personalities. I must repeat that, I am not raising objections because Mr. Jean Pouliot is manager of the Quebec station, far from it, since I think highly of the general manager of the Quebec television station. I am not accusing the Quebec station either. It is simply that the hon. member for Lotbinière did not understand at all the objection I have raised. Mr. Chairman, my objection is of a general character. The situation prevailing in the case of the two Quebec stations also applies to the three other Canadian stations. The situation of the other three stations—all located in Ontario, I believe—is not more logical and normal than that of the two in Quebec. I say once again, in spite of the unproved assertions of the hon. member for Lotbinière, that according to the figures provided by the Secretary of State which have not been denied or contradicted, the two Quebec stations are not effectively controlled by Canadians, but by Americans. That is why I protest.

[English]

Miss LaMarsh: On a point of order, Mr. Chairman. I do not normally interfere with hon. member's speeches but I thought that the committee of the whole had just decided that we should deal with general matters, and leave specifics to when we discuss the subclauses. It seems to me that my hon. friend is dealing again with his amendment to 2 (b) and, therefore, he should not be heard at this time. The committee is prepared to hear others on general matters.

An hon. Member: Question.

The Chairman: Order, please. May I point out to the committee that the question before the Chair is the amendment that has been moved by the hon. member for Lapointe.

Mr. Lambert: With respect, it is out of order. While the Chair may have accepted it, Mr. Chairman, with the greatest respect I say that it is out of order to put that amendment at this time. Surely we should deal with the general debate and then with subclauses (a) and (b).

The Chairman: Order, please. I agree with the hon. member for Lapointe in the stand he takes. The difficulty of the Chair is this. The standing orders say that there may be a general debate on clause 2 when clause 1 is a short clause, or where the name of the bill itself is clause 1. On the other hand, it is possible for hon. members, under clause 2, to discuss the items in it, if they wish to do that. It is not for the Chair to decide that the committee must follow the discussion according to the order in which the clauses are written out. That is for the committee to decide.

Miss LaMarsh: The committee has decided.

The Chairman: If the committee decides that it wishes to do the work on clause 2 in that way, I shall be happy to co-operate; but I should like the committee to instruct me.

• (8:40 p.m.)

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, I agree to delay my remarks on my amendment to allow for the general debate on clause 2 and to enable my friend, the hon. member for York Humber (Mr. Cowan), to make his comments on clause 2.

[English]

Mr. Knowles: Since there does appear to be a disposition in the house to enter upon a general discussion first—as though we have not had enough already—and then consider the subclauses seriatim, may I suggest to Your Honour that you call clause 2 (a)? Then, if anyone still wishes to discuss the measure in general terms, let him do so. If Your Honour would call clause 2 (a) we could pass it, and then you could call clause 2 (b); the hon. member for Lapointe could make his amendment and we could go on to the various subclauses of clause 2.

The Chairman: The hon. member for York-Humber.

Mr. Cowan: Mr. Chairman, I did not plan to speak this evening, but this situation having arisen I should like to make some comments which go to the heart of this broadcasting bill No. C-163. I think they should be part of a general discussion on clause 2 and not be directed to individual clauses or subclauses.

I spoke on this bill on December 21 just prior to the adjournment for the Christmas recess. I believe I made myself clear with regard to my opposition to a determination expressed by the cabinet in this bill that community antenna television stations should come under the control of the new radio and television council which it is proposed to establish to replace the Board of Broadcast Governors. My time expired before I was able to complete some remarks I had prepared with regard to the action of the Board of Broadcast Governors in the year ending March 31, 1967, in refusing the applications of seven firms or individuals for CATV licences in Canada.

My observations at that time are to be found reported in Hansard for December 21. I was commenting in some detail on a letter dated December 13 which I had received from the Secretary of State. As I said on December 21, I had been pressing the Minister of Transport as well as the Secretary of State for a detailed explanation as to why seven applications for CATV licences had been turned down in Canada in the year ending March 31, 1967. It may interest members of the committee to know that under date of December 13 I received a very informative letter from the Secretary of State, a member of the cabinet for whom I have nothing but the highest regard and who in my opinion is a true Liberal. I have read extensively from her letter and intend to read from it again this evening. But I think members of this committee will be interested to learn that I also received a letter from the Minister of Transport dated December 20 and postmarked December 22, the day after the house rose. It may have been held up for signature or it may have been delayed in the Christmas mail. The interesting thing is this: the Secretary of State in her letter gives reasons for the action of the board in turning down seven CATV applications, but the Minister of Transport within whose jurisdiction the applications fell, and who is really responsible for handling them, advances no such information.

There is not a single reason given in the letter from the Minister of Transport dated December 20, whereas the letter from the Secretary of State dated December 13 is full, explicit and informative as to the reasons for turning down these applications. As I explained on December 21, some of the reasons given for the refusal to grant CATV licence applications are such as those given in the cases of David R. Graham of Ottawa and Murray L. Sweigman of Toronto who applied for the establishment of a new CATV system at Pembroke, Ontario. The Secretary of State writes that these were rejected on grounds that if granted they would adversely affect the economic position of the existing television station in the community.

Speaking on December 21 I asked the house: since when has it become the policy of this parliament to guarantee financial success to a T.V. licencee? We are told by the Department of Consumer Affairs that the free play of the marketplace will maintain prices at a just level for all the people of Canada, that the free play of the marketplace will accomplish this miracle in a world of rising prices.

I have referred on more than one occasion to the monopolies granted by the cabinet in various fields of endeavour, such as taxicab monopolies at airports. Now we have this glaring example of protection extended to television stations in Canada, even to the extent of making it clear on stationery of the Secretary of State that applications for CATV licences have been refused because to grant them would adversely affect the economic position of T.V. stations in the community concerned. This is the reply given in a number of cases where CATV applications have been refused. But take the letter from the Minister of Transport which also refers to the seven applications which were refused—I will read what it said about the whole seven if anyone asks me to do so, but two or three examples will be enough to illustrate the way in which the seven refusals are reported in this letter. Here is one paragraph;

> An application dated February 14, 1966, submitted by Mr. David R. Graham, Ottawa, Ontario for authority to establish a new CATV system at Pembroke, Ontario. Pembroke is located within the Grade "B" contour of Station CHOV-TV, Pembroke, Ontario.

This is some explanation. Pembroke is located in the Grade "B" contour of Station CHOV-TV, Pembroke, Ontario. Period. Now consider the informative reply from the Secretary of State in which she wrote:

> Two applications—one by David R. Graham of Ottawa and the other by Murray L. Sweigman of Toronto—for the establishment of a new CATV system at Pembroke, Ontario, were rejected on grounds they would adversely affect the economic position of the existing T.V. station in that community.

But no explanation from the Minister of Transport, despite the fact that the Secretary of State honestly and correctly reported the reasons advanced by the Board of Broadcast Governors for refusing applications from those two gentlemen to establish business in Pembroke.

I pointed out on December 21 that CATV licence has in fact been issued since March 31, 1967 to another applicant for a licence in Pembroke. I am told today by my hon. friend from Renfrew North that some households are already receiving CATV service in Pembroke and that in a few weeks time installations will have been completed to serve all applicants there.

It is interesting to note that the Board of Broadcast Governors turned down two applications for a service in Pembroke in the year ending March 31, 1967 on the ground that if granted they would adversely affect the economic position of the existing T.V. station in that community, when we now learn that CATV installation is actually being made in Pembroke. Does this mean it will not adversely affect the economic position of the existing station in that community?

• (8:50 p.m.)

Now, the fact of the matter is that the CATV installation in Pembroke allows the residents of that city to bring in three stations from Ottawa, in addition to the one local station from Pembroke. I am told that the residents of Pembroke are extremely happy with their greater selection of stations through the use of CATV than was possible when they were hogtied by the Board of Broadcast Governors to view the one television station in Pembroke.

I also referred on December 21 to the reply from the Secretary of State regarding three applications from Mr. John Albulet of Ottawa for CATV systems at Prescott, Gananoque and Napanee, which were turned down on the ground that they would inhibit the provision of alternate television service in that general region. It is interesting, as I commented on December 21, that the white paper on broadcasting and the report from the committee on broadcasting, films and the arts, is suggesting as a policy of this parliament that where there is a private television station in existence the second station to go into a community should be a C.B.C. station, or if there is a city with one C.B.C. station the second station should be a privately owned station. Now, in Kingston there is a privately owned station, and it is giving fine service for that area.

So, when Mr. John Albulet of Ottawa applied for CATV systems at Prescott, Ganonoque and Napanee, which would allow the residents of those areas to bring in a C.B.C. station such as Ottawa, and United States stations, we are advised by the Secretary of State, who I presume receives her information from the Board of Broadcast Governors, that the applications were turned down on the grounds that they would inhibit alternate service in that general region. As I pointed out on December 21, if there is going to be a second television station at Kingston then the parliament of Canada, if it adopts the white paper in toto and the report of the broadcasting committee, will be giving the open sesame to the cabinet to establish a C.B.C. station in Kingston. But we don't need to project the financial aspects of the C.B.C. because they pay no attention to the revenues which can be received from the areas in which they operate. They simply telephone to the cabinet for more money and it goes out to them in a wheel barrow.

We are told that the applications of Mr. John Albulet have been turned down because if granted they would inhibit the provision of alternate television service in that general region, but we know the alternate television service is going to the C.B.C. Let me read the reply from the Minister of Transport on these applications:

> An application dated February 23, 1966, submitted by Mr. John Albulet, Ottawa, Ontario, for authority to establish a new CATV system at Prescott, Ontario. Prescott is located within the Grade "B" contours of stations CJOH-TV, Ottawa, Ontario and CKWS-TV, Kingston, Ontario—period.

This is the explanation as to why there is no CATV station allowed in the Prescott area, because it would be within the Grade "B" contours of CJOH-TV Ottawa and CKWS-TV, Kingston.

[Mr. Cowan.]

This is the reply with regard to the second application:

> An application dated March 30, 1966 submitted by Mr. John Albulet, Ottawa, Ontario, for authority to establish a new CATV system at Ganonoque, Ontario. Ganonoque is located within the Grade "B" contour of station CKWS-TV, Kingston, Ontario—period.

The third application of Mr. John Albulet gets the same treatment:

> An application dated November 12, 1966, submitted by Mr. John Albulet, Ottawa, Ontario, for authority to establish a new CATV system at Napanee, Ontario. Napanee is located within the Grade "B" contour of station CKWS-TV, Kingston, Ontario—period.

Now, despite the fact some viewers within the Grade "B" contour areas for established C.B.C. stations and for station CKWS want a wider selection of programs, the Board of Broadcast Governors recommends that the CATV applications should not be granted, and the viewers are thus denied the right of selection of programs. I can only repeat what I said on December 21, that this is giving a monopoly position to television station operators.

I cannot see any reason why the Canadian cabinet should endeavour to ensure that there is a financial profit on every television licence granted. If the cabinet is going to assure every television station operator that he will operate at a profit then Lord Thomson of Fleet, Canadian born and a magnificent example of Canadian enterprise, is right when he says a television licence is the same as a licence to print money. Why cannot free play in the market affect operators of television stations the same as it affects all other people in what some members of the cabinet call a free enterprise system, a free economy country, but which we know, from the monopolies that the cabinet grants in various areas, is not a 100 per cent free enterprise system?

I also spoke on December 21 with regard to a CATV application for a licence at Clermont, near Quebec city. This was a television licence application turned down informally by the Board of Broadcast Governors when the application was referred to them by the Department of Transport. I pointed out that Clermont is about 85 miles east of Quebec city and about 45 miles north of Rivière-du-Loup.

I made extensive inquiries in regard to that application, and I know my informants were well able to give me the facts of the matter. The man who applied for the CATV station in Clermont was endeavouring to make available to the people of that area, on the north shore of the St. Lawrence river, the television programs from Rivière-du-Loup, but as I explained on December 21 it seems to be an unwritten law and rule for a television station owner that the moment he hears of a CATV application being made in his area he must oppose it.

The conviction of the television station owners is that if there is a CATV operator in an area, then the size of the audience listening to the local television station will be greatly diluted because if people are viewing other stations on their CATV installation they certainly will not be looking at the local station programs. In Clermont it turns out that the application was turned down because of opposition of the owner of the television station in Rivière-du-Loup. Here is the answer from the Secretary of State under date of December 13, regarding the application for a CATV licence at Clermont:

> The board turned down an application by Mr. Claude Lemieux, of Baie St-Paul, Quebec, for a system at Clermont, on grounds it would adversely affect the existing T.V. station there.

This is made clear in the letter from the Minister of Transport dated December 20, in paragraph 6 which reads:

> An application dated August 22, 1966, submitted by Mr. Claude Lemieux, Baie-Saint-Paul, Quebec, for authority to extend the service area of an existing CATV system at Clermont, Quebec. Clermont is located within the Grade "B" contour of station CKRT-TV, Rivière-du-Loup, Quebec—

Now, if anybody can see any rhyme or reason in the replies given to me by the Minister of Transport, who is responsible for the handling of CATV applications, I would be pleased if they would explain them to me in detail. I have read this letter in detail since receiving it on December 22, and to say that an application is turned down because it is within the Grade "B" contour area of a neighbouring television station is no answer because I can assure you, Mr. Chairman, that many other CATV applications which were approved were within the Grade "B" contour area of some television station somewhere, and yet authority was granted to those applicants.

I maintain that CATV applications should be granted by the Department of Transport once the applicants have fulfilled the technical requirements as set out by the Department of Transport. It is ridiculous to have the Board of Broadcast Governors rule informally on applications for CATV licences when it is passing also upon the applications of television operators. The Board of Broadcast Governors is primarily interested in television station operators. The legislation is drawn in that way and members of the Board of Broadcast Governors—and I have to say it—are automatically biased against CATV applications when you consider that they have been given instructions which I will read to you in a moment, to consider the economic viability of the local television stations when they are considering any CATV applications.

• (9:00 p.m.)

I maintain that the efforts of the cabinet to place CATV applications under the control of the Board of Broadcast Governors or its successors is a denial of Liberal doctrine. As I said on December 21, it is ridiculous to read in clause 2(c) under the heading "Broadcasting Policy for Canada":

> —all persons licensed to carry on broadcasting undertakings have a responsibility for the public effects of the programs they broadcast but the right to freedom of expression, subject only to generally applicable statutes and regulations, is unquestioned;

What in the name of heaven is the right to freedom of expression if the general public is not given the right to listen to what is being expressed. I have never before heard of anyone trying to divide the right of freedom of speech in two until I saw this Bill No. C-163.

Up until 1963, CATV applications were under the Department of Transport and were considered solely by the Department of Transport. CATV operators make no use of radio frequencies. These programs are not in the public domain; they are in the air waves. CATV operators simply pull out of the air what is already there. It is absolutely false to state that they have a radio operation. When the cabinet, through various crown corporations or committees, makes a ruling that a CATV application for Napanee, Gananoque and Prescott should be turned down because it is in the class B contour of such and such a television station the cabinet is using a mass of words to cover up the blunt statement that they are interfering with the public's right to information.

If the public wishes to look at a T.V. program coming from some station other than the one in Kingston or one of the stations in Ottawa which they can pick up by a single antenna, the public has the right to pick up that program, or if the public wishes to pick up a program from the United States the public has that right. Why does the cabinet through the medium of the B.B.G. at the present time, or if this bill is passed without amendment through the medium of the new board, intend to control what the public shall be able to see on their T.V. sets? I have been in the publishing business for 40 years. Some members of this house will still remember my objection to the cabinet making Canadian citizens out of the Reader's Digest and Time magazine by a mere flick of the pen. I do not consider them to be Canadian publications.

Did the cabinet show any concern about the opposition that would be given to the newspapers and magazines of Canada by these United States publications, Time and Reader's Digest? No; the cabinet told us we should be allowed to read Time and Reader's Digest and be exposed to the views these magazines would give us on the questions of the day. But when I say we should be allowed to look at any T.V. program I get an answer to the effect we have to watch Canadian content and have Canadians look at Canadian programs. They must not look beyond the border because of the deleterious effect it would have. But nobody says anything to people like myself who live near the United States border and are able to look at United States programs all day long because their sets are able to bring in these programs. Yet we have to protect those people who live 100 miles or more above the United States border. We do not worry about the great mass of the Canadian public who live alongside the United States border, but only those people who live 100 miles or more inland who cannot receive United States programs directly.

I make the statement without any qualification that when the cabinet endeavours to prevent Canadians looking at United States programs on CATV installations, which are legal in this country, they are interfering with the public's right to know. How can you consider yourself a Liberal cabinet if you adopt that attitude of putting blinders on the public of the nation? I am opposed 100 per cent to this part of Bill No. C-163 that will bring the CATV under the control of the BBG.

Someone will ask where the sections are that place the CATV under the B.B.G. This is a very good question, because if you look at the bill as it was first introduced and then look at the bill as it was revised following some recommendations of the broadcasting committee you will learn some interesting facts. In clause 2 which we are discussing we see the words, "broadcasting undertakings in Canada make use of radio frequencies that are public property". I have already pointed out that the CATV does not make use of radio frequencies that are public property. They are receiving sets picking up programs that are in the air.

We cannot find anywhere in this clause in the bill an interpretation of what a broadcasting receiving undertaking is. You will find in clause 3, the interpretation clause, a reference in subclause (d)—and I am taking the liberty to comment on clause 3(d) although we are supposed to be discussing clause 2 because clause 2 has been described by the Secretary of State as the heart of the matter—to:

—"broadcasting undertaking" includes a broadcasting transmitting undertaking, a broadcasting receiving undertaking and a network operation, located in whole or in part within Canada or on a ship or aircraft registered in Canada;

We find the phrase, "broadcasting receiving undertaking". My privately owned television set is a broadcasting receiving undertaking. You ask, where is a broadcasting receiving undertaking defined anywhere in this bill. The interesting thing to me is that there is no interpretation in this bill as to what a broadcasting receiving undertaking is. I hope you will notice that I am emphasizing the word "bill".

If you look at Bill No. C-163 as presented in October you will find on the page opposite page 23 where the explanatory notes are under Part IV that in (h) it says:

—"radio apparatus" means a reasonably complete and sufficient combination of distinct radio appliances intended for or capable of being used for radioelectric communication, whether by transmission or reception or both;

Then in (j) we find the words:

—"radio station", and the same expression when abbreviated as "station", means a station, other than a private receiving station, equipped with transmitting or receiving radio apparatus or both and intended for, or capable of being used for, any form of radioelectric communication, whether by transmission or reception or both, and includes a commercial broadcasting receiving station;

It is interesting that in the explanatory notes, which are not part of the bill, reference is made to a receiving radio apparatus which is intended for radioelectric communication whether by transmission or reception. Now, a CATV station can only receive; it does not originate. If it is perfectly legal for an individual on his own private antenna to receive a program, why should it be necessary to have a licence granted by the B.B.G.

if a group of people decide to have a more effective antenna erected in order to bring in more programs than can be received on a single antenna on a home or by using rabbit ears?

I maintain that it is absolutely ridiculous for a cabinet that considers itself Liberal to take this step to limit the freedom of the individual to look at the programs he wishes to look at in the same way that it would be ridiculous for the cabinet to make a law telling us what material we can read. No one is going to interfere with the freedom of the press to that extent.

• (9:10 p.m.)

Why do they interfere with freedom of speech to the extent that they use great big mouth filling words about freedom of expression and make no reference to the freedom to hear what is being said? I had never heard of one of our basic freedoms being split in two before this bill was placed before members of parliament.

On December 21, I had reached the fifth application by CATV which had been rejected and referred to in the interesting letter from the Secretary of State. She said in that letter that the application by Northern Telephone Limited to drop the Sault Ste. Marie station from its existing system at Wawa in favour of a channel emanating from Cadillac, Michigan was rejected because the Board of Broadcast Governors felt that the system should carry the available Canadian channel. That is an overpowering answer if I ever heard one. This application to drop the Sault Ste. Marie station in favour of a channel from Cadillac, Michigan was rejected because it was felt the system should carry the existing Canadian channel. This really sounds terrific and shows us the kind of pure Canadian government we have. The fact that this paragraph does not contain all the facts is only incidental, I suppose, to this matter under discussion.

In order to give all the facts of this matter I would have to take up too much of the time of the committee in reading the correspondence from the operators of the present CATV installation at Wawa. In order to save time I will paraphrase the information which I have here in printed form. Following an application for a CATV licence at Wawa some years ago a license was granted. There is no connection whatsoever between the T.V. station at Sault Ste. Marie and Wawa by land lines. The application was made to the Board of Broadcast Governors, as it should be, for microwave facilities between Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario, and Wawa in order that the people in Wawa would be able to receive the station programs from Sault Ste. Marie, which is a privately owned station with C.B.C. affiliate status. This cost the operator of the community television station at Wawa a great deal of money, but he brought in the Sault Ste. Marie station. He wanted to bring in that station. He did bring it in and he has done so ever since the franchise was first granted.

In the course of time a number of people in Wawa began to agitate for different programs than those coming over the one station from Sault Ste. Marie and the C.B.C. was able to bring—

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order, please. I regret to interrupt the hon. member but the time allotted to him has now expired.

Mr. Stafford: Mr. Chairman, I rise to speak again on the broadcasting bill since a number of items have come to my attention following my remarks in this house on December 21. I rise again also because there are one or two matters of grave importance pertaining to the relationship between C.B.C. programming and the nature of this new bill which I did not have time to deal with before.

May I begin with a word of congratulation to the C.B.C. management for what appears to be a change in policy. Other speakers have mentioned the treatment of the negro question in the U.S.A. over C.B.C. and its apparent one-sidedness. On December 21 I drew attention to the fact that the news and public affairs section of our broadcasting system continually played upon the riots and the vicious side of the race problem across the border but seldom, if ever, mentioned the many positive and creative changes which are taking place to improve race relations. I said:

> You have heard Rap Brown, Stokely Carmichael and other extremist negro leaders interviewed over C.B.C. Why have we not heard the moderate majority leaders?

I am pleased to report that following these various statements in the house C.B.C. T.V. news on January 8, during the main newscast at 11 p.m., not only televised a story on the election of the first negro mayor of the city of Cleveland, Ohio, but also presented part of a talk given by the great moderate negro leader Roy Wilkins. It has also been apparent that some of the other side of the Viet Nam war, the United States side, is finally being shown over C.B.C. news, although there are still huge gaps in the ordinary news that Canadians should be getting over their own radio and T.V. news networks.

Let me quote from an editorial in the Montreal Gazette of January 10, 1968 as follows:

> The Viet Cong greatly increased their program of terror against the civilian population of South Viet Nam during 1967, with figures of murders and kidnappings rising steadily as the year progressed . . . A total of 3,820 civilians were murdered by the Viet Cong during the year, compared to 1,618 killed during the previous year. During 1967, 5,368 civilians were kidnapped compared with 3,507 during 1966.

We have heard over the C.B.C. for three or four years of countless so-called atrocities committed by the United States through bombing; insinuations of the use of poison gas have been played up; pictures of poor helpless children maimed by the United States forces have been shown. But when it comes to 3,280 non-combatant men, women and children in the villages murdered deliberately in cold blood by the Viet Cong in a tragic and completely uncivilized campaign of terror, against all the rules of modern warfare as accepted by civilized countries today, we have nothing but silence from the C.B.C. news and public affairs programs.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order, please. I regret to interrupt the hon. gentleman but what he is saying now has no reference to clause 2 of the bill and the amendment thereto now under consideration. I would ask him to confine his remarks to the clause now under study.

An hon. Member: This is the clause for general discussion.

Mr. Stafford: Mr. Chairman, I submit that I am speaking about broadcasting policy for Canada. Clause 2 of the bill mentions policy, services and includes information covering a whole range of programming as well as the development of national unity and a continuing Canadian unity. I submit that my remarks are on point.

Miss LaMarsh: Mr. Chairman, I rise on a point of order. I think when another Chairman was in the chair the committee agreed that we would deal in the first instance with all general speeches and would then deal with the specific points in the subclauses to clause 2. I think perhaps Your Honour was not in the chamber at that time. Unless the committee has some agreement as to a modus operandi we are not going to be able to deal with this matter. I hope members of the committee will agree that we deal with general matters and then with the subclauses when all members in the chamber are exhausted. I believe this is what my hon. friend is now doing.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order please. I understand the committee has agreed that we take this clause first, but I do not think the enumeration of the number of casualties of the Viet Nam war has anything to do with this clause. However, the committee makes its own rules.

• (9:20 p.m.)

Mr. Stafford: Let me continue. There are no special programs here such as we have about every other horror front. We Canadians are being short changed by our broadcasting medium. We are not getting a true picture of this tragic war which everyone of any stature on our delegation to the I.C.C. who has spent time in Viet Nam will tell you was started, planned and directed from the beginning by North Viet Nam, as it still is. Our new bill must ensure that this kind of news censorship is not continued in the future.

When I spoke in this house before Christmas I drew to the hon. members' attention a flagrant abuse of news about the United States and a glaring anti-American bias of the public affairs and news production staff of the C.B.C. Even though there has been some improvement, there continue to be glaring examples of anti-Americanism, instead of straightforward and informative newscasting where required.

I wish to cite the following examples, since not only must the bill ensure that the C.B.C. serves Canada effectively in this field but it is vital that the newly appointed heads of the C.B.C. be informed of some of the abuses of that organization and have a more clear idea of what is ahead of them. As elected representatives of the Canadian people charged with the final responsibility for Canadian broadcasting, we have in front of us a task from which none of us may shrink.

How dangerous some reporting can be is best illustrated by an extensive year-end report given over the C.B.C. on January 2 when the C.B.C.'s Washington correspondent, Knowlton Nash, the apparent successor of the fabled anti-American James M. Minifie, told Canadians in no uncertain terms what to expect in the United States in 1968.

Nash was chairing a group of C.B.C. correspondents from all over the world. Each of them gave an opinion with regard to the area of the world he knew best and spoke of what to expect in the coming year. Most were reasonably objective, but not so Mr. Nash with regard to the all important area of the United States, our neighbour and ally. What was shocking were the categorical statements he made on what to expect in the United States this year. He either made a direct statement or carefully selected a quote which supported his obvious anti-United States bias. The following are some of the statements made by Nash. Throughout the hour long session he repeated over and over again the following words on any excuse: "American escalation in Viet Nam", seeming to place all the world's ills here and also seeming to play the old advertising trick of scaring the public through repetition. This is not reporting, it is propaganda.

He said:

> 10,000 more U.S. soldiers will be killed ... the American escalation will increase in 1968 ... and they will cross into Cambodia.

He went on to make the following statements:

> More and more race riots.
>
> There will be a huge advance in the gross national product and large steps made in the race to the moon.
>
> A growing suspicion of all governments.
>
> A fast growing spread of the new morality.
>
> President Johnson so unpopular that he can be beaten by anyone of the five key Republican candidates.

I should like hon. members to match Nash's categorical reporting on President Johnson's chances of re-election against the statements appearing in the Globe and Mail the very next morning. First, there was the New York Times service report from Washington which stated:

> Governor Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York is the only major Republican presidential possibility who would defeat President Johnson if the 1968 election were held today, a national political survey indicates.

Why did Knowlton Nash neglect this important survey when he made his statement about all five candidates easily defeating President Johnson?

Then again, the editorial in the same paper on the same day, January 3, went even further in commenting about President Johnson:

> He begins the election year with the cheering news from the Gallup poll that 46 per cent of American adults approve of the way he is handling his job ... 8 per cent more than in September and October after the summer time riots.

After noting the difficulties under which the President is labouring, the editorial continues:

> Yet he may still win the nomination and the November elections. This, partly, is because a president has the priceless advantage of daily initiative in executive action as well as the semi-sacrosanct aura of holding in trust the nation's highest office.

How much more realistic is this assessment than Mr. Nash's bombastic attacks on the President in what can only be judged to be a deliberate policy on his part.

While speaking of President Johnson, I wonder if hon. members noted the discrepancy between what President Johnson stressed in his annual state of the union message which C.B.C. kindly carried and the C.B.C. news reporting the next morning in the important 8 a.m. newscast. The newscaster read only one long quote from the President's address in which he mentioned the seriousness of the problems facing the United States on the domestic front and the danger the nation confronted if they were not solved. He was followed by a Washington newscaster who stated that most observers felt that President Johnson's address was not only dull but it failed to provide any real program to meet the domestic crisis. He stated that most Republicans opposed his speech, and most Democrats said it was lacklustre.

In grave contrast was what the Canadian newspapers wrote the next morning. The Montreal Gazette of January 18 wrote in heavy black headlines across the top of page one: "LBJ asks for increases in taxes, jobs, housing". The sub heading read: "Cures outlined for domestic troubles". The paper then went on to list the vast new expenditures asked for by the president for many programs including a new government industry partnership program for training and employing the hard core unemployed; a ten year housing program for six million new dwellings; $1 billion for a model cities program; a vast new child health program; and the appointment of a special consumers council. None of these was mentioned on this key C.B.C. news program. There was only an accumulation of negatives.

Let us examine the large three-column heading in the Globe and Mail of the same morning which read: "Record Outlay, Housing Drive, Johnson's Aim". The story written by Fraser Robertson from Washington starts as follows:

Focussing on the domestic scene ... president Johnson last night proposed new measures to provide jobs for 500,000 hard core unemployed during the next three years, and to launch a tenfold increase over the next decade in housing construction for low income families.

While the C.B.C. tried to give the impression that the President's program was poorly received and was dull, the Ottawa Citizen in a front page story the next day wrote:

President Johnson was applauded time and again in the crowded house of representatives chamber.

Anyone listening to the address could not help but be impressed by the very loud and lengthy ovation punctuated by cheers which greeted the President when he entered the house of representatives. There are within the C.B.C. at least a few people who are either trying to foist their own anti-United States views on Canadians or are deliberately trying to stir up bad relations between the United States and Canada for reasons one can only believe are against the best interests of Canada. One observer has suggested that these people also have in mind the large listening audience along the United States border and are trying to influence them against their government's policies. This is a dangerous game if such is the case. If these charges are not accurate, we have a hopelessly incompetent news and public affairs management within the C.B.C. for which the nation is paying a fantastic bill. I wish to absolve, of course, the many honest reporters within the organization who are trying to do a job. But let us remember Tom Gould, to whom I referred on December 21, and his reasons for resigning.

Perhaps the editorial in the Ottawa Citizen of the same day reflects more appropriately the importance of the President's speech in the following comment:

What President Johnson does to combat internal U.S. problems has an importance of its own, for on it depends the future well being of the leading non-communist country of the world ... thanks to its initial idealism, its tremendous vitality, its technological prowess, its huge resources and its determined spirit, the U.S. has been able to attain a prosperity unparalleled in world history.

But it is still beset with harsh internal problems ... to a lesser extent Canadians share the same prosperity and many of the same problems. It is important to recognize the challenge, otherwise there is the danger of our affluent society becoming a complacent society that could ultimately corrode from within.

[Mr. Stafford.]

• (9:30 p.m.)

Then, again, on the 11 p.m. C.B.C. television news, following the announcement in Washington of the new and far reaching tight money policy, our C.B.C. Washington reporter Knowlton Nash commented with great certainty, as usual, that Canada would certainly be hard hit by these new United States regulations. He gave us a tear-jerker reference to the terrible fact that Canada's economy is so tightly tied to the success of the United States economy. However, within a few hours Canada's Minister of Finance stated publicly that there was every indication the United States action would not have a serious effect on Canada's economy.

One of the major methods by which Canadians are misled in C.B.C. news and public affairs reporting is by the careful omission of important stories that tend to counteract some of the favourite themes of this inner circle of united minds. For example, the Montreal Gazette of January 16 contained an article which read in part as follows:

British foreign minister George Brown—

He was speaking in Tokyo.

—yesterday praised President Johnson for going as far as you can go toward ending the war in Viet Nam and criticized North Viet Nam for refusing to do its part.

Walter Cronkite, on an American national newscast, on January 8 said:

The latest poll indicates President Johnson can win the next election handily.

On the same newscast a major story quoted George Romney, Governor of Michigan and United States presidential candidate, as saying after his return from a recent tour of Viet Nam:

The United States should not stop bombing North Viet Nam unless there is a satisfactory guarantee from North Viet Nam.

Mr. Orlikow: Was that before he was brainwashed or after?

Mr. Stafford: Canadians will recall the extensive coverage C.B.C. gave to the famous statement Governor Romney was alleged to have made, that he was brainwashed by the army on a previous trip to Viet Nam. Why have we not heard the important follow-up by Mr. Romney? Are Canadians not supposed to hear news like that? Why have we not heard over C.B.C. a rundown of the findings of a group of 14 top United States Asian scholars?

The front page of the Globe and Mail of last December 20 had a seven-column headline entitled, "Top United States Scholars Warn Bigger Wars Would Follow Communists Victory in Viet Nam". The foreword to their study, as quoted in the news story, reads as follows:

> The moderate segment of the academic community must now be heard lest other voices be mistaken for majority sentiment.

Again I would ask the question—

Mr. Fairweather: Mr. Chairman, will the hon. member permit a question?

Mr. Chatterton: He does not know the answer.

Mr. Fairweather: I wonder whether the hon. member read the statement by the 14 United States academics? The implication of the statement was that the war in Viet Nam should not be escalated.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order, please. I hate to interrupt the hon. member again, but I cannot see the relevancy of the war in Viet Nam to the clause now being studied. Standing order 59(2) says that speeches in committee of the whole house must be strictly relevant to the item or clause under consideration. This is an order of the house. All I am trying to do is make the hon. member abide by the order that has been accepted by the house.

Mr. Stafford: As I said a minute ago, Mr. Chairman, I am talking about the broadcasting policy for Canada. I cannot think of a single thing that is more important than to have fair, unbiased programs in which both points of view are put before the Canadian public. If there is anything more important than that, I would like to have it pointed out tonight. This is exactly the point I am making. I submit that my time is not yet expired, and what I am now talking about is the fact that we do not have fair and unbiased programs in Canada.

Mr. Orlikow: Read on. Who wrote the speech?

An hon. Member: Lubor Zink.

Mr. Stafford: Then again, I ask the question, as has one other member, why, on Christmas day, should Canadians have to be subjected over C.B.C. television to a much heralded peace program starring a Canadian interviewer, Neil Morrison, purporting to ask innocent questions of a panel of speakers at a peace conference in Switzerland? The conference speakers were composed entirely, as far as could be seen, of men well known for their opposition to United States policy in Viet Nam. It was so one-sided that even the C.B.C. announcer ended the show by saying, "You may have felt that this program was too anti-American."

Mr. Fairweather: Was Pope John XXIII one of those fellows?

Mr. Stafford: You can read it tomorrow. I will continue because my time is limited, and I am not going to get into any argument with my hon. friend, whose views naturally conflict with mine. Finally, Mr. Chairman, I am disturbed by a report that our famous C.B.C. producers of the Sunday evening program "The Way It Is", successor to "Seven Days", have been filming an interview with a man called Tauber who has just written a book which tries to claim that the Keisinger German régime is nazi dominated. The presumption is that we shall see it over the program shortly. This is another in the long succession of post-war, anti-German documentaries which have been continually thrown at us by C.B.C. and other media suggesting that the nazis are about to return to power in Germany.

What are some of the facts? The so-called neo-nazi party, N.P.D., in recent votes polled only 7 per cent to 9 per cent of the popular vote in three provinces and is estimated to have only 5 per cent of the national popular vote. The political experts who know Germany well claim that this party is primarily a coalition of two nationalistic groups, namely, refugees and German immigrants. Notable, too, is the fact that virtually no youth at all belong to this party. But none of these facts do you hear over the C.B.C.; nor do you hear the assessments of the reliable British Journal, The Economist, which stated last year that no reporters of any stature in western Germany give any credence whatsoever to the impression being created that the nazis are rising to power again or have any real influence whatsoever.

Will C.B.C. tell us this? What kind of a campaign are we facing here? Are we facing an anti-German campaign similar to the anti-United States one? Instead, we must help Germany join the family of nations, as she is surely trying to do. Furthermore, she is an important ally now, and a new generation is in charge. I note, also, that almost never do we get over C.B.C. any mention or thorough treatment of the tremendous advances Germany has made since the war, her prodigious economic development, her immense aid to underdeveloped countries or her 300,000-man army which, with United States, British, French, Canadian and other western armies stands guard for our safety while the Russian armed power grows steadily, as the Secretary of State for External Affairs recently stated. Is someone trying to divide us from West Germany? I note with concern that there is not a single full time Canadian reporter for C.B.C. or any newspaper in Germany.

Lastly, Mr. Chairman, may I say something about the field of economics. One of the great tragedies of the day in Canada is the way in which matters of business and finance are handled over the C.B.C. as a general rule. The anti-business bias of "Seven Days" is well known and has been documented. A month ago, day after day Canadians were urged over C.B.C. to watch a special program on poverty which the producer of "The Way It Is", Ross McLean, would present to the country as the last word on this important subject. What did McLean give us on that broadcast?

• (9:40 p.m.)

He gave us an impression of abject poverty in Canada from coast to coast. He clearly implied that no one was seriously trying to do anything about it, or cared about it; that nothing could be done anyway in our kind of social system. No treatment was given to the immense advances made in tackling poverty during the last 25 years, through old age pensions, health insurance, medicare—now on the way—vast social service programs, immensely important efforts by the churches, new government programs stressing the monetary and fiscal policies, or special programs to achieve and maintain full employment. No treatment was given to the important new programs of the manpower department to train and assist those needing work. I could mention scores of others.

Such mischievous programs over our national broadcasting system must be replaced with constructive programs that give Canadians the hope that progress is possible and under way, that show how all can take part in meeting problems. This new bill should indicate clearly that the role of the C.B.C. should be constructive and not destructive criticism, unless clearly warranted.

By and large, Canadians do not understand the role of the new Keynesian economics in the western world, which cannot be described by the old cliches of socialism and free enterprise. We have something new going which gives appropriate roles to both the private sector and the government. Let the C.B.C. educate Canadians to the true facts of our attempt to create a good and modern society.

As members of parliament in a free society we must make certain that our institutions of information and education are never used for purposes other than those intended. Let us move to examine this bill; to make certain that Canadians, as a free people, are getting free access to world information so that they are in a position to make honest decisions based on adequate factual information, not biased diatribe.

Mr. Cowan: Mr. Chairman, my time expired when I was commenting on the seventh application for a C.A.T.V. installation that had been turned down by the board of broadcast governors, as outlined in the informative letter to me from the Secretary of State dated December 13. I have stated that the paragraph in question was full of fine-sounding phrases, but it is unfortunate that not all the facts behind the paragraph were actually placed in the letter. I have not any doubt that the paragraph in the letter is the information received from the Board of Broadcast Governors or from the Department of Transport with regard to that refusal of a CATV application for Wawa, wishing to drop the reception of the station at Sault Ste. Marie.

I should like to refer the committee to the letter received from the Minister of Transport under date December 20 in connection with this turning down of a CATV application for Wawa. The application, dated June 24, 1966, was submitted by Northern Telephone Limited, licensee of a CATV system at Montreal River, Ontario, serving Wawa, Ontario, for authority to discontinue reception from station CJIC-TV Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario and to add reception and distribution of station WWTV-TV, Cadillac, Traverse City, Michigan. Wawa is located within the proposed grade B contour of a television rebroadcasting station which the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation was authorized to establish at Wawa, Ontario on September 22, 1966. This station, CBLAT-3, was authorized to commence scheduled broadcasting on December 8, 1967.

It seemed impossible to me to believe that the CATV station in operation at Wawa, Ontario proposed to drop reception from the Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario station because there is a requirement in the Radio Act that CATV stations must pick up the local T.V. station the moment they go into operation and must keep it on their dial.

In this connection I refer to numerous comments which have been made throughout the nation and in this House of Commons from time to time to the effect that CATV installations jeopardize the reception of local T.V. stations in homes in the vicinity. The statement that they jeopardize the reception of local stations is false, Mr. Chairman, because it is a requirement that CATV stations must carry on their dial the local T.V. stations.

Many people, of course, will not view programs from local T.V. stations that are on their CATV dial when there is a choice of stations. However, many people do state that CATV operators jeopardize the local T.V. stations once their installations commence operation.

In this connection I should like to read a statement made by Mr. K. J. Easton, secretary of the National Community Antenna Television Association of Canada, in a letter written from 130 Bloor street west, Toronto, and dated December 15, 1967, five weeks ago:

There appears to be some misunderstanding in Ottawa concerning the possibility that CATV operators might jeopardize the interests of a local T.V. broadcaster by removing his signal from the cable and substituting some other program material. I think this could be corrected by consideration of the following facts.

That is, the misunderstanding could be corrected.

First of course, an operator is expressly forbidden to do this by the terms of his license issued under the Radio Act and it is assumed that a similar regulation will be made by the C.R.C. under the new Broadcasting Act. The general radio regulations, part II, section 68C (1) (b) says as a condition of the license that "during the scheduled hours of operation of a station performing a Commercial Broadcasting Receiving Service, broadcasting received by that station shall not be altered or curtailed in any way except by agreement with the broadcasting station."

However, assume that an operator is prepared to contravene the conditions of his license, what is the technical possibility of his being able to prevent subscribers from receiving the local station?

It is common knowledge in the CATV industry that the weakest link in the whole system as far as susceptibility to external interference is concerned is the subscriber's television receiver and when the local T.V. transmitter is broadcasting within a few miles of the receiver, sufficient signal is picked up on the set itself to produce a strong picture often equivalent to that which could be received on rabbit ears or a similar local antenna. If now a CATV cable is connected to the receiver and the signals of the local station are distributed over the cable on the same channel on which they are broadcast, then due to transmission time delay on the cable, a second image will be produced on the screen displaced from the first one and producing the effect of a heavy ghost. Generally the amount of signal picked up direct on the set is sufficient to make the resultant picture quite unacceptable.

For this reason it is the normal practice to convert the local station to some other VHF channel for distribution on the cable and not to use the local channel allocation for video program distribution at all.

Thus for example on the cable system in Ottawa, CBOT broadcasting on channel 4 is converted to channel 2 on cable, CBOFT broadcasting on channel 9 is converted to 3, and CJOH broadcasting on channel 13 is converted to 6.

Now suppose as has been implied that the CATV operator wanted to remove the local station, for example CBOFT, and replace it with another program he considers would be more acceptable to his subscribers or commercially more advantageous to him, he would have to remove it from channel 3 on the cable. However CBOFT is still receivable by the subscriber on channel 9 position on his dial because the set is picking it up direct and since there is no program on this channel on the cable, the picture will not be degraded beyond any degradation due to direct pickup at that location such as might be experienced if the set owner were not a cable subscriber.

• (9:50 p.m.)

These facts refer to the station in Wawa where, we are told, the local CATV operator wanted to drop the Sault Ste Marie station and bring in Cadillac.

I wish to explain here that in December the C.B.C. began operating a rebroadcasting station in Wawa, Ontario, which brings in the same programs to Wawa as the local CATV operator had been bringing from Sault Ste Marie for some years past. I presume that the members of the house will be interested to learn that the programs the CATV operator in Wawa has been bringing in from Sault Ste Marie, in English only over the years, are now available in French and English over the C.B.C. rebroadcasting station which has been put into Wawa. You have the choice in Wawa, today, of getting the same program in English only, from Sault Ste Marie, through the CATV operator, or you can get the same program in English or French from the rebroadcasting station that has been established in Wawa.

Bear in mind that the CATV operator has to carry the local station. So, in Wawa, he is picking up the French and English station. I presume that there are people in this house who will say that because a program is coming in in French and English it is much superior to the one that is coming in in English only. But, they must realize that the operator in Wawa has two positions on his dial, one of which is taken up by the program in English entirely, and the second position which is taken up by the same program coming in in English and in French.

The operator wanted to drop the program that was coming in in English only from Sault Ste Marie, and bring in a variation—bring in the programs from Cadillac and Traverse City, Michigan. That way the people in Wawa would have a choice between the local C.B.C. station broadcasting in French and English, which is available on the CATV dial, or the Marquette, Michigan, station, or the Cadillac-Traverse City, Michigan, station.

But what happened? The Board of Broadcast Governors recommended against any such thing as dropping that Sault Ste Marie program, which they had been bringing in at great expense over the years. When I speak of "great expense over the years" I want to read into the record the correspondence that this local CATV operator has been faced with. One has to admire him for bringing in programs to the people in Wawa, and Wawa is certainly an isolated community, about 160 miles north of Sault Ste Marie.

I want you to be happy in the knowledge that the Board of Broadcast Governors has recommended to the Department of Transport, and the Department of Transport has been kind enough to accept their recommendation. Now the people at Wawa can look at the same program in English only from Sault Ste Marie or they can switch over and get the same program in English or French from the C.B.C. rebroadcast station in Wawa. Why in the name of heaven the CATV operator has to carry two similar programs on two channels on his dial I do not know, and I do not think anybody on the Board of Broadcast Governors can explain that satisfactorily.

To show you how much money the CATV operator has expended in Wawa and the efforts he has made to bring enlightenment, information and entertainment, to quote a phrase from the white paper, to the residents around Wawa, I shall read to the committee a letter, under date of December 5, 1966, written to Dr. Andrew Stewart, Chairman, Board of Broadcast Governors, 48 Rideau Street, Ottawa, Ontario:

> These problems have arisen as a result of the announced intention of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation to establish a rebroadcasting station in Wawa, Ontario, which we understand will soon become operational.

[Mr. Cowan.]

It became operational within one year of this letter:

> Since we are at the present time, and have been, for the past two years, providing to our subscribers in Wawa, programmes from station CJIC-TV, Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario via microwave facilities leased from Northern Telephone Limited, you will readily appreciate that upon the establishment of the CBC rebroadcasting station, the residents of Wawa will find little if any need for our services since CJIC-TV is a CBC affiliate and during prime viewing times, programmes will be duplicated.
>
> Our company is therefore faced with the prospect of abandoning its operation in the town of Wawa, and in relation to the size of the community, having to absorb the loss of a significant residual investment.
>
> We pioneered the introduction of television in Wawa in 1958, and were responsible for fulfilling a very real need for television entertainment in this remote community.
>
> At the outset, we brought to the residents of Wawa, one channel only, being that of the Marquette, Michigan station received off air from across Lake Superior. However, the unreliability and dubious quality of this station, received at a distance of more than 125 miles from its originating point over a large body of water, made it mandatory for our company to provide alternative programmes. Thus from the latter part of 1959 and up until November of 1964, we made available to our subscribers a second channel, consisting of films and documentaries from the National Film Board, originating from our studios.
>
> The demands placed upon us by the residents of Wawa for Canadian programmes (hockey and football were not the least of their motives) became so great in the year 1964, that we decided to abandon the programmes of films originated from our studios and outlay the funds required to bring to Wawa, programmes from station CJIC-Sault Ste. Marie via microwave facilities leased from Northern Telephone Limited. Our lease with Northern Telephone became effective on November 27th, 1964, and is for a term of five years. Under this lease, we paid an installation charge of $12,000 and undertook to pay a yearly rental charge of $11,400 for the initial five year term.
>
> Since the programmes of CJIC presently being carried over the microwave facilities will be of no value to our subscribers when the CBC establishes its rebroadcasting station in Wawa, Northern Telephone Limited have sought authority from the Department of Transport to substitute their present authority to carry CJIC-TV over its microwave facilities, for station WWTV-TV Cadillac, Michigan, and the authority sought by Northern Telephone is to become effective only upon the establishment by the CBC of its rebroadcasting station in Wawa.
>
> Should such authority be granted, our company would then hope to be able to continue to subsist in Wawa, by continuing to make available to our subscribers, signals from Marquette, Michigan (albeit unreliable and of dubious value) and a stable signal from WWTV-TV Cadillac transported over Northern's existing microwave facilities.

An hon. Member: Ten o'clock.

Mr. Cowan: Shall I call it ten o'clock, sir?

Progress reported.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

A motion to adjourn the house under provisional standing order 39A deemed to have been moved.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE—INQUIRY AS TO INCLUSION OF HOSPITAL EMPLOYEES

Mr. Barry Mather (New Westminster): Mr. Speaker, I think about a month ago I asked on orders of the day the following question, to be found on page 4876 of Hansard:

Can the minister say whether a decision has been made in respect of the recommendations of the Gill committee for the inclusion of hospital employees under unemployment insurance?

To that the minister replied:

—I do not think it is necessary to implement any of the recommendations of the Gill committee in order to provide coverage for hospital employees. It is now open to hospitals to apply to the commission for coverage. Employees in several hospitals are covered.

My purpose in taking advantage of this late evening period is to reiterate that question. I am sure that what the minister said was quite correct. I think he did not say quite enough, and in line with this opinion I should like to quote from a letter which I received from the unemployment insurance commissioner just a day before I asked the question. The commissioner, Mr. Hay, wrote to me as follows on November 27, 1967:

• (10:00 p.m.)

This will acknowledge your letter addressed to the Chief Commissioner inquiring whether hospital employees are to be covered by unemployment insurance. As Mr. Laval Fortier is no longer with this Commission your letter has come to me for attention.

When the Gill Committee reviewed the Unemployment Insurance Act some time ago, it recommended that coverage be extended to hospital employees in addition to several other groups not then covered by the Act. Extension of coverage to hospital employees has also been recommended by the Unemployment Insurance Advisory Committee and by this Commission.

No decision has been announced by the Government as to what action it proposes to take regarding these recommendations. However, it has announced, as you know, that it intends to bring in certain amendments in the near future.

It is my understanding that the government is giving consideration—or was at the time I asked my question—to several amendments to the Unemployment Insurance Act but that it does not wish to make a change in the situation affecting hospital employees in this connection until it has an overall policy to announce; it does not want to change one part of the picture before considering the picture as a whole. If this is the case, I can understand it, but I should like to take the opportunity tonight to raise once again the question of the provisions of the act as they refer to hospital employees in the light of the recommendation of the Gill committee, the unemployment insurance advisory committee and the commission itself. I should like, if possible, to receive an answer from the government on this point.

Mr. B. S. Mackasey (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Labour): The hon. member for New Westminster (Mr. Mather) has accurately set out the position of hospital employees and their coverage by unemployment insurance.

It is true that the Gill report recommended to the advisory committee of the unemployment insurance commissioners that coverage be extended to hospital employees. This is the case. Certainly this has been requested by both employers and employees. I understand that the reason for exempting hospital employees at the beginning was that years ago, in certain parts of the country at least, hospitals were for the most part run by charitable organizations or religious communities and it was felt that coverage of hospital employees would impose a difficult financial burden upon the organizations which made many of these hospitals possible.

I agree with the broad principle expressed by the hon. member, namely that it is desirable to adopt as soon as possible many of the recommendations of the Gill report. I think, for instance, of the fact that the Kennedy round which has recently been concluded has placed a lot of emphasis upon what the government intends to do for industry and not very much emphasis upon what the government will do for the workers of this country who could be temporarily unemployed in consequence of the dislocation which is bound to be caused during the transition period.

So, I am rather pleased to note on today's order paper, and I bring this to the attention of the hon. member, a government notice of motion in the name of the Minister of Labour (Mr. Nicholson), which reads:

That the house do go into committee of the whole at its next sitting to consider the following proposed resolution which has been recommended to the house by His Excellency:—

Proceedings on Adjournment Motion

That it is expedient to introduce a measure to amend the Unemployment Insurance Act to increase the coverage provided by the act; to establish a new schedule of contributions to be paid by employers on behalf of employees covered by the act; and to establish a new schedule of benefits corresponding to the new schedule of contributions.

Not being a member of the cabinet I have not seen what is proposed in detail, but from the previous statements of the minister, as well as from the letter which the hon. gentleman was so kind to read, I would presume that in all probability this resolution will meet the problem which has been so eloquently raised by the hon. gentleman this evening.

Motion agreed to and the house adjourned at 10.07 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Tuesday, January 23, 1968

The house met at 2.30 p.m.

[Translation]

QUESTION OF PRIVILEGE

MR. CHOQUETTE—REQUEST THAT FLAG DISPLAYING FLEUR-DE-LIS BE FLOWN ON PARLIAMENT HILL

Mr. Auguste Choquette (Lotbinière): Mr. Speaker, at the risk of being out of order, I wish to point out that the Quebec fleur-de-lis will be celebrating within the next few days the twentieth anniversary of its official recognition. That flag is more than the emblem of the province of Quebec. It is a rallying symbol for the French speaking community in Canada.

In closing, I say it would be desirable that, in certain circumstances, it be flown on parliament hill, beside our unifoliate, as a symbol of the harmony between the two great linguistic communities of Canada.

Mr. Réal Caouette (Villeneuve): Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: Order. I presume the hon. member for Villeneuve wishes to raise a different question, because there is no question of privilege in the case of the hon. member for Lotbinière.

MR. CAOUETTE—PROTEST AGAINST FORWARDING OF INCOME TAX FORMS

Mr. Réal Caouette (Villeneuve): I rise on a question of privilege, Mr. Speaker.

I am sorry that the Minister of National Revenue (Mr. Chrétien) is not here, but as a member of this house and a French Canadian, I must protest against the fact that officials of the Department of National Revenue are sending me 1967 income tax forms in English only, addressed as follows:

Master Real Caouette
Parliament House
Ottawa

I even wonder if the official in question did not deliberately send me that form in English only in an envelope also endorsed entirely in English:

Taxation Data Center
P.O. Box 456
Ottawa 2, Ontario

Mr Speaker, I protest against this fact, and I think it is a question of privilege, because last year, I asked the department to send French forms to French speaking people in the province of Quebec. I was then told that errors had been made.

I maintain that no English speaking member would accept to receive a French income tax form, and I have the right to pay my federal taxes in French, Mr. Speaker.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

[English]

FINANCE

GATT—TABLING OF RESULTS OF NEGOTIATIONS RESPECTING CHEMICALS

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, hon. members will recall that as of July 1 next our tariff schedule relating to chemicals will be revised extensively along the lines recommended by the Tariff Board and that it is the intention to introduce legislation on the matter in the coming months.

To pave the way for this legislation it has been necessary to renegotiate certain existing commitments under the general agreement on tariffs and trade. I have had prepared a list showing the results of these negotiations and with the permission of the house I should like to table this list.

Mr. Speaker: Has the minister leave to table the document to which he has referred?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

• (2:40 p.m.)

HEALTH AND WELFARE

MEDICARE—REQUEST FOR ANNOUNCEMENT FOLLOWING PROVINCIAL REPRESENTATIONS

On the orders of the day:

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a question to the Acting Prime Minister. In view of the Prime Minister's statement last week indicating that the government was considering representations made by the provinces on the subject of the medical health and services program, and in view of the importance of the government's decision on this matter to the country, and particularly in view of its importance to provincial governments which are now trying to settle their budgets for presentation to their legislatures for the current fiscal year, can the Acting Prime Minister tell the house when the government will announce the results of its review of the representations made by the provincial governments on this subject?

Hon. Paul Martin (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister said on Friday last at his press conference that he would make a statement after hearing the provinces when the review was completed. He also indicated, as I said yesterday, that parliament, with the support of all parties, had passed the medicare act; that it is permissive legislation, and that its implementation is a matter for the provinces. He further indicated, of course, that it was the duty of the federal government to hear the provinces.

Mr. Stanfield: In addition to recognizing its duty to hear representations from the provinces and consider those representations, is it not also the duty of the government to render a decision and to inform the house when a decision on this matter will be made known?

Mr. Martin (Essex East): It is the duty of the government to inform the hon. gentleman that the government is giving attention to the representations made by the provinces. This has to be read together with the statement of the legal fact as given by the Prime Minister.

FINANCE

DIRECTIVE LIMITING INVESTMENT IN CANADA BY U.S. SUBSIDIARIES

On the orders of the day:

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Burnaby-Coquitlam): I should like to direct a question to the Minister of Finance regarding the instructions which have been issued by the President of the United States to American subsidiaries located in Canada, as well as in other countries, limiting the amount of capital which they may invest to 65 per cent of the base period and requiring them to send 35 per cent of their earnings back to the United States. I want to ask the Minister of Finance whether any instructions have been issued by the Canadian government to United States subsidiaries located in this country with respect to this subject, or whether the hon. gentleman will be required to telephone the secretary of the treasury every time he wants—

[Mr. Stanfield.]

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hon. gentleman may only ask a question.

Mr. Douglas: I am merely asking whether it is the intention of the minister to request the secretary of the treasury of the United States to tell corporations in Canada what constitutes good citizenship behaviour.

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Minister of Finance): As the house knows, and as the hon. gentleman knows, the Minister of Trade and Commerce (Mr. Winters) has issued guide lines indicating the nature of good corporate behaviour. I do not see any reason at the present time for issuing any other guide lines of this kind.

Mr. Douglas: In view of the fact that instructions from the government of the United States are most specific with respect to the amount of earnings which must be returned to the United States, may I ask whether the Canadian government intends to issue any instructions on this subject and whether the Minister of Finance thinks it is in keeping with the sovereign power of Canada that instructions to subsidiaries should come from a foreign government?

Mr. Speaker: I would agree with the hon. member that the first part of the supplementary question is in order. However, the second part is in the nature of an argument.

Mr. Sharp: The instruction of the United States government to the parent companies of these organizations is that the flow of direct investment to a group of countries including Canada—and Canada is not singled out—shall be held to 65 per cent of the base period. This is supplemented by an instruction that subsidiary companies outside the United States are not to change their normal behaviour in the payment of dividends. This is the only instruction which has been issued.

Hon. George Hees (Northumberland): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Since we have a current account deficit of about $1 billion with the United States, does the minister consider that the United States government's directive to subsidiaries of United States companies which operate in Canada, that they shall invest only 65 per cent of the amount they invested in this country in the base year 1965, is allowing those subsidiaries to be good corporate citizens of this country?

Mr. Sharp: Mr. Speaker, it is quite clear that the hon. gentleman has misunderstood the nature of the United States directive. I ask him to read it before I answer his question.

Mr. Hees: I have not in any way misunderstood the United States directive and I ask the minister to answer my question in a straightforward manner.

REQUEST FOR REMOVAL OF SALES TAX ON BUILDING MATERIALS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. A. D. Hales (Wellington South): Mr. Speaker, I would like to address a supplementary question to the new minister of housing. Will he use his good offices and prevail upon the Minister of Finance to remove the 11 per cent sales tax on building materials?

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

CARTER COMMISSION ON TAXATION— TABLING OF WHITE PAPER

On the orders of the day:

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Burnaby-Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a question to the Minister of Finance and ask when we may expect the white paper, which the government has promised to bring down, setting forth its views regarding the Carter commission recommendations.

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, during the parliamentary recess the Prime Minister announced that the white paper would not be brought down until the question of leadership of the party had been settled.

Mr. Douglas: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Does this mean that the government does not intend to make known to the house and the country its views regarding this matter? I understood that the Prime Minister's statement was with reference to any action that might be taken. Does this mean that the government does not intend to make its views known on this question until after April 6?

Mr. Sharp: Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister's statement was with respect to the white paper, which will contain the government's views.

[Translation]

REQUEST THAT CANADIAN DOLLAR BE RETURNED TO FORMER DISCOUNT RATE

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Gilles Grégoire (Lapointe): Mr. Speaker, I should like to put a supplementary question to the Minister of Finance.

As the Canadian dollar has regained its value and general confidence, is it the intention of the Minister of Finance to ask the Bank of Canada to return its discount rate from 7 per cent to 6 per cent, that is the level where it was a week ago?

[English]

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I am glad to report to the house that developments in the exchange market are reasonably satisfactory. I can assure the hon. gentleman and the house that it is the desire of the governor of the bank, as well as myself, that it be possible to reduce that rate as soon as confidence has been established that there will not be a recurrence of any outflow of funds.

[Translation]

INDUSTRIAL RELATIONS AND DISPUTES INVESTIGATION ACT

REQUEST FOR GREATER DISTRIBUTION OF AMENDING BILL

On the orders of the day:

Mr. C.-A. Gauthier (Roberval): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a question to the Minister of Labour.

Since it is impossible to get additional copies of Bill No. C-186 to meet the demand of several electors, can the minister assure us that the number of copies will be increased in order to give satisfaction to those who want more information?

[English]

Hon. J. R. Nicholson (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, this is the first time that I have heard that there is any shortage of copies. Certainly, members of the house have been supplied with them. I shall see to it that copies are made available in English and French, as required, to those groups or parties who are interested in making representations.

Mr. Robert Muir (Cape Breton North and Victoria): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. What I have to ask is prompted by an article that appeared in the Montreal Star and my remarks are directed to the Minister of Labour. Since in Montreal English copies of Bill C-186 are not available to union members, and since one union leader was advised that the bill will not be available in English until after it becomes law, would the minister, when he is looking into the matter, take into consideration also the question I have raised?

Mr. Nicholson: Mr. Speaker, I understand that copies of the bill were made available here in English and French. There were more copies in English than in French. Certainly we do not propose to make copies of the bill available to all Canadians, but any groups who are interested in making representations certainly will be able to obtain copies in either of the two official languages.

Mr. Muir (Cape Breton North and Victoria): A further supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Does the minister not agree that union leaders, of all people, should be able to obtain copies of this bill in either of the two languages, English or French?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

HOUSING

CLARIFICATION OF LOANS REGULATIONS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Howard Johnston (Okanagan-Revelstoke): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the President of the Treasury Board in his capacity as the minister responsible for housing.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Johnston: I congratulate him on his appointment and wish him well. We expect great things of him. My question is whether there will be a clarification regarding the regulations covering the granting of N.H.A. loans on building lots that are not serviced by sewer facilities?

Hon. E. J. Benson (President of the Treasury Board): Mr. Speaker, I thank the hon. member for his congratulations. With respect to his question, C.M.H.C. policy in built-up areas has always required that there be piped services. No wells or septic tanks are allowed.

May I also take this opportunity to bring to the attention of the house that the number of houses which were completed in 1967 came to 164,123 which is 30,000 above the 1966 level.

An hon. Member: Shame.

[Mr. Muir (Cape Breton North and Victoria).]

Mr. Benson: If we include the accommodation that was made available for the elderly, and for universities, the total comes to 175,000 units.

An hon. Member: Not enough.

Mr. Benson: That is the highest level of building in Canada's history.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Knowles: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker, if this is a statement on motions, will a spokesman for each opposition party be entitled to comment on it?

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Johnston: I wish to ask a supplementary question, because I think the intent of my question was lost in some parts of the minister's answer. I would like to ask him more specifically whether N.H.A. loans will be available for construction on lots in areas that are not built up but that are approved by local health authorities, whether the lots have sewer connections or not?

Mr. Benson: Mr. Speaker, in respect to this part of my hon. friend's question, as there are details involved with respect to varying situations I would respectfully request that I be allowed to take the question as notice in order that I may reply more fully later.

Mr. G. L. Chatterton (Esquimalt-Saanich): As a supplementary question, can the minister advise whether he thinks the figure of 163,000, which is some 30,000 short of the economic council estimate, is satisfactory?

Mr. Benson: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. This is argumentative.

POSSIBLE INTRODUCTION OF AMENDMENTS AT CURRENT SESSION

On the orders of the day:

Mr. J. R. Keays (Gaspé): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a question to the minister responsible for housing. Notwithstanding his statistics can he inform the house whether at this session we will be presented with the amendments, as promised by the Prime Minister to the national housing conference, in order that those Canadians who need houses can have them?

Hon. E. J. Benson (President of Treasury Board): Mr. Speaker, I would like to indicate that I doubt if these amendments would be presented at this session, presuming the session comes to an end very soon.

Mr. Knowles: Why?

Mr. Benson: However, Mr. Speaker, I would like to indicate to the house that these amendments are now being prepared and that they will be submitted to the house at the earliest opportunity; and I would also like to state that we will meet the economic council's objectives.

Mr. Starr: When?

Mr. Keays: As a further supplementary question may I ask the minister if the amendments which are going to be brought forward will be those which were recommended from this side of the house?

Mr. Benson: I would simply like to say that most of the recommendations from that side of the house have not been very good.

POSSIBLE REMOVAL OF INTEREST CEILING ON LOANS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. R. N. Thompson (Red Deer): Mr. Speaker, I would like to direct a further supplementary question to the minister. In view of his remarks yesterday to the National House Builders Association convention that he would like to see the interest ceiling removed from N.H.A. loans, can he tell us when he intends to implement such a policy?

Hon. E. J. Benson (President of the Treasury Board): I am presently preparing a submission to the cabinet in this regard, Mr. Speaker.

[Later:]

Mr. David Lewis (York South): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a question to the minister in charge of housing, arising out of an answer he gave to an earlier question. I should like to ask him, while he is considering amendments to the act to enable the removal of the ceiling on interest rates under the N.H.A. mortgages, whether he will also give consideration to policies to subsidize such higher interest rates as may result from the removal of the ceiling or from the high interest rates now in existence.

Mr. Benson: Mr. Speaker, when I answered an earlier question I might have seemed to be a little facetious. In the new job which I have undertaken I will seriously consider suggestions from all sides of the house concerning how we can achieve the objective of the economic council of 585,000 units by December, 1970, which I think we can and must undertake to do.

[Translation]

C.M.H.C.—REQUEST FOR REPORT ON SPECULATIVE LOANS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Gérard Laprise (Chapleau): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a question to the minister responsible for the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation.

Can the minister tell us if the speculative loan program to builders, in force last spring, will be continued this spring?

[English]

Hon. E. J. Benson (President of the Treasury Board): Mr. Speaker, I believe that the Minister of Labour, who was previously responsible for C.M.H.C., made clear our policy in this regard. However, I will check into the matter.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

NATO AND NORAD—RENEGOTIATION OF MEMBERSHIP BASIS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Harold E. Winch (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Secretary of State for External Affairs. Will the minister seek a joint meeting of the defence and external affairs committees in order that the members of those committees may receive information and consider the government's position relative to staying in NATO and NORAD on a renegotiated basis as promised several weeks ago.

Hon. Paul Martin (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I would hope that such an arrangement could be made effective as soon as possible.

VIET NAM—ALLEGED DISCRIMINATION BY MISSION AGAINST COLOURED RACES

On the orders of the day:

Mr. W. B. Nesbitt (Oxford): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Secretary of State for External Affairs. Does the minister intend to make any statement concerning or in reply to the unwarranted attack on the personnel of the Department of External Affairs made by Rabbi Feinberg yesterday in Montreal? I refer in particular to Rabbi Feinberg's reported accusations that the members of the Canadian mission in Viet Nam are prejudiced against all coloured races.

Hon. Paul Martin (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I have not seen the statement to which my hon. friend directs my attention, but I can say I am sure that this house and the entire nation recognize the great services performed by officials in the Department of External Affairs, as well as in other departments of government.

GREECE—POSSIBLE RECOGNITION OF RÉGIME BY CANADIAN GOVERNMENT

On the orders of the day:

Hon. Marcel Lambert (Edmonton West): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Secretary of State for External Affairs. In light of the announcement by Turkey and the United States in respect of their recognition of the régime in Greece and the imminent announcement by the United Kingdom to like effect, does the minister contemplate making a statement in the house today or in the near future in this regard, so far as the Canadian government is concerned?

Hon. Paul Martin (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, we have been following the development of contacts between various emissaries of the régime at Athens and King Constantine in Rome. These contacts have included exchanges between the king and the prime minister of Greece. Against this background, in my view the question is not so much that of granting of formal recognition as the resumption of working relationships with the Greek régime.

Mr. Lambert: Can I take it that the minister's explanation is tantamount to the recognition of that régime?

Mr. Martin (Essex East): I have in mind the continuation of relations that have been maintained with the King of Greece. The head of state continues to be the king.

GRAIN

WHEAT—REQUEST FOR DECLARATION OF POLICY ON REDUCED ACREAGE

On the orders of the day:

Mr. J. E. Pascoe (Moose Jaw-Lake Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Agriculture. Does he endorse the suggestions made in two of his departmental publications that western farmers should reduce their wheat acreage this year because of the piling up of wheat now resulting from lower exports.

Hon. J. J. Greene (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, as the hon. member knows the decision in respect of wheat acreage is made by the farmers individually in a free enterprise system, and I subscribe to that system.

Mr. Pascoe: Is the minister aware that suggestions for reducing the wheat acreage are contained in two of the publications from his department?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. This question is not an urgent one.

NATIONAL DISASTERS

SICILIAN EARTHQUAKES—GRANTS TO ASSIST VICTIMS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Joseph Macaluso (Hamilton West): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Acting Prime Minister in his capacity of Secretary of State for External Affairs. In reply to a question asked yesterday the minister said, with regard to Canadian government aid for earthquake victims in western Sicily, that the matter is being looked into further. I wonder whether he has anything further to add by way of granting financial, medical and food assistance, initiated by the government, to be sent to the victims of the tragic earthquake in western Sicily?

While I am standing I should like to ask the Minister of Manpower and Immigration whether he can speed up the processing of immigration applications from individuals in those areas affected by the tragedy?

Hon. Paul Martin (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, we all recognize the hon. member's interest in this matter and I assure him that consultations are taking place now and should be completed very soon.

TRANSPORT

ALLEGED IRREGULARITY IN RAIL LINE ABANDONMENT

On the orders of the day:

Hon. W. G. Dinsdale (Brandon-Souris): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Minister of Transport I should like to direct a question to the acting minister or the parliamentary secretary. Is the minister aware that the Canadian Transport Commission has given notice of a rail line abandonment hearing under old order 123994, contrary to the minister's assurance given to the house on December 18 last to the effect that any further hearings would be free of any previous orders or preconceptions?

Mr. J. A. Byrne (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I should be glad to bring this matter to the attention of the minister. I hope he will be able to return to the house tomorrow.

Mr. Dinsdale: I should like to ask the minister through his parliamentary secretary whether his policy statement on this matter has been communicated to the chairman of the Canadian Transport Commission.

Mr. Byrne: I assume it has, Mr. Speaker, but I will look into the matter this afternoon.

VISIT OF STANDING COMMITTEE TO ATLANTIC PROVINCES

On the orders of the day:

Mr. J. M. Forrestall (Halifax): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Minister of Transport, I should like to direct my question to the hon. member for Hamilton West in his capacity as chairman of the committee on transport and communications. In doing so I ask the indulgence of the minister's parliamentary secretary. Can the hon. member give members of the house, and indeed the people of the Atlantic provinces, any indication as to the dates and places for the proposed visit of the standing committee?

Mr. Joseph Macaluso (Hamilton West): Mr. Speaker, the terms of reference have now been drafted and are in the minister's hands for approval. They will be forthcoming when the minister returns to the house after his illness. As far as dates are concerned, I have already been conducting some surveys as to where accommodation may be obtained and where hearings may be held. The itinerary will also be forthcoming from the minister. These preparations have been under way during the past month and I will be holding a steering committee meeting tomorrow afternoon in my office to discuss this matter further. Notice of the meeting has gone out.

[Later:]

Mr. Thomas M. Bell (Saint John-Albert): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question for the hon. member for Hamilton West, who I think is just behind the curtain. In view of the hon. member's answer to the question about the standing committee on transport and communications, and in view of the fact that he dragged the Minister of Transport into his answer, can we be assured that the committee, as has been intimated by the government on many occasions, will be in charge of its own terms of reference and its own activities on the trip to eastern Canada?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member is asking a question which refers more specifically to the management of the committee, and it should not be asked at this time.

MURCHISON INQUIRY—REQUEST FOR DECISION RESPECTING TRUCKING INDUSTRY

On the orders of the day:

Mr. K. H. More (Regina City): Mr. Speaker, my question is to the Minister of Labour. Has the government accepted or rejected the findings of the Murchison inquiry and, if so, is the minister prepared to make a statement at this time?

Hon. J. R. Nicholson (Minister of Labour): The government has neither accepted nor rejected them, Mr. Speaker. The government has not as yet had an opportunity to consider them. Representations have been made to me about the report by both employers and workers. On the whole the reaction to the report is highly favourable, but some suggestions for change and possible improvement have been made and these are being studied by the department. When conclusions are reached, they will be laid before the government.

PUBLIC SERVICE

MODIFICATIONS IN CLASSIFICATION REVIEW PROGRAM

On the orders of the day:

Hon. R. A. Bell (Carleton): Mr. Speaker, in view of the undoubtedly high competence of all public servants, so movingly described today by the Acting Prime Minister, may I ask the President of the Treasury Board whether the government has under immediate consideration a lump sum payment for those public service employees who are red circled, or other modifications to relieve the hardships of the classification review program?

Hon. E. J. Benson (President of the Treasury Board): Without in any way admitting to the facts contained in the statement that my hon. friend has made, I should simply like to answer his question by saying no.

POWER

BRITISH COLUMBIA—LOCATION OF NEUTRON GENERATOR

On the orders of the day:

Mr. H. W. Herridge (Kootenay West): Mr. Speaker, I should like to address to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources a question of considerable importance to the people of this country. In view of press reports about the recommendation of the Science Council of Canada that an intense neutron generator be built at a cost of $150 million, and in view of press reports that the federal cabinet has approved the expenditure of $1 million to investigate a site which would provide an ample source of cheap power, what action has been taken on this question to date and has the minister received representations from mayor F. E. DeVito of Trail, on behalf of the regional district, that the Kootenays be considered for this site as being an appropriate one for the development of cheap power to—

Mr. Speaker: Order. I suggest to the hon. member that his question should be placed on the order paper.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE

EXPRESSION OF WILLINGNESS TO PROCEED THIS DAY WITH AMENDING BILL

On the orders of the day:

Hon. Michael Starr (Ontario): Mr. Speaker, I wish to address a question to the Minister of National Health and Welfare in his capacity as government house leader. It relates to item 57 on the order paper which is a resolution introducing amendments to the Unemployment Insurance Act. If the government house leader can obtain an agreement from other parties, we in this party are prepared to take up this resolution as the first item of business today and pass it, because we are anxious to see the content of the bill.

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I should like to have a word with the Minister of Labour on this point to determine whether we can proceed today. If the bill is available we might consider following that suggestion early in the day.

Mr. Starr: Perhaps we could pass it without debate.

[Mr. Benson.]

Mr. Knowles: Perhaps the minister would like to know that we would agree with that suggestion.

[Later:]

Mr. Starr: Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the government house leader whether after his conference with the Minister of Labour he has been able to arrive at a decision as to whether the government will proceed with the resolution concerning the Unemployment Insurance Act as the first item of business today, which we have indicated we will pass without debate.

Mr. MacEachen: Mr. Speaker, I am waiting for confirmation from the Clerk's office as to the availability of bills in both languages. I think there are a number of bills available, and if that is the case we will call the resolution and give the bill first reading, on the understanding that there will be no debate.

INDUSTRY

CANADA-U.S. AUTOMOTIVE AGREEMENT—REVIEW OF PROVISIONS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. A. D. Hales (Wellington South): Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask the Minister of Industry whether Canadian and United States officials have met to discuss and review the U.S.-Canada automobile pact and, if so, has the minister anything to report to the house?

Hon. C. M. Drury (Minister of Industry): Mr. Speaker, we have had some preliminary meetings and they are continuing.

Mr. Hales: Will the minister advise the house whether replacement parts are to be included in the revised pact?

Mr. Drury: That is one of the issues to be discussed, Mr. Speaker.

AIR POLLUTION

STUDY OF STANDARDS FOR MOTOR VEHICLES

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Heward Grafftey (Brome-Missisquoi): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of National Health and Welfare. Has the study referred to him a number of weeks ago on air pollution standards for motor vehicles in the United States in 1968 been completed as yet by his officials?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I should be glad to look into this matter right away.

ATLANTIC DEVELOPMENT BOARD

REQUEST FOR NAMES OF APPOINTEES

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Robert Muir (Cape Breton North and Victoria): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of National Health and Welfare, who reports to the house for the Atlantic Development Board. Is he in a position today to advise the house of the names of those who will be appointed to the board to replace those board members whose terms have expired? If he is not in that position will he suggest how soon he will be able to make an announcement?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I believe the terms of a number of members expire today. We hope to fill the vacancies in a very short time.

DOMINION-PROVINCIAL CONFERENCE

OBSERVERS FROM OPPOSITION PARTIES AT CONSTITUTIONAL DISCUSSIONS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Andrew Brewin (Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, I want to direct my question to the Acting Prime Minister. I believe the Prime Minister indicated that he was going to make an announcement relating to the forthcoming constitutional conference. Perhaps in his absence the Acting Prime Minister could tell the house what arrangements if any are being made for observers from opposition parties to attend the conference, and whether any background papers or a white paper will be made available to members of this house? I refer, of course, to material concerning the proposed bill of rights and other important constitutional issues.

Hon. Paul Martin (Acting Prime Minister): As the Prime Minister indicated, he proposes to give further indication of what might be done. Preparations are under way for this meeting, and consideration is being given to the question of observer status. The Prime Minister himself will be dealing with this within a few days.

[Translation]

VOCATIONAL AND TECHNICAL TRAINING

SUBSIDIES TO UNEMPLOYED STUDENTS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Roland Godin (Portneuf): Mr. Speaker, I wish to put a question to the Minister of Manpower and Immigration.

Could the minister tell us why the living allowances paid unemployed students are higher in the Montreal area than in other areas of Quebec.

Mr. Speaker: This question should be put on the order paper.

[English]

PROTEST BY STUDENTS RESPECTING LIVING ALLOWANCE

On the orders of the day:

Hon. W. G. Dinsdale (Brandon-Souris): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Manpower and Immigration. Has he received a telegram from some 200 O.T.A. students studying at the Manitoba technical and vocational school at Brandon, protesting the withholding of one week's living allowance immediately following the interruption in payments during Christmas week? If so, what action has the minister taken to resolve this problem?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I recognize that this is a matter of considerable importance and urgency to the people affected by the question, but I suggest to the hon. member that it is the type of question that ought to be directed to the minister in some other way.

INCOME TAX

SEIZURE OF COMPANY DOCUMENTS BY DEPARTMENT

On the orders of the day:

Mr. L. R. Sherman (Winnipeg South): Mr. Speaker, my question is to the Minister of National Revenue. I would take this occasion to compliment him on his new appointment. Can the minister tell the house whether it is a fact that a number of companies in Winnipeg and other cities have had their records seized this month by investigators from the Department of National Revenue, although they are not accused or suspected of any irregularities in the payment of their income tax?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The question should be placed on the order paper.

Inquiries of the Ministry

[Translation]

AGRICULTURE

ARDA—DEVELOPMENT OF NORTHWESTERN QUEBEC

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Réal Caouette (Villeneuve): Mr. Speaker, I wish to put a question to the Minister of Forestry and Rural Development.

In view of the fact that the minister responsible for ARDA co-operates with the provinces inasmuch as the latter ask the aid of ARDA, does the minister know or is he in a position to tell us whether the province of Quebec has asked for ARDA assistance concerning certain economic developments in northwestern Quebec?

Hon. Maurice Sauvé (Minister of Forestry and Rural Development): To my knowledge, not yet, Mr. Speaker.

[English]

STUDENT LOANS

DISCUSSIONS WITH PROVINCIAL AUTHORITIES

On the orders of the day:

Hon. Marcel Lambert (Edmonton West): Mr. Speaker, my question is to the Minister of Finance. In the light of the reported administrative difficulties by two or more of the provinces with regard to the verification of applications under the Canada student loan plan, is the minister directing his officials to have discussions with the provincial authorities in order to protect the interests of the government of Canada under the plan?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I will be glad to take the hon. gentleman's suggestion into consideration.

DRUGS

ANTI-TRUST PROCEEDINGS AGAINST UNITED STATES FIRMS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a question to the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs, and ask him whether his department has investigated the prosecution by the United States government of four or five of the largest drug manufacturers in the United States who have been accused of illegally co-operating to keep the price of antibiotic drugs at an abnormally high level, with a view to deciding whether to initiate similar prosecutions in Canada.

[Mr. Speaker.]

Hon. John N. Turner (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, as I advised the house in response to a question on October 26, 1967, both the director under the Combines Investigation Act and I have been following the course of this case. As the hon. member may be aware, this prosecution was based on an offence alleged in the years 1953 to 1961 and most of this period is the one to which the general inquiry under section 42 of the Combines Investigation Act resulting in the Restrictive Trade Practices Commission report of January, 1963, relates. While this inquiry was therefore not directed to the offence provisions of the act, I am informed by the director that material obtained in the inquiry did not indicate the existence of a similar arrangement among Canadian companies. The director has, however, also been in touch with the anti-trust division of the United States department of justice to ascertain whether any disclosures in their proceedings indicate that there might be a similar situation with respect to Canadian operations.

FARM MACHINERY

REQUEST FOR REPORT OF ROYAL COMMISSION

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Ed. Schreyer (Springfield): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Agriculture. Will the royal commission on farm machinery prices, or the minister's task force, be making public their respective reports in the next few weeks or before the rumoured recess of the house.

Hon. J. J. Greene (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, I have no indication from either of those bodies that they expect to make a report within that length of time.

THE CANADIAN ECONOMY

IMPOSITION OF WAGE AND PRICE CONTROLS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. G. W. Baldwin (Peace River): Mr. Speaker, I would like to direct a question to the Acting Prime Minister, which is indirectly related to the matter of housing. Is it the intention of the government at the forthcoming federal-provincial conference to ask the provinces to agree to a constitutional amendment which will give the federal authority the right to impose compulsory wage and price guide lines or controls, as proposed in a resolution at the western Liberal conference at Winnipeg by the parliamentary secretary to the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development?

Hon. Paul Martin (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I think that that is such a large and involved question that it would require careful examination.

Mr. Baldwin: Mr. Speaker, I would like to direct a supplementary question to the Minister of Finance. Is it his intention to support a proposal of this kind designed to control inflation?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Minister of Finance): As my hon. friend the Acting Prime Minister has said, Mr. Speaker, this is a very involved question—

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Sharp: —and I think the house would appreciate this. I am sure that when decisions are reached they will be set forth in government statements in the house.

TRADE

REACTION TO IMPOSITION OF QUOTA RESTRICTIONS BY UNITED STATES

On the orders of the day:

Hon. George Hees (Northumberland): Mr. Speaker, I would like to direct a question to the Minister of Finance. In view of his statement a week ago that the government would react in like measure on the same day if the United States government imposed border taxes against Canadian goods entering that market, will he give an equally definite assurance that the government will take similar action if quotas are imposed against Canadian goods entering the United States market?

Mr. Speaker: I suggest to the hon. member that the question, as asked, is purely hypothetical.

Mr. Hees: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker, at various times there have been statements emanating from the United States Congress that a substantial number of United States senators and congressmen intend to vote in favour of the passage of such a measure, and I would like to have the assurance of the minister that the government will take this action.

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I am sure the hon. gentleman will recall that when I appeared before the committee of the house dealing with finance I placed before it and discussed at that time the resolutions on the Kennedy round which are now before this house. It is not now necessary for parliament to take any more action than this. I stated at that time the policy we would follow.

Mr. Hees: I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Will the minister simply assure me that the government will take similar action if import quotas are imposed?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

TOBACCO—IMPORTS FROM SOUTH AFRICA AND RHODESIA

On the orders of the day:

Mr. J. G. Lind (Middlesex East): Mr. Speaker, I would like to direct a question to my colleague the Minister of Agriculture. Can he assure us that there will be no more imports of South African tobacco into Canada, to make sure that this tobacco coming into Canada is not subsidized?

Hon. J. J. Greene (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, that matter does not come within the responsibilities of my department—

Mr. Starr: Then why don't you tell your members?

Mr. Greene: —but I will be very pleased to direct the question to the Minister of Trade and Commerce.

Mr. W. B. Nesbitt (Oxford): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question which I direct to the Minister of National Revenue. I brought this matter to his attention yesterday and he indicated he might be prepared to reply today.

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of National Revenue): I am not ready to reply today, Mr. Speaker, but I expect to be in a position to reply soon.

Mr. Starr: You have learned the ropes quickly.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE ACT

MEASURE TO BROADEN COVERAGE

Hon. J. R. Nicholson (Minister of Labour) moved that the house go into committee to consider the following resolution:

That it is expedient to introduce a measure to amend the Unemployment Insurance Act to increase the coverage provided by the act; to establish a new schedule of contributions to be paid by employers on behalf of employees covered by the act; and to establish a new schedule of benefits corresponding to the new schedule of contributions.

Motion agreed to and the house went into committee, Mr. Batten in the chair.

The Chairman: Order, please. House in committee of the whole on a certain proposed resolution to amend the Unemployment Insurance Act. Shall the resolution carry?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Resolution reported and concurred in.

Mr. Nicholson thereupon moved for leave to introduce Bill No. C-197, to amend the Unemployment Insurance Act.

Motion agreed to and bill read the first time.

BROADCASTING

IMPLEMENTATION OF CANADIAN POLICY

The house resumed, from Monday, January 22, consideration in committee of Bill No. C-163, to implement a broadcasting policy for Canada, to amend the Radio Act in consequence thereof and to enact other consequential and related provisions—Miss LaMarsh—Mr. Batten in the chair.

The Chairman: When the committee rose on Monday, January 22, clause 2 of the bill was under consideration together with an amendment thereto proposed by the hon. member for Lapointe.

On clause 2—Broadcasting policy for Canada.

Mr. Cowan: Mr. Chairman, at ten o'clock last night when I was discussing clause 2 of the bill before us I read from a letter addressed to Dr. Andrew Stewart, chairman of the Board of Broadcast Governors in Ottawa, written on December 5, 1966, by the operators of the C.A.T.V. broadcasting installation at Wawa. I read the major portion of the letter pointing out the tremendous expenditures that these people had made on behalf of the C.A.T.V. subscribers in Wawa. I should like at this time to complete the reading of the letter. It continues as follows:

> Should such authority be withheld, we shall have no alternative but to terminate our operation, incur a substantial loss on our investment in that community and deprive the residents of Wawa alternative TV programs which they have enjoyed for the past eight years, due only to the painstaking efforts on the part of our company which have brought us some really insignificant monetary rewards.

[Mr. Nicholson.]

> I should perhaps point out that there are at present approximately 1,000 dwellings in the town of Wawa and that we are serving 800 of these.
>
> We hope and expect that when the application made to the Department of Transport by Northern Telephone Limited, for authority to discontinue the reception and relay of programs from station CJIC-TV Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario, and to replace them with the programs of station WWTV-TV channel 10 Cadillac, Michigan, when the proposed C.B.C. television rebroadcasting station at Wawa, Ontario begins scheduled operation, that you will take account of the facts herein above stated, and that you will see your way clear, in view of the special circumstances of our situation and that of the Wawa residents, to give favourable consideration to Northern's application.
>
> Should you require any further information, I am of course entirely at your disposal.
>
> Yours very truly,
> Gilbert A. Allard

This letter pointed out the situation existing in Wawa when the people in that town wished to bring in programs from Cadillac and Traverse City, Michigan, instead of from the Sault Ste. Marie station whenever the C.B.C. rebroadcasting station should start operating in Wawa itself.

I have in my hand a copy of a letter from J. R. Baldwin, deputy minister of transport, dated March 23, 1967, rejecting the application of Northern Telephone Limited. It reads as follows:

> Your application dated June 24, 1966 for authority to replace the programs of station CJIC-TV Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario with those of station WWTV-TV Cadillac-Traverse City, Mich., at your land station performing a commercial broadcasting receiving service at Montreal River, Ontario, for relay via your authorized microwave system to subscribers at Wawa, Ontario, has been considered in accordance with the minister's announcement in the House of Commons on July 22, 1964. The Board of Broadcast Governors has advised the minister that it does not support the application submitted by your company.

The application of Northern Telephone Company Limited having been turned down to bring in programs from Cadillac on an authorized microwave transmission system between Sault Ste. Marie and Wawa, there is now a C.A.T.V. installation in Wawa which is offering the people there the opportunity to look at programs from the Sault Ste. Marie station which is a C.B.C. affiliate while on the second channel on their C.A.T.V. dial they can look at C.B.C. programs coming from the rebroadcasting station opened by the C.B.C. in Wawa in December, 1967, or else they can get an indistinct picture of programs coming from Marquette, Michigan. I do not know of any other place in Canada where a C.A.T.V. operator has been given permission to bring in the same program on two different channels to one community. This is absolutely ridiculous on the face of it, and I can see no defence for it whatsoever.

As I mentioned last night, the B.B.G. must have given my respected friend, the Secretary of State, a high-sounding explanation when they stated that the application of Northern Telephone Limited to drop the Sault Ste. Marie station from its existing system at Wawa in favour of the channel emanating from Cadillac, Michigan, was rejected because the board felt the system should carry the available Canadian channel. Under these terms it is a marvel that they do not state that Canadian television viewers can only have one channel on their receiving sets so that they will not be given the opportunity of playing with the dial and receiving more than one program.

Here we have the same program being brought into Wawa by two different methods and the C.A.T.V. operators are told they cannot replace one of the two similar Canadian programs with an alternative United States program because the B.B.G. does not favour it. I said yesterday and I repeat again that if someone can show me any sense in that reasoning I wish they would give it to me in detail for I feel certain I could not understand any explanation that may be advanced to support the ruling rejecting the application of the Northern Telephone Company to bring in a United States station. I was reading in some detail yesterday the explanation provided by the Secretary of State for the rejection in the year ended March 31, 1967, of seven C.A.T.V. applications by the B.B.G. I made myself clear that I am indebted to her for her full report on the seven applications that were turned down by the B.B.G. On the other hand, the Minister of Transport, within whose field these applications came, gave no reason at all for the rejection of the applications.

• (3:30 p.m.)

Yesterday I mentioned the situation in Clermont, Quebec, and I should like to add some further details to the comments I made yesterday, January 22, as recorded in Hansard. As I have already said, in Clermont, Quebec, the C.A.T.V. application was turned down. According to the letter of the Secretary of State, the board turned down the application of Mr. Claude Lemieux of Baie St-Paul for a system at Clermont on the ground it would adversely effect the existing t.v. station there. The situation is that in the year ended March 31, 1967, this application was turned down, and I have no doubt that it was turned down because of opposition from the existing t.v. station.

I had a little trouble ascertaining which t.v. station considered itself affected by this C.A.T.V. application. Clermont is about 85 miles east of Quebec city, and I could not visualize the broadcasting of television stations in Quebec city extending over a radius of about 85 miles in the first place. Chicoutimi seemed too far to the north for broadcasts to reach Clermont and I wondered whether it was a station in Rivière-du-Loup or Rimouski. On making inquiries it turned out that transmissions from Rivière-du-Loup could be received in Clermont on a community antenna television system.

When an application from a C.A.T.V. operator is received, automatically objections are raised by local t.v. stations which are not in favour of the C.A.T.V. application. They work on the presumption always that where there is a C.A.T.V. operation the size of the audience reached by the local t.v. station will be diluted because people will watch programs other than those of the one local station all the time.

The amazing thing about the situation at Clermont, Mr. Chairman, is this. The C.A.T.V. application was rejected because the board felt that it would adversely affect the existing t.v. station there. This decision was made in the year ended March 31, 1967, as reported by the B.B.G. in its report for that year. However, I am sure you will be interested to know that a C.A.T.V. application has now been favourably considered and that a licence has been granted to a C.A.T.V. operator in Clermont.

Why is this, Mr. Chairman? It is because since March 31, 1967 it has been made clear to the t.v. station operator at Rivière-du-Loup that a C.A.T.V. operator in Clermont can pick up his programs across the St. Lawrence river. His picking up these programs increases the size of the t.v. audience of the Rivière-du-Loup station, so now the operator at Rivière-du-Loup is all in favour of a C.A.T.V. operation in Clermont.

So out of the seven applications that were rejected, according to the letters of the Secretary of State and the Minister of Transport, in the 12 months ended March 31, 1967 this interesting situation now results. Despite the statement that two applications for C.A.T.V. operations in Pembroke would adversely affect the economic position of the existing t.v. station in that community, a C.A.T.V. licence has been granted in Pembroke, the C.A.T.V. station has been in partial operation, and by March 1 it will be in full operation.

I ask, Mr. Chairman, why the reasons given in the year ended March 31, 1967 held water then but do not hold water this year? Why would C.A.T.V. applications made prior to March 31, 1967 adversely affect the local t.v. station at Pembroke, according to the report of the B.B.G. and yet an application made since March 31, 1967 does not adversely affect the existing t.v. station at Pembroke?

The same might be said of the situation at Clermont. We have the statement that C.A.T.V. applications in that area were turned down because the local t.v. station had objected that they would adversely affect the existing station there. But in the year beginning April 1, 1967 an application was granted for a C.A.T.V. installation in Clermont so that the operator can bring in programs from Rivière-du-Loup.

It seems to me, Mr. Chairman, that a very thorough investigation could not have been made of the applications submitted in Pembroke and Clermont if prior to March 31, 1967 they were turned down for the reasons stated, namely, that they would adversely affect the economic position of the existing t.v. stations there, whereas since April 1, 1967 applications in Pembroke and Clermont for C.A.T.V. licences have been granted. You just cannot believe what you read in some official government statements and, after all, these are reports submitted to the ministers at their request by the B.B.G. The situation is intolerable.

I maintain that C.A.T.V. applications should be granted the moment they meet the technical requirements that are laid down by the Department of Transport. Any refusal of a C.A.T.V. application on other grounds constitutes a direct interference with the freedom of the individual to acquire knowledge and information where he can. And do not forget, Mr. Chairman, that in the case of C.A.T.V. applications the subscriber has to pay money to view the stations that are brought to him. It is a private commercial enterprise.

I think it would be very interesting to dwell upon this phrase the B.B.G. uses when it makes recommendations to the Minister of Transport, namely, that the application was rejected "on the ground it would adversely affect the economic position of an existing t.v. station". I ask you, gentlemen, as members of the House of Commons, how can a C.A.T.V. station adversely affect the economic position of an existing t.v. station in face of the fact that C.A.T.V. stations do not accept or sell advertising space? The one source of revenue for the local t.v. station is advertising placed either by local businessmen or nationally by large organizations. The C.A.T.V. operator cannot accept advertising direct; he is not allowed to solicit advertising. The only source of funds for local t.v. stations is advertising revenue.

In view of this situation, Mr. Chairman, I should like to ask this question. How can the local C.A.T.V. station affect the advertising revenues of the local t.v. station when it is not allowed to sell advertising and the local t.v. station is? The situation simply gets down to the basic proposition that when advertisers can prove to a local t.v. station operator that people are not watching his station but are watching programs brought in from outside stations by a C.A.T.V. operator, then those advertisers rebel at the advertising rates that are charged by the local t.v. station. That is a basic fact.

If people in Canada do not want to watch the programs put out by local t.v. stations, then why should the cabinet of Canada determine that they shall watch those programs whether they like it or not? The cabinet has not yet got around to telling the people what magazines they should read. The cabinet has not yet got to the point of telling us what newspapers we should read. So why has it adopted this sanctimonious attitude of saying: "We will tell you what stations you will watch"? Why should the cabinet say that there will be no C.A.T.V. installation in a given area because this would mean that the people in that area would watch programs other than those the local t.v. station operator is prepared to broadcast?

On this question of C.A.T.V. applications adversely affecting the economic position of local stations, I have asked this question before and I do so again: Since when did the cabinet of Canada enter the picture and guarantee that a licensee must make a profit? I have in my hand the Fowler report of 1965. This gentleman has investigated the broadcasting world of Canada on two different occasions. It is interesting to note the efforts to which some people will go in order to protect t.v. licensees and ensure that they make a profit. At page 251 of his report Mr. Fowler prefaces one section of his report with these words:

Our terms of reference specifically excluded community-antenna television services—

Yet he proceeds to tell Canadians what is good for them with regard to C.A.T.V. operations. Some people might call this conceit; some might say that he has acted on the basis that he knows the answers to C.A.T.V. and therefore has told us what he thinks about it even though his terms of reference specifically excluded this matter. Mr. Fowler goes on to say:

• (3:40 p.m.)

—but we inevitably found ourselves drawn into consideration of this complex subject because of its actual and potential effects on television generally.

In the course of his comments on page 253 one finds Mr. Fowler writing—

The Chairman: Order, please. I must advise the hon. member that the time allotted to him has expired.

Mr. Orlikow: Mr. Chairman, I intend to spend a few moments today discussing an important task of the new regulatory agency which will be established under this bill, a task which the B.B.G., to my knowledge, has not performed, a task which is absolutely essential, namely, the examination of the activities of the radio stations of Canada, particularly the private stations, and the setting of standards of performance for any radio or television station in Canada that is granted a licence.

I would be remiss in my duty if I did not make some comments about several speeches which we were privileged to hear or burdened with listening to—it depends on how you look at it—yesterday. Some of the speeches, to say the least, I found amazing. I am referring to the speeches made by the hon. members for Elgin and Red Deer. I congratulate the hon. member for Elgin on his wide-ranging speech which demonstrated to me that he had excellent technical assistance, as good as the assistance provided to cabinet ministers in Canadian governments by their executive assistants. In his criticism of the C.B.C. the hon. member for Elgin dealt with C.B.C. reporting of race problems in the United States, C.B.C. coverage of United States foreign policy and C.B.C. coverage of domestic politics in the United States. I find it hard to believe that any Canadian member of parliament who looks after his constituency and tries to follow legislation and estimates in the house, which must be followed and dealt with, has been able to find the time to become as knowledgeable about United States affairs as the hon. member for Elgin seems to be.

The hon. member for Elgin has just left the chamber. I am sorry because I do not like to criticize an hon. member who is not here. Since he was here when I began speaking I shall continue. There was a remarkable similarity between the views which the hon. member for Elgin expressed and views which often appear in the Toronto Telegram under the by-line of Mr. Lubor Zink. There is nothing wrong with that. The hon. member for Elgin may agree with Mr. Zink. If the hon. member for Elgin did not have Mr. Zink's assistance in preparing his speech I can only conclude that two people in Canada have identical views on almost any subject one can think of.

An hon. Member: Shame.

Mr. Orlikow: I am not concerned about everything the hon. member for Elgin spoke about. Surprisingly, I agreed partially with one or two of his points. But I am concerned about some of the views he expressed. One gathers from his remarks that because the views of certain C.B.C. commentators do not coincide with his views, therefore the C.B.C. must be wrong. I often disagree with the views of certain C.B.C. commentators, as do other members of parliament as well as thousands of Canadians who listen to C.B.C. radio or who watch television. Just because we disagree with a C.B.C. commentator does that give us the right to say that the C.B.C. is wrong and that therefore the new management needs to put the blocks under the present staff.

I hope the new officers of the C.B.C. will receive more co-operation than their counterparts received in the past. I hope they will give more direction and will run a more efficient, aggressive and—I say this hopefully—constructive organization than we have seen in past years. If the new C.B.C. management tried to follow the suggestion of the hon. member for Elgin and to censor—that is the only word I can use when commenting on what the hon. member for Elgin suggested—the views of those who work for the C.B.C., as the hon. member for Elgin suggested, there would be no point in allowing the C.B.C. to continue its existence.

Let me illustrate my remarks by referring to some of the things the hon. member for Elgin said yesterday. For example, he said that the C.B.C. correspondent in the United States, Mr. Knowlton Nash, was anti-American when he spoke about President Johnson's popularity in that country. When Mr. Nash said that President Johnson's recent state of the union speech to congress was not a success, according to the hon. member for Elgin Mr. Nash was being anti-American.

Yesterday's Ottawa Journal carried an article by Mr. James Reston, who is perhaps the most respected newspaper columnist in the United States. I think he is an associate editor of the New York Times. The article is headed, "Johnson's Speech No Triumph". Following the line of argument of the hon. member for Elgin, Mr. Reston is anti-American.

In this morning's Globe and Mail there is an article by Anthony Westell about the Liberal leadership race. I do not intend to discuss that topic today. However, in that article Mr. Westell has written one paragraph which I intend to read because it touches on something which the hon. member for Elgin referred to yesterday:

U.S. Republican presidential candidate George Romney did it—

Mr. Westell means that Mr. Romney completely destroyed his credit as a candidate.

—with a remark about being brainwashed on Viet Nam.

The hon. member for Elgin suggested that when C.B.C. correspondents reported that Mr. Romney had said that he had been brainwashed about Viet Nam they were misquoting him. Using that argument Mr. Westell, who writes in the Globe and Mail, should be called anti-American.

One can carry the analogy further. On occasion our Prime Minister and the Secretary of State for External Affairs have been critical of the United States. I suppose, using the line of argument the hon. member for Elgin did, they should be called anti-American. No doubt, according to the views of Mr. Zink, who may have helped in the preparation of the speech, one could call them communist dupes. I point out these things only to show what slippery ground we get on to when we talk about regulating, censoring and directing the day to day operations of the C.B.C.

The hon. member for Red Deer also spoke yesterday and certain of his remarks can be found on page 5801 of Hansard. He told us that a C.B.C. program last Sunday had made fun of religion. I did not see that program. We say so often here that we live under a system of government like that of Great Britain. I wonder why hon. members, instead of being critical of the C.B.C. or of any other agency which pokes fun at the establishment, whether it be political, business, religious or labour, cannot adopt the British point of view. The kind of satire carried by the British Broadcasting Corporation in which they satirize everything from the royal family downward would be a revelation to us here; yet nobody there makes any fuss about it.

• (3:50 p.m.)

As I say, I did not see the program referred to. It may be that the hon. member for Red Deer is right. He went on to say that programs ought to present a positive view of the family. I do not know what this means. I had a feeling as I listened to the hon. member for Red Deer that he wants us to go back to the Victorian age. Maybe that would be a good thing, but the fact is that we are living in the sixties. One only has to look at the kind of legislation with which we are dealing in the house to realize how times have changed. Divorce, abortion, the pill—you name it and we have had it here. This is the situation, whether the hon. member for Red Deer wants to believe it or not. I would hate to see the C.B.C. restricted as I gathered the hon. member for Red Deer thinks it ought to be, to telling the people of Canada fairy tales and stories from the Bible. Incidentally, even those would have to be censored because I can think of some chapters of the Bible that I would not want young children to hear or see depicted on television.

I am saying this because I believe we ought to face the problems which any broadcasting organization has to confront. We live in an age in which, whether we like it or not, people are drinking more liquor than they were 50 years ago—

An hon. Member: Speak for yourself.

Mr. Orlikow: I cannot. It so happens that I am a non-drinker. People are smoking more than they used to and, incidentally, I am a non-smoker myself. People, unfortunately, are using drugs. I may happen to think, as I do, that this is bad and that we should be carrying on an educational campaign to demonstrate this view. But the facts are there and there is no use hiding our heads and saying they are not. Members of parliament ought to be careful when they criticize radio and television not to leave the impression that because parliament is granting the money which the C.B.C. uses we are telling the people in charge, including the new directors, that they had better watch their step and do as suggested, or they may be in trouble.

One thing which has bothered me a great deal is the suggestion made by a number of hon. members—I heard it from the hon. member for Jasper-Edson and, I believe, from the hon. member for Rosthern—that the best thing to do would be to sell the C.B.C. lock, stock and barrel. I do not agree with this proposal. Moreover, I should like to say to the hon. members that either they have forgotten or they simply do not know what their own party in years gone by felt about this issue and what every government since the thirties has felt about it.

I want to remind hon. members to my right that it was a Conservative prime minister, Mr. Bennett, who said when the C.B.C. was established that Canadians had a right to a system of broadcasting from Canadian sources equal to that of any other country and that Canada must be assured of complete control of broadcasting from Canadian sources free from any interference. One cannot achieve these things which Mr. Bennett commended so eloquently in the absence of a publicly owned television system. I certainly hope and expect that the government will ignore the proposals which have been made so frequently by the official opposition that the corporation should be disposed of or its activities curtailed.

In the few minutes which remain to me I should like to deal with what I believe to be an important subject, a field which has been virtually ignored. I refer to the activities of private radio stations. When television began to develop in Canada in 1952 or thereabouts many people thought that radio stations would virtually disappear because people would no longer listen to them. Since that time nobody has been paying much attention to the affairs of the radio stations.

The fact is that the radio stations of Canada have never been so numerous, so affluent and so successful in securing advertising revenue as they are today. There seems to be no end to their growth. I have no objection to this. In 1952 there were 169 privately owned radio stations. In 1965 there were 281 such stations; that figure includes both a.m. and f.m. stations. It is true that television secured the lion's share of the total broadcasting revenue in 1965, the last year for which C.B.S. figures are available, but radio stations took in more than $70 million or some 42 per cent of total broadcastig revenues. Each year the sale of radio receivers exceeds that of television sets.

That radio broadcasting is a profitable business is obvious if one studies the figures to be found, for example, in the Financial Post. One sees that the corporation called Selkirk Holdings, which owns radio stations in Lethbridge, Edmonton, Calgary, Hamilton, Victoria, Vancouver and elsewhere, has increased its profits in each of the past three years, that Standard Radio, which owns stations in Toronto and Montreal, has similarly increased its profits every year, that Western Broadcasting, which has stations in Vancouver and elsewhere, has similarly seen its profits increase. I have no objection to this but I should like to draw the attention of hon. members to the following provision in the bill before us:

> 2. It is hereby declared that—
>
> (d) the programming provided by the Canadian broadcasting system should be varied and comprehensive and should provide reasonable opportunity for the expression of conflicting views on matters of public controversy, and the programming provided by each broadcaster should be of high standard, using predominantly Canadian creative and other resources;

I point out that this applies to the entire broadcasting system, private as well as public, and that the words "creative and other" are underlined. I wish to ask the minister and the new officials of the regulatory agency to take a look at the record of the private radio stations which, certainly in the larger cities, have sufficient resources, as I have indicated, to enable them to do what is required of them.

• (4:00 p.m.)

I would like the minister to make inquiries. I do not expect an answer today. We can put questions on the order paper and get the answers later. However, I would like the minister to find out what orchestra or orchestras were heard live on private radio in 1967. I happen to like symphony music, but I do not expect a private radio station to hire a symphony orchestra. Private radio stations have built up their audiences by appealing to the young people—I am not being critical about this—by playing the kind of music which young people like. But why does this have to be done through the use of records only?

Private radio stations are making money, and the new broadcasting legislation stipulates that they shall use Canadian creative talent. Why can they not be required to devote a certain percentage of their revenues to hiring live musicians? If Canada is to be a real country it must have musicians, actors and writers. Why can it not be stipulated that as part of the price for having their licences, private radio stations, which again I say are making money, must use Canadian talent?

I would like to find out how many musicians were employed last year by private radio stations. I venture to say I could count them on the fingers of one hand for all Canada. How many operas were performed on radio? How many plays were performed live on private radio stations in 1967? I venture to say again that I could count the number on the fingers of one hand, if there were, indeed, any at all.

I would like the minister to find out what percentage of all the records played by private radio stations was made in Canada and featured Canadian artists and Canadian compositions. One has just to look at the number of Canadians who are working on the top shows in the United States and Great Britain —I am not being critical of them—to realize how many of them have left Canada. Why have they left? Because we did not encourage them to stay.

Unfortunately every year is not 1967; every year is not centennial year. I wish to give the government and the Secretary of State a great deal of credit for the excellent job they did in centennial year, but why can we not encourage Canadians who are creative and have a contribution to make to Canada to stay in Canada? We cannot encourage them if we are going to permit the private radio stations to be simply money-making propositions. Of course, the hon. member for York-Humber has an entirely different view. The hon. member for York-Humber would argue—

Miss LaMarsh: Mr. Chairman, I would suggest that my hon. friend might get his information from the hon. member for York South, who acts for ACTRA.

Mr. Lewis: Who acted for ACTRA.

Mr. Orlikow: Yes, the hon. member for York South has acted for ACTRA. I have acted for them and I have close relations with them. We can get the information from them but if I were to present that information here I do not think the Secretary of State would accept it as very authentic or official. ACTRA is a private organization which has its own axe to grind on behalf of its members. I think this is a task for the new regulatory agency. I hope the minister will take my suggestion seriously and urge the members of the new regulatory agency to look into this question.

As I have mentioned, Mr. Chairman, radio stations greatly outnumber television stations in Canada. In 1965 there were only 65 television stations in Canada. Therefore it is not unnatural that of the total of almost 9,000 people employed almost full time in broadcasting, over 5,000 were employed by radio stations in that year. Canada's 281 radio stations took in over $70 million in broadcasting revenue in 1965 and showed a net operating profit of over $7 million. Without resorting to a slide rule it is apparent that the average percentage of profit on total broadcasting revenue was about 10 per cent, but consideration must be given to expenditures, depreciation, etc. Even more important, there is a vast range in the profitability of stations. One cannot compare the popular stations in Toronto, Montreal, Winnipeg and Vancouver with stations in Portage la Prairie or Corner Brook, Newfoundland, if indeed there is a radio station there. Therefore one should expect much more from the large stations. I suggest that this is a task which the new regulatory agency should pursue closely.

There is just one more point I would like to raise. Although I do not particularly like it I have no objection to the kind of programming which private radio stations do. Obviously they do the kind of programming which their listeners want to hear. I have no objection to the music they play, although I think they might devote some time during the week to more serious music. I do not even object to their open line programs, although I find it amazing that in each city in Canada where there is a private radio station there are two or three experts on every subject. The person conducting an open line program can give a quick answer about sex, drugs, liquor, cigarettes, about any matter which any unidentified person may telephone and comment upon.

Miss LaMarsh: Everybody is an expert on some of those.

Mr. Orlikow: However, I would hope that the new regulatory agency will look at the amount of advertising carried by private radio stations. Since the minister has referred to ACTRA I want to refer her to the spring 1967 issue of the ACTRA magazine. It contains a centre section reporting on a survey they made one day of the amount of advertising carried by a whole series of private radio stations in different Canadian cities. It shows that on radio station CJON in St. John's, Newfoundland, between 8 and 10 a.m. and 2 and 4 p.m. on the day in question 26 per cent of the time in those four hours was devoted to commercials. On radio station CJAD, Montreal, in six hours that day, between 8 and 10 a.m. in the morning, 2 and 4 p.m. in the afternoon, and 7 and 9 p.m. in the evening, 24.4 per cent of the time was devoted to commercials.

Miss LaMarsh: I am told that was a bad day.

Mr. Orlikow: You mean they did not have enough?

Mr. Lewis: Told by one of the owners?

Mr. Orlikow: That may be. On station CKGM in Montreal, which must be a pretty poor station, in four hours only 16.3 per cent of the time was devoted to commercials. I do not know how they manage. Station CFRB, Toronto, in a six hour survey devoted 21.9 per cent of the time to commercials. Station CHUM, Toronto, in a six hour survey devoted 26.5 per cent of the time to commercials. Station CKY in my own city, Winnipeg, in a two hour survey devoted 24.2 per cent of the time to commercials. I could continue but I think I have made my point. In any case the minister and the officials of the new regulatory agency should look into this matter. When 25 per cent or more of the time in any hour is devoted to commercials I think it is a bit much. I know that the regulations provide for a fixed amount of time for commercials, but that is for a 24-hour period. What happens is that there is very little advertising from midnight to 8 a.m. when nobody is listening.

Mr. Jamieson: That is excluded.

Mr. Orlikow: I defer to my hon. friend from Burin-Burgeo. He is much more expert in this field than I am.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order. I regret to interrupt the hon. member but the time allotted to him has now expired.

Mr. Orlikow: Mr. Chairman, may I have one more minute to complete what I have to say?

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Is this agreeable to the committee?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Orlikow: Mr. Chairman, I have tried to indicate some of the things which I think the new regulatory agency should do. I am hopeful, as we all are, that the C.B.C. will improve under new management and I hope that a year from now the new regulatory agency will have done the job which I think is long overdue.

• (4:10 p.m.)

Mr. Dinsdale: Had this legislation been passed before Christmas, Mr. Chairman, I am sure it would have been dealt with much more expeditiously by the house. Certainly I had not intended to speak during the course of the debate because we were represented on this side by a capable committee which was handling the matter with great efficiency.

Miss LaMarsh: You are still represented.

Mr. Dinsdale: However, Mr. Chairman, at this stage of the discussion I must speak briefly. I am able to speak briefly because I am not equipped with any of the research facilities which were referred to by the hon. member for Winnipeg North. Everything I say today will represent entirely my own thinking and interpretation in respect of this matter. I agree that private members of the house do not have the research facilities which when used sometimes result in long tedious speeches, and that they do not is perhaps best for all concerned.

I enter this debate mainly because during the Christmas recess, as I presume was the case with most hon. members, I was called to many meetings in my constituency. We had been away for a long time sitting almost continually here in the House of Commons. There were many matters which constituents wished to discuss with their members as a result of that long absence. This applies mainly to those of us from the more distant parts of Canada who do not have an opportunity to keep as closely in touch with our constituencies as those who live closer at hand.

I found a strong wave of protest across the country on many matters. In fact I have never attended so many protest meetings in all my years in the house. I can tell the government there are many unhappy citizens across this nation in respect of many policies or lack of policies. No doubt those who were in the central part of Canada during the week end when the leadership candidates were there were made aware of this spirit of protest personally during their sojourn in the city of Winnipeg.

The one meeting I attended relating to the particular subject before the committee at the moment was convened by a committee in the city of Brandon which calls itself the committee for better broadcasting. I, along with other interested citizens, met with this committee for a period of some four hours. In fact the meeting went on until midnight and would not have broken up at that hour had there not been the problem of time. I discovered that this committee, which actually had been formed to protest monopoly broadcasting in southwestern Manitoba, in reality was more concerned about the quality of broadcasting than any other subject. This was a spontaneous protest which arose following the recent hearings before the B.B.G. with regard to a second channel television service in southwestern Manitoba.

The committee was formed for the purpose of opposing any extension of monopoly in broadcasting. In response to a newspaper advertisement some 4,000 citizens communicated with the B.B.G. to express their feelings on this important subject. As I say, while the main item of concern was monopoly broadcasting, both radio and television, it turned out at the meeting I attended that the citizens were more concerned about the quality of broadcasting by both the private broadcasters and the C.B.C.

It is not necessary for me to enlarge on some of the matters which were brought before that meeting. In the interest of brevity I should add that the following day the chairman of the B.B.G., Dr. Stewart, arrived in the city of Brandon. A special meeting of the board was convened at which the board was represented by Mrs. Sweatman and the chairman. During that board meeting the members of the board were subjected to a repetition of the experience which had been mine on the previous evening. Therefore, without bringing the matters before the house in detail I can assure the responsible minister and members of the committee that the B.B.G. has been fully informed concerning the problem.

I do not know whether this was an exceptional circumstances in Canadian broadcasting affairs but I do know that there is a very enlightened electorate in the Brandon-Souris constituency. I would imagine that other members have had similar experiences, if not before a special committee, at least through correspondence and other forms of communication. I want to emphasize that the quality of broadcasting both by the C.B.C. and by private radio and television services is of great and growing concern to the people in southwestern Manitoba.

It is natural that there should be this type of public reaction because broadcasting both television and radio, is a comparatively new facility in the area of communication and as electronic mass media they are having a growing impact on the thinking of the people and therefore on the public policy of the nation. Even though we have had broadcasting for a comparatively short space of time, actually just over a quarter of a century, we know what can be accomplished by the skilful use of this mass media.

Mass media is a vital and integral part of the whole modern process of brainwashing which is a part of our psychological stock in trade today. While the hidden persuaders still use the printed word, to a growing extent I would say that they are resorting to mass media in order to engage in subtle forms of hidden persuasion at the subliminal level which motivate much of our way of life today. In the political area we have the example of what took place in nazi Germany where a monstrous authoritarian régime was able to maintain control. In addition to removing the normal processes of parliamentary democracy they were actually able to obtain the support of the masses by manipulation through the skilful use of radio broadcasting. We are all aware that President Roosevelt for many years was able to maintain a strong influence over the electorate in the United States even though most of the major newspapers of that country were opposed to his policies. He was able to do this through his fireside chats. Through his skilful use of broadcasting he maintained this influence over the people of the United States.

• (4:20 p.m.)

If this is true of radio broadcasting it is much more true of television because television has a double or even multiple impact as a result of hitting all the senses at once. It is even suggested that in the not too distant future we may have "smellovision", which will add another sensory impact to those which have already been achieved.

Miss LaMarsh: Some smell already.

Mr. Cowan: There is a smell now.

Mr. Dinsdale: We know that many outstanding personalities have been moulded and have evolved in Canada by reason of their exposure on television. Indeed, some of our television personalities who appear regularly on this mass media have a greater impact on the nation than even the political figures.

Pundits become household words across the nation by reason of their exposure on the idiot box, as it is referred to sometimes.

I was sadly disillusioned a year or two ago when I had someone assisting me who had had a certain amount of local television exposure. I found he was better known than I and that everyone wanted his autograph even though I was the candidate campaigning for re-election. They were more interested in this gentleman because he had been singing cowboy songs on television. I am not sure what moral that has for me as an aspiring politician. We are also aware that Mr. Laurier Lapierre, who has had considerable television exposure, is aspiring to political leadership in this nation.

Miss LaMarsh: He says he will be the first socialist prime minister.

Mr. Dinsdale: I am sure his exposure through the means of television is going to have considerable influence and impact on his contemplated political career. I do not want to pursue this thought further, and if I am going to maintain my vow of brevity I must move to the next point.

There have been criticisms that C.B.C. broadcasting policy and private broadcasting activities have a less than desirable influence on our Canadian society. I am inclined to agree with that because the mass media does reflect a trend toward increasing urbanization in Canada. I served on the broadcasting committee away back when—a long time ago. One of the points I repeatedly brought before the committee was that in C.B.C. programming local interests are not represented. Most of the programs originate from big metropolitan communities such as Montreal and Toronto, and to a lesser extent Winnipeg and Vancouver, with the result that inevitably there is going to be an influence reflecting the process of urbanization in this country, and urban influence is a secular influence. It is a materialistic and often sensuous influence. Anyone who has visited the C.B.C. broadcasting centres in Toronto and Montreal soon discovers that gathered there are groups of artists and programmers who are completely caught up in the secular urban trend under way throughout the entire western world.

Someone referred to what Oswald Spangler said in his writings after world war I, that the inevitable drift from a predominantly rural society to a secularized, industrialized, urban society will bring about drastic changes in values. It is this trend that several members have protested against during the course of the general discussion at the committee stage.

There is very little spiritual or religious influence in mass media communications at the present time. This not only applies to the arena of broadcasting but to all our other social institutions as well. Someone has said that the only spiritual uplift modern man is capable of today is that which he derives from the pursuit of the cocktail circuit where he becomes filled with spirit and as a result enters into new dimensions. We might also add to that the resort to pills, sexual thrills, and all the other things which are part of the western urbanization of today. This trend applies to all the other social institutions as well.

It is for this reason, I am sure, that the late Governor General Vanier felt compelled to establish the Vanier Institute of the Family. He was aware that this basic social institution was being profoundly eroded by the secular drift that is under way in our so-called western civilization. Perhaps this is not the time to refer to this, Mr. Chairman, but very shortly we will be debating amendments to the Criminal Code, just as we have recently debated divorce reforms. This indicates that the family as a social institution today is no longer the healing place of the soul as it used to be in more stable times. It is the breeding ground for divorce and delinquency. This is the important point which was brought to our attention by the Vanier Institute of the Family. Anyone who has read the recent writings of Dr. Wilder Penfield will quickly come to the conclusion that these are the problems which concern him. Our mass media of communication as well as the basic social institutions have come under the influence of the inevitable drift toward a secular, urban society.

If time allowed I could deal with education as well because changes are taking place in our educational system. In the old Victorian days, referred to I think by the hon. member for Winnipeg North, it used to be reading, writing and arithmetic that were taught. This apparently has been changed by the addition of another category. It is now reading, writing, arithmetic and rioting. There is a great protest emanating from our educational institutions at all levels. I am sure hon. members noted the recent caustic comments of Malcolm Muggeridge who resigned as chancellor of the University of Edinburgh, one of the most venerable educational institutions. He did so in protest against a trend of the student body. He said that the fine, progressive spirit of the youth of the University of Edinburgh has been prostituted because their goals are now sex and pot rather than those which used to activate and motivate the young people attending that university. He suggested that these are not the traditional goals of youth but rather the goals of the debauched. He is amazed and shocked because the young people have now substituted these less than exalted goals for the ones he pursued in former times.

• (4:30 p.m.)

There are three types of people in society. First there are the activists who get things done. The second group simply stands by and watches things being done. The third group consists of those who do not have a clue about what is happening. It seems to me that the activists have moved into the area of mass communication because they tend to be those who are most caught up in the social turmoil that has been unleashed by the process of urbanization and they have a controlling and dominating influence on the whole process of broadcasting.

If this is so, it is up to the apathists, those who stand by and merely criticize and watch, to move into this sphere of influence. This is why I am so encouraged by the brief reference in the bill which contemplates the establishment of educational television. We have had television for only 20 years or so and we have not used this tremendously powerful tool for mass communication for educational purposes. If we are to resolve some of the problems that have been referred to by other hon. members, we must move into this area of E.T.V. broadcasting as quickly as possible.

The printing press was discovered back in the fifteenth century and it was at least 200 years before print was used for mass education. I believe we are making much quicker progress in the twentieth century because in the relatively short space of a quarter of a century we are at least thinking about the educational possibilities of television. I urge rapid progress in this regard. This is where we can deal from an educational standpoint, using qualified educationists, with some of the problems that so obviously beset mass media communication in Canada at the present time.

I am aware of the interest of the Board of Broadcast Governors in the problem of the quality of broadcasting in Canada. This was demonstrated forcefully by the chairman of the board, Dr. Stewart, who came all the way out to Manitoba just two weeks ago, bringing with him the Manitoba representative on the board, to see for himself the reasons for the protests that had arisen in southwestern Manitoba. I trust that the new regulatory body, the C.R.C., will have the same interest and zeal in pursuing a more excellent course for broadcasting. I am sure it will if Dr. Stewart and those who have been associated with him in the past are retained on that board. I am quite optimistic concerning these matters. I am not too concerned that sometimes local, private broadcasting stations abuse their privileges. We all abuse our privileges; it is the nature of homo sapiens, sometimes referred to as homo the sap. But eventually there is a reaction and we find the citizens deciding for themselves that all is not for the best. Then they take the initiative and eventually the quality of broadcasting is elevated. As a result the quality of life as manifest through mass media communication is raised accordingly.

Mr. Cashin: Mr. Chairman, toward the end of his remarks, the previous speaker, if I understood him correctly, quoted Malcolm Muggeridge as being somewhat disillusioned with the youth of today who, according to Mr. Muggeridge—at least, I understood Mr. Muggeridge was being quoted and they were not the words of the hon. member—are concerned more with sex and pot and not with the finer things with which they were concerned in Mr. Muggeridge's day. I take issue with Mr. Muggeridge on this question. I think what we are in fact witnessing today, which is perhaps in some degree reflected on radio and television, is a much more open society in which there is a greater opportunity for a far greater number of people to express themselves both intelligently and unintelligently. Sometimes, therefore, in reference to mass media, particularly television, people are upset when they hear views expressed which are not their own. I believe that if television is to be a meaningful instrument in society this trend will continue rather than diminish because television must reflect the changes that are taking place in our modern society.

Another factor that I think we find upsetting about the mass media is that in the period 50 or 60 years ago or whenever it was—I suppose it was not that long ago—that Mr. Muggeridge was talking about the world of ideas was limited to those who had education and they were relatively much smaller in number than is the case today. It was limited to those who had access to books. I think we would find among the intellectual community, if that is the correct term, of 50 years ago as much depravity as we find among the intellectual community today. I do not know that the morals of the intellectual community, if one can find such a community, have really changed in the last 50 years.

Perhaps what has changed more than anything else is that we have become more democratic and the average citizen is able to be exposed more to all facets of life and has a little more time to pursue the finer as well as the not so fine aspects of life. I believe this trend is being expressed in one form or another on the mass media. There is a certain group of people in our society who have preconceived notions of how it must operate. These rules are not always applied to themselves because the alteration of that sort of strict code can be permitted for the few. But if there is any danger that the masses may indulge in the same way of life this, of course, can be upsetting.

To put it another way, I think our criticism of the mass media is sometimes more the result of uncertainty about the consequences of the changes we are experiencing. Naturally, television as a mass media must be part of this picture. I suppose it can be said that when there is an unknown quantity many people may be concerned. Perhaps there are those who, while they may argue on the one hand that this trend is good because it is democratic and open, say that in fact television as a mass medium can be used by a particular group which has a particular philosophy about society to exploit or perhaps unduly influence society. Therefore I suppose one of the real dangers in the policy of broadcasting is an imbalance in this connection. A proper balance must be maintained.

I think it is safe to say that up until now there has been an imbalance in this area. I do not think the reactionaries of the country feel they have the same opportunity of expression as others. I do not know whether they have; I have not monitored all the programs. However, I suppose it may be said that some of the views allowed to be expressed on the mass media tend to be what may generally be regarded as the more progressive and sometimes we do not hear enough of other, more reactionary views. I suppose that in all fairness there ought to be some kind of balance and there is undoubtedly therefore, at least theoretically, a danger present in the broadcasting media.

• (4:40 p.m.)

While the issue of broadcasting has been with us since the beginning of broadcasting and will continue to be with us, I think that what we are in fact talking about is society itself and how the mass media reflect it. My particular reason for speaking in the debate today is to deal with two matters that are of concern to me. One has to do with public broadcasting policy with regard to the extension of service. I am concerned about the fact that in the development of broadcasting in this country—and I intend to go along with some of the things that the hon. member for Brandon-Souris said in this regard—there is a danger that the large metropolitan centres will control the mass media more and more to the detriment of some of the other regions of Canada.

We all recognize, I believe, that it is in the larger centres that the greater opportunities exist for people in the arts who would like to have their talents displayed on television. But at the same time I feel that in viewing the policy of the Canadian broadcasting system there is reason for the valid criticism that over the years the C.B.C. has not always and at all times adhered strictly enough to the view that one of its primary functions is the extension of service. I know that certainly a great deal has been done in this area, but in 1968 we find that a great many Canadians still do not enjoy the modern advantages of television. So it is a little annoying to these people to hear about large expenditures and great public buildings going up while at the same time they do not enjoy the benefits of a service.

Let us take my own province as an example. One of the things for which the former member representing Burin-Burgeo fought during his entire period as a member of the house was public broadcasting in his constituency. To this day there is no public radio broadcasting in his constituency although there are two private radio stations which operate there. The same goes for television, although in the case of television the private broadcasters at that time did not have a station in the province of Newfoundland. However, in the case of the south coast of Newfoundland, the example of the initiative of private enterprise vis-à-vis the C.B.C. is a telling one and warrants criticism. The same situation still exists today so far as television is concerned in my own constituency which is never more than 100 miles at any point from the city of St. John's. There are a number of areas there which do not enjoy television coverage, and this is even more true of other areas in Newfoundland.

The second matter which I believe has regional overtones concerns the policy of public broadcasting so far as the development of Canada on a regional level is concerned. Again I think the C.B.C. is faced with a serious problem in this respect because there are only so many dollars to be spent and there are a great many ways to spend them. At the same time, those of us who come from the periphery of Canada and do not live in the great metropolitan centres have more than a legitimate complaint that too much of public broadcasting is controlled from these centres. This is bad for a number of reasons. It is bad because it reduces the opportunity for a number of people to participate. Therefore in a quantitative sense it is unfortunate. Second, it has a qualitative effect because if public broadcasting is concentrated, as it is, in one or two large metropolitan centres it is more difficult to achieve the diversity which could be obtained if there were greater autonomy or greater opportunities at the regional level.

I believe there is a relationship between culture, art, drama and geography. The hon. member for Essex South mentioned fog. Although he may never have seen it physically he should have more knowledge of it in a metaphysical sense than most hon. members in the house. I would have thought the hon. member for Essex South would share my views because I would not think that Windsor is one of the great metropolitan centres of this country.

The qualitative effects to which I referred are due to the fact that, as I said, culture, art and drama are related to geography. Therefore I believe that a greater emphasis should be placed upon the development of talent in regions other than the metropolitan centres. It is not solely the responsibility of television to undertake the development of talent. Opportunities can be provided in many ways. However, I feel that television must play an important role. I was pleased to note last night that the C.B.C. broadcast a program which originated from St. John's, Newfoundland. I am sure that those hon. members who did not see that program will have heard about it because there are few parts of Canada as rich in folklore and culture as the province of Newfoundland, unless it be the province of Quebec. I contratulate the C.B.C. for its production last night. However, I think that greater emphasis should be placed in the future on the development of talent in the Atlantic provinces and also on providing opportunities for the development of talent in western Canada. Not only would this be justified on the basis that it opens the media to more people but also because it can have a qualitative as well as a quantitative effect. Not only will new people be brought in but I believe that people from the different regions of Canada will have an effect on the quality of the programs.

There are certain attitudes or certain factors which may perhaps make for a greater diversity in programming. Obviously one of the facts of life in Canada is our regional and cultural diversity, and I think the C.B.C. has a role to play in its development. We speak a great deal about national unity. I hope that national unity does not mean we should all become the same and, so far as television is concerned, become more and more like those who live in Toronto or Montreal. It would be a great advantage to Canada, not only so far as television is concerned but in many other areas, if greater opportunities were given to people in the more distant areas of Canada.

Let me refer to the program "Viewpoint" as an illustration of the policy. It so happens that very seldom do we see people from the Atlantic provinces appearing on that program. I have made some inquiries, not official but quite informal ones, and it would be safe to say that the C.B.C. has had some difficulties in using people from the Atlantic provinces on that program. This was the impression I received. If this is the case, then I think it is a reflection on the efforts of the C.B.C. and perhaps more than anything else it spells out an attitude of mind that may lead us to believe that Canada extends from York on one side to Humber on the other.

Miss LaMarsh: It is from sea to sea to sea.

Mr. Cashin: I hope that the future policy of broadcasting in Canada will take this factor into account. I do not wish to be unduly critical because I recognize that there are many legitimate problems involved in developing talent in different regions in Canada, but the somewhat elusive problem which bothers those of us who come from the Atlantic provinces is that although facts and figures can be produced to show otherwise, basically there exists an attitude of mind that part of being Canadian is the task of making sure that a minimum standard of service is provided to the outer regions of Canada because they are part of our country. So often we are not really seized with the real conviction that Canada extends from sea to sea and that, for example, there is no country that would not benefit from having Prince Edward Island. There are some who may not think so but, although there are only 100,000 people in Prince Edward Island, in a qualitative sense the population of that island and their way of life enrich this country. If that is true of Prince Edward Island, then that analogy pales into insignificance when compared with the greater island of Newfoundland.

• (4:50 p.m.)

I feel that the Canadian people are not being given the proper opportunity to enjoy the full advantages of being Canadian and experiencing, however vicariously, the great pleasure and honour it is to live on Canada's Atlantic coast. I hope that the C.B.C. in its future policies will perhaps take these factors more into account and become really seized of this matter instead of regarding it as their duty to allot us a certain minimum time every once in a while.

Mr. Prittie: Mr. Chairman, I should like first of all to commend the hon. member for St. John's West for the first part of his speech. I did not mind the last part and all that blarney that we listened to, but in the first part of his speech he pointed out what I think was a modern point of view about morals and life today compared with the point of view expressed by the hon. member for Brandon-Souris and others. I should like to say a few words about this question.

Before I do so, Mr. Chairman, I have in front of me the white paper on broadcasting, 1966, prepared by the House of Commons standing committee on broadcasting, films and assistance to the arts. I notice that it was presented to the house on March 21, 1967. I am one of those who were active members of the broadcasting committee. I sat through almost every minute of its hearings when the committee was reviewing the white paper, when the bill was drafted and sent back to the committee for review, and again in the house I have listened to almost every minute of the debate.

I have restrained myself from speaking for most of the time but it now seems to me that if we get through this broadcasting bill by June we will be doing rather well. I have come to the conclusion that it is rather pointless for me to sit here listening as the debate goes on to many things with which I disagree and to continue to remain silent. Therefore I am going to make a small contribution at this time. Perhaps the first anniversary of the report or the bill will soon be reached and we shall still be debating this subject.

At this point I want to refer in particular to a theme which has come up in the speeches of a number of members. I refer to the speech made before the Christmas adjournment by the hon. member for Okanagan-Revelstoke. I also noticed the same theme in the speech of the hon. member for Kindersley, in the speech of the hon. member for Rosthern, in the speech of the hon. member for Acadia, and particularly in the speech made yesterday by the hon. member for Red Deer. These speeches had to do with, I suppose, morality or morals in broadcasting.

I think the hon. member for Brandon-Souris referred to the sensuous quality of broadcasts, that sort of thing which is perhaps related to the kind of thing the hon. member for Acadia referred to earlier in his speech, the type of scenes that he may have viewed in some programs broadcast by C.B.C. television. I think here of the broadcast of the program "The Ernie Game" and the other film "Waiting for Caroline", the kind of program that deals with love and sex, couples in bed and so on. Some hon. members would have us believe that there are thousands of people in Canada who are up in arms about this kind of broadcasting. I do not doubt hon. members at all when they say that they have received letters of complaint on this subject. No doubt the headquarters of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation have received similar letters as well. However, I represent a constituency with 120,000 people, an urban constituency largely, and I may have received three letters on this subject.

The answer is not that these people do not watch C.B.C. television because surveys show that about 30 per cent of the people in the lower mainland area of British Columbia regularly watch the local C.B.C. television station. So from a constituency of 120,000 people which is situated in an area of 800,000 people this one member has received two or three letters on this subject. It does not seem to me that there is very much dissatisfaction with the type of broadcasting the people are getting. Therefore I believe that the views expressed by the members to whom I have referred do not represent the views of the majority of the Canadian people.

It seems to me that these members share the point of view of a lot of people who seem to think that our society is going to hell and that our morals are slipping. The people who hold this point of view quite frequently support it by quoting statistics of the number of illegitimate births, the number of divorces and that type of thing in support of their contention that society is going down hill. They seem to yearn for the Victorian age when they think that everything was better. The hon. member for Brandon-Souris referred to it as the good old Victoria days. Many of us think that it was the age of hypocrisy and that the people were not so good. If we accept the point of view of these members that the morals of our society are slipping and that things are not the way they were in the good old days, then let us discuss t.v. programs in that context.

When we talk of t.v. programs that deal with morals or sex, the kind of subject matter about which the hon. members have complained, we are not talking about many hours during a week. We may be talking about the Sunday night public affairs program on occasion, which lasts for one hour. We may be talking about the program "Festival", which is another hour. But we are not talking about very much more than that. The rest of the viewing time is given up to comedy shows, variety shows, public affairs, news, sports. So we are speaking about two or three hours of television a week at the most. I suggest to the committee that if our morals are slipping and the situation is so bad, then we must look somewhere else than to television for the reason. Because two or three hours of television a week, even of the worst sort, cannot be making that much of a contribution to the decline in moral behaviour.

I suggest that we should look at our total environment. We should look at the books that are being sold in the stores every day. I am not talking of the kind of books that only moral deviates would buy; I am talking of books that can be purchased in respectable bookstores, in drugstores and at our leading airports. I refer, for example, to books like "Valley of the Dolls". I asked one book dealer what kind of people bought these books and I found it was not just young kids who may be looking for a thrill. The buyers cut right across the whole spectrum of society. Respectable middle-aged people are buying these books. I suspect that throughout our history people have always been interested in books which have a little pornography in them. These books are purchased by people who are considered to be quite normal in our society. I suggest, there must be some reason why magazines such as Playboy enjoy such wide circulation. It is not only deviates or abnormal people who buy them; in fact they are to be found in the homes of many respectable families.

An hon. Member: And in the parliamentary library.

Mr. Prittie: Somebody says it is in the parliamentary library, Mr. Chairman. I did not know that. I have seen Esquire in the reading room but not Playboy.

Again, Mr. Chairman, looking at the total environment let us look to advertising both in newspapers and magazines and on television which depicts scantily clad ladies advertising various types of underwear. I myself have no objection to this but if our morals are slipping, as people say, then this sort of advertising has something to do with it.

I suggest we should also look to our movies. We must remember here that ideas of censorship have been changing over the years. It used to be the case that in the days of the Hays office married couples in bedroom scenes always had to be shown in separate beds. This has changed; things are changing all the time. People are not shocked by this. There is nothing wrong with it. Why pick on two or three hours of television a week as contributing to the so-called decline in the morals of our society?

• (5:00 p.m.)

Here, Mr. Chairman, we have an attempt at censorship. Some are saying "Tighten up; don't show that sort of thing." With all due respect to my hon. friend from Red Deer, I suspect he would want nothing more sexy than Anne of Green Gables on television. This amounts to censorship. It does not matter whether we have a board of censors or whether we tell the management of the broadcasting companies to do their own censoring. To be consistent we should have censorship all along the line. We must censor advertising, we must control the sale of books and what goes into books. Advertising can be very suggestive, whether it appears in newspapers, magazines or on television. All communications media would have to be controlled. If this sort of thing were tried in today's 1968 society it would fail utterly. People would not accept it.

I do not accept the view that society is going to hell, as some hon. members seem to think. Rather, I agree with what the hon. member for St. John's West said. Some aspects of life which hon. members do not like to see portrayed are simply more apparent and open than they were before. Hon. members have only to read the biographies of some of the leading lights of the Victorian age to realize that the upper classes and intellectuals were not all that good. They did not practice all the Victorian morals.

We have a more honest and open society today and there is no reason for that not to be reflected on television just as other aspects of our society are reflected there and elsewhere. I want to see a television system which is open and frank in its portrayal of our society. There are laws in this country to deal with anything that goes too far, whether it be in the printed or the visual media. Those laws should be the only restriction.

I make these points particularly for the benefit of the new president and new executive vice president of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation. Perhaps the corporation does need tightening up so far as economy is concerned. I do not know. That is a matter for experts. But I hope that they leave their creative people with a free hand to broadcast. I hope they are free to innovate and experiment. If ever the day comes when members of parliament do not rise to their feet and complain about something the C.B.C. will be a tame organization indeed.

I am really tired of listening to hon. members who act as if they speak for the majority of the Canadian people. I do not think that the majority of the Canadian people object to a few sexy scenes on television. They seem to like those scenes in books and movies, which seems to be a perfectly normal human reaction that has been pretty consistent throughout history.

Mr. Cowan: Mr. Chairman, I was speaking on a point that was raised in the rejection by the Board of Broadcast Governors of C.A.T.V. applications for licences for a number of centres in Canada and the B.B.G.'s concern that they would interfere with the economic viability of local television stations. I wish to pursue that subject further along the line of asking when the cabinet of Canada adopted the attitude that television stations must show a profit each year, even though that means restricting the freedom of access to information and knowledge of the Canadian public.

I made reference a short time ago to the report of Mr. Robert Fowler, which is popularly known as the Fowler report on broadcasting. I was quoting from page 253 of his report in which, though his terms of reference excluded C.A.T.V. operations, he made comments that were not required under his terms of reference. On page 253 he said:

> There are, however, many single-channel areas where regulatory policy to nourish or support the licensee has been negated by the sudden intrusion of a number of new signals which dilute the audience and damage commercial support.

The question now arises, why does the Canadian cabinet consider it necessary to provide a financial profit for a television station in the face of the sudden emergence of competition by a C.A.T.V. installation in the area that the local television station is servicing?

I have a brother who was the publisher, for Lord Thomson, of a paper in the Timmins area, the Timmins Press. When he was appointed publisher of that paper by Roy Thomson, as he was then, there was no television station in Timmins. There were applications in hand by the C.B.C. to issue television licences in Timmins. It was well known that television applications had been forwarded to the C.B.C. But did the Canadian cabinet go to the locally established newspaper in Timmins and ask them whether it would be economically viable for them to continue to publish in Timmins and service the general public there if a television station were licensed? Not on your life. The local newspaper in Timmins could sink or swim, according to the financial support it could engender for itself in Timmins, after a television licence was granted.

A television licence was granted to a station in Timmins and the local paper did not object. They were going to live despite the competition, and the television station went on the air. It drew off a tremendous amount of advertising revenue from the local business firms and from national advertisers, but the local Timmins Press continued to publish and continued to show a profit. Why did the cabinet not say to the television applicant, "You cannot operate a station in Timmins because that will adversely affect the economic viability of the presently established mass medium in Timmins?" But no, they licensed the television station.

When a C.A.T.V. operator comes along and wants to operate in an area where a television station has already been established he is told, through the medium of the Board of Broadcast Governors: "That will adversely affect the local television station; you must not go there and adversely affect the local television station. We do not mind how much a television station affects the local newspaper or magazine; that is a horse of a different colour. But we are certainly upset if any C.A.T.V. operation is to affect a television station." Why is there this favouritism for the television licensee? Why not give some support to the publishers of the fourth estate of this country?

The same brother who was in Timmins was appointed publisher of the Prince Albert Herald in Prince Albert, Saskatchewan. That was another Thomson paper. He was appointed there before there was a television station in Prince Albert. It was well known that applications were being received by the cabinet for the issuance of television station licences at Prince Albert. The local newspaper was not consulted in the slightest degree by the cabinet. They were not asked whether they favoured the establishment of a television station in Prince Albert. The local paper could sink or swim so far as the cabinet was concerned in the face of the new competition from a television station. The television station went on the air; the local paper continued to publish. It returns a profit to Lord Thomson.

But if a C.A.T.V. application comes in for an area that is now serviced by a television station, why, the cabinet cannot get to the local television operator quickly enough to ask whether the C.A.T.V. operator will affect him. Why is there this solicitude for the television licensee when there is absolutely no solicitude for the established print medium that is servicing the mass market of the area? That certainly smacks of favouritism to the nth degree and does not reflect credit on a cabinet that performs in such a way.

• (5:10 p.m.)

The Fowler Report continues at page 253:

—it is a matter of concern to us that the viability of the national network system could be disrupted if unrestrained or unregulated growth of the C.A.T.V. system is allowed to continue.

When Fowler refers to the unregulated growth of the C.A.T.V. system, who does he think should do the regulating? Of course, it comes out in further quotations that he believes the government should regulate C.A.T.V., so there should be no unregulated growth in the eyes of Mr. Fowler. Does Mr. Fowler show any concern over the fact that Canadians are buying whatever magazines or newspapers they wish on the newsstands of the nation? This involves the unregulated growth of newspapers and magazines. Does the cabinet tell the general public that it cannot buy certain magazines because if it does it will be reducing the circulation of the magazines it used to read before? Is this what it says in the case of newspapers? Of course, the cabinet has more sense than to take a stand of this kind. But when it comes to television it states that applicants for C.A.T.V. installations cannot be allowed to operate because people would begin looking at programs other than those already available to them through the local television station. Why should this solicitude be shown in one field of mass communication and not in another? Fowler continues:

[Mr. Cowan.]

There is growing recognition of the need to examine the effect of C.A.T.V. on stations in these market areas whose ability to conform to the Canadian content regulations is being jeopardized by this new competition.

Why do we hear members of cabinet talking about the free economy under which this country operates when here they are concerned, as is the Fowler report, over the fact that television stations are faced with new competition? There are some who talk about competition being the life of trade, but evidently these do not include members of the Canadian cabinet.

Mr. Fowler pointed out that local television stations are being affected by C.A.T.V. stations and referred to this as being "new competition". What is the matter with new competition? This is supposed to be an enterprise system and I should like to see such a system continue. But now we have a bill before us which proposes to licence C.A.T.V. installations through the medium of this new council, and I can assure you, Mr. Chairman, that whoever grants the licences will have as a first consideration the protection of existing television stations.

This whole policy as it affects C.A.T.V. stations is false and a betrayal of the best interests of the Canadian public who are entitled to get news, information and knowledge from whatever source they wish, even from t.v. stations which can only be brought to their area by means of a C.A.T.V. installation which has a more effective antenna than any which an individual could afford to put up.

On November 1, in introducing the broadcasting bill the Secretary of State said as reported in Hansard on page 3749:

I should also mention that the legislation indicates that community antenna television systems will also be subject to licensing by the commission... In general the commission when considering an application for a licence for one of these systems will have to take the whole local situation into account, including the interests of the local broadcasters.

Why, in the name of heaven, should a cabinet which pays lip service—and I emphasize the expression "lip service"—to the theory of free enterprise or the competitive marketplace state that the licensing commission which it proposes to set up should take the interests of local broadcasters into consideration when handling applications for C.A.T.V. installations in various areas? To me this shows rank favouritism on the part of the cabinet toward a very small segment of Canadian industry and it is not true Liberalism.

In the annual reports of the Board of Broadcast Governors for the years ended March 31, 1964, 1965 and 1966, frequent references are made to the fact that C.A.T.V. applications would, if granted, interfere with the economic viability of local television stations. In the annual report of the board for the year ended March 31, 1965 a direct reference is made to a statement of the then minister of transport on July 22, 1964, a copy of which I have in my hand. This statement was released by the minister of transport, I would say, without prior consultation with members of parliament. He was the minister of transport; he was a big fellow who picked and chose what he desired and cared not where the chips fell. Parliament did not matter. He issued a statement on July 22, 1964—and let no dog bark. The hon. member for Burnaby-Richmond said just now that he does not like certain people standing up and speaking as though they represented the whole of Canada when they have an opinion to express. I may say I do not like cabinet ministers standing up and speaking for the whole government without consulting members of parliament. However, this seems to be the practice followed by some of them. The fifth paragraph of this statement reads:

The government has two main concerns. One is to see that C.A.T.V. installations in Canada do not come under the ownership and control of persons and corporations which are not Canadian. The other is to see that C.A.T.V. installations designed to receive broadcasts emanating from outside the area reached by any local Canadian television station, and particularly from outside Canada, are unlikely to make the operation of any existing television station uneconomic or to inhibit the provision of alternate Canadian television service in the area concerned.

I have already stressed in previous remarks that in some areas where it is proposed to put in C.B.C. stations—and here cost is not a factor because the corporation simply asks for the money and the cabinet sends it over —C.A.T.V. applications are told that they would inhibit the provision ultimately of alternate Canadian television service in that area. Why should the cabinet refuse to grant a C.A.T.V. application in respect of an area into which the C.B.C. is thinking of moving, when a private station is already in existence there, bearing in mind that the C.A.T.V. operator would be able to render competitive or alternate service? Has the cabinet committed itself to the principle that there must never be any economy in expenditures by the C.B.C. by resolving that it will not allow competitive or alternative service to be rendered by C.A.T.V. stations where there are privately owned stations in existence simply because the corporation may wish to put a C.B.C. station in at some future time at great expense to the public?

Take the case of a C.A.T.V. installation in an area such as Kingston. I am referring now to the applications for Napanee, Gananoque and Prescott which would not cost Canadian taxpayers one cent in tax increases because those subscribing to the C.A.T.V. service would pay a direct commercial fee to the operator. However, the gentleman who applied for permission to operate C.A.T.V. stations in the three communities I have named was told that the provision of such a service would inhibit the likelihood of establishing an alternate Canadian television service in the area.

I hav already pointed out that the alternative Canadian television service would be provided by the C.B.C.—"to hell with the expense", as the cabinet would say; we cannot allow C.A.T.V. to provide competitive or alternative service in the area. Why cannot businessmen who are willing to provide a service of this kind be allowed to do so? Why should we reserve the area for the taxpayers of Canada, obliging them to put up the money for a C.B.C. service which other men are willing to provide and for which they would be paid by the local recipients of that service?

• (5:20 p.m.)

I have spoken before on the fact that limiting C.A.T.V. installations according to the whims of the Board of Broadcast Governors and the Minister of Transport is a denial of the right to freedom of information. I would like to refer to some statements made on this subject by members of the cabinet and other speakers on the matter. In the white paper on broadcasting reference is made on page 7 to the right to freedom of expression, which it says should be unquestioned. I have already emphasized the fact that this begs the whole matter because having the right to freedom of expression where the public does not have the right to receive that expressed opinion is a denial of the right of the individual to receive information from whatever source he so desires.

Then at page 13 of the white paper we read:

> Among the matters subject to regulation—will be the inclusion of Canadian channels—

No C.A.T.V. installation in Canada is in the position of not having available all Canadian channels on its dial. When the statement is made that among the matters subject to regulation will be the inclusion of Canadian channels this is a soft way of stating that we are going to do our best to keep American channels off C.A.T.V. installations. I point out that C.A.T.V. is making such rapid strides at the present time that there are now wires available that will carry 30 channels to the individual dial of a C.A.T.V. subscriber. In this way the Canadian government could demand that every television station in Canada be placed on the dial of the local C.A.T.V. operator, even though he cannot pick up all the stations as most of them would be too distant for reception. But the new wires will carry 30 channels now.

There is one operation in South Carolina at the present time with 23 channels available on one wire. So, when the statement is made in the white paper that "among the matters subject to regulation...will be the inclusion of Canadian channels". I would like to add that with these wires now carrying up to a total of 30 channels there is no problem in carrying all the Canadian channels in a specified area. If the viewer wants to look at them he can. If he does not want to look at them then he does not have to look at them.

On the first page of Bill No. C-163 we find it stated that "the right to freedom of expression...is unquestioned." But the public is denied the right to receive freedom of expression over C.A.T.V. stations. As recorded in Hansard of November 1, 1967, page 3747, the Secretary of State said:

> —broadcasters must be allowed the right to freedom of expresion; that is to say, censorship and pre-editing of programs are not only undesirable but impractical.

[Mr. Cowan.]

They certainly are undesirable and in large measure they are impractical, but what is the use of having freedom of expression without censorship if the public is not allowed to look at the programs they want to look at because they are denied a C.A.T.V. franchise in the areas in which they live?

Then we find on page 1348 of the minutes of the committee on broadcasting, films and assistance to the arts for December 1, 1966, that Mr. J. A. Ouimet, president of the C.B.C. told the committee:

> Community antenna television (CATV) is to be made part of the broadcasting structure.

When he made that statement on December 1, 1966, it was interesting to many people in the broadcasting and receiving field in this country because no definite statement had been made in that regard prior thereto. I have in my hand a release from the C.B.C. information services, 1500 Bronson avenue, Ottawa, dated January 16, 1967, about six weeks after Mr. Ouimet's statement on community antenna television, and I wish to read it to the committee. It reads:

> For Your Information.
>
> The following statement by President Ouimet was released to the Canadian Press in Ottawa; C.B.C. newsrooms; and dailies in Toronto after 7.40 p.m. January 14, 1967:
>
> The C.B.C. is deeply disturbed by the violence of the reaction to its invitation to Mr. Adolph Von Thadden to be interviewed on the program "Sunday." The invitation was based on the rise of Mr. Von Thadden's party in Germany as reported in the news media recently.

Then there is this paragraph:

> The greatest safeguard of the democratic tradition is the freedom to express and examine the widest range of ideas and opinions. A prime function and responsibility of the C.B.C. is to provide for the free expression and scrutiny of points of view thus enabling the Canadian people to judge such views for themselves.

Mr. Ouimet never made a more forthright or more honest statement than that contained in that second paragraph in which he said:

> The greatest safeguard of the democratic tradition is the freedom to express and examine the widest range of ideas and opinions.

In this broadcasting bill we are told that the freedom of expression is unlimited, but the government does not go along with Mr. Ouimet's statement, namely:

> The greatest safeguard of the democratic tradition is the freedom to express and examine the widest range of ideas and opinions. A prime function and responsibility of the C.B.C. is to provide for the free expression and scrutiny of points of view—

He did not stop, like this bill does in clause 2, with a mouth-filling statement that freedom of expression is unquestioned and is to be allowed. He went on to say "free expression and scrutiny of points of view." By denying the Canadian public the right to look at programs of their choice over C.A.T.V. installations, which do not fall within the public domain as they do not use radio frequencies which are in the public domain, we are denying the public the right to examine the different points of view and opinion available and to scrutinize points of view, even though we tell the broadcaster he can say what he likes because his freedom of expression is unlimited. But unfortunately the recipient is limited in his choice of scrutiny of programs available on C.A.T.V. installations. In his press release Mr. Ouimet continued:

I must therefore announce the withdrawal of the invitation to come to Canada and telegram to this effect has been sent to him.

This action does not mean that the corporation will abrogate its responsibility in terms of the principle of the right of the Canadian public to information.

I am mighty glad to know that the corporation will not abrogate its responsibility in terms of the principle of the right of the Canadian public to information. But the cabinet is abrogating its responsibility in terms of the principle of the right of the Canadian public to information when, through media such as this proposed council, C.A.T.V. installations will be prohibited from going into certain areas because they will dilute the audiences of the local t.v. stations. The right to information is curtailed when a C.A.T.V. system is placed in the position where it may not be granted a licence.

I have read many references to freedom of expression as though it entirely covered the subject. Free expression is only half of the subject of free speech. The other half is the freedom to hear.

I would like to make a brief reference now to a certain situation which agitates the people in the Toronto-Barrie area. If you look at this bill as amended and reported by the committee on broadcasting, films and assistance to the arts you will find that in clause 19 on page 10 no change whatever has been made in the regulations that make it possible for the cabinet to move the Barrie t.v. station into the Toronto area. Clause 19 is headed "Hearings and Procedure." It states:

A public hearing shall be held by the council (a) in connection with the issue of a broadcasting licence, other than a licence to carry on a temporary network operation—

It goes on to state:

A public hearing shall be held by the council, if the executive committee is satisfied that it would be in the public interest to hold such a hearing, in connection with

(a) the amendment of a broadcasting licence—

You will notice that qualifying phrase, that a public hearing will be held by the council "if the executive committee is satisfied that it would be in the public interest to hold such a hearing in connection with the amendment of a broadcasting licence." As a member for a Toronto riding I am vitally interested in the problem raised by the desire of the owners of the Barrie television station to move into the Toronto area and thus interfere with the clear reception of programs now coming from Buffalo. I resent very much that in this new broadcasting bill no effort is made to restrain the authority given to cabinet to amend a broadcasting licence, which means moving it from one city to another if they so wish to do, because this t.v. station in Barrie has a licence. If the executive committee of the proposed new council is satisfied that it would not be in the public interest to hold a public hearing they can just amend the broadcasting licence of the Barrie station and let them move wherever the new council may desire to let them move.

• (5:30 p.m.)

In that connection you will be interested to know that under clause 23 on page 12 there is a subheading "Setting aside after reference back to Council". The Barrie t.v. station application, as no doubt members will recall, was referred back to the Board of Broadcast Governors for further consideration when the subject became too hot to handle. I will not mention for what people it became too hot to handle. In any event it was referred back to the B.B.G. for a new hearing. In subclause 4 of clause 23 we find this interesting statement:

The issue, amendment or renewal by the council of any broadcasting licence that has been referred back to the council pursuant to subsection (1) and confirmed pursuant to paragraph (d) of subsection (3) may be set aside by order of the Governor in Council made within sixty days after such confirmation.

There you have it straight and unadulterated. If the cabinet does not like the recommendation of the council the recommendation may be set aside by order of the Governor in Council made within 60 days after such confirmation. In Toronto we understand that the Barrie t.v. station has been sold to western interests.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: I regret to interrupt the hon. member but the time allotted to him has now expired.

Mr. Patterson: Mr. Chairman, my colleague the hon. member for Okanagan-Revelstoke has been a very active member of the committee on broadcasting, films and assistance to the arts which has had this particular matter under consideration for a considerable length of time. He has also taken part in the discussions here in the house, as has my colleague from Red Deer. These two members have set forth, I believe, quite clearly and concisely the views of our group with regard to the legislation now before us. We will be participating later, of course, in the debate on the various clauses. I feel, however, that I should make a few comments at this time because if I failed to do so I would perhaps be failing in my responsibility to those who have communicated to me their views in respect of this broadcasting legislation and various aspects of it.

We are pleased that the uncertainties with regard to the management of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation have been removed by the appointment of Dr. Davidson and Mr. Picard to the two top positions in the organization. These two distinguished gentlemen face a difficult although challenging task. We all wish them well as they assume their new responsibilities.

I should like to comment briefly on two or three areas of concern which have been brought to my attention through observation, by personal discussions with individuals and also by written communications. First of all I should like to consider briefly this afternoon the matter of the programming of the C.B.C. which has been a subject of great interest in this debate and in fact in previous debates. I believe the vision of those who were responsible for the establishment of the publicly owned corporation involved the use of its facilities for the promotion of the greatest benefit to the Canadian people and also for assistance in the development of a truly Canadian culture.

While there are some programs that maintain high standards and are inspirational, educational and entertaining in a wholesome way, I do regret the fact that there has been an increasing trend toward programs which have been characterized by such words as "lewd" and "sleazy" and are "destructive of the type of programming the Canadian people desire. This has resulted in a mounting wave of protest from individuals and organizations across the country. Even though my hon. friend from Burnaby-Richmond does not agree that it involves a substantial body of opinion, I believe that the protests are increasing. If people believed that their protests would have any weight with the corporation the communications would be much more numerous than they are at the present time.

Questions have been raised in the house in the past few months regarding various types of programs which have been shown on television. These have been brought to the attention of the C.B.C., as I said, by communications and by representations here in the house and in many other ways. I believe that if the C.B.C. was sincerely desirous of fulfilling its responsibilities to the Canadian people it would pay more attention to the protests which have been voiced and would endeavour to understand just what it is that the people of Canada wish to have.

I should like to refer to an article by Jack Miller which appeared in the Hamilton Spectator of Thursday, November 30, 1967. He refers to a number of programs which have been alluded to such as "The Ernie Game", "Waiting for Caroline", "Paper People", and some others. He states:

> C.B.C. drama, to steal a line from "Critic's Choice", has become "a hotbed of hot beds" this year. And the corporation's slavering preoccupation with this aspect of the human drama has become so noticeable, and so offensive, that it clouds the public mind to any artistic merit a single program may offer.

I should like to read one more paragraph. There are others I have marked here but I shall just read one more:

> In all of the C.B.C.'s television years, I can remember no season which has brought so many people to me, saying "I never watch the C.B.C. any more. It's filthy—nothing but sex, sex, sex! They can't think of anything else." If this attitude prevails across the country, and I wouldn't be surprised if it does, the C.B.C. artistic leaders should not be too ready to brush it off.

Even though it was brought to our attention today that this type of program may occupy only a very limited period in a day or week, I believe that the C.B.C. should pay some attention to the representations that have been made in order to try to upgrade the type of programming it is beaming into Canadian homes.

• (5:40 p.m.)

In addition to the representations that commentators have made I have in my hand representations from church organizations across the country. For instance, I have one here from Olds, Alberta, signed by quite a number of members of the congregation of the particular organization. I also have a copy of a resolution passed by a church organization calling attention to this same matter. I should like to read one paragraph:

Whereas the C.B.C. is a government institution supported by our tax money; and whereas the C.B.C. is preoccupied with programs which contribute to the breakdown of marriage and the home, pseudo-educational programs concerning sex and sexual perversions, programs of violence, and programs that use questionable and profane language;

We...wish to express that we deplore the calibre of certain programs shown and heard on the C.B.C. network, a corporation that receives money that we have paid in taxes.

I have another communication from the Calgary Evangelical Ministerial Association. Let me read a paragraph from this letter which was directed to the president of the C.B.C. board of governors. It says:

Whereas the C.B.C. is the national voice of the nation and as such helps to set the moral standards of the country and whereas the show "Waiting for Caroline" shown locally in Calgary, Alberta on Wednesday 29th November, 1967 within the "Festival" series was extremely objectionable morally, we, the Calgary Evangelical Ministerial Association, a body composed of some eighty (80) ministers of churches in this city and representing better than 20,000 people, do strongly and solemnly protest this particular program.

Later in the paragraph this is stated:

As taxpaying citizens we do deplore $511,252 being paid for the production of this film and do demand that the moral tone, in deed, word and total content of C.B.C. programming be such as is healthy, wholesome and morally acceptable.

I have also received a number of letters from individuals, a sampling of which I have here, but I do not intend to take up the time of the committee this afternoon by reading them.

Let me point out that programming is a matter of serious concern to people across the country. Those who will be charged with the responsibility in the days that lie ahead would do well to give consideration to the various protests that have been launched and endeavour to do something about the type of programming that is being beamed into our homes at the present time.

It has been argued that if too many restrictions are placed upon creative individuals they will leave the corporation and their talents will be lost. If those responsible for such indecent and morally destructive programs quit I suggest they would be doing a service to the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation and it would be a blessing to the whole nation. On my own behalf and on behalf of individuals and organizations who have contacted me in this regard I protest the use of the facilities of a crown corporation, supported by the tax dollars of the Canadian people, to glorify crime and evil and to seek the destruction of the moral foundations of our nation under the pretext of entertainment and public information.

There is one other matter I want to deal with briefly and it has to do with the financing of the corporation. We must concede that if Canadians want a publicly owned radio and television service it must be financed. We have no quarrel with that idea and we do not argue with it. I do not think that this involves just financing or that financing is what is griping the Canadian people at the present time. I believe that what is involved is the use of taxes for the type of programming being carried across the nation. If the C.B.C. is to be financed it must merit financing.

Statements have been made today about taking to task those who have raised objections to certain C.B.C. programs. The hon. member for Elgin brought some of the weaknesses of C.B.C. programming to our attention, particularly in respect of the presentation of current issues. We have heard references to the preoccupation of the C.B.C. and its programs with the seamy side of life. When we put all this together we must realize that a great number of people across the country wonder whether, in view of this record, the C.B.C. should be maintained or financed by the Canadian taxpayers.

Let me voice my strenuous objection to the proposed long term financing formula for the C.B.C. until the corporation indicates its ability to act in a responsible way and until it proves to the public and parliament that it merits support. The hon. member for Winnipeg North, when speaking today, said he did not think the corporation should be placed in the position of being told that if it does not measure up it will not receive finances. I do not think there is anything basically wrong with that idea. If any organization or agency of any corporation is to be financed by the taxpayers' money surely the representatives of the taxpayers should have something to say about its operations. I do not think there is anything obnoxious about the idea that the C.B.C. should be responsible to someone for the way it conducts its business and spends the taxpayers' money.

The hon. member for Burnaby-Richmond had something to say about censoring C.B.C. We are not talking about that; we are talking about getting C.B.C. to accept a sense of responsibility. That hon. member also pointed out that there are many books on the bookstands and other types of material available which present the seamy side of life. Let me say to him that he may be right but the taxpayer is not necessarily subsidizing that type of thing. We are objecting to the fact that tax money—people are being taxed now beyond their limit—is being used in a way which will destroy the very institutions in which we believe. I do not blame the taxpayers for protesting.

For these reasons I felt I had to express the views of those with whom I have discussed this matter. I might add that they are also my views. In spite of what the hon. member for Burnaby-Richmond has said we have the right, the responsibility and the duty to represent those who have sent us to Ottawa by speaking on their behalf.

• (5:50 p.m.)

Mr. Herridge: Mr. Chairman, I want to deal with a question of policy which I think is fundamental to this clause of the bill. I came into the house yesterday and was given to understand that the hon. member for Lapointe had moved an amendment to clause 2 (b) of the bill. This is what causes me to rise today. I must say frankly that whenever the hon. member for Lapointe moves an amendment I am rather suspicious, but I found later that I had no reason to be suspicious in this instance. The hon. member moved an amendment which I think means more so far as policy in respect of private stations is concerned than anything that is now included in the bill.

I have followed the work of the committee and I want to compliment its members on the work they have done in studying this measure. They have made a careful study of the bill, have gone over it very thoroughly and have made proposals for amendments. We must realize that this committee represents the intellectual elite of the house, I am informed.

An hon. Member: That is right.

Mr. Herridge: It contains learned members of the legal profession, one of whom has been, I understand, an attorney general and would consider all measures with a fine-tooth comb. The committee also includes a very progressive member of the clergy who is extremely interested in this type of legislation. I compliment the committee for its interest in this measure and its interest in culture generally. I pay tribute to these gentlemen for their dedication to bringing culture to the masses of the people of Canada.

[Mr. Patterson.]

Incidentally, Mr. Chairman, on reading the committee reports I found what in my opinion was an oversight on the part of the learned members of the committee. These distinguished and learned people—I use the word "learned" in respect of them although I think farmers should also be entitled to that appellation even though they only produce the food that people eat and the country depends on them—overlooked one factor in the bill. The committee voted unanimously for clause 2(b) which reads:

(b) the Canadian broadcasting system should be effectively owned and controlled by Canadians so as to safeguard, enrich and strengthen the cultural, political, social and economic fabric of Canada;

I have been informed that the hon. member for Lapointe moved an amendment that would substitute the word "shall" for "should". Over many years I have heard the exact meaning of words discussed in respect of legislation before the house. I am entering this debate as a person who has not had the opportunities that many other hon. members have had for education, cultural development, and so on. I am approaching this question purely as a backwoodsman, you understand, Mr. Chairman.

I referred to the dictionary to ascertain the meaning of the word "should". The two dictionaries which I consulted referred me to the word "shall" and I found in one case a column and in another a column and a half of definitions with respect to its meaning. I have heard this subject discussed on many occasions, namely, the exact meaning of the words "may", "would", "should" and "shall" and after reading the definitions I have come to the conclusion that it is very difficult to say what is the exact distinction between the words "should" and "shall".

I admit frankly that I have not had the opportunities of many distinguished gentlemen in the house, but in my opinion the word "shall" connotes more of a moral imperative than the word "should". On that account I support the hon. member for Lapointe on this occasion, though I differ with him fundamentally in his philosophy in respect of other matters. I will vote for his amendment which would substitute the word "shall" for "should".

I have got into quite a bit of trouble in this respect and can quite understand the failure more or less of this distinguished committee, comprising the hon. members I have mentioned, to pinpoint the exact definition of the word "should" and why they voted unanimously for this clause of the bill. I rise only to point out that these things can happen in a distinguished house like this and in a committee composed, as I said before, of the intellectual elite of the house.

As one who has not had their opportunities, as I have said, it is my opinion that in this case they were wrong. I expect that when the vote is taken we will find them voting to change the word "should" to "shall" because they believe, like me, that it is a greater moral imperative than "should".

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Is the committee ready for the question?

Mr. Cowan: Mr. Chairman, I was speaking about the fact that no change has been made in this proposed bill in the regulations that allow a member of the cabinet to okay the movement of a television station from one place where it is licensed to another at the whim of the cabinet member, as is now the case. I stated that the people of Toronto are watching with a very jealous eye the efforts being made to move the Barrie station into the Toronto field where it will interfere with the reception of two stations from Buffalo that are watched by a large number of Canadians day after day after day.

I believe that when a new bill such as this is being brought in, complete authority should be given to the new council and it should not be hamstrung in its decisions and activities by some saving clause, if that is the proper phrase, which allows the cabinet to override any decision it may make with regard to the granting of a licence. Clause 23 of the bill contains a side-heading which says "Setting aside or reference back to council." It gives the Governor in Council authority to set aside decisions made in respect of any broadcasting licence. The Governor in Council, of course, is nobody else than the cabinet.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order. In order that the house may proceed to the consideration of private members' business it is my duty to leave the chair.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

SUBJECT MATTER OF QUESTIONS TO BE DEBATED

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. It is my duty, pursuant to provisional standing order 39A, to inform the house that the questions to be raised at the time of adjournment tonight are as follows: The hon. member for Carleton (Mr. Bell), Public Service—pensions of retired civil servants—request for reconsideration of increase refusal; the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles), Public Service—pensions of retired civil servants; the hon. member for Chapleau (Mr. Laprise), Health and Welfare—inquiry as to a campaign on the dangers of alcoholism.

It being six o'clock, the house will now proceed to the consideration of private members' business as listed on today's order paper, namely, private bills and public bills.

[Translation]

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, may I ask leave of the house to revert to motions?

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Does the house give consent to revert to motions?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

PIPE LINES

INTERPROVINCIAL PIPE LINE COMPANY—PERMIT TO LOOP LINE VIA CHICAGO AND PORT HURON

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I wish to inform the house that Interprovincial Pipe Line Company through its United States subsidiary, Lakehead Pipe Line Company, Inc., has received a presidential permit covering the construction of additional pipe line facilities across the international boundary.

• (6:00 p.m.)

Although Interprovincial's pipe line system was progressively built to serve the prairies and Ontario, in the course of the years the company has acquired customers in the United States extending from the Saint Paul-Minneapolis area to Buffalo, N.Y. Increasing demand in all these markets has required a substantial increase of Interprovincial's facilities. In order to meet anticipated demand in Ontario and elsewhere in 1968 and for subsequent years and to restore the reserve capacity it normally carries for national and international purposes, the company has to undertake further expansion immediately.

In view of this further expansion Interprovincial considers it desirable to loop its facilities east of Superior, Wisconsin, south of its existing line, before re-entering Canada. The first step contemplated by Interprovincial is the construction of a 34-inch line from Superior to the Chicago area, to be completed some time in 1968.

In the near future, probably in 1969, Interprovincial will construct a 30-inch connecting line from that area to Port Huron to complete the loop. The timing of such further construction would depend on a number of matters, including the terms and conditions under which the Tecumseh and Buckeye systems are available to Interprovincial in the meantime, and the rate of growth in demand in the areas served by Interprovincial. I would expect that Interprovincial will proceed immediately to the construction of its new facilities.

The house should also be aware that the Aurora-Glacier pipe line system, which transports oil from Alberta into Montana, is currently undergoing expansion. This expansion is associated with a further presidential permit, which has been issued.

These programs of expansion of facilities were included in recent discussions on oil with the United States authorities which, as the house knows, take place periodically. These discussions and exchanges are used to explore the potential levels of our exports as well as the relationships of our two countries on oil matters generally. From these conversations come the mutual confidence which facilitates the efforts of our industry to increase exports while avoiding disruption of United States markets. The recent discussions have been no exception to this rule. An important feature contributing to the framework of agreement which came out of our meetings was the clarification that Interprovincial has planned its expansion with a view to the future as well as to immediate markets. A similar element of pre-investment is also present in the expansion program of the Aurora-Glacier system.

I am sure the house would wish to commend the industry and the pipe line companies for their initiative regarding the projects to which I have referred. They will have the effect of placing our industry in a sound position to meet the future requirements in Ontario and United States markets in an efficient and economic manner. These projects are also a manifestation of the ability of government departments and agencies on both sides of the border to resolve matters of common interest in an atmosphere of good will.

Hon. Alvin Hamilton (Qu'Appelle): Mr. Speaker, the Canadian private company, Interprovincial Pipe Line, should be congratulated for being able to get into the Chicago market. In the first stage this will increase our exports into the market by approximately 50,000 barrels a day and it will go some way toward balancing the deficit which exists between our imports and exports, with resulting benefits to Canada's balance of payments. While welcoming this announcement there is one point I have to emphasize, namely, the fact that we still lack from the government a statement on a national oil policy. In the original oil policy statement of 1961 we declared unilaterally as the Canadian government that exports from Canada should approximate imports into the Montreal and maritime markets. That was the first principle in the national oil policy. The second principle was that our producers should be allowed to produce at their maximum rate of efficiency which should roughly equal that of the United States independent producers. The statement of 1961 succeeded in increasing our exports to a point where they almost balanced our imports.

Since 1963 there has been no statement from the government regarding the objectives which private enterprise should meet in implementing this oil policy. It must be admitted that the pressure on the United States government by independent companies in the United States to restrict their country's market has made it difficult for us to deal with that government. The Israeli-Arab war of last year broke the dike, and now I think the United States government recognizes the inherent dangers. The decisions that have been made in the last year with regard to our resources have enhanced Canada's economic position immensely.

The economics of today's announcement are sound. As Alaska oil moved into the west coast of the United States it made it more difficult for our western Canadian producers to enter the northwestern American market. So it is only natural for us to allow Alaska oil to move into the west and to move our oil into the mid-west regions of the United States. The pipe line extension from Superior to Chicago will allow us first entry into that market through the pipe line, and the extension from Port Huron to Sarnia will assure people in Ontario that their immediate needs in the next few years will be met by this increased capacity.

From the viewpoint of a Canadian nationalist I believe that this announcement is good for Canada. As the minister said, it is also good for the United States. I believe that Canadians will have to live with the fact that if we are to get the maximum and best use of our resources we must think and talk in terms of mutual advantage to both countries. The primary rule should be that prices should be as low as possible for the consumers in all parts of North America and therefore products should move into the best markets. The midwest market is a good market for western oil.

The second rule which should be followed is that producers should be allowed to obtain the best price they can realize for their fuel in the competitive markets. The movement into this field has brought new opportunities in the last two years for Alberta, British Columbia and Saskatchewan to find markets in a natural and economic way. This move by Interprovincial Pipe Line is not only sound economically but also fits into what I conceive to be the basis of a national oil policy which the government should announce. I hope the government will take cognizance of the advice that we have been trying to give them for the last four or five years, namely, that in the interest of all Canadians and of the whole North American continent the government should periodically state its objectives in the national oil policy, keeping in mind the criteria I have mentioned.

Mr. David Lewis (York South): Mr. Speaker, I cannot be quite as lyrical about the minister's announcement as were both the minister and the hon. member for Qu'Appelle (Mr. Hamilton), not because I have any objection to an increase in our oil exports to the United States but because I have an uneasy feeling that to commend Interprovincial Pipe Line for doing something which will bring it a pretty good profit is not the work of parliament or the government. To suggest that Interprovincial Pipe Line did this for some altruistic motives seems to me to be a little wide of the mark.

However, I note, as the hon. member for Qu'Appelle said when he spoke as a Canadian nationalist, which I believe is true of all hon. members, that there is a suggestion in the statement that the purpose of this expansion is to meet the anticipated demand in Ontario and elsewhere in 1968. However, the anticipated demand in Ontario will not be met in 1968, as is pointed out in the minister's statement, but may be met in 1969 when the looping will take place.

• (6:10 p.m.)

Mr. Pepin: In the meantime, before the second phase is concluded the company will be using two networks which already exist in the United States, the Buckeye and the Tecumseh systems.

Mr. Lewis: To bring oil to Ontario?

Mr. Pepin: These systems will service the Toledo-Detroit area and could bring surplus up to Port Huron.

Mr. Lewis: I am glad to have that statement. However, this does not depend on the expansion in Ontario for which no date is given. The minister inserted in his statement the words "probably in 1969".

I think the most important point to note in this announcement, one which has been true for many years as the appendix to the copy of the statement I have in my hand points out, is that our exports over the years have been very much less than our imports and that this state of affairs will continue. What we are doing by this arrangement, which no doubt is a cartel division of markets as well as an intergovernmental understanding, is to export oil from the west through the United States and to import oil for the Montreal market and other eastern markets from Venezuela through the international oil companies.

As the table shows, Mr. Speaker, in 1966 Canada imported 596,000 barrels of oil daily and exported only 386,000 barrels daily. Whether the gap in dollar outflow compared with dollar inflow will ever be closed remains to be seen in the years ahead.

Mr. Pepin: May I ask my hon. friend to compare the growth of exports and of imports?

Mr. Lewis: I am sorry, I cannot hear the minister.

Mr. Speaker: Order. May I remind the minister that we are not debating this announcement. A statement has been made on motions and the house should not embark upon a debate.

Mr. Lewis: I was pointing out that we in Canada, it seems to me, would be a great deal better off if we were able to arrange our affairs by perhaps building a pipe line direct to Montreal, thus being much less dependent on imports of oil from other parts of the world. This is particularly so in view of the very large oil reserves that we have in our own country. I have never been able to understand why governments should greet with pleasure exports which are more than matched by imports that necessarily cost us hard currency. As I said, Mr. Speaker, I have always suspected that this is the result not of any intergovernmental good will but of the action of a cartel existing among the companies to divide up the markets in North America in the same way as internationally the same companies divide up the markets in other parts of the world.

[Translation]

Mr. Réal Caouette (Villeneuve): Mr. Speaker, I think this constructive measure is a step forward in the use of our tremendous natural resources. The increase in our oil exports to the United States will no doubt enable us to improve our deficit trade balance with that country.

The Montreal area, as well as other Canadian regions, should first benefit from our oil resources; however, it must be recognized that we have agreements with other countries at present and that we must transact business with them. That is probably why we are buying oil from Venezuela and from other oil producing countries.

Mr. Speaker, I believe that private enterprise shows beyond doubt that it is anxious to serve the interests of the nation even though my hon. friend for York South (Mr. Lewis) says that the companies will make profits. I believe that they will show profits and will develop our resources more profitably than any government could. In fact, their operations will be profitable, whereas a government body would show a deficit. This is shown everywhere, even in Saskatchewan where a socialist government, at one time, led the province without achieving a balanced budget.

So, I think we should congratulate private enterprise for showing initiative and developing natural resources in order to serve the best interests of the country, because it will use Canadian manpower, Canadian material, while encouraging the producers of our country.

[Mr. Speaker.]

That is why I feel that instead of minimizing and crushing private enterprise because it is making profits, a responsible government should rather help private enterprise to develop our natural resources, so that they will serve first the Canadian people, while the surplus can be exported abroad.

In this particular case, that is our petroleum exports to the United States, I am convinced that these will help us balance our trade deficit with that country.

I believe that this measure augurs well and will contribute to the welfare of the Canadian people as a whole.

[English]

Mr. R. N. Thompson (Red Deer): Mr. Speaker, on behalf of our party I should like to express our satisfaction with the announcement that has been made tonight with regard to the arrangements that have been entered into by the Interprovincial Pipe Line Company to increase their sales potential in the market south of the border. I think that one of our great handicaps in Canada has always been the problem of working against the logical direction of trade and communications by forcing upon the country as a result of its very nature an economic burden. The development outlined this evening whereby we actually reach directly south into the market in Montana and also by a much shorter route into the market in the Chicago area is good economics.

This move really does not make much difference now because I think that oil is not just a national resource but caters to an international market. If we can export our surplus oil to markets which are much closer to the source of the oil in Canada and thus use credits established thereby to supply the demands of our own markets in more distant areas, then this is a logical and sound principle to follow.

Therefore I think we should support the remarks of the minister and also those of the hon. member for Qu'Appelle (Mr. Hamilton), because this kind of arrangement is just good business for Canada not only with regard to the export of our surplus resources but also in so far as the economics of transportation and general marketing are concerned. We share the satisfaction that has been expressed with this new arrangement which Interprovincial Pipe Line has been able to effect across the border.

PRIVATE BILLS

BRITISH NORTHWESTERN INSURANCE COMPANY

The house resumed, from Thursday, November 2, consideration of the motion of Mr. Allmand for the second reading of Bill No. S-14, respecting British Northwestern Insurance Company.

Mr. Frank Howard (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, we are resuming the debate on second reading which commenced on November 2 last year. When the proceedings were interrupted at that time I had the floor and a brief recapitulation of what took place then may remind us of what we were dealing with.

• (6:20 p.m.)

The hon. member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce (Mr. Allmand) made a brief presentation on second reading which was in keeping with the consideration this bill had been given by the banking and commerce committee of the Senate. At the end of the hour I had been referring to the international ownership of this company and the hon. member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce, by way of clarification, said something. I did not think he should have made his remarks in the way he made them because I did not want even the briefest remark of the hon. member to close the debate. I wanted an opportunity to say something more.

I wish to read what the hon. member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce said because, should he ever have the opportunity to close the debate on second reading, he may wish to elaborate on what he said. He said, as reported on page 3814 of Hansard for November 2, 1967:

> For the information of the hon. member this company is a Canadian company, originally incorporated in Manitoba in 1906, and subsequently incorporated under chapter 70 of the statutes of 1910. The original company, Eagle Star, was a British company.

My interpretation of those remarks may be wrong but I took them to mean that the British Northwestern Insurance Company, to which the hon. gentleman is referred, is a Canadian company. Later the hon. gentleman referred to Eagle Star and he said that the parent company was British.

I may have misunderstood the hon. member because I did not appreciate that British Northwestern Insurance Company was a Canadian company in the sense that it is owned and controlled in Canada by Canadians. The contrary was my understanding. I wish now to quote an extract from the proceedings before the banking and commerce committee of the Senate on June 28, 1967. The committee was considering this bill. I shall quote from page 29 of the proceedings where I find the remarks of Mr. Humphrys, the superintendent of insurance, which, incidentally, were not challenged in any way by anyone who attended that hearing.

In passing I might add that one other person spoke before the committee, a Mr. James Hugessen who is listed as a parliamentary agent. The chairman asked him if he had anything to add, to which Mr. Hugessen said, "No, Mr. Chairman, I have nothing to add." That was the extent of his evidence.

Mr. Humphrys, whose remarks were not challenged in any way, said:

> The British Northwestern Insurance Company is a federal company, having been federally incorporated in 1917, but it started earlier as a provincial company. It is owned by the Eagle Star Insurance Company, a prominent British company with world-wide interests and a very large volume of business.

I understood that only two companies were involved in this bill, the British Northwestern Insurance Company and the Eagle Star Insurance Company. One of the purposes of the bill is to change the name of British Northwestern Insurance Company to Eagle Star Insurance Company of Canada. That name would closely approximate the name of the British parent company and would bring with it all the benefits of having a similar name.

The hon. member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce said, "this company is a Canadian company." That is without meaning. The company may have been incorporated under federal law or under the statutes of a province, but since, according to the evidence of Mr. Humphrys, it is controlled in the United Kingdom it is not a Canadian company.

When the hon. member interjected the hour had almost expired and I did not have the opportunity to pursue his remarks. At the time his comments seemed a little odd and on reading them later they still seemed odd. On November 2 I said that if the hon. member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce wanted to interrupt me by using the procedure of asking a question I would be glad to accommodate him. But the time expired and the opportunity did not arise. It has arisen now. In any event, I hope the hon. member will wait until he has the opportunity to close the debate before taking advantage of any opportunity that may arise for him to speak.

The approach to this company ought to be the approach adopted with respect to other companies that are foreign owned and controlled and which seek to do something in this country through bills that come before this house. It is well known that the Prime Minister (Mr. Pearson) has a particular view on the question of foreign ownership. He has enunciated it in the past. He was speaking as Prime Minister and not as a private individual and his remarks carried the force of the government itself. He said that the Canadian government is partial to the promotion of Canadian ownership of our resources and wealth.

• (6:30 p.m.)

I believe that as long as the present Prime Minister (Mr. Pearson) remains in office this will be the view taken by the government. But this stand may change early in April, on the 10th or the 11th, or some such date, and it may be that tthe new prime minister will not share this opinion. Incidentally, the new prime minister may not even be able to sit in the House of Commons for some time after that date. He may decide that the sources from which he derived the support which enabled him to assume office were such that he ought to take a more tolerant view regarding this question of the control of insurance and other companies. However, for the time being we must abide by the attitude which the present Prime Minister takes toward this question of foreign ownership, an approach which the hon. gentleman who used to be minister of finance—I do not recall his present office—also used to adopt.

Some years ago this parliament enacted as law certain alterations to the legislation governing insurance companies, requiring that some of these companies, depending upon the date of their formation, must be Canadian owned rather than foreign owned or foreign dominated. Thus the Canadian parliament itself has taken a stand on this question of Canadian ownership.

In my opinion, this reflects the feelings of Canadians themselves. I should like to point out that there is a mechanism by means of which the British Northwestern Insurance Company could bring itself within the purview of public law and establish itself as a Canadian company in a true sense. This mechanism was used voluntarily by the United Investment Life Assurance Company which earlier had a bill before this house and which is currently before the Senate. The company came to parliament and said voluntarily that it desired to become a full Canadian corporate citizen, even though the original bill for which it had petitioned contained no such provision. That company, therefore, proposed in a memorandum to the committee which considered the legislation that within two years of the commencement of business it would make a public offering to Canadian residents of a sufficient number of shares to bring its share ownership to below 75 per cent. I relate this, though it applies to an entirely different bill, merely because the relevant wording could be extracted and incorporated in the bill now before us by a simple process of substitution.

Mr. Speaker, I do not think I should proceed any further until there is a quorum in the house.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member's time has expired.

Mr. T. S. Barnett (Comox-Alberni): Despite the public position of the present Prime Minister (Mr. Pearson) with regard to the question of the ownership of business and natural resources in Canada, it does seem to me that Canadians continue to indulge a predilection for shipping out not only our resources but our money in the delusion that we shall thereby continue in a state of prosperity and economic well-being.

Mr. Peters: There is no quorum, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Barnett: It has been drawn to my attention informally that the attendance is somewhat below that called for by the rules. I am not raising this as a point of order but merely by way of comment, because I think the bill before us is an indication of the Canadian predilection to which I have referred.

This measure appears to have a double purpose. According to the explanatory notes, one of them is to change the name of the company and the other is to expand the capital stock of the company. I have decided to address my remarks largely to the second purpose, the proposal to expand the capital stock.

This is a proposal brought before us by what is, as my hon. friend has pointed out, a foreign company despite the fact that it is legally incorporated as a Canadian firm. In these circumstances I suggest it is a matter worthy of careful consideration by hon. members before they decide whether or not the bill should be approved. The proposal here is to raise the number of shares from 50,000 to 125,000, each having a par value of $40. This represents a substantial expansion. What does it mean in practical terms?

• (6:40 p.m.)

It means that any of the surplus which may come into the till as the result of these operations, presumably expanded operations because of the proposal to enlarge the scope of the company and its capital stock, will represent an additional amount of the savings of the Canadian people to be siphoned abroad. From time to time, I and some of my colleagues have attempted to argue in connection with certain other bills that to assent to such a proposition is clearly to aggravate what is already an unfortunate situation so far as the Canadian economy and people are concerned. We have said that far from approving any expansion of private insurance companies in this country, parliament should be taking a stand to call a halt to that expansion. Increasingly, the kind of operations they conduct are an unnecessary and wasteful appendage to the economy of the country.

We have had debates in this house about the expansion of public pension plans. The Canada Pension Plan is a good case in point. During those debates some of us became increasingly aware of the source from which the major opposition to any such plan was stemming. Among other sources, it was coming from the private insurance interests in Canada. On the one hand we have parliament, rather painfully and slowly, struggling to implement measures that will serve the common good of all the Canadian people, and on the other we are being asked to approve and pass bills of this nature which strengthen the hand of the very economic and financial interests that have been seeking to slow down and prevent the enactment of laws to provide adequate public insurance programs.

If I understand correctly the evidence given before the Senate banking and commerce committee, this company operates largely in the field of automobile insurance. It is not in the life insurance business. We do not have across this land any adequate system of public coverage for the hazards of automobile operation, hazards both to the owners and to pedestrians. I believe this is the direction in which we should be moving rather than lending our approval to giving added power and strength to private automobile insurance interests which, in my view, have been conducting a very expensive and wasteful operation in so far as providing protection is concerned.

I find it astonishing that members who support the government, and after all this is the government that sponsored the Canada Pension Plan measure, can reconcile their positions in acting as sponsors of bills of this nature with their support of measures such as the Canada Pension Plan. These measures have the support of other members of the house but they like to laud them as accomplishments of the party to which they belong. It is time we made up our minds about which direction we are going to move, whether we are to continue the aimless expansion and multiplication of these private insurance companies, placing increased economic power in their hands with which to further their industry, politically and otherwise, or whether we are going to put a halt to that trend. One of the ways in which we can put a halt to that trend is to refuse to pass bills allowing these companies to expand and increase their powers.

This becomes all the more pointed when we realize that we are placing this power in the hands of financial interests that lie beyond the borders of our country.

Mr. Allmand: Would the hon. member permit a question?

Mr. Barnett: Certainly.

Mr. Allmand: Does the hon. member realize that the purpose of this bill is to replace four insurance companies, which belong to the same group, with one insurance company? Three of the companies were fully British companies, whereas the one that will replace the four is a Canadian company, although it is partly British owned.

Mr. Barnett: I am not sure I am in a position to answer completely the hon. member's question. He may have information concerning this proposal which I do not have. In his introductory remarks he did not cover the question which he has asked me, and I have not found an answer to it in the evidence given to the banking and commerce committee of the Senate. In fact, my reading of the brief bit of evidence given to that committee indicates that this company, leaving aside the question of the juggling of various corporations, will remain a company owned and controlled by a large British insurance firm or complex of firms.

I cannot see that the point the hon. member has raised in any way alters the validity of the argument that I have been making. I am not quite certain whether the hon. member is suggesting that this increased capitalization is simply to enable one company to take over the stock of others. If that is the point he is driving at, it is not made clear in the evidence given to the Senate committee. The explanatory notes say that one of the purposes of the bill is to change the capital stock from 50,000 shares, with a total value of $2 million, to 125,000 shares with a total value of $5 million. That is a very substantial expansion of the capital stock of the company, two and a half times an increase in valuation and number of shares. In any event, whether or not that is the case the basic argument I am making still stands.

In my view it is not in the public interest to pass measures to enable private insurance companies to expand and multiply the fields of their operation, as we have been asked to do by this and a veritable barrage of other bills in recent months and years.

I am trying to say something which I have not said before. The facts of the matter are that within the tussle for the Canadian savings dollar it is becoming increasingly evident that there is a real conflict between what is in the public interest and what is in the interest of a few private and special financial corporations, corporations increasingly owned and controlled outside of our borders. The latter is an undesirable trend, and this parliament should say so in no uncertain terms.

• (6:50 p.m.)

We must recognize that in a sense this is a political battle which has never clearly emerged on the floor of this chamber. Nevertheless, one has only to read the type of briefs and documents which reach our offices in periods when we have measures before us like the Canada Pension Plan to realize where much of the strength of the opposition to the idea of the expansion of public insurance is, and where the real opposition is to the channelling of the savings of the Canadian people into socially desirable programs. We have had statements made on motions by the Minister of Finance concerning the problem of protecting the Canadian dollar. Yet, so often in this hour we are asked to approve measures which in the long run will simply compound the problems which any minister of finance in this country will have to face in the future.

We say it is important that this measure not be slipped through in this hour of our proceedings because it would have the effect of negating some of the efforts which may from time to time be made as a matter of public policy to preserve and strengthen the financial position of the country. We believe that the one cannot be separated from the other. Even though these bills are brought in under the guise of private bills during the period which is referred to as private members' hour, it is my contention that basically we are here to enhance and protect the interests of the ordinary people of Canada. This is the point of view to which we should address ourselves when proposals of this kind come forward. I do not believe this should be regarded as a place to which any private interest can come and expect to get placid and tacit consent by members of parliament to proposals which would enhance their interests at the expense of the ordinary citizens of Canada.

These private bills, as I have seen them go through this house from session to session, have had a lasting effect upon the real nature of the economy of this country. I do not believe the implications which are inherent in these proposals should be ignored by this house to the extent they often are. This attitude is often indicated by the kind of attendance we have in the house when these matters are considered. I believe we should serve notice—at least I am prepared to do so—that there are some members in this parliament who are not prepared to bow down three times whenever an insurance company decides it wishes to do something in this country. We should make it clear we do not intend to continue to silently accept their sabotage, which is going on behind the scenes, of measures which will really enhance the position of the Canadian people. These are the types of road blocks which stand in the way of real social advances, and which these people manage to establish through their propaganda as well as in other ways.

This is something which disturbs me most deeply. I know we could have had a Canada pension plan which would have been much more adequate than the one now on the statute books had these companies not been so successful in pulling the strings behind the scenes to prevent this kind of a plan. Therefore, while some people allege privately if not on the floor of the house that this is an obstructive exercise, I should like to tell you that so far as I am concerned this is a constructive exercise. It is an effort to persuade this parliament that it is about time we took notice of what is being slipped through during these private members' hours. It is about time we started putting the interests of our people before the private interests of foreign insurance companies.

I believe this bill, with its proposed terms, is a very good example of how we can continue this process that is working against the interests of our constituents. We should be prepared to take a stand and say that it will go on no longer. I am not suggesting that this company or any one of these companies should be expropriated or put out of business. I am saying, however, that this kind of wasteful approach to the whole field of insurance should be stopped where it is, and that from now on we should agree that public insurance can be provided much more economically and much more effectively than insurance has been provided in the past by virtue of the laws enabling these companies to operate and to expand.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member's time has expired.

Mr. Arnold Peters (Timiskaming): Mr. Speaker, I would like a little more time, but I see that the time is limited. I should like to ask one question of the sponsor of this bill. In a question put to the hon. member for Comox-Alberni (Mr. Barnett) he made a statement concerning the disposition of the four companies forming the one company. Although I do not see any reference to that situation in the report of the standing committee, if that is true then I would assume, as sponsor of the bill, he is willing to explain what has happened to the other three companies. The company which we are now being asked to incorporate originally was a holding company. Northwestern Finance was the holding company and this company held the other two companies, the Security National Insurance and British Crown Insurance, in the right of the holding company. If this is so and we are now being asked to increase the capitalization of this company to $5 million, we should know how the others were purchased. If this is really the winding up of a bankruptcy, I think that aspect of it should be explained by the sponsor of the bill. I would hope that the member who raised these matters would tell us how these companies were liquidated and what the disposition of the shares has been.

Mr. Speaker: Order. The hour appointed for the consideration of private members' business has expired. The house will now resume the business that was interrupted at six o'clock.

BROADCASTING

IMPLEMENTATION OF CANADIAN POLICY

The house resumed consideration in committee of Bill No. C-193, to implement a broadcasting policy for Canada, to amend the Radio Act in consequence thereof and to enact other consequential and related provisions—Miss LaMarsh—Mr. Batten in the chair.

The Chairman: It being seven o'clock I do now leave the chair.

At seven o'clock the committee took recess.

AFTER RECESS

The committee resumed at 8 p.m.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order, please. The house again in committee on Bill No. C-163, an act to implement a broadcasting policy for Canada, to amend the Radio Act in consequence thereof and to enact other consequential and related provisions. When the committee rose it was considering clause 2 and the amendment thereto.

On clause 2—Broadcasting Policy for Canada.

Mr. Cowan: Mr. Chairman, when the committee rose at six o'clock I had made some reference to the fact that in this new broadcasting bill No. C-163 the power still resides with the cabinet to override the decisions of the proposed new council, if as and when it may desire. I made particular reference to the situation existing in the Toronto-Barrie area where a tremendous uproar developed some time ago when it was ascertained by the residents of Toronto that it would be possible for one member of the cabinet only, by putting his signature on a single piece of paper, to move the Barrie station in such a direction and to such an extent that it would interfere with reception in Toronto of several very popular television stations in the Toronto area. I pointed out that there has been no change made in this regard.

Let me direct your attention to the proposal in this bill which states that the governor in council may override any decision of the council as long as it is done within 60 days and as long as the matter has been referred again to the council which has made a second report to the cabinet. However, if that council should have occasion to make a decision the cabinet does not like, arrangements can be made to change the personnel on the council. There are many of us in this house old enough to remember the treatment by Lloyd George of the British House of Lords. When it came time to put a certain measure through the House of Lords he simply created lords right and left in order to obtain a majority in support of his own opinion.

We had a recent appointment to the B.B.G. which was very important, because after he took his seat the motion he was looking after carried by a majority of one. According to the best information available no one has denied the source of that majority, even though the motion was passed the same day as that great Liberal took his seat for the first time.

This situation has to be watched carefully. I believe there should be a change in this proposed bill regarding television and radio because the Canadian public is not satisfied with the situation as it is today. A license can be granted to a t.v. station operator to set up business in a certain town. An amendment to that license can be made by the council if it is desired. Why can a license not be granted for a specific point and for that point only? I have been active for many years in the newspaper business. The newspapers I was connected with were always associated with the Canadian Press. The Canadian Press is a co-operative news gathering organization, but I can assure you that when the Canadian Press granted membership to a new applicant at some place where a new daily paper was to be established that did not give the new member the opportunity to move to any other city in Canada he thought would offer him a better financial return than the place from which he made his application. If a t.v. station operator has applied for a license to go into a certain centre and a licence is granted, there should not be any clause which would make it possible for that operator to move that t.v. station elsewhere, if, as and when he decided to do so. This should not be possible as the result only of obtaining the assent of the cabinet or the proposed new council for radio and television. Such a decision can be made at a meeting in secret. As I indicated to you before six o'clock, meetings do not have to be held in public if the executive committee decides there is no necessity.

Before moving on to the proposed method of financing the C.B.C. on the basis of five year grabs, I should like to refer to a portion of the white paper in relation to multiple ownership of mass media in any one community. I read to you from page ten of the 1966 white paper on broadcasting. On page 12 we have a section headed "Ownership of Canadian facilities". It reads in part:

> Within Canada, ownership or control of one medium of communication by another is equally a matter of concern if it tends to develop into a monopoly. There is a growing number of cases where either ownership or control extends to both the local newspapers and the local radio or television facilities. The Board of Broadcast Governors will be required to investigate and report on public complaints or representations about situations of this kind.

Let me point out that there is one city in this Dominion of Canada where the newspaper and the television station are owned by one organization. This is a monopoly situation if there ever was one. I am not going to attack that monopoly situation on the ground that it is inimical to the public interest. However, when people have applied for a C.A.T.V. licence to enter the area served by the monopoly, the newspaper and television station owner—and incidentally the radio station owner as well—they have been told that this would inhibit the establishment of a second television facility in that area. Here is a prima facie case where businessmen have offered competition to a monopoly situation involving the local newspaper, radio and television stations yet the Board of Broadcast Governors say no, you cannot go in there and offer competitive service because this would inhibit the possibility of an alternative t.v. station being erected there.

The white paper was prepared by the cabinet, make no mistake about that. The white paper, says the governor will look into monopoly situations. They should, particularly in relation to a C.A.T.V. application for a license to open a station to break a monopoly situation. Yet any one who makes such an application is informed that he can not do that; he simply can not do that.

• (8:10 p.m.)

They are fine sounding words in the white paper, but I say that actions speak louder than words. The action in refusing a C.A.T.V. applicant permission to enter a monopoly area indicates more forcibly what the cabinet desires to do than any words that may be found in the white paper or in any broadcasting committee report, I can assure you.

Before leaving the subject of C.A.T.V for a moment I should like to refer to the remarks of the hon. Secretary of State on November 1, 1967, to be found on page 3749 of Hansard:

> Provision is made for the exemption of certain classes of community antenna from the licensing requirements, for example, the roof-top antenna on an apartment block—

I ask you, if the roof-top antenna on an apartment block, which is nothing more or less than a community antenna system, is not going to require a licence why do they have to have licences for other forms of community antenna systems? As most of you are aware, I represent a Toronto riding. I have been a resident of Toronto for over 50 years. I think it is absolutely amazing that the cabinet will make the statement, through the Secretary of State, that no licence will be required for a roof-top antenna on an apartment block, but other forms of C.A.T.V. operations must have a licence.

I point out, too, that no licence is required for a roof-top antenna to serve a hotel the size of the Royal York hotel in Toronto, which has a community antenna pure and simple. But if there is a real estate subdivision anywhere in Canada that wishes to put in a community antenna in order to bring in the largest possible number of stations to the people living in the real estate subdivision, they will have to apply to this new radio television council for a licence. How ridiculous can you be? You do not need a licence to have a roof-top antenna on a 24-floor apartment block such as stands across the Humber river from my home in the riding of York-Humber. You do not need a licence for a community antenna to service the Royal York hotel, the King Edward hotel or the Westbury hotel. But if the owners of a real estate subdivision desire to put up a community antenna and bury the wires underneath the ground so that every house will not have an antenna above it picking up the individual family reception, they have to apply for a licence, which may be refused by the Board of Broadcast Governors or this proposed new council.

It cannot be right that hotels and apartment blocks do not need a licence for their community antenna systems, whereas real estate subdividers will have to apply for a licence in order to service the homes in the subdivision. If a town wants C.A.T.V., the operator there must apply for a licence. I guess the best way to get a C.A.T.V. licence in Napanee, Prescott and Gananoque would be to erect a hotel consisting of a couple of floors and put in a community antenna system.

I was quite interested when a member of the house last night came to me and talked about C.A.T.V. I said I had never subscribed to it until about two weeks ago. The reason I now subscribe to the C.A.T.V. system is this: I did not really need it, because I was getting a clear enough picture on black and white television, but when I secured a coloured television set—by the way, my wife and I paid for it ourselves; the C.B.C. did not pay for it—I decided to have C.A.T.V. installation in order to get a clearer picture on the coloured television set.

The member of the House of Commons who spoke to me last night said that he does not believe the freedom of the individual is being interfered with by the necessity of securing a licence for C.A.T.V. He expressed resentment to me because I get the C.A.T.V. service from the antenna on top of the Old Mill Towers. He said it is okay for the Old Mill Towers, a 24-floor apartment house, to pick the signals out of the air and transmit them to the apartment dwellers on the 24 floors, but he expressed resentment at the fact that man has a licence to service an area of about a square mile around the Old Mill Towers. He expressed resentment at private homes within a mile of Old Mill Towers receiving C.A.T.V., although it was all right to give it to the apartment dwellers. It was a member of the House of Commons who expressed that resentment last night, much to my surprise.

While we are speaking about the heart of the matter, which is clause 2 of this Bill No. C-163, I want to make some references to the proposed method of financing this octopus which has the country in its grip. In the relevant clauses of the proposed legislation it is stated definitely as follows:

> Upon the coming into force of this act and every fifth year thereafter, the corporation shall submit to the minister for submission to the governor in council a five-year capital program proposed by the corporation together with a forecast of the effect of the program on the corporation's operating requirements.

No one can quarrel with the desire to have a five year capital expenditure program submitted by the corporation to the cabinet, because you cannot make large capital expenditures within a 12 month period; capital expenditures, generally speaking, are for long range programs. But I cannot for one single moment support subclause 2 of the financing operation of the corporation which suggests to this parliament that:

> Upon the coming into force of this act and every fifth year thereafter, the corporation shall submit to the minister an operating budget for the next ensuing five financial years of the corporation for approval by the governor in council on the recommendation of the minister and the treasury board, and the minister shall lay before parliament each such operating budget of the corporation as approved by the governor in council within 15 days after the approval thereof or, if parliament is not then sitting, on any of the first 15 days next thereafter that parliament is sitting.

This simply means that the C.B.C. is to be given their money in five year grabs. Mr. Chairman and members of the Canadian House of Commons, this to me is an absolute denial of democracy. It is a denial of democracy because the control of public expenditure and taxation is at the heart of the parliamentary system and its origins are deeply rooted in history. The evolution of the British constitution was largely influenced by the fundamental principle that no taxes should be levied and no public revenues disbursed without the prior approval of the representatives of the citizens and taxpayers in parliament assembled. This principle is so fundamental that it is impossible to assign a date to its origin.

I would point out that the practice of holding regular sessions of parliament may be said to date effectively from the passage of the Bill of Rights in 1689. The principle of granting annual appropriations can be traced back in more rudimentary form to the parliaments of the Stuart kings. Prior to 1641 Charles I governed for 11 years without summoning a parliament. It was to resist these illegal exactions that the House of Commons, whenever there was a parliament in existence, would insist on an annual review of certain grants. I ask you, Mr. Chairman, what is the reason for calling parliament back once a year if we are going to give this crown corporation their money in five year grabs?

The explanation was given to us in the committee on broadcasting, films and assistance to the arts that the C.B.C. wanted to get their money in five-year grabs so they would not have to come to parliament and ask for the money every 12 months; it was said this would interfere with the even tenor of their acts. A further study of the matter disclosed the point that in 1957, under the St. Laurent administration, there was established by the parliament of Canada the Canada Council. Before the creation of the Canada Council, you may remember, certain great windfalls came to the dominion in the form of succession duties on two vast Canadian estates which were assigned to the Canada Council over a ten year period. I have read the discussion and observed the fact that parliament was being circumvented by this ten-year plan for the Canada Council. I refer to the discussion that took place in 1957.

[Mr. Cowan.]

• (8:20 p.m.)

I am glad to see that the hon. member for Cariboo is in the house tonight because I should like to pay tribute to him for the stand he took in February of 1957, almost 11 years ago, against money being voted by parliament on a ten year basis. He mentioned the fact that money should not be voted for a longer term than one year and that each year parliament should impose the necessary taxes and allocate funds to the departments requiring finance. I should like to refer in more detail to the statements of the hon. member for Cariboo. They make very interesting reading at this time when there is an effort afoot to allocate money to the C.B.C. in five year grants. I tell you, gentlemen, if the C.B.C. can foretell what will happen in five years' time, they should be running the country. Let me point out that this past Sunday the Prime Minister of Canada himself, speaking in Winnipeg, pointed out that there are unhappy signs of difficulties ahead. He said that prices and the danger of inflation are a major problem and that the government has begun to tackle it. The Globe and Mail of January 22 contained the following report:

Canada's dollar remains strong, although there are unhappy signs of a weakening in international economic co-operation, Prime Minister Lester Pearson told western Liberals here yesterday.

Then we have the comments of the Minister of Trade and Commerce in his year end review of Canada's economy in 1967 and outlook for 1968. The minister, who is a master at his job, said the following:

In Canada, economic activity has continued to expand, but at a reduced pace.... But more than half of this increase reflects higher prices.

Then, he pointed out that:

Above average wheat crops, particularly in the main importing countries, have brought about a pronounced softening in the world wheat market in the latter part of 1967.

The C.B.C. of course will be able to foretell whether or not there will be above average wheat crops in other parts of the world thus affecting Canadian wheat sales from year to year, and therefore we should give them their money in five year grants.

Then, the Minister of Trade and Commerce went on to say:

There are, however, other, less salutary, developments in the economy which, unless checked, could reverse this favourable trend in our payments position and undermine the very basis of our current prosperity.

The minister has his feet on the ground. He knows no man can look into the future five years ahead. It is a fortunate man who can look 12 months ahead. He went on to say:

Nor can the momentum toward freer world trade be allowed to subside.

He issued his statement in December and already in January we are concerned about the protective policies which are developing in various nations of the world. We cannot foretell which country will raise barriers against us at any one time, but the C.B.C. management maintain they can foretell five years ahead what will happen, despite rising costs, despite inflation, and despite above average wheat crops in other parts of the world. The C.B.C. knows what will happen. They can tell us five years in advance what they will want, and we are supposed to pay them the money without any discussion during the five year period.

The following is a quotation by the hon. member for Cariboo of what Hon. Louis St. Laurent said on the establishment of the Canada Council:

It was for the purpose of creating this body in such a way that it would not be subject to frequent pressures in the allocation of the funds which would be placed at its disposal.

This simply means that Mr. St. Laurent did not want the Canada Council coming to parliament once every 12 months to ask for additional funds. He referred to it as being "subject to frequent pressures in the allocation of funds". This is a nice way of speaking of annual grants by the parliament of Canada to which men and women are elected to look after the best interests of the taxpayers. As the hon. member for Cariboo said in February of 1957:

—I think it is a reflection on any government, ...to make the suggestion he did, namely that someone who is going to follow is not going to be as true to his country as the Prime Minister himself is.

If the C.B.C. cannot trust the parliaments which will be elected in the future to do the proper thing year by year, then we need somebody in the C.B.C. with a little trust and faith in the elected members of this house.

To show hon. members how impossible it is even for the C.B.C. to forecast the future I will quote from page 4905 of Hansard of November 30, 1967, when the Minister of Finance introduced his mini budget. He spoke at that time about the changes that had taken place since June when he brought in the first budget. He referred to the financial changes which had taken place in the previous five months. Yet the C.B.C. can foretell five years ahead what they will require. They want us to hand them over the money and to ask them for an explanation only once every five years. On November 30, the Minister of Finance said the following:

The fiscal restraints that are essential now may limit somewhat the increase in our production next year but such a limitation now is far better than a serious recession later... This is a case where the proverbial ounce of prevention now is far preferable to a pound of cure later.

He then spoke of:

—the unacceptably high rate at which prices and costs are increasing, including wage settlements.

He referred to cost increases and said:

—in the expectation that their money over the years will maintain its real value.

Then he gave the back of his hand to the Carter report by stating:

The commission was designing a system to yield a revenue comparable to that of 1964. Clearly we will need a tax system in 1969 and subsequently which will produce more revenues than that of 1964—

If the Carter commission could not foretell the financial future of the country, I can assure the house that I have no confidence in the ability of the C.B.C. management to forecast its financial requirements five years ahead. We must have an annual accounting as called for by the present Broadcasting Act. Section 35(1) of the 1958 Broadcasting Act reads:

The minister shall annually lay before parliament a capital budget and an operating budget for the next ensuing financial year of the corporation, approved by the governor in council on the recommendation of the minister and the Minister of Finance.

Subsection (2) reads:

Within one year after the coming into force of this act and every fifth year thereafter the corporation shall submit to the minister and the Minister of Finance for submission to the Governor in Council a five year capital program.

The present Broadcasting Act calls for annual operating budgets but a five year capital budget. The proposed bill now before us calls for a five year capital budget, which is quite satisfactory to me and a five year operating budget. The new bill should call for an annual operating budget because I say to you, gentlemen, that the absence of responsibility is the mother of extravagance. We are told that we should have confidence in the C.B.C., but they cannot foretell five years in advance how much money they will need.

The Ottawa Citizen for Wednesday, December 20, contained the following item:

> The controversial film "Waiting for Caroline" cost nearly $200,000 more than first budget estimates.
>
> This information came to the Senate on Tuesday in response to a question from Senator Edgar Fournier (P.C.—Restigouche-Madawaska).
>
> The film, estimated to cost $319,768.58, wound up costing $511,252.36, divided equally between the C.B.C. and the National Film Board.

I went to the trouble of ascertaining by how wide a margin the C.B.C. missed the mark in its estimated budget for this film. The budget was for $319,768.58. It had cost $511,252.36. The discrepancy was 59 per cent. The total cost was 159 per cent of the budget, or an excess of 59 per cent. I should like to advise the house that, using mathematical calculations, if the C.B.C. cannot estimate the cost that it is engendering any closer than within a margin of 59 per cent, what will happen if we give them their money in five year grants? If one takes 159 per cent as the normal performance of the C.B.C., and I am not far wrong in taking that particular figure as typical of the C.B.C., one would find that if we gave them the money for five years their mistake of 59 per cent would mean that after 37 months and 23 days they would have spent all the money and after a little more than three years they would be out of funds. Back they would come to parliament stating: "We have made a miscalculation of the funds and want more money".

• (8:30 p.m.)

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order. I regret to interrupt the hon. member but the time allotted to him has now expired.

Mr. Korchinski: Mr. Chairman, I was rather hesitant at rising at this stage of the proceedings because I question the value of suggestions that are put forward at this stage. However, some of the suggestions I wish to make in my presentation may be of such a nature that something can be done to implement them. I mention this because I wonder whether there can be many major changes in the drafting of this bill before it finally passes parliament, if it does.

I venture to suggest to the minister at this point that in the few months remaining until the new leader of the government is appointed she temper her remarks so that the new management of the C.B.C. might be given the opportunity to prove its value, if such is the case.

One suggestion I should like to leave at this point of the proceedings and which applies to broadcasting generally concerns the programming of the C.B.C. about which there has been wide criticism from the public at large. People feel that in many cases the C.B.C. programming is demoralizing, deceitful and degrading. This is not criticism that is levelled by church groups or organizations which seek to provide us with some sort of standard of values in this country; this is criticism that has come from parents as well as from young people.

We have from time to time passed legislation relating to pornography, and this subject is also occasionally touched on by the C.B.C. in its television broadcasting. If magazines or books are published in contravention of such legislation, then they should be withdrawn or action taken.

Some producers produce programs with only one idea in mind, namely their self-promotion. In such cases, I think it would be in the public interest to stipulate in their contracts that if after consultation with the management and board of directors of the C.B.C. they are of the opinion that certain programs of this type were detrimental to the moral health of the country, the contracts of these producers could be terminated. A provision could be written into the contract to safeguard the producer's interest, but I think that some action along this line is necessary. I do not think that the public in general should be subjected to this type of program whether they want it or not. Although this criticism is mainly directed at the C.B.C., it could also apply to private broadcasters. That is all I have to say on that point. I do not want to spend more time than is necessary briefly to state the case.

I am also opposed to another provision in the bill, which incidentally has been embodied in other legislation. I am referring to the appointment of the president, which is now a thing of the past. I do not think that such appointments should be made for a period longer than four years. If at the end of the four year period the incumbent has been satisfactory he could be reappointed. In the case of a man who has proved his value I do not think there would be any danger of the government suddenly dismissing him and trying to find somebody to take his place.

In my opinion this would provide some recourse to the government if the management of the C.B.C. were unable to apply themselves to the promotion of the type of programming that was considered desirable.

I would join other speakers in voicing my objection to the five year period for capital programming. I cannot imagine anything more undesirable than perpetuating the type of financing of the C.B.C. that has been the case heretofore and which has been progressively increasing in amount year by year.

In this connection, one has only to look back to previous broadcasting reports and to the report of the Gordon commission to find how sadly underestimated were the financial requirements of broadcasting, and this following upon what I believe was a very carefull study of broadcasting needs. I do not think that the government should be obligated to carry on mistakes in this area which may have been made by its predecessor or by a former leader of the party.

The government is presently attempting to impose an austerity program on the country. This it cannot do if it continues to hand over sizeable amounts to the C.B.C. which are in the interest neither of the public nor the government. I suggest that the financial provisions in the bill should be re-examined. Parliament has never turned down any budgetary plans that were reasonable. However, I do not believe that the public will tolerate the present situation, and I do not think we would be doing our duty if we were not to record our opposition to this particular type of financing.

With regard to capital expenditure, it is regrettable that many fringe areas in the country at the present time are not receiving service and are sadly neglected. I remember asking a question on this on March 9, 1966, and I was told that at that time the total number of people without television in Newfoundland was 83,600; in Prince Edward Island 10,300; in Nova Scotia 8,600; in New Brunswick 11,100; in Quebec 82,300; in Ontario 85,000; in Manitoba 71,300; in my own province of Saskatchewan 169,300; in Alberta 88,000, and in British Columbia 111,800. There are many areas of the country which are well served with facilities. I know the demand is great, but we should not ignore these people entirely.

• (8:40 p.m.)

One need only look at the expenditures which have been made on fringe areas to realize what has happened. The information I am about to give to the committee was supplied to me by the C.B.C. At the end of March, $1,700,000 had been spent specifically for the extension of coverage into those areas which might be considered fringe areas. In 1964, $733,000 was spent; in 1965, $1,400,000 was spent; in 1966, $2,700,000, was spent and in 1967, $2,200,000 was spent. As against that, in 1967 alone $10 million was spent for colour television facilities. I understand that that was a special expenditure. Nevertheless, the question is often asked why, after a five year period, only approximately $8 million has been spent in developing coverage for fringe areas, as against the $10 million which was spent for colour television facilities in one year. Such expenditure does not constitute a proper management of funds and shows a complete disregard for those in the fringe areas.

In future, I submit, between 15 to 20 per cent of capital expenditures should be earmarked specifically for our fringe areas. In this way our entire population will come to understand what national unity is. The people in some areas of Canada have grown up with television, but in other areas they have not. Sometimes the television that has been provided has been difficult to view. That this situation is allowed to exist some of our people think is inequitable, it should be corrected.

The question of satellite broadcasting has not even been touched in this bill. I cannot understand why such a supposedly far reaching bill should ignore the question of satellite broadcasting. I submit that under the broadcasting bill we should set up an agency which should look into the entire question of satellite broadcasting and co-ordinate all the preliminary work that may be necessary to bring about such a far reaching innovation as broadcasting via satellite.

We know what is going on between Quebec and France. Satellite television is not something that is in somebody's imagination, something that we shall not see for the next 20 years. Satellite television is a present day reality and this bill ought to make provision for this country to control the space above it from which a satellite might beam broadcasts. We might launch a satellite in orbit. In any event, I think we should try to protect ourselves, because other countries are looking at space.

Do we want satellite transmissions to be controlled by private or public agencies? That is a question we must ask ourselves and that is the question which this bill should clarify. But this bill does nothing like that. At present the initiative in this field comes from private industry. The question that Canadians generally may ask themselves is: is it necessary to have a Canadian Broadcasting Corporation at all?

An hon. Member: Yes.

Mr. Korchinski: If the answer is yes, as an hon. member suggests, I submit that it is necessary for us to examine the entire question of transmission by satellite. If it is necessary to have a C.B.C. then, I say, the C.B.C. should be charged with the responsibility, at this stage of our proceedings, of examining that question. This bill ought to set up the machinery which would guarantee that the C.B.C. will be able to use our space in the near future.

We should reserve Canada's space for Canada. We should share it, rent it or sell it if we do not want it, but we should reserve our right to our space and that space ought to be disposed of in a way which will be good for Canada. Another country should not be allowed to reserve our space; we should not put ourselves in the position of having to go to someone else, hat in hand, asking for permission to use our space.

There are many difficulties to setting up orbiting satellites. We may have the know-how, but we do not have the resources to do it. I think that all these questions should be worked out by an agency that ought to be established by the present bill. I do not believe that this bill ought to be amended in one or two years. If it is left in its present form I see no alternative to our coming back to amend it. Should that happen, we shall have been very shortsighted.

Mr. Leboe: Mr. Chairman, I want to say a few things only about the broadcasting bill. First, I wish to add my voice to those who have previously spoken in criticism of some C.B.C. productions. I think we should look to some other body than the C.B.C. for productions that are suitable to be televised. Some independent body ought to make these productions and sell them. I am referring to feature films and not to those productions that are made to be released almost immediately, news interviews and so on. Provision ought to be made for some industry which would make films for sale to television operators.

Then, the C.B.C., C.T.V. and other broadcasting networks could buy or rent those productions; in that way, by having available productions which are produced at competitive prices, we should escape the criticisms which are directed at the C.B.C. in connection with its productions. Those criticisms are very serious indeed.

One of my main reasons for rising is that I want to make another plea for the extension of broadcasting facilities in the northern areas of Canada. It is incredible that out of a budget of from $140 million to $170 million we should quibble about the $200,000 to $250,000 which would provide the complete establishment of television facilities throughout the entire northern parts of our provinces.

Hon. members of the house may be surprised at this, but the cost of translators for television broadcasts is very, very minor indeed. You can set up a minor broadcasting or relay station, with a translator, for as little as $3,500. That station can pick up signals from the air. Bear in mind that modern facilities for scrubbing certain signals exist. It has been said to me by engineers that a signal can be transmitted from Vancouver, through a translator, to the Prince George district of British Columbia and that the signal there will be stronger and clearer than the signal which is received by sets in the city of Vancouver from the local broadcasting station.

• (8:50 p.m.)

The reason is that there is a lot of local interference in the city; those who live right in the city do not get as good a signal as that transmitted 500 miles through the relay to the outskirts of Vancouver where there is little interference. This proves that the ability to use translators to bring a signal into the far reaches of the north is ours for the taking, and I emphasize once again that an expenditure of a quarter of a million dollars out of a budget running as high as $170 million seems like peanuts when one considers the result that could be achieved.

The prime purpose of the C.B.C. was to bring broadcasting, whether radio or television, to regions where it would be uneconomic for private enterprise to provide it. This is spelled out in the new bill. I must say I was pleased to receive a letter from the minister in which I was informed it was government policy to give priority to bringing signals to these outlying areas. I must say I am interested in having these signals made available free to all who live in such areas.

Why should people in Valemount in my constituency have to make payments every month in order to get television of sorts, in addition to providing funds for the transmitter? It does not make sense. Everyone else gets free television. Think of the millions being spent by the C.B.C. to wean Canadian business away from United States stations. Well, there are people in the north who still do not have transmissions of any kind available to them, though the provision of a signal would involve a paltry sum of between $3,500 and $7,000.

The C.B.C. comes cap in hand asking for a five-year budget as far as operating expenditures are concerned. I cannot find words strong enough to denounce a policy which allows the C.B.C. a five year budget. What in the world is this parliament for if it is not to scrutinize expenditures of this type and see whether or not we are getting value for the money spent? I recall the years gone by when no broadcasting committee was set up and when we were unable to examine the affairs of the C.B.C. in any effective way. I should like to see the broadcasting committee meet every year, with a report from the management before it for discussion as is the case with any other Crown corporation, and the C.B.C. getting money on the basis of its performance.

Nothing could be more appalling than that the government of Canada should even consider allowing a five year budget. There is not a businessman in Canada of any experience who would subscribe to such a thing. Certainly we need some action on the part of hon. members on all sides of this house to make certain that this five year plan is put on the shelf. In this connection, we are all aware that the government is very much concerned today about the rate of government spending. If this state of affairs continues we may have to cut back the $170 million allotted to the C.B.C. as part of a deliberate program. If there is a possibility of getting ourselves into a lot of trouble in the financial world today, why should we put a glorified circle around the C.B.C.?

I, myself, am interested, of course, in plans for an airport terminal at St. George. I agree that if the government is pressed and has to reduce its spending, we shall have to be patient and wait. But why in the world should we wait for the building of an airport terminal there merely to fatten the C.B.C. with multi-millions of dollars in excess of the amount required to bring needed facilities to Prince George and the surrounding area?

• (9:00 p.m.)

In closing, I should like to say that as one who has been in business, who has had to meet a payroll and bear responsibility for production, this five year budget provision makes no sense whatever.

Mr. Cowan: When my time expired a short while ago I was referring to the clause in this proposed act which would give the C.B.C. its operating expenditures by means of a five year grant rather than through an annual grant under the present system. It is true we have never received an explanation from the C.B.C. as to how they spend their money. On the other hand, parliament does get an opportunity once a year to find out how much the C.B.C. proposes to spend in the following year, which gives a rough indication of the base they will use to exceed as the 12 months roll by. As I say, we have never succeeded in getting details of the corporation's expenses. Nevertheless, it is my belief that to give the corporation funds on which to operate for five years at a time is a denial of democracy and a mockery of parliament.

Why should we give the C.B.C. its operating budget on a five-year basis and not do the same for the department of defence? We could give the department of defence the money for a unified force in five year grants. We could do the same for the Department of Agriculture. We could give the Department of Trade and Commerce the funds it requires for five years. Then, parliament would not have to meet more than once every five years. I have already pointed out, however, that the annual meeting of parliament is something which dates back into history as far as the passage of the Bill of Rights in 1689, and indications are even further back than that. But in 1968 we find a cabinet in Canada which says it is not necessary to vote funds once a year on an annual basis; the C.B.C. would like to be treated in the same way as the Canada Council and allowed to ask for its appropriation only once every five years.

Do you realize, under the five year plan which is mentioned in this bill, that if the St. Laurent government in say, April, 1957, had given the C.B.C. its funds for five years' operating expenses the Diefenbaker administration, in its term of office from June, 1957, to March, 1958, could have done nothing with the C.B.C., even though it had been elected by the voters of Canada in June, 1957? There is a five year idea behind this suggestion in the bill. I have heard some hon. members state that they cannot go for the five year plan but that they would go for a three year plan. They think a three year plan would be better than a five year plan. But the three year plan would also have covered the entire first administration of the Diefenbaker government, and it would have been unable to do anything with the C.B.C. during its ten months' tenure of office, because the St. Laurent government would have provided five year or three year grants in April 1957.

The first Pearson administration lasted from April, 1963, to November, 1965, a little better than two and a half years. If the three year plan, as suggested, had been in effect it might have been possible for the Diefenbaker administration, in February or March of 1963, to have voted three year's operating appropriations to the C.B.C. and the Pearson administration, in its first term, from April, 1963, to November, 1965, would not have been able to do anything with the expenses of the C.B.C. because the defeated Diefenbaker administration had voted them their three year's funds in, say, March, 1963, prior to the general election when the Diefenbaker administration was turned out of office. How ridiculous can you get?

The three year plan is not satisfactory, but let me give you the most glaring example that would have occurred under this proposed five year operating budget scheme. Under the five year budget operating scheme if the St. Laurent administration in, say, May of 1957 had voted five years' funds to the C.B.C. then the C.B.C. would have been carried from May of 1957 to May of 1962, and we had the first Diefenbaker administration taking office in June, 1957. It would not have been able to do anything with the C.B.C. expenses because the C.B.C. would have been granted five years' appropriation by the St. Laurent administration prior to its defeat in June, 1957.

But worse than that, under the five year proposal contained in this bill, when the hon. Mr. Diefenbaker went to the country in March, 1958, he came back with the largest number of supporters that any party or any prime minister has ever received in the history of Canada—208 Conservative members. In a house of 265 members he had 208 seats. Now, he was in power from March, 1958 until June, 1962, with his second administration, a four year term. Do you realize that if the St. Laurent government under the proposed scheme had given the C.B.C. its five year appropriation, then from June of 1957, when Mr. Diefenbaker formed his first administration, right up to May of 1962, about which time his second administration was expiring, he would never have been able to do a thing with the C.B.C. appropriations despite the fact that in March, 1958, he came into this house with the largest number of supporters in the history of Canada, 208? With a five year appropriation for the C.B.C. passed by the St. Laurent government in May, 1957, the prime minister of Canada and his cabinet would not have been able to do anything with the expenses of the C.B.C. during his first administration from June, 1957, to March, 1958, and for the next four years in his second administration when he had 208 supporters.

What would be the use of holding elections to the House of Commons if the men elected were going to be denied the opportunity of administering the affairs of state? We are told when the budget is brought to us each year that we are in control of only a certain proportion of the total funds. We have a statement made to us that something like 35 per cent of the budget is covered by long-term debt on which we have to pay the interest and some sinking fund payments. Then, we have statutory payments set by law, such as the salaries of judges. All this comes pretty close to 50 per cent of the annual budget which the houses of parliament, the House of Commons and the Senate, cannot touch because those expenditures have been fixed for some time into the future by parliaments of the past. These are expenditures which parliaments have seen fit to take upon their shoulders, knowing them to be right, legal and above board.

If we agree to give the individual arms of government five year budget appropriations, the day will come when the annual budget will not control a single, solitary cent. The C.B.C. will say, "We have got our money for five years." The Department of Trade and Commerce will be wanting similar treatment. The C.N.R. will want similar treatment, and in no time at all the annual budget of parliament will mean nothing because we have committed ourselves to five year grants for spending the funds. This is a situation that cannot be allowed to occur, and this clause in the bill should be changed.

During the consideration of this clause of the bill in the committee on broadcasting, films and assistance to the arts, I moved that we should retain the existing section 35 of the Broadcast Act of 1958 which calls for annual appropriations and, as I have said earlier today and I repeat again, the absence of responsibility is the mother of extravagance.

If the C.B.C. is not going to be required to come to us at least once a year and explain their actions, and explain what they hope to do in the coming 12 months, then parliament should not be meeting at all except on a once in five years basis. It makes an entire mockery of the election of members to parliament if we are not going to have the expenses of the various departments of government submitted to us annually, as has been the practice in Britain since 1689 when the Bill of Rights was passed, a practice which has been adopted in Canada.

When I expressed my opposition to this proposed five year budgetary plan in the House of Commons committee on broadcasting, films and assistance to the arts, a member of the committee gave me the very fast answer that what one parliament has done another parliament can undo, the idea being that if one parliament made a mistake the nex parliament could change it. Now, that is a very nice, glib phrase, that what one parliament has done another parliament can undo.

I would remind you, Mr. Chairman, and members of the committee, that in 1890 the British parliament ceded Heligoland to Germany by an act of parliament in exchange for the island of Zanzibar. I ask, do you think that any British parliament is going to reverse that act of 1890 and regain Heligoland for the British people once more and, in fact, give Zanzibar back to Germany? Anybody can see that glibness is the major characteristic of the phrase "What one parliament has done another parliament can undo." The ceding of Heligoland in 1890 is a good case in point.

Another one is the acknowledgement of the independence of the United States of America. The United States of America rebelled against British control in 1776. The American revolution was settled by the Treaty of Versailles of 1783. Of course the Treaty of Versailles of 1783 had to be ratified by the British parliament. Of course it was ratified by the British parliament, and is on the statute books of the British House of Commons to this day. Are you going to tell me what one parliament has done another parliament can undo, because I ask you how are we going to reverse the action of the British parliament that acknowledged the independence of the United States of America when it approved the Treaty of Versailles of 1783, after the American revolution?

We cannot undo in one parliament many things that might have been done by a prior parliament. It would be best if the members of this parliament would bear in mind that parliament can undo what another parliament has done, with limitations, but it would be much, much better if members bore in mind the statement that one parliament cannot bind another parliament. If one parliament could bind the next, why have parliament met annually? Why have parliament elected every four or five years, because if one parliament can bind the next we might as well pass all the necessary laws for the rest of time this winter and never have to come back again to consider changes in the method of living in this country. We can pass laws which we can say will be in effect for the next 75 years. I say to you that no parliament can bind a succeeding parliament. We should not be so puerile as to suggest that any branch of government should be given five years' operating expenses in five year grabs. This is simply an effort on the part of the creature of the federal parliament to get out from under the control of those people who are responsible for taxing the public of Canada in order to maintain the necessary services, of which we consider the C.B.C. to be one.

• (9:10 p.m.)

I emphasize as broadly as I can that it is ridiculous to ask parliament to bind the parliaments over the next four years to a C.B.C. operating budget. I have already explained how, if this had been in effect in May 1957, the hands of the newly elected Diefenbaker government in June 1957 would have been tied and how the hands of the second Diefenbaker administration in March 31, 1958 would have been tied. What would be the use of holding elections at all? Why ask the people to vote if when the elected representatives get to Ottawa they cannot do anything about the expenses of the government agencies because it has already been agreed that the C.B.C. shall have its money in five year grabs.

I cannot speak against this five year financing of the C.B.C. in any stronger terms without losing my temper. I cannot see how a Liberal cabinet could sensibly and knowingly propose such a denial of democracy as this proposal for a five year operating budget. A five year capital expense budget would be all well and good; that is normal practice. But to propose a five year operating budget and asking the parliament of Canada to approve it, thus binding succeeding four year parliaments, is something which is more than human nature can stand. I cannot believe the cabinet has given this matter the consideration it deserves. I sincerely ask that this matter be reconsidered by the cabinet and that a much more sensible proposal be brought in regarding the manner of financing the C.B.C.

When this bill was being considered by the standing committee on broadcasting, films and assistance to the arts the member for Saskatoon but his finger on a troublesome point which I think should be drawn to the attention of the House of Commons at this time so that this matter may be given consideration before the clause by clause study of the bill commences. The member for Saskatoon, Dr. Brand, was discussing clause 19, and his remarks are reported at page 138 of the minutes of proceedings and evidence of the committee on broadcasting, films and assistance to the arts for November 23. He expressed a lot of concern about the amount of power that can be delegated by the executive committee of the proposed council to one permanent member and one non-permanent member to hold a public hearing and still have all the rights and privileges as pointed out in subclause (7), that are vested in a superior court of record.

The member for Saskatoon went on to say:

> It concerns me a little that you are going to have a public hearing held by just two individuals who have these powers which are quasi judicial powers; perhaps even judicial without the quasi, I do not know.

The member for Saskatoon pointed out that he had the impression that the powers were altogether too great to be given to some organization outside of a court of law. He quoted a section and pointed out that the members so designated have, and may exercise for the purpose of such hearing, the powers of the commission set out in subsection (7) which includes all such powers, rights and privileges as are vested in a superior court of record. He went on to say that this includes such things as the enforcement of its orders, the entry of and inspection of property. The hon. member said, "This is the sort of thing which concerns me".

He went on:

> Then, if you turn to clause 26 which refers to appeals from such orders, there is reference only to the Commission itself. There seems to be a distinct difference between the Commission and a two-member committee set up by the Commission.
>
> [Mr. Cowan.]
>
> The appeal lies only from a decision of the Commission and not necessarily from a decision of any subcommittee of the Commission that may be set up.

As the hon. member went on to point out, these people have the authority, if this bill is passed in its present form, of a superior court of record. It would appear that they can enter upon property upon their own verdict, having been given powers the same as a superior court of record. This is giving the C.B.C. carte blanche with a vengeance. This is a clause in the bill which should be reconsidered and reworded because there is no reason for confering such powers upon them when the courts of law are established and have been established in this country for many many years.

I have no desire to enter into a discussion of the question of the programming of the C.B.C., as this discussion has been handled by abler persons than myself. I certainly would like to refer, however, to the millions of dollars which are being spent unnecessarily by the C.B.C. in maintaining a national newsgathering organization of its own. I know of no reason that the taxpayers of Canada should be expected to pay for the operation of a national newsgathering organization, not only throughout Canada but also in various parts of the world. This matter was brought before the broadcasting committee where, of course, there was a majority of Liberal members, and we are considering a bill here which has been introduced by a Liberal cabinet.

At that time I pointed out that for something over 65 years we have had in Canada a marvellous newsgathering organization, namely, the Canadian Press. This is a cooperative newsgathering organization consisting primarily of the daily newspapers of Canada from coast to coast. It covers the news as it develops in all quarters of the Dominion of Canada and, through its arrangement with such organizations as the Associated Press in the United States and Reuters in Europe, has a world-wide newsgathering facility. I mentioned that this is a newsgathering service which is adequate for the daily newspapers of Canada. The daily newspapers of Canada have been accepted by the people of this country for almost 100 years as a satisfactory news service, but the C.B.C. cannot be satisfied with such a news service; it must build a news service of its own. Why cannot the C.B.C., in its broadcasting of news, rely on the same service as the daily and weekly newspapers, namely the Canadian Press.

The C.B.C. spends millions of dollars building up a newsgathering organization. They have bragged that they would build up a competitive service against the Canadian Press. As I said in the committee and repeat now, the Canadian Press does not buy any news from the C.B.C., but the C.B.C. subscribes to the Canadian Press. That should indicate which is the superior of the two. I cannot express adequately my disgust at the fact that the Canadian taxpayers are being asked to pay, and that taxes are being levied against them to pay, for a competing news service. When I brought the matter before the broadcasting committee I received the smart answer that no doubt when Reuters began to compete with Wolffe and Havas, other newsgathering organizations in Europe, they were protested by the old established organizations. I have no doubt that if someone started up a newsgathering service in Europe in the past both Reuters and Wolffe would have objected.

• (9:20 p.m.)

I have not the slightest doubt but that Wolffe, Havas and Reuters objected one about the other as these newsgathering services came on the scene, but the difference is that they were privately operated organizations battling on even terms. I know of no reason Canadian Press should be asked to compete with a government subsidized and operated newsgathering organization.

I can give many instances of extravagant expenditures by the C.B.C., the worst of course being the recent coverage of the Pan-American games in Winnipeg. The best information that newspaper people in Canada could obtain is that the C.B.C spent millions of dollars covering this event as compared with the $18,000 spent by the Canadian Press. The expenditure of the C.B.C. newsgathering service in opposition to C.T.V. in Winnipeg would bring tears to the eyes of any taxpayer aware of the tremendous and excessive expenditure by the C.B.C.

I have told you about this in the past but I think it is a wonderful example of the extravagance of the C.B.C. When his Holiness the Pope visited Israel some years ago, the Canadian Press did not send anyone from Canada to cover this historical event. It very satisfactorily relied on the detailed coverage made available by the Associated Press and by Reuters from Europe. Very fine coverage was given in the Canadian press of this visit by His Holiness to Israel. What did the C.B.C. do? They flew two crews to Israel; one French camera crew and one English camera crew as well as English and French commentators. I have asked this question on many occasions but have yet to receive an answer. What difference could there be in the scenery of Israel at the time the Pope visited the holy land as disclosed by a French camera or an English camera, both owned by the C.B.C.? One will have an idea, when he learns that the Canadian Press did not send anyone to Israel at that time but that the C.B.C. sent two camera crews and two crews of commentators, just what little regard the C.B.C. pays to expenses.

Another classic example relates to the uproar that developed in Panama when some Panamanians took some pot shots at some Americans in the canal zone. The Canadian Press thought an adequate coverage of the Panamanian zone uprising would be provided by world wide news organizations and Canadian Press relied on them. The C.B.C. flew people down to New Orleans and to Panama. I ask you what in the name of heaven could the Canadian C.B.C. crew see in the Panama Canal zone that was not adequately reported by the Associated Press people.

I cannot for one moment understand why the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation is supposed to be covering all facets of the world scene. As mentioned by the hon. member for Villeneuve during his remarks, I believe, the Canadian Broadcasting Policy should be confined to Canada. If we have some newsgathering we want from all four corners of the world, let us subscribe to the newsgathering services which have covered those corners of the world for members of the fourth estate for a long time, and covered them satisfactorily. We are not adding anything to the enlightenment of the world by sending C.B.C. correspondents to Saigon and South and North Viet Nam, particularly when they come back here and attack the methods of the United States government in conducting that war.

The C.B.C. has been engendering international incidents by flying junior help to Viet Nam who come back and make off-the-cuff statements, embarrassing to the Canadian government and provocative to the United States government, with whom we should at all times be on the friendliest of terms. I know no proper reason for the Canadian broadcasting corporation to send representatives or correspondents to Viet Nam to cover a scene that is adequately covered by other newsgathering organizations. The Canadian Press service covers this scene adequately by gathering news from the organizations with which it co-operates.

I hope I made myself clear when I said I could not support a five year operating budget for the C.B.C. I could not care less who introduced the bill in parliament. It will not have my support because of this clause alone.

Mr. Otto: Mr. Chairman, I have been moved to take part in this debate by the remarks of the hon. member for York-Humber. I have never known so many people to be moved by that hon. member's speeches. Let me set straight a fairy story that has been told here during the past two or three hours. It has to do with the suggestion that this house has control over the spending estimates of any department. Where is the hon. member of this house who can remember a time when the estimates of a department have been reduced in this house? I suggest this has never happened in modern history. Surely, this is a fairy story or a myth.

This myth, as described by the hon. member for York Humber, is to the effect that the elective representatives have some control over the government and the C.B.C. As I have mentioned, and as the minister could explain if she were so inclined, the fact of the matter is that the department heads and the president of the C.B.C. decide how much money they need, be it $114 million or more. The estimates then go to the cabinet and to the treasury board. Usually, the treasury board cuts the estimates by perhaps 25 per cent. These department heads and the C.B.C. officials are smart enough to add 30 per cent to their budget needs and they end up better than even.

These estimates then come to the house and are the subject of votes of non-confidence. The rules are such that when the estimates are before the house hon. members can talk about the lumber industry in British Columbia, the fishing and coal industries in the maritimes or anything else they wish. The fact of the matter is that no one talks about the estimates. Finally a member, like that gentleman who is now a feature writer, Mr. Douglas Fisher, moves that the estimates be reduced from $114 million, or whatever they might be, to $1. That usually is the final vote. At no time does it seem that anyone ever questions why the C.B.C. or any other department needs the money it has requested. This whole thing is nothing more than a myth or an exercise.

[Mr. Cowan.]

About the fall of 1964 the committee on parliamentary procedure made a report. At about that time the Prime Minister said in this house he thought it would be a very good idea if departmental estimates were taken out of the house and put into committee. He said that this would give the backbencher and parliamentary committees a certain sense of representative power. He said they could examine these departmental estimates, make recommendations and determine the amounts of money to be made available.

This all sounded very reasonable, because members of parliament could then question the officials of the department as to their money needs. They could also reduce the amounts available to the civil service to carry out these many ventures. If members of parliament had these powers, I am sure a great deal of attention would be paid to what the members had to say. When the amended rules were presented it was obvious that the estimates of the departments may be referred to committees for examination only. The committees can not determine the amount of estimates nor even make recommendations that are likely to be accepted. That is the fact in our parliamentary system.

These criticisms have been placed on the record for the past 25, 30 or 40 years, and I refer to the fact that this house has absolutely no control over departmental spending. We are now asked to approve five year budgeting.

• (9:30 p.m.)

I can see nothing at all wrong with that. In fact, most businesses and enterprises today find it necessary, in order to conduct a good endeavour, to plan five years ahead. I can see nothing wrong with the Department of Finance doing the same thing. In fact, we should be giving very serious attention to making plans over a longer period, say between three and five years, so that business in this nation will know what it is facing, agriculture will know what it is facing and the C.B.C. will know what it is facing. Let us forget this myth, this fairy story about parliamentary control over spending.

The Chairman: Is the committee ready for the question?

Some hon. Members: Question.

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, I only wish to put a short question to the Secretary of State

(Miss LaMarsh) before the vote on my amendment to clause 2 paragraph (b). Could the minister say what she means by:

—the Canadian broadcasting system should be effectively owned and controlled by Canadians—

Secondly, what does this mean from a financial or investment point of view?

Those are the only two questions I should like to put to the Secretary of State and then I will be ready for the vote on my amendment. Can the Secretary of State answer my questions?

Miss LaMarsh: Mr. Chairman, it is perfectly clear.

Mr. Grégoire: Then can I put a supplementary question to the Secretary of State? In her view, are the Quebec television stations included in this category of television stations effectively controlled by Canadians?

Miss LaMarsh: Yes, Mr. Chairman.

[English]

Some hon. Members: Question.

Amendment (Mr. Grégoire) negatived: Yeas, 5; nays, 47.

The Chairman: I declare the amendment lost. Perhaps I should point out to the committee now that last evening there was a measure of agreement that we should proceed with clause 2 in order of the subclauses. Is it the wish of the committee that we now proceed in that way?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

The Chairman: Shall subclause (a) of clause 2 carry?

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, I wish to say something concerning subclause (a) of clause 2, which reads as follows:

It is hereby declared that

(a) broadcasting undertakings in Canada make use of radio frequencies that are public property and such undertakings constitute a single system, herein referred to as the Canadian broadcasting system, comprising public and private elements;

This subclause recognizes that any company or person operating or owning a television or radio station in fact uses public waves or, as they are called here, frequencies.

No Canadian citizen can operate a radio or t.v. station without the authorization of the Canadian Transport Commission. Why? Precisely because he uses airwaves which are public property. That is something everyone admits.

Secondly, it is obvious that radio wave lengths are limited and that t.v. channels are even more so. This field of radio and television broadcasting is therefore very limited.

First of all, it belongs to the public. That we have seen. Secondly, it is something that has limits.

I wonder why, in revising its Broadcasting Act, the government did not think of giving the council which will deal with broadcasting in the future the right to have a say concerning the prices charged by these radio and television stations. If, for instance, the Bell Telephone Company wants to increase their rates, they have to prove to the Transport and Communications Board that an increase in prices is necessary. Without such a proof, they will have to maintain the current rates.

The same applies to trucking or railway or air transport companies operating in exclusive fields and wishing to increase their rates.

The trucking company must apply to the Transport Board, railroad or airline companies have to do the same because they are involved in exclusive fields.

Telephone, for instance, is an exclusive field. In front of my house or in front of anybody's house, there is only one telephone line. There are not two. The subscriber has no choice. He is forced to use such and such a line. Other companies are prohibited from coming into the territory of another company. Services are exclusive. In order to protect the subscriber and prevent his being exploited by just one company, such companies, when they want to increase their rates and prices, are required to come before the Transport and Communications Board and prove the necessity of the increase applied for.

[English]

The Chairman: Order, please. There has been agreement in the committee that we should now discuss clause 2 in the order of the subclauses. I think that implicit in that agreement is the fact that we must confine our comments to, in this particular case, subclause (a) of clause 2. I am going to ask the hon. member for Lapointe to confine his remarks carefully to the discussion of subclause (a) of clause 2.

• (9:40 p.m.)

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Yes, Mr. Chairman. I did not want to deal with this problem under general provisions, because I felt that it referred precisely to clause 2 (a), and here is why. In clause 2 (a), it is provided that:

> Broadcasting undertakings in Canada make use of radio frequencies that are public property—

Precisely because these frequencies are public property, I suggest that this should normally come under a board, just as transport companies. Such a body would ensure that undertakings operating frequencies that are public property may not increase their rates without seeking approval of the Canadian radio council.

That, Mr. Chairman, is the reason why I thought that this point was relevant to clause 2 (a). I could have brought it up during the general debate, but I wanted to talk about it on subclause (a), thinking that it was more specifically relevant to this provision in the bill.

I think my point is relevant to subclause (a), and my suggestion deals with the fact mentioned in clause 2 (a), that broadcasting companies make use of radio frequencies that are public property.

Because these frequencies are public property, I ask the hon. Secretary of State (Miss LaMarsh) to see to it that the Canadian Radio-Television Council also has control over the tariffs and prices charged these companies which operate on frequencies that are public property.

Mr. Chairman, in the circumstances, I think that my remarks are entirely relevant and in order.

I wonder then whether the Secretary of State could not take that suggestion into consideration and see to it that the new council control at the same time prices and rates of radio stations, since frequencies are of the public field.

Mr. Béchard: Mr. Chairman, I rise on a point of order. We are now dealing with subclause (a) of clause 2, and not of the Canadian radio and television council. When we come to that clause, the hon. member will be able to express his views on that subject, and not make comparisons with the Transport Commission and the Bell Telephone Company of Canada.

[English]

The Chairman: Order, please. I think the point of order raised by the parliamentary secretary is well taken. Since the committee has agreed to consider clause 2 in the order of the subclauses, the Chair must insist on the speakers confining their remarks to the subclause before the committee. Again, I would ask the hon. member for Lapointe to co-operate with the Chair and to confine his remarks to clause 2(a) which is now before the committee for consideration.

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, I am willing to accept that, all the more so because I have just noticed that clause 16 explains the powers of the Canadian Radio Council, and I will be able to come back to that point and then repeat this same argument.

I believe just the same that my remarks dealt not with the orders and definite regulations but with general principles broader than the powers of a council. I was only trying to have admitted as a general principle something that flows normally from clause 2(a). Since the airwaves are in the public domain, I feel that a council must control not only the issuance of licences but also set the rates.

I will come back again to clause 16 since I am forced to do it and I will then express my views on that matter.

[English]

The Chairman: Shall clause 2(a) carry?

Some hon. Members: Carried.

The Chairman: We are now on clause 2, subclause (b) as amended by the committee on broadcasting, films and assistance to the arts.

[Translation]

Mr. Latulippe: Mr. Chairman, I should like to make a few remarks on subclause (c) of clause 2, unless subclause (b) is still being considered.

An hon. Member: We are on subclause (b).

[English]

The Chairman: Perhaps I should advise the hon. member for Compton-Frontenac that the committee is now on clause 2(b) as amended by the committee. Shall clause 2(b) carry?

Some hon. Members: Carried.

The Chairman: We are now on clause 2, subclause (c).

[Translation]

Mr. Latulippe: Mr. Chairman, I have some remarks to make with regard to subclause (c) of clause 2.

I feel that a group of citizens are being penalized for operating closed radio and television circuits through cables. They are merely picking up the programs of broadcasting stations and retransmitting them by closed circuit.

On can read in subclause (c) the following:

All persons licensed to carry on broadcasting undertakings have a responsibility for the public effects of the programs they broadcast—

So, Mr. Chairman, those who operate those closed circuits do not produce programs but, under the terms of subclause (c), they are responsible for the programs that are broadcast.

Therefore, I believe that a change should be made there, and that is why I wish to introduce an amendment to subclause (c).

In my opinion, Mr. Chairman, it is unfair to hold responsible certain groups which merely retransmit programs broadcast by other stations. All these organizations broadcast programs of existing stations. Consequently these people do not produce programs. It should be clearly stipulated that these people should not be held responsible for abuses that might be committed by private or public stations.

Mr. Chairman, I should like to move an amendment to clause 2 which reads as follows:

All persons licensed to carry on broadcasting undertakings have a responsibility for the public effects of the programs they broadcast but the right to freedom of expression, subject only to generally applicable statutes and regulations, is unquestioned;

We should strike out the words:

...subject only to generally applicable statutes and regulations, is unquestioned;

and insert the following:

...the right, for all Canadians, to receive, by any means whatsoever, all the programs broadcast and available, subject only to generally applicable statutes and regulations, is unquestioned;

That is the reason why I come up with this amendment and ask the minister to consider this matter seriously, because it involves people who are not responsible.

Moreover, it should be stipulated that, in such a bill as this one, those citizens are not held responsible.

That is the reason why this amendment must be made in order to protect the citizens who broadcast on the air in closed circuit and who do not give any programming, because they should not be held responsible for the abuses that might be committed by others.

I would therefore ask the hon. minister for her support in this matter. I think it is clear that we should stipulate that we will not hold responsible a certain class of society which operates various systems and which broadcasts programs on a closed circuit.

I thank the hon. minister and I ask her to give serious consideration to this matter. I ask her once again to accept this amendment which, in my opinion, is logical.

[English]

Miss LaMarsh: Mr. Chairman, if my hon. friend is dealing exclusively with a closed circuit which does not pick programs off the air and which operates exclusively within one province, then he should be aware that the government of Canada through this parliament does not, according to the law officers of the crown, have the authority to legislate.

• (9:50 p.m.)

In this bill, and in this clause of the bill in particular, no reference is made to closed circuit broadcasting that is wholly within a province; that is, within the provincial domain. If this is the subject of the amendment then the amendment is completely unnecessary, since the matter is not covered.

If, on the other hand, my hon. friend is talking about C.A.T.V. systems and is hoping to exclude those operators from the bill, then I would have to disagree with him completely. Someone suggested that my hon. friend owns a cable system in his home town, and if he does he would certainly know what he is talking about. However, anyone who for gain operates such a system must be just as responsible as the person who actually broadcasts the program. He is just as responsible in the first instance for what is sent out over the airwaves.

As a result, I would disagree with the purpose of the amendment, in the event that the chairman found it in order. As I say, Mr. Chairman, if it is directed only to closed circuit television there is no need for such amendment, because the Broadcasting Act does not apply to such situation.

[Translation]

Mr. Latulippe: Mr. Chairman, only closed circuits and community antennas are involved.

So, I thank the Secretary of State for giving us her opinion.

[English]

Miss LaMarsh: Mr. Chairman, I think that many of us would be grateful to see a copy of this amendment. I say that because if the translation I heard was correct, it would appear to me there may be some argument whether it is in order.

Mr. McCleave: Mr. Chairman, I wonder whether the amendment could be put. We on this side also suffered the disability of not really understanding its purport.

The Chairman: I wonder whether the committee would agree to let clause 2 (c) stand until a translation of the amendment is available and proceed for the moment with clause 2 (d)?

Mr. McCleave: That is agreeable to this side, Mr. Chairman.

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

The Chairman: Then clause 2 (c) stands and the committee will pass on to clause 2 (d).

Mr. Thompson: Mr. Chairman, if we look at the closing words of clause 2 (c) which introduce the subsequent subclause, we find these words:

—subject only to generally applicable statutes and regulations—

It is my opinion that the bill could be strengthened in a number of areas by adding a few words to several of the clauses, and clause 2 (d) is one of those clauses. These words will give much more authority to the administrators of the C.B.C. and would also make clause 2 (d) much more specific. It would in no way alter the meaning of the wording of clause 2 (d) that is in the bill, but I do believe the wording would be strengthened and make the legislation more specific.

I would therefore move:

That clause 2 (d) be amended by inserting after the words "public controversy" in line 5 the following:

"while ensuring that the most broadly held opinions receive appropriate consideration";

—and adding after the words "other resources" the words:

"while alert and responsive to public preferences in this and other aspects of programming".

Clause 2 (d) would then read as follows, Mr. Chairman.

"The programming provided by the Canadian Broadcasting system should be varied and comprehensive and should provide reasonable opportunity for the expression of conflicting views on matters of public controversy, while ensuring that the most broadly held opinions receive appropriate consideration, and the programming provided by each broadcaster should be of high standard, using predominantly Canadian creative and other resources, while alert and responsive to public preferences in this and other aspects of programming".

I urge the minister to give consideration to these additions to clause 2 (d) because I believe they add strength to the clause and would be most acceptable to those who are responsible for the management and supervision of programming. I also trust that other members of the committee recognize their apparent value to this particular part of the clause.

Through error I find I have insufficient copies of the amendment to pass to the various party representatives; I am sending to the table two copies and I have a third here.

Mr. McCleave: Mr. Chairman, since we do not have sufficient copies to enable us to study the amendment this evening this might be a very good point to call it ten o'clock. We will take a fresh look at the matter tomorrow afternoon.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Is it agreed that this question be held over until the next sitting of the house?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Shall I call it ten o'clock?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: It being ten o'clock shall I rise, report progress and request leave to sit again at the next sitting of the house?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Progress reported.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

A motion to adjourn the house under provisional standing order 39A deemed to have been moved.

PUBLIC SERVICE—PENSIONS OF RETIRED CIVIL SERVANTS—REQUEST FOR RECONSIDERATION OF INCREASE REFUSAL

Hon. R. A. Bell (Carleton): Mr. Speaker, few subjects have been discussed in this parliament so regularly, although recently with an appalling sense of frustration, indeed dismay, as increases in pensions for retired public servants, including the armed forces and the R.C.M.P. Upon no subject has the government been so evasive, so dilatory, so ready to talk out of both sides of its mouth. On the one hand, some members of the government have sought to pay lip service to the needs of justice for these dedicated men and women who gave of their best for Canada. On the other hand, the government has victimized them, required them to be the principal sufferers of the government's austerity program, an austerity program for which the cabinet's own unconquerable urge to extravagance is solely responsible.

Yes, Mr. Speaker, I believe that a selective cutback in expenditure is necessary as a technique of battling inflation; but I emphasize the word "selective".

• (10:00 p.m.)

Why the principal victims of inflation should be made further victims by a refusal of adjustment in pensions passes my understanding. The very people who need the adjustment most are those to whom this government has first denied it. The issue is as simple as that.

No spokesman for the government, Mr. Speaker, has ever answered one simple question. Why have all other countries in the western world been able to adjust the pensions of their retired public servants, without harming their economies or violating any contractual principle? Canada alone has refused to adjust the pensions of its retired public servants.

Mr. Churchill: That is right.

Mr. Bell (Carleton): There was one exception in this country, for which the hon. member for Prince Albert (Mr. Diefenbaker) and the former minister of finance, Hon. Donald M. Fleming, with a little prodding from the member for Carleton, were responsible, namely, the pension adjustment act of 1958. If that could be done in 1958, it can be done in 1968. If Britain, the United States, France, Italy, the Scandinavian countries, Australia, New Zealand and most of our provinces can make adjustments and give justice and equity to their retired public servants why, Mr. Speaker, must our government place only roadblocks in the way of the adoption of a unanimous report of a committee of both houses of this parliament, a report which was in favour of increases? I submit that the government has proved itself guilty of contempt of parliament by ignoring a unanimous joint report. Equally, it is guilty of a gross betrayal of the men and women who gave the best years of their lives in dedicated service to Canada.

The government has refused to say even whether it accepts the principle of a pension increase. Every question that has been asked on this subject has been turned aside with double talk.

There is a fabulous balance, practically and actuarially, in the various superannuation funds. Personally, I should prefer to have increases paid directly from the consolidated revenue fund. I point out that merely by adjusting the out of date interest rate of 4 per cent, which is allowed to the funds, to a rate of 6 per cent, which the government now pays for other borrowed money, the government could pay for the increases many times over. I resent that the government is borrowing today, from public servants present and retired, at 2 per cent less than it is borrowing from insurance companies, trust companies and others from whom it is borrowing.

Sir, is there a real problem, or was the joint committee merely fanning the air on this subject. I wish that the Prime Minister (Mr. Pearson) or the President of the Treasury Board (Mr. Benson) would read the letters that I receive. Is this a problem, sir? Ah, sir, it is desperation for many.

Examine the tables which appear on page 5253 of Hansard for December 11. Does the house realize that 3,719 widows receive less than $30 a month, that 5,741 widows receive less than $40 a month and that 7,412 widows receive less than $50 a month? It is all very well for those who are comfortably fixed to say that these pension figures represent short term services by deceased husbands. The truth is that these statistics represent the hardships which the widows of men who served Canada well are now undergoing, largely because of inflationary trends in the nation.

Rather unfortunately, I thought, the Prime Minister gave renewed hope for retired civil servants; but he mixed that up with pensions for Members of Parliament. Of two issues which are less connected I cannot think. I mention the matter to express the hope that further delay to retired public servants will not be occasioned by this unfortunate juxtaposition of totally incomparable issues.

Sir, the austerity program is no excuse for lack of action, much overdue action, to bring about equality and fair play for those dedicated Canadians of whom I speak. Once again, as I have done so many times in the past, I plead with the government for immediate and effective action.

Mr. Churchill: Hear, hear.

Hon. E. J. Benson (President of the Treasury Board): Mr. Speaker, since the questions of the hon. members for Carleton and Winnipeg North Centre are almost identical, I ask the indulgence of the house to answer both questions at the same time.

Mr. Knowles: Mr. Speaker, I prefer to hear the minister first. I have the right to ask my question separately.

Mr. Benson: If this is the case, if my hon. friend insists, I shall refrain from making any reply at this time.

Mr. Douglas: That is arrogance personified.

Mr. Benson: I shall answer both questions together. They are the same question.

Mr. Douglas: The minister does not know that the questions will be the same.

Mr. Benson: Well, look at them.

Mr. Bell (Carleton): I am entitled to an answer from the minister. The minister's refusal to answer is undoubtedly the most arrogant attitude I have ever seen in this house.

Mr. Benson: Mr. Speaker, these are identical questions and they have been brought up in this house on ten or 12 occasions. I will answer them both at the same time, and if the hon. member says they are not identical I would ask him to read Hansard and see for himself that they are.

Mr. Douglas: That does not mean they will be approached in the same way.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Tardif): Order. There is no rule which obliges the minister to reply if he does not wish to reply. If the minister gives an undertaking to reply to both questions at once it is his prerogative to do so.

PUBLIC SERVICE—PENSIONS OF RETIRED CIVIL SERVANTS

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, I thought I had seen and heard just about everything on the part of this government with respect to its attitude toward retired civil servants, but we have had another chapter tonight.

[Mr. Bell (Carleton).]

The minister's statement that he is prepared to answer both the hon. member for Carleton (Mr. Bell) and myself at the same time is just hogwash and he knows it.

Mr. Benson: I will take six minutes if the house will give them to me.

Mr. Knowles: The minister does not have six minutes in which to answer both questions. He has three minutes to answer each one, if he wishes to do so. His attitude demonstrates that the President of the Treasury Board (Mr. Benson) and the government he represents have no heart, no feeling for those on whose behalf we are speaking when we raise this issue.

We have had a long series of promises and statements which have built up the hopes of these people. There have been promises made on the floor of this house, promises in the committee, promises made privately. Yet the government goes on ignoring these people and putting off action on this important issue. I really did not think there could be another piece of arrogance added to what we have already seen, but we have had it tonight.

Mr. Speaker, the story is a long one. You, sir, must be aware of it because of the nature of the constituency you have the honour to represent. Let me repeat what the hon. member for Carleton (Mr. Bell) has said. A joint committee of both houses recommended unanimously that there should be immediate increases in the pensions of retired civil servants, retired R.C.M.P. personnel and retired armed forces personnel. This recommendation was not only unanimous, it called for action to be taken immediately. We were promised throughout May and June last year that the matter was under active consideration and that something would be done. When, on July 7, I protested vigorously against the house recessing for the summer without anything being done, we were assured action would be taken in the fall. The fall came, and the issue was dragged on and on. Then came the so-called economy drive and the minister's speech on the night of December 7 in which he listed these increases among the things which had to be postponed because of the so-called need for economy.

I do not think this is the reason at all. I think the reason is that there are ministers in this cabinet who simply do not believe in the idea of escalating pensions. They are afraid that if they do so in the case of retired civil servants a precedent will be established which private industry will have to follow.

The day will come, Mr. Speaker, when all pensions will have to be escalated after they have been put into pay, or our whole pension structure will collapse.

The day after the President of Treasury Board announced that these increases would be delayed the hon. member for Carleton and I both put a question to the Prime Minister (Mr. Pearson). It was a simple one: would this matter be reconsidered. The Prime Minister replied to both of us on December 8, expressing the hope that it would soon be possible to reconsider this decision.

• (10:10 p.m.)

A few days later, on December 15, I put the question to the Prime Minister again, and I did so on that occasion just after he had announced that he was going to resign as prime minister of Canada. I asked my question very pointedly, asking him if he would do his best to see to it that this reconsideration would take place before he leaves office as Prime Minister. His answer, as recorded at page 5474 of Hansard for that date, was very clear, and I quote:

—I think I have stated that we hope the situation will be such that we will be able to reconsider sympathetically this very difficult problem. I hope the situation will so improve during the remainder of my period on this side as Prime Minister that this may be possible.

The Prime Minister added a sentence to which, if possible, I take stronger exception than was taken by the hon. member for Carleton (Mr. Bell), but that need not be repeated to muddy the waters. The fact is that the Prime Minister, who is the head of the government, was asked that this matter be dealt with before his term of office ends. That is now only two or three months away, and we know in this parliament what happens when this government stalls. I say that unless we get a firm answer from the President of the Treasury Board tonight that this reconsideration is being given and that something will be done before the Prime Minister retires, then all we have is another case of downright betrayal on the part of the government of the retired civil servants of this country.

When the government betrays the retired civil servants by denying them an increase in their pensions, an increase necessary because of rises in the cost of living and rises in the standard of living, it is saying it does not believe in this principle, and it is torpedoing the effectiveness and the value of our whole pension system. The issue immediately at stake is the need of the retired civil servants themselves. But there is a much broader one that I call on the President of the Treasury Board to recognize. It is that we can no longer expect people to live in retirement ten, 20, or 30 years on fixed pensions.

We have found a way to do many things. We have to find a way to increase pensions of retired civil servants, and I call on the President of the Treasury Board for a decent, responsible, honest answer tonight.

Hon. E. J. Benson (President of Treasury Board): Mr. Speaker, I am very willing to give a decent, honourable and respectable answer. This and the previous question are identical, and I regret that hon. members opposite would not give me the six minutes I requested to answer the question fully.

First of all, Mr. Speaker, I philosophically support a variation in pensions based on changes in the cost of living.

Mr. Bell (Carleton): Does the government?

Mr. Benson: And the government does too. This is the first government in the western world that has recognized this philosophical point of view, as proven by the Canada Pension Plan and supplementary old age pensions.

Second, I would like to point out to my hon. friend, who talks about variation in pensions, that only one or two industries in Canada—and I have been searching for support in this regard—have ever varied pensions from the fixed amount involved, but no labour union in this country has ever done it.

I would also like to say that every person in this country—and here I am concerned with statements as to how much individuals get—whether he be a retired civil servant, a retired steel worker, or a retired worker who swept the streets is entitled, because of the action of this government, to a minimum income when he is entitled to an old age pension of $105 a month attached to the cost of living index. So, the statistics which prove people get $30 a month or $40 a month do not mean very much because this government has instituted a guaranteed annual income for people who are retired and who are entitled to old age pensions, which is moving down to age 65.

I would also like to say that every country in the world has not adjusted its pensions. Further, I would like to tell the hon. member for Carleton (Mr. Bell) that the position in Canada is different from what it was in 1958 when retired people were entitled to a flat rate old age pension of $55 a month. Every retired person in Canada now who is entitled to an old age pension, is entitled to a minimum of $105 a month attached to the cost of living index, something which was brought forward by this government.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Benson: I have been accused of being disrespectful and of being arrogant. With respect to the report of the committee I have indicated that I believe in this on a philosophical basis, but I should like to point out to the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles) that the government is responsible for its actions. Committees cannot dictate to government what the government must do. The government must accept responsibility to the people of Canada for its actions.

I would also like to say that there is no balance actuarially in the old age pension fund. As a matter of fact the previous government of which the hon. member for Carleton (Mr. Bell) was a member let a huge deficit build up in this fund which civil servants complained about across this whole country. This was one of the reasons that government was defeated. We have made up the actuarial deficit in the civil service pension fund.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Tardif): Order—

Mr. Benson: Mr. Speaker, may I have the other three minutes.

Mr. Knowles: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order, may I request that the minister be given the other three minutes on the condition that he answer the question which both of us asked; the question was: is the matter closed or is it still under consideration?

Mr. Benson: Mr. Speaker, if I have the unanimous consent which my arrogant friends opposite refused to give earlier I will carry on.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Tardif): Order, please. The hon. President of the Treasury Board would have to have unanimous consent. I doubt that a condition should be imposed upon him concerning what he should say. If the house gives unanimous consent, I think he should have freedom in answering.

Mr. Knowles: Mr. Speaker, I will give my consent and hope that he will answer.

[Mr. Benson.]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Tardif): Does the hon. member have the unanimous consent of the house to continue?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Benson: It is very nice to know that hon. members opposite are not now as arrogant as they were five minutes ago in respect of my answering their questions. The hon. member for Carleton said that the government fans the air. I assure everyone in this house that no one fans the air on this matter more than he does in trying to justify the position taken by his government when the retired people of this country had $55 a month guaranteed income and now have $105 a month.

Mr. Churchill: What did they get before we came in? You are the six buck boys.

Mr. Benson: We may have been the six buck boys when we went from $45 to $51, but I would like to remind my hon. friend from Winnipeg South Centre (Mr. Churchill) that since we became a government in 1963 we have gone from $65 to $105 guaranteed income for the retired people of Canada.

Mr. Churchill: You put in the means test.

Mr. Benson: I would simply like to say in respect to the matter of promises which has been raised by the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles), for whom I have the greatest respect, that I do not think he can ever find in anything I have said in this house any promises of the government. In respect of the specific question he wishes to have answered I should like to say that so long as I am a member of this government this question will never be out of mind and will be continuously under consideration because I philosophically believe—which I am not sure my hon. friend does—that pensions in Canada should be attached to an index so that the income of retired people does not decrease because of any increase in the cost of living. I philosophically believe in this, and I am not sure that the member for Carleton would agree with me.

Mr. Bell (Carleton): You cannot eat philosophy.

Mr. Benson: Would my hon. friend admit he agrees that pension funds should be attached to the cost of living or the wage index?

Mr. Knowles: To the wage index, yes.

Mr. Bell (Carleton): I have advocated that for years.

Mr. Benson: I would simply like to assure my hon. friends from Winnipeg North Centre and Carleton—and I hope the hon. member for Carleton can carry the Tory party on this—that I believe in this philosophically and the question will never be dropped so long as I am a member of this government.

Mr. Knowles: Still no answer.

• (10:20 p.m.)

[Translation]

HEALTH AND WELFARE—SUGGESTED INITIATION OF CAMPAIGN AGAINST ALCOHOLISM

Mr. Gérard Laprise (Chapleau): Mr. Speaker, on November 20 last I put the following question to the Prime Minister (Mr. Pearson):

Could he tell the house whether the government intends to finance a publicity campaign from the proceeds of liquor taxes to inform the public of the dangers of alcoholism?

Mr. Speaker, I did not obtain an answer to my question then, because it was ruled out of order. This is why I have asked to discuss it at ten o'clock and, this evening, I hope that I will obtain a satisfactory answer from the representative of the minister, because I think that every member of the house is aware of the harmful effects of alcoholism in Canada.

In 1955, the number of alcoholics in Canada was estimated at approximately 158,000, and according to the figures released for 1965, their number has reached 350,000. This points to an alarming outbreak of alcoholism which has disastrous effects for Canada, first through a lost of efficiency at work and a decrease in the professional output of alcoholics and a general laxity in social conduct.

We also know that excessive drinking largely contributes to traffic accidents resulting every year in many deaths and disabilities. We are aware that it causes considerable loss of time, and what affects everybody, I believe, both alcoholics and abstainers, is the increase in insurance for the protection of motorists. This increase affects everyone and we are indirectly victims of alcoholism in Canada.

On the other hand, we also know that alcoholism brings on all kinds of illnesses filling up our hospitals and our sanatoriums. We also know that, in a large measure, our jails are filled with alcoholic subjects.

So, Mr. Speaker, for all these reasons, together with the president general of the Association Lacordaire du Canada, I am asking the government to help the groups and organizations fighting alcoholism in Canada.

We know that in 1965 revenue from the sale of alcoholic beverages yielded $281 million to the federal government, and we also know that the same year the federal government had not spent a single cent to fight alcoholism or inform the people on the problems of alcoholism in Canada.

At this stage, I would now like to quote the remarks made by Dr. Charland, president of the Association Lacordaire du Canada, during the national anti-alcoholism week held from November 12 to 18, 1967, as reported in the newspapers:

The time has come for our governments, federal as well as provincial, to ponder the seriousness of the problem of alcoholism in order to draw up a real balance-sheet, that is to say establish clearly what the sale of alcoholic beverages brings in taxes, etc. and, on the other hand, what it costs in medical care, social benefits, loss of time, energy, health, etc. The time has come also for the governments to dip into the millions of dollars they get from the sale of alcoholic beverages to rectify and offset through objective information the noisy campaign now under way to sell those beverages, without neglecting at the same time to bring that advertising back within the limits of common sense and the common good.

Mr. Chairman, these remarks made by Dr. Charland are sensible and I think the government should draw from revenues derived from the sale of alcoholic beverages sums which could be made available to organizations which, everywhere in Canada, are fighting against alcoholism and informing the people on the ill effects of alcohol.

I think that the government should consider favourably representations made by associations, such as Lacordaire and others, requesting grants to help them fight more effectively the harmful results of alcoholism and have people better informed against the use of alcoholic beverages.

We know that distillers and brewers take advantage of advertising to show the bright side of drinking, but we must also show the dark side of the picture so that the public will be well informed.

Therefore, I hope that the government and the officials of the Department of National Health and Welfare will give favourable consideration to this request made by our anti-alcoholic associations.

Proceedings on Adjournment Motion

[English]

Mrs. Margaret Rideout (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, the Department of National Health and Welfare has no specific program on this subject but it has assisted provinces in a variety of ways for many years. This assistance has included grants for services, for training of personnel and for research studies related to the problem of alcoholism. In addition to this support, and in keeping with the modern attitude which considers alcoholism as a disease and a personality defect, the mental health division has given the subject continuing attention over the years in the following ways:

(a) Public education. The division has produced a ten page pamphlet entitled "Alcoholism", in both English and French. This pamphlet has been issued for use by the provinces through the health educator and has had rather wide distribution.

(b) A film, "Profile of a Problem Drinker", sponsored by the Ontario department of health was produced a few years ago through mental health grant funds and professional co-ordination of the mental health division.

(c) A survey, "Government Programs on Alcoholism", a 90-page study of the activities in some foreign countries, sponsored by the mental health division and prepared by an international authority, the late Dr. E. M. Jellinek.

Motion agreed to and the house adjourned at 10.30 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Wednesday, January 24, 1968

The house met at 2.30 p.m.

PRIVILEGE

MR. HAIDASZ—ALLEGED INACCURACY OF STATEMENT IN DEBATE

Mr. Stanley Haidasz (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): Mr. Speaker, yesterday the hon. member for Peace River (Mr. Baldwin) referred to me as having proposed a resolution at the western Liberal conference in Winnipeg on a certain issue. As I was not present in Winnipeg at that time, he referred to me in error.

PENITENTIARIES

ESTABLISHMENT OF JOINT COMMITTEE

On the order: Government notices of motion:

January 22, 1968—The Solicitor General—That a joint committee of the Senate and House of Commons be appointed to consider the state of penitentiaries under the control of the government of Canada and the plans of the government in relation thereto with powers to report from time to time its observations and opinions thereon; send for persons, papers and records; adjourn from place to place; sit during sittings of the house; and print from day to day such papers and evidence as may be ordered by the committee, and that standing order 66 be suspended in relation thereto;

That 15 members of the House of Commons, to be designated at a later date, act on behalf of the house as members of the said committee; and

That a message be sent to the Senate requesting that house to unite with this house for the above purpose, and to select, if the Senate deem advisable, some of their members to act on the proposed joint committee.

Mr. Speaker: Pursuant to section 2 of standing order 21 this government notice of motion stands transferred to and ordered for consideration under government orders at the next sitting of the house.

QUESTIONS

(Questions answered orally are indicated by an asterisk.)

MANITOBA—UNIDENTIFIED FLYING OBJECTS

Question No. 627—Mr. Schreyer:

1. With reference to the reported sightings of unidentified flying objects in eastern Manitoba during the months of May and June 1967, how many such reports were received by various departments of the government of Canada and by the Department of National Defence in particular?

2. How many of these reported or alleged sightings were investigated?

3. Will the reports and findings of these investigations be made public?

4. What are the reasons for not making public any such reports now in the possession of the Department of National Defence?

Hon. Judy V. LaMarsh (Secretary of State): I am informed by the departments of National Defence and Solicitor General as follows: 1. Four by the Department of National Defence. One by the Department of the Solicitor General.

2. Two; the other reports did not contain sufficient information and detail to warrant further investigation.

3 and 4. The actual reports received by the Department of National Defence have not been made public as some observers did not wish their names made public; and, in attempting to analyse reports, investigators have commented on the likely accuracy of observations. The description of sightings and the results of investigations are not classified information, however, any persons who send reports to the department do so on their own volition and are not asked to suppress the release of information to any other person or persons. The report in 2 above refers to a sighting on 20 May 67 by a person in the Falcon Lake area which was widely publicized in the press. The Department of National Defence investigation, which has now been completed, could not explain the sighting.

As a result of recent discussions between the Department of National Defence and the National Research Council, reports on sightings received through Canadian armed forces channels will be passed in future to the National Research Council to determine whether there are scientific reasons for further investigation.

Questions

UNIVERSITY OF MANITOBA RESEARCH COSTS

Question No. 648—Mr. Schreyer:

1. Has the federal department of agriculture or any other department or agency of the federal government made any grants to the University of Manitoba for the purpose of research and measurement of radiation emitted by microwave, telecommunication facilities and the effects thereof on livestock and crops?

2. If so, what were the amounts of such grants?

Hon. Judy V. LaMarsh (Secretary of State): I am informed by several departments and agencies as follows: 1. No.

2. Not applicable.

MAINTENANCE COSTS IN PENAL INSTITUTIONS

Question No. 666—Mr. Orlikow:

What was the average cost of maintaining one inmate during the years 1964, 1965 and 1966 in (a) federal institutions of all types (b) maximum security institutions (c) minimum security institutions, and (d) farm and work camps?

Hon. L. T. Pennell (Solicitor General): The average cost of maintaining one inmate during the fiscal years 1964-65, 1965-66 and 1966-67 is as follows:

Type of institution	1964-65	1965-66	1966-67
All types	$3,074.51	$3,430.11	$4,900.76
Maximum	2,964.67	3,172.49	4,334.25
Medium	3,464.15	3,545.01	5,538.50
Minimum	3,019.92	3,307.05	3,776.43
Work Camps	2,595.78	2,832.97	3,674.58

Note: The statistics with reference to farm camps are not available since the operation and maintenance costs of these camps are absorbed in the expenditures of the parent institution.

CANADA PENSION PLAN—EMPLOYER OVERPAYMENTS

Questions No. 747—Mr. Hales:

1. What is the amount of the employers' overpayment to the Canada pension plan since the inception of the plan?

2. How many employers are involved?

3. What arrangements are being made to have this overpayment returned to the employers?

4. How much money was collected in overpayment by employees since the Canada pension plan was started?

5. How many employees were involved?

6. How much money was returned to the employees?

[Miss LaMarsh.]

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of National Revenue): 1. Where an employer makes a contribution on behalf of his employee that is in excess of the amount required to be contributed under the provisions of the Canada Pension Plan, he may deduct the amount of such overpayment from subsequent remittances or apply for a refund of such amount which will be made if in accordance with the provisions of the plan.

2. No information is available of the number of or amounts of such overpayments.

3. Arrangements as set out above in Parts 1 and 2 have been made.

4. Overpayments are calculated annually on the basis of applications made by employees when filing their income tax returns. Refunds for the 1966 year based on applications reviewed now total approximately $8,-800,000.

5. 813,652 at December 1, 1967.

6. $8,804,302.58 at December 1, 1967.

CANADA PENSION PLAN PAY-ROLL DEDUCTIONS

Question No. 815—Mr. Howe (Wellington-Huron):

1. Is there to be an increase in pay-roll deductions for the Canada Pension Plan in the near future?

2. If there is such an increase, how much is it and why is it being applied?

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of National Revenue): 1. Commencing January 1, 1968, the Canada Pension Plan contributions for employees who earn more than $5,000 salaries or wages have been increased.

2. The maximum Canada Pension Plan contributions for 1968 by an employee earning $5,100 or more has been increased from $79.20 to $81. This increase in contributions is due to a rise in the pension index which is calculated in accordance with a formula provided for in the act to adjust contributions in relation to the rise in the consumer price index.

FEED GRAIN SHIPMENTS TO PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND

Question No. 831—Mr. MacLean (Queens):

1. What is the total tonnage of Western feed grain shipped to Prince Edward Island for each of the last ten years, for which figures are available?

2. What was the total subsidy paid on these amounts for each of the years specified?

Hon. Judy V. LaMarsh (Secretary of State): I am informed by the Department of Agriculture as follows: Western feed grains shipped to Prince Edward Island, fiscal years 1957-58 to 1966-67:

Year	Tons	Feed freight assistance
		$
1957-58	21,012	306,775
1958-59	25,715	387,246
1959-60	31,723	549,221
1960-61	28,332	433,867
1961-62	27,530	386,480
1962-63	18,503	265,282
1963-64	23,558	336,060
1964-65	28,073	409,066
1965-66	32,203	471,612
1966-67	32,116	505,762

INCOME TAX DEDUCTIONS FOR DONATIONS TO CHARITABLE ORGANIZATIONS

Question No. 833—Mr. Ballard:

In order that charitable organizations be registered with the Minister so that donation receipts to qualify as deductions from income for income tax purposes (a) is it a requirement that receipts issued after January 1, 1967, bear the registration number to qualify for deduction (b) what was the first date on which the Department was able to process applications received (c) has there been any undue delay in issuing certificates to applicants (d) will the Minister give consideration to accepting receipts without serial number issued by organizations whose application was received and approved after date shown on receipt (e) has an application been received from the Janz Brothers Gospel Association (of Calgary) and has approval been given?

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of National Revenue): (a) Yes; (b) December 5th, 1966; (c) No; (d) No, unless in any particular case the circumstances at the time the 1967 returns are required to be filed warrant such consideration; (e) This information is confidential and cannot be divulged.

ROYAL CANADIAN NAVY ESTABLISHMENT STRENGTHS

Question No. 840—Mr. Lambert:

1. What are the establishment strengths in (a) officers, and (b) N.C.O.'s and ratings of each of the ships of the R.C.N. classified as on active duty, e.g., aircraft carrier, supply ship, destroyer escorts, submarines?

2. What was the actual strength of each such ship as of November 30, 1967?

Hon. Léo Cadieux (Minister of National Defence): It is not departmental policy to release individual unit strengths. However, as of 30 November 1967 there were 381 officers and 5,129 N.C.O.'s and men serving in one aircraft carrier, one supply ship, one fleet support ship, 19 destroyer escorts and two submarines. The total establishment for these ships is 325 officers and 5,158 N.C.O.'s and men.

QUEBEC—INDUSTRIAL DEVELOPMENT BANK INVESTMENTS

Question No. 845—Mr. Isabelle:

1. How much has the Industrial Development Bank invested in the Province of Quebec in the last five years?

2. To what industries has it made loans?

3. What are the sums involved and who are the presidents of each borrowing company?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Minister of Finance): 1. Loan approvals—province of Quebec (thousands of dollars) year ending September 30th

		Number
1967	$20,780	404
1966	31,935	450
1965	25,479	485
1964	24,994	440
1963	22,535	396

2. The Annual Report of the Industrial Development Bank for the year ended September 30, 1967 contains information regarding the number and amount of loans by size, by province and by type of business. Information on the classification of loans by industry by province is not published.

3. It has not been the practice nor is it considered appropriate for the I.D.B. to make information publicly available relating to the affairs of a particular applicant or borrower.

PAYMENTS UNDER FISHING VESSEL ASSISTANCE PROGRAM

Question No. 848—Mr. Tucker:

1. What was the total amount paid by the Department of Fisheries under the Fishing Vessel Assistance Programme to each of the Atlantic Provinces and Quebec for the years ending March 31, 1960, 1961, 1962, 1963, 1964, 1965, 1966 and 1967?

2. What was the amount paid to each of the Atlantic Provinces since April 1, 1967, and what is the estimated amount to become due between now and March 31, 1968?

3. What was the amount paid to the Province of Quebec since April 1, 1967, and what is the estimated amount to become due between now and March 31, 1968?

Hon. H.-J. Robichaud (Minister of Fisheries):

1.

	Newfoundland	Nova Scotia	New Brunswick	Prince Edward Island	Quebec
1959-60	$ 34,013.10	$ 136,174.50	$110,335.50	$ 28,937.70	$165,051.15
1960-61	19,169.70	117,682.95	36,832.95	49,226.10	122,976.15
1961-62	66,157.00	97,158.70	110,083.95	28,731.30	—
1962-63	36,397.50	167,659.50	121,775.25	—	174,167.75
1963-64	42,850.00	150,302.50	80,285.00	—	226,562.50
1964-65	247,422.30	298,516.00	75,233.20	2,828.00	176,000.50
1965-66	119,008.44	1,183,700.07	296,729.74	6,733.16	165,044.10
1966-67	302,744.36	1,559,903.13	59,793.82	14,809.33	212,749.36
2 and 3.
Paid April 1 to Dec. 31/67	624,456.20	2,189,197.01	705,032.40	116,749.53	349,111.70
Estimated amt. to become due Jan. 1 to March 31/68	387,327.81	1,109,386.92	356,904.70	36,063.25	185,000.00

CANADIAN DONATIONS TO ENGLAND

Question No. 865—Mr. Grégoire:

1. What amounts of money have been given to England by Canada since 1938?

2. In what year was each of these amounts given?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Minister of Finance): 1 and 2. The Public Accounts of Canada for the years 1943-4 to 1945-6 show expenditure items under the War Appropriation (United Kingdom Financing) Act of 1942 and the War Appropriation (UN Mutual Aid) Act of 1943. These expendiutres covered the supply to the United Kingdom of Canadian war supplies for use by the United Kingdom and other allied powers. These expenditures are therefore included in the answer to question No. 864.

SASKATCHEWAN—INDUSTRIAL DEVELOPMENT BANK LOANS

Question No. 869—Mr. Southam:

1. How much money has the Industrial Development Bank loaned in the Province of Saskatchewan in the years 1963, 1964, 1965, 1966 and to November 1, 1967?

2. To what industries were these loans made and in what amounts?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Minister of Finance):

1. Loan approvals—province of Saskatchewan (thousands of dollars)
year ending September 30th

		Number
1963	$2,404	79
1964	3,801	122
1965	4,742	153
1966	6,447	150
1967	4,962	111

[Mr. Robichaud.]

2. The Annual Report of the Industrial Development Bank for the year ended September 30, 1967 contains information regarding the number and amount of loans by size, by province and by type of business. Information on the classification of loans by industries by province is not published.

IMPLEMENTATION OF CANADA LABOUR CODE

Question No. 875—Mr. Caouette:

1. In connection with what Crown corporations, did the Minister of Labour postpone the application of the Canada Labour Code?

2. In connection with these exempted corporations, when did or when will the Minister make the Canada Labour Code applicable?

3. What Crown corporations or Crown corporation employees were excluded from the provisions of Part I of the Industrial Relations and Disputes Investigation Act?

Mr. B. S. Mackasey (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Labour): 1. (a) By deferment order issued under Section 51: Canadian National Railways for North Sydney Longshoremen, Eldorado Aviation Limited; (b) by suspension order issued under Section 51: Canadian National Railway Company—Newfoundland Steamship Service (Newfoundland Shipping Hours of Work Order); Canadian National Railway Company and Canadian National Steamship Company Limited (Navigation and Shipping Hours of Work Order); Northern Transportation Company Limited.

Questions

2. Name	Part I of code effective on
Canadian National Railways for North Sydney longshoremen	April 2, 1967
Eldorado Aviation Limited	January 1, 1968
Canadian National Railway Company—Newfoundland Steamship Service	January 1, 1974*
Canadian National Railway Company and Canadian National Steamship Co. Ltd.	January 1, 1969
Northern Transportation Co. Ltd.	January 1, 1969

*Under P.C. 1967-2260, November 30, 1967, pursuant to Section 51 (2) of the Code, phased from January 1, 1968 until full implementation at January 1, 1974.

3. The Canadian Livestock Feed Board and The National Research Council.

*CONSERVERIE SAINT-DENIS-SUR-RICHELIEU—DESTRUCTION OF BUTTER

Question No. 885—Mr. Ricard:

Was any loss sustained by the federal government as a result of the fire which on November 5, 1965, destroyed large quantities of butter stored at the Conserverie Saint-Denis-sur-Richelieu and, if so, what was the amount?

Mr. Bruce S. Beer (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, starred question 885 refers to a fire in 1965. The answer to the question is as follows. A fire occurred at the cold storage warehouse of the St. Denis Canning Company, St. Denis sur Richelieu, Quebec, on November 5, 1963, and not in 1965. A loss of $1,885,861.99, calculated at market value of the product, was suffered by the Agricultural Stabilization Board as a result of this fire.

HOMES FOR INDIANS IN MACKENZIE CONSTITUENCY

Question No. 886—Mr. Korchinski:

1. What were the localities where homes were constructed for Indians in the Constituency of Mackenzie during 1967?

2. How many homes were constructed in each location?

3. In what localities will the homes be constructed in 1968, and how many will be constructed in each location?

4. How many homes were constructed in Saskatchewan during 1967?

5. How many homes will be constructed in 1968?

Hon. Arthur Laing (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): 1, 2 and 3. The following table shows the number of homes which the department proposes to build on the reserves located in the constituency of Mackenzie during the fiscal years 1967-68 and 1968-69:

Reserve	Proposed Number of Homes 1967-68	1968-69
Southend No. 200	6	6
Pelican Narrows No. 184B	5	4
Carrot River No. 29A	5	3
Shoal Lake No. 28A	—	5
Nut Lake No. 90	10	8
Fishing Lake No. 89	5	3
The Key No. 65	5	4
Keeseekoose No. 66	10	7
Total	46	40

4. During the fiscal year 1967-68 it is proposed to construct 429 houses in Saskatchewan.

5. During the fiscal year 1968-69 it is proposed to construct 386 houses in Saskatchewan.

EXPENDITURES BY ETHNIC PRESS SECTION OF DEPARTMENT

Question No. 890—Mr. Starr:

1. What was the expenditure in respect of the Ethnic Press Section of the Department of the Secretary of State for 1967-68?

2. What is the estimated expenditure for the Ethnic Press Section for 1968-69? Has it been reduced recently?

3. How many persons are on the staff of the Ethnic Press Section?

4. What are the staff requirements for 1968-69? Has there been a reduction in staff requirements?

5. Is there an incumbent in the position of head of the section? If so, what is the name of the head of the section? If not, how long has the position been vacant?

6. What is the present salary of the head of the section? Is any change contemplated in the salary?

Questions

7. What is the number of publications analysts according to the establishment for 1967-68? For 1968-69?

8. How many persons have been promoted in this section in the past four years?

9. Are any further reductions in staff anticipated? For what reason?

Hon. Judy V. LaMarsh (Secretary of State): 1. Within the citizenship branch, responsibility for reading and analysing publications in languages other than French or English was assigned to the publications and information division until 1966. This division had until then, an ethnic press section. In that year, this responsibility was transferred to the newly formed immigrant integration division and integrated with its multi-ethnic activities section. At the same time, related documentation functions were transferred to the research and documentation division. Hence there has not been an ethnic press section in the citizenship branch since 1966.

By the creation of this new division and its multi-ethnic-activities section, the branch increased its ability to keep informed about the needs of ethnic groups and to meet those needs.

The present establishment of the division is 10 positions, compared with eight in 1966-67, and further increases will be authorized as soon as positions become available.

Meanwhile, the analysis of non-French, non-English language publications is performed through service contracts; thus freeing the full-time staff for direct services to ethnic organizations.

The expenditures of the immigrant integration division are expected to reach $690,000. this year and $820,000. next year.

In view of the answer to question 1:

2. Not applicable.

3. Not applicable.

4. Not applicable.

5. Not applicable.

6. Not applicable.

7. Not applicable.

8. Effective October 1, 1965, the publications analysts positions were reclassified to administrative services positions. As a result of this reclassification, the incumbent in each position affected received an increase.

9. Not applicable.

[Mr. Starr.]

QUESTION PASSED AS ORDER FOR RETURN

INDUSTRIAL DEVELOPMENT BANK LOANS

Question No. 776—Mr. Caouette:

1. For each year since its inception, how much has the Industrial Development Bank loaned in each of the provinces of Canada?

2. How many applications for loans has the bank received, by provinces, each year since its inception?

Return tabled.

[Translation]

MOTIONS FOR PAPERS

Mr. Albert Béchard (Parliamentary Secretary to Secretary of State): Mr. Speaker, notice of motion for the production of papers No. 45 is acceptable to the government.

Would Your Honour be kind enough to call notice of motion No. 40?

Mr. Speaker, I ask that the remaining notices of motions be allowed to stand.

[English]

NEWFOUNDLAND—DAMAGE TO COD TRAPS

Motion No. 45—Mr. Tucker:

That an Order of the House do issue for a copy of all correspondence exchanged between the Minister of Fisheries and the owners of trawlers in Newfoundland involved in damaging cod traps or other net gear owned by inshore fishermen.

Motion agreed to.

CORRESPONDENCE WITH COL. CHURCHILL ON NORTHUMBERLAND CAUSEWAY

Motion No. 40—Mr. McQuaid:

That an humble Address be presented to His Excellency praying that he will cause to be laid before this House a copy of all documents, correspondence or communications relating to the Northumberland Causeway and exchanged between Colonel Edward Churchill, the Government of Prince Edward Island or the Government of Canada or any department, commission or agency of either of the said Governments.

Hon. G. J. McIlraith (Minister of Public Works): Mr. Speaker, this motion calls for the production of correspondence between an employee of the Department of Public Works and the government of Prince Edward Island, and between that employee and the government of Canada, his employer. It has never been the practice to produce papers passing between a departmental employee and his own departmental officials or other officials of the government, and this part of the motion is objectionable. There is no objection, of course, to producing any correspondence or papers which pass between a public works employee and the provincial government of Prince Edward Island, and these can be produced subject to the reservation that we would ask the permission of the province to publish them. I would be glad to agree to this part of the motion, subject to that reservation.

Mr. Speaker: Subject to the reservation expressed by the minister is it the pleasure of the house that notice of motion No. 40 be deemed to be adopted?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

HEALTH AND WELFARE

MEDICARE—REQUEST FOR ANNOUNCEMENT FOLLOWING PROVINCIAL REPRESENTATIONS

On the orders of the day:

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): I should like to direct a question to the Acting Prime Minister. In view of the statement by the Prime Minister last week indicating that the government was considering representations made by the provinces on the subject of medical health services, and in view of the importance, to the country as a whole, of the government's decision on this matter, and particularly in view of its importance to provincial governments which are now trying to assemble their budgets for the coming fiscal year, for presentation to the legislatures, can the acting Prime Minister today tell the house when the government will announce the results of the review following the representations made by provincial governments on this subject?

Hon. Paul Martin (Acting Prime Minister): The Prime Minister, as the hon. gentleman knows, continues to be ill. I expect him back tomorrow. This question was asked yesterday, and I replied to it.

MEDICARE—COST TO BRITISH COLUMBIA—REQUEST FOR ANSWER TO QUESTION

On the orders of the day:

Hon. E. D. Fulton (Kamloops): Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask the Secretary of State whether she would be good enough to look at question 727 on the order paper and do what she can to see that an answer is provided in the immediate future. This question has been on the order paper for over two months and I believe the information must be in the possession of the government without requiring any great research. I also make this request because I have another question which will be appearing on the order paper very soon, and I should like to preserve my record of having only one question on the order paper at a time.

Hon. Judy V. LaMarsh (Secretary of State): Mr. Speaker, I do not know about this particular question, although I can see certain difficulties in obtaining an answer in the next few days. I should like to say that those who work in the parliamentary returns branch advise me that some 90.9 per cent of all the questions asked to date have been answered. I shall be very happy to have this question answered as quickly as I can.

MEDICARE—INQUIRY AS TO PORTABILITY

On the orders of the day:

Mr. L. M. Brand (Saskatoon): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Acting Prime Minister. Yesterday, with reference to the medicare measure the Acting Prime Minister said it is permissive legislation and that its implementation is a matter for the provinces. Would he tell the house whether or not this indicates abandonment of the requirement in the medical care bill that the medical care plan should be portable from province to province?

Hon. Paul Martin (Acting Prime Minister): I do not think so.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Martin (Essex East): It would perhaps be more precise to say "of course not".

Mr. Brand: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. I wonder whether the Acting Prime Minister could explain to the house how, unless all the provinces are going to be in this scheme, it will be portable from province to province.

NATIONAL DEFENCE

EMERGENCY LANDING FIELDS USED IN STRATEGIC AIR COMMAND OVERFLIGHTS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Burnaby-Coquitlam): May I direct a question to the Minister of National Defence regarding the crashing of a United States plane near Thule, Greenland. The aircraft was carrying four thermonuclear bombs, each with an explosive equivalent of one million tons of T.N.T. I want to ask the minister whether Resolute Bay or any other northern Canadian base is being used as an emergency landing field for planes of the strategic air command and, if so, what measures is the government taking to ensure the safety of Canadian territory and territorial waters in the event of a similar accident.

Hon. Leo Cadieux (Minister of National Defence): I think, first of all, I should say that there is an agreement between the governments of Canada and the United States for the overflight of planes from strategic air command.

There is no arrangement for landing. Of course if there were an emergency we would allow these planes to land. In the particular case we are concerned with, and the hypothetical case that something similar to this would happen in Canada, I am sure we have trained personnel who could intervene and act in accordance with the necessary precautions that would have to be taken in such a case.

Mr. Douglas: As a supplementary question may I ask the minister whether any arrangements have been made with the government of the United States regarding the state of nuclear bombs in these aircraft when they fly over Canadian territory, and what precautions would be applicable in the event of a forced landing at a Canadian emergency base?

Mr. Cadieux (Terrebonne): I assume, Mr. Speaker, and I say "assume" because I have not gone into that particular aspect of the question, we would find ourselves in the same situation as they now face in Thule, that the weapons would be de-armed and defused, and therefore the danger of an explosion would not really exist.

Mr. Douglas: What about the danger from the dispersal of toxic fissionable material which could also have a serious effect on Canadian lives and territory?

Mr. Cadieux (Terrebonne): With due respect I would again call this a hypothetical question. In a case like that we would act according to the normal procedures, and people are trained how to act in such circumstances.

Mr. Andrew Brewin (Greenwood): As a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker, may I ask the minister whether the Canadian government is in any way in consultation with the government of Denmark which, I understand, is carefully looking into the problem of the risk involved in the incident mentioned by my leader?

Mr. Cadieux (Terrebonne): My understanding of the basic difference between Denmark and Canada is that Denmark does not have the arrangement with the United States government that the Canadian government has.

[Translation]

AGRICULTURE

MILK—PRODUCTION PROGRAM FOR 1968

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Gérard Laprise (Chapleau): Mr. Speaker, I realize that the Minister of Agriculture has just left, so I shall address my question to his parliamentary secretary.

Could the parliamentary secretary to the Minister of Agriculture tell us whether talks have been held with representatives of the Quebec and Ontario industrial milk producers to prepare the next subsidy program for industrial milk producers in 1968?

[English]

Mr. Bruce S. Beer (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, the minister, who was in the house a minute ago, may be back shortly and I will bring this question to his attention.

GREENHOUSE PRODUCTS—REQUEST FOR PROTECTION AGAINST LOW COST IMPORTS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. H. W. Danforth (Kent (Ont.)): Mr. Speaker, I would have liked to address my question to the Minister of Agriculture but he is not in the house at the present moment. However, because of its importance perhaps I can address it to the minister's parliamentary secretary in the hope we may have an answer tomorrow.

An hon. Member: The minister is away campaigning.

Mr. Danforth: In view of the fact that Ontario greenhouse produce will begin entering our markets within a week, can the government indicate its decision regarding the recent representations made by this industry in regard to protection against low cost imports?

Mr. Bruce S. Beer (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, I should like to take the question as notice.

TRANSPORT

BELL TELEPHONE COMPANY—DECISION BY COMMISSION TO MAINTAIN RATES

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Howard Johnston (Okanagan-Revelstoke): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a question to the Minister of Transport. In view of the decision by the transport commission not to ask the Bell Telephone Company to reduce its rates in spite of its increased profits, will the minister's department be instituting a review of profits and rates in public utilities with a view to more iron clad directives in the future?

Hon. Paul Hellyer (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I do not think I would wish to comment on this decision until I have had a chance to read it and the reasons given for it.

Mr. Thomas M. Bell (Saint John-Albert): As a supplementary question, does the minister feel action is necessary on behalf of the government in view of the fact that this appears to be a violation—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Bell (Saint John-Albert): —of the formula—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The question being asked by the hon. member is argumentative.

Mr. Bell (Saint John-Albert): To rephrase my question, Mr. Speaker, will the minister make an announcement in the house about this matter, since it has a direct bearing on the Bell Telephone bill and the permissive earnings formula now being considered in committee?

Mr. Hellyer: Mr. Speaker, I will read the decision and the reasons for it as quickly as I can, and then decide whether a statement would be warranted.

Mr. David Lewis (York South): As a further supplementary question, in view of the fact that this situation has been repeated for a number of years, when he has read the decision would the minister consider using the applicable section of the act and bring this matter to the governor in council for review and action immediately?

Mr. Hellyer: Mr. Speaker, as I said, I would not want to prejudge what view I might have after reading the decision of the commission and its reasons for the decision it has taken.

Inquiries of the Ministry

ALLEGED IRREGULARITY IN RAIL LINE ABANDONMENT—REPLY BY MINISTER

On the orders of the day:

Hon. Paul Hellyer (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I should like to reply to the question asked yesterday of my parliamentary secretary by the hon. member for Brandon-Souris. The hon. member asked whether I was aware that the Canadian Transport Commission had given notice of a rail line abandonment hearing under old order 123994, contrary to the minister's assurance given to the house on December 18 last to the effect that any further hearings would be free of any previous orders or preconceptions. May I say in reply that I have checked with the Canadian Transport Commission and am assured that there has been no notice given of any rail line abandonment hearing under order 123994.

The hon. member may be referring to the costing hearings before the railway transport committee, but I have been assured that there has been no abandonment under this order.

STARVATION OF PONIES ON SABLE ISLAND

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Robert McCleave (Halifax): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Transport, the answer to which will help him sharpen up and make more green his image as a humanitarian. Would he look into the report on the Max Ferguson show that the ponies on Sable island are starving because of the recent severe winter storms?

Hon. Paul Hellyer (Minister of Transport): Yes, Mr. Speaker, I will because I think this has happened once or twice before, and when it happened food has been flown in.

CANADIAN CONSTITUTION

INQUIRY AS TO FURTHER CORRESPONDENCE ON PROPOSED CONFERENCE

On the orders of the day:

Hon. R. A. Bell (Carleton): Mr. Speaker, may I direct this question to the Acting Prime Minister. On December 15, in reply to a question of mine, the Prime Minister indicated that he would seek the consent of the provinces to lay on the table the correspondence with the provinces relating to the forthcoming dominion-provincial conference and would do so with a view to laying it on the table before the recess. Would the Acting Prime Minister make inquiries concerning whether those consents have been secured and whether the correspondence can now be laid on the table? If all the consents have not been secured, would the Acting Prime Minister arrange to lay on the table the correspondence for which consents have been secured.

Hon. Paul Martin (Acting Prime Minister): I will make these inquiries. I think the suggestion made with regard to the replies already made could be accepted.

PARLIAMENTARY WORK DURING PERIOD OF CONFERENCE

On the orders of the day:

Hon. Michael Starr (Ontario): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a question to the government house leader on this matter. I should like to ask him what plans the government has in respect of parliamentary work during the period of the constitutional conference.

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I would prefer to wait for the return of the Prime Minister to the house before making any comment on that point.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

NORTH KOREA—STATEMENT ON INTERCEPTION OF USS "PUEBLO"

On the orders of the day:

Mr. W. B. Nesbitt (Oxford): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Secretary of State for External Affairs. Is he in a position to give a statement to the house concerning the very dangerous situation which has arisen in North Korea vis-à-vis the United States of America?

Hon. Paul Martin (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the United States authorities have stated categorically that the Pueblo, the ship in question, was in international waters at the time it was intercepted.

With regard to the part that Canada plays in this matter, it is clear that we are not directly involved in a matter which is essentially one between the United States and North Korea. There would in this situation be no precise role for us to play. However, we are concerned about the seriousness of the incident and are following it closely.

REPORTED ASSISTANCE BY FRANCE TO CANADIAN NEWSPAPER

On the orders of the day:

Mr. R. N. Thompson (Red Deer): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Acting Prime Minister. In view of the fact that the President of France has announced that his government will be subsidizing the Moncton newspaper L'Evangeline in order to help in its "modernization, growth and means", would the Acting Prime Minister inform the house whether the government does not regard such policy as contravening the Income Tax Act as amended by Bill No. C-118 in 1965, which is to assure that Canadian newspapers do not fall under foreign control?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member is asking the minister to express an opinion as to the interpretation of a statute, and that is not in order.

[Translation]

SHIPPING

REPORTED DELAY IN ICEBREAKING OPERATIONS ON ST.LAWRENCE RIVER

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Gilles Grégoire (Lapointe): Mr. Speaker, I wish to put a question to the Minister of Transport. Has he received complaints from maritime agents in Montreal to the effect that they had not been warned that ice-jams were forming in the St. Lawrence, that the icebreakers had not moved for the two days, in short, that they had started their work only after the ice-jams had really become difficult to break.

[English]

Hon. Paul Hellyer (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I am not sure whether or not any complaints have been received. I will have to take the question as notice.

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Speaker, may I ask a supplementary question?

In view of the responsibility of the Department of Transport in this field, does the government intend to compensate the property owners on the banks of the St. Lawrence for the damage caused by these floods?

[English]

Mr. Hellyer: Mr. Speaker, it is the intention of the government of Canada to use the excellent icebreakers and their crews to open the river and let the ice flow down the channel. I understand they have been doing a magnificently effective job, in view of the extreme cold weather we had a few days ago. Now the heart of the problem has been broken and they are working on the upper river stretch which is more difficult, but they hope to have that under control shortly.

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Speaker, may I ask a last supplementary question?

Would the Minister of Transport bring this problem to the attention of a parliamentary committee, so that we may know for sure whether it is true that the icebreakers have not done their job or whether the authorities responsible for shipping on the St. Lawrence river have been remiss in their duty when those ice-jams formed?

[English]

Mr. Hellyer: I think they are doing their duty very well. When the main estimates of my department are being considered, if there are any questions which my hon. friend would like to address to me I would be pleased to deal with them.

Mr. Thomas M. Bell (Saint John-Albert): I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Will the minister investigate the complaints to the effect that this year the excessive ice-breaking may in itself cause extra flooding this spring?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

BRITISH COLUMBIA—CONSTRUCTION OF RESEARCH AND COASTGUARD VESSELS

On the orders of the day:

Mrs. Grace MacInnis (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Transport. In view of the serious lay-offs of shipyard workers in Vancouver and Victoria, and the consequent loss of skilled workers to the United States, will the minister give immediate reconsideration to expediting the construction of research and coastguard vessels planned for British Columbia shipyards?

Hon. Paul Hellyer (Minister of Transport): Of course, Mr. Speaker, we will always be willing to reconsider questions related to the shipbuilding program. But unless the amount of money available is more substantial than it was at the time we prepared our estimates, it is not likely that there will be any change in the program in so far as the immediate future is concerned. I am sorry about that, but these are the facts of life.

Inquiries of the Ministry

[Translation]

TRADE

TOBACCO—IMPORTS FROM SOUTH AFRICA AND RHODESIA

On the orders of the day:

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of National Revenue): Mr. Speaker, on Monday, the hon. member for Oxford (Mr. Nesbitt) and, yesterday, the hon. member for Middlesex East (Mr. Thomas) asked questions with regard to the importation of tobacco from South Africa.

Here is the answer: Statistics on trade show that a tobacco shipment was imported from South Africa on May 24, 1967. That shipment consisted of leaves, stems and leaf ends which all have different values. My department has instituted an inquiry concerning those values in South Africa and that information from South Africa is expected by the end of the month. There is no indication, in the meantime, that other shipments have been made from South Africa or that the imported tobacco came from Rhodesia.

[English]

Mr. W. B. Nesbitt (Oxford): Mr. Speaker, I wonder whether the minister could give us an idea as to the amount of tobacco which has been imported from the southern part of Africa in the last six months.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The question asked by the hon. member seeks statistical information and is not in order.

FINANCE

POSSIBLE IMPOSITION BY UNITED STATES OF IMPORT SURCHARGES

On the orders of the day:

Hon. Marcel Lambert (Edmonton West): Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask the Minister of Finance whether he or the government has been advised either directly or indirectly that the United States government is considering import surcharges to offset its deficiency in external payments and, if so, could he indicate what consideration is being given in this regard by the Canadian government?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I became aware of this I think in the same way as the hon. gentleman, by reading the newspaper this morning. Until then I was not aware of any such intention.

Inquiries of the Ministry

REFUSAL BY BANKS TO MAKE FARM IMPROVEMENT LOANS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. C. S. Smallwood (Battle River-Camrose): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Finance. Since the removal of the ceiling on interest rates the chartered banks in many instances are refusing to grant farm improvement loans and the impression is growing that the government has discontinued this program. Will the minister clarify this situation for the farmers of this country.

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I have been aware of some decline in the volume of farm improvement loans in recent months. Although reports as to the decline have in general been exaggerated, I know that it has existed. There is no doubt that this relates to the maximum rate of 5 per cent interest contained in the act. It has been in that act since 1944. I have received representations from the bankers associations and I now have under consideration recommendations in respect of amendments to the Farm Improvement Loans Act which would permit some flexibility in the rate of interest. I have expressed—

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Sharp: I have expressed the hope to the bankers, and I am sure they will comply, that in the meantime the banks will continue to give their customary support to this program.

HIGHWAY SAFETY

RECOMMENDATIONS RESPECTING DEATHS AND INJURIES

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Heward Grafftey (Brome-Missisquoi): Mr. Speaker, some time before the Christmas recess the Minister of Transport informed us that he would report soon in respect of recommendations by the legal and justice committee in the field of highway deaths and injuries. Is the minister ready to make such report?

Hon. Paul Hellyer (Minister of Transport): Not as yet, Mr. Speaker, but I hope I will be able to do so very soon.

HOUSING

C.M.H.C.—STATEMENT BY MINISTER RESPECTING SPECULATIVE LOANS

On the orders of the day:

Hon. E. J. Benson (President of the Treasury Board): Mr. Speaker, yesterday the hon. member for Chapleau (Mr. Laprise) asked whether Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation would be engaged in a program of making speculative loans to builders. As previously indicated by my colleague, the Minister of Labour (Mr. Nicholson), it is not the intention to have C.M.H.C. undertake a program of speculative loans to builders this spring, but rather that we concentrate our resources on loans for low rental housing. We believe that the approved lenders will look after builders' requirements for speculative loans.

CLARIFICATION OF LOANS REGULATIONS—REPLY BY MINISTER

On the orders of the day:

Hon. E. J. Benson (President of the Treasury Board): Mr. Speaker, again yesterday the hon. member for Okanagan-Revelstoke (Mr. Johnston) asked a question relating to the policy of C.M.H.C. in making loans in areas not built up but approved for development, when sewage disposal is by way of septic tank. In newly developing residential areas, C.M.H.C. has, since 1960, declined to approve or make loans where sewage disposal is by way of septic tank. This policy has been followed, notwithstanding that individual lots might be approved for septic tank use by the local health authorities. Experience has shown that the effect of the use of septic tanks in developing areas is cumulative in the pollution of soil and ground water, and therefore is prejudicial to all concerned in the area.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I regret to interrupt the hon. minister, but I suggest his answer is going beyond the terms of the question itself.

EXTERNAL AID

ALLEGED INACCURACY IN INFORMATION GIVEN BY MINISTER

On the orders of the day:

Hon. Gordon Churchill (Winnipeg South Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Secretary of State for External Affairs and relates to an answer printed in Hansard for Monday at page 5768 in reply to a question asked about the total external aid given by Canada to various countries in the fiscal year 1966-67. I ask the minister to investigate the answer, which I state is incomplete and therefore misleading. Also, will he show in a subsequent answer that the country of Tanzania, in addition to receiving $2.3 million under grants and loans for the fiscal year 1966-67, also received $5¼ million of Canadian tax money for a defence program in that country?

Hon. Paul Martin (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I do not believe that the answer was inaccurate. I will look at it. But if the charge of inaccuracy arises out of the facts involved in the last part of my hon. friend's question, then I believe it was not inaccurate because the assistance given militarily to Tanzania does not constitute external aid. It is the same kind of assistance that the government of which my hon. friend was a member gave to Ghana. This is military assistance given to commonwealth countries, I think quite justifiably, for military purposes only.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Churchill: I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker, now that the minister is getting so definite in his answers.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Churchill: I ask the minister this question. When an hon. member asks for the total amount of external aid given to a country, should the minister not include in that moneys that are given to that country under the heading of external affairs estimates of defence support assistance, to cover direct expenditures on behalf of countries not members of NATO?

Mr. Martin (Essex East): Mr. Speaker, "external aid" is defined by the members of the O.E.C.D. as including assistance to assist in the elevation of the standard of living of the recipient countries. Military assistance given by any country in the O.E.C.D. is not regarded as external aid and is certainly not so regarded in Canada.

Mr. Churchill: A final—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I wonder whether the hon. member for Winnipeg South Centre wants to pursue the matter further. This seems to be an argument between the hon. member and the Secretary of State for External Affairs.

Mr. Churchill: I thought I would do it this way, Mr. Speaker, instead of raising a question of privilege, which would have prolonged the proceedings today. May I ask as a final supplementary question to the minister, whether it is not unwise for Canada to be expending amounts over $5 million per year to Tanzania by way of military assistance? Would that money not be better spent in Canada?

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Martin (Essex East): Does my hon. friend not believe—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Martin (Essex East): My hon. friend does not believe in the commonwealth.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member for Vancouver East.

Mr. Winch: Mr. Speaker, my question was for the Minister of Public Works, but he seems to have disappeared.

FISHERIES

NUCLEAR CONTAMINATION OF CANADIAN WATERS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. T. S. Barnett (Comox-Alberni): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Fisheries. I would like to ask him whether any request has been made of the Fisheries Research Board of Canada to investigate whether there is any present or future danger of harm to the fisheries off our northeastern coasts from radioactivity as a result of the entry into the waters of that area of nuclear bombs near Thule, Greenland.

Hon. H.-J. Robichaud (Minister of Fisheries): Mr. Speaker, this incident occurred only some 48 hours ago and I do not believe the Fisheries Research Board have had any opportunity to look into the matter. But if it affects Canadian fisheries, I want to assure the hon. member that all information possible will be provided.

Mr. Barnett: Mr. Speaker, will the minister say that he will ask the Fisheries Research Board to look into the matter? I realize they have not yet had time to make a report.

Mr. Robichaud: What I said was that if there was any danger that it will affect our Canadian fisheries, the Fisheries Research Board will certainly look into it.

TELEVISION

EDMONTON—REQUEST FOR ANSWER TO META PROPOSAL

On the orders of the day:

Hon. Marcel Lambert (Edmonton West): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Secretary of State. Would she advise us whether the government's decision with regard to E.T.V. is sufficiently far advanced to allow her to give a positive answer on the META proposal from the city of Edmonton so that that organization, which has been standing by for the last 18 months, may not see all its work go down the drain?

Hon. Judy V. LaMarsh (Secretary of State): I am sure the latter will not be allowed to happen in any event. That work has been far too efficiently done and is far too enthusiastically supported. I think the hon. member realizes that the whole subject matter has been placed before the standing committee on broadcasting, which I understand is to resume its hearings on the subject as soon as the committee of the whole has disposed of the matter which is now before it.

Mr. Lambert: I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. I think the minister understands that I meant the alternate or intermediate proposal which this organization put forward and which is awaiting the government's decision in due course.

PUBLIC BUILDINGS

OTTAWA, ONT.—ERECTION OF HIGH-RISE STRUCTURE

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Minister of Public Works may I address my question to his parliamentary secretary. Will the government, on behalf of the parliament of Canada, be making known its views with regard to the proposal to erect a 39 storey structure only a few blocks from parliament hill?

Mr. Speaker: I doubt whether the matter is of immediate urgency. Perhaps the question might be put on the order paper.

Mr. Knowles: Perhaps the parliamentary secretary would bring it to the attention of his minister.

• (3:20 p.m.)

BROADCASTING

IMPLEMENTATION OF CANADIAN POLICY

The house resumed, from Tuesday, January 23, consideration in committee of Bill No. C-163 to implement a broadcasting policy for Canada, to amend the Radio Act in consequence thereof and to enact other consequential and related provisions—Miss La Marsh—Mr. Batten in the chair.

The Chairman: When the committee rose last evening clause 2(d), with an amendment proposed by the hon. member for Red Deer, was under consideration. Clause 2(c) was allowed to stand, with an amendment proposed by the hon. member for Compton-Frontenac. I should like to suggest to the committee that perhaps the more orderly procedure now would be to revert to subclause (c) and to deal with the amendment proposed by the hon. member for Compton-Frontenac, and thereafter proceed to subclause 2(d) and the amendment proposed by the hon. member for Red Deer. Would the committee so agree?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

The Chairman: We are now on clause 2 subclause (c). The hon. member for Compton-Frontenac moved that the words:

—subject only to generally applicable statutes and regulations, is unquestioned; be deleted from lines 19 and 20 of clause 2 and that the following be inserted therefor:

—the right, for all Canadians, to receive, by any means whatsoever, all the programs broadcast and available, subject only to generally applicable statutes and regulations, is unquestioned;

Subclause 2 (c) would then read as follows:

All persons licensed to carry on broadcasting undertakings have a responsibility for the public effects of the programs they broadcast but the right to freedom of expression, the right, for all Canadians, to receive, by any means whatsoever, all the programs broadcast and available, subject only to generally applicable statutes and regulations, is unquestioned;

[Translation]

Mr. Latulippe: Mr. Chairman, the amendment which I introduced yesterday concerned cablevision and not closed circuits directly, as the minister has said.

I did not understand very well what the minister said yesterday with regard to closed circuits, but in my opinion this amendment does not concern closed circuits only, but also cablevision and CATV.

I think that the bill is not very clear in this respect, and that subclause (c) should be amended as suggested in the amendment which I introduced, in order to be fair towards those who provide cablevision services.

The Secretary of State (Miss LaMarsh) said yesterday that I owned a cable system; that is true. But there are many other cable systems in the province and that is why I think that all citizens and all companies who own and operate cable systems should be free to pick up programs and retransmit them through their cables, by closed circuit. In fact, they should be free to retransmit programs which they pick off the air without being liable to penalization as mentioned in clause 2 (c). It is for that reason I moved this amendment.

I am convinced that the hon. members will consider and support it.

It would not be fair to penalize those who operate a television or radio service through cables, because they merely retransmit programs broadcast by other stations.

The minister should consider these factors, because they constitute the basis of my amendment.

[English]

The Chairman: Perhaps I should point out to the hon. member for Compton-Frontenac and to the committee that it is the opinion of the Chair that the amendment moved by the hon. member is irrevelant to subclause 2 (c) in that it introduces different methods of reception while the clause deals only with broadcasting in the sense to which the Broadcasting Act applies.

Second, it appears to the Chair that the phrase "by any means whatsoever" might well be interpreted as including methods of broadcasting not covered by this clause, or even by the bill or the act itself.

Third, it also seems to the Chair that the amendment is redundant with respect to subclause (e) of clause 2.

It is for these reasons and with regret that I must rule the amendment moved by the hon. member for Compton-Frontenac out of order. Shall clause 2 (c) carry?

Mr. Nugent: Mr. Chairman, I had not expected the amendment to be ruled out of order. However, the objection of the Chair that the introduction of new means of broadcasting is too wide perhaps fits in with the suggestion that I was going to make to the hon. member who moved the amendment, namely that the purpose of the amendment, as I see it, is to reassure the people of Canada, and to emphasize in the Broadcasting Act itself, that while it is necessary to regulate broadcasting and even to bring distribution systems under the Broadcasting Act, we in this house are very cognizant of the right of individual citizens to hear and see the programs that are available.

I was going to suggest to the hon. member that he delete the phrase "by any means whatsoever" from his amendment. I think this would have the effect of meeting the objection that the Chair found to the introduction of extraneous matter. The objection of the Chair that this is already covered in subclause (e) would not apply, and there would then simply be added to the freedom of expression enunciated in subclause (c) the declaration of freedom to receive the broadcast programs that are available.

I would point out that this clause is already subject to the general regulations made under the act. If my suggestion were adopted there would simply be added to the right to freedom of expression, the right to freedom to receive.

I suggest that here we are coming up tight against what is a fundamental concern to a great many Canadians in this country. I think we should consider that concern at this point, and I suggest this type of amendment provides a good vehicle to decide whether or not the government should be in the position to impose a kind of censorship on the programs people may see or hear.

It has been said by many that we can buy magazines from the United States and read what we like, that we can listen to the radio broadcasts from Moscow or somewhere else, and so on. Even though some attempts are made to jam certain programs, nevertheless anyone who has the necessary equipment can listen to any radio program he wants.

I suggest the same sort of reasoning applies to television sets. If the signal is in the airwaves and people can receive it, then they should be permitted to do so. In this connection it is cogently argued that, situated as we are close to the United States, the citizens of Canada are able to receive and enjoy powerful transmissions which emanate from that country. On the other hand, some parts of Canada farther away from the United States are not reached by these transmissions and the people in those areas are unable to view the programs.

It is also argued that by regulating cable networks we are discriminating against certain Canadians. In effect we are preventing one segment of the population from receiving programs they might like to receive whereas another segment—the largest segment of the population—has perfect freedom in this regard.

Certainly the question whether or not there is any attempt to inhibit people in their choice of program must be approached most carefully. I think generally speaking all members of the house would agree that there is no such thing as protecting people from propaganda, or trying to see they are not seduced by one or other kind of propaganda from foreign parts. Therefore any resort to an artificial means of controlling what may be seen and heard is so undesirable that the subject hardly need be discussed in the house.

One difficulty which arises here is this. The parliament of Canada controls the taxpayers' money, many millions of which is used for the purpose of advancing and protecting Canadianism—Canadian culture. Therefore, if we do not have some means to control broadcasting there is a distinct possibility that regulations made so loosely as to permit by any means whatsoever the distribution of United States programs could completely nullify the efforts of parliament in this regard. We do not want to spend the taxpayers' money for nothing, Mr. Chairman. Neither do we want to see parliament or the regulatory body passing regulations which would prevent people from using equipment that is available to receive programming. Nevertheless electronic equipment is available which could completely defeat what we are trying to do.

I am not sure that we are yet in a position to foresee what will happen when the whole of Canada is covered by satellite t.v. transmissions and there is no need for cablevision or for booster stations. The only way the people could be prevented from receiving these transmissions would be to try to jam the satellite broadcasts. I do not think anyone would argue with the proposition that it should be within the legislative ambit of the parliament of Canada to control the airwaves above this country and to regulate what may enter them. But it is a different matter when we ask whether we want to regulate what enters our airwaves; and if there is some proclivity in this direction it will be difficult to decide how we do this and to what extent.

I think that what is necessary at the moment is to put into the act simply a reminder that while the arguments for regulation are many, and while there is some concern about using in the best possible way money spent by the C.B.C. on the preservation of Canadianism, there is an overriding concern for the right of every citizen of this country to hear and see whatever programs he or she wishes.

When I put it in that way, Mr. Chairman, I have not forgotten that there does exist in our criminal legislation provisions in connection with certain types of seditious propaganda. For example we can regulate certain kinds of questionable programs on the airwaves. Nevertheless, regulation of cablevision or other broadcasting systems should be for the primary purpose of preserving Canadian sovereignty over the means of communication in this country and to maintain an orderly use of airwaves and channels. In addition, its purpose should be the broadening of the possibilities of Canadians to see what can be seen in the best way possible and for the least money possible. Also, we should bear in mind that the money we are spending should have some effect in promoting Canadianism.

• (3:30 p.m.)

Though Your Honour has just ruled one amendment out of order I wish to move another amendment which is almost identical to it except that my amendment would leave out certain words that the Chair considered objectionable. The amendment I propose would add between the words "expression" and "subject" in line 19 thereof the following: "and the right of Canadians to receive all broadcasting programs available to them." That amendment would apply to subclause (c). The clause as amended would then read:

(c) all persons licensed to carry on broadcasting undertakings have a responsibility for the public effects of the programs they broadcast but the right to freedom of expression and the right of Canadians to receive all broadcasting programs available to them, subject only to generally applicable statutes and regulations, is unquestioned;

May I move that amendment, Mr. Chairman? I apologize to the minister for my lack of courtesy in not having advised her of the amendment. Yesterday I thought it would be some time before we would reach this clause and I was caught unprepared. The minister is entitled to notice of the amendment and I regret that I did not give her that notice.

Miss LaMarsh: May I ask my hon. friend to stand this matter? Obviously he is reading from the wrong copy of the bill. His amended clause contains the words "public effects". Bill C-163, as reported back by the committee, did not contain that wording. If my hon. friend would stand his amendment perhaps he might refer to the new reprint of the bill and deal with the matter then. I have no objection to standing this matter for the time being.

Mr. Nugent: I thank the minister. May I ask the committee to give me time to consider?

The Chairman: Does the committee agree to stand clause 2(c)?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

The Chairman: The committee will proceed with discussion of subclause 2(d) and the amendment proposed by the hon. member for Red Deer.

Mr. Thomas (Middlesex West): Mr. Chairman, before we proceed with the next clause I wish to say that I am somewhat confused by the statement concerning the revised version of the bill. I presume that some hon. members have it.

Mr. Fairweather: We all have it. There has been a new printing.

Mr. Thomas (Middlesex West): Well, I do not have a copy. It is not in my file of bills. I should like to obtain a new copy.

The Chairman: Order, please. The committee will now proceed to clause 2(d). The hon. member for Red Deer moved an amendment to subclause (d). His amendment sought to insert after the words "public controversy" in line 5 of the bill the following:

"while ensuring that the most broadly held opinions receive appropriate consideration";

His amendment also sought to add, after the words "other resources", the words:

"while alert and responsive to public preferences in this and other aspects of programming".

Clause 2(d) would then read as follows:

"The programming provided by the Canadian Broadcasting system should be varied and comprehensive and should provide reasonable opportunity for the expression of conflicting views on matters of public controversy, while ensuring that the most broadly held opinions receive appropriate consideration, and the programming provided by each broadcaster should be of high standard, using predominantly Canadian creative and other resources, while alert and responsive to public preferences in this and other aspects of programming".

Mr. Thompson: Mr. Chairman, I shall not repeat my remarks of last night. The purpose of the amendment is to strengthen the bill and it is intended to do nothing else. The amendment seeks to make it clear to management that they have a responsibility for program content. I believe it is just as necessary for this bill to provide management with guide lines for carrying out its responsibilities with respect to programming content as with respect to the technical side of broadcasting. These remarks apply to both the C.B.C. and the private sectors of broadcasting. I commend this amendment to the minister and to the committee. I trust that the amendment is acceptable and that members of the committee will support it.

Miss LaMarsh: I regret that I cannot lend my support to the amendment. I am sympathetic toward the hon. member's intentions. We all hope what he hopes with respect to program content. I think that any manager worth his salt would feel that it is his responsibility to broadcast conflicting views on matters of public controversy. He would broadcast those views particularly that are reflected by large segments of the public. Nevertheless, I am afraid that what the hon. member seeks to do by way of amendment cannot be legislated.

During the committee proceedings members of my hon. friend's group came forward with amendments which in themselves were unobjectionable. Various amendments dealt with matters such as good taste. The wording of such amendments, or the spirit of such amendments, would be acceptable to anyone. But that spirit cannot appear in a piece of legislation.

I do not think that anyone should be required to decide, as a matter of statute law, what a broadly held opinion is. Those who are in this chamber or in public life know that broadly held opinions in this country may vary almost daily or almost hourly. To ask some individual to determine what a broadly held opinion is, is to place on that individual an unsupportable burden.

To require broadcasters to remain alert and responsive to public preference "in this and other aspects of programming" is placing great difficulties in their way. Though that wording may seem innocuous, it imposes a frightening stricture on those whom it may affect. For instance, they may be left open to charges that they are not alert and not responsive to public preferences. Public preferences change from time to time and they change sharply, as we all know. Though I may agree with my hon. friend's sentiment I cannot, on behalf of the government, agree to enshrine it in legislation. I must therefore inform my hon. friend, reluctantly, that I am not prepared to accept the amendment.

Mr. Sherman: Mr. Chairman, I support the essence and theme of the amendment that the hon. member for Red Deer has moved. In common with the hon. lady I admit that I am not satisfied with the precise wording of the amendment.

On December 21 I served notice to the minister and the committee when I was speaking in the general debate and taking an umbrella approach to the legislation that I intended to move an amendment to subclause 2(d). I shall move amendments at subsequent stages of the bill dealing with other matters.

• (3:40 p.m.)

I find that in essence the approach taken by the hon. member for Red Deer has presaged my own. He has moved an amendment which I intend to support, but should that amendment fail to pass I shall move an amendment of my own which is worded somewhat differently but which is also calculated to provide the degree of responsibility and objectivity in the national broadcasting service that he and I, together with a good many other Canadians, desire and feel has been lacking in the public affairs sector of the C.B.C., particularly in television, in recent months if not in recent years. I cannot accept the position the minister takes with respect to the amendment moved by the hon. member for Red Deer. With all due respect I submit that no undue restriction would be placed on management by the acceptance of an amendment worded in the form put forward by the hon. member for Red Deer. Nor would undue restriction be caused by an amendment such as I intend to advance should the amendment put forward by the hon. member for Red Deer fail.

I believe Canadians have a right to expect of those in positions of authority in both public and private broadcasting that a high degree of responsibility implying conscientiousness in terms of objectivity of presentation will be striven for, achieved and maintained. This does not impose an undue restriction upon our broadcasters. In fact, it would constitute an important guide line which should in any case be provided for administrators in what, after all, is a relatively new industry, a relatively new profession. I for my part would be satisfied with an amendment which simply suggested that programming be planned and devised in such a way as to guarantee responsible and balanced treatment of subjects of public controversy. As I say, the wording I favour differs from that adopted by the hon. member for Red Deer. However, we share the same view as to the need for responsibility in broadcasting, a view which has been advanced by other members of the committee including, for example, the hon. member for Elgin and the hon. member for Leeds, during the debates which have taken place in this chamber in recent months.

We share the view that some set of guide lines in connection with objectivity in public affairs broadcasting in this country is overdue. We share a measure of concern about the one-sided partisan approach which has been taken all too often in public affairs broadcasting, particularly by C.B.C. television. A great many Canadians are similarly concerned. The amendment moved by the hon. member for Red Deer is intended, as is my own, to be fair both to broadcasters and to the listening public. All it is intended to do is to place the onus for ensuring balanced presentation upon the management and operators of individual stations—I use the word "operators" not in a technical but in a literary sense. The intention is to place the onus upon these people to maintain a posture of concern with regard to program schedules in public affairs programming, for instance, an attitude which would ensure that where one viewpoint is presented to a substantial extent over a period of time an opportunity will then not only be provided but will be guaranteed for other points of view to be expressed.

This does not constitute a rigid stricture imposed on the management of radio or television stations. All management has to do is keep an eye on the programming schedule or else delegate others to do so, to "vet" the program schedule as a responsible authority in a profession which we all hope is rapidly becoming a responsible one. The least one can ask is that management maintain vigilance over the programming schedule and meet their responsibilities as persons in a position to shape public opinion and attitudes in Canada toward controversial issues of the day, making sure that the public affairs department balances off one set of opinions with another. I really do not think this is an unreasonable stricture to place upon the responsible authorities. For this reason I rise now to say, with respect, that the minister appeared in her answer to be tilting at windmills which do not exist. I take my stand in support of the amendment moved by the hon. member for Red Deer.

Mr. Johnston: Mr. Chairman, I should like to change the metaphor just used by the hon. member for Winnipeg South. A few weeks ago the minister ran up a brave set of colours on the ship of broadcasting. It disturbed me this afternoon to see those colours run down at the first wisp of semantic gunpowder.

The problem, and the minister knows it, is that if subclause (d) is unamended by a further set of safeguards, it will become the Magna Carta of extremism. Forces wishing to present views held by few Canadians, if any, will justify their actions by using subclause (d) and telling us they are taking advantage of the reasonable opportunity afforded for expressing conflicting views on matters of public controversy.

• (3:50 p.m.)

I think even the hon. member for York South would agree that some months ago there was no necessity for the C.B.C. to bring a neo-nazi all the way from Germany to appear on one of its programs. But having decided not to bring him to Canada, the C.B.C. televised an interview with him. There should have been some responsibility to see that a measure of expression was given to the more generally held view in Canada regarding that menace to democratic life.

Unamended this bill will become the bill of rights for biased broadcasting. If we can interpret what "reasonable opportunity for the expression of conflicting views" means, it seems to me we can equally well interpret what the expression "broadly held opinions" means so that those in charge may be alert to them. The C.B.C. has been dramatically unresponsive to public outcry on matters of public controversy. I believe it important that this bill spell out means whereby the public of Canada can call their creation, the C.B.C., to account.

Mr. Thompson: Mr. Chairman, I wish to make one more comment in answer to the minister's remarks. After all the good lady has gone through during the last couple of years with regard to broadcasting and the C.B.C., it seems to me she should have more sympathy with the intent of this amendment. Management control of C.B.C. broadcasting during the past few years has not been satisfactory either to her or to the public. I do not know what she meant when she referred to rotten management, but if she was referring to the type of control management has had over programs then I agree it has been rotten management.

As has been mentioned, this legislation will become a bill of rights for both the public and the broadcasters. We are attempting to make it an adequate bill. It is our responsibility to put teeth and backbone in it in so far as we can legislate on these matters. I agree we cannot spell them out in detail, but I believe this amendment would strengthen the hand of management with respect to programming.

This amendment is a very legitimate and reasonable one. It is intended to do nothing more than strengthen the bill so far as management is concerned so that it will be able to provide the control which I was pleased to hear the hon. lady say she believed management must have over programming as well as over the technical and financial aspects of broadcasting. We are dealing with this bill in a nonpartisan manner, and again I urge members of the committee to support this amendment. In its present form the bill does not provide anything better than what we have had in the past so far as broadcasting is concerned. Unless we put a little more starch in the bill we will not have anything better than what we have had. It is with this intent that I appeal for support for the amendment.

Mr. Fairweather: Mr. Chairman, I wish I had the felicity of language to say how much I oppose the amendment moved by the hon. member for Red Deer. Sometimes it troubles me to think that the democratic fabric of this country cannot stand a little bit of abrasion once in a while. I do not always want to know what the broadly held views of the people of this country are. I think it is dangerous just to pay lip service to the most broadly held views. We should be hearing other views.

In my opinion it was a very good thing for this country—I am not talking about the mechanics of management because that is none of my business—to see the neo-nazi, von Thadden, and to have him exposed just as Rockwell was exposed. It brought back to memory the horror and the evil that were in the world in the decade prior to the second world war. Did the fabric of this country wither because von Thadden had a few minutes on the public broadcasting system? Of course it did not. We saw this man and the evil he represented. I do not want to hear only broadly held views. The broadly held views of this country have a thousand media, a thousand ways to be heard in newspapers, magazines and other publications. I think it is time that we heard other views in this country and I shudder to think of parliament exercising that type of control over our public media.

I am going to vote against this amendment. From his speech the other day I can only take it that the hon. member does not know what satire is. The other night the C.B.C. ran a little bit of satire on Noah, Moses and other interesting figures in the Old Testament. Can we not laugh any more in this country? It was amusing. Is our Christian belief to those who have it—there are many who do not have it—so fragile that we cannot talk about Noah and the ark? I think it must have been quite tough for Noah to spend all that time in the ark. That is all that young man was saying, but apparently the whole fabric of Christianity is supposed to have been placed in jeopardy in those few minutes. I think it is very dangerous for the public broadcasting system to have to spend all its time showing the broadly held opinions of Canadians. Those broadly held opinions have ample protection.

Mr. Thompson: You did not feel that way when von Thadden was to appear.

Mr. Fairweather: I never said a word about von Thadden.

Mr. Thomas (Middlesex West): Mr. Chairman, I wish I had the verbal facility of the hon. member for Royal to express my feelings about the subject of public broadcasting. Time and time again in this chamber I have seen members rise to protest vehemently against certain types of programs which sometimes appear on our national broadcasting system, over it or through it, or however the programs are transmitted. But over the years it seems it has been impossible for the majority in this parliament, representing the majority of the Canadian people, to get it across to the people responsible for preparing programs that there is a certain type of program which is generally unacceptable to the people of this nation.

• (4:00 p.m.)

Some people like classical music, some like drama, some like public affairs programs. These are all good. Before I go further I would like to say that the C.B.C. has done a wonderful job in some respects and that I am all for the C.B.C. We in Canada need the C.B.C., but somewhere in the works there are producers who are able to put out programs which are unacceptable. In looking over the record it would seem that there are always some producers who keep on probing and probing the line of acceptability. Sometimes they are on the one side and sometimes on the other. Sometimes they go too far and sometimes they stay within the limits of acceptability. However, they seem to be forever probing that line, trying to get away with everything they can get away with.

I intend to support the amendment proposed by the hon. member for Red Deer. It may not completely cover the situation. It is very difficult to take care of a situation of this kind in a legislative way, but at least the amendment is an attempt to put more teeth in our broadcasting rules and regulations for the sake of control and keeping within the limits of general public acceptability the programs which are put out over our national system.

We can be proud of our national system. It belongs to all the Canadian people. Because it is a public system we have a public image to uphold, the image of the Canadian government. Whenever these unacceptable programs are put on the air we tend to destroy the image of the government, the identity of Canada, the image of Canada. That is what we do when we put these unacceptable programs on the air. Anything that can be done to strengthen the hand of the C.B.C. management so that they can control and manage these apparently uncontrollable and unmanageable producers within the organization will be an improvement. The more strength we can put in the hands of the management of the C.B.C. the better.

I am glad, therefore, to support this amendment and any other amendment which will tend to strengthen the hand of management. The C.B.C. is a great institution. Let us maintain the honour and integrity of that institution.

Mr. Brewin: Mr. Chairman, I wish to intervene briefly in this discussion because I think a fundamental difference in philosophy has been revealed between those who support this amendment and those who, like myself, oppose it. I believe we are entirely wrong in thinking it is useful to attempt by legislation to deal with matters of taste and judgment or the sort of thing the hon. member for Middlesex West had in mind when he said we should not allow anything which is generally unacceptable to be put over the public broadcasting system. Who is to decide what is generally unacceptable? I suggest that if we have producers with competence and a reasonably intelligent management we must give them freedom not to decide what is generally acceptable to the public but to decide whether what is being done lives up to competent technical standards and leaves some freedom for the creative ability of the people doing the job.

If the suggestion is that the C.B.C. is to exercise censorship over these people who have to do the job and say that something is unacceptable to the public, then I would ask, what does this mean? What may be generally acceptable to one section of the public may be generally unacceptable to other sections. What does the hon. member for Red Deer mean when he says the commission, I suppose, must be alert and respond to public preferences in this and other aspects of public programming? Of course they will be responsive in a general way in considering what public preferences may be but, as the hon. member for Royal said, it will be a sorry day when we have to wait and try to find out what is conventional, what is generally acceptable and what is the public preference before we allow creative artists and people of that ilk to deal with these matters.

May I add that the adoption of these words would be an absolute waste of time and energy. We cannot legislate by adding words. It has been suggested that we should strengthen the hand of management in dealing with these matters. I suggest that we would be doing precisely the opposite by putting in words of this sort. It has been suggested that the C.B.C. should be given the responsibility for censorship, which no sensible management would want to exercise. I believe that the principles of true liberalism—and I use the word with a small "l"—include the philosophy of freedom of thought and expression. I suggest that this type of amendment is not only illiberal but, if it has any effect at all, is also restrictive and damaging to the system we are trying to protect.

Mr. Dinsdale: Mr. Chairman, this discussion is gradually becoming a discussion on the basic right of free speech. Some of the speeches we have heard seem to be crusading speeches which go much farther than the intent of the amendment put forward by the hon. member for Red Deer. As I look at the wording of the original clause I find that the only specific reference to any particular type of programming in subclause (d) of clause 2 is the following:

—should provide reasonable opportunity for the expression of conflicting views on matters of public controversy—

I would say that without this specific reference to controversial matters the first few words of the subclause really cover everything that is required in the field of programming. It reads:

—the programming provided by the Canadian broadcasting system should be varied and comprehensive—

That covers everything. I assume that the hon. member for Red Deer and others who have supported the amendment, such as the hon. member for Winnipeg South and a few others who have spoken, object that the only specific reference is the statement that controversial matters should be considered. It goes without saying that if there is wide and varied programming everything is covered. Yet it is stressed that we should emphasize controversial matters. The crusaders for freedom have criticized the amendment which I believe is quite mild in form. The amendment makes specific reference to another aspect of public communication in the following words:

—while ensuring that the most broadly held opinions receive appropriate consideration—

In other words, if we refer specifically to ensuring that there shall be controversy we must make sure also that non-controversial matters shall be taken into consideration. I see some of my friends in the New Democratic party smiling. If we are going to mention specifically that there must be controversy, then there is just as much reason to mention in addition the fact that the broader opinions accepted by the Canadian public should also be given consideration. If we go on in this way we can make this clause as long as an arm and deal with all items of communication which might be mentioned.

In my opinion all we need in Canada is a good Hyde Park corner such as there is in London where a person can go on any evening of the week or on any Sunday and talk about anything under the sun without restriction. You can shout into the breeze to your heart's content. A similar place in New York is called Bug House square. We do not have a Hyde Park corner in Canada and neither do we have a Bug House square. As a result we have tended in the past to turn our national broadcasting system into a Hyde Park corner and we emphasize the controversial aspects without emphasizing those things which are part of public opinion and of the body politic in Canada. I think such an institution might well be established in Canada. There is no attack on freedom in the words of the amendments, any more than there is an attack on freedom when you emphasize controversial matters. I support the amendment.

• (4:10 p.m.)

Mr. Martin (Timmins): Mr. Chairman, I should like to make a very brief observation in relation to the amendment which appears to me to reflect the fear of censorship about which we hear a great deal. It seems to suggest again our often expressed concern about protecting our misguided people.

Mr. Dinsdale: Judge not lest ye be judged, Murdo.

Mr. Martin (Timmins): I have discovered from past experience that very often people are not afraid that they will be corrupted but that someone else will be corrupted by these things if we do not censor them to keep other people from hearing or seeing them.

Mr. Thompson: Would the hon. member permit a question? Does he not realize we are not talking about censorship but rather about a clear channel of responsibility?

Mr. Martin (Timmins) Censorship by any name is still censorship so far as I am concerned. I think we might do well if we all stopped for a moment and thought about this situation. We already have censorship of television programs. I have yet to see a television set that does not have a switch to shut off the set if you do not like a program. Perhaps we should pass an amendment requiring the manufacturer to put an extra large button on each set or something to remind people that if they do not like a program they have a switch to turn the set off.

I do not believe I am better equipped than anyone else to judge what my fellow Canadians should or should not see. I think they are perfectly capable of making that decision for themselves. I hope they in turn feel I am capable of deciding which programs I want to watch. We tend to get carried away sometimes by our attitude of protection for our fellow Canadians. They are perfectly capable of protecting themselves and they have ample opportunity to do so at the present time.

Mr. Churchill: Mr. Chairman, I think the attitude which ought to have been taken by the hon. member for Greenwood when he spoke with some heat but not much light a little while ago should have been to strike out the whole clause. We have included in the bill under the general title of a broadcasting policy for Canada a clause which deals with programming. I have been told by people active in the television and radio fields that we should keep away from this area because there is such a variety of opinion in respect of programming. In any event the government has introduced this clause. For that reason it is important that members have something to say about it.

We start from the premise that there will be a wide variety of opinion as to what is suitable, interesting, desirable or undesirable. This is also true of ordinary theatrical productions as well as movies and art. What is agreeable to one person may be disagreeable to another. Having had this matter put before us in respect of television we are entitled to express our opinions on programming. Unless we express those opinions there will be no guidance for those who are in charge; yet the government has proposed a guiding clause.

The government suggests that programming should be varied and comprehensive, that there should be an element of public controversy, or at least that it should not be avoided, and that it should be of high standard, using predominantly Canadian creative and other resources. Those are four guide lines for C.B.C. management. They are a bit reminiscent of the guide lines laid down by the Prime Minister for his cabinet colleagues a couple of years ago and similar to the type of guide lines he should now produce for the candidates for leadership of the Liberal party.

People need guidance and the government is now suggesting that the directorate of the C.B.C. should have some guidance with regard to programming because it is in the area of programming that troubles have occurred in the past. We would not have had the many discussions here or investigations by committees unless there had been some public discontent about the nature of certain C.B.C. programs. The C.B.C. got itself into a great deal of difficulty over the years by attempting to go too far.

When I do not like a program, and particularly if it is a speech by a member of the N.D.P., I turn the set off. The hon. member for Timmins can rest happy in that regard. I am not an ardent t.v. fan. I prefer to read a newspaper, a book or Hansard. Nevertheless, I do watch a certain amount and I am able to form an opinion on whether or not I like a program. The C.B.C. has got itself into needless difficulty because of carelessness in respect of programming. I have never phoned a T.V. station to object to a program, nor have I written a letter to a station or to the management of the C.B.C.

I have not spoken frequently in the house on this subject. However, I am invited to do so now because this bill directs our attention to programming. I want the directorate of the C.B.C. to know what the members of this house think about programming, in addition to what they will read in these four guide lines to which I have referred. If we are going to have guide lines as suggested here I see no reason for rejecting the amendment proposed by the hon. member for Red Deer or any other similar amendment. The directorate of the C.B.C. will then know precisely what the members of parliament think about programming.

Mr. Prittie: The amendment is directed to all broadcasting.

Mr. Churchill: I am glad the hon. member mentioned that because it does relate to all broadcasting, private stations as well, and to anything in connection with broadcasting.

As the hon. member for Brandon-Souris so wisely asked, why draw particular attention to the expression of conflicting views on matters of public controversy? Why at this stage do we have to draw to the attention of broadcasters that this is what we think they should be doing? They have been doing this for years. Why do we specifically have to mention that, and who decides what is public controversy?

• (4:20 p.m.)

There are certain people within the broadcasting field who make these decisions in some smoke-filled room. Talk about politicians making decisions in smoked-filled rooms! This is done by a handful of people in the broadcasting business in some smoke-filled room. They ask, I am sure, "What will be the subject for our discussion on the program next Sunday night? Let us see. There is a mysterious drug that somebody on some island in the Pacific ocean has taken and has died from it. Let us give that information to the public so that some of the students in our universities will get their hands on this drug and try it out as well." That is the type of program to which I object. These decisions are made by a handful of people sitting in some smoke-filled room.

Miss LaMarsh: Dalton Camp?

Mr. Churchill: They come to a decision as to some subject of public controversy that they would like to bring before the people. Then there are the other manipulators who say they want to waken us up. They want people to engage in discussion. They want to alert us to the facts of life. A lot of this is such arrant and silly nonsense. There are quite a number of people here who have had a fair amount of experience of all facets of life and we do not need any more exhilarating ideas with regard to what we should experiment with and what we should do.

Mr. Fairweather: Speak for yourself on that point.

Mr. Churchill: There is a handfull of people somewhere deciding whether this would be good. They say, "We will stir things up and then we will get letters, some objecting and some approving. We will count them up and see how many approve. If there are not enough people who approve, we will write to our friends and ask them to get a letter in quickly because we are on the short end of letters approving our program." I have been in politics long enough to know how some of these things are arranged.

I see no objection to the rather mild amendment moved by the hon. member. It has been years since I have been able to approve of anything put forward by the hon. member for Red Deer. Mellowing as the years pass by, like the Secretary of State for External Affairs, and becoming very positive in my statements, I would like to say that for once I approve of the amendment put forward by the hon. member for Red Deer. I hope it will be incorporated in the guide lines for the directors of broadcasting so they will realize that in addition to matters of public controversy we would like some attention paid to opinions that are broadly held. We think that those opinions should also receive appropriate consideration. There is nothing wrong with that at all. If we must listen to opinions that are held by only a small segment of the population, can we not also have programs that will be viewed with interest by a broad section of the population? That is all this amendment is suggesting. Consequently, sir, I shall support the amendment.

[Translation]

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Chairman, I shall be brief.

I merely want to say that our group wishes to support the amendment moved by the hon. member for Red Deer (Mr. Thompson). It is an amendment which does not ask much, which is very simple, and which may mean a lot because it asks, for once in this house, to take into consideration the preferences of the general public and make an effort to give it a small service since it is the public that foots the bill.

I always considered the C.B.C. as an impenetrable place, in every sense, for serious people and those who want to keep a moral sense to their life. I think it is at the programming level that the difficulty arises. Some producers take advantage of television on the pretext that they have the right to express controversial ideas and, in fact, they express these ideas all year round to a population which wants sound programming, in keeping with its faith and its social condition.

In fact, we are not in Africa, we are in Canada, in a democratic country and I believe it is time for the government, if it intends to act—and I am not sure that such is its intention—to clean up this stable of the C.B.C.

Too often, we find producers like Mr. Keable on the program "Tirez au Clair" or others who, ever so often, present the best atheists, the best unbelievers and the best free-thinkers, when it is not homosexuals or lesbians. Those programs are presented and we have to look at them, because there is only one channel in our area.

I was listening to the member for Timmins (Mr. Martin) saying: Turn off your television set. That is easy to say, but it seems that the members of the New Democratic party have taken the pledge to wallow in all these questions. It seems that this is their role in the house and when it is a question of protecting a bandit, defending an atheist, we can be sure they will be there.

Mr. Chairman, I say it is time to defend the general public whose business this is because, after all, they are footing the $100 million deficit that the C.B.C. accumulates, to poison, soil and corrupt our youth.

Mr. Chairman, I think that if the government wants to do something, the bill under consideration at the present time provides a unique opportunity. It is time—I have said it many times—to do a clean-up job at the C.B.C. It is time to stop using any kind of language and boldly going even as far as to say: if you are not satisfied, turn off your television set. No, Mr. Chairman, we will not turn off our television sets, we will close some C.B.C. offices, because they are too dirty. That is what must be closed. The time has come for Christians in Canada, who still have an ounce of morality, to wake up and protest.

We are happy and we thank the hon. member for Red Deer for moving that amendment which is quite simple. I would have liked it to be even more categorical but I am satisfied in view of its consistency and we shall be happy to support it.

We ask the government to make a special effort in that direction, without waiting for the clause by clause consideration of the bill, and to bring in any amendments as required, so that the bill will be more conformable and adapted to the people which it is intended to serve.

[English]

Mr. MacDonald (Prince): Mr. Chairman, I want to speak to two or three matters which relate to the discussion we have been having this afternoon. It has been a very interesting discussion. It seems to me, however, that we are missing two or three important points in the discussion of this amendment. The first one seems to be an assumption made by those who support the amendment, or at least support it in speaking to it, that we will in some way be able to exalt and preserve mediocrity.

• (4:30 p.m.)

I for one am not one of those who believe that the broadcasting system which is operated in the public service is meant only to perpetuate ideas commonly and publicly held. When we deal with something as important to the lifeblood of the nation's mentality as the broadcasting system, it seems to me that what we should expect to receive from it from time to time are things which are disturbing to our minds and to our consciences. If we are not going to require that we receive such things from time to time from the broadcasting system, then we are simply paying for amplified mediocrity. I feel there is an element in the amendment as it is proposed that would merely preserve for all of us a kind of bland public opinion which would do little for the edification of the Canadian people generally. It would be sad to see the public broadcasting system descend to this kind of performance.

May I point out also that I believe there is an incipient or subtle anti-Canadianism in this amendment which disturbs me greatly. In the second part of the amendment, following the words "Canadian creative and other resources" it is suggested we add the words "While alert and responsive to public preferences in this and other aspects of programming". All of us in this chamber know, I think, that we have created, almost against the stream of public opinion, a broadcasting system in this country in order to preserve some kind of cultural identity in the great sea of communications and propaganda which washes over us on a regular hour by hour and day by day basis from the great nation to the south of us. If the subject and the content of broadcasting were left purely to the majority of public opinion we would have no effective Canadian broadcasting in this country, and we should face that fact. By supporting this kind of amendment we would be chipping away a little bit here and a little bit there at the concept of truly worth-while broadcasting in this country.

I for one do not plan to support the amendment. Hon. members have suggested in the debate this afternoon that freedom is not being attacked in these two amendments. On the surface they seem to be rather innocuous and inoffensive, but I would remind hon. members that freedom is not usually destroyed by frontal attacks. Freedoms do not disappear simply because someone suddenly stands up and says: I move we do away with this or that freedom. Freedom disappears by being chipped away a little bit at a time. If we allow this to happen in this way this afternoon, similar chipping away will take place tomorrow and henceforth until we will find we have deprived ourselves of a valuable instrument of freedom in this country, namely broadcasting. I urge all hon. members on both sides of the house to realize that in supporting this kind of amendment we are supporting a very real reduction in the concept of freedom of speech as we have allowed it in our institutions.

[Translation]

Mr. Pelletier: Mr. Chairman, I only want to answer, as briefly as possible, certain remarks just made by the hon. member for Roberval (Mr. Gauthier), in a much less gentle tone than I intend to take.

I wish to say first what seems obvious to me, namely that the hon. member for Roberval has spoken without being fully informed.

It is very easy to watch television one hour or two every week, and suddenly to come across a program that one finds shocking, that offends one's prejudices, one's opinions, even one's tastes, that are quite peculiar, and then to infer that all television or radio programs are steeped in corruption and lies.

I submit, Mr. Chairman, that the hon. member for Roberval has not quoted any statistics, that everything he has said may very well be only a few exceptions, because if he were able to draw up those statistics himself, he would then have to watch television seven or eight hours a day and, therefore, he certainly could not perform his duties as a member of parliament. I would rather think that the member for Roberval denies himself television and does his work as a member. This means that his attack is certainly, presumably, based on very doubtful facts, at any rate, extremely incomplete facts.

Another indication that the member for Roberval does not know the facts is his attack against the moderator of a program, in this case, Mr. Keable. This moderator expressed views which displeased me; indeed, he probably displeased everybody. But if the member for Roberval was familiar with the question, if only he had followed the work of the parliamentary committee on broadcasting, films and assistance to the arts, he would know that the moderator is not responsible for the text but that the producer is. He would know moreover that the moderator does not choose the participants, and that Mr. Keable could not therefore impose, deliberately and maliciously, atheistic participants or whatever other epithets the member for Roberval used. Even if people of that caliber were imposed, which I doubt, in any case it is certainly not Mr. Keable who is responsible but, again, the producer of the program, whose own work was controlled by a supervisor.

With rgeard to the amendment as a whole, Mr. Chairman, I would like to say that I feel I must vote against it, because if I had to qualify it, I would call it a conformist amendment. Unless the mover of this amendment is a conformist himself, I think he would be extremely disappointed in the effect which this amendment might have on the production of radio and television broadcasts. For radio and television, like all other creative arts, are stifled by conformism and are only truly creative if there is freedom of artistic expression and if they force the audience itself to get out of its intellectual rut.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Pelletier: When the hon. member for Roberval speaks of doing a clean-up job and calls the C.B.C. a stable, I think that he is using language not only unworthy of the C.B.C. but also unworthy of this house. Furthermore, I will say that it is unworthy of himself. He was certainly carried away by his own feelings and his own views.

It is agreed—I think that it is unavoidable—and everybody—

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, may I put a question to the hon. member? I would like to take this opportunity to ask him a question.

Mr. Pelletier: Excuse me, Mr. Chairman, if the hon. member—

Mr. Grégoire: Has he not himself used the word "trash-can" with reference to the Liberal party?

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: The hon. parliamentary secretary has the floor.

Mr. Pelletier: If the hon. member for Lapointe (Mr. Grégoire) were kind enough to wait until I finish my remarks, I would be glad to answer his question.

At any rate, Mr. Chairman, I come to the end of my remarks, and I would say in concluding that the factors included in that amendment are restrictive and could seriously fail to attain the objectives expected by the mover—that is the elimination of certain abuses, of certain persons and of certain errors which nobody contests, and a large part of which are inevitable—but reduce to nothing an art and a means of communication living on creative spirit, by imposing the law of conformism on them.

I am now ready to answer the question of the hon. member for Lapointe, if he wishes.

• (4:40 p.m.)

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, I only wanted to amuse myself at the expense of the member for Hochelaga. I noticed he thought it was peculiar to use the word "stables"; I was going to ask him whether he was not himself saying a bit more than he intended when he used the expression "trash-can of the Liberal party"?

Mr. Pelletier: I am very pleased to answer that question which shows that the member for Lapointe is as poorly informed as the member for Roberval (Mr. Gauthier). It was stated here—the member for Lapointe would remember it, had he been in the house that evening—that I did not use that expression. The former leader of the opposition already accused me then of using the expression "Liberal trash-can" and I rose on a question of privilege to tell him that I was not the author of that expression, but that Mr. Claude Ryan was, and that I respected Mr. Claude Ryan's property.

The member for Lapointe was probably sailing then on waters calmer than parliamentary waters, and he missed that. His question is therefore pointless, since I am not the one who coined that phrase.

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Chairman, I rise on a question of privilege.

I cannot ignore the preposterous assertions of the hon. member for Hochelaga (Mr. Pelletier), when he says that I am not qualified to discuss television matters, because I do not watch television ten hours a day. I readily admit that I do not have time to watch television ten hours a day and, besides, no single member is able to watch programs—

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order. Would the hon. member state his question of privilege?

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Chairman, my question of privilege is to the effect that the hon. member for Hochelaga has suggested that I am not competent enough to discuss television, and I wish to show the house that perhaps I know more about it than he does, because I belong to a different social circle and I am defending my milieu. I believe that he does not even belong to any social circle.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order. I would suggest to the hon. member that there is no question of privilege, but rather that this is a question of interpretation. The hon. member for Hochelaga is entitled to his opinion; he has expressed an opinion, and I must say that the question of privilege raised by the hon. member for Roberval is unfounded.

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Chairman, is it not a question of privilege when I am told that I am not competent because I have not watched television?

In my remarks I simply indicated that some programs were blameworthy, which the member for Hochelaga admitted.

The member for Hochelaga has misrepresented my speech. I did not say that all programs were bad; I said that some programs were. This involves two or three programs which are bad. There is possibly one program out of 10,000 which is bad, 1/100 of one per cent, but it is bad nevertheless and this does not involve the whole of Canada. Let the member for Hochelaga stop his nonsense. Let him start by sitting in the house and contribute to the public whatever he has to offer.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order, please.

[English]

Mr. Nowlan: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I do not intend to say too much on this subclause. I think that the discussion we have had this afternoon indicates very clearly to the minister the difficulty of keeping a provision such as subclause (d) relating to programming in the bill. The hon. member for Winnipeg South Centre, with whom I do not always agree, was in a felicitous and good Christmas mood when he agreed with the hon. member for Red Deer but, as I say, I do not always agree with the hon. member for Winnipeg South Centre and he obviously does not agree with me in this instance. This is the way that parliament works. In this case, I think he had a very valid point, and before I conclude my remarks I want to ask the minister a question.

I am wondering why subclause (d) is in the bill at all, because in the matter of programming one is bound to run into the difficulty of subjective interpretations of the kind given here which cover a whole range of moods, thoughts, emotions and opinions. I cannot see the need for subclause (d) in view of subclause (g). Here I take exception to what was said by the hon. member for Prince who spoke eloquently, though to my mind misguidedly, on subclause (d). He suggested that this amendment, which I am sure leaves much to be desired though it is trying to express thoughts that many of us have, infringes upon other matters. The minister and the hon. member for Royal, both renowned lawyers, realize that when you start to set out specific provisions you must continue to set them out; otherwise things are left up in the air. I do not think that parliament should become involved in setting up terms of references in regard to programming. This is a matter that should be left to those employed by the corporation and by private television companies.

The hon. member for Greenwood, who spoke as a liberal in the true sense—whatever that may mean in these days—really did not go far enough. I suggest he should not lambaste those who propose other terms of reference. The hon. member for Winnipeg South Centre suggested there were four; I find six, and they are "varied", "comprehensive", "public controversy", "high standard", "Canadian creative" and "other resources". Obviously other hon. members can suggest additional terms of reference, but I think that the hon. member for Greenwood would agree with me—I hope the minister will consider this—when I say we do not need subclause (d) because parliament should not become involved in setting out terms of reference in the matter of programming.

So far as my hon. friend from Prince is concerned, since we are talking about freedom of speech and Canadianism and the amendment moved by the hon. member for Red Deer would impinge upon these two sacred cows, I would ask him to read the wording contained in subclause (g) which in my opinion takes care of the problem we find in subclause (d). Subclause (g) talks about the national broadcasting service and says it should be certain things. For example, it should be a balanced service of information. If this is mediocrity then it has committed the sin referred to by the hon. member for Prince. Obviously if information is given on both sides of a question controversy will be involved. I suggest that information runs right through the middle of subclause (d). Then subclause (g) says the national broadcasting service should provide enlightenment and entertainment, and this is part of programming.

On the matter of Canadianism subclause (g) (iv) says that the national broadcasting service should:

> —contribute to the development of national unity and provide for a continuing expression of Canadian identity;

I suggest that parliament should steer clear of anything having to do with programming and that it should leave it up to the people who are appointed to decide on programming, to the producers and those in the C.B.C. who have the necessary creative talent. There are bound to be reactions from time to time when a program goes too far.

At this point I should like to ask the minister a question, though I have not yet finished my remarks. Is there any section in any act in England which refers specifically to programming?

Mr. MacDonald (Prince): This is Canada, not England.

Mr. Nowlan: I appreciate that, but you are worrying about censorship. A big red herring has been dragged through this debate in connection with the curtailment of the freedom of speech and censorship. Therefore I should like to know, on a point of information, whether the minister is aware of any statute on the books in England which specifically relates to programming?

Miss LaMarsh: I am not certain of that, Mr. Chairman. Had the hon. member been a member of the broadcasting committee which dealt with this bill for some five weeks on the understanding that when it came back to the chamber we would spend two days on it, he would be aware that the B.B.C. is an entity set up under charter by the postmaster general of England. The P.M.G. can give this body directions. It is set up differently from the way the C.B.C. has been set up heretofore.

While I have no desire to interrupt my hon. friend in the full flood of his rhetoric, I think he should be aware of something that may have escaped those who are not committee members, as is apparent from some of the speeches I have heard, namely that two matters are dealt with in this subclause. The subclause deals with the Canadian broadcasting system, which is public, and also with private broadcasting. What is dealt with in subclause (g) is the national broadcasting service that is provided purely by the C.B.C.

• (4:50 p.m.)

Mr. Nowlan: Then, am I interpreting the minister's remarks correctly when I take it that she cannot say that there is anything in the English law that specifically refers to programming? Is that correct?

Speaking of the suggestion that (d) and (g) have different purposes, I still say that (d) refers specifically to programming, public and private. We have been speaking this afternoon of the C.B.C. which is supported by the taxpayer's money. Certainly, to my way of thinking, (d) is encompassed by (g).

I am afraid I was not a member of the committee; I wish I had been because I should not take so much time now. I submit that the C.B.C. is causing concern to parliament because the C.B.C. is a creature of parliament. The terms of reference which are set out in (g) take care, I submit of the arguments or red herrings which have been raised by the hon. member for Prince.

In the legal sense, certainly, there is nothing inherently wrong with parliament becoming involved with programming. Obviously, if you list terms of reference you will run into opposition; someone will oppose some of those terms of reference. The answer is to remove (d). Let competition take care of the C.T.V. people. Let the good judgment of managers determine what constitutes good programming content. Let the people in the C.B.C. have a free hand so far as programming is concerned. If you do that you can remove (d) because that subclause tries to define or to legislate good taste. Remove (d) and parliament need not define good taste.

Miss LaMarsh: I am afraid that I must disagree with my hon. friend on a number of points. I, too, wish that he had been a member of the committee. I hope he will forgive my making a reference to his father, the distinguished member who was the predecessor in his seat. The hon. member's father enjoyed perhaps his greatest fame for the efficacious way in which he handled his responsibilities as the minister reporting for the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Miss LaMarsh: I wish to say a number of things about (d). Members of the committee and members of the house generally have been as concerned as those in the performing arts in Canada have been with respect to the use of creative talent of Canadian origin in broadcasting in Canada. This clause contains the only reference to such talent; there is no other similar reference in the bill. It will be noted particularly that the words "creative and other" were included in the subclause as a result of committee action and a brief from ACTRA.

Second, though I do not know what is incorporated in the charter of the B.B.C. with respect to programming, it seems to me that a criticism which has been levelled particularly at our 1958 broadcasting legislation, which we are seeking to replace with this legislation, is that it did not make sufficiently clear the role of C.B.C. This subclause in particular is unlike anything which appears in any Canadian legislation, save the new transport legislation. We are having difficulty at the present time because the kinds of things which are set out in this bill are not the kinds of things which Canadian legislation heretofore has dealt with.

Because the role of the C.B.C. was not clearly set out previously, particularly in the last few years some of those in management had their own ideas of what could be done. Unquestionably the responsibility of management is to manage. Nevertheless, to paraphrase some words that appeared in the Fowler report on broadcasting, the only thing that really matters in broadcasting is program; the rest is housekeeping. I submit that to spend untold thousands of dollars over several years in looking into public broadcasting in Canada, after all the reports we have received, after the travail we have gone through in bringing this bill before a committee and then to this stage, would be for us to engage in an exercise of futility. I do not say that it is easy for us to come to a decision with respect to the programming of broadcasts, both public and private, in Canada but it is our responsibility to do that.

The government and the house ask the people to contribute over $100 million in tax money for the support of the public side of broadcasting. About the same amount of money comes out of the public purse for something that is certainly not free, the private side of broadcasting.

An hon. Member: More.

Miss LaMarsh: Between $200 to $300 million of Canada's gross national product every year is spent on something that is not concrete, on something that goes out over the air. I refer to programs which are broadcast.

In the most liberal way we have tried to provide the framework for how the money spent on broadcasting by the public and private sectors shall be spent. We have tried not to dictate in matters of taste and we have tried not to circumscribe those who are hired to do the job they have to do. I say, therefore, that it is imperative that subclause (d) remain in the bill and I hope that the amendment now before the committee and any subsequent similar amendments will be defeated and that this subclause will be retained.

Mr. Nowlan: May I ask the hon. lady a question? She may wish to consider what I am about to ask. She may reflect overnight, if she likes, with her advisers on my question.

Miss LaMarsh: Well—

Mr. Nowlan: Does the hon. lady honestly believe that subclause (d), as it is now printed, gives direction to the C.B.C. which is clearer than the direction contained in subclauses (g) (i) and (g) (iv)?

An hon. Member: What are you talking about?

Mr. Nowlan: I am talking about the C.B.C.

Miss LaMarsh: Mr. Chairman, (d) and (g) deal with different matters. It will be seen that (d) says that the public and private broadcasters of this country shall air both sides of any question which deals with matters of public controversy. The standard of presentation is to be as high as possible, and predominantly Canadian creative talent is to be used. That is what it says in (d). On the other hand, (g) is a special case. Under it a mandate is being given to the C.B.C. for the first time by this parliament. For instance, (g)(i) contains new language; that subclause incorporates the C.B.C.'s idea of what its mandate should be.

Many people disagree about what the C.B.C. should show. Some say that it should show nothing but sports, that we should have N.H.L. hockey games every night of the week. Others say that the C.B.C. should show nothing but a variety of educational programs. Still others say that the C.B.C. ought to show all sorts of live drama, and others say that we should not have so much music but more religious programs.

Under this subclause parliament requires the C.B.C. to provide something for everybody in Canada, in a reasonable mix. That is specifically required of the C.B.C. and for that purpose it takes the taxpayers' money. In particular, since the C.B.C. is the instrument which is under the hand of the people of Canada through their parliament, the C.B.C. particularly is the instrument which must be wielded as the communication instrument to build national unity in Canada. Subclauses (d) and (g) are different in character and purpose.

Mr. Thomas (Middlesex West): May I ask the minister one more question?

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order, please. Since it is five o'clock shall I rise, report progress and request leave to sit again at the next sitting of the house?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Progress reported.

• (5:00 p.m.)

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It being five o'clock the house will now proceed to private members' business as listed on today's order paper, namely notices of motions, public bills.

EXPROPRIATION ACT

SUGGESTED AMENDMENT TO AFFORD GREATER PROTECTION AGAINST ARBITRARY INTERFERENCE

Mr. R. N. Thompson (Red Deer) moved:

That, in the opinion of this House, the government should give consideration to amending the provisions of the Expropriation Act (R.S.C. 1952, c. 106) with a view to giving greater protection to citizens against arbitrary interference with their property rights by departments of the federal government, and to the establishment of more suitable procedures for the transfer of title and possession of land expropriated under the authority of this Act.

He said: Mr. Speaker, during the last few days several members of the house have asked me what prompted me to introduce this motion, as I have done for the past four years. May I refer to an incident that occurred in January of 1964 which resulted in my becoming personally familiar with the Expropriation Act now on the statute books. At that time the Department of National Defence had expropriated a quarter section of land from a farmer in my constituency for the purpose of constructing communication towers necessary for defence installations. The department moved in to acquire the land. The farmer protested; he did not think the settlement offered was fair. He did not wish to give up his land. As a result the department made an arrangement by which he could continue to live on the land and pasture his cattle there. The men involved in the construction of the towers repeatedly left the gates open and as a result the cattle got out on to the road allowance. The farmer became angry and an unfortunate situation developed between him, his neighbours in the community where he lived, and the Department of National Defence. Finally the Department of National Defence decided to use the Expropriation Act to take over this land forcibly.

Early in January, 1964, while the house was in recess, I received an urgent message for help. I drove out some ten miles to this property to find that a carload of R.C.M.P. and two truckloads of army personnel were already there together with another truck to haul away personal effects and a stockliner to haul away the stock. The pigs had got out of the chute and soldiers were chasing them through the snowdrifts. The officer in charge had lost his composure and had given the soldiers orders to use axes on the walls of the house and demolish it to the extent that the farmer could no longer live in it. By the time I arrived an angry crowd of neighbours had gathered and we were on the verge of a war between them and the military personnel.

The action taken on this occasion was entirely contrary to provincial laws which do not permit a man to be evicted during the winter months. Further, it was entirely contrary to the expropriation legislation of the province of Alberta which through certain provisions in the provincial legislation protects the rights of individuals when the government finds it necessary to take over private property.

Government expropriation of private property is an unfortunate necessity in the planned development of our cities and towns, but the rules which govern expropriation should require that the needs of the property owner be weighed against the needs of the state. Not only must there be the assurance of fair compensation and adequate warning to property owners that their land is to be expropriated, but public hearings must be held before a judge to determine whether the action is necessary and is in the public interest. Justice demands that no citizen should be deprived of his property without such a hearing. Expropriation powers which permit the filing of a plan to take away the ownership of a man's land when his certificate of title tells him he is still the owner are the reason I have placed this resolution before the house urging that the government amend the Expropriation Act.

[Mr. Thompson.]

Abraham Lincoln once said that when individual rights and property rights conflict, the rights of the individual must be given first place. I believe this is an important statement. When I came back to Ottawa to investigate just what were the expropriation laws of the land which permitted the Department of National Defence to take the action it did against this farmer, I was amazed to find that practically everybody in the department as well as the present Minister of Justice (Mr. Trudeau) and the former minister of justice were in agreement that the expropriation law should be amended to make it less severe. In fact, committees had been working to this effect for a number of years but seemingly they never reached the point at which their findings were incorporated into legislation and presented to the house.

As I interpret the Expropriation Act, the mere fact that we here in parliament pass an act approving the construction of any public work gives officers of the civil service down to quite junior level the right, by merely drawing up and filing a plan in the appropriate registry office, to deprive a citizen of the land he owns and upon which he lives, leaving him nothing except the right to go to a court to collect some money. There is no requirement to follow the usual provincial laws in connection with transfer of title. There is no requirement for a public hearing to find out whether the land is indeed needed for public purposes. In a nation which has placed the legislative fields of property and civil rights within the jurisdiction of the provincial legislatures, the powers granted by this act seems to border on the unconstitutional.

It might indeed be reasonable that in time of war and imminent danger to this country the federal government should have such powers. It was during such times that the present law was passed by this house. In other words, this is emergency legislation, amended in the early years of the second world war and intended to meet the demands of that emergency. It has never been amended to suit peacetime needs and to protect the rights of individual Canadians.

Powers such as these do not belong in the Expropriation Act. They belong in the War Measures Act. We already have far too much punitive federal law on our statute books. I am thinking particularly now of the Income Tax Act and of some provisions of the Excise Tax Act which are justifiable enough in times of national emergency but are an open threat to the liberty and property of citizens now that this country has been at peace for 20 or more years.

This act has been used as a club in the hands of the National Capital Commission. I have been much interested in a case between Ethel V. Grayson and the Queen in reference to which Chief Justice Thorson of the exchequer court had this to say:

• (5:10 p.m.)

Under these provisions a man's land can be lawfully taken from him without his consent, and even without his knowledge or any notice to him, merely by the deposit of record in the proper land titles or land registry office of a duly signed plan and description of the land. This may be done whenever the minister of the department charged with the construction and maintenance of the public work for which the land is to be taken deems it advisable to do so. On such deposit the expropriation of the land is complete without any further act by anyone. Whatever right, title or interest the former owner, or any other person, had in or to the land is immediately extinguished and the land is automatically vested in Her Majesty the Queen free and clear of any claims to or encumbrances upon it. All that is left to the former owner of the land, or a person having had a claim to or an encumbrance upon it, is a claim to compensation, which by section 23 of the act is made to stand in the stead of the land. And I might add here that the settlement of claims to compensation is frequently unconscionably delayed.

I have frequently called attention to these provisions of the law and stated that Canada has the most arbitrary system of expropriation of land in the whole of the civilized world. I am not aware of any other country in the civilized world that exercises its right of eminent domain in the arbitrary manner that Canada does. And unfortunately, the example set by Canada has infected several of the Canadian provinces in which a similar system of expropriation has been adopted.

These words come from a man whose knowledge of the law is without question. He made this statement in one of the very few cases where an individual who had his land expropriated had the means to appeal to the only court available to him, the exchequer court. I know of one case of land expropriation by the National Capital Commission in which a man living within the confines of the metropolitan city of Ottawa took his case to the exchequer court but finally gave up after spending some $28,000 or $29,000 in the presentation of his case. Yet we call this justice. It is time we did something about it.

It is not good enough that we go on and on saying that this law is not the right kind of law and that we must revise it. We simply have not enacted legislation to amend it, to make it as just as it should be and as just as every citizen of our country expects it to be. I believe it would be very easy and proper to provide that before any land is taken for a public purpose by expropriation, except in time of war, a public hearing should be held before a judge so that everyone can be satisfied that it is in the public interest for that land to be taken. No citizen, I believe, should ever be deprived of his property without at least having the privilege of his day in court.

Second, I believe the exact method of expropriation should be spelled out, such as a certain number of days' notice, and disclosure of the intent of the authority. In addition, a safeguard should be provided so that no land would be expropriated unnecessarily or by mistake. I can cite a number of cases of expropriation by the National Capital Commission where this actually was the case, but the land was never returned to the owners from whom it was expropriated after the N.C.C. did not carry out the purpose for which it stated it required the land at the time of expropriation.

I suggest that a clause be inserted elsewhere in the statutes of Canada guaranteeing Canadian citizens the right to own property and that this clause should be specifically quoted in the Expropriation Act. If we did this we would be protecting the rights of Canadian citizens as they deserve to be protected.

Again I say, referring to the words of wisdom passed on to us by Abraham Lincoln, that when individual rights and property rights are in question the right of the individual must be given first place. Mr. Speaker, the expropriation laws of this country do not give the individual citizen first place. Consequently it is high time the government amended those laws in such a way that the rights of the individual Canadian citizen to property ownership are respected and guaranteed.

Mr. D. R. Tolmie (Welland): Mr. Speaker, I would like to congratulate the mover of this motion. He has brought up a most important subject. However, I do not agree with all his remarks and conclusions.

The entire matter of expropriation was brought forcibly to my attention in December, 1965, when the St. Lawrence Seaway Authority expropriated approximately 4,000 acres in the Welland area for a Welland canal bypass. This was a major land acquisition and affected the welfare of approximately 330 families. The impact on my riding was far reaching and most dramatic. It made me aware of possible injustices and possible inadequacies in our existing expropriation laws.

My remarks are neither in defence nor criticism of the present government. Our federal expropriation laws have been in existence for many years, under both Conservative and Liberal administrations, so there is no partisan blame to be assigned. I know that various governments have considered changes in these laws but, as often happens with this type of obscure legislation, with no aggressive lobby to promote changes lethargy sets in and no action is taken. However, I am happy to relate to the house that something is being done. The government is reviewing the entire situation with respect to expropriation and intends to bring in radical amendments to our expropriation laws. I do not believe this will be in this session. I hope it will be in the next session. This brings up a most important point.

The lack of review of many of our statutes indicates a real need for a continuing perusal of all our statutes to ensure their adequacy to meet changing times, conditions and circumstances. Therefore I advocate most strongly the establishment of a permanent law reform committee to appraise our statutes continually, including such ones as the federal Expropriation Act which was first enacted in 1886. This permanent committee could be comprised of government representatives, members from all parties in the house, and recognized experts in all broad fields of knowledge which affect the material and spiritual well-being of our citizens. It would be their duty to examine all existing statutes and make recommendations for change.

A prime example of this need was our divorce act. It had been in force for many years without change. It was entirely discordant with present codes of conduct, family views and marriage concepts. For years thousands of Canadians suffered under that antiquated and unjust act. Eventually the general opposition to it seeped through to parliamentarians and finally action was taken. A law reform committee could have made a study of that statute and made recommendations to the government in power perhaps years ago. In all probability the net result would have been the earlier rectification of the most unsatisfactory state of our divorce laws.

The reason I make these observations at this time is that the motion before the house, urging the government to consider changes in the law of expropriation, clearly indicates the necessity for a permanent type of law revision or reform committee to be given the responsibility of continually reviewing our statutes.

As I have indicated, the St. Lawrence Seaway Authority expropriated 4,000 acres in the Welland area. Thus it can be seen that the whole question of expropriation is most important and far reaching. At the present time another gigantic expropriation is taking place in the St. Catharines area. Expropriations are being carried out all across Canada. More will follow. I agree with the mover of this motion that a change in the laws should be made as quickly and as efficiently as possible.

Let us take a brief glimpse at the history of expropriation. In our contemporary society property right is no longer the absolute right it used to be years ago, no matter what Abraham Lincoln said about it. Ownership of real estate is now subject to all kinds of regulations concerning town planning, zoning and construction bylaws. One of the most radical encroachments on private property rights is the power to expropriate. Expropriation in Canada is governed by statutory law, and some of the statutes provide for compensation and some do not.

• (5:20 p.m.)

This is perhaps a revelation to members of the house. When dealing with existing expropriation legislation in Canada one starts off with the premise that expropriation is one case in modern life where public and private interests clash. The first important question in matters of expropriation is to find out who has the right to expropriate one's property and what this right is. The right to expropriate, being an unusual and far reaching right, must be found in the express words in the statute.

It should be observed that owing to Canada's federal constitution and the division of legislative powers between the federal and provincial governments there are two sets of expropriation laws, federal and provincial. The most important act so far as the federal government is concerned is the Expropriation Act. Under this act the minister of any federal government department charged with the construction and maintenance of any public work may take possession of any land, real property, water or stream which he judges to be necessary for the public welfare.

In addition to the Expropriation Act at least one dozen acts of parliament give expropriation powers to federal bodies including crown corporations. Some of these are the Railway Act, the War Measures Act, the National Harbours Board Act, the Dominion Water Power Act and the Canadian Broadcasting Act. In the province of Ontario approximately 17 different acts include provisions by which the powers of expropriation can be exercised. It should be noted that expropriation proceedings are divided into two parts, the expropriation itself which results in the transfer of the owner's title to property to the expropriating body and the allocation of compensation for the land expropriated.

In practical terms—and I agree with the previous speaker—there is nothing one can do to oppose the principle of expropriation. There is no requirement that notice be given. Immediately the order is registered and title passes the expropriating authority can take possession. On the surface this would appear to be a most drastic and perhaps arbitrary procedure, but I think it should be given some consideration. I believe there is another side of the coin. If notice were given and there was a court hearing, in all probability—this has been the experience in the past—land speculators would buy up these properties. Fast sales would be made and when the actual expropriation took place the price of the land would be highly inflated. Although the idea of sudden expropriation perhaps has a traumatic effect on the owner involved, the purpose is to freeze the land values for one purpose, that the public, Canadian citizens, are not paying more for the land than they should.

Once the land is formally expropriated the next vexing question is how to arrive at the amount of compensation. In principle the compensation should place the owner in the same economic position he was in before the expropriation. Unfortunately, variations in the wording of different statutes have led the courts to apply somewhat different standards under different statutes for determining the compensation. Authorities on the matter all agree that there is a definite need for a uniform procedure in effecting expropriation, coupled with uniform compensation provisions.

The expropriating authority normally obtains an appraisal of the property. If through negotiation the two parties agree, that is the end of the matter. If there is disagreement the party which is the expropriating authority obtains another appraisal. If there is still disagreement the only recourse is to the exchequer court. So it can be seen that the expropriation procedure in Canada is drastic and final but, if due consideration is given to it, I believe it will be apparent that perhaps in the general interest of the Canadian taxpayer this type of procedure is necessary.

The principles for determining compensation are most important to the parties concerned. Some of the various statutes which authorize expropriation do not even mention the means of arriving at the amount of compensation, but the general principles can be found in the leading cases. One salient point emerges. The amount to be paid is the value to the owner, not the value to the taker. It is also the value to the owner and not simply the market value. The first thing an expropriated owner should do, if there is any sign of disagreement about price, is to hire a competent appraiser. I bring out these points in order to refute the argument to the effect that the expropriated owner is helpless. The appraiser can give the owner an honest and unbiased appraisal of the property. This enables the owner to decide whether or not he should accept the offer. Later, if necessary, that appraiser can give evidence before the court.

When a market value has been obtained the total claim in a federal expropriation should normally be computed by adding to the best market value the special value to the owner, the interest from the date the owner goes out of possession, the usual 10 per cent compulsory taking allowance—this is an important point because it shows a reasonable attitude—and, where only part of the property has been taken, a claim for severance. The losses involved for the owner are also taken into account. These include, for example, the cost to move to another location, the cost of dismantling and reassembling machinery and equipment, the loss because of increased costs in the new location, and the cost of dislocation while moving. Compensation for expropriation of course must not be exorbitant because it must be remembered that the Canadian taxpayers must be protected against paying an exorbitant price for property.

The previous speaker mentioned his experience in expropriation matters. I should like to mention mine. From personal knowledge I feel that the extensive expropriations carried out in the Welland area by the seaway authority have been carried out with efficiency and tact. No doubt there have been isolated cases of injustice, but the seaway authority working under the existing law in my opinion has interpreted it fairly and liberally. Out of 331 expropriations only one may have to be decided by the court.

However, there is one aspect of this type of expropriation which bothers me. I know this has caused hardship in my area. This hardship results from the policy of taking the appraised value at the time of the expropriation and then not making the payment until months later. When the expropriated owner finally receives his money, based on a market value of a year previously, he finds that in the interval, because of the hundreds of buyers who have been competing for adjacent property, prices of properties in which he might be interested are inflated. When the expropriated owner looks for another property he finds in some cases that he must accept a property of lesser value than the one he left. In my opinion this is an injustice. I believe the government should investigate this aspect and make recommendations in this regard immediately.

I believe the expropriating body should treat each case individually. There is a splendid example of this in the Welland area. A family with 12 children had their property expropriated. They were living in a very comfortable home. It was suitable for them. However, when they received the expropriation money it was not sufficient to buy a home which would suit their needs. This is where extra effort and compensation are required. The seaway authority went to great lengths in finding a comfortable home for these people.

I believe that all expropriating authorities should hire appraisers not only for their competence but also for their compassion and their understanding of human nature. We must never forget that we are taking someone's home which has intangible values, and an individual's dignity and self-respect must always be the prime concern of an expropriating authority. I also believe, as the previous speaker mentioned, that there should be a more expeditious and summary procedure for expropriation. The existing system involves arbitration which is cumbersome, costly and slow.

• (5:30 p.m.)

Furthermore, if the expropriating authority wishes to take possession of a property before a final award is adjudicated then that authority should pay a substantial percentage of the appraised value. This is done by the St. Lawrence Seaway Authority which pays 80 per cent of the appraised value if a person wishes to leave his premises and property to locate elsewhere.

Very often the decision to expropriate is based upon preliminary surveys before the authority goes ahead with expropriation. If any damage is caused then the owner should be compensated. Provision should be included in our expropriation laws to grant assistance to certain categories of expropriated persons. For instance, an indemnity should be given to tenants with low incomes when the buildings they live in are expropriated, and the expropriating authority should also assist such families in their efforts to find other accommodation. Provisions should be explicitly placed in the expropriation laws to assist the resettlement of small tradespeople, craftsmen and small manufacturers. Again, there should be greater uniformity in the actual expropriation procedures and principles of compensation across Canada.

One proposal which seems to have merit is that relating to the drafting of a national code of expropriation which would set forth one uniform procedure. The anomalies and diversities resulting from too large a number of different laws dealing with expropriation would disappear if we had a uniform and equitable system of expropriation described clearly, simply and in a practical manner. Again I commend the hon. member for bringing this subject before the house. With the rapid and radical evolution of state ownership for public purposes the entire question of expropriation rights is in my opinion of transcendent importance.

Mr. Andrew Brewin (Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, I should first of all like to thank the hon. member for Vegreville (Mr. Fane) for his courtesy in permitting me to precede him. I think he was ahead of me and had the right to speak first. I am very glad to be able to give enthusiastic support to the motion of the hon. member for Red Deer (Mr. Thompson), and I commend him for bringing this urgent and important matter forward.

The present expropriation laws are a source of very serious injustice to quite a large number of people. We all know that expropriation is necessary because of expanding public and government needs. The public interest requires sometimes that private property rights give way. However, we have to recognize that there are highly emotional issues involved when people are asked, for the public benefit, to forgo property for which they may have worked and in which they have deep feelings as well as their fortunes invested. The very fact that this parliament, among other legislative bodies, is constantly expanding the sphere in which expropriation takes place makes it all the more important that we should take our responsibility in seeing that there are not injustices in this field.

I want to commend to the attention of the house only two or three points in respect of the motion and the remarks of the hon. member for Red Deer. The first is the point he made that there should be some sort of a review by a tribunal and a public hearing before land is actually taken. When a public authority or department decides it requires lands it should inform the person whose property will be taken and he should have the right to a public hearing to ascertain whether that land or property is reasonably necessary for the purpose for which it is sought. A hearing of this sort would make a tremendous difference and a provision of this kind should be included in expropriation procedures.

The other main difficulty that arises relates to the question of compensation. This is a very difficult matter because we live in a complex age in which values are constantly shifting. This is not an easy matter to determine. The plain fact is that the balance is not even as between the state and the individual. The state or the public authority is armed with plenty of money, experience and expert advisers both in the legal and valuation fields. The individual often feels helpless because he has not the means to hire the necessary people if a balance of justice is to be found. Any procedures which are brought about must take account of that factor to make sure that the individual whose property is expropriated has the means of obtaining the proper expert advice in the valuation and legal fields. Without it he has no genuine bargaining power and cannot expect or hope to get complete justice. This is tremendously important because there are only a few individuals who have the means or the desire to litigate a matter in the exchequer court or other courts. I imagine that in nearly all cases there is a settlement long before they reach the courts, but a settlement will not be fair if the expropriating authority has all the power, knowledge and bargaining experience and the individual has none.

As the last speaker suggested, I believe that parliament should be foremost in setting up model legislation in this field. I suppose that our Expropriation Act and the Exchequer Court Act as well, because it comes into this, are as antiquated pieces of legislation as will be found in Canada. The province of Ontario and other provinces have moved toward a more satisfactory expropriation procedure. Even these are not satisfactory. The law reform committee of the province of Ontario has recommended further important changes.

I promised my hon. friend to be brief and I will live up to that promise by saying, with all the force I can command, to the government or any of its representatives who are here and paying attention to this debate that what the hon. member for Red Deer has suggested should have very high priority in the legislative program of the government. It should have high priority because it is not good that this parliament should be responsible for the right to interfere with the property and the lives of individual Canadians when the remedies of those Canadians are, by reason of the deficiencies of the legislation passed by this parliament, of such a nature they do not provide them with a fair chance to meet the problems with which they are suddenly faced.

I do not think we can underestimate the importance of this matter because justice is involved as well as the deep feelings of a great number of our citizens. I am not always in agreement with the hon. member for Red Deer but in this instance I think his motion is timely and deserves the greatest support possible.

Mr. F. J. W. Fane (Vegreville): Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to have this opportunity to commend the hon. member for Red Deer (Mr. Thompson) for bringing the subject of expropriation before the house. I thank the hon. member for Greenwood (Mr. Brewin) for his assistance in promoting changes in the acts relating to expropriation. I was very pleased to hear the fine address of the hon. member for Welland (Mr. Tolmie), although I must say it will be very difficult for me to match his eloquence. His remarks were very understandable and much to the point.

• (5:40 p.m.)

Since the hon. member for Red Deer told the house how he became so very interested in the matter of expropriation, perhaps I should say a word or two about how I became so interested. My interest is not of so great a vintage as his. As hon. members know, during this session I have addressed the house on this subject on October 4 and November 21.

The reason I became interested in expropriation was that Canadian National Railways decided to build a spur line 12½ miles in length through the Fort Saskatchewan settlement in my constituency to a government subsidized Imperial Oil fertilizer plant just south of the town of Redwater.

Canadian National Railways notified 23 farmers, without having given any previous warning, that a portion of the land on their farms had been expropriated and registered in the land titles office. This was before they received any notification that the spur line was to go through their farms. This is a most unfair and, to my mind, very wrong way to conduct this type of business. I fully realize that there are cases where summary action must be taken to expropriate land, but in this case I think it was done in a most unfair and undemocratic way.

This is not the only case in which I am interested. As I remarked on November 21 last, as reported at page 4541 of Hansard, a few days after I had made my first address I was telephoned by a lady in Toronto whose home, a solid brick house, had been expropriated by the city of Toronto. No settlement had been made and her house was just destroyed. This lady's land was not going to be put to any good use, but that is what happened. This matter has not been settled. The authorities eventually offered her $10,000 for property that could have been sold for somewhere around $30,000, and she had to go to court. I do not know what the result has been.

There are many other cases of this type of thing. I have been informed of similar cases in the city of Edmonton and in other parts of Canada where farmland has been most summarily expropriated without the people concerned being given any opportunity to make arrangements ahead of time. I believe this is not right and is not in accordance with our democratic principles in this country.

We have on the statute books of Canada the Bill of Rights which ensures certain civil rights to the people of this country. The Bill of Rights provides as follows:

> It is hereby recognized and declared that in Canada there have existed and shall continue to exist without discrimination by reason of race, national origin, colour, religion or sex, the following human rights and fundamental freedoms, namely,
>
> (a) the right of the individual to life, liberty, security of the person and enjoyment of property, and the right not to be deprived thereof except by due process of law;

I very freely admit that chapter 106 of the Revised Statutes of Canada, 1952, which covers the Expropriation Act, gives certain people the right to expropriate private property. However, I think that the owner of the property should have the right and the privilege not to have his land or property expropriated until he has refused to deal with the department that wants to take over certain of his property for improvement.

Section 3 of the Expropriation Act gives the minister of whatever department is concerned the power to enter into and upon any land to whomsoever belonging, survey and take levels of the same, and make such borings, or sink such trial pits as he deems necessary for any purpose relative to the public work. This section of the act goes on for another half page. I do not have the time at my disposal to read into the record all the things the section provides.

It is high time that we in this country who are so proud of our nation, who are so proud of our democratic principles and civil rights, made it mandatory that a person affected by the act be consulted and given an opportunity to make an agreement with those who want his land. This should be done before any expropriation is effected. After land is expropriated the only recourse that an owner has, if he is not satisfied with the settlement offered, is to appeal to the Exchequer Court of Canada.

In almost every case brought before the Exchequer Court of Canada there is a minimum cost of about $20,000. Most people who have had their land expropriated do not have that kind of money to spend in an attempt to save property that is being taken away from them. I believe that of necessity these cases have to be heard in Ottawa, but it is a very expensive matter for people from my part of the country, for instance, to come here and have their case tried before the exchequer court. The $20,000 I mentioned does not cover the payment of the legal representatives of the people who are making the appeal.

• (5:50 p.m.)

I think that in cases like this the onus of proving the right to expropriate the property should be on the federal government or the government concerned, and the costs of the appeal to the exchequer court should be borne by the federal government and not by the person whose property is expropriated. It should be absolutely mandatory that the civil rights provided in the Bill of Rights and in most of the laws of our country be adhered to. A person should not have to suffer the expropriation of his property in a manner which, in the cases to which I referred at the beginning of my remarks, practically amounts to theft because it was not necessary for Canadian National Railways to build a spur line from Fort Saskatchewan to Redwater through some of the best farming land in Canada and to cut up these farms in the way they did. The C.N.R. did not honour the commitments which were made on its behalf to build underpasses for the passage of stock when the line was built. Also the C.N.R. did not construct proper crossings over the railway line.

I believe that a time limit should be set when final settlement must take place. I know of cases where litigation has continued for years and no settlement has been reached. I definitely believe that the government should bear the cost of appeals to the Exchequer Court of Canada.

This is all I have to say on this subject. Again I wish to commend the hon. member for Red Deer for bringing this matter before the house and I thank you, Mr. Chairman, for allowing me the opportunity to make my comments.

[Translation]

Mr. Auguste Choquette (Lotbinière): Mr. Speaker, I feel this resolution must be read carefully before going any further in the discussion.

Does the hon. member wish to put a question?

[English]

Mr. Fulton: Is the hon. member talking it out?

Mr. Choquette: Would the hon. member like to repeat the remark he has just made? Perhaps he should withdraw it. I know some separatists who come from British Columbia.

Mrs. MacInnis (Vancouver-Kingsway): The hon. member should withdraw that remark.

Mr. Choquette: I am sure the hon. member for Vancouver-Kingsway is not one of them. She is too charming for that.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, the resolution now before us reads as follows:

> That, in the opinion of this House, the government should give consideration to amending the provisions of the Expropriation Act (R.S.C. 1952, c. 106) with a view to giving greater protection to citizens against arbitrary interference with their property rights by departments of the federal government, and to the establishment of more suitable procedures for the transfer of title and possesison of land expropriated under the authority of this Act.

Mr. Speaker, there is no doubt that the hon. member who sponsors this resolution certainly deserves credit for bringing to the attention of the house a problem which is real. It is true that sometimes, the way in which an expropriation, is conducted, the way the negotiations are opened and carried on shows a lack of administrative flexibility and complaints may be justified. I think that the hon. member had the praiseworthy intention of pointing out that problem to the house.

No doubt that the previous speakers mentioned earlier that the Expropriation Act is being reviewed and that there is every reason to expect that, in the near future, some important amendments will be submitted to the legislators. We should not therefore advocate the abolition of that essential system if public works or others are to be performed quickly and efficiently in our common interest.

Mr. Speaker, may I call it six o'clock? I could continue my remarks at the next session when we will reconsider that resolution.

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The hour for the consideration of private members' business has expired. It being six o'clock this house stands adjourned until 2.30 p.m. tomorrow afternoon.

At six o'clock the house adjourned, without question put, pursuant to standing order.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Thursday, January 25, 1968

The house met at 2.30 p.m.

CANADIAN CONSTITUTION

CORRESPONDENCE RESPECTING DOMINION-PROVINCIAL CONFERENCE

Mr. D. S. Macdonald (Parliamentary Secretary to Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, yesterday several members were inquiring about copies of correspondence between the Prime Minister and various provincial premiers in respect of the forthcoming federal-provincial conference. I am now in a position to table these.

Hon. R. A. Bell (Carleton): Mr. Speaker, the practice in respect of correspondence with the provinces has been to have the letters printed as an appendix to Hansard. I think in view of the importance of the forthcoming conference, this practice should be followed.

Mr. Speaker: Is that agreed?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale): Then, with the consent of the house I should like to table copies of certain correspondence between the Prime Minister and various provincial premiers in respect of the conference.

Mr. Starr: And they should be made an appendix to Hansard.

Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale): I should like to have them printed as an appendix to Hansard.

[Editor's Note: For correspondence above referred to, see Appendix.]

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

NORTH KOREA—POSITION OF CANADIAN GOVERNMENT IN LIGHT OF INTERCEPTION OF USS "PUEBLO"

On the orders of the day:

Mr. W. B. Nesbitt (Oxford): I have a question I should like to direct to the Acting Prime Minister. Is it a fact that by a declaration made on August 7, 1953, all 16 allied countries involved in the Korean war are pledged to resist unprovoked aggression promptly and in unison? If so, what position is now being taken by the Canadian government with respect to the armed seizure on the high seas of the United States ship Pueblo by units of the North Korean navy?

Hon. Paul Hellyer (Acting Prime Minister): I am not in a position to answer the specific question raised by the hon. gentleman but I can say we are following with interest developments in connection with this very serious matter. Communications with our allies continue. This is a matter of great concern directly to the United States because they are the ones involved. They are exercising, I think, caution and restraint in their approach.

Mr. Nesbitt: I realize that the Minister of Transport who is acting as prime minister today might have been taken somewhat unawares by my question, though I did try to give him notice. This is a serious subject and I am wondering whether the Acting Prime Minister might not be in a position later this day to ask the house for leave to revert to motions and make a statement informing us whether or not the government is bound by this declaration, to which we are a party, to come to the aid of the United States or South Korea should further unprovoked hostilities take place, or should the United States attempt to liberate the USS Pueblo.

Mr. Hellyer: Even if I were able to get the information requested during the course of the afternoon I am not sure that I would be in a position to make a statement. This involves, I would suspect, a question of the interpretation of an agreement. I also believe that the allegation that this incident occurred in international waters would be relevant, and I certainly would not wish to express what would amount to a legal opinion on the subject.

Mr. Nesbitt: Is the minister telling the house that the government is not satisfied that this seizure was made in international waters?

Mr. Hellyer: No. I said the allegation was made that it was, and that is what I believe to have been the case.

Inquiries of the Ministry

Hon. Gordon Churchill (Winnipeg South Centre): As preparation for possible heavy responsibilities in the future, would the Acting Prime Minister not take this opportunity to get some additional information for the house right now before the question period is over, and let the house and the Canadian people know exactly what are the facts about the situation internationally which is, apparently, very grave?

Mr. Hellyer: I would be delighted to give to the hon. gentleman and to the house all possible information, but this is a subject of such magnitude that even if I were to attempt to spend the next few minutes seeking to amplify my own inadequate knowledge I am not sure I could satisfy the hon. gentleman.

VIET NAM—ALLEGED USE OF POISON GAS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Heath Macquarrie (Queens): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a question to the hon. member for Restigouche-Madawaska in his capacity as chairman of the standing committee on external affairs. It is prompted by recent allegations made by Dr. Vennema in Viet Nam, when he was there under the auspices of the Department of External Affairs, concerning the use of poison gas by the United States military forces in Viet Nam. I should like to ask whether Dr. Vennema is being summoned as a witness before the standing committee so that this serious matter may be looked into further.

Mr. Jean-Eudes Dubé (Restigouche-Madawaska): No, Mr. Speaker.

NATIONAL DEFENCE

NORAD—ALERT FOLLOWING INTERCEPTION OF USS "PUEBLO"

On the orders of the day:

Hon. D. S. Harkness (Calgary North): Has the Canadian government received any official information from the United States government with regard to the call-up of some 14,000 reservists and the purposes and implications of such a move in connection with the seizure of USS Pueblo? Can he tell us whether any of our NORAD stations have been placed on an accelerated alert as a result of these developments?

Hon. Léo Cadieux (Minister of National Defence): To answer those questions, I may say, first of all, that as far as I am aware the Department of National Defence has not been informed of the call up of 14,000 reservists. Next, I am informed that no special alert has been declared by the NORAD stations.

TRANSFER OF MILITARY BAND FROM CAMP GAGETOWN TO DOWNSVIEW

On the orders of the day:

Mr. J. Chester MacRae (York-Sunbury): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of National Defence. I apologize to him for not having advised him of my intention to ask this question but perhaps he will take it as notice. Has the minister received representations and protests concerning the removal of the last major military band in Camp Gagetown, the Royal Canadian Dragoons band, to the Downsview air base. If so, would he be prepared to advise us of the answer he gave to these protests?

Mr. Speaker: I think this important question should be placed on the order paper.

FINANCE

REPORT OF TASK FORCE RESPECTING FOREIGN OWNERSHIP IN CANADA

On the orders of the day:

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Burnaby-Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a question to the President of the Privy Council with respect to the report of the task force on foreign ownership and control of the Canadian economy. Now that the minister has received the report, and I assume this report has been discussed in cabinet, is it the minister's intention to make the report public?

Hon. Walter Gordon (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, as soon as the French translation has been obtained, the report, in both languages, will be tabled in the house.

Mr. Douglas: As a supplementary question, may I ask whether the government also intends to prepare a white paper indicating its intentions with respect to the recommendations contained in this report?

Mr. Gordon: Mr. Speaker, after reviewing the report, which is a very voluminous document, the government reached the conclusion that it would be best to table it immediately rather than to delay its publication.

Hon. George Hees (Northumberland): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a supplementary question to the Acting Prime Minister. Was the Minister of Finance expressing government policy when he stated in Winnipeg on Friday that Canada must welcome development capital from outside its borders to guarantee the industrialization of much of the country, particularly the west?

Hon. Paul Hellyer (Acting Prime Minister): I am certain he was speaking on behalf of the government when he said that, Mr. Speaker. I think it is agreed by everyone that we have to have additional assistance, due to our inadequate supply of development capital, but this does not mean that there cannot be room for difference of opinion as to the form the infusion of this capital should take, and that there cannot be room for reasonable argument as to what the rules of engagement should be and the terms under which those using it should be good corporate Canadian citizens.

Mr. Hees: Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a further supplementary question to the President of the Privy Council. Does he agree with what the Acting Prime Minister has stated is government policy?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Douglas: Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a further supplementary question to the President of the Privy Council. He said that the report was to be made public but he did not answer the question as to whether or not, subsequent to making the report public, the government intends to issue a white paper setting forth its views on the matter.

Mr. Gordon: I think the government's views, Mr. Speaker, will become apparent in due course. I am not convinced myself that in addition to making the report public anything much would be gained by spending perhaps another considerable number of months in preparing a white paper. The government's intentions as to future procedure will be made known—

Some hon. Members: In due course.

Mr. Gordon: —will be made known at the time the report is tabled.

POSSIBLE IMPOSITION BY UNITED STATES OF IMPORT SURCHARGES

On the orders of the day:

Hon. George Hees (Northumberland): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Finance. Since learning yesterday of the report from Washington that the United States government is considering the imposition of import surcharges as a means of helping to correct its balance of payments, has the minister been in touch with the United States government to learn whether this report is true and, if it is, has he advised the United States government that any such action will immediately be matched by Canada?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I have had inquiries made in Washington and I cannot ascertain that that is the intention of the United States government.

YUKON—RESTORATION OF CUT-BACKS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Erik Nielsen (Yukon): Mr. Speaker, may I direct this question to the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development. It arises as a result of certain assurances given by the minister on Monday last, through the commissioner of the Yukon to the legislative council of the Yukon, to the effect that he would be requesting the standing committee on Indian affairs and northern development to meet with the council to discuss constitutional changes for the Yukon.

In order to eliminate existing doubts, will the minister assure the people of the Yukon that the cut-backs, totalling approximately $13 million, of federal government money will be restored to the government of the Yukon forthwith, now that the council has passed the taxing legislation upon which the minister had insisted?

Hon. Arthur Laing (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): Mr. Speaker, the so-called cut-backs were the result of repudiation by council of an agreement made here with me. I told them the agreement would become effective on the date when they undertook to respect the agreement they made in Ottawa. They have now done that, so the agreement which we made in respect of funds coming forward from us will date from the day when they accepted their undertaking.

Mr. Nielsen: Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask a supplementary question which is intended for clarification. Are the people of the Yukon then to understand that all the so-called cut-backs will in fact be restored now that the necessary taxing legislation has been passed including the cost sharing program under the agreement?

Mr. Laing: Mr. Speaker, the council of the Yukon is fully aware of the undertaking I gave and which they accepted at that time. I believe they have now agreed, with only one person objecting, that they should have lived up to the agreement they undertook when they were in Ottawa.

Mr. Nielsen: I have a further supplementary question. What I am seeking here is an assurance for the people of the territory. All I am asking the minister is whether he can assure the people of the Yukon that the so-called cut-backs, to use his own term, will be restored pursuant to the provision of the agreement, which was met, and now that the council has in fact passed the taxing legislation?

Mr. Laing: Our agreement stands. We have kept it, and it will date from the time they voted to respect the agreement they made. I believe that was on Monday. I am delighted that the impasse, which the hon. member reported to this house, in respect of our relations with the council has now been broken.

GRAND RIVER CONSERVATION PROJECT—FAILURE TO APPROVE

On the orders of the day:

Mr. A. D. Hales (Wellington South): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question concerning this matter of federal cost-sharing cut-backs, and I should like to—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I am wondering whether this is actually a supplementary question.

Mr. Hales: It is relative to the same subject of federal cost-sharing referred to by the hon. member for Yukon, Your Honour. I address my supplementary question to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. Would this federal cost-sharing cut-back arrangement be the reason the Grand River conservation project has not been approved?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The question is out of order.

POSSIBILITY OF AMENDMENTS TO FARM IMPROVEMENT LOANS ACT

On the orders of the day:

Mr. S. J. Korchinski (Mackenzie): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Finance. I should like to ask him whether it is his intention in the present session of parliament to introduce amendments to the Farm Improvement Loans Act which would provide higher interest loans by the banks.

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I am not in a position to answer that question today since I have not had an opportunity of discussing the matter with my colleagues.

Mr. Korchinski: I have a supplementary question for clarification. Could the minister explain what he meant yesterday when he expressed the hope that in the meantime banks would continue to give their customary support to this program?

Mr. Sharp: Mr. Speaker, I think I indicated clearly in my answer to the question yesterday that the government does propose to bring forward amendments to the Farm Improvement Loans Act which will help to maintain the volume, although I would like to repeat what I said yesterday that the decline has not been as great as has sometimes been represented.

CUT-BACK IN FEDERAL CONTRIBUTION TO COST-SHARING AGREEMENTS

On the orders of the day:

Hon. W. G. Dinsdale (Brandon-Souris): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Finance. Could he inform the house whether or not the government has intimated to the provinces that there has been or will be a cut-back in the current cost sharing agreements with the various provincial governments?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I am a little uncertain as to the exact purport of the hon. gentleman's question. Would he repeat it in a more specific form?

Mr. Dinsdale: I thought my question was quite specific. I am asking whether the government has intimated to the provinces that there will be a cut-back in the federal government's contribution to the cost sharing agreements.

Mr. Sharp: Mr. Speaker, there are many cost sharing agreements. During the recent meetings that I had with provincial ministers of finance I asked for the co-operation of the provinces in controlling expenditures. That, of course, meant that where federal and provincial governments were sharing costs we hoped there would be co-operation between us.

Mr. Dinsdale: I have a supplementary question. The minister asked me to be specific. I wonder whether I could ask him to be specific. Is he saying that there has been no cut-back in the federal contribution to these cost sharing agreements?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member has asked the question three times now, and I think it is time we went on to another question.

Mr. Dinsdale: Mr. Speaker, the minister asked me to be specific, and I am wondering whether he would be specific as well. Is he saying there has been no cut-back to the federal contributions in the cost sharing agreements?

Mr. Sharp: The hon. gentleman is being very mysterious. If he has a specific case in mind, I would be prepared to answer it.

Mr. Speaker: Perhaps we might go on to some different specific questions.

FISHERIES

SEALS—USE OF SHOTGUN IN SLAUGHTERING PROCEDURES

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Lloyd R. Crouse (Queens-Lunenburg): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a question to the Minister of Fisheries. Following a study by British scientists in London of the Universities Federation for Animal Welfare, a report was issued stating that shotguns, captive bolt pistols and the use of strychnine poison in the killing of seals should be banned, and the shooting of seal pups by rifle from a boat forbidden. In view of the fact that the killing of seals should be done as humanely as possible, did the minister or his officials study the British report before authorizing tests to use a 410 gauge shotgun during the hunting season which opens in March?

Hon. H.-J. Robichaud (Minister of Fisheries): Yes, Mr. Speaker, the report made by the British scientists was studied and I was delighted to see that they are taking practically the same attitude as we are taking here in Canada. With respect to the experiment we will be carrying on during the seal season in March, the Ontario Humane Society has provided us with a different type of weapon. We have agreed to try it on a limited scale and our officials will be accompanied by a veterinarian and by a representative of the S.P.C.A. during the hunt. We will then be able to determine the effect of such a weapon.

Mr. Crouse: The minister's announcement stated that the decision to make the tests followed a recent meeting by the department with representatives of the Ontario Humane Society, the Canadian Wildlife Service, the Defence Research Board and the National Research Council. Has the minister consulted with officials of the sealing industry on this matter and will the sealing industry officials be present when the minister's shotgun policy goes into effect?

Mr. Robichaud: I do not think it would be right to call it the minister's shotgun policy because the minister is practically convinced that the use of the shotgun will not be too effective in this kind of operation. I thought, however, that it was advisable to try this new type of weapon with limited power as an experiment. The members of the sealing industry are aware of this experiment.

Mr. Crouse: Since it is necessary in the national interest that the highest value for the seal pelts be obtained, will the hit or miss methods practised by seal killers operating from private planes be stopped or regulated?

Mr. Robichaud: I think I have already made it clear that it was our intention to control or limit the operation of airplanes during the seal hunt. I would hope that this year no new licences will be issued. Also, due to the fact that the opening of the season is delayed by ten days this by itself will limit the operations by planes.

[Translation]

AGRICULTURE

MILK—PRODUCTION PROGRAM FOR 1968

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Gérard Laprise (Chapleau): Mr. Speaker, yesterday I put a question to the parliamentary secretary to the Minister of Agriculture.

Is he now in a position to answer my question?

[English]

Mr. Bruce S. Beer (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the minister, who is attending the annual meeting of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture today, I may say that meetings have been held with national and provincial representatives of the milk producers and farmers organizations as well as with the provincial milk marketing authorities to discuss short and long term dairy policy.

Inquiries of the Ministry

GREENHOUSE PRODUCTS—REQUEST FOR PROTECTION AGAINST LOW COST IMPORTS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Bruce S. Beer (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, while I am on my feet may I also reply to the question raised yesterday by the hon. member for Kent, (Ont.) (Mr. Danforth) regarding representations made by the greenhouse industry with regard to protection against low cost imports. Since the action that has been requested would be a matter of policy, any decision will be announced in the usual way. In the meantime the hon. member will be aware that this whole question has also been referred to the tariff board for study.

SEARCH AND RESCUE

SUGGESTION THAT PRIVATE AIRCRAFT CARRY BEACON TRANSMITTER

On the orders of the day:

Mr. H. W. Herridge (Kootenay West): Mr. Speaker, I wish to ask a question of definite national significance and of importance to people interested in saving lives and I should like to direct it to the Acting Prime Minister who is the Minister of Transport. This is of concern to people in the district, from which I come, because of the loss of private aircraft.

In view of the unfortunate loss of life in the operation of private aircraft, and the extremely high cost of search and rescue operations, has the minister given consideration to regulations which would require that all private aircraft carry a rescue beacon transmitter?

Hon. Paul Hellyer (Acting Prime Minister): This question has been considered several times, Mr. Speaker. To the best of my knowledge, and I would have to check this, no decision to make this mandatory has as yet been made. This involves the question of cost and the question also of the reliability of the instruments. However, with more recent developments they seem to be quite useful for certain types of aircraft. If my hon. friend would like a more lengthy reply I will have to take his question as notice.

Hon. George Hees (Northumberland): Mr. Speaker, in view of the obvious benefits both to those who might be lost in aircraft and those sent out to search lost aircraft, would the minister not press his colleagues to see that this measure is brought in as a government regulation?

[Mr. Beer.]

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member is making representations to the government.

NATIONAL CAPITAL

ALLEGED DELAY IN SETTING UP JOINT COMMITTEE

On the orders of the day:

Hon. R. A. Bell (Carleton): May I direct my question to the Minister of Public Works, Mr. Speaker? Since almost four months have passed since the minister assured the house that a special joint committee on the national capital would be established very shortly, to use his own words, will the minister indicate the reason for the delay in announcing this long awaited study, and let us know what are the government's present intentions? Would the minister also indicate whether the committee will be asked to study the subject of high-rise buildings in the vicinity of these parliament buildings?

Hon. G. J. McIlraith (Minister of Public Works): Mr. Speaker, the question of setting up the committee was delayed because there was no chairman of the National Capital Commission. The chairman has now been appointed, so there is no reason for any further delay. As to the second question, I would hope that the committee would deal with the problem of the height of buildings to be built in the national capital area close to the parliament buildings. This problem is causing great concern to the government and, as the hon. member knows, the federal authority does not have direct jurisdiction over it.

Mr. Bell (Carleton): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Would the minister indicate the name of the new chairman of the National Capital Commission and when he was appointed?

Mr. McIlraith: Yes, Mr. Speaker. The new chairman is Mr. A. J. Frost, and the appointment was announced today.

PUBLIC BUILDINGS

OTTAWA, ONT.—ERECTION OF HIGH-RISE STRUCTURE

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): May I ask a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Is the minister now in position to answer my question of yesterday as to whether the government will be making a statement of its views regarding the proposal to construct a 39 storey building within two or three blocks of this building?

Hon. G. J. McIlraith (Minister of Public Works): The government has no direct control over this matter but there is a committee having jurisdiction over it—a committee of the city of Ottawa. The government has representation on this committee through the National Capital Commission, and its views will be made known in the usual way to the committee. The problem is of real concern to the government.

Mr. Knowles: A further supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Is the minister not prepared to indicate what the views of the government are with respect to this proposed building?

Mr. McIlraith: No, Mr. Speaker. I do not think any responsible minister should give an off-the-cuff answer like that until he has the advice of the planners who are retained by the government, through the National Capital Commission, which has direct responsibility. I think the position should be stated after a thorough study of the matter by them.

SHIPPING

ICEBREAKING OPERATIONS ON ST. LAWRENCE RIVER

On the orders of the day:

Mr. J. M. Forrestall (Halifax): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Acting Prime Minister. I would remind the house, with regard to the problem of high-rise buildings, that the national capital and its buildings are welcome in Halifax. I would ask the Acting Prime Minister whether, in light of the increased activity in the middle and upper reaches of the St. Lawrence river up as far as Montreal, he would now give assurance to the ports of Halifax and Saint John that this is indeed for water control purposes and not for economic reasons involving ships of other nations.

Hon. Paul Hellyer (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I think the events of the last few days underline the absolute essentiality of keeping the St. Lawrence river open and free from ice so that the water levels do not rise as they have, endangering public property. These are the facts. At the same time, when a channel is open it is available for use by ships that are constructed in such a way that they are capable of operating under those conditions.

Mr. Forrestall: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Is it government policy that once such lanes are opened up they are maintained in an open condition for the purpose of shipping? Is this what the Acting Prime Minister is indicating?

Mr. Hellyer: I just indicated, Mr. Speaker, that as my hon. friend is probably aware, the water levels in the upper reaches of the St. Lawrence river are well above the normal level, and this endangers property to a considerable extent. It is absolutely essential that a channel be maintained in order to allow the ice to go down river and to reduce water levels to those that are safe. At the same time, when this is done it does facilitate navigation on the St. Lawrence river by ships which are constructed to operate under winter conditions.

[Translation]

Mr. Gilles Grégoire (Lapointe): Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask a supplementary question.

Now that the Minister of Transport is aware of the need to maintain an open channel on the St. Lawrence in wintertime, does he intend to instruct his departmental officials to make sure that this channel is really kept open instead of merely watching out for ice-jams?

[English]

Mr. Thomas M. Bell (Saint John-Albert): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question the purpose of which is to elicit information. Does the minister know how many hundreds of ships were stuck in the St. Lawrence this winter?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

[Translation]

[Later:]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Speaker, I wish to put a question to the hon. Minister of Transport.

In view of the increasing importance of the problem of winter navigation and icebreaking operation on the St. Lawrence, could the minister tell us whether he intends soon to make a clear and straightforward statement on the policy of his department with regard to this problem?

[English]

Mr. Hellyer: Mr. Speaker, I do not know whether or not there will be a clear and precise statement, but I can assure my hon. friend that we intend to open up the channel and to do our best to keep it open so that the ice can get out to sea.

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Speaker, a supplementary question. I notice that the minister always speaks of ice and never of ships. Could he make a clear and definite statement concerning winter navigation on the St. Lawrence, and not only on ice?

[English]

Mr. Hellyer: I would be glad to take that under consideration, Mr. Speaker.

[Translaion]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Speaker, I should like to put a last supplementary question.

I would like to know whether the minister will take that into consideration before or after the forthcoming Liberal convention.

[English]

REQUEST FOR REPORT OF COMMISSION ON PILOTAGE

On the orders of the day:

Mr. A. B. Patterson (Fraser Valley): Mr. Speaker, I would like to direct a question to the Acting Prime Minister in his capacity as the Minister of Transport. Is he able to indicate to the house when he expects the report of the commission on pilotage to be tabled?

Hon. Paul Hellyer (Minister of Transport): Very soon, Mr. Speaker. I had hoped it would be ready by now, but I will make inquiries to see when it will be available.

SYDNEY, N.S.—INQUIRY AS TO PILOTAGE STATION

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Robert Muir (Cape Breton North and Victoria): Mr. Speaker, approximately two days prior to the recess I asked the Minister of Transport a question regarding the department's intention with regard to the future of the pilotage station in Sydney harbour, and the employees there. At that time he took it as notice. Is he in a position now to give an answer to the question?

Hon. Paul Hellyer (Minister of Transport): I am sorry, Mr. Speaker, I do not have the answer with me today, but I will try to remember to bring it tomorrow.

[Mr. Hellyer.]

FREIGHT RATES

POTASH—SHIPMENTS FROM SASKATCHEWAN

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Reynold Rapp (Humboldt-Melfort-Tisdale): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a question to the Minister of Transport with regard to increased freight rates for the shipment of potash from the province of Saskatchewan to export markets. Could the minister take this matter up with the head of the Canadian Transport Commission, Hon. Mr. Pickersgill, since these freight rate increases will work to the detriment of an industry which could be the leading producer of potash in the world?

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member has made a representation to the minister.

UNIDENTIFIED FLYING OBJECTS

INQUIRY AS TO REPORTED SIGHTINGS IN QUEBEC

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Heward Grafftey (Brome-Missisquoi): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct my question to the Minister of National Defence. Can the minister tell us whether his department is investigating reports that unidentified flying objects have been reported over certain areas in the eastern townships in the province of Quebec?

Mr. Starr: They are Liberal candidates in the leadership race.

Mr. Speaker: I am not certain that the matter is one of extreme urgency. In any case the hon. member has made a representation to the minister which, in all probability, will be considered.

AIR CANADA

WINNIPEG—TRANSFER OF EMPLOYEES FROM BASE

On the orders of the day:

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a question to the Minister of Transport and ask him whether he has as yet had discussions with officials of Air Canada regarding the base in Winnipeg. If so can he now assure the employees in Winnipeg that the base will continue to operate, as he indicated recently, and that the large scale transfer of employees from Winnipeg will stop?

Hon. Paul Hellyer (Minister of Transport): I have been working assiduously on this matter, Mr. Speaker.

TRANSPORT

MURCHISON INQUIRY—DISTRIBUTION OF REPORT

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Terence Nugent (Edmonton-Strathcona): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Minister of Labour I should like to address my question to the Acting Prime Minister and ask him whether he can tell us why copies of the Murchison inquiry report have not been distributed to members of parliament while apparently they have been in the hands of the public for some time.

Hon. Paul Hellyer (Acting Prime Minister): I do not know the reason for this, Mr. Speaker, but I will take notice of the question to see if I can find out the answer.

GRAIN

ACCELERATED RATE ON FARM STORAGE

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Lawrence E. Kindt (Macleod): Mr. Speaker, despite the fact that the Minister of Finance is now in full orbit, I wonder whether he has had time to decide and to announce if farmers are to be given an accelerated rate on farm storage built during the year 1967.

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I will give an answer to this question tomorrow.

Mr. Nielsen: The minister will give the answer on re-entry.

INDUSTRIAL RELATIONS AND DISPUTES INVESTIGATION ACT

INQUIRY CONCERNING STATEMENT BY ASSISTANT DEPUTY MINISTER

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Robert McCleave (Halifax): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Labour, but in his understandable absence perhaps his parliamentary secretary would draw it to his attention, or even be daring enough to answer it. Was the assistant deputy minister of labour, Mr. Wilson, forecasting government policy when he suggested that an amendment to the Industrial Relations and Disputes Investigation Act might be considered?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The question is not in order. Whereas it is in order to ask whether statements made by ministers outside the house represent government policy, it is not my understanding that this applies to officials of departments.

[Later:]

Mr. McCleave: Mr. Speaker, there seems to be a bit of a log jam developing, or perhaps I should call it an ice jam. Perhaps I can rephrase my question and ask whether it is the intention of the government to bring in an amendment to the Industrial Relations and Disputes Investigation Act so that the government could halt a strike or lockout after 14 days, and take other measures to end the dispute?

Mr. B. S. Mackasey (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, if the government has such intentions I am sure it will notify the house in the usual and appropriate manner.

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS

REQUEST FOR STATEMENT ON FREEDMAN REPORT

On the orders of the day:

Mr. H. R. Ballard (Calgary South): Mr. Speaker, I wanted to direct my question to the Minister of Labour, but in his absence I should like to direct it to his parliamentary secretary. When can we expect to receive the report of the task force set up by the Prime Minister to study the Freedman report, and is it the intention of the minister to delay second reading of Bill No. C-186 until this report is received and studied?

Mr. B. S. Mackasey (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Labour made it abundantly clear on at least three occasions last week that it is not the intention of the government to delay the passage of Bill No. C-186 for any reason.

Mr. Ballard: I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Does the minister have any prior knowledge of the recommendations of the task force, and if so, was Bill No. C-186 drafted to lessen the power of the existing bargaining units before the recommendations are made public?

HEALTH AND WELFARE

MEDICARE—STATEMENT BY PREMIER OF ONTARIO

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a question to the Acting Prime Minister. In view of Premier Robarts' statement concerning the position of the government of Ontario with respect to medicare, will the federal government make it clear that medicare is still the law of the land and will come into effect on July 1, 1968, in those provinces that wish to accept it?

Hon. Paul Hellyer (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, it is the law of the land, and the position of the federal government is as set out by the Prime Minister at his press conference on January 19.

DRUGS

UNITED NATIONS—POSITION OF CANADA ON L.S.D. BAN

On the orders of the day:

Mr. J. N. Ormiston (Melville): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of National Health and Welfare but in his absence may I direct it to his parliamentary secretary and she may take the question as notice. Is Canada a member of the United Nations commission on narcotics and, if so, did Canada approve the resolution appealing for a world wide ban on the use of L.S.D.?

Mrs. Margaret Rideout (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I will bring this matter to the attention of the minister.

• (3:10 p.m.)

BROADCASTING

IMPLEMENTATION OF CANADIAN POLICY

The house resumed, from Wednesday, January 24, consideration in committee of Bill No. C-163, to implement a broadcasting policy for Canada, to amend the Radio Act in consequence thereof and to enact other consequential and related provisions—Miss LaMarsh—Mr. Batten in the chair.

The Chairman: When the committee rose last evening clause 2(d), with an amendment proposed by the hon. member for Red Deer, was under consideration. Clause 2(c) was allowed to stand in order to permit the hon. member for Edmonton-Strathcona to redraft an amendment which he had proposed during yesterday's sitting. The committee is now considering clause 2(d).

On clause 2—Broadcasting policy for Canada.

Mr. Crouse: Mr. Chairman, I wish to comment briefly on the amendment put forward by the hon. member for Red Deer. As the hon. member for Winnipeg South Centre said yesterday, it has been a long time since I found myself in a position to agree with anything put forward by the hon. member for Red Deer. However, after ten years in this house I suppose one does mellow somewhat toward those who support other political groups, and after reading his amendment I am prepared to vote for it. I say this because I believe that the words "while ensuring that the most broadly held opinions receive appropriate consideration" and the words "while alert and responsive to public preferences in this and other aspects of programming" serve to strengthen the original clause of the bill.

[Mr. Knowles.]

The government apparently believed that it should include in the bill under the general title of a broadcasting policy for Canada a clause which deals with programming. To those of us who on occasion have an opportunity to watch television, and especially some of the C.B.C. programs, this is understandable. We know that there is a wide variety of opinion regarding what is desirable and acceptable and that this applies to the theatre, to motion pictures, to music and the arts. What is classed as acceptable music by this generation would certainly not have been acceptable only a decade ago. I know the minister will agree with me that Viennese waltzes seem strangely out of place alongside Beatle rhythms. It is therefore evident that tastes, habits and customs change, and a medium like television, which is catering to age groups from the cradle to the grave, is bound to find difficulty in providing a bill of fare that is satisfactory to everyone. It is for these reasons, Mr. Chairman, that I believe we are entitled and are expected to voice our opinions on programming so that those in charge of these matters will be aware of the voice of the people, as it were, expressed through their elected representatives.

• (3:20 p.m.)

The government has suggested that the programming provided by the Canadian broadcasting system should be varied and comprehensive, should provide reasonable opportunity for the expression of conflicting views on matters of public controversy, and that the programming provided by each broadcaster should be of a high standard, using predominantly Canadian creative and other resources. These are good guide lines, Mr. Chairman, and have without doubt been laid down by the government because of difficulties experienced by the C.B.C. management in arranging programs in the past. We would not have such lengthy discussions in the house or the committee had there not been considerable public discontent about the programs which the C.B.C. has presented in the past. After reading the guide lines I see no reason for rejecting the amendment that the hon. member for Red Deer has moved. I see no reason for rejecting a similar amendment if it informs C.B.C. management what our thoughts, as members of this house, are on that important matter.

A moment ago I spoke of the differences in our society and of the difficulty that is faced by C.B.C. management in preparing a bill of fare that is suitable for everyone. It is crystal clear that we have in Canada differences in languages, customs, tastes, habits, and in age groups. Nevertheless, it is truly amazing to see how similar Canadians of all groups are to people in other parts of the world. For example, applying the golden rule of doing unto others what we would have them do unto us, if we show concern, courtesy, kindliness or anger, sympathy or compassion, each will be returned in kind. Perhaps we ought to put that on the record as a guide line for those who are responsible for the programs.

Had this rule been followed, then surely we should not have been subjected to a parody of God last Sunday evening by a group of paid performers. That type of sick comedy apparently is indicative of the rot which has set in in the C.B.C., as mentioned some time ago by the minister. This type of comedy, in my opinion, is not funny it offends the Christian teaching of thousands of years and can only arouse in those who watch it pity for the producer of sponsor of the program. Surely, Mr. Chairman, with all the political and potential political leaders in this country we could use them or others as the butt of humour. We should not use characters in the Bible.

An hon. Member: Hear, hear.

Mr. Crouse: From time to time we are told that as politicians we should not interfere with the programming of the C.B.C. We are told that the C.B.C. ought to be free from political interference and that it should remain free and uncontrolled so that it will not become the tool of the political party in power. I find no fault with that logic. But I caution those who are responsible for programming that freedom of thought and expression must not be construed as licence, licence to say, do, or portray anything and everything that comes to mind.

The estimates for the C.B.C. this year exceed $143 million, an increase of about $29 million in one year. Canadians generally, whether they are of French, English, German, Italian, Norwegian, Scottish, Irish or other origins, as a rule want good value for their money. Canadians today are asking themselves, not only with respect to expenditures by C.B.C. but with respect to many other expenditures that are made by this government, are we getting value for our money? If the C.B.C. were operating as a private concern it would have gone broke by now.

When I was first elected in 1957 the C.B.C. was spending more than $52 million a year of the taxpayers' money. I thought then that more than $1 million a week to subsidize this organization was too much to pay. Today the subsidy is almost three times as big. I caution those who are responsible for programming to ask themselves in future: Is this program entertaining, is it acceptable to the Canadian people, as well as: Is it good value for our money, and can we afford it?

I realize that we need creative minds in the C.B.C. That organization has done much that is commendable. I temper that comment with a caution that creativity does not give a programmer the right to be irresponsible, the right to deal in sensationalism or to show programs that are in bad taste. For those reasons, Mr. Chairman, I intend, when the vote is called, to support the hon. member's amendment.

Mr. Southam: Mr. Chairman, since I was not a member of the standing committee that studied this bill I have been reluctant to enter this debate. But after listening to the discussion before Christmas and recently I felt I ought to take this opportunity to make some comments about the bill.

It is apparent to me, having looked at clause 2(d) of the bill, that the minister in her wisdom has endeavoured to lay down some guide lines for the conduct of the C.B.C., particularly with respect to programming. I agree with her on that point. I am sure that the minister and other members have over the last number of years received representations, letters of criticism and so on from many people in Canada from coast to coast with respect to the calibre of some programs that have been televised. Of course, many have disagreed with the views that have been broadcast but many have complained about the standard of the programs. That is understandable, and for that reason I agree with the minister on that aspect of her argument. In that respect clause 2(d) is a good clause.

I also support the amendment of the hon. member for Red Deer. I do not always agree with the ideas of that hon. gentleman but this time I do. I think we should take a broader view than we have about something some hon. members seem to be concerned about, freedom of speech, censorship, and so on. The hon. member's amendment cannot be defined as constituting censorship or as encroaching on freedom of speech. Other mediums of communication, such as the press, radio, magazines and so on, must observe the law. The Criminal Code contains provisions regarding obscenity, pornography, etc., and those who overstep the bounds of the law can be pulled up short.

I am involved in the motion picture and theatre business in Saskatchewan and have been for 22 years. At times I come under strict surveillance by the board of censors in Winnipeg, from where our product is distributed. That board classifies the films we show and those who are on the board are extremely responsible people. They do not interfere with any freedoms, but if they find that a film does not serve the best interests of the younger generation they will in their wisdom classify it as "adult". Or if it is a far-out picture, perhaps one that has been imported from Europe, they will classify it as "restricted", and rightly so. Such classifications put us to considerable inconvenience and expense because we must advertise these films as "restricted"; we must confine attendance to adults. At other times, of course, children who are accompanied by a parent or guardian may be admitted. By obeying the censors we are allowed to exercise our privilege of providing the Canadian public with what are considered proper types of programs.

I feel that what is done with motion pictures ought to be done with films that are produced for television. After all, many films are produced in the C.B.C. studios and many others by the National Film Board. Someone in those organizations must be made responsible for the quality of the program that is to be presented. I think the minister has been quite right in introducing this clause, but I think the hon. member for Red Deer is quite right in moving his amendment. It will not infringe on the rights and prerogatives of those who are responsible for programming. Someone must be made responsible.

• (3:30 p.m.)

We might go even further and say that if and when a program of questionable quality, so far as its effect on the morals of younger people is concerned, is scheduled for broadcasting, someone in the C.B.C. sould be instructed to advertise in advance that such a program is to be produced. This requirement would resemble the one placed upon film exhibitors to indicate the nature of the programs they propose to show. It would at least give an opportunity to parents of children of tender age, who might be influenced by demoralizing programs, to tell their babysitters that these programs are not to be watched. In other words, it would give people who object strongly to the quality of some of these programs an opportunity to select and censor in their own homes.

This is a subject about which all hon. members are concerned. I am sure we have all received many criticisms and requests in connection with this aspect of the C.B.C.'s activities, and having considered the matter I am in favour of the amendment.

[Translation]

Mr. Choquette: Mr. Chairman, the only remark I would like to make deals with clause 2(e) which reads as follows:

—all Canadians are entitled to broadcasting services in English and French as public funds become available;

Mr. Chairman, I claim that funds are available for the installation of relay stations in order to ensure—

Some hon. Members: Order, order.

[English]

Mr. Churchill: What has this to do with it?

[Translation]

Mr. Choquette: We are considering clause 2. I am therefore speaking to that clause. There is no division since we are dealing with clause 2.

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, on a point of order.

You stated yourself that we are studying that clause a subclause at a time. An amendment has been moved to subclause (d). Therefore, when the hon. member for Lotbinière speaks to subclause (e), he is not in order.

[English]

The Chairman: Perhaps I should say to the hon. member for Lotbinière that the agreement in committee was to discuss clause 2 subclause by subclause. The subclause now before us is 2(d). As I said the other evening, I believe that in line with the agreement reached, the Chair should confine speakers to the subject matter of the subclause, in this case, 2(d).

[Translation]

Mr. Choquette: Mr. Chairman, I was unaware of that agreement and I thank you for your comments. I will wait till the next clause to discuss the matter.

Mr. Grégoire: You only had to be here to know about it.

Mr. Choquette: I am here just as often if not more often than the hon. member.

[English]

Mr. Germa: Mr. Chairman, I come to this house as somewhat of a puritan because the constituency I represent has not had access to the pornography, sex and glue-sniffing which seems to have been going on in C.B.C. programs. I should like to make representations to the minister at this time to the effect that we would welcome these programs in the city of Sudbury. I say this because we are now captives of another form of dictatorship, that of a private television outlet which is proving altogether inadequate for the needs of this community. The provisions of 2 (d) would, I think, go a long way toward deterring private broadcasters from muzzling certain minority groups which have not the financial strength or power necessary to get their message over to the 200,000 people who are held captive by this one private station.

As has already been stated, the amendment will not be supported by members of this party. It implies that because an opinion is held by a majority it is necessarily a correct one and should therefore receive wide coverage. The democratic process itself shows us that a majority of the people have the right to be wrong any time they choose. Today we are faced with a situation which has arisen because a majority of the people have elected a government which you and I know does not represent the best choice which could have been made, and it does not necessarily follow that a decision of this type should be given wide publicity.

I should like to call the minister's attention to something which happened in connection with the private station in Sudbury. Representations were made to the Board of Broadcast Governors in 1965 after a union of which I am a member found its programs over this television station arbitrarily cut off by the board of directors simply because in their minds and in their minds only the union was propagating a political opinion. As a matter of fact, it turned out to be the majority opinion in the city of Sudbury though at that time the party to which I belong was in a minority position there. The directors of the television station say fit to muzzle the expression of this political opinion. However, various measures were taken to get round this roadblock and in the end it so happened that the people did elect a member of this party to represent the city of Sudbury.

I believe that subclause (d) will go a long way toward letting people know that when they are in positions of authority in the communications field it is their responsibility to see that controversial and minority opinions are not suppressed. I do not agree with anyone who says that subclause (d) should be eliminated altogether. I believe it represents a progressive step, and we certainly hope it will be retained.

It has been said, regarding the position taken by the New Democratic party, that we always jump to the forefront to protect bandits and atheists in the C.B.C. The hon. member for Roberval, who made this statement, really does not understand what the N.D.P. wishes to accomplish. Who else pursues bandits as vigorously as members of the New Democratic party? We shall pursue them on television as well as in the streets. We do not protect bandits whether they are in the C.B.C. or not. I am thinking now about bandits in business and in insurance companies. Not every bandit carries a gun. Some of them wear tuxedos but they are bandits none the less.

I would ask the minister to take my words into consideration as representing a request from the 200,000 people in Sudbury. We would welcome the type of programs provided by the C.B.C. I hope she will impress on the board that the people of Sudbury contribute to the corporation's budget and are entitled to the facilities afforded. This service is needed regardless of the extent to which other hon. members say they do not want it. Indeed, I would be glad to see the corporation dismantle one of the stations which certain hon. members say they do not want and ship it to Sudbury, because we could certainly use it there.

Mr. Nugent: Mr. Chairman, most members of the committee probably wish to say something on the clause before us. I doubt that there is a single question on which most of us have received more mail than the subject of programming both in the private and public sector of the radio and television networks. I have reviewed a number of the speeches made to see whether a pattern emerges, to find out why hon. members are in favour of or against the amendment moved by the hon. member for Red Deer.

Many said that to their surprise they found themselves in agreement with him, although some were not quite sure of their ground on that score. I for one am naturally inclined to take a very suspicious look at any amendment moved by the hon. member because I have found his judgment has not been too much of a guide on any question that has come up in this house.

Mr. Thompson: Not to your party.

• (3:40 p.m.)

Mr. Nugent: I think a few words will indicate the general trend of some of the speakers in support of the amendment. They want to play down the emphasis on what I will call the kooky people, the far-out fringe. They want to have more emphasis placed on broad opinions generally held by the public and less on the lunatic fringe. They say that on grounds of morality we need to have more emphasis on the respectability of broadcasting and that we want to prevent the appearance of such people as nazis. Those who have been against the amendment have used such phrases as "restrictive amendment," "amounting to censorship," "trying to destroy freedom," "conformist amendment." On the one hand, we have those people who feel that the respectability of Canadian viewers and their sense of what is moral and decent are outraged too often by certain programs that are presented. On the other hand, those against the amendment have taken the stand that anyone who wants to protect people from this sort of thing is simply protectionist and is restricting freedom. Obviously, Mr. Chairman, there is a little bit of truth on both sides.

Any time we suggest that parliament should give a directive to our national broadcasting system as to the type of programming we would prefer we can say that by the weight of the opinion of parliament we are trying to censor and restrict freedom of choice to some extent. However, there is no such thing as black and white. There is, of course, a middle ground in this matter and, on the basis of the remarks made by various speakers as well as my own opinion, I really feel that what is irksome to most people is the tremendous impact made by so many far-out programs. The fact is that one or two programs have been so very unacceptable that the shock of that sort of thing has made members forget how many programs do conform to the ordinary respectability and moral sense of the citizens of Canada.

I have often thought about the line of censorship that broadcasters should use to guide themselves lest they use the airwaves in a distasteful manner. As an ordinary citizen this is my feeling on the matter. If over that medium of entertainment during the late hours of the evening there comes a program in which the subject is handled in such a way that myself, my wife and a group of rather sophisticated friends watching it would feel shocked and offended if any of our group used such language or talked in such a manner as on the television program, then in my view that program is not very fit entertainment for a group of sophisticated people. If it is too lewd or disreputable for sophisticated, broadminded people, and I think I am pretty broadminded, then we must look closely at the reasons for presenting that program. Are they crusading for something? Is it necessary public instruction? If it is necessary public instruction, is this the proper medium for that public instruction? Obviously on some of these grounds we cannot justify some of these programs.

I think one of the difficulties is that broadcasting and success in broadcasting are in some respects like politics. The more publicity you get and the greater the sensation you create the bigger your name is. This seems to be the badge of success in that medium to some extent.

I am the last one in this chamber to want to add any form of censorship. I think that the aim of this bill should not be compulsory but advisory in this regard, and I feel that the present wording of the clause goes about as far as we can in this regard when it refers to conflicting views on matters of public controversy. Surely that is not, as the mover of the amendment seems to feel a suggestion that the medium should be used to raise public controversy, to try to bring something out of an obscure dark room that nobody is thinking about and have it discussed and raised in a manner that offends the sensibilities of many Canadians.

I do not think there can be any complete directive on this matter of public controversy. As well as offering entertainment television is a news medium. If a subject is of any importance to the nation and has an impact on our economic or cultural life, television should not miss an opportunity to bring as many aspects of the situation as possible to the attention of the public. I do not think it would cost any money or offend any broadcaster's sense of duty to find a way to do this in good taste, if it can possibly be done that way.

As a lawyer I am concerned about the concept of trying, in a statute of this kind, to direct the method in which judgment shall be used by a regulatory body. Frankly, I do not think it is possible. When we as legislators are trying to draft an act we sometimes try to do so with such preciseness that we will know in advance the way in which a court is going to interpret it so as to give full effect to what we mean, but one of our difficulties is that we are not clear in our own minds what we mean. We have only vague ideas and therefore we only convey our ideas vaguely.

However, one hon. member put his finger on a solution to the problem when he said that the people who are making these regulations and running our broadcasting systems have access to Hansard. They are able to read for themselves what has been said and to gain a consensus of opinion, if they can, from the remarks made in this chamber. This certainly is not a method open to the courts that can be used in trying to arrive at a strict interpretation of what parliament meant. But here, as I have suggested, we cannot give a strict interpretation to what we mean because the meaning is vague. The meaning is different for each one of us. It is different in the minister's mind and it will be different in the minds of those administering this legislation when it is passed.

By way of supplementing what their consciences dictate those in charge have a duty to find a method of using our broadcasting systems in the most satisfactory manner. This encompasses the duty to inform, to educate, to entertain, to stimulate knowledge, to activate the imagination without, if possible, offending, and to needle. If necessary, those who have the duty to regulate can get assistance by referring to the pages of Hansard.

• (3:50 p.m.)

I am afraid I am going to be opposed to the amendment because I feel that the subclause as drafted does give sufficient direction to the regulatory body and to the people responsible. I agree with the minister that an attempt to redefine what is in it would only point up the necessity of redefining it further. This rather generally worded subclause is all-encompassing enough to give to the people responsible the maximum of direction that we can cogently lay down, and at the same time it gives the greatest freedom that their responsibility will allow them to exercise. I feel that the speeches made in this chamber give us an opportunity, as our duty and conscience dictate, to register our protests against some of the excesses that we have seen in a great many programs. There is one aspect which I started to check. I looked at the remarks made by some hon. members to see whether there might be a sharp cleavage, as there is in the United States, between the doves and the hawks. It seemed to me we were consistently receiving criticism of the clause as it now is and also speeches by those in favour of amending it who I will call the hawks. The latter represent those who favour the United States action in Viet Nam and while listening to the news reports find criticism of the action of the United States most offensive. Then I find coming from the doves, those who criticize the action of the United States, criticism of the amendment on the ground that it is restrictive.

The line was perhaps not quite that clear-cut, but this does give one example of how those of us who feel inclined to criticize some United States programs very severely can be motivated. Here we can see very clearly that the criticism is motivated by a feeling of resentment on the part of some people that the C.B.C. should take a very critical look at the actions of the United States in Viet Nam. Perhaps there is a feeling that we should be supporting the United States and that C.B.C. criticism is one-sided and unfair. Perhaps there are others who feel that the C.B.C., because there is so much United States propaganda on the other side, should simply give us a balanced picture.

Whether or not we get a balanced picture depends on several things. There are people who feel that through broadcasting, television, radio and the United States magazines which flood this country we receive a predominantly pro-United States government point of view. Would we obtain a more balanced picture by trying to balance the pro-United States government view by means of the Canadian media presenting a very critical view of the same things? In other words, is it possible, feasible or reasonable in this country to say that in our own communications systems we must have a balance and present both sides adequately in order to comply with this bill or do we read this bill in cognizance of the fact that we will have to face the overwhelming and almost overpowering influence of the United States media and take a very one-sided view in order to try to balance to some extent the general views of the situation that are available to the Canadian public?

I am just giving a picture of the situation so that we will be aware of some of the difficulties involved in an attempt to be specific about the directions to the regulatory and managing authorities. I become more and more worried every time someone suggests an amendment which is more and more specific. I hope the position taken by the minister that the clause as it now reads is more effective than it would be should the amendment be accepted will prevail and that we will defeat the amendment.

Mr. Churchill: Mr. Chairman, would the hon. member permit a question?

Mr. Nugent: Certainly.

Mr. Churchill: Does the hon. member consider that a clause which outlines guide lines for programming is essential in the bill?

Mr. Nugent: I am neither certain that it is really essential nor that it will be very effective. I feel that the way it is worded now it will provide a better chance to achieve our objectives than we would have by encumbering the wording with the proposed amendment.

Mr. Churchill: Does the hon. member consider it to be essential that the bill should instruct management of the news media on television and radio concerning the type of programs that should be presented to the public?

Mr. Nugent: I am not sure that the meaning of programming is defined in this subclause at all. So far as I can see all it is is a reminder of a couple of guiding principles which the government would like to see kept in mind in respect of what the type of programming should be, its general coverage and the use of talent. I suggest they are no more than suggested guide lines; there is nothing directive that I can see. It does not have the preciseness of a prohibition in a criminal statute and does not have the mandatory value of the Income Tax Act which states that you shall file your return by a certain date. I believe it is admirably if not beautifully worded for the purpose of being a general reminder of what we would like to have kept in mind in the operation of our broadcasting systems.

Miss LaMarsh: Mr. Chairman, I might make a useful interjection, particularly as a result of the series of questions asked by the hon. member for Winnipeg South Centre and responded to by the hon. member for Edmonton-Strathcona. The hon. member for Digby-Annapolis-Kings posed the question of whether or not it is so difficult in a forum of this kind, the committee of the whole, to arrive at felicitous words that perhaps we should drop the question. He asked about the position of the B.B.C. and I have done a little research in this regard. Perhaps I might give this information to the committee now. I think it will lead hon. members to the conclusion that this subclause is most important and should not be dropped. Indeed, it is the clause which is the heart of the licensing authority for the B.B.G. The regulating body under the new act will have to be guided in its licensing policy by whether or not an application complies with the things set out here, being policies and instructions in respect of the kind of programming that public and private broadcasting should follow.

If I might go back, the only thing which appears in the legislation now in effect—I refer to the 1958 legislation which it is generally conceded we need to strengthen—as between regulatory policy and broadcasting policy, public and private, is section 10 which contains the objects and purposes of the current Board of Broadcast Governors. If I might read that section it reads as follows:

• (4:00 p.m.)

10. The Board shall, for the purpose of ensuring the continued existence and efficient operation of a national broadcasting system and the provision of a varied and comprehensive broadcasting service of a high standard that is basically Canadian in content and character, regulate the establishment and operation of networks of broadcasting stations, the activities of public and private broadcasting stations in Canada, and the relationship between them and provide for the final determination of all matters and questions in relation thereto.

There is nothing else in the current Broadcasting Act which lays down the obligation of the B.B.G. in so far as the two sectors of broadcasting, public and private, are concerned.

What happens in relation to the B.B.C.? I indicated that there was something in the charter in this regard. I have now gone over this and looked at the reports of the proceedings of the committee on broadcasting, films and assistance to the arts of Thursday, February 2 and Friday, February 3, 1967. At that time Sir Hugh Greene, the director general of the B.B.C., and Sir Robert Fraser, director general of the independent television authority, appeared before the committee. The evidence of Sir Hugh Greene, in answer to questions by the hon. member for Burin-Burgeo, appears on pages 1828 and 1829 and is in part as follows:

> Mr. Jamieson: On the structure of the B.B.C. charter, what kind of a document is it exactly? I do not ask you to give us the full details, but is there, anywhere in it, a point of reference from parliament, or from the authority which granted the charter, saying what the B.B.C. should or should not do, its aims, its objectives and that kind of thing?
>
> Sir Hugh Greene: There is a section of the charter headed "Objects of the Corporation", but the interesting thing is that that section of the charter does not contain anything about programs. The only point at which the programming activities of the B.B.C. are mentioned is in the preamble to the charter where it says:
>
> "Whereas, in view of the widespread interest which is thereby and by other evidences shown to be taken by Our Peoples in the broadcasting services, and of the great value of such services as means of disseminating information, education and entertainment. We believe it to be in the interests of Our Peoples in Our United Kingdom and elsewhere within the British Commonwealth of Nations that the corporation should continue to provide broadcasting services pursuant to such licences and agreements in that behalf as Our Postmaster General may from time to time grant to and make with the Corporation".

In the United Kingdom the postmaster general is the regulatory authority. He grants the licences and fulfils the same function as our B.B.G. does currently. Then at page 1829. Mr. Jamieson asked Sir Hugh whether or not there had been any articulation of the policy of programming of the B.B.C. Sir Hugh indicated that from time to time various senior officials of the B.B.C. had formulated policy, but otherwise the only official place where this existed was in an exchange of memoranda, which was a published document available in the library of the House of Commons, between the postmaster general and the chairman of the B.B.C., in which the chairman states in a letter to the postmaster general in very broad terms the objectives of the B.B.C. and accepts certain basic principles such as:

> —our duty on impartiality, having no editorial opinion, and treating controversial subjects with due care and so on. That is not in one of our instruments. It is in the form of an exchange of correspondence between the chairman and the Postmaster General.

That seems to be the only reference in the committee, but there is another publication to which we have referred, the B.B.C. Handbook 1967, which sets out what I think most committee members know anyway, namely, the postmaster general's power. At page 142 under the heading "The powers of the government" it states:

> Under clause 14(4) of the licence, the Postmaster General: "may from time to time by notice in writing require the Corporation to refrain at any specified time or at all times from sending any matter or matters of any class specified in such notice."

In other words, the postmaster general has, on behalf of the government and the United Kingdom parliament, the right to instruct the B.B.C. specifically with regard to its programming. However, as one reads on one will note the following:

> This clause gives the government of the day a formally absolute power of veto over B.B.C. programs, but in practice it has always been treated as a reserve power. The governors have absolute freedom in the handling of day to day matters—

So the postmaster general of the United Kingdom is in the position of giving licences and setting conditions, as the B.B.G. does here, but with that absolute power because it is a matter for the government, whereas the B.B.G. has only such powers as this parliament gives it.

It was conceded that the 1958 act was weak in that it did not set out the specific powers which the B.B.G. had and the basis upon which it was to issue licences. Accordingly this clause was drafted, and subclause (d) of the current legislation is the direction which parliament now gives to the new board or council, whatever name it has, as to what element of acceptance it will require of a licensee before granting a licence.

If you look at clause 15 on page seven of the bill you will see that it is the council's responsibility to regulate and supervise all aspects of the Canadian broadcasting system with a view to implementing the broadcasting policy enunciated in section 2 of the act. If you look at the other subclauses in clause 2 you will find that this is the whole programming policy because there is no other place where the whole system is referred to. So in fact this is the heart of the instruction of parliament to the B.B.G. Therefore I think it will be agreed that this is extremely important and that we cannot do without it.

That answer to that part obviously does not get us out of the difficulty involved in various members drafting things they think should be done. We all know that every time the estimates on broadcasting come before the house, the C.B.C. estimates, most of the discussion is about something that none of us can do anything about. I refer to the matter of programming and protests in a general way.

What this amendment attempts to do is to draw, in quite a bit more restrictive way, a policy under which the B.B.G. would be required to insist that licensees deal only with matters which have a broad general acceptance. I think that much of the argument made by the hon. member for Royal and other members, even though there apparently is considerable conflict in respect of freedom and restrictions on broadcasting, reflects not only their personal views about avoiding censorship but also their sense of responsibility in laying down some sort of instruction to the B.B.G., because it has been demonstrated it needs to be instructed and that regulations are required. These laws are drafted by a group of 265 men and women, none of whom is an expert in this field even though a number in the chamber may be experts in one or another area of broadcasting. We are required to define narrowly what the broadcasting regulatory powers should be. I think this is almost an insuperable task. This is demonstrated by the fact that with absolute power in the United Kingdom the postmaster general there has never used those powers and they are only held in reserve.

I only make this argument, along with those I made yesterday before the committee, in the hope that the committee will use the words which are already there as the charter for the B.B.G. in respect of the issuing of licenses.

Mr. Churchill: I should like to ask the minister a question. She has drawn our attention to the statute now governing the B.B.G. and broadcasting generally. In doing so she mentioned that programming should be varied and comprehensive, of a high standard and should use Canadian talent resources. Those three points are covered in this subclause on programming but there have also been included these words that the hon. member for Red Deer is attempting to amend. Let me read them. These words have been included:

• (4:10 p.m.)

... and should provide reasonable opportunity for the expression of conflicting views on matters of public controversy ...

I am not an opponent of public controversy. I hope no one is under any illusion in that regard. I do not shrink from controversy and I do not object to controversy being exposed in the newspapers and on television and radio. But why was it considered necessary to introduce that particular phraseology into the instructions to management? Who felt that it was essential?

[Miss LaMarsh.]

Under direction broadcasting has been atempting to achieve a varied and comprehensive type of programming, a high standard, which, of course, cannot be defined to the satisfaction of everyone, and Canadian content. But this phraseology has been introduced. I think this is what stirred up the debate yesterday. I recall particularly listening to the hon. member for Brandon-Souris and wondering why attention was drawn to matters of public controversey, because this is what we have had on radio and television for years. Radio and television programs have aroused public controversy. Some of this controversy has been artificially aroused in the minds of some of us, the less sophisticated element of the population, if the hon. member for Edmonton-Strathcona does not mind my using that expression and indicating the portion of the populace to which I belong.

I want to get at the reason for this wording. The only thing that bothers me about the subclause is that, first, I do not think it is necessary. I rather like the British idea of an exchange of correspondence between the governing body and the management. But if we are going to have this type of instruction with regard to programming I want to know why we are to have it. I want to know why the wording is what it is and why specific attention has been drawn to public controversy. The minister read a phrase from one of the British publications with regard to controversy. I did not note it and have now forgotten it, but it struck me as being better under the circumstances. I do not know whether it included the word "fair".

Mr. Nowlan: "With due care".

Mr. Churchill: My hon. friend says it was "with due care". I am not objecting to conflicting views on matters of public controversy. My objection is, first, that in some of the programs to which I have paid attention a balanced viewpoint has not been put forward on matters of public controversy and, second, that certain matters have been artificially raised to the realm of public controversy when they might much better have been left in abeyance. That is the situation as I see it, Mr. Chairman.

Miss LaMarsh: Mr. Chairman, while listening to the hon. member I had recourse to the Oxford dictionary. It is the 1964 edition and I got it from the table. If the word "controversy" is what has caught the eye of members opposite—and indeed that seems to be the case—I would like to refer to its definition.

Synonyms of the word are "disputation", "to controvert", "to discuss", "to dispute", "to deny". I would have no objection at all and I am sure the government would not, if it rings better on my hon. friend's ear, to change the phrase "public controversy" to "public discussion", because that is what it means. If "controversy" immediately makes one think that it must be sensational and attract attention, I would say that is not the intention of the language. In the draftsman's language it means that if there is a matter with regard to which the public legitimately takes two different sides, that is what a discussion is, that is what a controversy is. I am sure there would be no objection to replacing the phrase "public controversy" with "public discussion".

Mr. Nowlan: Mr. Chairman—

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: The hon. member for Sainte-Marie.

Mr. Valade: Mr. Chairman, I think the hon. member wishes to ask a question. I have no objection to his doing that.

Mr. Nowlan: Mr. Chairman, I wanted to thank the minister for the explanation she gave in answer to my question of yesterday. There is another question I was going to ask today. I was going to ask the minister about the Australian authority and whether in Australia, which I gather regulates its public broadcasting system, there is any direction in regard to programming. If the minister has an answer I would appreciate it.

I want to make one point, Mr. Chairman. While I appreciate the minister's answer to my question, it reaffirmed my thinking that the fact that in clause 2 (d) we are attempting to write broad terms of reference with respect to programming will just open up the proverbial can of problems. This will cause confusion and controversy in every parliament hereafter. We have now spent a day and a half on clause 2 (d). I think this is a good example of how controversial such a clause, which is not going to do anything directly, is.

I hesitate to disagree all the time with the hon. member for Edmonton-Strathcona, especially with regard to broadcasting, let alone other matters, but the hon. member, with his legal background, thinks that the wording of subclause (d) is a beautiful expression or articulation of legislative intent. This leaves me somewhat aghast in view of his experience in attempting to interpret laws. I can see members of parliament standing up after every program of the C.B.C. or C.T.V. and saying, quite legitimately, that the program was not of a high standard and discussing the terms of reference under this bill.

The minister answered a question with respect to the B.B.C. She pointed out that in England there is no attempt to give specific terms of reference for programming; there are only memoranda between the corporation and the government. I believe we will rue the day if we attempt to say anything about programming in this bill. The minister referred to other terms of reference under which licences are granted. There are many subclauses in clause 2 which will determine whether a licence is to be granted.

I am absolutely opposed to any attempt to get into the question of programming. Our hon. friends to my left talk about free speech; yet the hon. member for Sudbury rose this afternoon and said that he believes in qualified free speech. As long as it is the public sector, it is wide open, but when it is the private sector and the captive station to which he referred he wants all sorts of controls applied.

What kind of hypocrisy is that? I suggest that we should deal with the matter of hypocrisy in this respect. I have heard in this parliament for two years that we should not become involved with programs; yet we are going to do that now. I appreciate part of the minister's answer but I do not think the elimination of subclause (d) of clause 2 will defeat the purpose of clause 2. There are in it other terms of reference which will guide those who issue licences. The fact that we have spent a day and a half on this subclause—and there are others in the bill that will raise more problems—indicates the confusion and controversy that are created when we even try to touch the field of programming. I say we should leave the subject of programming to the management of both the private and public networks, and the public network, the C.B.C., is covered by subclause (g).

• (4:20 p.m.)

Miss LaMarsh: Mr. Chairman, I am sorry to take up more time of the committee, but obviously I did not explain this. In the United Kingdom there is no B.B.G. However, there is the postmaster general. He has not given direction in this regard, as he is fully entitled to do under the legislation, because there exists a memorandum of agreement. So in fact the B.B.C. has been given direction in this exchange. It knows what its framework is because it has been given it by the postmaster general, although in a much more informal way than is provided for in their legislation.

I suggest to my hon. friend that if no provision is made, what little already exists in the current legislation would be removed. No power would be left to the B.B.G. If that were done, our position would be similar to that in the United States where the F.C.C., which is the regulatory board in there, has no control over programming. I ask my hon. friend to look at what is happening in United States programming and to consider the kind of programs we would have if the public and private stations were allowed to decide for themselves exactly what they were going to do.

This subclause is an attempt by parliament to tell the B.B.G. what must be laid down in the licences for public and private broadcasters. If it were deleted, greater control would have to be given to the B.B.G., control such as the postmaster general is given in England, which would give them the absolute power to say whatever they want to public and private broadcasters about their programs. If that were to be the suggestion, then I think this bill would have to be sent back to the committee because I know that by the time the newspaper reports of this debate reached the street we would have almost every private broadcaster and representatives of the public element, too, on our doorstep asking to appear before the committee and asking for some strictures to be placed upon the B.B.G.

What many have called a chaotic situation in connection with the F.C.C. might be the result here if we deleted the subclause.

Mr. Nowlan: Does the minister not think that subclause 2 (g) contains some guide to the C.B.C.? I suggested yesterday that the private networks and the private programs will take care of themselves because if they do not these private stations will sink into financial deep water. I am interested in parliamentary responsibility for the taxpayers' dollars spent on the C.B.C., and I have restricted my remarks to the C.B.C. I suggest to the hon. lady that the direct restrictions on the C.B.C. with regard to the national broadcasting system contained in subclause 2 (g) would take care of any possible chaos. We all know of the problems that arise when programs are meddled with.

[Miss LaMarsh.]

Miss LaMarsh: I cannot agree with my hon. friend. If all the restrictions are to be contained in subclause 2 (g), who will police the programming? It will mean that parliament will have to police it somehow. As we have already seen in the last year or so, it is impossible to use parliament as a policeman in this regard. In such a case private broadcasters would be left without anything at all.

My hon. friend has suggested that the flow of commercials would ensure good programs. I suggest to him that what would happen is that there would be no Canadian broadcasting left in the private field because private stations would start using all the dumped programs from the United States. These programs are cheap and easily available. Private broadcasting would become what Lord Thomson has called a licence to print money with respect to the television station in Scotland of which he was recently deprived because he acted as if it were a licence to print money.

I do not think this is what the people of Canada want and I do not really think this is what the hon. member wants—unfettered private broadcasting. The private stations can get very rich instead of starving to death by consistently putting on a greater number of hours of junk because it is easily available and is cheap. If my hon. friend thinks it would be sufficient simply to tell the C.B.C. to follow the provisions in subclause 2 (g), and if no one were provided to police programming, this would be in conflict with all the studies which have been undertaken and the reports which were prepared such as the Fowler report. It would be in conflict with the report of the committee on the white paper and with the white paper itself. It would be in conflict with every informed opinion I have read on Canadian broadcasting in the last two and a half years.

I think it would provide a considerable boost to the ego of the C.B.C. for them to realize that at least one hon. member thinks they have demonstrated that there is no need for them to answer to anyone for the kind of programming they provide. I think this is unlikely to happen under this kind of management if there were no other body save parliament to police programming. Parliament is frustrated in any attempt to police it. If there were no other body policing programming, programs from the United States would start coming in increasingly. The C.B.C. can spend limitless amounts of money and can find a way to spend whatever money parliament is prepared to give it, just as whatever amount of money we earn we can find ways to spend. From time to time parliament must cut back on its expenditures. This year, for instance, the expenditures are much less than have been requested. The C.B.C. is caught in a squeeze because it wants to expand.

Let us consider, for example, the introduction of colour television on the west coast. If they are not allowed sufficient money and there is nobody to police their programming, we will find more and more United States programs coming in and more and more programs dumped from abroad while at the same time less use will be made of Canadian talent because it is expensive to produce Canadian programs. We will find there will be no Canadian broadcasting left at all because all the economic interests working in private broadcasting would come into play in public broadcasting.

I do not suppose there is any other field in which we use a policeman in this manner, but this is what all the experts in Canada have suggested to us. We introduced a policeman under the 1958 legislation but we did not give him enough teeth and we did not back him sufficiently, so when a conflict arose between the policeman and those he was supposed to police the policeman usually wound up with a black eye and the alleged culprit went free. We hope that will not happen, and that is what the legislation is designed to prevent.

I apologize to the committee for taking up so much time but I really think this subclause is fundamental to the whole act.

[Translation]

Mr. Valade: Mr. Chairman, the minister has just concluded her remarks by saying that we are now dealing with one of the most significant and fundamental aspects of the broadcasting legislation.

As far as I am concerned, I agree with her that even though this clause were to be referred to a committee for further consideration, it should not prevent all members, even no experts in radio and television matters, to express their views which, after all, reflect those of the constituents they represent in this house.

In the past, we have had numerous complaints to make about this crown corporation which will soon submit to us estimates that will be double the administrative costs of the United Nations for a single year. That is why I feel it is important that members have their say with regard to management, programming and to the orientation it is sought to give the corporation through the increased powers being conferred on the C.B.C.

Mr. Chairman, we are far from seeing in this piece of legislation a definite cure for the ills of the C.B.C. The wording of subclause 2(d) is surely disquieting, especially if we fail to correct, prevent and anticipate any abuse such as that committed since the establishment of the corporation.

I am very sorry that certain left-wing members, mostly New Democrats, consider the criticisms levelled against the C.B.C. as merely aimed at destroying and restricting freedom of expression in Canada.

• (4:30 p.m.)

If anyone has achieved that objective, by forming pressure groups, by organizing demonstrations of all kinds against the way the war is being fought in Viet Nam—contrary to freedom of expression and the opinion of the majority of Canadians—the members of the New Democratic party did, for they managed to arouse a group against the established order in Canada.

For my part, I do not intend to overlook such an important clause and I am determined to plead my arguments forthwith against as weak a phraseology as that which concerns "conflicting views".

Before I do so, Mr. Chairman, the house may be interested to hear certain anecdotes, amusing incidents which took place in the administrative circles of the C.B.C.

A few years ago, more specifically in 1964, the C.B.C. delegated to Cairo and Cyprus two crews of cameramen and producers, one to cover the situation in Cyprus, the other to report on Cairo. I heard, in certain milieux, that some of the persons were sent on these special assignments to Cairo and Cyprus as a reward. The crew sent to Cairo did not have much to do and so it went to the beaches to take at least a few shots and justify the expenses involved. Suddenly, they see a caravan wending its way towards the city. Imagine their astonishment when they realized that the caravan they were photographing was the crew the C.B.C. had sent to Cyprus: they were on their way to Cairo for a visit of the city.

In the light of such situations which cost the Canadian taxpayers hundreds of thousands of dollars, I wonder why we are not completely free to examine their expenses and require the C.B.C., whose bills we pay, to give us an answer.

Canadian Policy on Broadcasting

Recently, Mr. Chairman, several C.B.C. employees left their listening-post in Hong Kong or Montreal to go to Viet Nam and report on the war there. I have been told by well-informed people that these employees refused the help graciously offered to them by the South Vietnamese and the American authorities, but paid up to $1,000 to the Viet Cong for transportation to stategic spots where they could visit military posts.

Thus we see the C.B.C. refuse help offered free in order to pay the Viet Cong for information which could easily have been obtained in a much more intelligent and less expensive way.

I have recounted these anecdotes in order to show that this clause concerning the "opportunity for the expression of conflicting views on matters of public controversy" is extremely important, because there is a clique, a coterie within the C.B.C. and only the favourites or a certain group of people open to preconceived ideas are allowed to go abroad to do a certain type of reporting.

We are obviously all influenced by a vast propaganda network which is dominated by those who, like our N.D.P. friends, use freedom of expression as an excuse for subjecting us to a lot of propaganda which is completely inconsistent with the Canadian spirit and mentality. Mr. Chairman, this is happening not only throughout the whole country, but also in the province of Quebec.

A few years ago, on March 24, 1965, 76,000 Quebecers signed a petition which was published in the Quebec newspaper Le Soleil. That petition signed by 76,000 mothers read as follows:

We ask our representatives—

That is, we who sit in this House of Commons.

—to put an end to the domination exercised by a minority in the C.B.C. to spread perversity, pornography, free love, blasphemy, drug, violence and crime.

I think, Mr. Chairman, that some members here may find that these remarks are exaggerated, but these are the feelings which mothers, conscious of their responsibilities to their children, felt necessary to express through the newspapers. If we were so little concerned about our responsibilities, we could surely turn a deaf ear, but we would certainly be judged by those who send us here to represent them, as people who failed in their duty, in their obligations.

[Mr. Valade.]

May I be permitted, Mr. Chairman, to say that there must be on the airwaves, if not a moral code, at least some guidelines conformable to Canadian morality. In fact, I hope that we have a public morality in Canada and I do not think that freedom of speech or freedom of expression is thwarted when standards of morality are established for the good of society. I am not speaking of those revolutionaries who possibly make up one quarter of one per cent of the population and who stage violent demonstrations in front of embassies to intimidate the peaceful population; I am speaking in the name of the people and saying there should be a moral code just as there is a labour code for workers.

When a labour code is set up, there is no question of censorship, of restricting the freedom of unions or employers or of other areas. It is simply a question of defining standards of conduct—aware of our responsibility as a Christian people—so that they should promote a healthy atmosphere, an atmosphere of understanding and peace.

Now, Mr. Chairman, the other night I heard certain members of the New Democratic party state their concept of morality. For them, morality is licence. If our crown corporation is allowed to show the most degrading films on television and if people protest according to their Christian concepts against such action, we can already feel the New Democrat wave of propaganda rise against what is claimed to be an attack on individual freedom.

We have unfortunately undergone far too long such propaganda and pressure, without saying a word, without protest. Surely, there must be in the minister's or the government's views some basis of morality, of Christian philisophy, that should guide, it seems to me, the legislation.

A while ago, the minister told us that in Great Britain, some guidelines or a code are given to the postmaster general. In fact, she said:

• (4:40 p.m.)

[English]

"Controversy with due care"; I think they were the words of the minister.

[Translation]

I am amazed that we do not have the same terms here: controversy with due care.

Mr. Chairman, may I be allowed, at this point, to quote two eminent personalities outside the world of politics whose life can certainly serve as criteria, if we want to lay down the foundation of Christian policies or guide lines for our parliamentarians and the government in the orientation of our policies.

This is what His Holiness Pope John XXIII had to say about broadcasting, television and films:

> The producer of a film or a television program can no longer propose solely to amuse or fascinate the vast public he addresses.
>
> He must consider himself an educator of society and must use his art to enrich, enlighten and inspire souls. It follows that those producers have the duty to perfect their artistic and technical competence through a deep Christian culture.

I would like to add to that a quotation from His Excellency Cardinal Paul-Émile Léger—now in Africa—who, on June 22, 1962, at the University of Montreal, said about the dangers of the picture:

> —which is more a source of impulse than reflection—

He added:

> The picture which man creates of himself must be true, otherwise it is not human . . . the incomplete or tendentious picture is always immoral, whether it wants to hide evil or see only evil. Therefore, it is the value and the human expression of the creator which conditions his production. He must show a major personality, impeccable taste at the service of sound craftsmanship. It is his first duty and he must set forth the true human problems before calling upon answers from the gospel. If it is otherwise, films and television are only vulgar propaganda tools. Faith must be for a Christian a vision of the world which allows him to probe deeper into the drama of man, to express man more completely.

Such are, Mr. Chairman, the directives that could guide us to the best advantage in setting a course for the policy. I am not saying that we should follow them just because they were given by eminent figures of the Catholic Church and that they should give directives to everybody, but I suggest their philosophy and directives, as to public morality, are undeniable. I do not think there is anything in those words that could interfere with the freedom of human beings, the individual freedom. On the contrary, Mr. Chairman, I believe there are certain things, within as well as outside this parliament, which interfere much more with our freedom, what the New Democratic party calls the limitation to individual freedom. Whenever we do something in order to rectify in any way some of the C.B.C.'s actions, it is that freedom we are upholding.

Allow me to quote as example some films shown on the English network, which stirred up the anger of the C.B.C. listeners. I refer to the film "Two Soldiers". You will probably recall that film. It related the dramatic story of two soldiers returning from their military service, and who displayed before the listeners their lack of patriotism, who flaunted before everybody the fact they now let their beard grow, that they participated in anti-bomb demonstrations and that they were also homosexuals. That was the entertainment which our national system showed the Canadian people.

Another film, "Second Look", was shown on the C.B.C. in February 1964. It had as main participator, Mr. Ralph Ginsberg, of New York, editor of the dubious magazine Eros, a pornographic magazine if there ever was one, and extremely depraved. Mr. Ginsberg had been condemned to five years of imprisonment in the United States after being found guilty on 28 counts of indictment for attacks on public morality.

Another film shown on the English network of the C.B.C. is "The Observer". What was the meaning of that film our friends of the N.D.P. are ready to stand up for in this chamber, in the name of freedom of speech and freedom of action for individuals? What was the meaning of "The Observer?" We saw Dr. Albert Ellis, expounding to Canadians his views on sexology. Apparently, he is a top expert. Imagine how important this was to the education, the morality and the culture of Canadians whose merits often win high praise on the left side of this chamber. The views of Professor Ellis, who said to Canadians that not only premarital and extramarital sexual relations were necessary but essential, were aired for everybody to hear. That is what the C.B.C. was teaching us.

On the English network too, we were shown "The Private Memoirs and Confessions of a Justified Sinner". How edifying are such subjects to Canadians!

Mr. Prittie: Have you any examples taken on the French network?

[English]

Mr. Valade: We have more than you have in television. We know that that should not be. We are not defending the kind of trash that appears on C.B.C. programs. That is why we are here, to correct this stupid and illogical situation.

[Translation]

Now, Mr. Chairman, what about the film "The Open Grave"? We remember that satire which shook the confidence of Canadians.

But we placed around the framework of the C.B.C. individuals who were unassailable. We have filled the management of that organization with persons who said: We are kings and masters of what is going to be shown in Canada, under the pretext of freedom of speech and expression, be it smut or trash. We are protected by the charter given to us by the federal government at a cost of $150 million per year in Canadian taxes.

Well, Mr. Chairman, I think that I have given a sufficient number of examples. I could perhaps add another film entitled "The Trespassers" in which was publicly shown the good effects experienced by young people who use marijuana, that baneful drug corrupting our youth throughout the country.

And what do our New Democratic friends reply? Turn the knob. Shut off your television or your radio.

But if we are to pay $150 million in taxes yearly to be told: Turn off your television set, I prefer that we set down standards of conduct and morality. Not a single member conscious of his duty can tell me that we have neither the right nor the duty to set standards of philosophy, of public morality. I am not speaking of dictatorial standards nor censorship standards when we are thinking of setting standards of conduct for the good of society and the community.

Mr. Chairman, it is unfortunate that the hon. member for Hochelaga (Mr. Pelletier) is not in the house, for he publicly contradicted the minister yesterday when he said that the member for Roberval (Mr. Gauthier) was exaggerating and that, carried away by his emotions he had gone beyond his thought when he had told the truth, possibly not too pleasantly, to certain people. When the member for Hochelaga said he had exaggerated, this was not true; however, if the member for Hochelaga told the truth, then the minister is wrong because some time ago the minister stated that the management of the C.B.C. was rotten. Yet, yesterday, the member for Hochelaga was saying that this was not so.

So I wonder who is right: the parliamentary secretary to the Secretary of State for External Affairs or the Secretary of State (Miss LaMarsh) who is piloting the C.B.C. bill in the house.

I think they should tune their fiddles. It is unfortunate that he should be absent because it is not my habit to challenge the statements of members on the government side or members of other parties while they are absent from the house. But since I am given the opportunity, I should emphasize that the member for Hochelaga should be frankly and deeply embarrassed because the newspapers of 1963 reported that he had received a most important sum—nearly $35,000 from the C.B.C. when he collaborated regularly with this body and when his wife Mrs. Alexandre Leduc Pelletier was also employed by the crown corporation.

So, Mr. Chairman, I can realize that, in these conditions, a member would be ill-advised to say that the C.B.C. is well managed and that there are no favours given; in short, that all goes well.

• (4:50 p.m.)

[English]

Mr. Prittie: On a question of privilege, Mr. Chairman, the hon. member has referred several times to the absence of the hon. member for Hochelaga. It may be that the hon. member for Hochelaga is attending the funeral of Mr. René Tremblay. That should be on the record. Perhaps the hon. member does not know that.

An hon. Member: We all know that.

[Translation]

Mr. Valade: Mr. Chairman, I was aware of that absence. I was supposed to speak yesterday but, unfortunately, due to the intervention of the hon. member of the New Democratic party and other hon. members who have the right to speak, I had neither the time nor the opportunity to take the floor. I apologize and I said so, for the information of the hon. member who has just interrupted me. I understand why he is not here. I am not in the habit of doing it, but if I do it now the hon. member for Hochelaga will have an opportunity to challenge my remarks and we can have an explanation later.

My object is not to attack the hon. member for Hochelaga, for he is entitled to his views. The Prime Minister (Mr. Pearson) confides in him now, as do some ministers, and when the Prime Minister retires he can hope for an appointment to the cabinet. But that is out of the question for the time being in view of the statements he made against the Liberal party before assuming the responsibilities of a parliamentary secretary. I therefore invite him to express his views.

Mr. Chairman, I am here to point out certain things which have been said and I understand the support the hon. member might give to the C.B.C. since he lived off it for a number of years.

But it is important to establish what we want to do, when we wish to set out, in a section of an act, the future standards to be followed by the C.B.C., for the future of the Canaidan people who will be obliged not to turn off their set, as the N.D.P. members say but rather to pay for the cost of operation of that corporation and who expect from us a first rate programmation where moral value and quality will not lack.

I should like, Mr. Chairman, to move an amendment to the amendment already moved by the hon. member for Red Deer (Mr. Thompson). Therefore, seconded by the hon. member for Halifax (Mr. McCleave), I move:

After the words—

[English]

Miss LaMarsh: On a point of order, we already have one amendment before us. I understand the committee can only consider one at a time.

Mr. Valade: It is a subamendment.

Miss LaMarsh: All right. Let us hear it. I hope you have some copies in English, too.

Mr. Valade: Yes, I have some copies in English, contrary to the practice of the minister sometimes.

Miss LaMarsh: On a question of privilege, I know that the hon. member for Sainte-Marie is seldom here and has to make the most of it when he does speak, but his suggestion that when I move amendments I do not provide copies in both languages is unfair. On his few appearances in this house the hon. member should try to be a gentleman. He should withdraw.

Mr. Valade: On a question of privilege, the Secretary of State has just said that I am not in the house very often. That is an accusation which is not fair. The hon. lady knows that according to the rules she should not say anything about members of this house which is derogatory. She only has to look around her to see how few members of the cabinet are present. The Prime Minister has not been here since the house reassembled. I know he is sick. The hon. member for Lotbinière was away in France for three weeks before Christmas. What he was doing there, we do not know, but we hope he was doing some good work. I think the minister has gone out of her way to take offence. Maybe she exaggerated when she said the C.B.C. was corrupt or no good—

Miss LaMarsh: Mr. Chairman, I never said the C.B.C. was corrupt or no good. On the few occasions when the hon. member is here, or even in Ottawa, he should try to be accurate.

Mr. Valade: I believe the minister said the C.B.C. had a rotten administration, or something of that nature. I happen to think the government itself is rotten. The way they are trying to get this legislation through is proof of their arrogance. There is no reason for being insulting to members of parliament when they try in a constructive way to introduce improvements. The fact that I have a subamendment in my hand is no reason for the minister to be insulting. The Secretary of State should not complain because we are trying to correct her mistakes. The subamendment does not change the nature of the amendment. It simply adds more certainty. However, I am not insisting that the Secretary of State withdraw her remarks. I would prefer that she allow herself to be controlled by her better judgment and I will let her comments pass.

[Translation]

My amendment to the amendment, Mr. Chairman, is as follows. It consists in inserting, after the words:

—public controversy—

the following words:

—inasmuch as those views should not be heinous, injurious or of such a nature to create public disorder or discord between religious, ethnical or linguistic groups.

The paragraph goes on to state:

—and that the programming of each broadcaster—

Now, the purpose of the amendment to the amendment is not to alter in any way the main amendment of the hon. member for Red Deer; its sole object is to specify and to clarify what is meant by the conflicting views expressed on the waves of the C.B.C.

[English]

Mr. Prittie: Do you have an English copy?

Miss LaMarsh: I can only say that this is the kind of legislation that no chamber in the world would endorse. I do not know what the hon. member means by his subamendment. I do not know whom he expects to be the judge of these matters. I know the hon. gentleman is not a nazi, but this is the kind of thing which used to be popular in that type of state. There is no hope now, or any time in the future, that members on this side of the house would adopt a proposal of the kind just put forward.

I recognize that the hon. member might like to bring the matter to a vote now. He has made some reference to the fact that certain ministers are not here. I know he does not have a tender disposition, but on our side when we lose a colleague of value we try, at least, to pay our last respects. I would think that since he is a man of honour and intelligence and of the same race, though the hon. member for Sainte-Marie does not grace it as much as the former member for Matapédia-Matane, he would be ashamed to the core after making a remark about ministers being absent because they are attending a funeral this afternoon.

We have discussed with various representatives in the house the course to be followed in the event of a question coming to a vote in the circumstances to which I have referred, and the understanding is that we on this side would ask that the question be allowed to stand. Since the hon. member for Sainte-Marie has broken another one of the rules that hon. gentlemen in this house, even if they wear skirts, are asked to follow, I would like to ask the consent of the committee to stand this question.

• (5:00 p.m.)

Mr. Valade: Mr. Chairman, I rise on a question of privilege. The Secretary of State has just accused me of making remarks while members of the front bench opposite were not here. I am not the one who raised that matter. I think she was the first one to raise it by saying I am never here, which is untrue. She has provoked this remark by her own stupidity in our language.

I do not mind being polite to the minister socially—

Miss LaMarsh: I cannot even do that with you.

Mr. Valade: —but in this regard she must take full responsibility for her words.

Miss LaMarsh: I do.

Mr. Valade: We have to accept our responsibilities here. When the minister makes such a remark about my amendment she must expect me to reply as bluntly and with as much politeness as she herself has shown.

[Miss LaMarsh.]

On the point of privilege, Mr. Chairman, I think the Secretary of State knows she cannot say indirectly what she is not permitted to say directly. She has just implied that my amendment was the kind of amendment heard of in nazi Germany, or something of that nature. I think this is a gross implication and a defamation of my amendment. If the minister clearly says that that was not her implication then I will accept her words in a gentlemanly fashion as coming from a very lovely lady, as she is, and we will close the discussion. But I will certainly not allow this kind of implication to be made indirectly because this is certainly not permitted in this house. I require that she take full responsibility for her comments in the house. If I mentioned anyone being absent it was because she was the first one to make that implication in discussing the principle of my amendment. This kind of thing should not be tolerated, and I ask that the minister clarify her position in this regard.

The Chairman: Order. I think this is the time for the Chair to intervene and suggest to the committee that we get back to the subamendment before it.

Mr. Valade: Very respectfully, Mr. Chairman, I must point out that the minister has said indirectly what she is not permitted to say directly. She made the allusion that my amendment was a nazi or fascist kind of statement. This is not permitted by the rules and I will not tolerate it. I ask for a retraction by the minister.

The Chairman: Order. The Chair has listened to the remarks made by both members and is of the opinion that there is not a point of privilege.

Mr. Sherman: Mr. Chairman, we seem to have reached a position in this debate where postures are hardening. I hope we can avoid too much rigid crystallization of opinion on both sides of the question. As I have advised the committee, I have every intention to move an amendment to this subclause before we conclude examination of it but I would not be prepared, nor do I think many members would be, to force proceedings to a vote on any amendment, subamendment or clause at the present time until members on the government side have a chance to return from their sad obligation this afternoon.

I take this opportunity to say a word or two about subclause (d) and my position with respect to the amendment before the committee. I think I may be able to allay the fears and anxieties of the hon. member for Digby-Annapolis-Kings. He expressed the fear that if we continue to proceed at this rate it will be some considerable time before we get through all the clauses of the bill. If our progress on clause 2(d) could be taken as the criterion this would be a valid fear, but I would like to say to him that we should not take our progress on this subclause or on any other subclause in clause 2 as a criterion of the speed with which the bill will be dealt with because in fact this clause is the nub and heart of the whole legislation.

Although we may be making an arduous, difficult and in some ways tedious journey through this part of the legislation I would point out that this clause is a most crucial and vital one. It behooves all of us to address ourselves with all responsibility to the wording of these subclauses as now drafted, be it precise or imprecise, but I am sure that when we finish discussion of clause 2 we will move much more swiftly through the other clauses of the bill.

Earlier this afternoon the minister made a very cogent defence of subclause (d). Like the hon. lady I feel this subclause is vital to the bill and to the subject which has been before our broadcasting committee for many months. It is integral to the whole philosophy of broadcasting and to the whole library of broadcasting legislation that we are trying to develop. Although I sympathize with the intentions of those who would like to see subclause (a) eliminated, I agree with the minister that because it is integral to the philosophy and policy we are at last trying to enunciate the argument for its elimination is insupportable.

I have been interested in the remarks made by many members during the last 24 hours with respect to this subclause and the amendment moved by the hon. member for Red Deer. Some interesting points have been brought up, all valuable in their way, all legitimate, but I think there has been a tendency on the part of members on both sides of the question to express their positions in more extreme terms than are desirable at this point. It is most undesirable that we allow the dispute and discussion to break down into a contest between two rigid positions representing uncompromising philosophical areas of thought.

I think there is a middle road which we can follow. With all due respect to the hon. member for Red Deer, I believe that most of the difficulty that has arisen during the past 24 hours is due to the wording of his amendment. Although I have said that I intend to support his amendment I do not entirely agree with its wording. It is too general in some respects and too onerous in others. If a different amendment were placed before the committee we might be able to proceed through this subclause with a lot less contentiousness and dispute.

Those of us who are concerned about the precise wording of the subclause are concerned about responsibility, not about encroachment upon freedom or about restrictions upon freedom of speech. The hon. member for Edmonton-Strathcona contended that the wording of the subclause is entirely acceptable, if not impressive and beautiful. I agree with the hon. member for Digby-Annapolis-Kings in his criticisms of that sweeping approach. I find that the wording of the subclause, to say the least, is imprecise, and this is what causes my discomfort with it.

• (5:10 p.m.)

I would ask, for example, that the committee consider what is meant by the term "conflicting views" which appears in the middle of the subclause where it is stated that the programming should provide reasonable opportunity for the expression of conflicting views on matters of public controversy. The expression "conflicting views" says nothing, covers nothing, and guarantees nothing. If we cover communist views and fascist views and present them, they are conflicting, but that is hardly balanced treatment of a subject. One might have a view that abortion should be permitted at will in hospitals or should be permitted at will in back-room kitchens or parlours. Those are conflicting views, but they would hardly represent a balanced approach to the question of abortion and whether or not it should be permissible at all. One might present the position of the white extremists and the position of the black extremists. These would be conflicting views, but they would not constitute a balanced, objective, and responsible approach to the race question.

Many of us are concerned about the question of balancing, if possible, responsibility and objective. So I for one find myself completely dissatisfied with the term "conflicting views", particularly as it is used in the context of this subclause. This is just one objection I have to it. I believe that a guide line of this type in respect of programming, particularly in the area of public affairs, is vital and indispensable to the whole area of broadcasting in this country and perhaps vital and indispensable to the whole fabric and future of the Canadian nation. I do not think the standing committee on broadcasting would have permitted such a subclause to be written into this proposed legislation had the members not been fully cognizant of and attuned to the whole political and social controversy which has been raging around broadcasting in this country for many years.

Guide lines are necessary. There is nothing wrong with guide lines. They are given to labour, industry and government agencies. However, the guide lines must contain something. Otherwise it is academic nonsense and in that case I would side with my friend from Digby-Annapolis-Kings and say, "Throw it out". But if the subclause is to be there, as I believe it should and as I think the minister stated she believed it should, then let it say something. So long as a transmitter is up there is an opportunity provided for the expression of conflicting views, but if these views should cover only the opposite ends of the spectrum on any given question and not cover the middle on matters of public controversy, then to me this would seem to be so much semantic and academic nonsense. This subclause does not say what those who are concerned with broadcasting and who were concerned with this subclause when it passed in the standing committee in their hearts and consciences wanted to say.

If I might be so bold as to suggest what many of us in our hearts, souls and consciences wanted to say it is that the programming provided by the Canadian broadcasting system should be varied, comprehensive and balanced in its treatment of matters of controversy and that the programs on each broadcasting station should be of high standard and so on. In other words, the offending clause in my view is the clause which says that the programming should provide only opportunity for the expression of conflicting views on matters of public controversy. I suggest that that clause should be replaced by a clause stating that the programming should be balanced in its treatment of matters of public controversy.

If that were the wording of the subclause I would be entirely happy with it, knowing full well that one cannot legislate this type of operation in the extreme. I am not asking that it be legislated in the extreme. I am asking, if these guide lines are to be enunciated and articulated in an area which has been one of social and philosophic dispute in this country for some years, that at least they be guide lines which mean something. Let us have intelligent and comprehensible guide lines and not some sort of expression in vague, general, umbrellalike terms behind which any kind of imbalanced and extreme activity can hide and disguise itself. It should not be general wording of the nature provided here in this subclause which provides an excuse and disguise for those who intend to practice imbalanced programming or perhaps intend to have extremism in their programming.

This afternoon the hon. member for Sudbury spoke about discrimination. He did not use that word and I do not mean to misquote him. However, he spoke about discrimination against his union and his party by the private television management in the city of Sudbury. I am as concerned about discrimination and lack of objectivity of that kind as I am about discrimination against the particular area of life or particular interest which may be close to my heart. I agree that there should be no discrimination by private management against collective employment or against collective operations, against unions, against labour, against socialism if you like, against the New Democratic party, against any other party or against any other enterprise in this country.

I am just as concerned about that kind of discrimination as I am about discrimination against people of French origin or who have black skin. I agree with the hon. member for Sudbury that if his suggestion is a true representation of the picture in his city he has a valid and legitimate complaint. I say to him that subclause (d) would be helpful in guaranteeing that this type of discrimination would no longer exist in Canada. It would protect his area and his interests as much as mine.

There have been a great many things said in this chamber in the last 24 hours which indicate that many speakers in this debate have taken completely out of context a distorted picture of the intent of those of us who either support the amendment now on the floor or, like myself, intend if that amendment should fail to move one with slightly different wording. A great many things have been said about freedom and encroachment and infringement of freedom. This is a red herring which was born in the days of ancient Greece when democracy was originally proposed. It is a smoke screen and excuse behind which all kinds of champions of lies and irresponsibility have hidden down through the centuries.

Mr. Stanbury: Mr. Chairman, may I ask the hon. member a question?

Mr. Sherman: Yes.

Mr. Stanbury: I think he was quoting accurately from the speech of his colleague from Prince. Is that the member whom he is accusing of those evils?

• (5:20 p.m.)

Mr. Sherman: I am not accusing anybody of any evils. My hon. friend from York-Scarborough is absolutely correct when he says my reference is to the remarks, among others, of my friend and colleague the hon. member for Prince. This is not the first time the hon. member for Prince and I have disagreed and I am sure it will not be the last. I am not accusing him of anything. All I am saying is that these remarks and many others made in this chamber constitute nothing more than an historic red herring that is 5,000 years old in terms of the philosophy of the western world.

As philosophers of a more modern vintage have pointed out, the price of freedom is eternal vigilance. The suggestion that to be vigilant where the public interest is concerned, to maintain an attitude of vigilance and watchfulness over operations such as modern day broadcasting, which have such an ambit of influence over the attitudes of people generally on political questions, and the suggestion that responsibility is necessary and desirable in this area, hardly represent in my view or in the view of many other Canadians, I am sure, an encroachment or impingement on personal freedom. All this does is reflect and expostulate on the attitudes in respect of freedom held by many in this twentieth century, in this society and the world in which we live which represents something less than an earthly paradise.

This is one area of the debate which indicates that the positions of many of those supporting the amendment and advocating the philosophy behind the amendment and their remarks in support of that philosophy have been taken out of context and distorted beyond all reason. I think the hon. member for Royal, for example, another colleague of mine—

Mr. Fairweather: Am I hiding behind a Greek philosopher of 5,000 years ago?

Mr. Sherman: No, but perhaps the hon. member is one who can bring some modern day philosophy to bear on a subject that has been distorted out of all proportion during this stage of the debate. The hon. member for Royal took great pains to deplore the objection that some members of this chamber have expressed, either here or outside the chamber, to the appearance of Adolph von Thadden on C.B.C. television a few months ago. This is hardly relevant to the debate that is taking place here. Nobody during this debate on this particular clause of the broadcasting bill is objecting to the fact that visitors such as Mr. von Thadden should be invited to appear on television. Everyone in this chamber with any conscience would agree with the hon. member for Royal that there is essentially no harm done by hearing spokesmen of that particular point of view on the C.B.C. or any other television network in this country. There is no validity to dragging that kind of red herring across the trail of this debate.

Mr. Fairweather: I cannot be bothered looking up the reference but it is there.

Mr. Sherman: This is another area in which there has been an attempt to distort the intent of the people behind the amendment.

The same member, my friend and colleague, said he was not interested in hearing broadly held views on television because those views have the opportunity of being expressed in thousands of ways through newspapers and other means of communication. No doubt they do, but so do narrowly held views have the opportunity to be expressed in thousands of ways through newspapers and radio communications. Why should not all views, broad and narrow, be given the availability of television outlets as well as other forms of communication media?

Miss LaMarsh: The amendment only speaks of the broad.

An hon. Member: What broad?

Mr. Sherman: The hon. member for Greenwood spoke about censorship and suggested that the most simple form of censorship lies in the simple act of turning the knob of the television set and shutting it off. I suggest this is not as easy an exercise as it appears on the surface. A great deal of psychological and sociological research must be done about the pulling power, the impact and compulsion quality of television, particularly in the homes of viewers who are perhaps denied access to wider forms of entertainment, education and a greater variety of activities, before we will know how simple it is for a person to get up and turn the "off" knob on his television set. In any event I do not think anyone in this chamber is advocating censorship.

Once again this argument follows a line which really goes beyond the area and intent contemplated by those supporting this amendment. No one was talking about censorship. All we were talking about, as I have emphasized before, is an exercise in responsibility by adopting a set of guide lines to enable people in authority in the broadcasting profession to know where they stand and what is demanded of them in measuring the performance of their performers and the people in their programming department in relation to the general philosophy on broadcasting laid down by legislation passed by this parliament setting out what is deemed to be responsible, constructive and a genuinely Canadian use of the airwaves.

With those comments I shall take my seat. Let me remind the committee once again that if we can get away from dispute and contentiousness with regard to the amendment before the committee we will be able to approach this subject and dispose of this subclause with much greater efficiency and a much greater community of agreement. The wording of the amendment before the committee is not only unacceptable to those opposed to its whole philosophy but it is also very difficult for some of us in favour of the philosophy to accept it because of its generality and the apparent strictures it would impose on the broadcasting authorities in the light of other clauses and the words they contain.

Mr. Cowan: Mr. Chairman, I did not take part in the debate on this clause yesterday.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Cowan: I had no intention of speaking on the amendment introduced by the member for Red Deer, which I support wholeheartedly, until I was advised this afternoon that there was an agreement that there would be no vote on this amendment until the return of those who have been attending the last rites for Hon. René Tremblay who was a friend of mine. If I had been advised this morning, when I asked if the broadcasting bill would be before the committee today, that there would not be a vote this afternoon, I would have attended the funeral. But I was told we would be debating the bill, which answer kept me in Ottawa because I understood we would be referring back to subclause (c). Not until this afternoon, after I had given up my reserved seat on the bus and plane did I learn that no vote was coming forward. Therefore I cannot be accused of continuing the discussion in order to postpone the vote at this time.

This debate gives me the opportunity of discussing the necessity of this amendment and other amendments to provide guide lines for the operation of our national television and radio networks. I do not believe we could have had more concise or blatant examples of the need for guide lines for conducting programming on both public and private networks than those examples we had last night and again this afternoon. I sat in this house and witnessed both episodes.

• (5:30 p.m.)

We have rules of debate which are summed up in the standing orders of the House of Commons. Standing order 35 reads as follows:

> No member shall speak disrespectfully of Her Majesty, nor of any of the royal family, nor of His Excellency or the person administering the government of Canada; nor use offensive words against either house, or against any member thereof. No member may reflect upon any vote of the house, except for the purpose of moving that such vote be rescinded.

Why do we have these rules of debate if it is not necessary to have guide lines? Although we have these rules of debate, little attention is paid to them. I was very provoked last night by the personal attack made by a member of this house against the hon. member for Roberval. I went across the floor of the house and pointed out to the hon. member for Roberval that standing order 35 provides that no member shall use offensive words against any member of either house. If I ever heard offensive words being used against a member of this house, last night was a prime example.

I do not like to see one person talking down to another, and I do not like to see one person setting himself up as a judge to evaluate the opinions of another member of the house who has been duly and properly elected by the constituency of Roberval and has every right to express his opinions whether or not any member of the house thinks he does not know what he is talking about. I could not agree more with the hon. member for Roberval in the stand that he took last night.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order, please. I hesitate to interrupt the hon. gentleman but I cannot see that the remarks he is now making are relevant to the clause under study.

Mr. Cowan: Mr. Chairman, you were the Chairman last night at the time to which I am referring. I am simply pointing out the necessity for guide lines in the public sector of the radio and television world, when we need them in the houses of parliament. I am also pointing out that even when we do provide guide lines they are not always observed.

I had no sympathy this afternoon for the comments directed personally toward the hon. member for Sainte-Marie. While I seldom agree with the hon. member for Sainte-Marie, I defend his right to express any opinion in this house to which he has been duly elected on more than one occasion.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Miss LaMarsh: You will agree with anyone as long as he is not a Liberal.

Mr. Cowan: I would like at this time to refer to a report that appears in this morning's Globe and Mail. Of course, there seem to be many lovers of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation who seem to have the conviction that nothing wrong can be done by the C.B.C. and that it is the proper measuring stick for all other sources of information. I had intended during the question period this afternoon to ask the Secretary of State whether we have to rely on reports of the Associated Press and Southam News Service for details of what is going on in North Korea, where a United States warship has been impounded by the North Korean people.

Has the C.B.C. yet sent camera crews, observers and commentators off to North Korea with the attitude, to hell with the expense, let us get the facts for the C.B.C.? Or do we have to rely on Southam News Service, the Associated Press and the Canadian Press for details upon which to form an opinion of this action? I refer to the C.B.C. news coverage because I wish to quote from the evidence given yesterday at a formal, government hearing in Cayuga, the county seat of Haldimand county, Ontario. This hearing was conducted under the direction of the provincial government of Ontario.

The report to which I refer appears on the front page of this morning's Globe and Mail. It is a very detailed report. I wonder whether a report over the C.B.C. news service, either radio or television, will be given in such detail as it is printed in the fourth estate. Yesterday was the second or third day of a hearing which is investigating whether farmers and cattle in the Dunnville area are dying from fluoride poisoning, as alleged on a C.B.C. documentary some time ago. This documentary, of course, was fully paid for by the Canadian taxpayers.

May I leave that subject for a moment, Mr. Chairman, in order to refer to the recent remarks of the hon. member for Winnipeg South in which he referred to the remarks of the hon. member for Timmins who stated that if you did not like a program you could always turn it off. I later made the comment to my good friend the hon. member for Timmins that it would be satisfactory to me if you could turn the program off and your taxes stopped running. But when you turn a C.B.C. program off your taxes keep on running and you are paying for the blather that is coming over the air whether or not you want to hear it or look at it. While we may be able to turn our radio or television off, do not forget that our taxes keep on running and we are paying for the program just the same.

One of the witnesses who appeared before the commission appointed by the Ontario government to inquire into the ridiculous allegations made on the C.B.C. so-called documentary "Air of Death" was Dr. F. Graham Marson of Hamilton, Ontario. Dr. Marson was on the stand in Cayuga yesterday. I presume he was sworn and was under oath, because it is a commission investigation under the direction of the department of health of the Ontario provincial government. Dr. Marson, who has been a consultant for Dunnville area doctors since 1958, said he was unable to find any evidence of fluoride poisoning during his examinations of two farmers concerned. He is a specialist in internal medicine and was called in by Dunnville doctors to examine two farmers suspected of suffering fluoride poisoning. He described the television program "Air of Death" as disgusting nonsense that left him questioning the credibility of any C.B.C. documentary.

When you have a man of the standing of Dr. Graham Marson of Hamilton in his community and profession referring to a so-called documentary on the C.B.C. as disgusting nonsense that left him questioning the credibility of any C.B.C. documentary, I would say that we certainly need more guide lines for the direction of C.B.C. program directors than we have at the moment, because they are able to put programs like that on the air despite the so-called controls that are supposed to apply to them.

Dr. Marson pointed out under oath yesterday that his diagnosis of Jacob Vanderbeek, 68, in 1965, and Joseph Casina, 55, last July, was confirmed by intensive examinations last November at Toronto General hospital. The newspaper report goes on to say:

> Dr. K. J. R. Wightman, physician in chief at Toronto General, told the inquiry that the two men were examined over a period of three or four weeks after the inquiry was ordered.
>
> He said no evidence was found that the two men were suffering from fluoride poisoning.

You may wonder whether I have any personal knowledge of this documentary and the results that have flowed from the false statements that were made on the C.B.C. program. I point out that about 48 hours after these allegations came pouring over the air on a C.B.C. program my daughter, who is a student at the University of Ottawa, came to me and stated that she had been approached by the private television network, C.T.V., to go on the air in a discussion on pollution. I said to her, "Young lady, I wonder how they came to pick on you, with the thousands of students at the University of Ottawa." She said, "I don't know, dad, but there are going to be three students from the University of Carleton and three from the University of Ottawa, and we are supposed to take part in a panel discussion with the federal minister of health, Mr. MacEachen." I said to her, "Well, it is interesting to me that they have asked you, Margaret. But what is it you would like?" She said, "I want to know if there is any body in the charges that have been made over the C.B.C. network, to start with, and I would like to know if they should be refuted or supported." I said to my daughter, in regard to her preparation for the C.T.V. program, "This is not a matter of federal concern, it is a provincial matter," and I got her the necessary portions of the law in question on the pollution of air and water.

I wish at this time to thank my friend the hon. member for Nickel Belt to whom I went for the supporting evidence to give my daughter. I went to him because I know the arguments that have been going on in the Nickel Belt-Sudbury area for the past 50 years over the question of pollution of the air and water there from the mining of nickel.

[Mr. Cowan.]

The hon. member for Nickel Belt gave me a tremendous file of facts and figures based upon investigations over the years by labour unions, government authorities and doctors in regard to this matter.

• (5:40 p.m.)

I turned the material over to the students of the University of Ottawa and they went to the studio with the Minister of National Health and Welfare. A half hour program was presented in which the private network showed the public of Canada that this matter was not a federal responsibility and that if there was a responsibility for the illness of two men and the deaths of animals it was a provincial one. The fact that the province of Ontario has appointed a commission to investigate the matter shows that they accept the responsibility. However, why was there an unnecessary hubbub raised that the federal government was at fault in the matter? The reason for it was that a federal crown agency, the C.B.C., had put a program on the air which was fictitious and false from start to finish.

I will continue with the remarks made yesterday by Dr. Marson. Dr. Marson described as "complete imagination and fabrication" the statements made by Mr. Casina on the C.B.C. television program that he, Dr. Marson, had said Mr. Casina was "the third known case in North America". Dr. Marson said in his evidence yesterday "having never heard of a fluorisis case in Canada or the United States, I know jolly well I did not say that." Then Dr. Marson told the public inquiry that he was disgusted at the fact that the C.B.C. did not get in touch with him before the program was broadcast to check the statements attributed to him by farmers who took part in the show. He then made the following amazing statement: "I think it is disgusting that Stanley Burke does not ring me up before the program but does the following Wednesday."

In introducing his amendment to subclause (d) the hon. member for Red Deer referred to the fact that it was a carryover from subclause 2 (c). I hope I may be allowed to read subclause 2 (c). It reads as follows:

> (c) all persons licensed to carry on broadcasting undertakings have a responsibility for programs they broadcast but the right to freedom of expression, subject only to generally applicable statutes and regulations—

The hon. member for Red Deer wants to put a little more teeth into subclause 2 (d), following the reference that is made to generally applicable statutes and regulations in subclause 2 (c). Surely adherence to the truth might be one of the regulations that could be observed by the C.B.C. in its programming.

When Dr. Marson pointed out that the statements attributed to him by a farmer were false and that the only time he was consulted with regard to the validity of these remarks was after the program rather than before it, he was giving evidence that the C.B.C. themselves admit that something was mishandled when they put that program on the air.

To show how much Dr. George L. Waldbott of Detroit knew about the subject, Drs. Wightman and Marson were cross-examined by the commission counsel, Mr. Rodger Gordon. Mr. Gordon told the investigation at Cayuga that Dr. Waldbott had been invited to testify. Mr. Gordon read a letter he received from Dr. Waldbott saying he would be glad to testify but that at present his data is incomplete. It was on January 24 that Mr. Gordon, the commission counsel, read the letter from Dr. Waldbott.

Although Dr. Waldbott stated his data was incomplete, it did not stop him from making allegations and charges that the province of Ontario is spending money to prove unfounded and it did not stop the C.B.C. putting the program on the air some time ago. Dr. Waldbott then said he would like to see the reports on the examinations at the Toronto General hospital. I quote from Dr. Waldbott's letter the following sentence:

> This would make it possible for me to render a valid assessment of their illness.

I wonder what kind of assessment he made of their illness before, if he now admits that he has not seen the results of the investigation made by the Toronto General hospital under the direction of the department of health of the province of Ontario and at the expense of the taxpayers of Ontario because of false accusations put on the air by the C.B.C. He said that if he was allowed to see the results of the investigation made at the Toronto General hospital he would be able to give a valid assessment of their condition. Certainly this is a backhanded way of admitting that the first assessment made by Dr. Waldbott was invalid and should not have been on the air.

To show the expense to which the taxpayers of Ontario are being put by these false accusations made on the air on a C.B.C. program under the few guide lines they have now, I point out that Mr. Gordon, the commission counsel, told one of the farmers who was complaining he was affected by fluoride fumes from polluted air that he and his wife could make arrangements to enter the Toronto General hospital if they felt they were suffering from fluoride poisoning and their expenses would be paid by the province of Ontario.

When the province of Ontario pays expenses it means that the taxpayers of Ontario are paying them, and this is a heavy expense which is being forced on the people of Ontario through false accusations which went out over the airwaves on a C.B.C. so-called documentary. No wonder Dr. Marson said that the falsity of one documentary casts doubts on all other C.B.C. documentaries.

I strongly support the amendment of the hon. member for Red Deer who is trying to put more teeth into this clause which endeavours to control programming in the public and private sectors of both the radio and television world, and I call upon all other members of the house to do the same, particularly after hearing this concrete example of irresponsible documentation by the C.B.C. as testified to by Dr. F. Graham Marson, an outstanding specialist in internal medicine, and Dr. K. J. R. Wightman, physician in chief at the Toronto General hospital, as recently as yesterday.

Mr. Prittie: Mr. Chairman, I have very brief remarks to make on the subamendment which is before us. If I have to make a choice between the idea presented by the hon. member for Digby-Annapolis-Kings that we scrap subclause (d) altogether, or add extra words to it as this subamendment does, I would opt for getting rid of it. We are simply loading this clause with more and more words which I think are meaningless. It seems to me that the intent of the subamendment is adequately dealt with in parts of the Criminal Code. It refers to public disorder, but we already have a law on sedition. I do not see why we should have to include these matters in the Broadcasting Act when they are already dealt with in other sections of the law It would be simply adding words to this bill which already has enough.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Is the committee ready for the question?

Miss LaMarsh: Mr. Chairman, we have an agreement that if we come to the point of a division we will stand the clause until eight o'clock.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Shall the subclause with the amendment stand?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Shall subclause (e) carry?

Mr. Cowan: Should we not go back to subclause (c)?

Miss LaMarsh: Subclause (c) was stood because there was an amendment to it and presumably it would be necessary to vote on it. Therefore both these subclauses would have to stand.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Shall subclause (e) carry?

• (5:50 p.m.)

[Translation]

Mr. Choquette: Mr. Chairman, subclause (e) of clause 2 is a source of great puzzlement to me, by reason of its evasive wording, which reads thus:

All Canadians are entitled to broadcasting service in English and French as public funds become available;

Mr. Chairman, I think this is the worst excuse ever found not to proceed immediately with the building of relay stations to complete the French network of the C.B.C. It is quite easy and inexpensive to set up, in the large urban centers of the country, relay stations which would allow the French language to be heard and listened to throughout Canada, without prejudice to anyone and without disturbing anyone's habits.

A few million dollars would be enough to carry out this project which, besides, is consistent with the basic aims of state-owned radio. I feel that, in this way, the federal government would make a major contribution to the solution of the problem of national unity, would prevent too often heard recriminations, perhaps, and would also enable those who believe in Canada to assert that federal organizations contribute perhaps more than the province of Quebec to the development of French culture.

I become very sceptical when I am told:

—as public funds become available;

It would be very easy to have an investigation conducted by auditors, accountants or administrators in order to prove that the C.B.C. never has much scruples about spending public funds. That is an open secret, for we all know that a considerable amount of money is being spent and that this could be prevented through normal and not even overly strict control. I could talk on this subject at great length.

Mr. Chairman, I will give several examples to support the assertions I have made this afternoon. Let us take the case of television in Quebec. There are two television stations in Quebec city which are controlled, owned and operated by essentially Canadian interests; these are channels 4 and 5. The two private stations in Quebec, which broadcast local programs for 40 hours a week, are operated by a staff of 130. In other words, 130 people manage to operate two private television stations in Quebec city, and their local weekly broadcasting output is 40 hours.

On the other hand, channel 11 of the C.B.C. which provides a local production of seven hours a week, compared to 40 hours for private stations, employs 200 people compared to 130 working for two stations owned and operated by private enterprise.

That is merely a small example of the expenses which I could qualify as orgiac, excessive and unjustified, which the C.B.C. makes out of the public moneys without any scruples, without any control, which should normally be exercised by responsible and competent directors, concerned with public integrity.

Mr. Chairman, we could multiply the examples and prove easily that the situation which exists in Quebec city also exists throughout the country. It is clear and obvious that private enterprise operates much more efficiently with fewer people, a lower budget and a higher viewers' rating.

We are called upon to vote estimates for the C.B.C. which has yet to show that it is desirous to avoid unnecessary expenditures. Under the circumstances, I have the right to say that the funds are available if we are willing to exercise a tighter control over C.B.C. expenditures. The four or five million dollars we would need to spread the French culture and the French language throughout Canada, without hurting anyone, without restricting anyone's freedoms, are available.

We would have the money available and I wonder if it would not be possible to proceed with this inquiry to allow such easy savings to enable us to build in the large centres of the country relay stations of the French network of the C.B.C., so that French-speaking communities could follow the events and obtain information in their own language.

Mr. Chairman, I note that it is six o'clock and I will have the opportunity to return tonight with more figures.

[English]

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order, It being six o'clock it is my duty to leave the chair in order that the house may proceed to the consideration of private members' business.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

SUBJECT MATTER OF QUESTIONS TO BE DEBATED

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It is my duty, pursuant to provisional standing order 39A, to inform the house that the questions to be raised at the time of adjournment tonight are as follows: the hon. member for Portage-Neepawa (Mr. Enns), Health and Welfare—protest respecting lack of welfare statistics; the hon. member for Skeena (Mr. Howard), British Columbia—development of secondary manufacturing capability; the hon. member for Brandon-Souris (Mr. Dinsdale), Transport—alleged irregularity in rail line abandonment.

It being six o'clock the house will now proceed to the consideration of private members' business as listed on today's order paper, namely private bills, notices of motions (papers), public bills.

PRIVATE BILLS

Mr. Nugent: Mr. Speaker, the order paper today lists as order No. 1 a bill dealing with Rainbow Pipe Line Corporation. I have consulted various members in whose names the bills on this list stand and on behalf of the hon. member for Provencher I would ask the house for unanimous consent to change the order of the bills as listed. The order would be that items Nos. 7 and 8 on today's order paper be taken as items Nos. 1 and 2, and irrespective of the business that is dealt with or finished today item No. 2, which has to do with Seaboard Finance Company of Canada, shall drop to the bottom of the order paper at the end of today's business.

• (6:00 p.m.)

To explain my request may I say with respect to item 1 that I have not been able to get in touch with the hon. member for Northwest Territories, but his colleagues in the house have informed me that he intended to ask that the bill with which he is concerned stand. I have talked to all other hon. members who are concerned with private bills on today's order paper except the hon. member who is sponsoring item No. 5, second reading of Bill No. S-25, respecting London and Midland General Insurance Company. All other members to whom I have spoken, and since many of them are in the house they will verify what I say, agree to the procedure that I propose. Should items 7 and 8 not be dealt with they would not drop to the bottom of the list but other items on the order paper would advance their position. Item No. 1, naturally, would hold its place on the order paper at the conclusion of today's business. Item No. 2, at the end of today's business, would drop to the bottom of the list. Is that agreeable to hon. members?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Basford: Before I agree, do I have the hon. member's assurance that if we follow the hon. member's suggested procedure item No. 6 which stands in my name will, at the end of today's business, be listed on the order paper as No. 5?

Mr. Nugent: There is no difficulty in giving that assurance in this respect. The request I have made is for the purposes of today's debate only. My request is that items Nos. 7 and 8 be treated as Nos. 1 and 2. If they are not disposed of they will resume their normal place on the order paper. Part of the order of the house would be that the other items move up one place.

Mr. Basford: In that case I am happy to give my consent on the understanding that item No. 6 on today's order paper will, at the end of today's business, become item No. 5.

Mr. Howard: We are disposed to agree to the hon. member's proposition provided that at the conclusion of the consideration of items Nos. 7 and 8, item No. 2 having dropped to the bottom of the list, we adjourn for supper, even though that consideration may conclude before seven o'clock.

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The hon. member has suggested that item No. 2 on today's order paper shall drop to the bottom of the list and that item Nos. 7 and 8 shall be considered as Nos. 1 and 2 for today. After items Nos. 7 and 8 are completed the sitting is to be suspended for the dinner hour.

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Private Bills

Mr. Deputy Speaker: If Nos. 7 and 8 are not finished they will retain their regular places on the order paper and item No. 2 will drop to the bottom of the list. Item No. 1 will retain its place on the order paper. Since items Nos. 2, 3, 4 and 6 are orders of the house the house must unanimously agree to stand them. Does the house give unanimous consent to the suggestion of the hon. member for Edmonton-Strathcona?

Mr. Stanbury: On the understanding that each one of the bills which Your Honour mentioned will move up one place on the order paper at the end of today's sitting. If that understanding is correct I give my consent as sponsor of the bill which stands as No. 3 on the order paper.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is there unanimous agreement?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

CABRI PIPE LINES LIMITED

The house resumed, from Thursday, December 14, 1967, consideration in committee of Bill No. S-16, to incorporate Cabri Pipe Lines Limited—Mr. Jorgenson—Mr. Batten in the chair.

The Chairman: When the committee rose on Thursday, December 14, clause 1 of the bill was under consideration.

On clause 1—Incorporation.

Mr. Jorgenson: Mr. Chairman, I thank the committee for its courtesy in allowing these bills to be considered today. The reason for the present arrangement is that we are proposing certain amendments to the bill to meet the objections that were raised previously by the hon. member for Timiskaming and other members of the house.

I should like to move that:

Clause 6 subsection (a) be amended by striking out the word "refining" in line 30, and deleting all after the words "said pipe lines" in line 38 to the end of the clause in line 8, page 3 and adding immediately after the words "said pipe lines", "and own, lease and operate such communication equipment as is necessary for the purpose of its undertaking."

Paragraph (b) of clause 6 would also be amended by striking out all that portion of the paragraph after the words "property so acquired" in line 14, page 3.

The amended clause will then read:

(a) within or outside Canada construct, purchase, lease or otherwise acquire and hold, develop, operate, maintain, control, lease, mortgage, hypothecate, create liens or other security upon, sell, convey or otherwise dispose of and turn to account any and all interprovincial, extra-provincial and/or international pipe lines and all appurtenances relative thereto for the gathering, processing, treating, transmitting, transporting, storing and delivering of gases, liquids and solids or any of them including, without limiting the generality of the foregoing, any natural and artificial gas and oil and hydrocarbons and related substances or any of them and any products or by-products thereof and all works relative thereto for use in connection with the said pipe lines; and own, lease and operate such communication equipment as is necessary for the purposes of its undertaking.

(b) purchase, hold, lease, sell, improve, exchange or otherwise deal in any property, real or personal, movable or immovable, or any interest and rights therein, legal or equitable or otherwise howsoever, and deal with any portion of the lands and property so acquired.

I wish to move those amendments and I hope that the committee approves of them.

The Chairman: Would the hon. member permit me to delay putting the amendment until the committee comes to the consideration of clause 6?

Clause agreed to.

Clauses 2 to 5 inclusive agreed to.

• (6:10 p.m.)

On clause 6—Power to construct and operate pipe lines.

Amendment agreed to.

Clause as amended agreed to.

Clauses 7 to 11 inclusive agreed to.

Preamble agreed to.

Title agreed to.

Bill reported.

Mr. Jorgenson moved the third reading of the bill.

Motion agreed to and bill read the third time and passed.

VAWN PIPE LINES LTD.

The house resumed, from Tuesday, December 19, 1967, consideration in committee of Bill No. S-17, to incorporate Vawn Pipe Lines Ltd.—Mr. Jorgenson—Mr. Batten in the chair.

The Chairman: When the committee rose on Tuesday, December 19, clause 1 of the bill was under consideration.

On clause 1—Incorporation.

Mr. Jorgenson: Mr. Chairman, I am proposing a similar amendment to clause 6 of this bill as was proposed to the previous bill. The only difference in the wording would be this.

Since Bill S-16 has one more line on page two than does Bill S-17, where in the fourth line of the motion to amend line 8 is referred to it should read "line seven", and in subclause (b) where line 14 is referred to line 13 should be read. Otherwise the amendment is exactly the same as the one proposed to clause 6 of the previous bill. The text of the amendment is as follows:

That clause 6 subsection (a) be amended by striking out the word "refining" in line 30, and deleting all after the words "said pipe lines" in line 38 to the end of the clause in line 7, page 3, and adding immediately after the words "said pipe lines", "and own, lease and operate such communication equipment as is necessary for the purpose of its undertaking."

That subclause (b) be amended by striking out all that portion of the subsection after the words "property so acquired" in line 13, page 3.

Clause agreed to.

Clauses 2 to 5 inclusive agreed to.

On clause 6—Power to construct and operate pipe lines.

Amendment agreed to.

Clause as amended agreed to.

Clauses 7 to 11 inclusive agreed to.

Preamble agreed to.

Title agreed to.

Bill reported.

Mr. Jorgenson moved the third reading of the bill.

Motion agreed to and bill read the third time and passed.

SEABOARD FINANCE COMPANY OF CANADA

On the order:

Resuming debate on the motion of Mr. Cameron (High Park) for the second reading of Bill S-15, An Act to incorporate Seaboard Finance Company of Canada.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is it agreed that this item be dropped to the bottom of the order paper?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is it agreed that in accordance with the understanding reached a few minutes ago the house shall rise until eight o'clock?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Perhaps before we rise the house would agree to go into committee of the whole and resume the work interrupted at six o'clock.

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Canadian Policy on Broadcasting

BROADCASTING

IMPLEMENTATION OF CANADIAN POLICY

The house resumed consideration in committee of Bill No. C-163, to implement a broadcasting policy for Canada, to amend the Radio Act in consequence thereof and to enact other consequential and related provisions—Miss LaMarsh—Mr. Batten in the chair.

The Chairman: Pursuant to the order of the house made earlier this day, I do now leave the chair.

SITTING SUSPENDED

At 6.20 p.m. the sitting of the committee was suspended.

SITTING RESUMED

The committee resumed at 8 p.m.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order. The house again in committee of the whole on Bill C-163. When the committee rose at six o'clock subclause (e) of clause 2 was being considered.

[Translation]

Mr. Choquette: Mr. Chairman, I made a few remarks and I shall close quickly to bring to the attention of the house that there are exorbitant expenditures in the C.B.C. No one will question the basis of such a statement. I have cited clearly the case of two private television stations in the city of Quebec operated by private enterprise. These two stations have a much higher rating than that of the C.B.C. with a personnel of only 130 employees. On the other hand, the C.B.C. has only one television station in Quebec and 200 employees.

That is the situation in the city of Quebec. Whereas the two private stations supply 40 hours a week of programming, the C.B.C. supplies seven hours a week: 200 employees for seven hours of production against 130 for 40 hours of production. If that is not abuse, Mr. Chairman, I wonder what could more eloquently describe the excessive expenditures of the C.B.C. It is perfectly clear that this situation is general all over. We should demand an investigation in depth of the expenditures of the C.B.C.

That the C.B.C. should pay a correspondent such as Mr. Jean-Marc Poliquin, a correspondent such as Mr. Pierre Sauvé, I am in full accord, because they are two competent and serious newspapermen who deserve adequate fees.

But if, on the other hand, the C.B.C. is involved in such patronage as the member for Villeneuve (Mr. Caouette) has mentioned, it is not surprising that the same faces are always seen on certain programs. For instance, what fees are paid to the participants in Quiz programs?

Besides, those people would be glad to appear on television for the mere sake of being seen and would perhaps refuse any fee, but in addition to gratifying their personal vanity, they are paid fantastic fees to take part in certain programs.

Who can tell us, for instance, how much is paid Gilles Pellerin's guest to appear on the program where one must not say yes or no? This requires exceptional talent. The thing is to be present and never say yes or no. All kinds of questions are asked. How much are paid the participants in such programs? Does it really require any exceptional talent to perform the feat of not saying yes or no during 60 or 100 seconds? The participants are probably paid $100 or $200, while some humble labourers or farmers work 16 hours a day to earn $10 or $12. Then, we have the right, as representatives of the people, to insist upon a certain control. I do not think it is exaggerating to do so.

Why do I ask for such a control? It is because I am convinced that if an accountant or an auditor, who has the necessary experience, would make a point of investigating thoroughly the expenses of the C.B.C., we would surely be able to save the five millions of dollars necessary to set up relay stations allowing the French language to be heard throughout Canada. And that is vital for Canadian solidarity.

All that is necessary is to build stations retransmitting programs of the French network of the C.B.C. in large English-speaking centres in the country, to spread from coast to coast the French fact so as to meet the views expressed in the Laurendeau-Dunton report, and sanction the official recognition of the two languages in the country. I do not think it is exaggerating to submit such a request to the minister and I feel that with a little firmness, a little determination we would easily save the few million dollars needed in order to spread the French fact throughout Canada.

Now that I have brought up that matter four or five times, I hope that this request will be taken into consideration and an investigation made into the books of the C.B.C. That is becoming urgent. I know how they operate. Anyone who ever set foot in the studios knows what is happening. There are some unforgiveable abuses.

I hope that the hon. member for Lapointe (Mr. Grégoire) will support my request, because he talked so much in the past about saving money for the little people. I ask him tonight to co-operate with me and to request an inquiry into the expenditures of the C.B.C.; with the money saved then, we will truly have that network where the French language will be heard throughout the country and its official status, requested by the Laurendeau-Dunton commission will thus be recognized.

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, before it is passed, I should like to tell the hon. member for Lotbinière (Mr. Choquette) that I am prepared to support his request for a detailed inquiry on the expenditures of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

[English]

Mr. MacLean (Queens): Mr. Chairman, I wish to say a few words before this clause is carried and I think this is an appropriate time to speak on this very important piece of legislation. I was not a member of the standing committee which has been dealing with this bill, but several parliaments ago I had the experience of serving on various house committees which dealt with broadcasting, broadcasting policy and the method by which that policy should be evolved in the interests of the Canadian people. The question of programming is a very—

Miss LaMarsh: On a point of order, Mr. Chairman, we have been four days talking about this and repeatedly the committee has decided, in accordance with the Chair's ruling, that we would stick strictly to the subject being debated. The subject being debated is subclause (e), which has nothing at all to do with programming.

Mr. MacLean (Queens): I was under the impression that subclause (d) had not yet carried.

Miss LaMarsh: It was stood.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Subclause (d) was not carried. It was stood for further study and we are going to revert to if after we have dealt with subclause (e).

Mr. Prittie: Mr. Chairman, subclause (e) reads as follows:

—all Canadians are entitled to broadcasting service in English and French as public funds become available;

• (8:10 p.m.)

I wish to speak briefly on two aspects of this provision. First of all, I do not believe it is quite as easy and simple a task to extend the service across the country as the hon. member for Lotbinière suggested in his speech a few moments ago. Some progress has been made so far as extending service, for instance radio service, in Canada is concerned. Just last month the C.B.C. did open a radio station in Vancouver. However, there are many parts of Canada which have not received service in the first language. In submissions to the committee, both the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation and the Canadian Association of Broadcasters, representing the private side, agreed that where a second television station was to be opened in any city if the first station was a C.B.C. station the second station should be a private station and if the first station was a private station the second station should be a C.B.C. station. This was mentioned in the government white paper and I should like to quote briefly from the government white paper as it is reproduced in the report of the committee at page 9:

Although prime coverage must have first priority, alternative television service is an amenity now regarded almost as a necessity of life, which is already available to some 75-80% of Canadian television households. The Government has advised the Board of Broadcast Governors that, pending the enactment of new legislation, it is now prepared to consider issuing second-station television licences on the recommendation of the Board, subject to the reservation for the use of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation of channels in Victoria, B.C.; Saskatoon, Sask.; Sudbury, Ont.; and the Saint John-Fredericton area in New Brunswick. The provision of television service by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation in these reserved locations will be inaugurated by means of repeater stations at first, as funds permit. The effect of this decision will be to permit the Board to consider applications by private affiliates of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation who may wish to disaffiliate and join the CTV network.

This recommendation has been made and repeated a number of times. So, if there are these four areas in particular I have mentioned, Victoria, B.C., Saskatoon, Sudbury and the Saint John-Fredericton area of New Brunswick, the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation at the present time is prevented from going into these places and erecting stations because of the cut-back of its capital funds which is now in effect.

During the committee hearings and the debates in the house some members have suggested that the second service might be made available by private stations who are affiliated with the C.B.C. I would be opposed to this line of action. I think that all the major cities and areas of Canada should have at least one C.B.C. owned station. If a private station should be allowed to go in there it would remain there and that would prevent the C.B.C. providing service. It is true that the affiliates carry a great deal of the C.B.C. network programming, but there is still a great deal that they do not carry.

I believe the people in areas which now have a private station should also have the public service available to them. If the government is not prepared to accord the capital funds to enable the C.B.C. to go ahead in these four particular areas the C.B.C. might consider building repeater stations, which can be done at much less cost, until they are able to obtain the funds for a complete station to serve the area. As a result of the questioning of the minister in the latter day of the committee hearings, I felt that there had been some backing down from the original statement in the white paper to the effect that these areas were to be reversed for the C.B.C. It seemed to me that she was going to consider the suggestion that they might be given to private operators. I hope this would not be done because the private side of television certainly will grow in Canada but I believe all major population centres should have a C.B.C. station as well.

Mr. Cowan: Mr. Chairman, in connection with this subclause 2(e) I have one or two remarks which I should like to make regarding the subject matter. I should like to emphasize that when the hon. member for Lapointe was endeavouring to have an amendment made to subclause (b), on Thursday, December 21, the hon. Secretary of State, who is piloting this bill at the present time, made the statement in the House of Commons directly to the hon. member for Lapointe that this is a declaratory clause and "we have tried to use appropriate language throughout". Well, the statement that this entire policy clause, clause 2, is a declaratory clause is borne out by the fact that we have these expressions about "should", "should", "should", "should" all the way through. The use of the word "declaratory" is, as the hon. member for Lotbinière has already pointed out, an indication that this is a promise without immediate substance. He points out that we may have to wait a considerable length of time before any action is taken under such a phrase as "all Canadians are entitled to be given service in English and French as public funds become available".

Of course, a declaratory clause may not bind the cabinet to any definite action. It does not necessarily bind the radio and television world to certain action so long as it is considered to be declaratory. But I can assure you that it would not be very long, if such a bill were passed, until we would be hearing the term used that parliament had given a mandate that all Canadians are entitled to a broadcasting service in English and in French as public funds become available. We have heard the term, "the C.B.C. mandate," for the past 20 years. There never was a mandate given to the C.B.C., but in their annual reports they always refer to a mandate. The proof of the pudding lies in the fact that when this bill was introduced in October the Secretary of State pointed out that this was the first mandate "we have drawn up for the C.B.C.". If a bill introduced in October 1967 was the first mandate drawn up for the C.B.C, what was the idea of referring annually to the mandate of the C.B.C from about 1940 to 1967. There was and is no mandate, yet the term is used "mandate for the C.B.C.".

One can imagine what will happen if clause 2 (e) passes since it declares that all Canadians are entitled to broadcasting service in English and French as public funds become available. Despite the fact that we have the statement of the Secretary of State of December 21 that this is a declaratory clause "and we have tried to use appropriate language throughout", as I said before if we pass it, we will be saddled for the rest of time with the accusation that it is a mandate about which parliament is doing nothing. The interesting phrase "as public funds become available", as the hon. member for Lotbinière has indicated, can only tease those who are very anxious to have the use of French spread throughout Canada from coast to coast which would cost the taxpayers of Canada millions and millions of dollars for C.B.C. hardware. I do not intend to make any remarks that would tend to bring to a head the situation which exists in this dominion with regard to the two languages, one of which is official throughout Canada while the second may be used in the province of Quebec and in the houses of parliament.

[Mr. Cowan.]

• (8:20 p.m.)

I should like to draw the attention of our French-speaking compatriots—I dislike very much the expression "French Canadian" and much prefer the expression "French speaking Canadian"—to the fact that Canada lies within the province of a division made by Pope Alexander VI at Rome in 1493 in which he gave this part of the world to Spain. We are all aware that Columbus discovered America in 1492, but very few people seem to know that in 1493 His Holiness Pope Alexander VI of the Roman Catholic church divided the unknown world of the west between Spain and Portugal.

For Canadians the interesting point is that Canada, at the north end of America, was given to Spain by a papal bull issued on May 3, 1493. There was another papal bull issued on May 4, 1493. The reason behind the two bulls was that Columbus returned to Europe and announced his discovery of the Indies to the king of Spain. The King of Portugal maintained that he only discovered islands that had been previously discovered by Portugal. There were many papal bulls which conferred upon Portugal sovereignty over the islands she had discovered and which we know today as the Cape Verde islands and that part of Africa lying east and south of the Cape Verde island.

When Columbus returned to Europe and showed that there was great promise of riches in the Indies the Portuguese were envious. The King and Queen of Spain wished to have confirmation of their claim to title and they advised Pope Alexander VI in the spring of 1493 that Columbus, sailing under the authority of Spain, had discovered the western islands en route to India. In May of 1493 Pope Alexander VI issued the two bulls granting sovereignty over one half of the unknown Western world to Spain and one half to Portugal.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order, please. I am sure every member is impressed by the hon. member's knowledge of geography and history, but actually this is not relevant to the clause now being considered. All hon. members agreed that during the consideration of clause 2 reference could be made to each subclause but that remarks should be confined to the subclause under consideration. I would ask the hon. member to return to a consideration of subclause (e) of clause 2.

Mr. Cowan: I am dealing with subclause (e) of clause 2. I am leading up to a discussion of how French came into this Spanish territory, and I will proceed along that line.

The unknown world had been divided by the pope through these two bulls which have never been abrogated, giving this territory to the Spanish and Portuguese. The northern end of America was given to the king of Spain, and to this day the official language in Brazil is Portuguese. That part was given to Portugal.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order, please. The Chair requests the hon. member's co-operation in this regard. May I again ask the hon. member to confine his remarks to subclause (e).

Mr. Fulton: The C.B.C. had not been established then.

Mr. Cowan: Mr. Chairman, subclause (e) states:

—all Canadians are entitled to broadcasting service in English and French—

I am endeavouring to make the point that evidently all Canadians are entitled to broadcasting service in English and Spanish because this area was given to the King of Spain by a papal bull. A great part of the Canadian population yields allegiance to His Holiness the Pope and I respect them for that, as I respect them for the way in which they observe the tenets of the church. I believe that bulls such as that issued in 1493, never abrogated, should be observed by the faithful of that communion which granted sovereignty to Spain and Portugal. When I say that these bulls have never been abrogated I wonder how we get French coming into this part of North America. Was it by conquest? The English conquered the French. If you are going to tell me that the French conquered the Spanish, I should like to ask when and where. These bulls have never been abrogated and are still in effect.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order, please. The hon. member is not making the task of the Chair any easier by not adhering to the agreement reached by all members of the house that members would confine their remarks to the subclause under study. May I again ask the hon. member to adhere to the subclause we are studying at this time.

Mr. Cowan: Mr. Chairman, I have no further declarations to make on this declaratory clause.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Shall subclause (e) carry?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Shall we now refer to subclause (d)?

Miss LaMarsh: Mr. Chairman, normally we would go back to (c) which was also stood. However, the proposer of the amendment, the hon. member for Edmonton-Strathcona, asked me to withhold it until tomorrow. With the committee's permission I am prepared to stand subclause (c) until tomorrow.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Is the committee ready for the question in respect of the amendment proposed by the hon. member for Sainte-Marie?

Mr. Smallwood: Mr. Chairman, I had not planned on participating in this debate which has now carried on for long enough, but I have received so many complaints from my constituents I feel it is my responsibility to say a few words at this time.

I should like to congratulate the minister in charge of C.B.C. for having the courage to get up and tell the people of Canada that there was rotten management in the C.B.C. I agree there is something rotten and it is about time that parliament cleaned it up.

Let me refer for a few moments to the remarks of the member for Burnaby-Richmond, who came to this house a few years ago. On Tuesday, he saw fit to criticize my colleagues who had the fortitude to stand up in this house and complain about C.B.C. programming. That hon. member referred to the hon. member for Kindersley, the hon. member for Rosthern, the hon. member for Acadia and the hon. member for Red Deer. He thought it was terrible that they should get up and complain about C.B.C. programs being immoral.

That hon. member apparently feels members of parliament should not stand here and voice their objections but should rubberstamp expenditures of $100 million or $150 million of taxpayers' money by the C.B.C., which seems to have the right to put on television anything it desires. I know we have a few members in this house who call themselves intellectuals and think that the common members of this house who represent the common people of this country have no right to speak on their behalf. I call these people eggheads rather than intellectuals. As long as I am in this house I intend to use my right to protect my constituents.

The hon. member for Burnaby-Richmond said he represents 120,000 people and had only heard from three of them about this matter. If I had only heard from three of my constituents I would be ashamed to admit that fact in this house. I only represent 45,000 people.

Miss LaMarsh: You don't count the cows.

Mr. Smallwood: This past summer when I was in that hon. member's constituency visiting some relatives I was asked what we were doing down here and why we did not do something about this situation. I asked them why they did not get in touch with their member and they replied "What's the use, he would not do anything for us". Yet that member has the nerve to stand up in this house and tell my colleagues they have no right to condemn these vulgar programs being shown across the country by the C.B.C.

The hon. member apparently was elected by the unions who paid his telephone bills, office expenses and stationery.

Mr. Prittie: Mr. Chairman, I rise on a question of privilege. I should like to correct the hon. member. I would not object if some union had paid part of my election expenses, but none did. None of them paid any money. We had to raise it all through collections and dances. The unions did not contribute one cent. If they want to offer some money next time, I might listen to them; but they did not the last time or the time before.

• (8:30 p.m.)

Mr. Smallwood: I did not want to raise the hon. member's ire, Mr. Chairman. I know he did not receive this support in the way of subscriptions, check-offs or anything else. I do not want to get into that subject. However, I do want to bring this matter to the attention of the committee. I believe that we in this house have the right and responsibility to see that acceptable programs are broadcast on television screens for the people of Canada.

In this connection I would refer to my good friend, the hon. member for Burnaby-Coquitlam, whom I respect highly and for whom I feel sorry now. This hon. member, the leader of the New Democratic party, former premier of Saskatchewan, was always in favour of censoring everything that was shown by the movies. But now he has become leader of that party we do not hear him speak on this subject because he has among his colleagues these eggheads, these intellectuals, who do not let him say a word. I am sure he does not like these vulgar things being shown on the television screen. As long as I am in the House of Commons representing my constituents—

Mr. Choquette: That will not be long.

Mr. Smallwood: I will be here longer than you, Prince Charles. As long as I am in this House of Commons, when my constituents complain to me about the vulgar programs being shown on the television screens across Canada, I will stand in my place in the house and complain, as is my God-given right.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Shall subclause (d) carry?

Mr. MacLean (Queens): Mr. Chairman, I have a few remarks to make on this subclause. I apologize to the committee for not realizing when I rose previously that we had stood subclause (d). I was saying at that time that the question of programming has exercised the minds of those in parliament for many years. There is a wide spectrum of opinion expressed with regard to this very contentious subject. At one end of the spectrum you have those who apparently hold the view that parliament should control C.B.C. television programming almost daily and pass opinion on every program as it appears. At the other end of the spectrum you have those who look upon broadcasting and those who engage in it as a group of sort of sacred cows. This group believes that parliament dare not express any opinion or offer any guide lines, in the interests of the Canadian people, to those responsible for broadcasting in this country.

I think that our responsibilities as elected members of parliament, representing all the Canadian people, is to put forward what we believe to be the interests of the Canadian people. We have a responsibility in this area, and in my mind there is no question about it. We have the responsibility to lay down guide lines and stake out conditions under which the Canadian people will be called upon to put up millions and millions of dollars every year in order to provide a national broadcasting service.

This may in some ways be a distasteful task, but it is one that we have to face. I commend the minister for her approach to this problem. If there is any doubt in one's mind as to what our responsibilities might be, I think they are well expressed in the Fowler commission report at page 5, in the introduction. There, we find these words:

> All broadcasting agencies—both public and private —are recipients of public support in the right to use scarce public assets. They must pay for these valuable rights by giving a responsible performance, and the state is fully entitled to ensure that the trust is honoured. To the extent that an adequate program performance is given voluntarily, the broadcaster can be left relatively free from detailed controls. If adequate performance is not given, it should be compelled by regulation or the franchise should be reassigned to others who will perform responsibly. Without question, the state has an absolute right to require from any broadcaster to whom the use of a radio frequency or television channel has been entrusted that he use it with imagination, distinction, and responsible regard for the public interest.

I could go on, Mr. Chairman, but I will not bore the committee by quoting further from the report. When hon. members speak of what is acceptable broadcasting to be received in the homes of Canadians by either radio or television, I would point out that there are some who immediately raise the cry of censorship and say that it conflicts with the principle of freedom of the press, freedom of speech and this sort of thing. I admit immediately that there is a vague resemblance, some similarity, between the problem with which we are trying to deal here and the principle of free speech. The two things are far from being identical, but they do have a similarity.

Their similarity is something like that which exists in the animal kingdom. The hyena has some similarity to the giraffe. They are both mammals, they each have four legs, and so forth. But the differences are perhaps greater than the similarities. I object, also, to the faulty reasoning put forward by those who raise the spectre of our impinging upon the right of free speech and come to the conclusion that because the giraffe is a tall animal, a high animal, he is really the hyena.

When we are discussing free speech I would point out that even with the free speech that is allowed at Hyde Park Corner in London, where there is free speech as we know it, there are certain limits beyond which one cannot go without running foul of the law of England. The right of free speech does not give people the right to slander or the right to abuse this privilege.

Quite often the freedom of broadcasting is compared with the freedom of the press. Here again, I do not think the comparison is on all fours. In the case of the press, which to begin with is a different medium, you may buy whatever newspaper you like and, having bought it, you can ignore whatever advertisements or articles you wish. There is a selection open to the individual with regard to the press. In addition, the press has to pay its own way, generally speaking.

Miss LaMarsh: Except for the Canadian Press.

Mr. MacLean (Queens): That is right; there are a few exceptions. But generally speaking, as far as newspapers are concerned they have to put out a product which is acceptable to their clientele, to the public generally, or they will not sell any newspapers. There are people in the far-out fringe who frequently start publishing little magazines which purvey a particular point of view or idea; but most of them do not last very long because they do not attract the support of enough people.

• (8:40 p.m.)

I believe the Canadian people should be given a certain measure of control over broadcasting, or at least some guide lines should be laid down, because we in parliament represent the Canadian people and we give to certain private individuals or to the publicly owned corporation the right to broadcast. We assign to them channels and thereby create a partial monopoly in this field. Opportunities in this respect are not unlimited, and therefore when there is a monopoly a certain measure of public control is called for, just as it is in public utilities.

When speaking previously I neglected to mention that there are certain restrictions on the freedom of the press. Freedom of the press does not mean a complete licence to publish everything, such as pornography or libel.

To carry control of broadcasting further, so far as the public service is concerned—and this also applies to the clause we are now discussing—it is not only our responsibility to ensure the proper use of the broadcasting system, which is limited because of the scarcity of channels, but also, in view of the fact that we are acting on behalf of the Canadian people, to ensure that the product we are buying for Canadians meets reasonable standards, so far as the C.B.C. is concerned. I think it is absurd to suggest that the Canadian government must ensure that the wharf material it buys meets careful and detailed specifications but that any kind of rot would do in the programs produced by the C.B.C. for the Canadian people.

Miss LaMarsh: Be careful with that word "rot".

Mr. Pugh: It goes with "management".

Mr. MacLean (Queens): Therefore, I think that the matter of programming is one to which we must give our very sincere attention.

I commend the minister and the government for making an attempt to draw up guide lines in this respect. This is a difficult job, no doubt. We should indicate somehow that broadcasters, just because they are broadcasters, are not above the law and that they have responsibilities to society; that it is not their prerogative to attack or to ridicule institutions which are part of the very fabric of our western way of life, to pollute our living rooms with all sorts of obscenities, or to glamorize for the consumption of young people the use of harmful drugs. The C.B.C. seems to have made an effort in this direction not so long ago. At one time they had the high priest of L.S.D. appearing on several programs, and, whether or not it was their intention, the effect was to glamorize the use of L.S.D. in the minds of the young people, if not of others.

It is some time since I was a member of the broadcasting committee. At that time television was just coming into use. Ever since people learned how to make fires, the hearth has been the centre of the family home. People sat around it and conversed among themselves. But with the advent of television many families in this nation have been sitting around the "idiot box" instead of around the hearth and have been spoken to by people who set themselves up as leaders of thought. It does not matter how far out their thinking may be or how absurd it may be, what they say is given an aura of authority by the very fact that it is broadcast on the national, government-owned network provided by the government of Canada, presumably for the benefit of Canadians. It is for that reason I think it is important to set down guide lines.

Some of my friends to the left of me ask me whom I am trying to protect. I am not trying to protect anyone. I would be perfectly happy if there were some purely haphazard way in which differing points of view could be put forward on the national broadcasting system; if subjects could be picked at random and if those who supported them could go on the air as well as those who opposed them. I think that if there is a balanced presentation of various points of view the Canadian people have sufficiently good judgment not to be carried away. However, what I object to is the apparent loss of control over this tremendously powerful medium and, either purposely or unintentionally, it seems to have fallen into the hands of a few people in the broadcasting industry who take it upon themselves to decide what is good for the Canadian people. Freedom of speech belongs to all citizens equally and is not the prerogative of the man with the microphone. However, the microphone gives him power to make his ideas known to millions and to drown out the ideas of those who do not agree with him because they are not given a chance to counter his views with their own opinions. Employees of the C.B.C. may hold any political ideas they like, but to propagate them on company time and at public expense over the public air waves is an injustice to their fellow citizens who do not have a great network over which to air their private ideas. It is almost as if an employee of the Royal Canadian Mint were given an opportunity to mint his own pocket money on the side. The whole idea is absurd. It is obvious that, as I have said already, we are purchasing a commodity at a cost of $150 million a year or more. The amount goes up so rapidly that I have lost track of it. It is important that we in parliament insist that the product we purchase is of reasonable quality. We should not attempt to censor any point of view but rather to guarantee that an objective presentation of the various points of view is made.

I should not like to leave the impression that I am anti-C.B.C. in all it does, because I am not. Let me say immediately that the C.B.C. has produced some excellent programs, such as, for example, "Country Calendar", "Fisherman's Log", some science programs, and even Don Messer's show, which is probably scorned by the producers of the C.B.C., or used to be at first. However, it has been listened to by more Canadians than any other program.

• (8:50 p.m.)

I think the C.B.C. does a magnificent job in many fields, but they spoil everything by their lax moral attitude, let alone their ethical attitude, as a result of which they purvey certain types of programs. Some people say: "Oh well, it is good for the Canadian people to be shocked; we have to shock them into reality". I do not go along with that opinion. I am not against shock treatment for those who are mentally ill, but I do not think that the general public needs it.

In an age when the great fight for survival is dependent on control over men's minds, it seems to me an anomaly that programs of the kind to which I have referred are broadcast. I am sure that control of men's minds is the real struggle today that is going to determine whether or not our civilization will survive.

Television broadcasting is a powerful weapon in such circumstances. Human beings have recently been described by an anthropologist in a book published on the subject as "hairless apes". His main theme is that we do not realize how much we are affected by emotions and how so little of what we do is determined rationally. Much of what we do is controlled by emotions, even though we kid ourselves into thinking that we are acting on a rational basis.

Miss LaMarsh: I thought that applied only to women.

Mr. MacLean (Queens): No, I think it applies to men too. This sort of situation is a golden opportunity for the manipulators of this powerful medium of communication. The advertisers know this and so do the public relations men. Almost any product could be sold by the carload if there were sufficient advertising on television.

The hon. member for Burin-Burgeo, who perhaps is more qualified on this subject than any other member in the house, pointed out in a very able speech on this question some months ago that we are still not really fully aware of the very great power that is inherent in television broadcasting in particular. We can be brain-washed, for example, without knowing it. We can also be influenced.

In the United Kingdom I believe there is a little society that contends that the world is flat. I am sure that if that little group were in Canada the C.B.C. would have them on one of their programs, which would probably be presented in this way. They would probably get a very fetching, bright looking young lady and a very photogenic young man who would speak on the side of the argument that the world was flat. They would then get some doddering old fellow, a Colonel Blimp type, who contended that the world was round.

In addition to this, Mr. Chairman, a sort of biography of this old fellow would be unfolded, and if they discovered that he had once almost belonged to the Klu Klux Klan, or something objectionable like that, this would be revealed so as to provide plenty of built-in prejudice right from the start. In this way, without any reliance at all upon logic, they would have a few simple people believing that the world was flat after all. They would say: "How behind the times these squares are who still think that the world is round. Why, that is an old idea; it is a thousand years old. Let's get with it".

It is this kind of nonsense, Mr. Chairman, to which I object. As I have said, in this day and age when the struggle for men's minds is of crucial importance it is a terrible anomaly that we set the highest possible standards for our medical doctors, for the preparation of drugs and for anything to do with the human body, yet allow any sort of trash to be administered to the human mind.

My humble submission, Mr. Chairman, is that if we are going to provide a broadcasting service which will be relayed into the living rooms of the nation, then it should at least be housebroken. In this regard I refer especially to the C.B.C. The private broadcasters generally do better because if their service is too controversial they will not get a sponsor, and they do not want that to happen. But the C.B.C. apparently could not care less whether or not they have a sponsor for programs which deal with some of these far out notions, because the long suffering taxpayers are going to pick up the chit. These programs are shoved down our throats whether we like them or not. We just pay the bill. We cannot question the C.B.C. because it is a sacred cow. There is a prevailing attitude that parliament dare not question the C.B.C.

My contention is that a discussion of this clause is valid and of importance for one reason, if for no other. It is important in that it gives members of parliament a vehicle to express the views of the people they represent. I hope that the new president of the C.B.C. will take it as one of his first responsibilities to read what the members of parliament, the representatives of the people, think about broadcasting as it has been carried on in Canada. I believe that this important service for Canadians should, as I say, at least be housebroken before being allowed into the living room of every Canadian.

Mr. Nasserden: Mr. Chairman, I should, first of all, like to congratulate the hon. member for Queens on the address he has just given this evening on the matter that is now before the House of Commons. I had some remarks to make prior to the Christmas recess, and I thought I had dealt with the problems raised by the electors in my constituency, and by other people across Canada, in a reasonable way without saying some of the things that could have been said in connection with the whole tenor of C.B.C. programming in this country over the past few years.

I would not have taken the trouble to speak again at this time had it not been for the fact that an assertion has again been made by one of those belonging to that party in this house which across the country has become the champion of easy divorce, of easy abortion and other degrading practices; the party that has become in the minds of the public the champion of those things that undermine what we have come to believe are the basic concepts of family life, of church and of government in Canada.

Mr. Prittie: Who do you mean—the Liberals?

Mr. Nasserden: I do not need to say who I mean, Mr. Chairman, when I make that statement. Everyone in the country knows that the members of the New Democratic party have led that crusade, if you can call it such.

• (9:00 p.m.)

An hon. Member: You are no credit.

Mr. Nasserden: I cannot help feeling that, since we are dealing with a medium of communication so powerful, subtle and all pervasive—

Mr. Howard: The hon. member is really nasty today. He must have practised his speech.

Mr. Nasserden: As I was saying, Canadians have not yet realized the full power of this medium of communication. We should be particularly careful, therefore, to let those who are charged with the responsibility for broadcasting policy and programming know some of the views of some people in this country. Look at what has happened in the past. A deliberate attempt to undermine family life, church, and government itself in this country seems to have been made. When the Prime Minister appears before the television cameras, those who operate the cameras place him in a most unfavourable position relative to the cameras. This has happened to the present Prime Minister and to the previous prime minister. Such an attitude should not be displayed by those who are employed in an organization which ought to be a unifying force in this country, an organization that should show our people something of which they can be proud.

We hear certain members of the N.D.P. giving encouragement for the televising of certain types of programs in this country. People in this country subscribe to more than one religion, and here I am referring to the Christian religion. Other religions exist in the world, and those who espouse them nearly always believe in a hereafter. Yet, look at the encouragement that is given to the broadcasting of those programs which undermine everything that builds a nation, which encourage our people to strive for a better way of life. One cannot help asking oneself whether a deliberate attempt has not been made to undermine our nation.

Members of the N.D.P. in this house, and others, support laws legalizing abortions; they supported laws for easier divorce. They support other laws that have a degrading effect—

An hon. Member: Shame on you.

Mr. Nasserden: Let those members devote their attention to solving the problems that have been caused by the increasing urbanization of our society, by the movement of our people from rural to urban centres. Let them help to ameliorate the terrible loneliness that afflicts some people; let them concentrate on means of uplifting the members of our society. Let them pursue those activities that will help our people. One of our troubles is that, because minority groups in this parliament can bring leverage to bear on important issues, the members of this parliament find it difficult to deal with many problems that beset the Canadian people.

An hon. Member: Garbage.

Mr. Nasserden: Radio and television have important roles in this country. The C.B.C. should be encouraged to broadcast programs that will help to weld this nation together, that will bring an appreciation of true values and enhance those values which have made human life better. The C.B.C. ought to do that instead of glamourizing, as the hon. member for Queens so aptly put it, those aspects of society that are dull, degrading and sap the moral integrity of a people. Because programs like those are shown elsewhere is no reason for them to be shown in Canada, and we should remember that. For these reasons, I think the government should have a little more control over the top brass of the C.B.C., and over broadcasting. I do not think any minister answering for the C.B.C. should ever again have to say in this house what the present minister said about that organization. No minister, as happened in the past, should have to reply to complaints brought forward by hon. members by saying, "We can do nothing about the matter."

Hon. members will recall what happened to Mr. Louis St. Laurent, the former prime minister, when he first sent a letter to the C.B.C. He was slapped down by that organization, along with other members of the house, because of the stand he took.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Nasserden: Why should a member of the House of Commons or a minister not write to the C.B.C. and say that something is lacking in its programs? Why should not the minister answering for the C.B.C. have power to put a little fear into the hearts of those who would try to use the corporation for subversive activities? When I see what has been done recently by way of attack on family life, the church, and government in this country by that same organization, I say that constitutes subversive activity which undermines the future of those generations to come for whom we hope so much.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

The Chairman: Is the committee ready for the question?

Mr. Flemming: Mr. Chairman, I had not intended to make any general observations about this bill but I feel I must say something about clause 2(d). Possibly, if we can persuade the minister, that clause can be changed or amended. That is why I am on my feet. I want to suggest some ideas that might usefully be incorporated in this clause.

I was much impressed by some of the speeches this evening. I was impressed by the speech of my hon. friend for Battle River-Camrose, who referred to the censoring of movies. The films that are shown in our moving picture theatres are subject to censoring by agencies of our provincial governments. We accept that. Yet, we are told—and this criticism is implicit in the remarks of certain hon. members—that the programs which are brought into our living rooms should not be subject to censorship; that those programs are above criticism, and they must not be criticized. I do not subscribe to any such doctrine.

Mr. Churchill: Hear, hear.

Mr. Flemming: I should like the minister to pay attention to me.

Miss LaMarsh: I always do.

Mr. Flemming: Thank you. The minister occupies a unique place in the hearts and minds of many of our citizens, and it is not because of her good looks entirely.

Miss LaMarsh: I must listen to this.

Mr. Flemming: It is because she had enough courage to say that there was rotten management in the C.B.C.

Some hon. Members: No, no.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Flemming: I have even heard suggestions that the minister should be the leader of the Liberal party, because of the stand she took on this important issue. Those suggestions did not come from Liberals.

Miss LaMarsh: That is the trouble.

• (9:10 p.m.)

Mr. Flemming: Well, there is always some chance of the redemption of sinners. Perhaps we shall even get to the Liberals after a while.

Let us consider the programs in which the C.B.C. gives the news to the people of this country. Surely, giving the news should be a factual process. Mr. Chairman, you know as well as I do that very often the news given to the people of Canada is commented on in almost the same breath as it is announced, and in my opinion the listening public very often feels that this commentary is part of the news. I think there should be a regulation providing that some time should elapse between the giving of the news and the presentation of commentaries on the news. This happens to be my personal opinion and I am not asking the minister to accept it without reservation. However, I do think it has some merit.

Let us get down to the subsection we are considering. Let us read it carefully. I have been talking about programming all the time, but I wish to refer particularly now to the language of the subclause because it seems to me that the language used there is incomplete. It does not say what should be said. In the words of the subclause before us—

—the programming provided by the Canadian broadcasting system should be varied and comprehensive and should provide reasonable opportunity for the expression of conflicting views on matters of public controversy—

I have not the slightest objection to the broadcasting media taking the stand that they should give publicity to the different angles from which a matter of public controversy can be regarded. I see nothing wrong with this as long as it is done in a fair way. But after the word "controversy" we read this:

—and the programming provided by each broadcaster should be of high standard—

This is where in my view the subclause is incomplete. It does not say, and I draw the attention of the minister to this, in whose judgment it must be of high standard.

Miss LaMarsh: The Board of Broadcast Governors.

Mr. Flemming: But the subclause does not say so.

Miss LaMarsh: Clause 15 does.

Mr. Flemming: I am talking about subclause (d) at the moment. I believe there should be something here that brings responsibility back to parliament. The minister says it is within the judgment of the B.B.G. But the B.B.G. does not represent the people of Canada. This parliament does.

I listened a few minutes ago to an eloquent speech by my hon. friend from Queens. He said things we all know to be true. We have all seen them. I have seen in the last two or three weeks the glamourization of things that are going to tear down the valuable standards which have been built up in this country of ours. There is no question about that. Why they should be emphasized is more than I shall ever be able to understand. Everyone within the sound of my voice knows this to be true.

I suggest it would be useful if words were incorporated in the clause to the effect that broadcasts should be of a high standard "in the judgment of the minister answering to parliament for the C.B.C" I believe parliament is entitled to deal with a minister who does have some degree of control over the corporation and who can exercise judgment with respect to what programs are of a high standard. Otherwise, all we get out of it is an argument; some people think certain programs are of a high standard and others think they are not. What I believe we can all agree on without the slightest argument is this: an element of decency should be insisted upon in the programs of the C.B.C. in this country.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

[Mr. Flemming.]

Mr. Flemming: It comes back to this: who is to be the judge? This is the question which may be asked, and I think it is a proper one. The subclause before us does not tell us. In consequence, the people in charge of C.B.C. will say: "Everything is perfectly all right." We have had examples of what they have to offer. We have, it is true, had other examples of productions which have been excellent. In my opinion, parliament should insist that the minister who answers to parliament for the C.B.C. should have the right to say when a program is not of a high standard. She or he, as the case might be, would not, then, have nearly as difficult a time, because the C.B.C. would be conscious of this control; it would know it could not get away with these programs, and see to it that the programs offered did not conflict with the ideas of decency held by people in this country.

Miss LaMarsh: I wonder whether the hon. gentleman would answer a question.

Mr. Flemming: I will try.

Miss LaMarsh: I know he is an old friend and a man of great reasonableness. Earlier I explained to one of the members of the committee that in England the postmaster general performs the function which the Board of Broadcast Governors has performed in Canada in the past. In this bill the Board of Broadcast Governors is directed by parliament to licence broadcasting stations. If the hon. gentleman's suggestion were followed and the Secretary of State or another minister were made responsible for passing judgment as to whether programs were of a high standard, the exercise of such judgment would inevitably be after the fact, as I am sure the hon. gentleman would agree. If the Secretary of State were responsible, either I would have to sit all day long watching programs after they had gone out over the air, or else I would have to watch all the programs in rehearsal before production. I do not think it is possible for a minister to do this. We must remember, we are not experts; we know nothing about this kind of thing, quite apart from the fact that my taste may not be the taste of a single other person in this house, or even in the country.

If I were responsible, parliament might find things in an even worse mess. It would still be largely a matter of taste, and the minister might well say of a particular program which had been criticized: "I thought it to be in good taste, myself." This is the difficulty. As to parliament exercising its judgment, I remember speaking with the former minister of justice on this subject and saying there should be some way in which parliament could make its feelings known.

• (9:20 p.m.)

Yet by its very nature parliament, as we know it, cannot do this and so has to operate through an executive or through a body. This job cannot be done through a member of the cabinet. It cannot even be done by a committee of the house. Every day this would be a job that would have to be done. The only way to do it is to set up a body, delegate authority to it and make it responsible. This is what all the individuals who looked at Canadian broadcasting have recommended. This is what was done in 1958 with the establishment of the B.B.G. I have great sympathy with what my hon. friend has suggested, but it could not conceivably work, even if the person concerned had the most perfect taste on earth.

Mr. Flemming: I am not suggesting that the hon. lady, or whoever might be the minister, act as a censor, but I think there should be a deterrent in this legislation. The C.B.C., which comes here year after year asking for millions of dollars, should be made to feel that there is someone to whom it is responsible, and that there is a medium through which it could be controlled to some extent.

It seems to me it would be most appropriate that a minister who answers to parliament for the C.B.C. should have some power or some authority so far as programs are concerned. Let us look at what would happen in practice. The minister's misgivings would not materialize. If the C.B.C. had any doubts about a program it would contact the minister before broadcasting it.

Mr. Orlikow: Poor minister.

Mr. Flemming: Mr. Chairman, I am not responsible for any of these interruptions. I have the floor at the moment. If someone wants to speak after I am finished he will have that right. In the meantime, I have the floor and I do not propose to yield it to anyone.

I would like to be able to persuade the minister that this would be a power that would be good from the point of view of the Canadian people in general. Probably it would not be good so far as C.B.C. management is concerned but I am not concerned about that. It makes no difference to me. I am concerned about the Canadian people. I am concerned, as pointed out by my hon. friend who preceded me, that we do not tear down the things which we consider are valuable, things which have been built up over a long period of time, and which some of us think are being subjected to a campaign of destruction.

I believe someone has to be the judge of a high standard of programs. The minister says this is the B.B.G. I do not think the members of the B.B.G. ever see a program until it is shown on television screens in their living rooms. How could they regulate programs? What could they do about them? I am one of those who believe in responsibility for people who are elected here by the Canadian electorate. I don't believe in delegation.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Flemming: This parliament is the body to which the C.B.C. should report. This it does through the minister, and I think someone should be appointed to judge the standards of programs. I would be perfectly willing that the present minister be that judge.

Miss LaMarsh: If this horrible responsibility were placed upon me, can my hon. friend suggest how I would be in a position to judge programs on private television?

Mr. Flemming: The point I was trying to make to the minister was that she would be appealed to only when there was a question of doubt. There would be no responsibility as long as there was no doubt about a program, whether private or public. Speaking of private programs I saw one which I watched by myself for three hours. It depicted a young minister in Scotland, Peter Marshall, growing up, coming to the United States, taking over a church, and becoming chaplain of the United States senate. It was a fascinating program. It was one of those programs that build you up and make you think what great things television can do. There are lots of programs like that. It would only be ones about which there was a degree of doubt that would be referred to the minister.

Miss LaMarsh: Whose doubt?

Mr. Flemming: Surely, there must be some doubts in the C.B.C. Somebody in the C.B.C. must have had some doubt about some of the rotten programs it has carried. I cannot believe that all the hundreds of men and ladies involved were in favour of those programs. Even in the C.B.C. I think there would be a large element of difference of opinion. So far as private television stations are concerned, surely the sponsors would take some responsibility for the type of program broadcast. I bring these things to the attention of the minister in the hope that consideration of them will lead to an improvement of this bill.

Mr. Bigg: Mr. Chairman, some months ago the minister, who is responsible for the C.B.C., made certain statements which many Canadians thought were long overdue. She has consistently refused to explain exactly what she meant by them, but she suggested very forcefully that there was something wrong within the C.B.C. To the surprise of many, I for one leapt to the hon. lady's defence because I thought here was a minister who had the courage to bare a very important matter in public.

• (9:30 p.m.)

Some of my colleagues are very keen to back up freedom of speech. I can understand that any suggestion of tight censorship is abhorent to most people in a democratic country. It is this very type of censorship of opinion which some of my own colleagues, quite honestly I believe, hope to protect, but I say it is in the direct danger because the C.B.C. has a monopoly. It certainly has a monopoly in the outlying areas of this country which I happen to represent. In some cases it is only the C.B.C. which reaches these people and the C.B.C. has a virtual monopoly on the expression of opinion. Because I have gone so far as to back the hon. lady, I think I must explain why I backed her when she said the C.B.C. was rotten. I do not think she meant that the head of the C.B.C., Mr. Ouimet, was rotten. I think she meant that he did not do the job the public was paying him to do. This is the very duty which the hon. lady shrinks from doing. She does not feel qualified to censor all programs or any one particular program. I think that is perhaps a little overstatement of the case. I do not believe that we must set down any specific rule of behaviour or decency in order to have decent programs.

I should like to go back to my own experience, because I believe this is the only thing about which one can speak with authority. I had a father and mother in charge of my home. We had no written code of what was decent or indecent, but when we talked to our sisters or to anyone in our house we knew what the standard of decent behaviour was. Perhaps in the case of the C.B.C. we do not have the inevitable correction which would come as a result of falling below the standards, but the people who produce these programs are knowledgeable people and know perfectly well what is right and what is wrong. They are taking advantage of the monopoly they have and are hiding behind even some of my own colleagues who may have overstated the case for what they call freedom. I could not agree more with the hon. member who just spoke when he said that if there were an implied standard which could be enforced in the slightest degree by a courageous minister, such as I thought the hon. lady was when she made her statement, these people would be very careful not to fall below that standard.

Many people fought with me when I supported the stand the hon. lady took. I do not think she has to back down from that stand. I am ready to quarrel with anybody who criticizes her for that and this includes those who sit in my own party, those who sit to our left, and those who occupy the seats behind the hon. lady in the government ranks. The standards of some of the programs produced by the C.B.C. I have no hesitation in saying, fall below accepted standards. They are a disgrace and should not be allowed on the Canadian air waves. This is particularly the case because, under some circumstances, we have no control over the programs which invade the parlour of our own home. It has been said that we can turn off the television set. We can do this if we are there, but with the complexities of life today we cannot always be there. Our children can turn on the set, and there is no monitor once a program comes on the air.

It has been said that we cannot do anything about this because the fat is in the fire. I think we can do something about it just on the basis of common sense. If these people put this type of program on the air, there must be an authority to inform them they will never do it again, and certainly not at the taxpayers' expense. If the hon. lady thinks that this job is too difficult for her, I suggest she should hand it over to somebody who has the normal courage of any free Canadian. At my age, I do not think seeing a filthy program will do me any particular harm. In my job as a policeman it was necessary for me on many occasions to delve into the lower side of human nature, yet I feel I have been able to maintain all my standards.

I do not believe this situation need be permanent, that we must face this with defeatism and say we cannot do anything about it. I believe here, in parliament, we can do everything about it. If these people knew that their jobs depended upon cleaning up their own programs they would do so. I think the common sense of Canadians would come to the fore and these people would police themselves just as I did when I was a child because I knew the wrath that would descend upon me if I fell below our family standards. The family standards of the people of this country are well known. Anyone who does not have this type of common sense is not fit to produce programs.

If the hon. lady does not feel she has the power which I believe she has, then that power must be vested in someone. If Mr. Davidson does not have it then we must ask ourselves whether his assistant has it or whether anybody between the hon. lady who represents us and the man who produces the program has that power. There must be some authority somewhere. I do not intend to lay down any type of code except the code of common sense. We must give someone the power to police these programs, whether it is done before they are put on or afterward.

This subject, tied in with the question of abortion and the other changes to the Criminal Code, has been the cause of many, many letters and complaints. This is the thing most people are worried about today. I just answered this evening two letters on this subject. I told these people that I will do all I can. All I can do at the present time is try to convince enough members that we must be sure to put in this bill the teeth which are necessary to police the air waves of Canada. We can only do this through this bill and under the authority of the minister. I do not believe she should be afraid that people will accuse her of abusing her authority because she and no one else at the present time has any authority over the C.B.C. If she is willing to give us the authority to bring common sense into the matter of protecting our young people from some of the things shown on the Canadian air waves, she can rely on my support.

• (9:40 p.m.)

[Translation]

Mr. Latulippe: Mr. Chairman, I merely wish to say a few words on the subamendment.

I followed closely the statements of several members and wish to congratulate the member for Prince (Mr. MacDonald) for having set forth his logical doctrine and point of view on the C.B.C.

Mr. Chairman, I do not accept, however, the point of view of the member for Burnaby-Richmond (Mr. Prittie) who spoke of centralization. In fact, he said that private stations should disappear and be replaced by C.B.C. stations.

Mr. Chairman, we need state-ruled stations, because the state renders great services, but so does private enterprise.

In my opinion, private enterprise, competing with the state, is in a position to maintain programs, contribute to the education of the people, render great services at a lower cost than the state. Indeed, everything managed by the state costs three times more, and then some, than what is managed by private enterprise. We know the sums now spent by the state to maintain the C.B.C. I think that if these sums were in the hands of private enterprise, it would render greater services than the state, because the operating costs would certainly be reduced by half, if not by two thirds.

That is why private enterprise must be maintained as much as possible. Private enterprise renders greater services than the state, not only from the standpoint of publicity but from several others that I could mention. The small manufacturers and businessmen cannot advertise on C.B.C. but they can advertise on private stations and there set out their views and convince the people to help them to develop and expand Canada's economy.

Mr. Chairman, I should like to say a few words about morals. In my opinion not enough people concerned with the programming or broadcasts of the C.B.C. care about morals. I would ask the hon. Secretary of State (Miss LaMarsh) to try to find moralists who will give C.B.C. programs a more moral, concrete, human and social character, and reform certain elements in our society. If we want a healthy society, the elements of which it is composed must likewise be healthy, and if they are corrupted by people such as some of the C.B.C. employees who say all sorts of things and have no morals at all, we will have a corrupt society.

That is where we must intervene. Several members referred to that matter and I wish to talk about it also. We should encourage morality, we should find a very deep ideology from a moral point of view to change the ethics of society, in short to rebuild society. We have made great strides in technology and other fields but, as far as morality is concerned, we have lost ground. It is absolutely necessary to improve moral standards.

In my opinion, it is the duty of the minister at the present time to ask the C.B.C. to improve the moral character of its programs and even to hire experts in ethics to show the people of Canada what is life, what is a human being.

Human beings must be respected and they can only be respected by morality, never otherwise. Morality is no longer anything at all; in fact it no longer exists. We must build it up. Unless we do, we will witness the most catastrophic abuses the world has ever known. It is absolutely essential that all Canadians put the shoulder to the wheel and do everything that must be done to raise the morality of their compatriots. We must do everything that is humanly possible to protect the morality of society. Morality, that is what we lack in our country; in fact, that is what we must watch and that is why I have made these few remarks on the present amendment.

Once again I would like all of us to put the shoulder to the wheel and help the minister to find the proper ideology to promote morality to the highest possible point within the C.B.C.

[English]

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Is the committee ready for the question on the subamendment proposed by the hon. member for Sainte-Marie?

Some hon. Members: Question.

Subamendment (Mr. Valade) negatived: Yeas, 34; nays, 52.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: I declare the subamendment lost. Is the committee ready for the question on the amendment of the hon. member for Red Deer?

Some hon. Members: Question.

Amendment (Mr. Thompson) negatived: Yeas, 35; nays, 51.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: I declare the amendment lost.

Shall the subclause carry?

• (9:50 p.m.)

Mr. Prittie: Mr. Chairman, there is another aspect of subclause (d) with which I wish to deal. Subclauses (a) to (f) of clause 2 deal with broadcasting in general, both public and private, and subclause (g) deals with the national broadcasting service, or the C.B.C., in particular. I want to refer to one part of subclause (g) but I am using it in these remarks in connection with subclause (d).

Subclause (g) (iv) requires that the national broadcasting service, the C.B.C., should contribute to the development of national unity and provide for a continuing expression of Canadian identity. This is a charge upon the public broadcasting service only. When the bill was given second reading on November 1 I expressed some doubts about the words in this subclause charging the public broadcasting service to contribute to the development of national unity. I did not do so because I am against national unity any more than anyone else, but the opportunity is there for witch-hunting and for picking out people in a broadcasting service who you feel are not doing what you want them to do. After listening to the speeches in the house on this subject, I have come to the conclusion that the opportunities for witch-hunting will certainly be there. But the government apparently wants this provision in the bill, and it occurred to me that if the concept of national unity is so important and broadcasters should contribute to it, it ought to be a requirement in respect of all broadcasters. It is a very vague term and is very difficult to define but if, as I say, the government wants it included in the bill it should be important enough to be a guide for all broadcasters.

There are in this country more private television and radio stations than there are C.B.C. stations. Therefore, it seems to me that if television and radio can be used to influence the way people think and act, the private broadcasters also have, of course, a very great deal of influence. If this charge to contribute to national unity is necessary, it should, I believe, be included in subclause (d), for two reasons; first of all, because it fits in better there in connection with the requirement to air views on matters of public controversy and to allow for dissent.

The second reason, which I have already mentioned, is that the private broadcasters have a very large audience. I thought of this matter the other day when there was an exchange between the hon. member for La- to the hon. member the minister had this to pointe and the minister. The hon. member for Lapointe was talking about the television station in Quebec city, CFCM-TV. In her reply say, as reported at page 5814 of Hansard for January 22:

I am further informed by Télévision de Québec that their editorial policy favours freedom as against communism, private enterprise as against socialism and Canadian unity as against separatism.

Presumably the operators of that station are in the same position as the owners of a newspaper; they can, entirely on their own, determine what is their editorial policy. Therefore, if they choose to promote a particular line of thought, that is their editorial right. But what would happen if that station should change hands? Let us suppose that the hon. member for Lapointe, on one of his trips to France, raised enough money to buy that station and had complete control of it. Then, presumably the editorial policy of the station could change in accordance with the views of the new owner. It could then decide that separatism should be the editorial policy of the station rather than Canadian unity. I do not imagine that the hon. member for Lapointe would advocate socialism rather than private enterprise, but he could do so if he wished, since he would be the owner of the station. He could do any of these things.

I have had some experience in this field and know that radio stations regularly editorialize. I do not complain about that; they are free to do this. If my hon. friend from Lapointe, or somebody else with his views, owned such a station, they could advocate disunity. We will not confine our examples to the province of Quebec entirely. There is another province of Canada which has a rather separatist-leaning government. I refer to the province from which I come. More than one cabinet member in that province has suggested that Canada should join the United States. Yes, I am speaking of British Columbia. If people with that point of view bought a radio station, they could editorialize and suggest that we no longer remain in confederation but join the United States. This obviously would not be promoting national unity.

Therefore, Mr. Chairman, I am suggesting that if broadcasters are to promote national unity, all broadcasters should do this, both public and private, and this particular phrase should be included in subclause (d). With that in mind, I move:

That clause 2 (d) of Bill C-163 be amended by placing a comma after the word "comprehensive" and adding immediately thereafter the words "should contribute to Canadian unity",

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order, please. It being ten o'clock, it is my duty to rise, report progress and request leave to sit again at the next sitting of the house.

Progress reported.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

A motion to adjourn the house under provisional standing order 39A deemed to have been moved.

• (10:00 p.m.)

HEALTH AND WELFARE—PROTEST RESPECTING LACK OF WELFARE STATISTICS

Mr. S. J. Enns (Portage-Neepawa): Mr. Speaker, I speak tonight following a question asked on December 14 in which I requested the Department of National Health and Welfare to strengthen its staff for the collection of D.B.S. statistics and to provide additional resources so that the staff could be increased for the collation of statistics. The question on December 14 was prompted by a reply to a written question on December 13 which appears at page 5363 of Hansard. In the answer, we learn that in the health and welfare division of D.B.S. there are some 105 persons involved in collecting statistics relating to health, some 31 persons occupied in collecting statistics relating to education, but no persons directly involved with statistics concerning welfare. When we keep in mind that the Department of National Health and Welfare is second in spending only to the department of defence, it seems surprising to me that there is no statistical documentation of the different trends toward which this high spending department is going so far as welfare programs are concerned.

Fabulous sums of money are being spent on a variety of welfare programs, yet adequate statistics are not being kept to determine the cost benefit to the Canadian people. Welfare budgets have doubled and re-doubled and will likely continue to increase, and it is certainly difficult to make any projections without an adequate statistical base. I would have thought that the implementation of the Canada Assistance Plan would have required the collection of national welfare items of similarity, but the dilemma still facing those of us interested in finding similar information relating to welfare in the different provinces is that there is a great variety of methodology in the collecting of statistics. For example, the province of Ontario has quite a sophisticated system of statistical analysis, and yet areas like the Atlantic regions and other provinces do not nearly approach this way of collecting statistics. Therefore, it is not easy to discover how many married people in Canada are, for example, living separately.

As we deal in our present legislative program with what the Prime Minister called "good society" measures, such as those on divorce, birth control, abortion and so forth, some of these statistics would have been very useful. We do not really know how many people there are in the country who have sig-significant family problems. We can go from agency to agency and from province to province but we do not have an overall national picture. If I wanted, I could inquire of D.B.S. and get fairly accurate information concerning the number of ponies on Sable island or the total horse population in Canada, but we cannot find out how many children are living in foster homes or are placed in adoption each year. To me this seems to indicate a desperate lack in the collection of very vital information.

In the area of child care, I have mentioned already the problem of obtaining accurate statistics with regard to children living and growing up away from their natural parents, either in foster homes or in child care institutions. We should be able to ascertain those things by requesting our most capable organization, the D.B.S., to collate the information. It could do this. First of all, it could give us the information and second, this would force provincial governments to set up a uniform base for the collection of statistics.

I am not one who wishes to collect information simply to pile up figures. This should only be done for a purpose. We are now quite conscious of the need for research, for example. I am afraid that very often we are stymied in our research in the welfare field owing to the lack of statistics. Generally, we find ourselves taking 10 per cent of United States figures, the United States usually documenting its research quite well, and we adopt this figure as being fairly close to the situation in Canada. However, I suggest that is not an adequate foundation upon which to conduct proper research.

My direct question, Mr. Speaker, is simply this: Will the department strengthen its staff for the collection of welfare and related statistics and allocate additional resources and staff to the Dominion Bureau of Statistics?

Mr. J. A. Byrne (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, in replying for the minister of health and welfare I want first to ask whether the hon. member for Portage-Neepawa (Mr. Enns) is conversant, and I believe he is, with the fact that the Dominion Bureau of Statistics is an adjunct of the Department of Trade and Commerce, not of the Department of National Health and Welfare.

Mr. Enns: If that was a wrong reference, I apologize.

Mr. Byrne: I think the hon. member has put his finger on the difficulties that arise here. One needs only to look at the headline in the Toronto Globe and Mail today, which stated the position the government of Ontario is taking on the question of medicare, to realize that the question of jurisdiction is also of significance in this matter.

The question of the adequacy of welfare statistics is a long and complicated one. The hon. member is quite right in his assumption that the situation is less than ideal. In general, the statistics concerning welfare programs wholly administered by the federal government are at a reasonably acceptable level. This department has been able to respond reasonably well to requests for statistics relating to the social welfare programs wholly administered by it.

The problem is much more complicated when the provinces are involved and where statistics reveal varying levels of adequacy of provincial programs. In the last two or three years this department has convened two federal-provincial conferences on statistics, concerned mainly with the field of public assistance. Substantial progress was made at these conferences, and the minister is hopeful that under the Canada Assistance Plan it will be possible to secure statistics covering much wider range of welfare matters than was formerly possible. It will be some time, however, before adequate statistics are available, partly because of the lack of research staff and statisticians in provincial welfare departments and partly because a number of the departments are in the process of converting to the use of computers.

The hon. member has made a remarkable contribution this evening, and I am sure that the Department of National Health and Welfare will be pleased to take the matter under consideration.

INDUSTRY—BRITISH COLUMBIA—DEVELOPMENT OF SECONDARY MANUFACTURING CAPABILITY

Mr. Frank Howard (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, the other day I asked the Minister of Industry (Mr. Drury) what plans his department had for the promotion and development of secondary and manufacturing industry in British Columbia, which is now in the position of having something over 6 per cent of the labour force out of work, the second highest group in Canada.

The minister replied that to recite the steps that are being taken would take too long during the question period but that he would be glad to advise me directly about this matter. I was not sure what he meant by "directly" and I have been expecting a long, detailed letter from him; but this letter has not yet arrived. If the minister wants to deal with the matter in this way and the three minutes that remain for him this evening are not sufficient, then I will look forward to receiving his letter. Apart from the fact that his answer was in a gentle way political and also somewhat arrogant, none the less his department was established partly for the purpose of promoting industrial development in Canada.

• (10:10 p.m.)

We in British Columbia, and particularly in the northwestern area of Skeena which encompasses nearly all the northwestern section of British Columbia, enjoy an economy that is primarily based on the extraction of natural resources. Most of our industry is of the extractive type and much of the natural wealth which we obtain from our land is shipped out of the area, often out of the country, to be used in secondary or manufacturing industries elsewhere.

We have a fair amount of mineral wealth, timber and power in the form of coal and hydroelectric power. We have much potential power. The opportunities for secondary and manufacturing industry in the area are tremendous.

It is well known that human labour adds to the value of any material to which it is applied. The raw ore which comes out of the ground is not as valuable as the ore which has gone through a concentrating process. Raw concentrate is not as valuable as concentrate which has gone through a smelter and been turned into ingots. At every stage of manufacturing process value is added to raw material. We wish to promote secondary and manufacturing industries in our area which will take advantage of our raw materials and natural resources.

There is ample opportunity for the development of a smelter system in the area. At the moment, largely as a result of this government's insistence and its declarations of policy, we export the mineral resources of our area out of our nation to another country and contribute to the increasingly high standard of living of that other country. I shall mention no names because it may be thought that I object to another country's increasing standard of living, an increasing standard made possible by the raw materials we export to it. I do object to our government permitting that state of affairs.

We could easily establish a secondary aluminum industry in the area; we already have an aluminum smelter. No facilities for transforming aluminum ingots into sheets, tubes, pipes or other manufactured forms of aluminum exist. Ample opportunities for such industries to operate successfully exist in the area.

Similar remarks apply to the forest industry. Many examples of the sort of thing I mentioned could be enumerated. Because the Department of Industry was set up to promote industrial development in areas in Canada which could use that sort of development, and because parliament accepted the proposition that a Department of Industry ought to be set up, I submit that something concrete and worth while along the lines I have suggested ought to be undertaken.

Though the minister, under the rules, has only a few moments to reply, I hope that he can explain what he has done, what is taking place and what plans exist, so that the people in northwestern British Columbia whose employment opportunities fluctuate according to the weather and other factors can look forward with some hope to the time when something such as I have described, some smelting industry or some manufacturing industry based on lumber or aluminum, can be made a reality. It is necessary for our people to have some hope, and I should appreciate some guidance from the minister.

Hon. C. M. Drury (Minister of Industry): Mr. Speaker, the hon. gentleman asked me a general question the day before yesterday and I am afraid that three minutes will not suffice to outline the background of the operation of the department as that operation affects British Columbia.

I would point out, however, that the purpose of the Department of Industry as outlined in the act passed by parliament is to foster and promote the growth of an efficient manufacturing industry in Canada and not in any particular part of Canada. Insofar as the hon. gentleman feels that the department should interest itself especially in a particular region of the country, I would say that it is the task of the department to establish the kind of climate within Canada as a whole in which secondary manufacturing can flourish in an increasingly efficient way. To this end we have a number of programs which have been discussed and approved by parliament. I would mention specifically the program for the advancement of industrial technology designed to increase productivity and economy in manufacturing in all of Canada. The act providing incentives to increased research and development is of a similar character and is nationwide.

With respect to British Columbia specifically, there is a program devoted directly to the relief of areas of chronic unemployment. This is known as the designated areas program and those areas of British Columbia which suffer from high chronic unemployment have been designated under this plan. In the south central part of the province where this program has been in operation it has proved reasonably successful. There has been a total of some 53 projects involving new capital investment of some $50 million in secondary, manufacturing or processing industries. This has resulted in the creation of some 1,755 new jobs.

This is the one overall program which is directed specifically to a particular area as distinct from Canada as a whole. I would point out that we have been conducting a series of seminars among entrepreneurs and manufacturers across the country looking toward an improvement in efficiency and the enlargement of manufacturing industry. I myself attended a most successful recent one in Vancouver.

Mr. Speaker: Order. I have to interrupt the hon. minister since his time has expired.

Motion agreed to and the house adjourned at 10.20 p.m.

APPENDIX

CORRESPONDENCE RESPECTING DOMINION-PROVINCIAL CONFERENCE

CONFIDENTIAL

[English]

Ottawa, January 16, 1968.

My dear Premier:

Further to recent consultations regarding arrangements for the forthcoming federal-provincial conference on constitutional matters, I should now like to forward for your attention the proposed agenda for our meeting which takes into account comments received from provinces: item 4 has been included specifically at the request of Premier Smith of Nova Scotia in response to my invitation for suggestions as to the agenda.

I should also like to take this opportunity to confirm that the conference will begin on Monday, February 5th and continue through February 7th.

You will recall that I raised with you in earlier correspondence the question of whether or not some of the sessions should be made public. It would seem generally acceptable that at least part of the conference should be open to the news media and I therefore propose that we agree to make public the opening sessions on the first day when the various governments normally present their initial statements. Similar consideration could also perhaps be given to the closing session so that there may be the widest possible public knowledge of the conclusions reached at the conference. A decision regarding the remaining proceedings could best be taken, in my view, in the course of our deliberations.

In accordance with past practice, details of the administrative arrangements will be forwarded to you within a few days.

Yours sincerely,

Original signed
by
L. B. Pearson

The Honourable Louis J. Robichaud, Q.C.,
Premier of New Brunswick,
Fredericton, New Brunswick.

PROPOSED AGENDA

1. Opening statements
2. Rights of Canadians

a) recommendations of the Royal Commission on Bilingualism and Biculturalism

b) a constitutional Bill of Rights

3. Further constitutional review
4. Questions of regional disparity
5. Other matters

[Translation]

Similar letter sent to all provincial Premiers in English and to the Premiers of Quebec and New Brunswick in French

CONFIDENTIAL

January 16, 1968.
Ottawa,

My dear Premier:

Further to recent consultations regarding arrangements for the forthcoming federal-provincial conference on constitutional matters, I should now like to forward for your attention the proposed agenda for our meeting which takes into account comments received from provinces: item 4 has been included specifically at the request of Premier Smith of Nova Scotia in response to my invitation for suggestions as to the agenda.

I should also like to take this opportunity to confirm that the conference will begin on Monday, February 5th and continue through February 7th.

You will recall that I raised with you in earlier correspondence the question of whether or not some of the sessions should be made public. It would seem generally acceptable that at least part of the conference should be open to the news media and I therefore propose that we agree to make public the opening sessions on the first day when the various governments normally present their initial statements. Similar consideration could also perhaps be given to the closing session so that there may be the widest possible public knowledge of the conclusions reached at the conference. A decision regarding the remaining proceedings could best be taken, in my view, in the course of our deliberations.

In accordance with past practice, details of the administrative arrangements will be forwarded to you within a few days.

Yours sincerely,
Original signed
by
L. B. Pearson

The Honourable Louis J. Robichaud, Q.C.,
Premier of New Brunswick,
Fredericton, New Brunswick.

PROPOSED AGENDA

1. Opening statements
2. Rights of Canadians
   (a) recommendations of the Royal Commission on Bilingualism and Biculturalism
   (b) a constitutional Bill of Rights
3. Further constitutional review
4. Questions of regional disparity
5. Other matters

[English]

OTTAWA, JANUARY 5, 1968

FURTHER TO MR. STONER'S TELEGRAM OF LAST DECEMBER 29, AND SUBSEQUENT TELEPHONE CONVERSATIONS WITH SOME PROVINCES THE PRIME MINISTER HAS REQUESTED ME TO CONFIRM WITH YOUR OFFICE THAT FORTHCOMING FEDERAL-PROVINCIAL CONFERENCE WILL MEET AS ORIGINALLY PROPOSED ON FEBRUARY 5,6,7. SEVERAL PROVINCES INDICATED THAT CHANGE OF DATE TO FEBRUARY 12 WOULD BE MOST INCONVENIENT. IT IS STILL THE GOVERNMENT'S INTENTION TO CARRY OUT PRELIMINARY CONSULTATIONS WITH ALL PROVINCES AS INDICATED IN PRIME MINISTER'S LETTER OF DECEMBER 28.

JEAN BEETZ
SECRETARY TO THE CONFERENCE

This telegram was sent to the Office of the Premiers of all provinces except Quebec.

[Translation]

OTTAWA, JANUARY 5, 1968

FURTHER TO MR. STONER'S TELEGRAM OF LAST DECEMBER 29, AND SUBSEQUENT TELEPHONE CONVERSATIONS WITH SOME PROVINCES THE PRIME MINISTER HAS REQUESTED ME TO CONFIRM WITH YOUR OFFICE THAT FORTHCOMING FEDERAL-PROVINCIAL CONFERENCE WILL MEET AS ORIGINALLY PROPOSED ON FEBRUARY 5, 6, 7. SEVERAL PROVINCES INDICATED THAT CHANGE OF DATE TO FEBRUARY 12 WOULD BE MOST INCONVENIENT. IT IS STILL THE GOVERNMENT'S INTENTION TO CARRY OUT PRELIMINARY CONSULTATIONS WITH ALL PROVINCES AS INDICATED IN PRIME MINISTER'S LETTER OF DECEMBER 28.

JEAN BEETZ
SECRETARY TO THE CONFERENCE

1968 JAN 2

[English]

MR. O. G. STONER
ACTING SECRETARY OF CABINET
OTTAWA ONT

GOVERNMENT OF NEWFOUNDLAND AND LABRADOR ARE QUITE AGREEABLE TO POSTPONEMENT OF DATE AS SUGGESTED IN YOUR TELEGRAM

EDWARD ROBERTS

TELEGRAM RECEIVED FROM PRIME MINISTER'S SWITCHBOARD 4.30 PM 29 DECEMBER. MESSAGE RELAYED TO MR. STONER BY MR. CROWE.

DEAR SIR

SUGGESTED PROGRAMME OF BILL OF RIGHTS PASSAGE FOR FEBRUARY 12 CAN BE ACCOMMODATED BY PEI BUT WITH MUCH GREATER DIFFICULTY THAN THE FIFTH AS SCHEDULED.

ALEX B. CAMPBELL

MOA188 MO
HXAO84HXA084 44
GG.
FD HALIFAX NS 4 1142A AST
O G STONER, ACTING SECRETARY TO CABINET

PARLIAMENT BLDG OTTAWA ONT

RETEL REGRET FEBRUARY TWELVE IS NOT A CONVENIENT DATE. HAVE MADE PLANS FOR MY ACTIVITIES BASED ON CONFERENCE DATE OF FEBRUARY FIFTH AND IT WOULD NOT BE EASY TO CHANGE. HOWEVER IF FEBRUARY TWELVE SUITABLE TO MAJORITY I WILL TRY TO REARRANGE MY PLANS.

G I SMITH PREMIER OF NS
(46).

MOA379
MOMO GA177GGA177 (MNB219 FN100) 51/47 2 EXTRA
GG.
FREDERICTION NB 29 354P AST
O G STONER, ACTING SECRETARY TO CABINET

HOUSE OF COMMONS OTTAWA ONT

PREMIER ROBICHAUD IS AGREEABLE TO PRIME MINISTERS REQUEST TO POSTPONE OPENING DATE OF FORTHCOMING FEDERAL PROVINCIAL CONFERENCE FROM FEBRUARY FIFTH TO FEBRUARY 12, 1968 WE WELCOME THE INFORMATION THAT CONSULTATIONS WILL TAKE PLACE CONCERNING MATTERS TO BE PLACED ON THE AGENDA OF THE CONFERENCE

C H FORSYTHE EXECUTIVE ASSISTANT TO THE PREMIER FREDERICTON NB.

MOA168 MO
DAO57 35/31 FD EDMONTON ALTA 2 955A MST
O G STONER

ACTING SECRETARY TO CABINET CARE PRIME MINISTERS OFFICE OTTAWA ONT REURTEL DECEMBER 29 POSTPONEMENT OF CONFERENCE TO FEBRUARY 12 WOULD BE MOST UNSATISFACTORY TO ALBERTA DUE TO LEGISLATURE CONVENING FEBRUARY 15 AND PROCESSIONAL CAUCUS WITH MEMBERS ALREADY ARRANGED FOR FEBRUARY 14

E C MANNING PREMIER OF ALBERTA
(12).

MOA583 VA281 V

LLA225 81 TLXV VICTORIA BC 3 140P PST
MR O G STONER, ACTING SECRETARY OF CABINET HOUSE OF COMMONS
OTTAWA ONT

REURTEL DECEMBER TWENTY NINE HAVE BEEN IN TOUCH WITH OUR PREMIER BY TELEPHONE AND HE HAS ASKED ME TO SAY THAT THE PROPOSED CHANGE OF CONFERENCE DATE FROM FEBRUARY FIFTH TO TWELFTH MAKES IT VERY DIFFICULT FOR BRITISH COLUMBIA. THE PREMIER AS MINISTER OF FINANCE BRINGS HIS BUDGET DOWN ON FEBRUARY NINTH AND THE LEADER OF THE OPPOSITION WILL SPEAK ON THE BUDGET ON FEBRUARY TWELFTH. BRITISH COLLUMBIA WOULD VERY MUCH HOPE TO KEEP TO THE ORIGINAL DATE BECAUSE OF THESE REASONS

MRS K R MYLREA SECRETARY TO PREMIER (46).

This telegram was sent to the Office of the Premiers of all provinces except Quebec.

[Translation]

OTTAWA

December 29, 1967.

PRIOR TO DEPARTING OTTAWA FOR SEVERAL DAYS THE PRIME MINISTER REQUESTED ME TO CONTACT YOUR OFFICE TO DETERMINE POSSIBILITY OF POSTPONING THE OPENING DATE OF FORTHCOMING FEDERAL-PROVINCIAL CONFERENCE FROM FEBRUARY 5 TO FEBRUARY 12, 1968. IF GENERALLY CONVENIENT THIS WILL PERMIT AMONG OTHER THINGS MORE TIME FOR PRIOR CONSULTATION WITH THE PROVINCES ON MATTERS TO BE DISCUSSED AT THIS CONFERENCE AS IS BEING PROPOSED IN A LETTER TO YOU FROM THE PRIME MINISTER SENT YESTERDAY. WOULD APPRECIATE YOUR OFFICE LETTING ME KNOW AT EARLIEST OPPORTUNITY WHETHER NEW SUGGESTED DATE IS SUITABLE TO YOU.

O. G. STONER

ACTING SECRETARY TO CABINET.

Government of Newfoundland and Labrador
THE PREMIER
St. John's

2 January, 1968

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson, P.C.,
Prime Minister of Canada,
Ottawa.
My dear Prime Minister:

Thank you so much for your letter about the Constitutional Conference, which I acknowledge in the Premier's absence.

My Colleagues and I would be delighted to have one or two of your representatives come to St. John's for a preliminary exchange of views on the Conference. I would hope that they could meet with the Premier, and also I think they should get in touch with my Colleague the Minister of Justice, the Hon. T. A. Hickman, and with the Premier's Parliamentary Assistant, Edward Roberts.

Sincerely yours,
L. R. Curtis,
Acting Premier.

December 28, 1967

My dear Premier:

Our preparations for the Constitutional Conference of early February are now in progress and I hope to be in a position to send you some background papers in the near future.

I believe that it would be very worthwhile if one or two of my representatives were to meet with you in your Capital during the month of January for a preliminary exchange of views, and to note any suggestions you may wish to offer concerning the matters on the agenda of the conference, or its procedure. In addition to other talks they may have with your officials, and other Ministers if you so wish, I think it would be very helpful if they could also meet with you personally.

I would suggest the date of February 1 for such a meeting, if this is convenient to you.

Yours sincerely,
Original signed
by
L. B. Pearson

The Honourable J. R. Smallwood,
Premier of Newfoundland,
St. John's, Newfoundland.

CHARLOTTETOWN PEI JAN 5/67
RT HON LESTER B PEARSON
PRIME MINISTER OF CANADA
OTTAWA

RE YOUR LETTER DECEMBER TWENTY EIGHTS XXX EIGHTH—CONSTITUTIONAL CONFERENCE. I HAVE RECENTLY ARRANGED WITH DR MARK MCGUIGAN A MEETING OF PROVINCIAL OFFICIALS TO CONSIDER ASPECTS OF THE CONFERENCE IN CHARLOTTETOWN ON THURSDAY JANUARY ELEVENTH

SHOULD IT NOT BE POSSIBLE FOR YOUR OFFICIALS TO MEET WITH US ON THAT DAY, PERHAPS A TELEPHONE CONVXXX CONFERENCE CAN BE ARRANGED FOR THE SAME DAY. ASSUMING YOUR OFFICIALS ARE UNABLE TO BE HERE ON THE ELEVENTH I WOULD SUGGEST THAT WE CALL YOUR OFFICIALS AT THREE PM AST. YOU MIGHT PROVIDE NAME AND TELEPHONE NUMBER

SINCERELY
ALEXANDER B CAMPBELL
PREMIER PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND

December 28, 1967

My dear Premier:

Our preparations for the Constitutional Conference of early February are now in progress and I hope to be in a position to send you some background papers in the near future.

I believe that it would be very worthwhile if one or two of my representatives were to meet with you in your Capital during the month of January for a preliminary exchange of views, and to note any suggestions you may wish to offer concerning the matters on the agenda of the conference, or its procedure. In addition to other talks they may have with your officials, and other Ministers if you so wish, I think it would be very helpful if they could also meet with you personally.

I would suggest the date of January 31 for such a meeting, if this is convenient to you.

Yours sincerely,
Original signed
by
L. B. Pearson

The Honourable Alexander Campbell,
Premier of Prince Edward Island,
Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island.

NOVA SCOTIA
THE PREMIER HALIFAX

January 4, 1968

Rt. Hon. Lester B. Pearson
Prime Minister of Canada
Ottawa, Canada
Dear Mr. Prime Minister:

This will acknowledge your letter of December 28th indicating that some of your representatives were to meet some of our officials, with other Ministers and with me, on January 30th with reference to the Constitutional Conference of early February. I am sure your representatives will be welcome on that date. Perhaps they would not mind arranging directly with Mr. Innis G. MacLeod, Deputy Minister, Executive Council, the times to meet the various officials, Ministers, and me.

Sincerely yours,
G. I. Smith

December 28, 1967.

My Dear Premier:

Our preparations for the Constitutional Conference of early February are now in progress and I hope to be in a position to send you some background papers in the near future.

I believe that it would be very worthwhile if one or two of my representatives were to meet with you in your Capital during the month of January for a preliminary exchange of views, and to note any suggestions you may wish to offer concerning the matters on the agenda of the conference, or its procedure. In addition to other talks they may have with your officials, and other Ministers if you so wish, I think it would be very helpful if they could also meet with you personally.

I would suggest the date of January 30 for such a meeting, if this is convenient to you.

Yours sincerely,

Original signed
by
L. B. Pearson

The Honourable G. I. Smith,
Premier of Nova Scotia,
Halifax, Nova Scotia.

[Translation]

December 28, 1967.

My dear Premier:

Our preparations for the Constitutional Constitutional Conference of early February are now in progress and I hope to be in a position to send you some background papers in the near future.

I believe that it would be very worthwhile if one or two of my representatives were to meet with you in your Capital during the month of January for a preliminary exchange of views, and to note any suggestions you may wish to offer concerning the matters on the agenda of the conference, or its procedure. In addition to other talks they may have with your officials, and other Ministers if you so wish, I think it would be very helpful if they could also meet with you personally.

I would suggest the date of January 29 for such a meeting, if this is convenient to you.

Yours sincerely,
(Signed) L. B. Pearson

The Honourable Louis J. Robichaud,
Premier of New Brunswick,
Legislative Buildings,
Fredericton, N.B.

[Translation]

December 28, 1967.

My dear Premier:

Our preparations for the Constitutional Conference of early February are now in progress and I hope to be in a position to send you some background papers in the near future.

I believe that it would be very worthwhile if one or two of my representatives were to meet with you in your Capital during the month of January for a preliminary exchange of views, and to note any suggestions you may wish to offer concerning the matters on the agenda of the conference, or its procedure. In addition to other talks they may have with your officials, and other Ministers if you so wish, I think it would be very helpful if they could also meet with you personally.

I would suggest the dates of January 24, 25 and 26 for such a meeting, if this is convenient to you.

Yours sincerely,
(Signed) L. B. Pearson

The Honourable Daniel Johnson,
Premier of Quebec,
Government House,
Quebec, Que.

[English]

December 28, 1967.

My dear Prime Minister:

Our preparations for the Constitutional Conference of early February are now in progress and I hope to be in a position to send you some background papers in the near future.

I believe that it would be very worthwhile if one or two of my representatives were to meet with you in your Capital during the month of January for a preliminary exchange of views, and to note any suggestions you may wish to offer concerning the matters on the agenda of the conference, or its procedure. In addition to other talks they may have with your officials, and other Ministers if you so wish, I think it would be very helpful if they could also meet with you personally.

I would suggest the dates of January 24, 25 and 26, for such a meeting, if this is convenient to you.

Yours sincerely,

Original signed

by

L. B. Pearson

The Honourable John P. Robarts, Q.C.,
Prime Minister of Ontario,
Toronto, Ontario.

Manitoba

OFFICE OF THE PREMIER

Winnipeg

January 4, 1968.

My dear Prime Minister:

I have your letter dated December 28th and the telegram of the following day from the Cabinet Office in regard to preparations for the constitutional conference whose opening I now note is suggested take place on February 12th.

The week beginning February 12th will be convenient to my colleagues and to me, and we shall look forward to receiving further details of the conference in due course.

So far as the visit to Winnipeg of one of your colleagues is concerned, I would say that January 23rd, the date mentioned in your letter of December 28th, would be convenient, but that January 20th, which was suggested this week by the Privy Council Office, would not be so since I have an engagement in the country to open a bonspiel on that Saturday.

Yours sincerely,

Walter Weir.

The Rt. Honourable Lester B. Pearson, P.C., M.P.,
Prime Minister of Canada,
East Block,
Ottawa 4, Ontario.

December 28, 1967.

My dear Premier:

Our preparations for the Constitutional Conference of early February are now in progress and I hope to be in a position to send you some background papers in the near future.

I believe that it would be very worthwhile if one or two of my representatives were to meet with you in your Capital during the month of January for a preliminary exchange of views, and to note any suggestions you may wish to offer concerning the matters on the agenda of the conference, or its procedure. In addition to other talks they may have with your officials, and other Ministers if you so wish, I think it would be very helpful if they could also meet with you personally.

I would suggest the date of Januar 23 for such a meeting, if this is convenient to you.

Yours sincerely,

Original signed

by

L. B. Pearson

The Honourable W. Weir,
Premier of Manitoba,
Winnipeg, Manitoba.

December 28, 1967.

My dear Premier:

Our preparations for the Constitutional Conference of early February are now in progress and I hope to be in a position to send you some background papers in the near future.

I believe that it would be very worthwhile if one or two of my representatives were to meet with you in your Capital during the month of January for a preliminary exchange of views, and to note any suggestions you may wish to offer concerning the matters on the agenda of the conference, or its procedure. In addition to other talks they may have with your officials, and other Ministers if you so wish, I think it would be very helpful if they could also meet with you personally.

I would suggest the date of January 22 for such a meeting, if this is convenient to you.

Yours sincerely,

Original signed
by
L. B. Pearson

The Honourable W. Ross Thatcher,
Premier of Saskatchewan,
Regina, Saskatchewan.

December 28, 1967.

My dear Premier:

Our preparations for the Constitutional Conference of early February are now in progress and I hope to be in a position to send you some background papers in the near future.

I believe that it would be very worthwhile if one or two of my representatives were to meet with you in your Capital during the month of January for a preliminary exchange of views, and to note any suggestions you may wish to offer concerning the matters on the agenda of the conference, or its procedure. In addition to other talks they may have with your officials, and other Ministers if you so wish, I think it would be very helpful if they could also meet with you personally.

I would suggest the date of January 18 for such a meeting, if this is convenient to you.

Yours sincerely,

Original signed
by
L. B. Pearson

The Honourable E. C. Manning,
Premier of Alberta,
Edmonton, Alberta.

December 28, 1967.

My dear Premier:

Our preparations for the Constitutional Conference of early February are now in progress and I hope to be in a position to send you some background papers in the near future.

I believe that it would be very worthwhile if one or two of my representatives were to meet with you in your Capital during the month of January for a preliminary exchange of views, and to note any suggestions you may wish to offer concerning the matters on the agenda of the conference, or its procedure. In addition to other talks they may have with your officials, and other Ministers if you so wish, I think it would be very helpful if they could also meet with you personally.

I would suggest the date of January 19 for such a meeting, if this is convenient to you.

Yours sincerely,

Original signed
by
L. B. Pearson

The Honourable W.A.C. Bennett,
Premier of British Columbia,
Victoria, British Columbia.

PREMIER'S OFFICE
Province of Prince Edward Island

December 20th, 1967

Rt. Hon. Lester B. Pearson, P.C., M.P.,
Prime Minister of Canada,
Ottawa, Canada.

My dear Prime Minister:

Thank you very much for your letter of December 1st in which you have outlined in general terms your proposals for a Federal-Provincial Conference to consider the possibility of establishing a Constitutional Bill of Rights for Canada.

I wish to confirm that the date of February 5th is satisfactory to me, and that a delegation from the Province of Prince Edward Island will be present for the Conference.

I have no definite views with respect to the sessions being open to the public and the press. Closed sessions usually tend to be good working sessions.

Yours sincerely,

Alexander B. Campbell,
Premier,
Prince Edward Island

Nova Scotia
THE PREMIER Halifax

December 7, 1967

CONFIDENTIAL

Dear Mr. Prime Minister:

This will acknowledge yours of December 1st with reference to a Federal-Provincial Conference to consider establishing a constitutional Bill of Rights. I would be prepared to attend on Monday, February 5th, and to continue on the following day, and as required further.

It seems to me that there are really two problems which tend to make many millions of Canadians very unhappy.

One, of course, is that of language and culture.

The other question is that of disparity in regional development. If we are going to tackle one we should at the same time and with the same degree of anxiety tackle the other. It therefore seems to me that it would be appropriate to place on the agenda of the proposed meeting the whole question of regional disparity.

Sincerely yours,
G. I. Smith

Rt. Hon. Lester B. Pearson
Prime Minister of Canada
Parliament Buildings
Ottawa, Canada

ONTARIO

OFFICE OF THE PRIME MINISTER AND PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Toronto, Ontario, December 6, 1967

Confidential

My dear Prime Minister;

Monday, February 5th, is agreeable to Ontario as the day on which the Federal-Provincial Conference might be convened next year to deal with various constitutional matters. We will also be ready to discuss the Report of the Royal Commission on Bilingualism and Biculturalism.

In regard to making some of the sessions public, I think that this should be given a great deal of careful consideration. Certainly in the context of bringing our people to realize the gravity of our discussions and perhaps the divergence of points of view, some public sessions would seem to be indicated. On the other hand, we must never lose sight of the fact that the decision making process is not helped or made easier when carried on in the white glare of publicity. I have always been of the opinion that there is a happy medium to be followed.

My suggestion would be that we give some consideration to dealing with some general subjects in the early stages of the Conference, where points of view might be put, with the latter part of the Conference held in camera. This could be done quite easily by a close examination of the agenda and by its proper arrangement to meet these requirements.

I would be happy to discuss this with you when we next meet.

Yours sincerely,
John P. Robarts

Right Honourable L. B. Pearson,
Prime Minister of Canada,
Parliament Buildings,
Ottawa, Canada.

Manitoba
OFFICE OF THE PREMIER
Winnipeg 1

December 8, 1967.

My dear Prime Minister:

Thank you for your letter of the 1st and particularly for your kind good wishes on my taking office as Premier of Manitoba and leader of the Manitoba Progressive Conservative Party.

I have consulted my Cabinet colleagues and can inform you that the suggested dates for the federal-provincial conference beginning Monday, February 5, 1968, are satisfactory to the Manitoba government. I have noted what you say regarding the agenda of the conference and will certainly write to you in due course to suggest any related matters which might be added to it.

In view of the experience gained at the Confederation of Tomorrow Conference in Toronto last week, you might consider having the opening meeting of the federal-provincial conference in February open to the public and to the news media including television. In this way the position papers set forth by the representatives of the Government of Canada and of the various provinces would be made known to the widest possible public. Whether or not at a later meeting there should be public access to our deliberations might perhaps be settled by the conference itself.

With kind regards,

Yours sincerely,
Walter Weir.

The Rt. Hon. Lester B. Pearson, P.C., M. P.,
Prime Minister of Canada,
East Block,
Ottawa 4, Ontario.

Saskatchewan
OFFICE OF THE PREMIER

December 19, 1967

The Right Honourable L. B. Pearson
Prime Minister of Canada
Ottawa, Canada

My dear Prime Minister:

Your suggested date of February 5th for the Federal-Provincial Conference to consider the possibility of establishing a constitutional Bill of Rights for Canada is suitable. I would hope that the discussion would conclude on the following day.

I agree that matters which you mention for discussion are related to the question of a constitutional Bill of Rights.

I believe that the conference should be closed for obvious reasons. However, I suggest that the opening session when the participants make their opening formal statements could be open to the public. Also, you might wish to arrange for a press conference immediately after the conference.

Yours sincerely,

W. Ross Thatcher
Premier

FD EDMONTON ALTA 6 1130 AMST

RT HON L B PEARSON PRIME MINISTER OF CANADA
OTTAWA ONT

REUR LETTER OF DECEMBER FIRST THE DATE OF FEBRUARY FIFTH IS SATISFACTORY FOR US FOR THE FEDERAL PROVINCIAL CONFERENCE ON THE POSSIBILITY OF ESTABLISHING A CONSTITUTIONAL BILL OF RIGHTS FOR CANADA

E C MANNING PREMIER OF ALBERTA

MOA631

EVA346 V LLA284 56 2 EXTRA TLXV U
VICTORIA BC 4 434P PDI

RT HON L B PEARSON PC OBE

PRIME MINISTER OF CANADA
OTTAWA CANADA

IN ANSWER TO YOUR LETTER OF DECEMBER FIRST AGREE WITH DATE FEBRUARY FIFTH FOR CONFERENCE BUT I WILL HAVE TO LEAVE ON THE AFTERNOON OF THE SIXTH AS IT IS PLANNED TO BRING DOWN THE BRITISH COLUMBIA BUDGET ON THE NINTH, AND AS YOU ARE AWARE I AM ALSO THE MINISTER OF FINANCE. REGARDS

W A C BENNETT PRIME MINISTER
BRITISH COLUMBA

Similar letter also sent to the Premiers of British Columbia, Saskatchewan, Ontario, Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland in English and to Quebec and New Brunswick in French.

CONFIDENTIAL

Ottawa, December 1, 1967.

My dear Premier:

You will recall that I wrote you on August 15th proposing that a Federal-Provincial Conference be convened early next year to consider the possibility of establishing a constitutional Bill of Rights for Canada. All provinces have now responded and expressed general willingness to participate. It would be helpful for planning purposes if we could now agree on a possible date for our meeting.

I should like to suggest that the Conference might begin on Monday, February 5, with the intention of continuing the discussion on the following day and, if need be, on Wednesday. I would appreciate if you could let me know as soon as possible whether this suggested date is suitable to you.

In so far as the agenda of the Conference is concerned, our intention, as you know, is to focus discussion on a constitutional Bill of Rights. Since our original proposal, we have received the Report of the Royal Commission on Bilingualism and Biculturalism which will be made public next week, a copy of which will be sent to you. I think we should provide some time for a discussion of the Report and its recommendations. In addition, the Provincial Governments have also now had an opportunity to have some discussions between themselves which bear on both of the matters suggested above for the agenda. It may well be that you would also wish to suggest other related matters which might be added to the agenda.

I would also appreciate your views as to whether or not some of the sessions should be made public, bearing in mind of course that our discussions may eventually lead to decisions by both levels of government.

Yours sincerely,
Original signed
by
L. B. Pearson

The Honourable E. C. Manning,
Premier of Alberta,
Edmonton, Alberta.

[Translation]

Similar letter also sent to the Premiers of British Columbia, Saskatchewan, Ontario, Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland in English and to Quebec and New Brunswick in French.

Confidential

Ottawa, December 1, 1967.

My dear Premier:

You will recall that I wrote you on August 15th proposing that a Federal-Provincial Conference be convened early next year to consider the possibility of establishing a constitutional Bill of Rights for Canada. All provinces have now responded and expressed general willingness to participate. It would be helpful for planning purposes if we could now agree on a possible date for our meeting.

I should like to suggest that the Conference might begin on Monday, February 5, with the intention of continuing the discussion on the following day and, if need be, on Wednesday. I would appreciate if you could let me know as soon as possible whether this suggested date is suitable to you.

In so far as the agenda of the Conference is concerned, our intention, as you know, is to focus discussion on a constitutional Bill of Rights. Since our original proposal, we have received the Report of the Royal Commission on Bilingualism and Biculturalism which will be made public next week, a copy of which will be sent to you. I think we should provide some time for a discussion of the Report and its recommendations. In addition, the Provincial Governments have also now had an opportunity to have some discussions between themselves which bear on both of the matters suggested above for the agenda. It may well be that you would also wish to suggest other related matters which might be added to the agenda.

I would also appreciate your views as to whether or not some of the sessions should be made public, bearing in mind of course that our discussions may eventually lead to decisions by both levels of government.

Yours sincerely,
(signed) L. B. Pearson

The Honourable Louis J. Robichaud,
Premier of New Brunswick,
Legislative Buildings,
Fredericton, New Brunswick.

[English]

This letter sent to Premier of Manitoba only.

Confidential

Ottawa, December 1, 1967

My dear Premier:

Before touching upon the subject matter of this letter, may I express to you my very best wishes on having been chosen by your party as its leader.

As you may know, on August 15th I wrote to your predecessor in office proposing that a Federal-Provincial Conference be convened early next year to consider the possibility of establishing a constitutional Bill of Rights for Canada. All provinces have now responded and expressed general willingness to participate. It would be helpful for planning purposes if we could now agree on a possible date for our meeting.

I should like to suggest that the Conference might begin on Monday, February 5th, with the intention of continuing the discussion on the following day, and if need be, on Wednesday. I would appreciate if you could let me know as soon as possible whether this suggested date is suitable to you.

In so far as the agenda of the Conference is concerned, our intention, as you know, is to focus discussion on a constitutional Bill of Rights. Since our original proposal, we have received the Report of the Royal Commission on Bilingualism and Biculturalism which will be made public next week, a copy of which will be sent to you. I think we should provide some time for a discussion of the Report and its recommendations. In addition, the Provincial Governments have also now had an opportunity to have some discussions between themselves which bear on both of the matters suggested above for the agenda. It may well be that you would also wish to suggest other related matters which might be added to the agenda.

I would also appreciate your views as to whether or not some of the sessions should be made public, bearing in mind of course that our discussions may eventually lead to decisions by both levels of government.

Yours sincerely,

Original signed
by
L. B. Pearson

The Honourable W. Weir,
Premier of Manitoba,
Legislative Buildings,
Winnipeg, Manitoba.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Friday, January 26, 1968

The house met at 11 a.m.

TRANSPORTATION

ATLANTIC PROVINCES—STUDY OF PROBLEMS BY STANDING COMMITTEE

On the order: Government Notice of Motion:

January 24, 1968—The Minister of Industry (for the Minister of Finance)—That the standing committee on transport and communications be empowered to consider and report upon all aspects of transportation as they relate to the Atlantic provinces, taking account of the conclusions and recommendations of the Atlantic provinces transportation study, January, 1967, volumes 1 to 12, prepared by the Economist Intelligence Unit Limited, and the report of the royal commission on transportation, 1961, volumes 1 and 2, and recommend what measures should be initiated in order that the national transportation policy may be as fully implemented as possible in the Atlantic provinces.

That the said committee shall examine, in particular, the effectiveness of the Maritime Freight Rates Act with power to study and make recommendations concerning:

(a) changes or alterations which may now be desirable in the Maritime Freight Rates Act; and

(b) alternative methods of assisting transportation in the Atlantic provinces either in addition to the Maritime Freight Rates Act or in substitution therefor in whole or in part with the purpose that maximum benefits be obtained by the Atlantic provinces from he expenditure being made.

That for the purposes of this inquiry, the said committee shall be empowered to adjourn from place to place within Canada; that the clerk and necessary supporting staff be authorized to accompany said committee, and that the committee be authorized to engage the services of counsel, accountants, etc.

Mr. Speaker: Pursuant to section 2 of standing order 21 this notice of motion is transferred to and ordered for consideration under government orders at the next sitting of the house.

UNITED NATIONS

NORTH KOREA—REFERENCE TO SECURITY COUNCIL—REQUEST FOR STATEMENT ON CANADA'S POSITION

On the orders of the day:

Hon. Michael Starr (Ontario): Mr. Speaker, I wish to address a question to the Acting Prime Minister. In view of the serious situation developing between the United States and North Korea will the government make a full statement on that matter, preferably on Monday so that parliament and the people of Canada will know the facts and, in particular, what Canada's position is and will be?

Hon. Paul Martin (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I thank my hon. friend for the helpful way in which he has phrased his question. The Security Council will be called into urgent session this afternoon at the initiative of the ambassador of the United States to the United Nations. I think that this is a situation where prudence and cool heads will be required.

The Security Council has an obligation in matters that threaten the peace or where there is a violation of the peace. The fact that one of the major powers in the world, the United States, should seek the assistance of the United Nations in overcoming this difficult problem by diplomacy is something I am sure to be welcomed by the Security Council as well as by all of us. Our ambassador has been instructed to use his influence and his presence on the council to see that diplomatic methods are resorted to in trying to meet this difficult and tense situation.

It might be useful for the Security Council to consider a parallel situation when the former secretary general, Dag Hammarskjold, suggested that someone representing him might be sent to China to deal with the situation and to avoid the use of any but peaceful means. It may be that in this situation the Security Council will want to give consideration to the dispatch of someone representing the Secretary General.

I assure my hon. friend that the Canadian government is following the matter very closely. I hope to be seeing the United States ambassador right after orders of the day. I assure my hon. friend and the house that the government is fully conscious of the situation and is following it very carefully.

Hon. E. D. Fulton (Kamloops): On a point of order, Mr. Speaker, while I know the house welcomes the fact that it is being given information, the request from our house leader was that the minister might make a full statement on Monday, of course on motions. The minister has complied with the request now, but we are on the orders of the day.

The matter is sufficiently serious, and the interest and responsibility of members is sufficiently grave that, in view of the course followed by the minister, I should like to suggest that we might now revert to motions. He could complete his statement on motions and then there could be comments from representatives of the other parties in the house.

Mr. Martin (Essex East): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate what my hon. friend has said. I do not have anything further to add at this time. After the meeting of the Security Council today it might be that we could revert to motions; if not, I would follow the suggestion that I make a more complete statement on Monday.

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Burnaby-Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask a supplementary question. In view of the fact that the Security Council is meeting today I think it is incumbent upon the government to give us some information at this time concerning what position the Canadian representatives at the United Nations will be taking in respect of the Pueblo incident. I should like to ask the Acting Prime Minister whether Canada will be taking the position that this seizure of a United States ship by the North Korean naval forces constitutes an isolated alleged violation of the freedom of the seas or whether the Canadian government takes the position that this action is a violation of the Korean armistice agreement signed in 1953 and therefore constitutes, in the terms of that agreement, a renewal of the armed attack and challenges the principles of the United Nations. It would seem to be important that Canada's position in this regard be made clear at once.

Mr. Martin (Essex East): Mr. Speaker, I think my hon. friend will agree that this is a situation in respect of which we ought to be careful about the judgments we make. There is the position put forward by the United States, as I said the day before yesterday, that the ship was not plying in the territorial seas of North Korea. This is a matter of fact which undoubtedly will be discussed in the United Nations Security Council. There have been some allegations of violations on the other side. I do not wish to prejudge these. Until there has been the fullest examination I think it would be wise to suspend judgment.

[Mr. Fulton.]

It is this kind of situation I had in mind when I observed that it might be desirable at some point for a representative of the Secretary General himself to go to the area. Then we would have to see what developments follow.

Mr. Douglas: May I ask a further supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. I was not asking the minister to make a judgment concerning whether or not there had been a violation of freedom of the seas. I was asking whether or not the Canadian government considers this to be a separate act in dispute between the United States government and North Korea, or whether he considers it to be a violation of the Korean armistice of 1953 and therefore that Canada would have a responsibility to deal with any violation of that agreement.

Mr. Martin (Essex East): Mr. Speaker, as I said the other day this seems to be a matter which does not involve the United Nations directly, or Canada as a component of the United Nations force. The ship in question was not, I believe, under the command of the United Nations in Korea. However, this will be a question that the other side will dispute and it is a matter which will have to be examined. I did refer to the allegation of certain other violations. These too may come within the purport of the agreement, not the agreement of 1957 but that of July 27, 1953.

Hon. Gordon Churchill (Winnipeg South Centre): Mr. Speaker, as a supplementary question, may I ask the Secretary of State for External Affairs whether he is casting a doubt on the statement of the United States government that the ship was in international and not in North Korean waters.

Mr. Martin (Essex East): I do not think I have said anything that would in any way cast doubt on the position taken by the United States.

Mr. Churchill: I understood the minister to say there was an allegation by the United States. Is there not anything more positive than that?

Mr. Martin (Essex East): I said there was an allegation that the Pueblo was plying in the territorial sea off North Korea. I did not say we agreed with that, but I said that was the allegation made. This undoubtedly will be one of the facts to be examined by the Security Council. I want to clearly indicate, and I am sure my hon. friend in this matter, so important as it is to the peace, will not want to add to the difficulty, that we have not in any way indicated that the position taken by the United States is not one that can be substantiated.

Mr. Churchill: I rise on a question of privilege, Mr. Speaker. Every time a question is asked here that disturbs the minister for external affairs he suggests the person asking the question is not in favour of peace. I reject that allegation.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Churchill: This is not the first time I have heard this from the minister. I will stand with anybody on my record here in respect of maintaining peace in the world. We are entitled to ask questions and entitled to get clear statements from the minister. He has suggested to us that there is some doubt as to whether the statement of the United States government is clear.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Churchill: Then he attempts to accuse me of falsifying the issue.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Starr: I have a further supplementary question.

Mr. Andrew Brewin (Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask the Acting Prime Minister, in view of the complex issues and the fact that perhaps international laws are involved in an incident of this sort, whether our representative at the Security Council will suggest that, in addition perhaps to other interim actions, the complex issues be referred either to the world court or some other international tribunal which could take a judicial approach to this matter?

Mr. Martin (Essex East): Mr. Speaker, I do not preclude any possible action, but it may be that this situation is so important, requiring immediate attention, that action by the world court would not be helpful. I am not saying that this is the case.

Let me assure my friend, the hon. member for Winnipeg South Centre (Mr. Churchill), that he has misunderstood me in this instance. I was not making any suggestion about his concern; I was simply trying as carefully as I could in the face of this situation not to complicate a matter that now will be considered by the Security Council, in the hope that a pacific means will be used to resolve a problem that is of great danger.

Mr. Starr: Mr. Speaker, my purpose in asking the first question in a responsible way was in the hope that we would get a concise statement on Monday relevant to all the facts of the situation, and particularly in relation to what Canada's position will be. I hope the minister meant by all his words that he will make such a statement on Monday.

Mr. Martin (Essex East): Yes, Mr. Speaker; my hon. friend may be sure of that.

Mr. W. B. Nesbitt (Oxford): Mr. Speaker, like the hon. member for Ontario, I intended to refrain from asking questions until Monday with the hope that the minister might make a complete statement. In view of the number of questions that have been asked this morning can the minister now tell us whether the government of Canada has been informed by the government of the United States as to the location of the Pueblo when it was seized and, if so, does the government of Canada accept this statement or information from the United States?

Mr. Martin (Essex East): Yes, Mr. Speaker, the Canadian government is aware of the position taken by the United States, and I would have no reason to take issue with the United States statement.

Mr. Fulton: What about the position of the ship?

HARBOURS

VANCOUVER—TRANSPORTATION FACILITIES CROSSING BURRARD INLET

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Harold E. Winch (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Transport who reports to the house on behalf of harbour commissioners. In view of its urgency and importance to the city of Vancouver, north Vancouver and west Vancouver, will the minister advise us when we can expect a report on the engineering studies and a departmental decision on the construction of a tunnel or bridge relative to the new public transportation crossing over Burrard inlet between Vancouver and the north shore? The government has agreed to accept certain responsibility in respect of this most important matter.

Hon. Paul Hellyer (Minister of Transport): Very soon, I hope, Mr. Speaker.

Inquiries of the Ministry

Mr. Winch: Mr. Speaker, may I ask what very soon means?

Mr. Starr: In due course.

Mr. Hellyer: Within a matter of days.

Mr. Starr: How many days?

[Translation]

Mr. Gérard Laprise (Chapleau): Mr. Speaker, I wanted to put a question to the Minister of Industry and Minister of Defence Production, but he just left the house for a short time; I will wait until he returns to put my question.

[English]

CANADIAN CONSTITUTION

ADJOURNMENT TO PERMIT ATTENDANCE OF MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT AND OTHERS AS OBSERVERS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. R. N. Thompson (Red Deer): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Acting Prime Minister. In view of the firm date that has now been announced for the federation conference, together with the publication of the proposed agenda, I ask the Acting Prime Minister whether the government is considering making arrangements, or discussing with the other parties in the house the possibility of adjourning the house so that members of parliament might participate as observers in this very important conference.

Hon. Paul Martin (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, with regard to the question of adjournment, I am not in a position to say anything definite. I think I did say to the hon. member for Ontario today that the question of observer status mentioned earlier by the Prime Minister was a matter in respect of which he will be giving a definite reply when he returns, which I hope now will be on Monday.

Mr. L. R. Sherman (Winnipeg South): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Can the Acting Prime Minister say whether the portion of the conference which will deal with regional economic disparities will be open to public view and public study?

Mr. Martin (Essex East): I cannot reply to that question at the moment, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Erik Nielsen (Yukon): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. In view of the Prime Minister's assurance on December 18 last that when matters of direct importance to Canadians living above the 60th parallel who do not live in the provinces are before the conference, they will, in the Prime Minister's words, be directly represented there, I wonder whether the Acting Prime Minister can give us his assurance that members of the councils of both territories will be invited to attend these sessions as observers.

Mr. Martin (Essex East): I would like to take notice of that question, Mr. Speaker.

FINANCE

BANK OF CANADA—STATEMENT ON SECONDARY RESERVES

On the orders of the day:

Hon. Marcel Lambert (Edmonton West): Mr. Speaker, my question is to the Minister of Finance. Would the minister consider making on Monday a statement outlining the actions of the Bank of Canada in setting the secondary reserves provided for under the Bank Act?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Minister of Finance): Yes, Mr. Speaker, I will take that request under consideration.

CUT-BACK IN FEDERAL CONTRIBUTION TO COST-SHARING AGREEMENTS

On the orders of the day:

Hon. Hugh John Flemming (Victoria-Carleton): My question is for the Minister of Finance. Would the minister advise the house whether a part of the present financial austerity program is a request to the provinces to cut back or even to eliminate certain joint federal provincial programs, particularly those of a flexible nature.

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, the hon. member for Brandon-Souris asked a similar question yesterday and I categorized it as being rather mysterious. I would much prefer to answer a specific question about some specific program. We have so many shared cost programs.

Hon. Marcel Lambert (Edmonton West): I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker, in this regard. When the hon. member for Wellington South asked a question about a specific program, the question was disallowed.

Hon. Gordon Churchill (Winnipeg South Centre): I have a further supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. May I ask the Minister of Finance to be less mysterious with regard to this matter. The question asked by the hon. member for Brandon-Souris yesterday and the one asked today have not been answered. Have any of the cost-sharing programs with the provinces been reduced by the federal government suggesting to the provinces that the federal contribution will not be proceeded with this year?

Mr. Sharp: I think this is the kind of question which should be placed on the order paper. It will take a good deal of research to answer it. But if there is some specific matter in which the opposition is interested, I will be only too happy to find answers. Their questions reflect a sort of general approach which they hope will turn up something of interest.

RESEARCH

BRITISH COLUMBIA—CONSTRUCTION OF QUEEN ELIZABETH II TELESCOPE

On the orders of the day:

Mr. D. V. Pugh (Okanagan Boundary): Mr. Speaker, my question is to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources and notice has already been given. Is it the intention of the government to scrap the plans to build the Queen Elizabeth II telescope on Mount Kobau in the Okanagan-Similkameen area of British Columbia?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I believe that this question should be placed on the order paper.

Mr. Pugh: With respect, Mr. Speaker, I would point out that there was a news item yesterday which suggested this, and I have received many, many requests from British Columbia for information on this matter. I have taken the matter up with the minister and he asked that the question be put today. I think he has an answer.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I suppose I should join in the conspiracy—

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Speaker: —and allow the answer.

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, there is no such intention, but in view of the need for budgetary cuts, and after careful study, we have decided that the program of design of the Queen Elizabeth II telescope and the buildings associated with it could be slowed down for this year without serious consequences to the program as a whole. About $500,000 was retained in my department's budget for the fiscal year 1968-69 in order to proceed with the design and planning for construction.

In the meantime I have proposed that a small working committee of senior scientists be convened by the science secretariat to look into the whole subject of government support of astronomical research in Canada and to make recommendations on the development of the Queen Elizabeth II telescope in that context.

Mr. G. L. Chatterton (Esquimalt-Saanich): I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Can the minister assure us that the slowdown will not result in the loss of the highly qualified personnel required for this work?

Mr. Pepin: We hope that by having only a slowdown we will be able to keep the very competent personnel associated with this program.

THE CANADIAN ECONOMY

HEATING OIL AND GASOLINE—REPORTED PRICE INCREASES

On the orders of the day:

Mr. David Lewis (York South): Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask the Minister of Finance a question. In view of the press reports that the prices of gasoline and domestic heating oil have been raised in western Canada and the oil companies are considering also raising prices in eastern Canada, would the minister inform the house whether either his department or, to his knowledge, the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs is investigating these price increases or proposed price increases in view of the guide lines which the minister issued to industry, labour and others to hold the prices down?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I have asked my officials to inquire into the reasons for these price increases.

Mr. Lewis: I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. If I understood the minister correctly, he said he asked his officials to look into the matter. Am I correct in assuming that there is no report on it yet?

Mr. Sharp: No, Mr. Speaker, I only read the reports recently and that is why I asked my officials to inquire into them immediately.

Inquiries of the Ministry

REQUEST FOR REACTIVATION OF COMMITTEE TO STUDY COST OF LIVING

On the orders of the day:

Mrs. Grace MacInnis (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the minister responsible for corporate and consumer affairs. In his absence may I direct it to his parliamentary secretary? In view of increasing prices can the minister say whether he intends to reactivate the committee which last year inquired into the cost of living in Canada? If so, when will it resume its hearings?

[Translation]

Mr. Ovide Laflamme (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I will take this question as notice and give an answer later.

[English]

AGRICULTURE

BEEF—IMPORTS IN LIGHT OF FALLING PRICES

On the orders of the day:

Mr. C. S. Smallwood (Battle River-Camrose): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Agriculture but in his absence I am sure the Acting Prime Minister will be pleased to accept it. In view of the present decline in the prices of pork and beef paid to the producers, could the minister explain why the government is considering the importation of frozen beef from Argentina?

Mr. Speaker: The question as asked is not in order.

IMMIGRATION

POSSIBLE DEPORTATION OF ALLEGED PARTICIPANT IN UNITED KINGDOM TRAIN ROBBERY

On the orders of the day:

Hon. E. D. Fulton (Kamloops): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Justice, but in his absence perhaps the Solicitor General would deal with it. It relates to the reported arrest of Mr. Wilson, or Mr. Alloway, who is alleged to have taken part in a train robbery in the United Kingdom. I should like to ask the minister whether a request has been made by the United Kingdom authorities for the extradition of this man, or is the situation at present confined to the immigration hearing in relation to his possible deportation?

Hon. J. R. Nicholson (Acting Minister of Manpower and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, with the concurrence of the Solicitor General I will try to deal with the question in my capacity as acting Minister of Manpower and Immigration. An inquiry is being held today into the circumstances under which Wilson, the mail-train robber, entered Canada under a different name. Until the inquiry has been completed I think it is desirable that we refrain from further observations. Whether extradition proceedings become necessary will, of course, depend on the outcome of inquiries being conducted by immigration officials.

Mr. Fulton: My question was whether extradition proceedings had yet been instigated. I take it, from the minister's answer, that they have not been.

Mr. Nicholson: That is my understanding.

THE LATE DR. LEOPOLD INFELD—CITIZENSHIP STATUS OF CHILDREN

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Andrew Brewin (Greenwood): I do not know whether the dry run is over but may I direct a question to the Secretary of State. Have the children of the late Dr. Leopold Infeld been told that they can resume their Canadian citizenship, which they lost when their father's citizenship was revoked? Will others in similar circumstances be accorded a similar privilege?

Hon. Judy V. LaMarsh (Secretary of State): No doubt my hon. friend is speaking of what has appeared in certain newspaper and television reports. He has not put the matter correctly. They have not been informed that citizenship is available to them as of right. Under the current law they must prepare a declaration of intention and a declaration of request which the minister in charge of citizenship—I am that minister at the moment —has to consider. What is in course of preparation is a letter to these young people advising them that if they are prepared to file such declaration of intent, and to take up residence and make this their home, then I am prepared to favourably consider their application for reinstatement of citizenship.

Mr. Brewin: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Could the minister deal with the second part of the question and say whether there are others, also children of people, whose citizenship was taken away and who will receive similar notification?

Miss LaMarsh: Mr. Speaker, I must say that this depends on the circumstances. I do not think that Canadian citizenship is a matter to be handed out lightly. I also do not think that the sins of the fathers must necessarily be visited upon their children. If there are such similar cases, then I am prepared, and I think the people of Canada would be prepared, to return citizenship where it has been lost not as the result of the children's fault. I would be prepared to look at the circumstances of any case where it has been lost.

SHIPPING

FLOODING FROM EXTENSIVE ICEBREAKING OPERATIONS IN ST. LAWRENCE

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Thomas M. Bell (Saint John-Albert): My question is for the Minister of Transport. Can the minister answer the question that I asked him on Wednesday, particularly since grave concern has been expressed by those who live in regions near the St. Lawrence, as evidenced by this morning's newspapers? My question to the minister was whether he would investigate complaints to the effect that this year the excessive icebreaking may in itself cause extra flooding in the spring?

Hon. Paul Hellyer (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I asked for a complete report from my officials about the matter and I hope to have it some time over the week end. This year conditions on the St. Lawrence are described as unusual, and in view of that I have asked for a full technical report to cover all aspects of the situation, so that complete information is available for hon. members and others who are interested.

Mr. Robert McCleave (Halifax): My question is supplementary to the one asked by the hon. member for Saint John-Albert. Would the minister in his study also consider compensation to be paid for those home owners whose homes have been damaged as a result of icebreaking operations in the St. Lawrence river?

Mr. Hellyer: Without prejudice to the situation we will, of course, look into all aspects of the matter.

[Translation]

Mr. Gilles Grégoire (Lapointe): Mr. Speaker, I wish to put a supplementary question.

Could the Minister of Transport tell us whether the report he requested from his department will include the first days of the cold season? Could he also tell us whether he intends to make a statement in the house next Monday, on motions, concerning this report?

[English]

Mr. Hellyer: Mr. Speaker, it will cover all aspects, including the one that has just been mentioned by my hon. friend. Whether a statement will be ready by Monday I cannot say until I have the report. Nevertheless, I shall consider the advisability of making a statement.

SYDNEY, N.S.—REPLY BY MINISTER CONCERNING PILOTAGE STATION

On the orders of the day:

Hon. Paul Hellyer (Minister of Transport): Perhaps I might answer a question asked by the hon. member for Cape Breton North and Victoria (Mr. Muir). He asked, first, whether the department intends to remove the pilotage station from North Sydney—in other words to change the base. At present the eight pilots are divided into two four-man watches who man the station 24 hours a day, week on and week off. There is living accommodation for them on the station and the pilot boat is based there. Their dispatch instructions come from the pilotage office in Sydney.

Modern methods of communication make it possible for ships to advise the pilotage office of their expected time of arrival well in advance of the time when a pilot is needed and, consequently, it is no longer necessary to maintain a visual lookout at pilot stations. We have therefore closed many of the stations that previously provided living accommodation, and pilots are now dispatched directly from their homes. This system is to be implemented in Sydney within the next few months. The base of operation for the pilot boat will continue to be North Sydney, and pilots will be transported to and from their assignments on the boat operating from its present location.

The hon. member has also asked whether the department intends to remove the services of pilots from Sydney harbour. The department recognizes the continuing need for a pilotage service in Sydney harbour and there is no intention of doing away with this service.

Inquiries of the Ministry

HEALTH AND WELFARE

COURT RULING TRACING LUNG CANCER TO CIGARETTE SMOKING

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Barry Mather (New Westminster): Mr. Speaker, I had intended directing my question to the Minister of Justice or the Minister of National Health and Welfare. In their absence possibly someone on the government side might take it as notice. My question is as to whether the ministers are aware of the significant United States appeal court ruling yesterday in which a cigarette company is held liable for the lung cancer death of a cigarette smoker? Further, would the departments concerned in this matter keep an eye on the situation?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member has made his representation to the government. I do not think the question can be accepted at this time.

PUBLIC WORKS

SPRINGHILL, N.S.—REPAIRS TO FENCE

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Robert C. Coates (Cumberland): My question is for the Minister of Public Works. Since the minister informed me in a written reply on June 12 that the repairs to a fence around the medium security penal institution in Springhill would cost $7,950, would he explain to the house how those same repairs could now cost $96,000, as he announced today? Even with the degree of inflation that is in evidence today, this amount appears to be excessive.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. This is an argumentative question and cannot be asked in its present form.

VANCOUVER—CONSTRUCTION OF FEDERAL BUILDING

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Harold E. Winch (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Public Works. In view of the presently heavy and potentially increasing unemployment of construction workers in British Columbia due in part to the phasing out of major power and pulp mill projects, will the minister give serious consideration to advancing the date for the commencement of the construction of a three phase project in connection with the new federal building concept in Vancouver?

[Mr. Hellyer.]

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I doubt whether this question, though important, can be asked at this time. If the hon. member considers there is urgency in the matter he might give notice of consideration at the time of adjournment.

Mr. Winch: I do so now, Mr. Speaker.

NORTHERN AFFAIRS

ROADS TO RESOURCES—INQUIRY AS TO SUBSTITUTE PROGRAM

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Robert Simpson (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, my question is perhaps supplementary to the one asked earlier today by the hon. member for Victoria-Carleton, and it is directed to the Minister of Finance. On October 31 last, motivated by a government announcement that the roads to resources program was to be discontinued, I asked the Prime Minister whether the government would consider instituting a similar program. The Prime Minister said that the government is considering the provision of assistance to the provinces—

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member should ask his question and not go through the entire history of the matter.

Mr. Simpson: With respect, Mr. Speaker, I intend to point out that the Prime Minister announced that the government was considering a similar program when economic conditions make it desirable to do so. My question to the minister is whether the government feels that economic conditions for that program are now desirable, or when does the government feel they may become desirable?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I have doubts about that question. I do not think it is acceptable.

WATER RESOURCES

PEMBINA RIVER—REPORT BY INTERNATIONAL COMMISSION

On the orders of the day:

Mr. George Muir (Lisgar): My question is for the Secretary of State for External Affairs. Could he report on Monday whether progress has been made toward ratification of the International Joint Commission report by the governments of Canada and the United States on the Pembina river project?

Hon. Paul Martin (Secretary of State for External Affairs): So far as the Canadian government is concerned, Mr. Speaker, I think I can say that we have made some progress. I shall ascertain what is the position of the United States.

UNITED STATES SURVEY CREW IN NORTHERN ONTARIO

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Bud Germa (Sudbury): I wish to direct a question to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. May I ask him whether at present any United States army or civilian water survey crew is working in northern Ontario?

Mr. Speaker: That question should be placed on the order paper.

COMPANY OF YOUNG CANADIANS

REQUEST FOR WITHDRAWAL FROM WESTERN PROVINCES

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Howard Johnston (Okanagan-Revelstoke): My question is for the Acting Prime Minister. Has the government received formal requests from any western provinces asking that the Company of Young Canadians be withdrawn from activities in those provinces?

Hon. Paul Martin (Acting Prime Minister): I am not aware that there are any formal requests, though I have seen some suggestions to that effect in the newspapers.

Mr. Johnston: Has a reported drive for charitable funds on behalf of the Company of Young Canadians, to replace the $400,000 reduction in the budget allocation, been submitted to the government for approval?

Mr. Martin (Essex East): I am not aware of that fact but I shall try to ascertain whether it is true.

INQUIRY OF THE MINISTRY

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Robert C. Coates (Cumberland): My question is to the Acting Prime Minister. Since the Acting Prime Minister and the Minister of Transport had an opportunity for a dry run at the top job, is it the intention of their party to provide equal opportunities to other aspirants for the job, prior to April 6?

Hon. Paul Martin (Acting Prime Minister): Why call it a dry run? I do not know why my hon. friend calls it a dry run.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Inquiries of the Ministry

LABOUR RELATIONS

INTERPRETATION OF PICARD REPORT

On the orders of the day:

Hon. Michael Starr (Ontario): Mr. Speaker, I wish to address a question to the Minister of Labour and to ask him whether any clarification has been made of the interpretation of the Picard report as it affects the Montreal dock situation.

Hon. J. R. Nicholson (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, the injunction matter arising out of differences in interpretation of the report is still pending in the court of appeal of the province of Quebec. Furthermore, as I said in reply to a question put by the hon. member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce a few days ago, the contracts, as modified by the Picard commission, have run out as of December 31. Further negotiations have commenced, however. A conciliator has been appointed to assist the parties, and the Picard report is one of the items that is being dealt with during the course of these new negotiations.

Mr. Starr: A supplementary question. Will it be fair to assume from the statement just made by the minister that the interpretation of the Picard report is not yet clarified?

Mr. Nicholson: I think that is a fair assumption, Mr. Speaker. That is one matter which will eventually be determined when the decision of the court of appeal in Quebec is handed down. I am sure that other questions requiring clarification will be dealt with when the new agreements are entered into.

KETTLE VALLEY RAILWAY—ALLEGED FAILURE IN INTERPRETATION OF AGREEMENT

On the orders of the day:

Mr. H. W. Herridge (Kootenay West): I have a question for the Minister of Labour, Mr. Speaker. Has the minister received representations from the employees of the Kettle Valley railway stating that the Canadian Pacific Railway is not interpreting their collective agreement properly and asking for his intervention?

Hon. J. R. Nicholson (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, I will have to take that question as notice.

TRANSPORT

MURCHISON INQUIRY—DISTRIBUTION OF REPORTS OF COMMISSIONERS

On the orders of the day:

Hon. J. R. Nicholson (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, while I am on my feet, during my absence in the early part of the afternoon session yesterday the hon. member for Edmonton-Strathcona directed a question to the Acting Prime Minister asking why copies of the Murchison inquiry report have not been made available to members, since it has been made public.

I should make it clear, Mr. Speaker, that the Murchison inquiry took place as the result of a ministerial order made by me as Minister of Labour under section 35 of the Labour Standards Act. In accordance with the usual practice, copies of reports of such inquiry commissioners are made available to people who make representations before the commissioners but are not made available to members of parliament or others interested except on request. If the hon. member or any other hon. member of the house would like a copy of the Murchison report, I will be glad to supply one on application to me or to my office.

Mr. D. V. Pugh (Okanagan Boundary): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Could many of the ministerial speeches that are sent out be dropped from members' lists, unless also requested?

Mr. Nicholson: I thought that I had had such a request from the hon. member for copies.

Mr. H. R. Ballard (Calgary South): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question for the Minister of Labour. In view of the answer given to the question posed by the hon. member for Edmonton-Strathcona, has the report of the task force appointed by the Prime Minister, to which reference was made in Hansard on December 1, I believe it was, been completed, and is it available to members and others interested who make application for a copy?

Mr. Nicholson: Mr. Speaker, this question should really be addressed to the Prime Minister or the Acting Prime Minister, but in the interest of saving time I can say that an interim report has been submitted. While it is not usual or customary to table copies of interim reports that are submitted for the information and guidance of the government, in this particular case I believe the Prime Minister does intend to table the report. It is now being translated and will be tabled by the Prime Minister in due course.

Mr. Ballard: A further supplementary question. In view of the fact that the report of the Freedman commission is available, would the minister consider holding up the introduction of Bill No. C-186 until members have had a chance to study this report?

Mr. Nicholson: Mr. Speaker, as I have stated it is an interim report, but, as Minister of Labour I have seen and studied the report and I see no reason why consideration of Bill No. C-186 should be delayed. I am sure that hon. members will agree with that view when they have had an opportunity to peruse the interim report of the task force.

• (11:50 a.m.)

BROADCASTING

IMPLEMENTATION OF CANADIAN POLICY

The house resumed, from Thursday, January 25, consideration in committee of Bill No. C-163, to implement a broadcasting policy for Canada, to amend the Radio Act in consequential and related provisions—Miss LaMarsh—Mr. Batten in the chair.

The Chairman: Order. When the committee rose last evening clause 2 (d), with an amendment moved by the hon. member for Burnaby-Richmond, was under discussion. Clause 2 (c) was allowed to stand. The committee is now considering clause 2 (d)

On clause 2—Broadcasting policy for Canada.

Mr. Fairweather: Mr. Chairman, I do not know whether it would be helpful, but I point out that the committee might consider the fact that we are now on the thirteenth day of our deliberations of this bill. If one adds the 12 days which the parliamentary committee on films, broadcasting and assistance to the arts took to consider the bill clause by clause, the total comes to 25 days, and as one who is deeply interested in and concerned about the efficient management of parliamentary business I feel we all have an obligation to exercise a bit of restraint and self-discipline. This is no criticism of the speeches which have been made; it relates, rather, to the way in which the debate has been developing.

I was interested to note that in the United Kingdom parliament, many of whose rules we have adopted in our own system, they were able last week to dissolve the last remnants of the British empire in the course of a debate which lasted two days and during which speeches were made by the principal people in the house including the prime minister, the chancellor of the exchequer, the leader of the opposition and the leader of the Liberal party. In that time the British house considered the far reaching policy implications of the government decision and had a vote on the issue.

I am not suggesting for one minute, of course, that a bill as important as this one in connection with broadcasting could be given such brief treatment but I do feel, and I mean this very sincerely, that if we expect to be at all credible as an instrument for the consideration of legislation—and I think we would all subscribe to this wish—we should exercise a bit of self-restraint. Really, 13 days consideration of this bill after 12 days consideration by the parliamentary committee should lead one to anticipate more rapid progress.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Smallwood: As a member of this house I rise to say that I do not need a lecture from anybody. I am not happy about what the committee is doing and I do not think I need a lecture on how the business of the house should be carried on. I was elected by my constituents to do my duty as I see it and to speak on the activities of the C.B.C. whenever necessary. I feel I am bound to do this, and I do not appreciate lectures from anybody about what I should, or should not do.

Mr. Prittie: I would not want the committee to vote on this clause and on the amendment I moved without hearing some comment from the minister. May I summarize the arguments I presented in favour of the amendment last night? The bill provides that the publicly owned network is required to contribute to the development of national unity. I said that although I had some misgivings about the inclusion of these words at all, if they are important they ought surely to be a charge to all broadcasters both public and private. I would point out that private television and radio stations do have the right to editorialize, and I suggest that if such stations come into the hands of people who do not believe in national unity or the maintenance of Canadian confederation they could freely run all the editorials they wished denouncing confederation.

I also mentioned that there are more private radio and television stations in Canada than there are public ones and that if this aspect is important at all it should be incumbent on these people, too, to contribute to the development of national unity. If the minister does not believe that this is important, I should like to know why.

[Translation]

Mr. Pelletier: Mr. Chairman, on this same subject, I wonder whether the hon. member's argument cannot be turned so as to mean exactly the opposite. Like him, I have some doubts as to the advisability of including that paragraph in the bill, because its contents seems to me such a matter of course. I also share certain doubts as to the scope of the paragraph and the interpretations that can be made of it.

It is so normal to provide that a public broadcasting system will contribute to Canadian solidarity that the mere fact of mentioning it, of writing it out in full, may lead some people to believe that it is not a matter of promotion but of propaganda, which is, as I can testify, far from the intentions, both of the government, that has drafted the legislation, and of the committee which has considered the matter.

Personally, I would be most favourable to the deletion of this paragraph. It seems superfluous. It seems to me that, by including it, we are giving to certain people cause to think that there is a suggestion of propaganda, which is incorrect.

On the other hand, I would oppose still more the extension of the scope of this paragraph to all stations. I think that if this paragraph is justified somewhere, which I doubt, this justification is stronger where a public body financed with public moneys is involved.

So, I am against the amendment precisely because I question the advisability of the paragraph. The only justification I can find for it—and this is hardly worth saying—is that a Canadian institution cannot be used against the interests of Canada. Since this would be redundant, I believe that it should not be extended any further. Nothing would be gained, save bringing about still more erroneous interpretations.

Therefore, I think we should leave this paragraph where it is, emphasize it as little as possible and consider it as something that is said, even though it is needless to say it. Otherwise, it would be contrary to the true spirit of the wording and would create still more doubt and suspicion as to propaganda. I cannot understand that the hon. member who questions the present paragraph would now extend its scope.

[English]

Mr. Lewis: I know the hon. member for Hochelaga shares the doubt which some of us have about whether this wording should be in the bill at all. He said so. I am sure the minister herself was concerned about the abuse which could follow the presence of such wording. However, I would urge the hon. member for Hochelaga and the minister to reconsider their position respecting the amendment, and I do so on two grounds.

• (12 noon)

If I followed the hon. member for Hochelaga correctly, and I know I did, in effect what he was saying was, "I am doubtful whether it is wise at all to have these words, and if it is unwise let us limit the unwisdom to the public sector only and not spread it further."

An hon. Member: That is what he said.

Mr. Lewis: Yes, that is what he said, and to me it does not appear to be very logical. If it is there at all you do not make it wise by limiting it to the C.B.C.; but if there is value in having it, then there is value in imposing the same moral obligation, which is what these words constitute, on the private sector.

There is another important reason why the amendment of my colleague, the hon. member for Burnaby-Richmond, ought to be considered favourably by members opposite who, I am sure, are as concerned about this problem as those of us who are speaking on it from this side. This is the fact that there is specific wording in subclause (d) to the effect that the broadcasting system as a whole should provide reasonable opportunity for the expression of conflicting views on matters of public controversy.

I suggest that is an important qualification in that subclause, in order that some management persons in the C.B.C., or in a private station cannot exclude people who may differ with them on the ground that in their opinion something may be said that is against Canadian unity. The clause is badly worded the way it is now.

I would like to ask the hon. member for Hochelaga, whom I have known and admired for many years, where is the moral superiority and logic in saying that anyone who wants to destroy Canada can do so if he has enough money? If he has enough money he can buy up all the prime time on television and radio stations across Canada and carry on his propaganda to destroy the country. That is the implication of this.

In a way we are in the position where we cannot talk against motherhood. If we say take away these words, it may be contended that we are against Canadian unity. If this moral obligation is to be placed in the law, surely it should be applicable to the entire broadcasting system. There is no reason, on this point, that there should be a difference between public and private broadcasting.

On reading the reports of the broadcasting committee discussions I noticed that the objection to placing this subclause higher up in clause 2 came from some people with private broadcasting experience. They do not want to be burdened with this. They are ready to burden the management of the C.B.C. with this provision, but not the management of private broadcasting companies.

I would like to hear better logic than I heard from the hon. member for Hochelaga to justify that kind of result but, as I say, in addition to that there is the fact that if we accepted the amendment of the hon. member for Burnaby-Richmond it would place the contribution to Canadian unity in the context which specifically permits reasonable opportunity for the expression of conflicting views on matters of public controversy. The manner of contributing to Canadian unity and building Canadian unity obviously differs in the minds of various people across this country.

There are all sorts of ideas in people's minds as to what in fact contributes to Canadian unity and what in fact does not, and how a stronger Canadian unity can be built in the future. Obviously that kind of public controversy should be permitted. I am certain I do not have to persuade the minister and the hon. member for Hochelaga on that point.

I suggest it is much better to have the reference to this in the clause which specifically recognizes the value and the need for reasonable opportunity for the expression of conflicting views on matters of public controversy. I do not intend to speak at length because we have spent a long time already on this bill. I have not spoken previously in the committee stage, but I do so now to urge the minister and hon. members opposite to accept an amendment which is reasonable, sensible, and which will carry forward their intention throughout the entire broadcasting system.

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, I am surprised at the stand taken today by the New Democratic party. I am an independentist. Some will say that I am acting against national unity, that at present, independentists have the right to buy time on private television stations and that the C.B.C. offers us free time on the program pertaining to provincial affairs, but if we are deprived of the democratic means of making our views known, where shall we turn?

Mr. Chairman, I am against the use of violence or bombs to spread ideas, because I believe in democratic methods. Now, the principal democratic method is freedom of speech, and now some want to deprive us of our right to freedom of expression on television.

What means could we then resort to if we are prevented from using the democratic means? Do we prefer that violence be substituted to the freedom of speech? Such approach is completely unthinkable on the part of the New Democratic party.

Mr. Choquette: It is the democratic party.

Mr. Grégoire: It is the democratic party.

Once adopted in the field of television and broadcasting, we have no assurance that similar legislation will not be passed for newspapers? There you are, democracy is deprived of its true meaning.

Those who like so often to observe what happens in the British parliament in London, their homeland, have probably noticed that independentist or separatist members from Wales and Scotland have the right to sit in that house and that they benefit from the freedom of speech granted to all through mass media. They are allowed to exercise their right of speech. But, today, the ground is being prepared to interfere for the first time with freedom of speech.

Let us take a specific example. In 1942, the Canadian government organized a plebiscite asking the Canadian people whether or not it was in favour of conscription. Now, if the government had said: We are having conscription and those who are against it are against national unity, could we say that Quebec, were 95 per cent of the people voted against conscription, would have been denied the right to express its view over the Canadian radio and television networks because that would have been contrary to Canadian unity and because someone had decreed that it was contrary to Canadian unity?

Mr. Chairman, I ask the members of the New Democratic party to think about that. A while ago, I heard the hon. member for Hochelaga (Mr. Pelletier) go over the ideas expressed by the hon. member for Burnaby-Richmond (Mr. Prittie).

In his amendment, the hon. member for Burnaby-Richmond mentions Canadian unity. The hon. member for Hochelaga did not use the same expression. He said: Canadian solidarity. That is the term he used, and I was struck by it.

I am ready to acknowledge my solidarity with the whole Canadian people, from the Atlantic to the shores of the Pacific. But Canadian unity means to be one, to be part of the same group. What is meant by this oneness? Is it oneness of spirit? Does it include unity of religion? Does it include unity of political views? What does it mean?

The hon. member for Hochelaga speaks of solidarity and I am ready to make common cause with everybody.

I think that the hon. member for Burnaby-Richmond, as well as the hon. member for York South (Mr. Lewis), were referring to subclause (g) (iv) where we can read:

—contribute to the development of national unity—

To that I would agree.

The New Democratic party has included in its platform the theory of two nations. The Conservative party as well as the Liberal party, through its leader the right hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Pearson), have accepted the theory of two nations: the French-Canadian nation and the English-Canadian nation. Unity within each nation. Canadian unity comes from the unity between each nation. Canadian unity comes from the unity between two nations; it is then an international unity. That is not the same thing.

• (12:10 p.m.)

Then a term has been used here and I wonder if the hon. member for Burnaby-Richmond really thought about it when drafting his amendment. But I think that it is badly drafted and that he did not realize all the implications of his amendment.

I heard a while ago the hon. member for York South state that Canadian television should not be prejudicial to Canadian interests. Well, Mr. Chairman, I am firmly and sincerely convinced that when I am advocating unity in Quebec, I am not prejudicial to the interests of Canada. On the contrary, I think that it is in the best interests of Canada that Quebec should be independent. But who is going to decide that? Is it the C.B.C.? Is it the Secretary of State (Miss LaMarsh)?

Mr. Chairman, one can realize that such an amendment is senseless. I agree that subclause (g)(iv) could be deleted, because I feel that it does not mean much.

When one refers to national unity, the meaning to me is French-Canadian unity, but there is an English-Canadian unity too. This is the general principle already accepted by N.D.P., Liberal and Conservative members, in fact by all the members in the house: there are two nations in Canada. Since there are two nations in Canada, we must therefore speak of international unity or unity between the two nations. Nobody can deny that.

Though the subclause is somewhat meaningless, I believe it would be better to take it out altogether, as we cannot leave with the C.B.C. or the hon. Secretary of State the decision of saying what is for the sake of national unity or against it. It would be too large a responsibility for the C.B.C.

I am categorically and squarely opposed to the amendment of the New Democratic party for the reasons I have mentioned and I will say this: If you try to deprive the independentists of the democratic means they have, you will force them to resort to other methods.

Today, you can at least say that we are promoting our ideas in a democratic calm and peaceful way without resorting to violence or other similar means. Why? Because we realize that democratic means are more practical and more normal in this 20th century; but if you try to deprive us of those means, you will be the first responsible within this parliament if the independentists resort to more violent means. Why seek this? Think of your amendment, gentlemen, and you will be the first to vote against it. Of that I am sure.

[English]

Mr. Cowan: Mr. Chairman, in commenting on the amendment of the hon. member for Burnaby-Richmond I should like to say that I support it wholeheartedly on the ground that if it is good for the publicly owned sector of the television and radio world of Canada to be promoting national unity, it should also be good to have the privately owned sector of the television and radio world supporting the same idea. I agree 100 per cent with the hon. member for York South when he points out that one cannot move to delete the phrase, "contribute to the development of national unity", which appears in paragraph (g) of clause 2, without being accused of hatred and wanting to tear the nation apart which is something like opposing motherhood, although I know that many members of the N.D.P. do oppose motherhood by their favouritism toward abortion. No one would think of bringing in an amendment to remove this phrase from paragraph (g) (iv).

It would be interesting to many members of the house, I am certain, to ascertain or learn whether the hon. member for Hochelaga, since he does not believe that this part of paragraph (g) should be extended to paragraph (d), is thinking of moving that subparagraph (iv) of paragraph (g) be removed. I do believe that the private sector and the public sector should be on the same footing. I believe the hon. member for York South when speaking expressed wonder concerning why this section appeared only in the publicly owned sector of the act and not in the privately owned sector. I should like to remind members of the house that it is only the C.B.C., the publicly owned section of the radio and television world in Canada, which put von Thadden on a national network. Do you think that that contributed to national unity in this country? It was only the C.B.C. that had Lincoln Rockwell on a program of their section of the radio and television world.

Perhaps the cabinet has come to the conclusion that it should put a rule in here that would help control the nationally owned section of the television and radio world and is a little fearful of extending that same authority to the privately owned sector. But, bear in mind that the privately owned sector up to date has not caused the offence to those who are strongly in favour of national unity that the C.B.C. has caused in the past. The amendment that the hon. member for Burnaby-Richmond has moved is justified completely by the fact that the amendment is based on paragraph (g) (iv). If it is good in paragraph (g) (iv) it will also be good in paragraph (d). I favour wholeheartedly its acceptance by the parliament of Canada.

Of course there are many people in this country who when they start talking about national unity, think of only one narrow phase of the question. I would state that in my opinion the hon. member for Lapointe is a perfect example of those who believe that national unity can spread only one way. I should like to ask what control the cabinet is considering placing on the radio and television world of Canada with regard to discussions based on statements made by Ted Watkins, the celebrated football player for Hamilton who now lives in Burlington. I sympathize with Ted Watkins in the comments he has made. I believe him when he says that there is as much discrimination here, although it may not be as blatant, as there is in the United States. Are steps to be taken to endeavour to bring together in national unity those two races, for one of which Ted Watkins is a very able spokesman and a voluble exponent.

In today's newspapers we read about the police chasing the Indians down around Sept Îles for having shot some caribou in the woods in order that they may feed their young. Are we to take steps to see that we extend the hand of national unity to those of the Indian race, or are we to chuck them into jail when they exercise their God given right to take food when they see it in the woods, no matter what time of year. They not only have a God given right to that; they have treaties signed by Queen Victoria which endorse it.

Now, referring to an angle of national unity that people do not seem to pay too much attention to, because national unity does exist in a marvellous way, I wish that the relationship between the Jewish race and the Anglo-Saxon as it is shown in Canada existed throughout all the various sectors of this dominion. I happen to have as a next door neighbour in the Old Mill Towers, which by the way has a community antenna television service which does not require a licence, my good friend Hon. Keiller MacKay, a former member of the Ontario supreme court and former lieutenant governor of Ontario. He made many, many right rulings while he was on the bench, which have proven to be pinnacles in the field of law.

The one ruling for which Hon. Keiller MacKay is given the most credit related to the regulation which stated that no one could sell property if that property was registered in the municipality of East York as not to be sold to Jews. He struck that regulation from the books of Ontario and stated that it was discrimination. It certainly did not contribute to national unity. Now, I say that if this clause—

• (12:20 p.m.)

Miss LaMarsh: Mr. Chairman, I hate to keep interrupting the hon. member but on a point of order—

The Chairman: Order, please.

Miss LaMarsh: Mr. Chairman, I hate to interrupt the hon. member but it is obvious that what he is trying to do is filibuster, and he is doing extremely well now.

Mr. Cowan: Mr. Chairman, no hon. member may impute motives to others.

Mr. Grégoire: You have no right to say that.

Miss LaMarsh: I should like to point out that it costs some $75,000 per day for parliament to sit, and much of this time has been taken up by the hon. member. No matter what I may think of his contribution, I could have no objection under the rules, provided he obeys the rules and sticks to the subject.

Mr. Cowan: Are you giving me a lecture? How much is the charge?

Miss LaMarsh: I think in the haunted corridors of his mind something said by some members here trying to get on with the nation's business might somehow find some reflection. We have agreed, and we could not do otherwise because of the rules of the house, that what we are saying must have something to do with the point we are discussing. We are dealing with a very clear amendment and there is no doubt that the hon. member has gone as far afield as he dares. He has not today brought any Spanish kings into the discussion, but I suppose if we do not bring him back to the point he will do that soon.

Mr. Cowan: He will.

Miss LaMarsh: If I cannot do anything else to bring the hon. member to the point, I have taken the precaution of putting in this envelope the sum of $5.48, which is the per capita cost of C.B.C. radio and television for every man, woman and child in Canada. If the hon. member will undertake neither to listen to nor watch C.B.C. radio or television for a year from this date, and to shut up about it, I will be glad to send him this money.

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: On a point of order, Mr. Chairman.

I feel the Secretary of State had no right to make those remarks. Under standing orders, we are allowed to look fully into pieces of legislation brought before the house. On the other hand, if those measures are badly drafted, the Secretary of State is to blame, and then we have the right to discuss the matter.

I readily admit that the Secretary of State is anxious to take her leave in order to work for the forthcoming Liberal convention.

However, she has no right to silence the members who wish to speak to this legislation. She has no right to enforce a dictatorship or censorship, and I strongly object to her last remarks. She cannot silence the members, because they have some rights that nobody should attempt to take away from them.

[English]

Miss LaMarsh: Here is your money.

Mr. Cowan: Mr. Chairman, will you ask for an apology from the hon. member for her imputation of motives.

Mr. Grégoire: The minister is offering me $5.

Miss LaMarsh: Oh, not you.

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: He was offered $5.48 to keep quiet, but since I represent 70,000 constituents, is the minister ready to pay me 70,000 times $5.48?

[English]

An hon. Member: You have an exaggerated sense of importance, Gilles.

The Chairman: Order, please. I should point out to the committee that the question we are now discussing is the contribution which the C.B.C. can make to national unity, not national unity itself. I hope that the committee, in order to get its work done, will confine remarks to the question now before it. It seems repetitious for me to say again that when the committee agreed the other day to discuss clause 2, paragraph by paragraph, there was inherent in that agreement the understanding that hon. members would confine their remarks to the paragraph under discussion. I hope all hon. members will do so.

Mr. Cowan: Mr. Chairman, I have already asked you whether you are going to ask for an apology—

Mr. Churchill: Mr. Chairman, I rise on a question of privilege. Have you not something more serious to consider? Is it not a rule as well as the custom of the house that bribery shall not be used in order to influence the attitude or the vote of an hon. member in this house We have had a blatant exhibition of an attempt at bribery today in connection with the hon. member for York-Humber, as proposed by the minister.

Mr. Douglas: And furthermore the amount offered is too high.

Miss LaMarsh: It seems that the hon. member for Lapointe wants 70,000 times that much. We know what he is, except his price is higher.

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, on a question of privilege.

I took care to specify that I was asking for 70,000 times $5.48 because I represent 70,000 voters and I will make it my duty to turn it over to them because I am thinking of my voters whereas what the Secretary of State is thinking of is the Liberal convention that will be held soon.

[English]

Mr. Cowan: Mr. Chairman, I have already asked you for a ruling on the action of a member of this house in imputing motives to another member of the house who is a duly and properly elected member here. I do believe a ruling should be made on that point. I am not filibustering this bill; I am discussing the amendment introduced by the hon. member for Burnaby-Richmond.

The Chairman: I am sure the hon. member for York-Humber is well aware of the very old rule of this chamber that one member is not permitted to impute motives to another, but I am sure there was no intention on the part of the Secretary of State to do that. Perhaps the hon. member will now proceed with his remarks and confine them to clause 2 (d) and the amendment thereto.

Mr. Cowan: Does the hon. member of Niagara Falls know the rule?

Miss LaMarsh: Mr. Speaker, I should like to say that if it is improper to suggest that somebody is filibustering, I would be happy to comply with the rules of the house and withdraw, if you suggest that is the proper thing to do.

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, I rise on a point of order.

As was indicated by the hon. member for Winnipeg South Centre (Mr. Churchill), under our rules, we are not permitted to offer a bribe to someone to keep him quiet. However, as was witnessed by several members, the hon. Secretary of State offered money to the hon. member for York-Humber, who accepted it. You, Mr. Chairman, have been a witness to this and I say that it is contrary to our rules.

I wonder what means the house will use to prevent such action contrary to the rules of the house? There are so many witnesses that it could not go unnoticed. That is why, as a member, I think it is my duty to charge openly the hon. Secretary of State with having offered a bribe to the hon. member to keep him quiet.

Since the bribe offered by the Secretary of State contained the stated stipulation that the hon. member for York-Humber would not utter another word, should he take part in the debate, we would have to come to the conclusion that he did not comply with the terms of the agreement.

Mr. Chairman, I think that this problem should be settled first.

[English]

Miss LaMarsh: I know that the hon. member for Lapointe has been closely attending this debate and has been in the house almost from the beginning. He must have heard the hon. member for York-Humber complain bitterly to the chamber the other day when someone, I think a member of the N.D.P., suggested he turn off the set or change the channel. He complained bitterly that he could do that, but his taxes still went on. All I have done is offer to return to him from my pocket, openly, the amount of taxes which he is out of pocket now.

Mr. Grégoire: That is still a bribe.

Miss LaMarsh: He should no longer be concerned for those of us here trying to do the people's business. Even though he has not been filibustering for 13 days both in and out of the committee, this non-filibustering could not be much more effective in stopping the $75,000 per day business for the people, even if it were in fact that prohibited filibustering. I suggest that all I have done is try to speed ahead the business of the people. I cannot go back to the people and ask them to refund the $5.48 of his taxes from the $18,000 he gets, some of it for being in the house attending to business. I don't know how much his taxes are, and we all know it is part of the law of the land that I cannot even inquire, but I do not want him to be out of pocket.

It should be remembered that I invited him to take this money with a couple of stipulations, that he neither listen to nor watch C.B.C. for a year.

An hon. Member: Or talk about it.

• (12:30 p.m.)

Miss LaMarsh: We will have to have some sort of policing, I suppose, since he has accepted that invitation and my generous return to him of this portion of his tax money. I know he will be happy to sit here. I do not care how he votes. No one in the country cares how he votes.

Mr. Cowan: The people of York-Humber do.

Miss LaMarsh: Let him do what he wants in voting but let us get on with the business of the country.

The Chairman: Order, please. I think it would serve the interests of the committee better if we were to get along with the business before the committee.

Mr. Cowan: Taking my cue from your non-action, Mr. Chairman, with regard to a ruling on the imputation of motives and the question of bribery, I am offering a quarter to the Secretary of State for her to shut up, because that is all the contribution she has made to the debate is worth. To get around the amendment of the hon. member for Burnaby-Richmond—

Mr. Knowles: How those Liberals love each other.

Mr. Cowan: —I support it 100 per cent and I sincerely hope it will be carried by an overwhelming majority. If we should do what we can to develop national unity as set out in subclause (g) (iv), it should be set out for the private sector as well in subclause (d). Having said that, the Secretary of State is welcome, if she wishes, to come and get $5.48, if that is what is in this blank envelope, as I have not kept quiet.

The Chairman: Is the committee ready for the question?

Some hon. Members: Question.

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, before taking the vote, I should like to quote standing order 79 which reads as follows:

> The offer of any money or other advantage to any member of this House, for the promoting of any matter whatsoever depending or to be transacted in Parliament, is a high crime and misdemeanour, and tends to the subversion of the constitution.

Mr. Chairman, you have just witnessed a "high crime and misdemeanor". Is the house going to do something about it?

There is talk of subversion of the constitution. I think that the chairman of the committee of the whole of the House of Commons, who has been a witness to this crime should step in.

That is why, Mr. Chairman, I am awaiting your ruling on this subject.

[English]

Some hon. Members: Question.

The Chairman: The hon. member for York-Scarborough.

Mr. Winch: Don't carry on this stupid debate. Let us have the question.

Mr. Stanbury: Mr. Chairman, I hate to change the subject but I want to make some remarks about the amendment.

Mr. Cowan: You are not changing the subject. I was talking about the amendment.

Mr. Stanbury: I am very sympathetic with the point of view put forward by the broadcasting critic for the Conservative party, the hon. member for Royal, or the man I understood to be the broadcasting critic for that party. Therefore I am reluctant to make any contribution to this debate. However, I feel that the hon. member for York South has made a remarkable suggestion in saying that the hon. member for Hochelaga showed some lack of logic in his remarks.

In spite of all the respect that I hold for the hon. member for Burnaby-Richmond and for the contribution he has made to the formulation of this bill, I must say that I find no more logic in the suggestion that although a reference to national unity in this clause is entirely uncalled for and undesirable it should be extended to the whole broadcasting system.

I should like to state the situation as I see it, very briefly. Parliament should not in a statute direct a news medium, either broadcasting or print, as to its editorial opinions. I should think the same criticism might be directed to the amendment before us as was directed yesterday to the amendment put forward by the hon. member for Red Deer. In another way this might be considered a restriction on freedom. In fact, we in parliament would be directing the broadcasters of Canada to take a certain editorial line.

I do not think that would be the intention of the New Democratic party but it seems to me that would be the effect of this amendment. I suggest that the hon. member for Lapointe is quite correct in suggesting that his point of view, as repugnant as it is to all the rest of us in this house, is one that should be heard in Canada over the broadcasting media.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Stanbury: I suggest that the words in subclause (d) referring to the expression of conflicting views on matters of public controversy should be read again by the proposers of this amendment. It is certainly in the interest of Canadian unity that all points of view be expressed and that the general direction to the regulatory authority, which after all is what subclause (d) is, should make provision for that wide expression of conflicting points of view.

In my estimation, non-government media should not be directed in the kind of editorial policy they should pursue. On the other hand, parliament many years ago established a vehicle for the expression of public policy in broadcasting. That vehicle is our public corporation, the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation. One of the very reasons for its existence is the development and nurturing of national unity.

While we in this parliament do not want to direct the editorial opinions of the owners of other news media we have the right, on behalf of the owners of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, to decide a basic factor of that corporation's policy. That is why in the mandate of the national broadcasting service we give it some direction in subclause (g). We give it the direction that we feel is appropriate on behalf of the people of Canada, the owners of that corporation, for the corporation to follow as, in the words of Right Hon. R. B. Bennett, the agency by which national consciousness may be fostered and sustained and national unity still further strengthened. I appreciate the motivation behind this amendment but it seems to me not only undesirable but contrary to the principles of free expression and the basic purpose, the very raison d'être, of our public broadcasting service.

The Chairman: Is the committee ready for the question?

Mr. MacDonald (Prince): Mr. Chairman, listening to the arguments back and forth with respect to the amendment proposed by the hon. member for Burnaby-Richmond, I must admit that I have become more and more disturbed at the language we are attempting to insert in this subclause and the language which is found a little farther on in the bill regarding the definition of the Canadian broadcasting system. I find it difficult as well to accept as being reasonable or sound the logic that advanced by the hon. member for Hochelaga and in the remarks of the hon. member for York-Scarborough.

• (12:40 p.m.)

It does seem to me that we are faced with the problem of deciding, not just for one segment of the broadcasting industry but for the industry as a whole, whether or not we shall give it certain direction in terms of the programming limits which should be applied to the industry. I suppose every time a new act is drafted, particularly in an area of such vital concern as broadcasting, we are always caught up with the great fixation of the moment, and I suppose that explains in very large measure why it has been found necessary by the government to include that phrase "national unity" in this bill.

National unity in the year 1968 is a great golden touchstone. Everyone wants to be in favour of national unity simply because we have become profoundly disturbed about the future of this country and about the viability of something as important to our country as national unity. We are attempting to decide whether and how we shall apply this gentle directive to the broadcasting industry, whether it shall apply, as the hon. member for York-Scarborough suggests, just to the area of the public broadcasting system or whether, as the hon. member for Burnaby-Richmond suggests, it should apply to the whole of the broadcasting industry.

I wonder whether the government has given sufficient thought to the insertion of this phrase in the bill because it seems to me that we have treasured in this country over the past 30 years the establishment of something that was very unique and important—a public broadcasting system, not a state broadcasting system. When we begin to move into areas such as those covered by the amendments proposed yesterday in the matter of national unity, we are in effect moving away from the concept of public broadcasting toward the idea of state broadcasting whereby the broadcasting system of the country becomes an extension of the state.

I feel this is not only a very dangerous direction for our country to take but also a very bad one for the broadcasting industry. While it may seem to members of the house at this time that there is nothing more important to any individual in this country than national unity, let me suggest in all humility that I think there is. I think that the individuals who make up a society are always more important. It may well be that there will be more important things in the future, even to Canadians, than national unity and that international understanding and the kind of relationships that will undoubtedly have to be established will have priority over national unity.

However, speaking more specifically on the amendment and on what is included in the bill, I think there is an even more insidious problem than the one I have mentioned. The amendment proposed by the hon. member for Burnaby-Richmond suggests the insertion of the words "and contribute to Canadian unity". I think we are reasonably certain of what we mean by Canadian unity, but the phrase contained in paragraph (g) (iv) uses the words "to the development of national unity". There is a subtle difference between the phrase "Canadian unity" and the phrase "national unity". Anyone who has studied the various epithets which have been thrown back and forth about the word "nation" and the so-called "two nations" or "deux nations" concept which has resulted in differences in interpretation, will realize that there is a hidden danger in the phrase "national unity" used in the bill. There is a possibility that it might be interpreted to mean the very opposite of what we are trying to achieve. It could mean the development of more than one national unity such as an English national unity and a French national unity or even various other forms of national unity such as a native Indian national unity. I do not think that is what is meant by the drafters of the bill, but certainly this rather general phrase is open to various interpretations.

If there is one other quality contained in the amendment proposed by the hon. member for Burnaby-Richmond it is the fact that he is very specific. He is not just using the term "national unity" but rather speaks about Canadian unity which encompasses the whole host of different ethnic, racial or linguistic groups that make up this country. In argument against the suggestion of the hon. member for Hochelaga who advanced the opinion that neither phrase is very good but at least "national unity" is better than "Canadian unity" I would make this point. If, for the sake of expediency, we have to include some reference to unity in the legislation it seems to me more reasonable that we should refer to Canadian unity and steer clear of any ambiguity or difficulty of understanding which may arise with a term such as "national unity" which I think may open up the danger of some misunderstanding in future interpretations of this bill.

Frankly, I am not at all happy with the fact that we have to be preoccupied with what I think are the expediencies of the moment, but since we are faced with the bogey of division and separatism in our country today I suppose we have to nod in that direction. But I think we must be very careful not to direct the energies which have been used in this country through the years to establish an independent and public broadcasting system to the extent of making the broadcasting system of this country simply an extension or an arm of the state or of the government.

Mr. Prittie: I agree with almost everything the hon. member for Prince said. He has shown the futility of using this type of phraseology in the legislation. I will only say to the minister that if she will indicate that the reference to national unity will be withdrawn from subclause (g) (iv) I will be willing to ask the committee for permission to withdraw the amendment to subclause 2 (d).

[Translation]

Mr. Choquette: Mr. Chairman, I have a few remarks to make, having consulted with the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Pepin), who has his L.L.D. and with whom I went to university, although he had the honour of completing his education before I did.

I should like to point out that the wording used in this paragraph (d) of clause 2 is of great concern to me, for if I remember rightly—I do not know whether the hon. member for Lapointe (Mr. Grégoire) remembers, for he was not as studious as we were—we were taught—

Mr. Grégoire: I may not have taken as much time as the hon. member for Lotbinière to get through with my four years as a law student. Perhaps it is on that account—

Mr. Choquette: Agreed, Mr. Chairman, but I was serious enough about my studies that I was admitted to the Quebec bar.

Mr. Grégoire: It is because in the province of Quebec, there is a saying that "law leads to everything so long as one gets out of it."

[Mr. MacDonald (Prince).]

An hon. Member: Before getting out of it, one must have got into it all the same.

The Chairman: Order.

Mr. Choquette: Mr. Chairman, we have been taught that there are some imperative legislation, prohibitory or penal legislation, perhaps also optional legislation.

I have never heard about suggestive legislation. Now the following can be read in the bill:

—that the programming provided by the Canadian broadcasting system should be—

"should be" means that it is suggested to broadcasters that they should provide a programming, in accordance with paragraph (d) and in case their programming does not meet the requirements of the act, there is no recourse against broadcasters, since they could always retort before the courts that the word "should be" does not make it mandatory.

• (12:50 p.m.)

Perhaps the idea is better expressed in the English version by the words "should be". However, both versions are official, and when we appear before a French-speaking judge to try to prove that our broadcasters have not provided programming in keeping with the criterions established in this paragraph, then the broadcaster is given full opportunity to exonerate himself by saying: Gentlemen, this is not an obligation; it is simply suggested to us that we provide this programming, and we are not bound to this bylaw, since this is an innovation. In other words, this legislation is suggestive and not imperative or obligatory.

I wonder, therefore, whether this text could not be submitted again to the legal counsellors of the department, so that they may find a more appropriate wording which will show the broadcasters that this is an obligation and not a simple suggestion.

Before going to the parliamentary restaurant, Mr. Chairman, I should like to make an observation on what is called national unity.

Someone said that the member for Hochelaga (Mr. Pelletier) had used the term solidarity. Indeed, I think the expression was used by the premier of Quebec, Daniel Johnson, who also spoke of Canadian solidarity, when he commented on the bill now under study. In fact, Mr. Johnson said that his government toyed with the idea, with the intention of setting up a Quebec broadcasting corporation. This seems to us to be absolutely illogical and unfeasible.

We agree on maintaining the C.B.C.; we want one corporation from sea to sea.

I wish to repeat what I said, Mr. Chairman. The only way to create this Canadian solidarity—call it national unity, binational or Canadian interpendence, it does not matter—for Canadians to agree, to have an atmosphere of sympathy among us, an atmosphere of solidarity so that French sounds become familiar to all Canadians just as English sounds are familiar to all Quebeckers.

In certain areas of the country you can simply ask people "What time is it?"—(Quelle heure est-il)—and for those people it might as well be Chinese or Japanese. In fact I am sure that if you ask the member for Winnipeg South Centre (Mr. Churchill): "On what street am I?" he will be aghast because French sounds for him are just as foreign as Arab sounds.

And that is the trouble with Canadians if I may say so, Mr. Chairman. It is essential that the French language should penetrate everywhere in Canada.

[English]

The Chairman: Order, please. I recognize the import of the remarks the hon. member is making but I think he is going a little far afield. The question before the committee is the amendment to 2 (d).

[Translation]

Mr. Choquette: In conclusion, Mr. Chairman, I say this: If we really want to establish programming on the basis of national unity or Canadian solidarity, the C.B.C. must open stations which will make it possible for the French language to be broadcast everywhere in Canada. Only then, shall we really reach our objective, for I am convinced that the hon. member for York-Humber belongs to a very small minority and, furthermore, that the French fact is considered as a Canadian asset. In fact, the new generation of English-speaking Canadians seem proud of the fact that the best way to distinguish ourselves from the American people is to promote and extend the French language in Canada.

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, I should like to put a simple question to the mover of this amendment.

When the hon. member for Burnaby-Richmond wants to insert:

—should contribute to the Canadian solidarity—

—does he mean that any supporter of the Quebec independent movement or any thought regarding that movement should be banned in the broadcasting by C.B.C. and the private stations?

[English]

Mr. Prittie: I would not want to leave to the hon. member entirely the definition of Canadian unity. The hon. member for York South and I have suggested that if the principle which is being talked of is to be in the bill it should be included in 2 (d) because that subclause provides that broadcasters should afford reasonable opportunity for those who wish to express conflicting views on matters of public controversy. The hon. member obviously espouses views which conflict with the views of others on matters of public controversy; the same is true for Premier Johnson and René Levesque. Those types of programs should be aired, and broadcasters are charged to do precisely that.

The Chairman: Is the committee ready for the question?

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: In view of the reply of the hon. member for Burnaby-Richmond, I should like to point out that if it is the responsibility of the public broadcasting system to contribute to national unity, to Canadian unity, private stations should also do their part. Thus, it would mean that broadcasting on both the public and the private network would be forbidden to those who do not contribute to Canadian unity, as the independentists.

In another paragraph apparently the broadcasting of matters of public controversy, is allowed. Besides, if "public controversy" is an indefinite expression, it is different with the amendment of the hon. member for Burnaby-Richmond who wants to ban broadcasting of specific matters, namely matters which would not contribute to Canadian unity or which would go against what is called Canadian unity.

The term "public controversy" is very broad but the amendment tends to exclude a specific point from the general terminology used. In doing that, a very specific point is excluded from the field of general controversy, that is everything that would not contribute to Canadian unity. That is what is implied by saying that programming should contribute to Canadian unity. Now, when independentists speaking on the C.B.C. or on private networks promote Quebec independence instead of Canadian unity it is claimed that this is indulging in "public controversy". From that moment on, this goes against the amendment of the hon. member who should realize the situation.

[English]

Mr. Prittie: Mr. Chairman, since clause 3 deals with definitions, perhaps the drafters of the bill might redraft that clause to include a definition of Canadian unity. That might clear up the hon. member's argument.

Mr. Rapp: One o'clock.

The Chairman: Order, please. Since it is one o'clock I do now leave the chair.

At one o'clock the committee took recess.

AFTER RECESS

The committee resumed at 2.30 p.m.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order. When the committee rose at one o'clock it was considering clause 2 (d) and the amendment thereto.

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, I think that at this point there is only one thing to do if the Secretary of State wants the discussion to close as rapidly as possible. There is talk of national unity and Canadian unity. It seems to me that we could now considerably accelerate the business of the house if the Secretary of State would give us a definition of what national unity is. As soon as we have this definition, it may be possible to vote and end the discussion. Otherwise, we will be discussing for another week without knowing what is national unity, what is Canadian unity.

To my mind, Mr. Chairman, the only way to go ahead is for the hon. Secretary of State to give us the official definition of what she means by the words national unity. So I ask her to give us this definition right away.

[English]

Mr. Johnston: Mr. Chairman, I have been moved to speak in this debate by some of the remarks made this morning about national unity, the impossibility of defining it and the danger of leaving in the bill the suggestion that our entire broadcasting system should contribute to Canadian unity. I was particularly struck by the remarks of the hon. member for Prince who with his brilliant advocacy suggested semantic paralysis as the sole course of inaction possible for this institution at this time.

Language functions; communication is still possible. It functions because the majority of the people speaking a language, any language, basically understand what is meant by the words they use. While one can take a scholarly approach and argue fine points of linguistics or semantics, the world and the nation go on in spite of the intricacies of debate.

This institution depends on words, Mr. Chairman. If we lose our nerve in this matter we might as well go home. There is no bill that comes before us that could not be given the same kind of scholastic scrutiny which in the end result would paralyse us through our modern knowledge of language so that we could take no action. Fortunately, we do not use that approach to the large majority of the bills that come before us. But we do use it when we reach questions of value and abstract problems, and it then becomes too easy to lose our nerve.

I know that the hon. member for Prince is well aware of the companion developments that have gone on in a field he knows so well, morality. We are presented today with a new morality that again leads to paralysis. We no longer refer to ethics but to situational ethics, and again there are no values or guidelines or any firm ground on which to base important decisions in this field.

It is important, sir, to point out that national unity is being defined for us and it is being defined by the hon. member for Lapointe. Now that he has left the party with which he was formerly affiliated and has taken his position as an independent in this house he can no longer be as subtle as he could before. If this measure meets with the fervent opposition of the hon. member for Lapointe then we know that it does promote national unity. He tells us repeatedly that it is his task and function to destroy national unity in this country. Therefore he cannot be subtle now; he must see the danger to his position when it arises and react as he has been reacting today.

The hon. member for Burnaby-Richmond is right in his suggestion that his amendment to clause 2 (d) be accepted. The reputation of the hon. member for Burnaby-Richmond does not permit him to be devious in approaches to problems. He is the last member in this house I would want to accuse of being Machiavellian in his approach to any subject. However, I will admit that his approach in moving his worth-while amendment was somewhat left-handed in that it seemed to be his wish to saddle private broadcasting with what he saw to be a burden that is imposed upon the public broadcasting system. I am sure that when he commenced his remarks that is what he had in mind. What he might describe as a burden some of us might describe as a liberating clause which would make the whole broadcasting system more aware of one of its prime duties to the country.

• (2:40 p.m.)

I cannot conceive that the hon. member for Burnaby-Richmond moved this amendment to subclause (d) in order to remove the subsequent phrase in subclause (g) dealing with national unity. I feel, therefore, that the minister and the committee must reject out of hand the suggestion that his amendment now be withdrawn and I submit to the hon. member that he would be most unwise to press that it be withdrawn. I say this because his party has already been caught out once on a plan which would have contributed to the disunity so desired by the hon. member for Lapointe.

We are now being besieged by letters and cards sent to us from people across the country with regard to Bill C-186. I am sure we have all received a printed form on this subject. I do not know who printed the form or under whose auspices it was issued. Perhaps the hon. member for Burnaby-Richmond could tell us because I think he is closer to this sort of lobby than we are.

Looking through this form again after this morning's discussion I found the following description of Bill No. C-186:

> It would provoke widespread inter-union conflict, incite racial and cultural rivalries and disrupt national unity.

We may have difficulties over semantics and we may feel at times it is hard to move in the direction in which we should like to move. But are we to believe that we are impotent to support a concept which can be disrupted? I believe the hon. member for Burnaby-Richmond made a worth-while contribution in moving his amendment and I suggest to him in the light of the drive which is being made now to have Bill C-186 revoked that he permit his amendment to Bill C-163 to stand and allow the committee to vote on it.

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, may I ask once again the Secretary of State if she will be giving us the definition of "national unity" that we find in this bill? Is the Secretary of State in a position to give us this definition?

[English]

Miss LaMarsh: This is the kind of thing which I think each of us knows, though we may not know the words for it. I suppose that without being too facetious I might say that the hon. member, who has declared his own feelings about Canadian unity many times and has proclaimed his own position, should carefully enunciate what he stands for—and national unity is the direct opposite.

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, I should like to make another remark.

The hon. Secretary of State just said to me: This is the kind of thing for the definition of which I cannot find words, which means that the expression may mean something to a person and something else to another. If even the hon. Secretary of State, who sponsors this bill, cannot find a definition for it, this means that in the mind of the C.B.C.'s leaders or producers, there may be a definition altogether different from that in the mind of the hon. Secretary of State or of the hon. members. Indeed, should everybody be asked to give a definition of national unity, we would probably come out with twenty or so different definitions. That is why I am asking that, before we come to a vote on something, someone tells us who will be assigned the task to give a definition, for even the hon. Secretary of State cannot do it. In fact I think that is something extraordinary. While the hon. Secretary of State is unable to define the expression, she says: It means something, but I would not know what, I cannot find appropriate words for it. She cannot find words but she says: It is the opposite of what you are thinking.

Mr. Chairman, where is all this leading us? If even the sponsor of this bill is unable to give us a definition of an expression, what does that mean? Something will have to be done about it.

[English]

Some hon. Members: Question.

Amendment (Mr. Prittie) negatived: Yeas, 17; nays, 37.

Mr. Sherman: I appreciate the indulgence which the committee has shown me in the current debate on this clause. There are one or two further thoughts I should like to express in this area of discussion.

As I suggested more than a month ago I have an amendment I should like to move at this stage of our debate on this subclause; I shall come to it in a moment or two. Before apprising the committee of the substance of my amendment I should like to say, first of all, that I opposed the amendment just moved by the hon. member for Burnaby-Richmond because I do not believe that the admonition to attend to the responsibilities of preserving and safeguarding Canadian unity should be imposed on private entrepreneurs, people who are engaged in private undertakings supported by private risk capital. These strictures should be no more imposed on them than any other strictures or admonitions of any kind.

I believe the position taken by the chairmen of the broadcasting committee, the hon. member for York-Scarborough, and the hon. member for Hochelaga, is the correct one. No hon. member could in conscience argue that the charge to contribute to national unity should not be a responsibility of the national broadcasting service, nor could he in conscience argue that direction of this kind should be given to private operators in this or any other field. The point of difference has been articulated by the hon. member for York-Scarborough. The point is that the national service is owned by all of us and as such has a responsibility to serve the national good.

• (2:50 p.m.)

If a private operator is militating against the national good, adding to the misfortunes of the country and its economy, our society and economy by themselves will take care of that problem. This has been demonstrated throughout our history. But in the case of a national public service the philosophic approach must be different. The national good is all-important and must be safeguarded. This is the reason I voted against the amendment proposed by the hon. member for Burnaby-Richmond.

I would be willing to dispense with my own amendment to subclause (d) if the committee in its wisdom should decide that the entire subclause be stricken from the bill. If this happens I will move my amendment as an amendment to subclause (g). My amendment reads that in subclause (d) of clause 2 the words "should provide reasonable opportunity for the expression of conflicting views on matters of public controversy," in lines 3, 4 and 5 be deleted and the following words be substituted therefor: "should be balanced in its treatment of matter of public concern." If adopted subclause (d) would then read:

> (d) the programming provided by the Canadian broadcasting system should be varied and comprehensive and should be balanced in its treatment of matters of public concern, and the programming provided by each broadcaster should be of high standard, using predominantly Canadian creative and other resources.

I intend to move this amendment at the end of my remarks but, as I say, I will be happy to withdraw it and move it as an amendment to subclause (g) should the minister and the committee decide that the legislation would be better if subclause (d) were struck from the bill.

I have stated my reasons for my concern about the balanced treatment of matters of public concern on two or three previous occasions this week and on two or three prior occasions, so I do not intend to subject the committee to further dissertation on those reasons. It was only within the past three or four days that I reached the conclusion that I should use the phrase "public concern" in my proposed amendment rather than "public controversy." After hearing the arguments advanced by the hon. member for Brandon-Souris, by my colleague from Winnipeg South Centre and by other hon. members I came to the conclusion that the term "public concern" would serve the purpose of my intent and my philosophy far better than the term "public controversy."

At this point I wish to refer again to something which was said most eloquently by my good friend and colleague, the hon. member for Prince. I am afraid he may come to the conclusion that I have an axe to grind with him, but this is not so. He and I are good friends and I hope will become better friends as our service in this chamber continues. However, I would like to discuss one or two points which he made on the subject of national purpose and unity and the fear and danger of stateism and state control of broadcasting.

The hon. member said, and I think he is right, that there may be some things more important to Canadians than national unity and that in the future we may have international connections and obligations which will outweigh purely national considerations. This is a valid prognosis of the direction in which many countries, including Canada, are moving. If this is the philosophy to which the hon. member subscribes, then I wish to ask him what he feels about the argument that the C.B.C. provides a valuable cultural and philosophical defence of our sovereignty on this continent. Many people outside this chamber have argued with me that the C.B.C. has a valuable role to perform as a platform for anti-American views. Because of our geographical position we are subjected to a steady flow of overt and covert American influence and propaganda. These people say the only defence we have to this is the C.B.C. and therefore it is justified in any quasi-official, anti-American view that it propounds.

I have always felt this to be a sterile reason for the existence of a national broadcasting service. The existence of an institution cannot be defended simply on the ground that it is opposing something. This is a barren, uninspiring and destructive philosophy. If this philosophy is given due consideration, where does the validity of the argument advanced by the hon. member for Prince come in concerning things more important to Canadians than national unity? His argument and the argument of those who feel that our national unity and sovereignty are at stake do not square with me. You cannot run with the hare and hunt with the hounds. Either Canadian national unity is important to Canadians or it is not. If it is not we do not need people to argue in favour of a C.B.C. approach which in public affairs shows has impressed some people for some considerable time as being anti-American.

• (3:00 p.m.)

I would also question my hon. friend's approach to the necessity for the use of the term and to the meaning of the term "national unity" as it appears in this clause of the bill. He has argued compellingly that the use of this term in this bill perhaps lends emphasis to a kind of bureaucratic state or big brother approach to our national affairs which would inhibit our basic freedom and be altogether undesirable so far as the development of the Canadian national personality is concerned. I think this is a valid argument to raise on one level of our national discussion. However, I do not believe it applies legitimately to this part of the legislation because I would point out to my hon. friend that this term is used in subclause (g) of the proposed legislation, which starts out by dealing with the national broadcasting service.

The hon. member suggested that paragraph (iv) of subclause (g), for example, which refers to national unit, is open to all kinds of interpretations because we could be talking about unity of the French nation or unity of the Indian nation. In the context of the wording of the legislation I suggest that that is not a valid point. We are talking about the national broadcasting service. We are not talking about the broadcasting service of the French nation or the Indian nation. It is obvious to anyone confronted with wording of this type that what we are talking about is the broadcasting service of the Canadian nation. So when we go on from talking about a national broadcasting service to the question of national unity, surely it follows that we are talking about the unity of the Canadian nation as a whole from coast to coast. Therefore it is on these grounds that I challenge the remarks of the hon. member for Prince in respect of this terminology.

I have one other point. I know that a good many members of this committee, and certainly the minister, are concerned about the lack of speed with which this legislation is being processed at this stage. I submit, however, that appeals to urgency and speed at this stage of our procedure are unacceptable to a great many of us in this chamber and to a great many Canadians at large. We have just returned from a month's recess. I do not think many of us were taking a holiday. We are all aware of the political work which must be done at home and in other parts of the country during a recess. But we were on recess and were not in this chamber. Now that we are in the chamber dealing with one of the most important pieces of legislation to come before us there is no reason that we should not scrutinize every word and every phrase for as long as we wish until we are entirely satisfied that this legislation is right.

The hon. lady suggested that parliament is costing the Canadian taxpayers $70,000 a day. I suggest to the hon. lady that the C.B.C. costs the Canadian taxpayers far more than that. The C.B.C. costs the Canadian taxpayers $143 million a year. The Canadian taxpayers are paying the $70,000 a day for parliament whether we are talking about broadcasting or about something else. In fact they were paying it when we were on recess last month.

Miss LaMarsh: No.

Mr. Stanbury: Mr. Chairman, would the hon. member permit a question? Would he not in fairness to the hon. lady admit that she was asking simply that we stay on the point and discuss broadcasting?

Mr. Sherman: I admire the manner in which the hon. lady has taken the initiative in framing this legislation and in piloting it thus far through the committee and the house. Therefore I concede the point in favour of the hon. lady.

My point, however, is that parliament has been charged with rushing through too much legislation. We have seen a perfect example in recent days in respect of the divorce bill. We have seen an example of how mistakes, errors, oversights and omissions can occur when we are asked to push through legislation of a far reaching nature in too brief a period of time. I know that in comparison with some other debates the broadcasting debate has been a lengthy one. But I am speaking in relative terms. Divorce, broadcasting philosophy, capital punishment, the unification of the armed forces and far reaching social issues of this kind demand close scrutiny and lengthy examination. A member of the other place recently found a glaring omission or oversight in the wording of the divorce legislation which to my knowledge was missed by all of us in this chamber.

Mr. McCleave: Not at all.

Mr. Sherman: Perhaps I stand corrected on that, but in any event it was not pointed out with such vigour that it was accepted in this chamber.

Mr. McCleave: It was pointed out by three members.

Mr. Sherman: But it was not pointed out with sufficient acceptability and vigour to make any difference in the final result of the legislation as adopted in this house. Now it has been pointed out by a member of the other place that an oversight, omission and weakness in the legislation exists, and so far as the Canadian public is concerned I dare suggest the view is that the other place has picked up a mistake made or an omission committed by the members of this chamber. I hope that in respect of legislation as important as this broadcasting legislation we will make no mistakes, will leave no stones unturned and will ensure that there are no omissions so that one year from now, two years from now or in the unlimited future we will know that we have a broadcasting system in this country which can stand the test of controversial criticism and such verbal explosions as have occurred from time to time in the last few years in so far as the national broadcasting service and parliament are concerned.

So I rise in defence of close, searching scrutiny of this legislation. I appeal to the hon. lady and to all hon. members to resist the temptation to deal with this matter with too much urgency and haste. We should make every effort to ensure that we come out of this debate with a viable piece of legislation that will be acceptable, rational and responsible and which does not contain glaring oversights and omissions.

These are the remarks which I wished to make at this stage, Mr. Chairman, in respect of this subclause. I am advised by a colleague in this chamber that a different amendment to this clause is contemplated and anticipated. In deference to the request of my colleague I will withhold formal movement of my amendment at this point. I have read it to the committee and perhaps in recent days have been outspoken in defence of the theory and philosophy contained therein.

• (3:10 p.m.)

Members of the committee know that what I am asking for is balanced treatment on matters of public concern so that all points of view are expressed and no one point of view is given expression and a platform to the detriment of any other. I have no way of knowing whether the amendment to be proposed by my colleague is going to call for the complete elimination of subclause (d), but in that case I would be in favour of that procedure. At a later stage of the debate when we reach consideration of subclause (g) I would then submit my formal amendment in relation to the balanced treatment of affairs of national and public concern.

Mr. Nowlan: Mr. Chairman, I thank my colleague, the hon. member for Winnipeg South, for deferring his amendment in respect of clause 2, subclause (d). In view of the fact that certain thoughts I expressed yesterday were misinterpreted I should like tc move an amendment to this part of the bill. I hope to allay the concern of some members on this side of the house and perhaps on the other side by removing the word "controversy" and substituting the word "concern". I think enough speeches have been made to indicate the different points of view held by hon. members. The minister has admitted that it is very difficult to draft legislation of this type. Without saying anything more I should like to present formally my amendment to clause 2 (d). I move that:

Clause 2(d) be deleted and the following substituted therefor:

"the programming provided by the Canadian broadcasting system should be varied and comprehensive and should provide a reasonable, balanced opportunity for the expression of differing views on matters of public concern, and the programming provided by each broadcaster should be of high standard using predominantly Canadian creative and other resources."

I have copies of this amendment in English. Having listened to the debate during the last two days it is my hope that the amendment will find favour among hon. members as an attempt to strike a balance and, hopefully, to meet the problem which concerns my friend, the hon. member for Winnipeg South. Perhaps his concern will again be expressed when we reach consideration of subclause (g) which relates to the national broadcasting service, the C.B.C.

My amendment provides in a general way some framework within which the council may interpret broadcasting policy. The hon. member for Lotbinière raised an interesting point this morning regarding the word "should" rather than "shall" or "may". I gather that the word "should" has been used because clause 2 does not direct that certain things be done but rather provides a term of reference to be followed by the new board or council.

Mr. Choquette: It would be in the preamble.

Mr. Nowlan: It would have the effect of a preamble. Without getting into an argument on semantics or the legalistic interpretation of the words "may", "shall", or "should", I hope this amendment in respect of the word "controversy" and a reasonable opportunity for the expression of differing views will find a favourable consensus in this committee.

Miss LaMarsh: Mr. Chairman, I am prepared on behalf of the government to accept this phraseology if it is satisfactory to the committee.

Mr. Churchill: Hear, hear. You are learning.

Miss LaMarsh: If you stayed out of the house I would learn faster.

Mr. Prittie: Mr. Chairman, I wonder whether the mover or the minister could explain the difference, because it is not apparent to me.

Miss LaMarsh: I think it is intended that the amendment should read "and should provide reasonable, balanced opportunity", not "a reasonable, balanced opportunity".

Mr. Douglas: Could we have a copy of the amendment?

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order, please. Does the mover agree that the word "a" be removed from the amendment submitted to the committee?

Mr. Nowlan: That is agreed, yes. In answer to the hon. member for Burnaby-Richmond, who has had a very real interest in this legislation, I should like to point out that this amendment attempts to provide a balancing effect in respect of the direction of programming. The word in the amendment is "balanced", but there is also a substitution of the word "concern" for "controversy". The phraseology is different. The amendment attempts to balance any direction from this parliament in relation to programming of the broadcasting system. I think the word "balanced" helps to do this.

Mr. Douglas: Mr. Chairman, perhaps you would give us a moment to look at this amendment. I do not think there is any great quarrel with the purpose the hon. member has in mind, but perhaps the minister should discuss it with her drafting officer. It says "and should provide a reasonable, balanced opportunity"—

Miss LaMarsh: The word "a" has been dropped.

Mr. Douglas: It should read "provide a reasonable and balanced opportunity", or, "provide a reasonably balanced opportunity". It looks like sloppy draftsmanship.

Miss LaMarsh: I have shown it to the law officers.

Mr. Nowlan: In answer to the hon. member for Burnaby-Coquitlam I must say that the initial draft presented to the minister conformed a little more to his suggestion. However, she has just stated that her law officers, for one reason or another, suggest this form. I must admit that I thought "a reasonable, balanced opportunity" was better.

Mr. Knowles: You should have stood pat.

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, before taking the vote, could you read the amendment in French?

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: I regret, but I do not have the French copy.

Mr. Grégoire: I have the English copy but I wonder whether I understand it well. Could you not read the amendment in French? I think it would be in order.

[English]

Mr. Churchill: Mr. Chairman, I must say in respect of the point of order just raised that it involves an unreasonable request. We have a very effective simultaneous translation system. An amendment may be read in French and I receive it translated into English. If the hon. member for Lapointe would act the way other people in this house do he would receive the translation of the English in French.

• (3:20 p.m.)

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, the hon. member for Winnipeg South Centre (Mr. Churchill) says that the simultaneous translation is the official translation.

We may wonder whether it is accurate enough. That is the reason why I ask the chairman whether he could not read us the official translation of the amendment.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: I can translate the amendment but it would not be the official translation. If the hon. member wants to wait, we will have it translated.

[English]

Mr. Churchill: This is an unnecessary delay.

Mr. Knowles: It is a more pleasant delay than some we have had.

Mr. Churchill: Are you referring to those caused by the New Democratic party?

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order, please. Would the committee agree that we go to the next subclause and have this amendment officially translated and read a little later?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

Mr. Churchill: Mr. Chairman, I think that is a rather ridiculous request. We have had exhortations from the minister to get on with the business. If this is established as a precedent Your Honour will be kept much longer in the chair than you are now, to your great disadvantage. The hon. member for Lapointe is fluent in both languages and understands perfectly well what is involved in the amendment. We should let it go at that.

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: I rise on a point of order, Mr. Chairman.

I shall point out to the hon. member of Winnipeg South Centre that I have never abused of that kind of request. I even think that it is the first time that I made such a request in five years. The reason for my doing so is that I am not sure as to the meaning of one or two words in that amendment. If I ask for its translation, it is because I have a serious reason and not only to hamper the debate.

[English]

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Actually the remarks made by the hon. member for Winnipeg South Centre are right. However, standing order 43 provides as follows:

> All motions shall be in writing, and seconded, before being debated or put from the Chair. When a motion is seconded, it shall be read in English and in French—

Mr. Nowlan: Mr. Chairman, although I do not know too much about the rule I think it refers to a motion. This is an amendment and it needs no seconder.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: I think it is an accepted rule of the house that motions or amendments should be submitted in both languages. That is the ruling I am making, although I do not have the actual authority that covers it. But even if it derives from nothing but precedent, that is what has been accepted by the house.

Mr. Leboe: I do not think there is such a rule, Mr. Chairman. I think it has been a practice of the house but it is not a rule.

Mr. Grégoire: Yes, it is standing order 43.

Mr. Leboe: What does standing order 43 say?

An hon. Member: That it shall be in English and in French.

Mr. MacDonald (Prince): Mr. Chairman, I should like to comment on the suggestion of the hon. member for Digby-Annapolis-Kings before we have the translation. I wonder whether there is not some redundancy in having the words "reasonable" and "balanced" together. I wonder whether the amendment would not read a little more effectively if the wording were "reasonable opportunity" rather than "reasonable, balanced opportunity." It seems to me that we are saying the same thing twice and thus making the amendment rather meaningless. I wonder whether the mover of the amendment would be willing to strike out the word "balanced" and thus make his amendment a little more clearcut.

Mr. Sherman: If that proposal is acceptable, Mr. Chairman, it will alter the wording of the amendment put forward by the hon. member for Digby-Annapolis-Kings. In that case I would put forward my own amendment which asks specifically for balanced treatment for matters of public concern.

Mr. Nowlan: Mr. Chairman, with all deference to my friend, the hon. member for Prince, I must say that both words together may leave something to be desired, as was pointed out by the hon. member for Burnaby-Coquitlam, and there may be no difference between what is balanced and what is reasonable. However, I think the two words "balanced" and "reasonable" cover both sides of the street.

Mr. Knowles: Mr. Chairman, may I ask one of the Conservative members to tell us what is meant by the word "balanced"? Does it mean the same amount of words on both sides or the same amount of time on both sides? Or what does it mean?

Mr. Churchill: It is Conservative view as opposed to an N.D.P. view. Then you get balance.

Mr. Schreyer: Mr. Chairman, while you are pondering your decision or simply waiting for the official translation into French I should like to pose a question to the hon. member for Winnipeg South. Judging by his last remarks the hon. member appears to find inadequate the amendment proposed by the hon. member for Digby-Annapolis-Kings. Apparently the hon. member feels that stating that there shall be balanced opportunity for the expression of conflicting views does not suffice and that there must be in effect a clear statement that there shall be balanced treatment. I simply put to him this question: If there is balanced opportunity, does not that logically translate into "balanced treatment"? Does the hon. member not feel that he is perhaps quibbling a bit?

Mr. Sherman: Mr. Chairman I think the hon. member for Springfield is imputing an interpretation or a philosophical stance to me that is incorrect. I am satisfied with the amendment moved by the hon. member for Digby-Annapolis-Kings. I in part make a concession, as the minister is making a concession and as various other members of the committee are making a concession, in order to achieve a consensus and a degree of unanimity on this subclause so that we may move along with the legislation. Had this amendment not been proposed, or had the minister said it was not acceptable to her, I would have held out for my amendment which is, I concede, perhaps stronger in a certain semantic sense than the one advanced by the hon. member for Digby-Annapolis-Kings. In my view the objective of the achievement of balance in the treatment of matters of public concern is important. The term "balanced" is important, and I am satisfied to make a concession in the area of rigid language and accept a slightly more general or looser form of wording provided that the term itself is contained in the clause.

• (3:30 p.m.)

This is the reason I accept the amendment suggested by the hon. member for Digby-Annapolis-Kings, and the hon. member for Springfield is incorrect in assuming that the amendment is not satisfactory to me.

Miss LaMarsh: Mr. Chairman, is the table preparing an amendment or is someone else preparing an amendment? What are we waiting for?

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: What is being prepared right now is the official French translation of the amendment submitted by the hon. member for Digby-Annapolis-Kings.

Mr. Nowlan: Mr. Chairman, I apologize for not having prepared the amendment in both languages. What led to my omission is that we have actually been using both languages here, that is with the help of the simultaneous interpretation, in discussing this clause for almost two days. There is not a word used in the amendment which I have proposed that has not been discussed, defined, dissected and debated in this chamber for the last two or three days. I apologize for the delay which results from the request of the hon. member for Lapointe. I was somewhat surprised by the request because in advancing this amendment I was only trying to expedite the proceedings by attempting to correlate the different viewpoints which have been expressed on this contentious subclause. If other words had been used, as suggested by the hon. member for Burnaby-Richmond, the situation would have been different. One wonders where the difference lies. The difference is only a subtle one of tone. I believe it is a difference in emphasis. As the hon. member for Winnipeg South suggested, the emphasis is on a reasonable opportunity being given for a balanced treatment, and different views exist on matters of public concern. Under my amendment there would still be opportunity to express different views, even if they did not meet the general consensus. This is why I proposed my amendment. In the future I will certainly attempt to present amendments in the two official languages, but in this case I do not know whether I could have found an official translator to do this for me during the noon hour.

Mr. Knowles: Mr. Chairman, with respect to the apology just made by the hon. member for Digby-Annapolis-Kings, may I point out to him that the rule does not require a member to submit an amendment in both languages. The rule merely requires that if requested the Chair must read it to the house or to the committee of the whole in both languages. It is a matter of courtesy for those who submit amendments to submit them in both languages, but it is not required. The requirement is on the Chair.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: How can the Chair do this without having the original text? The ruling applicable is contained in standing order 43 when the Speaker is in the chair and, according to standing order 59, the same ruling applies when the house is in committee. It is certainly proper to submit an amendment in both languages.

Some hon. Members: Oh, no.

Mr. Thomas (Middlesex West): Mr. Chairman, in view of the fact that it costs a great deal of money each day for parliament to function, could we not stand this subclause and go to another clause until the French translation is obtained?

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: As a matter of fact this was the suggestion made by the Chair, that we stand this subclause until we receive the official translation and that we go on to the next clause. However, there was not unanimous consent to the suggestion.

Mr. Olson: Mr. Chairman, I rise on a point of order with respect to the ruling because I think it might create a serious precedent. The precedent which will apparently be created is that no member of the house, whether English or French speaking, will be permitted to move an amendment in committee unless he submits it in writing in both languages. In my opinion this is contrary to the rules, practices and precedents of the house. It has been a matter of courtesy for members to prepare four or five copies of any amendment they intend to propose, one for each party. But there is no requirement that this be done. It is merely required that the amendment be handed to the chairman in writing in either official language, not in both languages. The reason I am apprehensive about this ruling is that if it is allowed to stand, hon. members who are not capable of preparing an amendment in both languages will be prevented from having it accepted by the Chair or presented to the committee.

No member of the committee has the right to demand that an amendment be presented to him in writing in one particular language. All he has the right to demand is that the amendment be read by the Chair, and when it is read by the Chair it is translated simultaneously into the other language. I have no objection to, and I think it is a good practice for, hon. members to present their amendments in writing in both languages for the sake of convenience. However, we now find ourselves in a situation where apparently a precedent is to be set that unless an amendment is presented to the chairman in writing in both languages it will not be accepted or presented to the committee. This will set a precedent for future procedure on amendments.

Mr. Pugh: Mr. Chairman, I agree entirely with the last speaker but I would point out one thing to Your Honour, namely that the official language in Canada is either English or French. When a member makes a speech in the house we do not have to wait for an official translation because we have simultaneous interpretation. The same situation applies to any amendments that are moved or any statements from the Chair. It has been the practice for a number of years now to ask questions in the house either in English or in French, and no one jumps up and asks for the speaker to put the question in the other official language. May I conclude by saying that there are two official languages in the house. If one language is used, whether in writing or in speech, surely that is enough.

• (3:40 p.m.)

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, on the point of order and before you make your ruling, I should like to point out to the hon. member who has just spoken, that it is not a matter of whether the speech of an hon. member should be officially translated a second time since there is no provision in our standing orders to that effect. It is not either, as was suggested by the hon. member for Medicine Hat (Mr. Olson), to oblige an hon. member to move a motion in both languages. Again, there is nothing on that matter in our standing orders.

However, standing order No. 43 states and I quote:

All motions shall be in writing and seconded, before being debated or put from the Chair.

It does not say in both languages. I continue:

When a motion is seconded, it shall be read in English and in French by Mr. Speaker if he be familiar with both languages; if not, Mr. Speaker shall read the motion in one language and direct the Clerk at the Table to read it in the other, before debate.

It is as simple as that, Mr. Chairman. The reason for that reference is the fact that when someone speaks, we are provided with simultaneous interpretation. But a motion is much more important than a speech. One may have a general idea of a speech without necessarily having a precise understanding of every word and every term. However, when the question is put on a motion or on an amendment, then, every word, every term has a definite and strict significance. That is why our standing orders state that:

When a motion is seconded, it shall be read in English and in French.

It might be argued that the Speaker is in the chair. Then, as you have so clearly shown, Mr. Chairman, standing order No. 59 will apply, and I quote:

The standing orders of the house shall be observed in the committees of the whole house—

We are indeed in the committee of the whole.

—so far as may be applicable, except the Standing Order as to the seconding of motions limiting—

So this means that in the committee of the whole, a seconder is not required for a motion. It is enough for a member to move it. That is the limitation. And I quote:

—limiting the number of times of speaking and the length of speeches.

There is nothing here contrary to clause 43:

When a motion is seconded, it shall be read in English and in French by Mr. Speaker.

The reason for this is very simple and I shall repeat it. It is that those who wrote the bills saw to it that the members be not required to be satisfied with a non-official or informal translation.

I do not wish to blame the interpreters. I know the problems of the work they have to do; it takes an expert and a professional to translate immediately at least the general line of thought of a speaker. But a translation that is exact, precise and official is not the same thing.

That is why those who laid down the standing orders saw to it that the members before voting would be supplied with the exact sense and the exact wording and that is why they wrote:

—it shall be read in English and in French by Mr. Speaker.

Not "or" in French, it is written:

—it shall be read in English and in French.

Mr. Chairman, the fact that we have been waiting for the official translation of this motion for the last 15 minutes shows they were right.

Mr. Choquette: The member presents the amendment to the chairman and it is up to the latter to translate it, it is not up to the member who moves it.

Mr. Grégoire: The member who moves the amendment is not required by the standing orders to translate it. That is admitted, as the member for Lotbinière mentioned. The mover of an amendment such as the member for Digby-Annapolis-Kings (Mr. Nowlan) is in no way required to translate it, he has moved it in one of the two languages and that is enough. It is up to the Speaker or the chairman of the committee of the whole to translate it. I recognize that the Speaker having to preside over the discussion with complete impartiality, is entitled to ask the assistance of the official translators.

This is quite normal and the Speaker or the chairman of the committees of the whole could not be asked to give an official translation, since they must be fair-minded. It is not up to either of them to make the translation.

That requirement of the legislator that the Speaker read a motion in French and in English is so fair and wise that on reading the English text of this motion, I find two phrases which have been mistranslated. Personally I would hesitate to translate them, because it is difficult to find the proper terms in French to convey their meaning.

For instance, are we going to say "opportunité balancée" for "balanced opportunity" and translate word for word? I know we have "balanced feeds" for livestock, but are we going to say "opportunité balancée"? Personally, I cannot translate the expression and I cannot blame our interpreters for not having found a translation forthwith.

Again, when we say "differing views", do we mean "vues différentes"? What is translation for then? The legislator has provided that when the official translation is asked for, the Speaker must give it. I find that quite in order. To my mind, the member for Medicine Hat must not object to it, because should a motion be written in French only, the English-speaking members may not understand it. But if they know French as my good friend for Medicine Hat does, they may not always understand and interpret it correctly.

That is why I suggest that the committee chairman has interpreted the standing orders properly, and I believe the point of order was not well taken.

[English]

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order, please. I am sure the committee will be happy to know that we have a French translation of the amendment moved by the hon. member for Digby-Annapolis-Kings.

An hon. Member: Is it official?

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: It is official.

[Translation]

That clause 2 (d) be deleted and the following substituted therefor as follows:

"the programming provided by the Canadian Broadcasting system should be varied and comprehensive and should provide reasonable, balanced opportunity for the expression of differing views on matters of public concern, and the programming provided by each broadcaster should be of high standard using predominantly Canadian creative and other resources;"

• (3:50 p.m.)

[English]

Is the committee ready for the question?

Mr. Patterson: On a point of order, Mr. Chairman. I wonder if you would be kind enough to render a decision on the question that has been raised, or to reserve the matter?

[Mr. Grégoire.]

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order, please. If the hon. member is rising on a point of order, there is no point of order because the French translation has been officially read.

Mr. Patterson: With respect, Mr. Chairman, I believe the point of order still exists because there is a possibility this matter may be gravely misunderstood. If the decision or ruling of Your Honour is maintained, without the matter being considered adequately, we shall face impossible situations in future. I respectfully suggest that the Chair reserve its ruling until Monday. In the meantime, consideration could be given to the matter.

Mr. Churchill: Mr. Chairman, my recollection of the remarks of the Chair earlier is that amendments must be presented in writing in both languages. If that is a correct recollection of what the chairman said, then it is to that that the objection is being raised. The objection is to what the chairman said. Unless the chairman alters that decision it will stand in the records for the guidance of future chairmen of committees. I think that the chairman must now clarify the situation.

If I have correctly quoted the chairman's statement and the situation is not clarified, respectfully, in that case, I should have to make an appeal to Mr. Speaker.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Because of the many ramifications of the decision I think, before any decision is finally made on the matter, there should be some consultation with Mr. Speaker. The matter is réservé. Is that agreed?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Shall the amendment carry?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Amendment (Mr. Nowlan) agreed to.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Shall the subclause as amended carry?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: The committee will now revert to subclause (c).

Miss LaMarsh: This paragraph was stood in view of the amendment moved to it by the hon. member for Edmonton-Strathcona. He asked me to look at it and see whether I might accept it. I have done that, Mr. Chairman, and have told him why I cannot accept it. I am sure he will want to say something further before other questions are put, and after he has said something I might make a contribution. I recall he did provide copies in both languages.

Mr. Nugent: Mr. Chairman, my amendment to paragraph (c) was to add between the words "expression" and "subject" in line 19 thereof as follows:

—and the right of Canadians to receive all broadcast programs available to them.

So that the amended clause would read as follows:

(c) all persons licensed to carry on broadcasting undertakings have a responsibility for programs they broadcast but the right to freedom of expression and the right of Canadians to receive all broadcast programs available to them subject only to generally applicable statutes and regulations is unquestioned.

My French being what it is I will not bother to read the French version, but it is available.

The reason behind my amendment is a simple one, and I did speak to it the other night. We want to be careful in this bill to preserve freedom of expression along with the duties of broadcasters. I therefore thought it appropriate to add these words. Having the right to freedom of expression, we should also have the right to freedom to receive the programs that are broadcast.

A similar amendment to mine had been moved by another hon. member which added the words "by any means whatsoever", but I thought this carried the concept too far. This would have left it open to the interpretion that there should be no interference in any way with any kind of cable distribution system or any other method of rebroadcasting or distributing programs. My amendment merely reserves the right to receive all programs. I believed that by removing those offensive words, which I thought went too far, my amendment would be acceptable.

The minister has indicated that she is not prepared to accept the amendment, and she has been kind enough to give some of her reasons. However, since there has been so much agitation and a fair amount of lobbying on this question, and so much has been made of the right of an individual who has a T.V. set to watch whatever programs he desires, I feel a refusal to accept this amendment would be the worst kind of censorship. In my opinion, the bill should specifically state that we want to preserve the right to receive all programs, in the same manner and to the same extent that we felt it necessary to include in this clause the right to freedom of expression.

If the minister does not want to accept the amendment, then I hope she will be kind enough to indicate her reasons and whether a variation of the amendment would be acceptable. In other words, Mr. Chairman, would I be fair if I were to ask the minister whether her objection is simply to the ideal of emphasizing the freedom to receive, or is it based on the fact that, as worded, the amendment is capable of an interpretation that would create difficulty for regulatory authorities in the control of cable distribution systems, and so on, and the solution of problems posed thereby? Perhaps the minister would say a few words about that.

Miss LaMarsh: Mr. Chairman, the objection I have to this amendment found support both from the Department of Justice and the Board of Broadcast Governors. In a general way, may I say that I do not think any of us believe there is or should be a restriction on the reception of programs that are received in the normal course. However, signals must come from a properly licensed station. For example, if a pirate station were set up outside the 12-mile limit, although the people might be able to receive its broadcasts, we would not want them to receive them unless the station were licensed. Being a pirate station it would not be licensed and the B.B.G. would have no authority over it.

Technically it would be possible to set up a broadcast or a rebroadcast station and make its programs available to everyone. However, I do not think the B.B.G. should be required to license them simply because such stations are technically feasible. Other considerations come into play, such as whether or not a C.A.T.V. or a rebroadcast station of some kind should be licensed in a given area. Sometimes the B.B.G. turns down such applications because they believe that a broadcasting station will at some time in the future be built in the area and this would be more in the interests of the community concerned.

The difficulty that both justice and the B.B.G. inform me they see in this amendment is that the phrase it seeks to add to the bill means different things to different people. They feel that it would make the bill unnecessarily restrictive if it were open to the interpretation that signals that were echnically possible of transmission ought to be received by all. These signals may come from a

C.A.T.V. station, or an originating station within or without the 12-mile limit.

There is no quarrel wih the proposition that operators who are licensed and lawfully transmitting signals should be able to broadcast to all. However, we do get into this problem. Consider, for example, the C.A.T.V. operator. Let us say that he wishes to rebroadcast four United States signals. In giving this operator a licence the B.B.G. requires that he also carry at least the national program of Canada from his local station. If people have the right to receive all programs, this operator technically could pick up 10 or 12 signals, but he would be able to transmit only about six. So a conflict arises there in that the hon. member contends that people have the right to receive whatever programs are available to them, and these programs would be available if the C.A.T.V. operator broadcast them.

The law officers of the crown and our technical advisers, the Board of Broadcast Governors, do not feel there should be any stricture on the right to receive programs, any more than there is a stricture on the right to read newspapers. But if parliament were to endorse such a broad principle and say that all programs should be available to the people, this may cause considerable difficulty in the application of our licensing requirements which have to be set out in the different parts of the act.

Mr. Baldwin: Might I ask the hon. lady a question. Does she mean by her remarks that in the eventuality a pirate broadcasting station were to be set up outside the three-mile limit—

Miss LaMarsh: It is 12 miles.

Mr. Baldwin: —the government is reserving unto itself the right to prohibit people from receiving such signals, be they radio signals or television signals? Does her rejection of the amendment proposed by the hon. member amount to this?

Miss LaMarsh: But we would not be licensing such stations, Mr. Chairman. All stations must be licensed by the B.B.G. If this amendment were accepted it would mean there is a right to receive all programs from the United States. We cannot stop people receiving these programs; this could only be done by jamming the signals. But this would mean, at least theoretically, that if in a given area 10 or 12 signals could be received the people there would have a right to receive them if they had television sets.

• (4:00 p.m.)

They cannot receive all these signals unless something brings them to their sets. The C.A.T.V. operator might reply by saying: "I have six stations I want to transmit. The regulations say I cannot. I must transmit all 12, because parliament says everyone has a right to receive everything that is available." Having considered this for quite a long time and taken advice both from my own officials and from the Board of Broadcast Governors, because this is something I am quite concerned about, I feel bound to follow their advice and indicate that I cannot accept the amendment.

Mr. Nugent: It would appear from what the minister has said that part of the difficulty arises because my amendment includes the phrase "all programs". I am reluctant to drop the point. I understand the minister's dilemma, but I do not think we are too far apart. Suppose I put in the expression "and the right to receive programs" rather than "all programs". That might ease the difficulty.

My reasoning is simple. In this clause we are pointing to responsibilities which the government feels it is necessary to enunciate. I feel there is a right to receive programs, subject to rules and regulations, just as there is a right to freedom of expression, subject to rules and regulations. This seems to be the place at which to include a reference to this right. I gather that the minister herself feels that this is a proper attitude to take and that our difference arises from the wording itself. If I am correct in this assumption I wonder whether the hon. lady would mind indicating whether she thinks it is possible to work out a form of words which would simply remind us of the right to receive programs, and to have those words included in the bill without offending the feelings of those who will be called upon to handle this act and who fear it might be made unworkable.

Miss LaMarsh: I am not happy about the proposal to put this in subclause (c), because this subclause deals with the obligations and rights of licencees. It might be better in (e) or in a separate subclause altogether dealing with the right of Canadians to hear programs. I have told the hon. member what my advisers think of this. I am told that the ramifications are too wide, and I am advised not to accept the amendment.

I realize, of course, that nothing sinister is intended by the hon. member—it seems absurd that anything sinister could come from him—but I think, on reflection, that I should accept the advice of my officials in this regard.

Mr. Pugh: Might I ask another question? The minister suggested there might be a possibility of incorporating the amendment in a separate subclause. I had the impression from her words, and their manner of delivery, that she was loath to turn it down and would like to find some way round the difficulties she mentioned. She says she is bothered because we are dealing with a subclause affecting licencees. I have the feeling that deep down she recognizes there is discrimination as between those who receive a loud and clear signal and those further away who get a much poorer signal but who still have the right to listen to it and who, by the use of cablevision, would be able to get a loud and clear signal just as though they were living near the border. Would the minister consider the matter from this point of view? Perhaps she could come up with a proposal of her own along the lines put forward by the hon. member for Edmonton-Strathcona, and incorporate it in the bill.

Miss LaMarsh: Possibly the hon. member for Edmonton-Strathcona would like 2 (c) to stand again. This would give him a chance to talk with some of the law officers of the crown in an attempt to find words which could be placed in a separate subclause.

Mr. Nugent: I think that would be a good idea. I am sure it is the wish of the committee generally that we should express approval of the right to receive. Let us leave it until Monday and in the meantime try to find a formula which will not have the consequences that the minister's advisers fear.

Mr. Baldwin: I have not intervened in this discussion so far, but I believe it would be a serious error of judgment if we were to leave the subject in the absence of an indication that there is no restriction on the right to receive programs. I understand the minister's position. She has been given certain advice and feels compelled to pay attention to it. But the only inference flowing from what she has said is that there may be, on the part of the government, the right to prohibit reception in some cases. I hope the minister and her officials, bearing this in mind, will strive diligently to come up with something which rejects such an implication.

Mr. Alkenbrack: I did not join in the discussion on some of the previous clauses of this bill but I do so now because I support the amendment put forward by my hon. friend from Edmonton-Strathcona, particularly that part of it which stresses the right of Canadians to receive all broadcast programs available to them subject only to generally applicable regulations or statutes. I agree that this right is unquestioned. The matter of community antenna television is very important to my riding at present. There has been much confusion about it, and concerning the granting of franchises for C.A.T.V. in Prince Edward-Lennox.

• (4:10 p.m.)

On June 20 last year, as recorded at page 1713 of Hansard for that date, I opened the subject by asking the then minister of transport, Mr. Pickersgill, whether or not he had received applications from persons in the town of Napanee, and recommendations from the mayor of that town requesting departmental approval of cable television services within the municipality. Although I had given the minister notice of it, Mr. Speaker suggested that I put my question on the order paper.

Two evenings later, on June 22, I raised the matter during the adjournment debate. My words are recorded at pages 1863 and 1864 of Hansard for that date, when I put the case requesting approval of cable television facilities of the town of Napanee. I do not want to be repetitive by quoting my own words, but I do wish to quote again a letter from the mayor of Napanee to the then minister of transport. This was in support of the application of Mr. Reg Dawson, a citizen of the town of Napanee who applied more than once, without success, for a franchise to operate C.A.T.V. as a public service to the citizens of the town. The mayor's letter reads as follows:

> It has come to my attention that one of my citizens, Mr. Reginald Dawson, has presented an application to your board by which he is seeking to secure a licence or franchise to instal cable T.V. in our town of Napanee.
>
> During the last three years we have had several outside groups make contact with our council and public utilities with the idea of supplying us with this type of T.V. service. However nothing has been finalized, and we now have a local group headed by Mr. Dawson who are endeavouring to bring cable T.V. to Napanee. I might add that due to our town being located in a valley, regular T.V. reception is very, very poor and like all other growing municipalities we are anxious to have the best for our citizens.
>
> I note with interest that Smiths Falls, also Belleville in eastern Ontario and Fergus and Elora in western Ontario have been granted a licence to instal cable T.V.

Therefore I sincerely hope that you will give your support to the application that has been presented to your department from citizens of the town of Napanee.

Thank you, I remain,

Yours very truly,

Lorne A. Smart,
Mayor of Napanee.

Franchises have been handed out all around us but Napanee has been ignored. Just an hour ago I communicated by telephone with the town of Picton, which is the county town of the county of Prince Edward. I am pleased to hear that a franchise has been granted by the government for C.A.T.V. there. Picton can well use such a service because most of the town is situated at a low altitude, below and on the north side of MacAulay's mountain. I am glad to hear that a franchise has been granted there to a local and reliable firm.

My question is one being asked by hundreds of Napanee citizens, why is the franchise for Napanee being withheld? I note that there is at least one other application besides that of Mr. Dawson. I note that it is in the name of an Ottawa man, who has made an application to serve the towns of Prescott, Gananoque and my native town of Napanee.

I contend, and I am sure all members of the committee will agree, that these franchises should go to applicants who are local, taxpaying citizens of these towns if they are able to perform the necessary service. The government has no right to grant these franchises to large syndicates which operate remotely out of larger centres, and which have no real local interest in a town like Napanee other than the acquisition of thousands of dollars or revenue per year. This revenue would be siphoned off to the larger centres and would not be spent within the local municipality. For that reason I repeat what I said last June 22.

I contend, and I am sure the minister agrees, that a responsible local application such as this from a resident of the municipality, where cable facilities are economically and physically feasible, should be quite in order. Indeed, it should command top priority. I contend that the Department of Transport has no right to withhold a franchise for this service providing the operator of it agrees to comply fully with the regulations governing the lighting and marking of his tower so that it will not endanger the flight of aircraft.

As Mayor Smart pointed out in his letter, franchises have been granted in other towns in Ontario, and yet the Napanee franchise is refused for no good reason at all. I appeal to the hon. lady, whose bill we are dealing with, to use her good influence to see that a franchise is granted to the local applicant for the town of Napanee, in order that the best interests of all may be served. Television reception in Napanee is far from perfect because of the town's low altitude. We are entitled to prompt consideration and I intend to ask for early appointments with both the Secretary of State and the Department of Transport for Mayor Smart and his council—

Miss LaMarsh: Mr. Chairman, I do not like to interrupt my hon. friend but I have absolutely nothing to do with that licence. It is the happy duty of my hon. friend, the Minister of Transport, to reign over that particular empire. Much as I would like to see Mayor Smart and his people, it would only be wasting their time.

Mr. Alkenbrack: I fully realize that the hon. lady does not have the responsibility, but I have merely asked her to use her influence with the Minister of Transport.

I congratulate the hon. lady for the constructive criticism she made of the C.B.C. not very long ago. Her criticism was of programming and management. Of late, criticism has been levelled by the general public at that body. I just wish to say that I have received many letters of condemnation regarding some of the ill taste that has been displayed in programming. I am sure that the management of the C.B.C., both executive and programming, will respond to the reasonable and firm protests of the Canadian viewing public, and will exercise proper restraint with respect to the character and quality of T.V. programs.

I remind them that the character of these programs to a great extent is commensurately reflected in the character of our people. Their influence on our people is in direct ratio to the quality of the programming. In this regard I am reminded of that ever reliable axiom, "Habit crystallizes into character."

I also wish to say that this chamber is the place where this bill can be turned into good legislation, legislation that will be an influence for good and which will provide reliable guidance to the executives of the C.B.C.

• (4:20 p.m.)

Although I am also one of those who at the present time asks for better value for our dollars invested and for better economic practice in the C.B.C., I am still one of those who has confidence that despite our present troubles good judgment and good management will result from our current far-flung national criticism of this body and from the legislation that we are slowly but efficiently bringing forth.

I have heard that members of the cabinet are becoming very impatient at the time we are spending on this bill. I should like to remind these impatient ministers, whose interests are now diverted to personal glories on the Liberal leadership hustings, that this is a very poor time for them to portray impatience because the majority of people look on this legislation with intense interest. I should like to remind the government that Canada deserves—and let us hope that from our deliberations here, will get—better broadcasting services and better value for the tax dollar.

Mr. Herridge: Mr. Chairman, I rise to congratulate the minister for the flexibility in accepting the amendment moved by the hon. member for Digby-Annapolis-Kings. In so doing, I believe she has shown that she is willing to listen to criticism from the opposition side of the house. I am of the opinion that we could rapidly conclude this aspect of the debate with regard to the content of C.B.C. programming, matters of good taste, additional forms of programming and so on, if the minister would simply rise and say to the house, "I will recommend to the C.B.C. that in its operation it pay due respect to the principles enunciated by the Minister of Justice when he made a statement to the nation that in his opinion the state has no right to enter the bedrooms of the nation". From then on I am sure we would be quite safe. Would the minister do that?

Miss LaMarsh: Mr. Chairman, I think the hon. member should know that it is not under the 1958 statute, and is not likely to be under the current statute, my responsibility to give instructions to the C.B.C. So far as the Minister of Justice's principles are concerned, I think he can stand on his own feet.

The Chairman: There has been a suggestion that subclause 2 (c) stand. Is it the wish of the committee that this be done now?

Mr. Cowan: Mr. Chairman, I would prefer to speak to the question of subclause 2 (c) today rather than on Monday. However, I will be here on Monday as well as today. I regret having to indulge in personalities, but I must say, after listening to the hon. Secretary of State when she appeared before the broadcasting committee—I have the minutes of proceedings and evidence here in front of me and will read them to you shortly—and from her explanation today that it is quite apparent she does not understand a community antenna television operation. There is nothing the matter with the C.A.T.V. operation either in Canada or elsewhere in the world. The comments which have been directed toward the C.A.T.V. operation are beyond my belief for ignorance.

I was first elected to this House of Commons in 1962 and saw the hon. member for Niagara Falls here when I came in as a member of the opposition. There is no member of this house for whom I have a higher regard. She stood up today and said that she has a recommendation from the Department of Justice. I marked down her words. She said: "I am bound to accept this recommendation of the Department of Justice and the Board of Broadcast Governors". I should like to ask her why she and I stood up together and voted the Diefenbaker government out of office when we would not accept a ruling of the Department of Justice from a man by the name of Dreidger who was advising the Diefenbaker government regarding import and export taxes. It is a very short time since she and I stood together and refused to accept the statement of the Department of Justice as passed on to us by the then minister of justice, Hon. Donald Fleming.

In 1963 the hon. member for Niagara Falls and I stood together with many other members of this house and turned out the Diefenbaker administration. Now, after we have come to the seats of the treasury benches we get another opinion from the Department of Justice. If the Department of Justice makes such magnificent recommendations that they must be accepted by the minister and if they are so important she is bound to stand by them, why has Mr. Dreidger been moved to Hamburg, Germany where he is the third or fourth assistant consul.

The Chairman: Order, please. I am sure the hon. member realizes that he is now well outside the ambit of the clause which is before us. Perhaps he would return to the actual subclause.

Mr. Cowan: I am referring to the statement of the Secretary of State to the effect that she is bound to accept the recommendation of the Department of Justice. I am pointing out that in the past she did not consider herself bound to accept the recommendation of the Department of Justice. I have made the point that if Mr. Dreidger is so wonderful, why is he still not in the Department of Justice.

Just now the Secretary of State made the statement that if the people have the right to receive all the programs on the air what do we do about places where there are 12 programs available on the air but the receiving set of the C.A.T.V. can only bring in seven? This would mean that there were five which could not be received. All Canadians have the right to read whatever magazines and periodicals they wish to read. Thank God the cabinet has not started to interfere in that field. Does that mean we must buy every magazine and periodical? We have the right to buy them, but when we do not buy them this does not interfere with the importance of the right to information wherever we can get it. If we subscribe to a service which brings in only five out of the eight or ten available channels on the air, that is our business; it is our money we are spending.

As I said before in the month of October, I believe, when this bill was first introduced, this is perfect legislation for the past but pays no attention to the future development of radio and television in this world. I sincerely believe that television as we know it today is on the way out and that the C.A.T.V. systems will take over the entire field in time. On the question of C.A.T.V., I have in my hand here minutes of proceedings and evidence No. 6 of the standing committee on broadcasting, films and the assistance to the arts for Tuesday, November 28. On that day Hon. Judy LaMarsh, Secretary of State, was present. As reported at page 166, in answering a question asked by Mr. Jamieson, Miss LaMarsh said this:

—I am not very familiar with the economics of them—

That is, the C.A.T.V. systems. Then on page 167, in answer to another question by Mr. Jamieson, Miss LaMarsh said:

—but of my own knowledge I do not know that much detail about it.

Then, as reported at page 167 in answer to a question of mine she said:

And they fill those five channels with other than local stations. The local station is not capable of being received on the C.A.T.V. that one gets in one's individual home. It blanks out.

Now, in respect of that third quotation I have given you I say to the Chairman and to others in the House of Commons that every time a C.A.T.V. operation has been licensed in the Dominion of Canada the application has been submitted through the Department of Transport which refers it to the Board of Broadcast Governors. Finally, the licence is granted if the department so decides. There has never been a C.A.T.V. licence granted in Canada which did not have, as the first specification, that the system must pick up the local available Canadian station. Someone will say that he knows of a C.A.T.V. system on which one cannot receive a local station.

• (4:30 p.m.)

If there is a C.A.T.V. station in this country on which you do not get a Canadian station, and I know for a fact there are several, it is because no Canadian station is available in that territory. I am told by men who know, one of whom is generally sitting in the house, that there are C.A.T.V. installations in British Columbia that have nothing but United States stations on them because no Canadian stations can be received. If a Canadian station could be received the Department of Transport, under the Minister of Transport, would specify in the licence that the Canadian station had to be on the dial of the C.A.T.V. installation. There is not a single C.A.T.V. installation in Canada on which a Canadian channel that is available has been shut off, because the Department of Transport has always specified that Canadian stations which are available in the location must be carried on C.A.T.V.

If the Secretary of State is going to worry about the fact that some wires today in the cable system will only bring you five or seven channels when there may be ten or 12 channels available in the area, let her stop worrying too much about that. The C.A.T.V. systems operation is progressing so fast, and I have mentioned this in the house before but take the time to repeat it today, that wires which will take up to 30 channels are now available. If the Secretary of State, the Department of Transport and the Board of Broadcast Governors are going to worry about some places having 12 programs available but only five channels on the C.A.T.V. installation, let me assure them that a wire can be put in which will carry more channels on the C.A.T.V. installation in Canada than there are programs available for the area. This is a straight statement of fact which nobody can deny. In Hendersonville, North Carolina, there is a C.A.T.V. installation today that has 23 channels on the wire although there are not 23 programs available in that area of North Carolina to fill these channels. They have a wire there that is bringing in all the available channels, with a lot of other blank channels as well. I mention 23 channels to you because to my knowledge that is the maximum in use at the present time.

Let me remind the minister that the electrical industry in the world today can produce wires that will carry 30 channels, so she need not worry about any channel being kept off by the C.A.T.V. system. If a channel were kept off the C.A.T.V. operator would be doing so contrary to the requirements of the Department of Transport.

This is not the principal point in this discussion on the amendment of the hon. member for Edmonton-Strathcona. This point involves the right to receive programs available in an area. I have said in this house many times, and I repeat it again now—the little episode which occurred at noon today does not bother me in the slightest—that I have the highest regard for the hon. member for Niagara Falls. I am not buttering her up but stating an opinion I have held for several years. One of the things I admire about her is that she is not only the Secretary of State, she is also the hon. member for Niagara Falls.

When there was a move afoot, on behalf of certain interests I will not name, to move the Barrie T.V. station into the metropolitan Toronto area where it would interfere with the reception of two television stations from Buffalo there was a meeting held of interested members who wanted to protest the possibility of such a thing happening. Five cabinet ministers showed up at that meeting, one of whom was the hon. member for Niagara Falls.

If the cabinet believes that the only right we should give to the public is that those licensed to carry out broadcasting undertakings must accept the responsibility to protect freedom of expression, why were those ministers protesting the move of the Barrie station? If the Barrie station had been moved it would have interfered only with our right to hear or receive programs from two Buffalo stations. We now have the minister stating that we are giving the broadcasters the right to freedom of expression, unquestionably. Why was there such a protest about the Barrie station moving into the Toronto area and interfering with the reception of two Buffalo stations? I still say that what is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander.

If there were justification for protest against that threatened move by certain financial interests, well known in this house, why have we taken the position of telling a C.A.T.V. operator that we are not interested in reception now but only interested in the unquestionable right of a station to broadcast? Only a few months ago five cabinet ministers were present at a meeting to protest this proposed move. As far as I can see now, two of those five at that meeting are here in the house. It is very strange that they were protesting about that interference with reception, but now tell us that all the government is willing to grant is the unquestionable right to freedom of expression. We are talking about the right to receive all programs that are available in an area. If the public wants to pay out money they should have the right to do so and get what they want in the area.

I can remember in the early days of radio, going back some 40 years now, when there was a big radio operation in Chicago which, over the course of the years, developed into one of the biggest radio houses in the world. That operation had the slogan "mighty monarch of the air", and hammered home again and again the advertising phrase "the air is full of things you should not miss". This phrase sold millions of radio sets in the United States and Canada. I am sure many members of this house will recall that advertising slogan. The operator of that station was not foolish enough to suggest that the air was full of things and we should not miss any of them. It is a simple fact that the public is only able to hear and understand one program at a time. This operation did not suggest that the air was full of things and we should not miss any.

We are not demanding that every program in an area should be made available to every Canadian who wants a C.A.T.V. installation. However, we are saying that if a Canadian family wants to pay money to get programs, other than those available to him through the local T.V. station, that family has the right to spend money to that end.

What justification is there for the statement that a C.A.T.V. application should be turned down because a second station may be built in an area? I am thinking of Napanee, Gananoque, and Prescott, to which I referred some time ago by using a letter I received from the Secretary of State. We were told that the applications were turned down because the establishment of a second T.V. station in that general area might be inhibited. I pointed out at the time that the next station to go in there, according to the white paper and the report of the committee on broadcasting, would be a C.B.C. station. Certainly, any interference with a second station would not bother the C.B.C. because it pays no attention to money. Why should the people in the Prescott, Gananoque and Napanee area have been deprived of C.A.T.V. service in the past, at the present and for heaven knows how much longer, because the cabinet is rescheduling, prolonging and drawing out operations? We must bear in mind that the cabinet is cutting back the expenditures of all departments, including the C.B.C., in this rescheduling and drawing out operation. I say to you that as far as the residents of that area are concerned, the air is full of things they should not miss. Why do they have to wait until the cabinet finds there is enough money left over, after equalization payments to the provinces, to extend the C.B.C. into the Kingston area?

The people in these areas should have the opportunity of choice today. I could not agree less with that if there were 15 programs available in the Prescott-Napanee-Gananoque area. If they want a C.A.T.V. system with only five channels, that should be their choice.

There is one other point I should like to deal with in respect of what the Secretary of State said in commenting about the amendment of the hon. member for Edmonton-Strathcona. She talked about putting out signals. C.A.T.V. installations do not put out signals; they are only a reception area. They receive; they cannot put out signals under the licences that are granted to them by the Department of Transport. I am not arguing that C.A.T.V. should be given the right to put out signals; but when they are only receiving, why should there be a limit on the number of stations that can be licensed throughout the Dominion of Canada?

• (4:40 p.m.)

I am old enough to remember the time when the government used to try and collect a little tax on radio receiving sets. I call it a tax, because if I am not mistaken it was $2 and at a later date it was increased to $2.50. A tax was put on receiving sets throughout Canada in the days of the Canadian Radio Commission, following the Aird report. If there ever was a more unpopular tax than even the tax on tea in Boston, it was that radio tax which the government tried to collect from the people of Canada. It was called, euphemistically, in government circles a licence fee, but to the people who were called upon to pay it, it was a tax.

There are men in this house of an age to remember the days when an uproar developed with regard to this tax. If a family had two or three radios in its home, did they have to take out a licence in respect of each radio, or did the $2 licence fee cover the radios used by the household? The interpretation was first given that you had to have a $2 licence for each individual set. Then, there were radios in motor cars. The government had not changed its mind on the matter and said that you had to have a licence, or pay this fee, for a receiving set installed in a motor car.

I do not know whether this next statement is any credit to me or not. I think it is, although many in the house may disagree with me and think of it as a black mark against me. I can tell you that I am the man who said to Mackenzie King in the course of a general election, which the Liberals won, that they should remove that tax on multiple radio sets in homes and on radio sets in motor cars. If any hon. member wants to check on this he will find that there was a general election at that time and I made this suggestion. I came down from Toronto and the matter was discussed by a large number of Liberals.

Today we do not have a tax on receiving sets anywhere, and I do not think Canadians as a whole would go for it any more; they are much happier paying for the C.B.C. through the general taxation to which they are subjected than having people coming around and checking on the number of sets they have. Members of the house will remember that people used to go around counting the aerials over houses. Then people did not put aerials up, in order that the inspectors, as they were called, could not count them. The inspectors would then knock at the door and ask how many sets were in the house, because people were hiding the aerials. All that is past and gone, but not forgotten.

We have not imposed a licence fee or tax on receiving sets in years. Are we going back to that system now? I say to you, as a Liberal, that the public have the right to know. It is only about six years ago that the daily newspapers of Canada carried a tremendous advertising campaign, and the theme of it was the public's right to know. Is the cabinet of Canada, in 1968, going to deny the public's right to know by stating, "We will not put the C.A.T.V. system into this area in which somebody wants to operate a station, because the local television operator might lose a little money if we did"? I could not care less whether the local television operator loses money as a result. Does the cabinet care about how much revenue the newspapers are losing to television? Why do they worry at this time about the local T.V. operator and whether or not he is losing money?

I would ask members of the house to read pages 166 and 167 of the report to which I have referred. This afternoon the hon. member for Queens was talking about the way in which C.B.C. puts programs over the air. He pointed out that when the C.B.C. starts to build up a program to prove that the earth is flat, they get the finest looking and most suave people they can find to prove that it is flat. Then, they get a bunch of dumb bunnies to prove that it is round. A few snide questions are asked about those who contend the world is round, thoughts are expressed on the other side, and finally the people appearing on the C.B.C. who contend the world is round are called "squares".

If you want to read some insinuating questions on this subject, read pages 166 and 167 of the committee report for November 6. You will find a T.V. station owner who is on the broadcasting committee of the House of Commons asking the very kind of question to which the hon. member for Queens referred today when he talked about a program to prove that the world is flat. The general tenor of the questioning on pages 166 and 167 is that C.A.T.V. systems will put the local stations off the air. I do not like to say it, but it is a straight statement of fact. He was questioning the Secretary of State, and she does not know too much about C.A.T.V.

In several places on those two pages she says that the local Canadian station is blanked out. I can only say that there is not a case in Canada where the local Canadian station is blanked out, but that answer is in this official government report. These are the answers of a lady who I think is smart, smart, smart. I have read those statements. The hon. Secretary of State said that she was not very familiar with the economics of this matter, and of her own knowledge she did not know much detail about it. We have her answers and are supposed to take them as being official. There are more facts on this subject than appear in the reports of the committee on broadcasting, films and assistance to the arts.

I do not think for one moment that the Secretary of State alone is responsible for the attitude that she is defending in the house. She said this afternoon, "I have to accept the opinion of the Department of Transport; I have to accept the opinion of the Board of Broadcast Governors". She would not be here piloting this bill through the house if she were not representing the idea of the entire cabinet as to suitable and satisfactory legislation with respect to a broadcasting policy for Canada.

I am certain that the cabinet does not know as much about C.A.T.V. as the Secretary of State. She has at least made a little study of it. I know a former member of the cabinet who knew a lot about C.A.T.V., because he was concerned with keeping it out of areas in which there were T.V. stations. He only kept it out because he knew a great deal about it. He was not interested in the welfare of the general public who were being deprived of programs because of his action.

I have said before that I have been hoping the cabinet would have the good sense to alter clause 2 (c), as suggested by the hon. member for Edmonton-Strathcona. Perhaps the cabinet would propose a new clause or even withdraw the clause for a while until a clause could be inserted guaranteeing freedom of information to all and the right to receive information to all. But no, the Secretary of State stands up today and says she cannot accept the suggestion and justice department tells her she should not. She says, also, that the Board of Broadcast Governors advises her—you have to admit, informally—that she should not change the policy as expressed in clause 2 (c).

I have said before, and repeat again, that if this clause is passed by the Pearson administration, it will deny Liberalism. It will deny the public the right to know. I do not care how many people do or do not look at C.A.T.V. programs, but if there is somebody in Canada who wants to look at a C.A.T.V. program and there is a commercial operator ready to make the installation so that he can look at it, then the operator should be allowed to make the installation and the member of the public should be allowed to look at the C.A.T.V. programming. It is as simple as that.

• (4:50 p.m.)

I have protested against this ridiculous situation where the broadcaster has the right to express himself but the public does not have the right to receive these expressions if they so wish. I have mentioned before, possibly at a meeting of the committee on broadcasting, that some years ago I secured in Toronto the opinion of the supreme court of British Columbia regarding cablevision out there. In the committee I reminded the Secretary of State, who is an able lawyer, she had said to me in a private discussion one day that I should read the decision of the supreme court of British Columbia on the matter of cablevision because I would find the Canadian government had the right to tax and to licence the operators. I said to her in committee that I had obtained the decision of the supreme court of British Columbia and that I had had it for some years in Toronto. However, now that I was in Ottawa I would obtain another copy.

I received from the supreme court library xeroxed copies of the decision of the supreme court of British Columbia. The point at issue in this decision was that the province of British Columbia was endeavouring to regulate the C.A.T.V. receiving sets and to tax them on their commercial business. The cablevision operators objected to coming under provincial control. They went to the court on the matter, and the province of British Columbia, through the public utilities commission, prosecuted the Victoria Cablevision Limited and two other receiving station operators. The decision was that cablevision does not come within the jurisdiction of the provincial governments but is a federal matter. It is interesting to note the various references made by the judges of the British Columbia supreme court by previous decisions of the Privy Council that the transmitting of a signal and its reception cannot be separated.

The province of British Columbia was trying to do that very thing by arguing that the C.A.T.V. installation in British Columbia, which was receiving signals from, say, the United States came under provincial jurisdiction and therefore the province could tax and regulate it. The judges of the supreme court of British Columbia dismissed the argument of the province and said it was a federal matter. I would draw the hon. members' attention to the fact that the decision of the supreme court of British Columbia handed down on March 22, 1965, has never been appealed.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order, please. I regret to interrupt the hon. member but the time allotted to him has expired.

[Mr. Cowan.]

Mr. Cowan: It was my understanding that the subclause would be stood until Monday so that the Secretary of State could receive further advice from the Department of Justice and from B.B.G.

Miss LaMarsh: I should like to make it clear that it is not for me to get that advice but rather for my hon. friend from Edmonton-Strathcona. I understand he is in the process of doing that. I certainly agree the subclause should stand until Monday, if that is the wish of the committee.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Shall subclause 2 (c) stand?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Shall subclause 2 (f) carry?

Some hon. Members: Carried.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Shall subclause 2 (g) carry?

Mr. Prittie: Surely we should consider the four paragraphs under subclause (g) one by one.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Does the committee wish to consider the four paragraphs of subclause (g) in order?

Is paragraph 2 (g) (i) carried?

Mr. Thompson: No, Mr. Chairman. I assumed that subclause 2 (c) would be carried over until Monday, but in view of the fact that we have stood this subclause and have moved on to paragraph 2 (g) (i), there are a few remarks that I should like to make before we call it five o'clock. The remarks which I have made during the committee's study of Bill No. C-163 were a result of the viewpoints that have been expressed to me in copious correspondence which came to me from constituents. In my previous remarks, I stressed the point that it is our responsibility in approving the legislation before us to ensure that the guide lines which we lay down for the management will be effectively implemented by them. I think this has not been the case during recent years in the programming by the C.B.C. and by private television, although I believe we are dealing strictly with the public broadcasting corporation.

What concerns me about the general trend of programming is the responsibility which the public broadcasting corporation bears in this respect, and with which we cannot deal effectively in the house, toward those institutions in our country that form the very fibre, the very warp and woof, of the Canadian way of life. I am concerned, too, about those younger people who do not have the selective ability to turn off the television set when there is something on it which they do not wish to see or which perhaps they should not see. It is a truism that television at the present time is potentially capable of strengthening and unifying our country, but if it is not properly supervised and controlled it can have the opposite effect. I think that the vast majority of parents in this country who cannot be at home all the time to supervise the turn of the dial on the television set are concerned about the lack of control by the C.B.C. management over programming.

Therefore I suggest the addition of a few words to paragraph 2 (g) (i) which, as was the case with the amendment which I moved to subclause 2 (c), are very mild in tone. In spite of that, they are of great importance in setting down guide lines for management in their control of programming. Therefore, I wish to move:

Paragraph 2 (g) (i) be amended by adding the following: "... while safeguarding sound family life. No program may be shown which could be considered encouraging to criminal activity".

May I call it five o'clock, Mr. Chairman.

• (5:00 p.m.)

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Since it is five o'clock, shall I rise, report progress and request leave to sit again at the next sitting of the house?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Progress reported.

Mr. Speaker: It being five o'clock the house will proceed to the consideration of private members business as listed on today's order paper, namely, public bills and private bills.

RIGHT OF PRIVACY ACT OF 1967

MEASURE TO PROVIDE SAFEGUARDS, PENALTIES, ETC.

Mr. H. W. Herridge (Kootenay West) moved the second reading of Bill No. C-19, an act respecting the right of privacy.

He said: Mr. Speaker, I wish to speak to Bill No. C-19, an act respecting the right of privacy, since the subject is of great importance to the maintenance of democratic institutions and procedures. It is of increasing importance in the type of society that is evolving today.

I first heard of wire tapping just before the first world war when the miners of Sandon and Silverton in the Slocan country were on strike. The miners discovered that management was wire tapping conversations between the two villages of Sandon and Silverton. After the miners discovered this, they got two Gaelic speaking miners to carry on all discussions over the telephone, and from that time on management was in a bit of a fog.

I next heard of wire tapping when wire tapping was used with respect to certain illegal information in connection with race track results and things like that. The information relayed related to gamblers who were carrying on their work illegally. Then, throughout the years, I heard of wire tapping again in connection with its use, along with certain other mechanical devices, by spying agencies and those who were engaged in criminal activities.

Since then I have read numerous books, such as "The Intruders"—The invasion of privacy by government and industry—by Senator Edward B. Long, and "The Eavesdroppers" by Samuel Dash.

This matter came to prominence generally to the people of Canada when a landed immigrant, E. P. O'Neal, otherwise known as "Casey" bugged the meetings of the pulp and paper workers of Canada in Vancouver as the result of co-operation with personnel of the R.C.M.P. At that time, Lloyd Craig, who was a personal friend of mine and well known to me, died in his bedroom. I might say that his loss is mourned by the entire community of Castlegar and by all those in the trade union movement who respected his character, his integrity and what he tried to do for the formation of the Canada pulp and paper workers union organization in British Columbia.

May I quote from the report of the commission of inquiry into invasion of privacy. I wish to quote part of that report to indicate the urgent need for amendment to the Criminal Code to correct the situation. I shall begin quoting part of the report at page 4:

The chief officers of the International Union became alarmed at what was happening and contacted a man who was going under the name of E. P. O'Neal at that time and who was then secretary of the British Columbia Federation of Labour and employed him as an organizer to attempt to bring order out of the chaos which had arisen.

The report then goes on to say:

The pulp and paper workers of Canada organization scheduled a convention at the Ritz Hotel in Vancouver for November 5, 1966. O'Neal conceived the idea of attempting to ascertain knowledge of their future actions and plans. He already was acquainted with two officers of the security and intelligence branch of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and discussed his problem with them.

I shall deal at greater length with the activities of these gentlemen on this subject at a more appropriate time. I continue:

As these two individuals, Cpl. Reed and Const. Ouellette were in that branch of the force to which the questions of security of the state are assigned they were naturally interested as policemen in some of the individuals who were taking part in the activities of this union. There is no evidence as to the background of these individuals but I have no doubt that their reputations and actions were discussed.

It is clear that the three of them discussed the best ways and means of obtaining the information that O'Neal sought. The corporal suggested to O'Neal that he might plant an informer in their group and procure some information. With this advice O'Neal did not agree. There were several discussions during which O'Neal raised the question as to the use of "bugging" devices and asked them if they could recommend someone who could render him such a service.

The officers at first decided against taking this step but subsequently they called a private detective named Bud Graham who had been a former member of the force and who had served along with Reed and told him that he would be called by a "labour leader or someone high up in the movement." Then Reed advised O'Neal to contact Graham and make his own arrangements with regard to the undertaking he wished him to take on.

At this juncture it may be appropriate to consider the position of the force as a whole. Counsel for the Royal Canadian Mounted Police asked that I find that as a force that body was in no way involved in the events which took place in the first week of November at the hotel. Counsel further asked me for a finding to that effect.

In considering this request I am faced with the fact that no evidence was tendered by the force as such, although a responsible officer of that body was at Miss Christie's elbow instructing her at all times. Any cross-examination which might have elicited the facts was strenuously objected to, and finally ended in the filing of an affidavit of the minister claiming privilege and the invoking of the Official Secrets Act. All of these actions effectively stopped any evidence being elicited which would have enabled me to decide whether or not Reed and Ouellette were conducting a "caper of their own."

Reed and Ouellette are experienced members of the force. At the time of their interviews with O'Neal and with Graham and all their subsequent actions they were officers in the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. The Royal Canadian Mounted Police as a force has not taken any steps to explain its position and I find it impossible, unless there is evidence to the contrary, to come to the conclusion under the circumstances that any information obtained by officers of the law was not obtained officially. Consequently, I feel I cannot come to the conclusion that the force has divorced itself from the actions of Reed and Ouellette.

[Mr. Herridge.]

My one criticism of those two officers is they did not clearly impress Bud Graham with the fact that his employment by O'Neal was in no way official and that O'Neal was employing him to further his own ends. They certainly left the impression but not the word with Bud Graham that employment by O'Neal was official. Mr. Graham, stated that he had a clear impression that what he was doing was for the general benefit of Canada and helping the force of which he had formerly been a member, which statement I accept.

Graham, after consultation with O'Neal, arranged for quarters in the Ritz Hotel and proceeded to plant his devices. From these he was able to monitor or tape all conversations that took place not only in the convention but also in the bedrooms of the leaders of this movement.

One room that was monitored was the bedroom of Lloyd Craig who at that time was president of the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada. His room was shared with one, Macphee, who apparently was the "Grey Eminence" of the movement. Craig was suffering from a grave deterioration of his internal organs including his heart. During the night before the convention opened he died.

I wish to refer to one or two other statements in this report.

• (5:10 p.m.)

I find that as the law now stands Graham is in no way to be censured for his actions. What he did was done on the advice of his counsel. O'Neal himself was advised by Graham that he, O'Neal, had nothing to fear from the police as no crime had been committed and advised him not to admit anything. O'Neal did not take legal advice and instead of evading questions or stating "no comment" gave a blanket denial to the newspapers in which he denied any knowledge of the facts narrated by Graham. This denial Mr. Fleishman submitted triggered him in his subsequent actions and advice, which have already been characterized above.

Of course, Mr. Speaker, when Mr. O'Neal was giving evidence under oath before the judge he had to admit that he had told a confounded lie on that occasion. I mention these facts, Mr. Speaker, to indicate that there is nothing in the law to prevent this type of operation being conducted in the country at this time. That is why I, among others in this party and I am sure in the house as well, am keen to get the situation remedied.

I should like to quote an article from the Toronto Star for August 31, 1966, which indicates what can be done in this respect:

Ben Jamil, head of Continental Telephone Supply Co. in New York city, which claims to be the biggest manufacturer of electronic bugs, told the Star he has made whopping sales to the Canadian government.

Mr. Jamil, inventor of the olive-in-a-martini transmitter (the toothpick is the antenna), says $30 million worth of bugs were sold to Canada by his and associated U.S. companies "in less than a year—the past year."

Though the majority of the equipment went to private and industrial buyers, "a healthy proportion was sold to the Canadian government," Jamil said.

Was much of this destined for the R.C.M.P. directorate?

"It wouldn't be fair for me to tell," Jamil replied. "Why don't you ask them?"

By "them" he means the Canadian government.

I should also like to read a brief extract from "Current History" for July, 1967:

Wiretapping and electronic eavesdropping: Con The right to privacy is indeed the most comprehensive of all rights. A society which cherishes liberty and human dignity cannot do without it; a society which seeks to suppress freedom cannot tolerate it.

Then the Toronto Star for September 7, 1967 carried the heading "Lawyers asked to demand ban on bugging except by police". According to the article, at a meeting in Quebec city lawyers were asked to pass a resolution that was drafted by the Civil Liberties and Criminal Justice sections of the Canadian Bar Association for submission to a convention. I understand that that resolution was later adopted almost unanimously with provisions to protect our national security and to deal with certain very difficult criminal elements.

I should also like to quote briefly from the Ottawa Journal for August 25, 1967. I was very pleased to read this statement. The report is datelined Calgary and reads as follows:

Solicitor General Pennell said Wednesday electronic eavesdropping and wiretapping should be banned except for national security purposes and crime fighting, with permission given by a court.

I hope the Solicitor General (Mr. Pennell) will remind the Minister of Justice (Mr. Trudeau) that he has failed to include an amendment of this type in his bill which makes many worthy amendments to the Criminal Code. I am pleased to hear that the Solicitor General is in favour of legislation to stop invasion of privacy by wire tapping and other mechanical methods of eavesdropping, but I repeat that I hope he brings this question to the attention of the Minister of Justice before the bill amending the Criminal Code is finally adopted so that a clause dealing with this very important subject can be included.

I suggest, Mr. Speaker, that all bills on the order paper concerned with this subject should be referred to the justice and legal affairs committee of the House of Commons for consideration along with the present amendments proposed to the Criminal Code. This would give an opportunity to hear witnesses on the matter and to make a report to parliament.

My bill, Mr. Speaker, simply undertakes to deal with this situation. It provides for the protection of our national security and makes provision for dealing with certain criminal elements.

Clause 6 of my bill reads as follows:

Sections 3 and 4 of this act shall not apply where a person is duly authorized in writing by a judge of a Superior Court of criminal jurisdiction to conduct a search or investigation, at the request of the Minister of Justice of Canada, in cases affecting the national security of Canada.

Clause 7 provides:

Sections 3 and 4 of this act shall not apply in the case of a peace officer or other person acting in the course of his duties and duly authorized in writing by a Justice of the Peace or a Magistrate to conduct a search or investigation for the purpose of the administration of justice, at the request of the Attorney General of the province concerned.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, paraphrasing the explanatory notes of the bill, may I point out that Mr. Justice Brandeis has referred to the right of privacy as being the right most valued by civilized men. Several outstanding jurists in Canada share the same opinion, and I am glad that the Solicitor General also shares that opinion. It is advisable to protect that right adequately and to stop the various forms of invasion of privacy.

The purpose of this bill is to provide that wire tapping and eavesdropping are prohibited except in the case of the administration of justice and the security of the state. I know other hon. members want to say a few words on this bill, so I shall be very pleased to resume my seat at this time.

Mr. John R. Matheson (Parliamentary Secretary to Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, it is always a pleasure to follow my hon. friend from Kootenay West (Mr. Herridge), particularly on an occasion such as this when he has given such thoughtful consideration to a matter which affects fundamental civil liberties.

It has been said that it was relatively simple to prohibit snooping by eavesdropping in the days when the human ear was the sole instrument for picking up sound; but today there are so many sophisticated electronic devices which do the same job without the snooper being anywhere near the premises that a whole new range of considerations apply.

The kind of equipment reported used by the Sargent inquiry will soon be considered primitive in comparison with gadgets that we are now told are being tested. I understand that it is possible to direct electronic beams from far away on to a window pane to pick up its vibrations and translate them into sounds, thus eavesdropping on conversations in the room behind the window.

George Orwell forecast that by 1984 dictators or governments will be able to listen in on everything that is going on behind closed doors. It will soon be possible to bug every cottage and boardroom in the country.

The question then arises what do we do about this? My hon. friend from Kootenay West has presented a constructive and responsible bill which certainly requires the most serious consideration. I suppose the most recent event to cause widespread interest was that arising from the royal commission of Judge R. A. Sargent. According to the Vancouver Sun for August 10, 1967 the royal commission conducted by Judge Sargent on the invasion of privacy heard more than 100-000 words of evidence from 80 witnesses during 57 days of public hearings between December and June of last year.

• (5:20 p.m.)

The inquiry was triggered by the electronic bugging of a Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada union convention last November.

The Daily Colonist of Friday, October 18, last says:

> Snooping of this modern kind is abhorrent in principle, and creates mechanical Peeping Toms to an extent that could be dangerous ... It strikes at the root of individual freedoms.

The Victoria Daily Times has this to say:

> It is an integral part of the free and democratic system of life in Canada that the state shall not infringe on personal rights, and privacy is a right which will have to be more jealously guarded as time goes on—
>
> Commissioner Sargent would make unauthorized eavesdropping a crime, along with possession of equipment which is capable of infringing privacy or receiving or monitoring police calls—

The inquiry conducted by Judge Sargent has stimulated serious consideration particularly on the west coast, by members of the Canadian Bar Association, civil liberty groups and by concerned citizens. The Montreal Star of August 18 says:

> Electronic eavesdropping—whether it be wire tapping or some other form of bugging—is a repugnant invasion of the right to privacy. And the bugging business is booming. It has become a tool of industrial espionage, it has been employed by labour unions in jurisdictional disputes, it has been used by individuals to eavesdrop on their neighbours and their spouses.
>
> [Mr. Matheson.]
>
> But to suggest an absolute prohibition against the practice might, in special circumstances, endanger the national security.

This is along the lines of the remarks made by my distinguished and experienced hon. friend. The article continues:

> There is merit in some of the recommendations of the British Columbia's one-man Royal Commission into the Invasion of Privacy by R. A. Sargent, a retired county court judge. He has called for legislation outlawing electronic eavesdropping by anyone except police and federal authorities under restricted conditions, and he has suggested that the mere possession of equipment capable of infringing privacy or receiving or monitoring police calls be made a crime.

The editorial concludes:

> The safeguarding of individual liberty must be a primary aim of any democratic society. The Prime Minister has called for a conference of federal and provincial governments to establish a bill of rights for all Canadians; we recommend that the right to privacy be included.

I know that the Solicitor General (Mr. Pennell) who is an experienced advocate and a person to whom much of the responsibility in this field has been assigned is, along with his colleague the Minister of Justice (Mr. Trudeau), deeply concerned about this problem. The Sun of Saturday, August 19, makes a contribution which is worth bearing in mind. It says, quoting the fourth amendment to the United States constitution:

> The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures, shall not be violated, and no Warrants shall issue but upon probably cause, supported by Oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons or things to be seized.

The editorial concludes with the words of Judge Louis D. Brandeis of the United States supreme court:

> The most comprehensive of rights and the right most valued by civilized man is the right to be left alone.

On this, the writer comments:

> The U.S. Supreme Court knocked out blanket warrants because they provide no adequate judicial supervision or protective procedures. It acknowledged the seriousness of the crime situation in that country but asserted it was not right that the freedom of the many should be sacrificed to combat a relatively few members of society who do wrong.

What can be done about this situation? The question has been raised whether it affects, primarily, property and civil rights and ought therefore to come within provincial jurisdiction or whether in fact it is an area which can be dealt with under the Criminal Code. It has been suggested in British Columbia that there should be safeguards introduced and penalties imposed to discourage the use or possession of electronic listening devices.

The attorney-general of that province, Mr. Bonner, feels that the appropriate statute is the Criminal Code of Canada under federal jurisdiction which would ensure uniform enforcement of "anti-bugging" laws in all the provinces.

A few days ago I was reading the biography of Norman Birkett "The Life of Lord Birkett of Ulverston" by H. Montgomery Hyde. Many of us recall that this great jurist was in Ottawa in 1947 and that he spoke with great effect in Washington before the bar association in 1950. I note, according to this biography, that in 1957, he was asked by the British prime minister, Mr. Macmillan, to become chairman of a small committee of Privy Councillors which all three political parties in parliament had agreed should hold an immediate inquiry into the exercise of the prerogative power of the Home Secretary of intercepting telephone communications—telephone tapping as it was commonly known. Lord Birkett, as he later became, was of Liberal persuasion. The other members of the committee were Lord Monckton representing the Conservatives and Mr. Patrick Gordon Walker for the Labour party.

The committee was given the widest possible terms of reference, in particular to consider and report upon under whose authority, to what extent and for what purposes this power had been exercised and to what use information so obtained had been put, and to recommend whether, how, and subject to what safeguards this power should be exercised and in what circumstances information obtained by such means should properly be used or disclosed. Incidentally, I believe that at this stage none of us who are now speaking to this bill know what actual conditions and practices prevail in Canada. I, certainly, do not have this information; I am not aware of any of the facts.

The report which Birkett himself drafted was presented to parliament, and contained these interesting conclusions:

1. The right of the power to intercept communications can only be surmised, but the power has been exercised from very early times; and has been recognized by a succession of statutes covering the last 200 years or more.

2. The power is identical with the power to open letters and rests on the ancient power to intercept communications.

I might mention that there is another view, namely that the power rests on a comparatively modern statute, the Telegraph Act of 1868.

3. The power to intercept communications is exercised for the prevention and detection of serious crime and for the preservation of the safety of the State.

4. The power is now almost exclusively exercised by the Metropolitan Police, the Board of Customs and Excise and the Security Service. It is used with the greatest care and circumspection, under the strictest rules and safeguards, and never without the personal considered approval of the Home Secretary.

5. The use of the power has been effective in detecting major criminals and preventing injury to national security.

6. The exercise of the power in these limited spheres should be allowed to continue under the same strict rules and supervision and in the special circumstances set out above.

(5:30 p.m.)

And finally:

7. The interference with the privacy of the ordinary law-abiding citizen or with his individual liberty is infinitesimal and only arises as the inevitable result of intercepting the communications of some wrongdoer. It has produced no harmful consequences.

My hon. friends who are interested may read the report of the committee of privy councillors appointed to inquire into the interception of communications which was presented to the British parliament in October, 1957, and may note that Mr. P. Gordon Walker, the labour member, had minor reservations which are contained on page 38 of the committee's report. Some of these are rather interesting, and are worthy of being referred to right now. I shall do so only in summary form. Mr. Gordon Walker stated:

In my opinion public concern about telephone tapping is such that if the interception of communications for the detection of crime continues as in the past there may be some danger of a weakening of the popular approval without which the police cannot in the long run carry on effectively.

I think that is a novel, ingenious, and probably very wise argument. He also said:

One of the factors determining the evolution of policy in regard to the interception of communications has been the state of public opinion towards the exercise of this power... the interception of letters to prevent the transmission of illegal lottery material was abandoned in November 1953; shortly afterwards the interception of letters believed to contain obscene matter was similarly discontinued. In my view the interception of communications should never have been used for either of these purposes;—

Mr. Gordon Walker concluded:

Public repugnance to the interception of communications has, it seems to me, increased and there should therefore be a further restriction upon the use of this power for the purposes of the detection of crime. In future the interception of communications should, in my submission, no longer be regarded as an admissible method of detection in what may be called ordinary cases of crime ... but should be authorized only when the Secretary of State is satisfied that there is the most extreme and urgent reason.

He goes on to spell out what he means.

The application of these new and much stricter standards of judgment by the Secretary of State should, I suggest, be such that the interception of communications for the detection of crime would in practice cease to be used for long periods of time. It would be a power held in reserve for unusual and extraordinary cases of the utmost urgency, in which there could be no doubt that the use of the power would carry overwhelming public support.

He makes a distinction between interception of communications for the detection of crime and for security reasons and purposes, and I think this is borne out by every study of the matter made throughout the world. Mr. Gordon Walker made this important point:

A far larger proportion of the information that the security service must discover is obtained by interception of communication than in the case of the Police or the Customs. A great deal of this vital information could be discovered by no other means. There cannot, therefore, in my view be the same sharp restriction of the use of the interception of communications by the Security Service as I recommend in regard to the use of this power for the detection of crime.

Even in the field of security the strictest possible limits should be set to the use of the power to intercept communications.

Then he states out what he thinks are two legitimate considerations, as follows:

(1) direct counter-espionage and protection of high secrets of State;

I doubt that there is anybody who would seriously challenge that conclusion. Then he sets out the second, and remember that this is Mr. P. Gordon Walker of the Labour party:

(2) the prevention of the employment of Fascists or Communists in connection with work, the nature of which is vital to the state.

Anyone who has gone into the recent studies resulting from the defection some years ago of Philby, and noted the inter-relationships between the various departments of the British government as they may relate to defence and foreign affairs, must appreciate that here we are dealing with an extremely sensitive area.

It is interesting to look at page 41 of the report of the committee of privy councillors inquiring into the interception of communications in Brtiain. On that page there is a table listing the number of interceptions authorized by the British secretary of state. Running through the years from 1937 to 1956 I notice that under the heading "Police, Customs, Post Office and Security," interceptions by telephone totalled as few as 17 in any one year and never went higher than 231, and I would point out that this is in the United Kingdom which has a population several times that of Canada. The figure for the interception of letters is somewhat larger, ranging from a low of 90 in 1945 up to 1,192 in 1940.

Under the heading "Drugs, Lotteries and Obscene Publications" only ten interceptions by telephone are recorded, all of these taking place in the year 1955. Interception by letters ranged in total from as few as two in some years to a high of 714, and in five of the years from 1937 to 1956 there were no letter interceptions whatever. I believe these figures show the great reserve in the use of this power in Britain. They demonstrate that this privilege of the British secretary of state has been used with great circumspection, and I believe there has been no serious challenge to the conclusions of this committee which indicate that this power has been used wisely and well.

I congratulate the hon. member on his contribution to a very important subject. I have no doubt that there is much classified information available to the government. If not there will be shortly, when the royal commission on security reports, which will assist parliament to do the right and wise thing to preserve the high standard that now prevails in this country and, if anything, see to it that that standard is enhanced and improved.

Mr. Grant Deachman (Vancouver Quadra): Mr. Speaker, the story of wire tapping, eavesdropping and bugging is in a sense the story of the erosion of our own personal rights and freedoms as science enables us to extend our ears to listen in many directions, even through walls and into places we cannot get physically. At the outset of my remarks, I wish to correct one false impression which the hon. member for Kootenay West (Mr. Herridge) may have left with the house when he said that in the case in British Columbia Craig died from a bug. I want to correct that. Craig died from heart failure; he did not die of a bug.

Mr. Herridge: Mr. Speaker, I read it into the record that he had this heart trouble. I did not suggest he died from a bug.

Mr. Deachman: I am glad that we now have that corrected. Eavesdropping is an antique word, describing the act of hanging around the outside of a house or window to hear what is going on inside. Science has enabled us to progress ever since we began to learn something about electrical communication.

Wire tapping is also a pretty old word which is still in use. It describes the act of tapping into a wire and physically attaching something to it whereby one can listen to a conversation being conducted over the wire. More recently there came the word "bugging", but even it is fairly old. It refers to devices which pick up signals from an induction current wire, and which magnify the sound coming from a considerable distance away, thus enabling people to listen through walls and across considerable distances. More modern devices are coming into use all the time, and they are being used by all sorts of people to pry into other people's affairs.

• (5:40 p.m.)

These devices are not used just by criminals. As was pointed out by the commission of inquiry which investigated the invasion of privacy in British Columbia, automobile dealers in the city of Vancouver have found listening devices to be very handy in determining what price to set on a car. You simply walk into the car lot where you are met by a man known in the trade as a "liner". His job is to show you up and down the line of cars until you get an idea of the kind of car you want to buy. When you are hanging around a certain car looking as if you are about to talk seriously about it, he brings in a man known as a "closer". This is a man who is able to close a contract. He has the confidence of management. This man takes you into a little room where he discusses the price with you while the manager listens over the bugging device. Then he excuses himself from the room. I do not know for what reason, but we all know that we have to excuse ourselves from time to time.

After the "closer" leaves the room, the man and his wife talk together while he and the manager listen to the conversation. They speak about the price of the car. The woman tells the husband the amount of money he is able to spend. So, the manager and the "closer" then discuss what the price should be, what the offer will be, and then return to the room where the deal is closed. It works very well. The best automobile companies in Vancouver were using this method. These people appeared on the stand and gave evidence before the commission of inquiry into the invasion of privacy. For weeks after that, one could hardly get anybody in Vancouver to buy a car except in the middle of a field. This is an example of commercial bugging used every day in business.

Some of the other ways in which bugging can be carried on are interesting. I should like to cite a few of these in case hon. members should run across them in the course of their duties in the House of Commons or when they go to cocktail parties. I should like to quote from the Ottawa Citizen story by Bruce Phillips of February 20, 1965. This story comes from Washington. The article begins by asking a question:

> Are you a martini drinker? Be careful the next time you take one. It may be listening to you.
>
> It sounds outlandish and it is, but the electronic martini (microphone in the olive, antenna in the toothpick), is only one of a bizarre collection of snooping devices paraded before a senate investigating committee this week.

Then in a later paragraph the article continues:

> As a dramatic demonstration, the committee chairman, Senator Edward V. Long, was startled to be told by one of the witnesses that a bowl of roses on his desk was bugged.

There are paragraphs which contain some explanation of some of the other devices currently in use:

> A small dish-type antenna, freely available through the mail-order catalogues, called the "big ear", which magnifies sound a million times and can monitor conversations a block away. It costs $18.95.

That would be plus the tariff, exchange and sales tax if one were to buy it in Canada.

> A laser-type beam which can be aimed at a room several blocks away and transmit back a television picture, with sound.
>
> A small transmitter which can monitor telephone conversations from any distance, and is practically undetectable.

Then, the writer gives some advice concerning what we should do in this kind of world:

> People who must talk in a room, he said, should unplug the telephone, turn on the shower and bathroom faucets, and turn on a radio or television set full volume.

We need to do that in caucus, but we do not have any taps there to turn on.

> A private detective from San Francisco, Harold Lipset, showed some of the devices perfected on the west coast. They include a tie-clip microphone, an ordinary office stapler concealing a microphone, and a portrait with a transmitter buried in the framing.

Mr. Lipset said there were 10,000 businesses in northern California alone which used devices to spy on their employees, and without citing his source he said 5,000 federal government offices also have snooping equipment.

In such a world what can we do to defend ourselves? I have here a number of clippings dealing with the ways in which such devices are used in Canada. This is not simply information which came from United States stories concerning uses there. This has to do with usage on this side of the border. The library of the House of Commons keeps a considerable file known under the old fashioned phrase "wire tapping". In that file one finds all sorts of clippings dealing with the amount of bugging which goes on in Canada. The following appears in the Ottawa Citizen for April 9, 1964:

Ernest Nuttall, 63, whose testimony helped acquit John Wasylenchuk of Burnaby, B.C., of second-degree murder charges in Seattle last week, said his own telephone was tapped.

"People have no idea of the extent of wire-tapping today," he said in an interview. "They would be amazed."

Nuttall said: Police secretly have telephone company officials make records of telephone conversations.

In the same story another policeman denies this. Then, there is a story in the Edmonton Journal for August 12, 1964 which in part reads as follows:

Thomas O'Dwyer, an Edmonton real estate man who has become a central figure in a mysterious controversy involving the Alberta government, said Tuesday he suspects his phone is being tapped by the RCMP.

In another dispatch of the Canadian Press from Toronto which appears in the Ottawa Journal for May 6, 1964 we find the following:

A Conservative member of the legislature said Tuesday that wire tapping and "bugging" of private conversations is prevalent in his own community of London, and probably throughout Ontario.

John White (PC—London South) told Attorney-General Wishart that auto dealers in London and the Bell Telephone Company used concealed microphones to listen in on conversations.

Then in the Toronto Globe and Mail for August 28, 1964 we find the following:

A. W. Miller, a lawyer who has acted for several clients whose phones were tapped, will contend that the law, the only one of its kind in Canada, is ultra vires, and should be quashed.

This was in respect of a bylaw in the city of Edmonton which would prevent wire tapping.

There is plenty of evidence in these clippings concerning wire tapping of all kinds which is done commercially, which is done criminally, which is done by the police and which is done every day in major cities across Canada. The argument made on the side of the authorities is that crime proliferates in our cities and that they in turn use these scientific devices so that they can pry into the bedrooms or bug our paper clips in order to prevent crime and combat it. This is a danger to freedom. It constantly erodes our freedom. We will not be able to live as we have lived in the past under the old laws which denied police officers the right to use bugging devices to combat crime. At the same time, the criminal will have all the advantages of using these devices for the purpose of committing crime.

When we consider passing legislation of this kind which empowers a person to use such devices, we must remember that we are slowly eroding away a piece of our own freedom and that we must do it only after careful thought.

• (5:50 p.m.)

This is not really the only way in which we are eroding our freedoms today as a result of the science we are building around us. Here, in the government, we are adding more and more computers to our operations. As these computers become more sophisticated and are able to contain more information, as they are cross-linked and connected with each other, we are approaching the day when the government will be able to press a button and up will pop instant history. The computer will provide statistics regarding our health, our finances, our ability to pay our bills, our army records, the number of times we have passed through stop streets or violated parking meters and all sorts of things. This information will be placed on cards and stored as a record of our actions. Whatever we build by way of communication devices may extend our capability and may improve our standards of living, but at the same time will mean we must live more and more in glass houses. That is perhaps one of the penalties we pay for the kind of progress we are making in the whole field of communications.

Mr. S. Perry Ryan (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, the hon. member for Kootenay West (Mr. Herridge) deserves our compliments for taking a different approach to the suggested legislation respecting the right of privacy. He seeks not to amend the Criminal Code but brings a new bill before us which highlights the right of privacy, not the right to invade it.

I submit we should not develop a national anxiety neurosis about wire tapping and bugging devices. I know when the hon. member for Kootenay West travels westward to his home on the Kettle Valley railway he has time to worry that possibly these things are present around him. I should like to submit that all these measures of private members, of a similar vein, should not be pressed at the present time. Not only is the Department of Justice hard pressed with other Criminal Code amendments and the upcoming federal-provincial conference on the constitution, but there are other valid reasons for taking a little more time before bringing into force any legislation analogous to the legislation put forward by many members.

First of all, the report of the royal commission on security has not been tabled. It likely will take a very careful look at this whole field of wire tapping and will make recommendations. When the bill of the hon. member for Winnipeg North (Mr. Orlikow), of a similar vein, was being debated, we learned that the Canadian Bar Association had this whole matter under consideration. Although the bar association did not get far with this subject at the last annual meeting, apparently it will be thoroughly studied in the interim. Likely when the next meeting is held in September of this year we will receive a very thorough and considered report on the views of that association. It seems to me there is not so much urgency about this matter that we would be prevented from waiting until we hear from this learned body.

I agree that this field needs to be controlled and regulated, but there is no necessity for ill-advised haste in this connection. I should hope that members will stand bills of this nature until next September rather than press forward with them. That is my own personal view of the matter. I am advised that the Department of Justice has received a number of recommendations in respect of wire tapping and electric eavesdropping devices. The deputy attorney general of British Columbia has forwarded a resolution of the Vancouver city council in favour of a Criminal Code amendment restraining wire tapping.

By a resolution dated October 26, 1964, the council of the corporation of the city of Toronto indicated that it is categorically opposed to the unrestricted use, whether in the process of law enforcement or otherwise, of any kind of mechanical or electronic device for intercepting or overhearing words spoken in conversation by one person to another, not intended to be heard by the person using such device. They expressed the belief that the use of such device is an offence against an individual's right to privacy, and as such should be forbidden under all circumstances except where a superior court judge otherwise orders for the purpose of criminal investigation.

The bill at hand, of course, recommends that a peace officer or magistrate have the power to otherwise order the use of these devices. The Bell Telephone Company of Canada, by a letter dated February 14, 1966, urged in fact that the government sponsor legislation in respect of wire taping and offered in co-operation in studying the subject.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hour appointed for the consideration of private members' business has now expired.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

Mr. Knowles: Perhaps someone could tell us the business for next week.

Mr. Pepin: I am very sorry, Mr. Speaker, that I do not have the information. I will see to it that the house leaders receive it as soon as possible.

Mr. Knowles: Might it be the broadcasting legislation?

Mr. Pepin: Perhaps it will be announced on television tonight. Mr. Speaker, before we leave, let me say I have just been informed that we will continue the debate on the new broadcasting policy.

At six o'clock the house adjourned, without question put, pursuant to standing order.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Monday, January 29, 1968

The house met at 2.30 p.m.

UNITED NATIONS

NORTH KOREA—STATEMENT RESPECTING SEIZURE OF U.S. SHIP

Hon. Paul Martin (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, on Friday last a number of questions were raised with regard to the serious situation which has developed as a result of the seizure of the United States ship known as Pueblo by North Korea and their continued detention of that United States naval vessel and its crew. It was suggested by the hon. member for Ontario that I should make a statement today.

I am sure all hon. members will understand that the fullest possible statement cannot be made at the present time because of the important discussions and consultations that are now still under way at the United Nations. The United States authorities have stated categorically that at the time of its seizure on the evening of January 21 the vessel in question was in international waters. We accept the United States statement with regard to the ship's co-ordinates at that time. The information available to us strongly indicates that this point does lie in international waters and not in territorial waters. North Korea has alleged otherwise but so far had not put forward any evidence in support of its contention.

The ship in question was under United States command and not under the command of the United Nations in Korea. The dispute therefore is essentially one between the United States and North Korea. We do not consider it to be a violation of the Korean armistice of 1953. Canada therefore on that account is not involved. However, we are concerned with the potential danger to international peace which this incident involves. We have a particular responsibility as a member of the Security Council to make every effort to find a peaceful solution.

On Thursday last when I was not in the house questions were asked about our obligations to Korea under the declaration made by the 16 contributing countries in the United Nations force. Canada's present obligations to Korea derive from the 16-nation declaration on Korea issued at Washington on July 27, 1953 immediately following the signing of the Korean armistice agreement. That declaration includes this statement:

> We affirm, in the interests of world peace, that if there is a renewal of the armed attack, challenging again the principles of the United Nations, we should again be united and prompt to resist.

The United Nations command remains in Korea with the full sanction and authority of the Security Council. Canada still has a liaison officer attached to the United Nations command but the last of the Canadian contingent, which was the third largest national force sent to Korea as a result of the Security Council's appeal in 1950, was withdrawn in 1957, four years after the conclusion of the Korean armistice agreement.

• (2:40 p.m.)

There is not at this time any specific Canadian commitment to supply military forces or equipment. Should the situation in Korea develop adversely, and I sincerely hope it will not—it is certainly a matter of concern that there has been in recent months a marked increase in the number of incidents investigated by North Korea—it would be for the Canadian government and parliament, in the absence of a new United Nations resolution, to decide whether the situation fell within the meaning of the 16-nation declaration of which this country is a signatory. In any event the matter would have to be referred to the Security Council before any action could be taken by the United Nations.

The Security Council met on January 26 at the request of the United States. The Canadian representative, noting the council's primary responsibility for international peace and security, supported inscription of an item on the increase of tension in the area of Korea and welcomed the decision of the United States to seek the assistance of the United Nations to help it solve a difficult problem through diplomatic channels. Our ambassador suggested that one possible way of bringing about a speedy and equitable solution might be an arrangement for an intermediary or intermediaries.

At a second meeting of the council on Saturday there was unanimous support for the further Canadian suggestion that progress might best be achieved by private consultations which would enable members of the council to consider and develop any ideas or suggestions they might have. This seemed to be the best way of dealing with the immediate problem of the Pueblo.

Those consultations, in which all members of the council have been participating, have been proceeding over the week end in New York and in a number of national capitals. They proceeded this morning, and they are taking place again at this very moment. A number of ideas have been explored I think in a useful and constructive fashion. I am encouraged to date by the sense of responsibility and restraint, as well as by the sense of urgency, which have marked these consultations. I must say that the government of the United States has displayed moderation and a commendable desire to seek a solution through diplomatic means. I hope all countries which may be involved in the consequences of failure to resolve the controversy will show an equal determination to seek a settlement through peaceful means.

Furthermore, members of the Security Council, and this includes Canada, have a special responsibility to seek a reasonable and early solution. I can assure the house that the government is following this matter very closely, is in continuous contact with the parties concerned, and I hope the end result of these consultations will be the resolving of this matter in a way which will not add to the dangers in the situation.

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I should like first of all to say it is reassuring to know that the Secretary of State for External Affairs recognizes that we are in a position of special responsibility along with other countries in connection with this grave dispute which, of course, is a serious threat to international peace. While we are not directly involved here, as there is not a breach of the armistice, there is always the possibility that developments can lead to this.

So I think we have a particular responsibility not only to do what can be done in the interests of international peace, not only to discharge our responsibilities as a member of the Security Council, but also in view of our own situation as a signatory of the armistice. Certainly we cannot be mere spectators, and it is reassuring that the Secretary of State for

[Mr. Martin (Essex East).]

External Affairs recognizes this. I would commend the activity and energy of our ambassador, who has helped buy time, which is important, of course, in reaching a solution. It is important also, I think, in connection with the safety of the members of the crew, which is a factor that we cannot overlook. I therefore wish to urge that this government continue to make every possible contribution in seeking solutions to this very serious problem.

One cannot help but be impressed by the number of disputes and the recurring difficulties arising in connection with what one might call divided countries, of which this is one. My understanding is that none of these divided countries is a member of the United Nations. While I have no doubt there are very considerable difficulties involved in this question, I think it would be useful for our country to explore the possibility of involving these divided countries with the United Nations, as members if possible; because it seems pretty clear that the absence of membership in the United Nations is one of the added difficulties involved here. Therefore, if I may presume to do so, I would urge upon the Secretary of State for External Affairs a full exploration of the possibility of reducing future difficulties by a closer involvement of these countries with the United Nations.

The Secretary of State for External Affairs has emphasized the seriousness of this particular dispute, with which all members of the house would agree. We encourage the minister and the Department of External Affairs to explore with all possible energy every possibility of reaching a solution.

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Burnaby-Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, I am sure members of the house will welcome the statement by the Secretary of State for External Affairs. I think we should look upon it as very commendable that a great power like the United States should have referred this serious incident to the United Nations rather than taking unilateral military action which could have far reaching consequences for the peace of the world.

It seems to me that from Canada's viewpoint there are two main points to be underscored. The first is that we do not look upon this incident of the seizure of the United States ship Pueblo as a violation of the North Korean armistice of 1953. I think we have to see this incident in the context of the cold war and the long series of incidents that have arisen out of espionage and counter-intelligence carried on by both ships and planes. There have been many of these instances over the past few years, and this is simply another one of them.

• (2:50 p.m.)

I am glad the Secretary of State for External Affairs has made a clear declaration with respect to Canada's position. I noticed that last Friday the United States state department called together the diplomatic representatives of the 16 countries which were signatories to the Korean armistice agreement. Although that meeting may have been called merely for the dissemination of information, in the light of some of the statements that have been made by congressional leaders in the United States to the effect that their country was still at war with North Korea, and that if hostilities were resumed it might be necessary to use tactical nuclear weapons, I think it is imperative for Canada at this time to make abundantly clear that we do not regard the Pueblo incident as a resumption of hostilities in North Korea, and that consequently Canada has no military obligation.

The second point that must be understood is that the immediate task is to secure the return of the ship and its crew to the United States. I do not think there is any value in arguing now about the location of the ship. This is something that will have to be determined by some international body or some intermediary. The United States claimed that the ship was 25 miles from the mainland, and later set the figure at 15.4 miles from the Korean island of Ungdo. North Korea claims that the ship was 7.6 miles from the mainland and was in its territorial waters.

I think the most pressing problem is to secure the services of an intermediary acceptable to both sides who can try to find a solution under which the ship and its crew can be returned. Later, if it were found there was some invasion of territorial waters, whatever indemnification is necessary could be set at that time. The difficulty will be in securing an intermediary who is acceptable to both sides to be appointed by the United Nations, in view of the fact that North Korea is not a member of the United Nations.

I hope the Secretary of State for External Affairs is giving some thought to the possibility of using the neutral supervisory commission, which was accepted by both sides on July 27, 1953 and which might now be acceptable to both sides as an intermediary. I think this incident points up the necessity of having established at the United Nations some type of international tribunal which can ascertain the accuracy of facts in a dispute of this nature and report these facts to the Security Council.

I think the minister and our representative at the United Nations are to be commended for the contribution they have already made in pressing for an intermediary who will be acceptable to both sides, but I think the important thing at this stage is for the government to make it abundantly clear that this isolated incident, regrettable though it may be, cannot be looked upon by Canada as a violation of the Korean armistice agreement and that it does not involve Canada in any military commitments.

[Translation]

Mr. C.-A. Gauthier (Roberval): Mr. Speaker, I wish to join with the members of the opposition to congratulate the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Martin). We think that he displayed great wisdom until now, for this is a special case. Indeed, it is in similar circumstances that world wars often break out and the minister knows that perfectly well.

Not only is it our duty to see to it that the 1963 treaty is not violated by either country, but also to bring out the truth, in order to give justice to both parties.

Nevertheless, we find it rather strange—and I think that will be the stumbling-block for the United Nations, which will probably have to settle the question—that only one party, the United States, is represented at the United Nations, since the other party, North Korea, is not a member of the organization and therefore will probably not be present to defend itself.

But the first thing that strikes us, we who are not military men, is to hear that a spy ship was navigating in either territorial or international waters, and the crucial question will be to determine the location of the ship. The United States, naturally, will say that it was in international waters, and North Korea will maintain that it was in her territorial waters. I think it will be rather difficult to get at the truth, because only the crew of the American ship really knows where the ship was.

Allowances will have to be made but, once again, the Secretary of State for External Affairs was very prudent. We must be increasingly careful because, while we want to make allowances, we do not want the United States to blame others for its own errors.

The matter now before the Security Council of the United Nations will surely be discussed thoroughly. We feel that unless the whole matter is clarified completely, it could lead to a third world war. Our authorities, and especially the Secretary of State for External Affairs, must therefore at all cost continue their good diplomatic work in order to prevent all those squabbles that could degenerate into a world war.

[English]

Mr. R. N. Thompson (Red Deer): Mr. Speaker, we in our party join in the expression of gratitude that has been mentioned by the other speakers in relation to the statement by the Secretary of State for External Affairs. I might say that while he is right in explaining that this is not actually a transgression of the armistice agreement in Korea, technically the United States and North Korea are at war because they never have signed a peace treaty. This makes the situation all the more serious.

Furthermore, there have been continuing provocations of increasing intensity across the demilitarized zone. Early last year it was my privilege to be at Panmunjom to see the actual evidence of such provocations and to speak with soldiers who had been involved in what was then apparently a pattern of provocation on the part of the North Koreans. However, we do share the minister's expression of satisfaction at the degree of temperance shown by the President of the United States and his government. We hope Canada will maintain the initiative in attempting to have an intermediary appointed in the hope of settling the problem by peaceful means.

It is interesting to note that if only the U.S.S.R. were a little bit interested in peace, she would join others in attempting to work out a settlement of this affair. It is interesting to note also that the second practical suggestion to come out of the Security Council, in addition to that which came from Canada, has come from the country of Ethiopia. Perhaps it is worth mentioning here that both countries played a very important part in the Korean war, and both are members of the Security Council today and tomorrow in an worthy way the free nations of the developed part of the world; the other is in like position with respect to the emerging nations of Africa. I only hope that the initiative taken by these two countries may be pursued in the Security Council today and tomorrow in an effort to force that body to make practical suggestions that will result in some section being taken to bring together the two parties concerned in this affair in the realization that the rest of the world wants a settlement and wants it quickly.

[Mr. Gauthier.]

• (3:00 p.m.)

While we may express gratification at the show of moderation by the United States we must still recognize that time is short. If the United Nations is to be of any assistance at this time it must move very quickly. Our representative on the Security Council, supported with all the strength of the government, should push forward our efforts so as to make the Security Council an effective instrument to deal with the problem facing it as a result of the North Korean affair.

BRITISH COLUMBIA INDIAN RESERVES MINERAL RESOURCES ACT

REPEAL OF PROVISION RESPECTING SURRENDER OF ENTITLEMENT

Mr. Frank Howard (Skeena) moved for leave to introduce Bill No. C-198, to amend the British Columbia Indian Reserves Mineral Resources Act.

Some hon. Members: Explain.

Mr. Howard: Mr. Speaker, it seems that the degree of co-operation between the federal and provincial governments reaches its zenith when somebody desires to take away Indian rights. This is what happened in 1943 when the British Columbia Indian Reserves Mineral Resources Act was passed by this parliament as a result of an agreement entered into between the province of British Columbia and the government of Canada without consultation with or the advice of our native Indian people.

One provision of the act requires that the native Indian people must surrender, in other words give up, their entitlement to mineral resources on the reserves before these resources can be exploited and developed. This is an obstacle in the way of any such development and this bill seeks to remove it by repealing the act itself.

Motion agreed to and bill read the first time.

QUESTIONS

(Questions answered orally are indicated by an asterisk.)

INDIAN HOUSING PROGRAM

Question No. 734—Mr. Nielsen:

Is the housing improvement program for Indian people as described in press release No. 1-67107 dated November 8, 1967, of the Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development available to the Indian people of the Yukon and the Northwest Territories and, if so, how many houses have been built in each territory under the program?

Hon. Arthur Laing (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): No, but the previous Indian housing programs which have been in effect in the Yukon and the Northwest Territories have been accelerated and continued. During the fiscal year ended 1966-67, 41 houses were constructed for Indian people in the Yukon Territory; in the Northwest Territories 98 houses were constructed under the Indian housing program during the same fiscal year.

LIBAU, MAN., POSTMASTERSHIP

Question No. 850—Mr. Schreyer:

1. In ordering the transfer of the postmastership at Libau, Manitoba, did the Postmaster General receive any recommendations in this regard from the Winnipeg District Office of the Post Office Department?

2. Did the Post Office Department inform the Postmaster at Libau at any time from July to September, 1967, that a competition would be held prior to the appointment of a permanent postmaster for that district?

3. Was such a competition held and, if so, how many applicants were there?

4. What percentage of the postal subscribers of the Libau Post Office district signed the petition submitted to the Postmaster General October 30-November 10, 1967, asking that the postmastership not be transferred?

5. Was Mr. Ewald Greening selected for appointment as Postmaster in 1964?

6. If so, was he in fact appointed at that time and, if not, for what reason?

7. As of January 1, 1963, on how many occasions have law enforcement officers been called upon by the Post Office Department to assist in the transfer of Post Office locations or postmasterships within a given postal district?

Hon. Jean-Pierre Côté (Postmaster General): 1. Yes.

2. No. On appointment as temporary postmaster, he was made aware that the appointment was temporary pending the appointment of a postmaster on a permanent basis.

3. No.

4. The term "postal subscribers" is not used by the Post Office Department. A record is maintained of the number of householders served from each post office in rural communities. A householder is defined as a person who occupies a house or an apartment, alone or as head of the household. The relationship of householders to "postal subscribers" is not available from departmental records.

5. Yes.

6. No. The initial selection was changed in favour of another applicant because of the latter's superior education and related clerical experience.

7. None.

PUBLIC SERVICE ARBITRATION TRIBUNAL

Question No. 882—Mr. Caouette:

1. When was the Public Service Arbitration Tribunal set up, and what are the names of the judges of this Tribunal?

2. How many cases were heard by this Tribunal since its inception, and (a) are the hearings public (b) are the decisions published?

3. Does this Tribunal have a Record Office and, if so (a) who is the clerk (b) where is the Record Office located?

Hon. Walter Gordon (President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Public Service staff relations board as follows: 1. The Public Service Staff Relations Act, which came into force on March 13, 1967, made provision for the establishment of a Public Service arbitration tribunal to arbitrate disputes arising out of the negotiation of collective agreements between the government as employer and the various bargaining agents representing its employees.

The statute provides that the tribunal is to consist of a chairman, appointed by the governor in council on the recommendation of the Public Service staff relations board, and two panels of other members, each panel consisting of at least three persons appointed by the board as being representative of the interests of the employer and employees respectively.

Mr. Justice Andre Montpetit of Montreal was appointed chairman of the tribunal for a three year period effective June 1, 1967. Appointments to the panels were announced by the Public Service staff relations board on January 19, 1968. With these appointments, the compostion of the tribunal is now complete.

Members of the employer panel are: Mr. Marius G. Bergeron, Q.C., of Montreal; Mr. A. Gordon Cooper, Q.C., of Halifax; Mr. R. G. Herbert of Vancouver; Mr. R. V. Hicks, Q.C., of Toronto; Mr. Jean Massicotte, Q.C., of Montreal.

Members of the employees panel are: Mr. R. Burns of Montreal; Mr. D. Coupland of Ottawa; Dr. L. Francis of Ottawa; Dr. S. Jamieson of Vancouver; Mr. W. Leonard of Regina.

These appointments, which are for a period of two years, become effective February 1, 1968. Members of the arbitration tribunal are eligible for reappointment. The appointment of panel members took place following consultation with the employer and the various employee organizations.

2. None. (a) The Public Service staff relations board has authority to make regulations regarding the establishment of rules of procedure for hearings of the arbitration tribunal. The board, however, has not deemed it necessary at this stage to make any regulations in this regard. In the absence of such regulations, the tribunal has authority, subject to the act, to determine its own procedure. The question as to whether its hearings will be public therefore is a matter for decision by the arbitration tribunal. No decision has been made. (b) This is a matter which has not yet been decided.

3. There is no record office as such. Under the legislation, requests for arbitration are to be made by notice in writing to the secretary of the Public Service staff relations board whose office is located in the Booth Building, 165 Sparks street, Ottawa.

QUESTION PASSED AS ORDER FOR RETURN

INDIAN STATISTICS, SASKATCHEWAN AND BRITISH COLUMBIA

Question No. 678—Mr. Howard:

1. What is the number of Indians, as defined in the Indian Act, who are registered as such in the province of Saskatchewan?

2. What was the total amount of money spent by the Indian affairs branch in the province of Saskatchewan during the fiscal year ended March 31, 1967, and of this how much was spent for (a) salaries for Indian affairs branch personnel (b) expenses for Indian affairs branch personnel (c) capital projects (d) welfare or relief assistance for Indian people (e) clothing for Indian people?

3. What is the name of each Indian person who was employed by the said branch and the amount of money each received with regard to his activities relating to each of the following Indian reserves (a) Standing Buffalo (b) Carry the Kettle (c) Pasqua (d) Okanese?

[Mr. Gordon.]

4. What is the name, position held by, and salary of each person employed by the said branch in its (a) commissioner's office in the province of British Columbia (b) regional office in the province of Alberta (c) regional office in the province of Saskatchewan?

5. What is the name, position held by, and salary of each person employed by the said branch in its (a) Athabasca Indian agency in the province of Alberta (b) File Hills Indian agency in the province of Saskatchewan (c) Fort Vermillion Indian agency in the province of Saskatchewan?

6. During the fiscal year ended March 31, 1967, what was (a) the total number of houses built, and (b) the total amount of money spent for materials and labour on the said houses, in each of the Indian agencies of Athabasca, File Hills, and Fort Vermillion, and how many (a) Indians and (b) non-Indians were employed in each of the said agencies on the construction of the said houses?

7. During 1966, how many homes on Indian reserves were destroyed by fire and how many Indian people died as a result of the said fires?

Return tabled.

CANADIAN CONSTITUTION

ATTENDANCE OF OPPOSITION REPRESENTATIVES AT COMING CONFERENCE

On the orders of the day:

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I should like to address a question to the Prime Minister. Has the Prime Minister reached any decision on whether provision will be made for representatives of opposition parties in the house to attend the federal-provincial conference early next month?

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I think letters went to my hon. friend and other leaders over the week end in this regard; I hope they did. In any event I will be in a position to make a statement tomorrow, I think, on the administrative arrangements for the conference generally and covering the matter raised by my hon. friend.

Hon. Michael Starr (Ontario): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Would the Prime Minister also let us know what are the plans for parliamentary sittings during the period of the constitutional conference?

Mr. Stanfield: A further supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Would the Prime Minister also indicate tomorrow to what extent it is proposed that the conference will be open and to what extent it is proposed that it will be closed?

Mr. Pearson: I have already suggested to the provincial heads of government, Mr.

Speaker, that the first day's session be open to the public. At the end of the first day we would then consider whether we could extend that procedure or whether for the purpose of negotiations and discussion during the next day some executive sessions might be required. I would hope that the final session could also be made public. I have made these proposals to the provincial governments.

Mr. Andrew Brewin (Greenwood): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Would the Prime Minister tell the house whether the administrative arrangements include—perhaps this will be covered in tomorrow's statement—a position paper or white paper setting out the proposals of the government regarding important constitutional issues which would be available to all members of the house?

Mr. Pearson: Mr. Speaker, I see no reason why that should not be done. I will certainly take it under advisement and try to cover it tomorrow.

HEALTH AND WELFARE

MEDICARE—REQUEST FOR ANNOUNCEMENT FOLLOWING PROVINCIAL REPRESENTATIONS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Burnaby-Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a question to the Prime Minister. In view of his statement to the press to the effect that the cabinet will take another look at the government's national medicare insurance program which is due to come into force on July 1, may I ask the Prime Minister whether the cabinet has considered the representations of the provinces and can assure the house and the country that it is the intention of the government to allow provinces which are desirous of doing so to proceed with medicare as of July 1 next?

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, unfortunately I was not able to attend cabinet last week. We will be discussing this matter during the current week and as soon as this discussion, which will bear on the examination that has been going on, is completed I shall be very glad to make a statement to the house.

Mr. Douglas: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. In view of the indication in the recent Gallup poll that has just been published that 55 per cent of the persons interviewed expressed a desire to have the government proceed with medicare as prescribed, will the government be more likely to give favourable consideration to this question?

Mr. Speaker: Order. The hon. member knows that he should ask a question directly.

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Will the Prime Minister also take into consideration the resolution passed at Montreal over the week end?

Mr. Pearson: I do not know to which resolution my hon. friend is referring, because 60 or 70 resolutions were passed.

Mr. Knowles: The one on medicare, Mr. Speaker.

CONSUMER AFFAIRS

CONSIDERATION OF PRINTING LABELS IN BOTH LANGUAGES

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Howard Johnston (Okanagan-Revelstoke): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs. With regard to the announcement by the minister of a study into the printing of labels in both official languages being made by his department, can the minister tell the house whether manufacturers associations, co-operative associations, etc., have been invited to submit opinions on this move?

Hon. John N. Turner (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I stated in Montreal that one of the fundamental rights of the consumer is to be able to understand what he or she is buying. This implies being able to buy a product that is labelled in his or her own language.

I have been in touch with the Packaging Association of Canada about this problem. There are constitutional aspects to it that we have not finished looking into. There are also certain international trade treaties that have relevancy to the question. The government will, I am sure, announce a firm policy in this regard when the question has been researched.

Mr. Johnston: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. I wonder whether any study might await further reports from the royal commission on bilingualism and biculturalism in which this matter may be dealt with.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Inquiries of the Ministry

HOUSING

INQUIRY AS TO FURTHER GOVERNMENT ACTION

On the orders of the day:

Hon. George Hees (Northumberland): Mr. Speaker, I should like to address a question to the Prime Minister. In view of the fact that the 149,000 housing units completed during the past year are 8 per cent fewer than the figure for the year before, does the Prime Minister consider that the change in ministers responsible for housing will be sufficient to correct the situation or does the government have any new plans—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. This question is not acceptable; it is an argument.

Mr. Hees: As I never wish to be controversial or provocative, Mr. Speaker, may I rephrase my question. In view of the situation that I have outlined does the government have any new plans to lay before the house—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Hees: —at the present time?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member for York South.

[Later:]

Hon. E. J. Benson (President of the Treasury Board): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a question of privilege. A few minutes ago the hon. member for Northumberland put some misleading figures on the record which I believe should not be allowed to stand.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Hees: They were not misleading.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Whether the figures cited by the hon. member for Northumberland are right or wrong is not a question of privilege, and the matter cannot be raised as a question of privilege. It is a matter of debate, and the minister will have to find an appropriate time to make his argument.

[Later:]

Mr. Warren Allmand (Notre-Dame-de-Grâce): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a question to the President of the Treasury Board. In view of the importance of the matter will he inform the house as to the number of housing starts expected in Canada in 1968 and how this figure compares with 1967 and 1966?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I would think that this is the kind of information which should be given on motions. If I may say so, both questions asked by the hon. member for Northumberland were perhaps not entirely according to the rules. He knows very well that questions should be asked directly and not prefaced with statements. We would not have become involved in this difficulty if these statements had not been made by the hon. member. In any event I suggest to the minister that the only way he can give this information is by way of a statement on motions.

Mr. Benson: I have already given it, Mr. Speaker.

THE CANADIAN ECONOMY

HEATING OIL AND GASOLINE—REPORTED PRICE INCREASES

On the orders of the day:

Mr. David Lewis (York South): Mr. Speaker, I wish to address my question to the Minister of Finance. Last Friday I asked the minister whether his department is investigating the increase in gasoline and fuel oil prices in the west and the proposal to raise those prices in the east. Since a report this morning indicates that Shell Oil has already raised its prices, has the investigation that the minister told us would take place been completed? If so, what is the finding?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, the investigation is not completed.

INDUSTRY

SYDNEY, N.S.—INQUIRY AS TO GOVERNMENT ASSISTANCE TO STEEL INDUSTRY

On the orders of the day:

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I wish to address a question to the Prime Minister. Is he in a position to say today that his government has reached a decision with regard to the request from the government of Nova Scotia for assistance in the steel problem at Sydney? What is the position of the government in this regard?

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I have sent a letter to the premier of Nova Scotia making a further proposal for assistance by the government. I do not see why that letter should not be made public but I think that before doing so I had better get in touch with the premier of the province. If he has no objection I shall be glad to make it public.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

VIET NAM—PROPOSED EXPANSION OF INTERNATIONAL CONTROL COMMISSION

On the orders of the day:

Hon. E. D. Fulton (Kamloops): Mr. Speaker, I wish to ask the Secretary of State for External Affairs whether his attention has been drawn to a statement reported to have been made by the Prime Minister of India to the effect that she would like to see the personnel and staff of the international control commission in Viet Nam strengthened and expanded in order to enable that commission to carry out effective border patrol work with respect to the border of Cambodia. If so, could the Secretary of State for External Affairs say, since Canada and India appear to be ad idem on this matter, whether further efforts will be made to obtain the agreement of Poland?

Hon. Paul Martin (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, we have been having some discussions with the government of India. We should like to see the commission strengthened in this area.

Mr. Fulton: Mr. Speaker, I do not think the minister got the point of my question: Since India and Canada seem to be ad idem on the matter, will further representations be made in an effort to get the agreement of the government of Poland, the third member of the commission?

Mr. Martin (Essex East): Yes, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. David MacDonald (Prince): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Can the Secretary of State for External Affairs report to the house any recent information from Canada's representative on the commission who recently travelled to Hanoi to sound out the recent peace feelers which have been coming from that government?

Mr. Martin (Essex East): Mr. Speaker, I am not yet in a position to report on that visit, but I expect to hear from the commissioner as soon as he returns from Hanoi.

Inquiries of the Ministry

FINANCE

BANK OF CANADA—STATEMENT ON SECONDARY RESERVES

On the orders of the day:

Hon. Marcel Lambert (Edmonton West): My question is for the Minister of Finance, Mr. Speaker. On Friday I asked the minister whether he would consider making a statement with regard to the Bank of Canada's decision in setting the statutory secondary reserves. He said he would take my request under consideration. Can the minister now say what is the situation with regard to that matter?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I find that on January 24 the Bank of Canada itself made a statement on that matter. I might supplement what it said by saying to the hon. member and the house that the action taken by the Bank of Canada has not changed the practical situation, nor had it any purpose of that kind. In fact between January 1 and January 24 the secondary reserve ratio averaged well above 9 per cent even though there was a minimum requirement of only 7 per cent.

Mr. Lambert: Then I think the minister should have had the courtesy to table in the house any statement or correspondence between him and the Bank of Canada, so that hon. members could discuss this matter.

Mr. Sharp: May I ask permission now to table the statement which was made by the Bank of Canada?

Mr. Speaker: Is that agreed?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Lambert: But that procedure does not allow for comment.

REQUEST FOR ACCELERATED DEPRECIATION ON FARM STORAGE

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Lawrence E. Kindt (Macleod): Mr. Speaker, is the Minister of Finance in a position to report on my question concerning accelerated write-offs on farm storage built in 1967?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I have been inquiring into this situation. As the house will appreciate, these tax concessions are only effective if they are temporary. Any tax concessions made to promote building lose their purpose if continued indefinitely. I have not yet made a decision whether to reintroduce those concessions. They have now been out of effect for one year.

FLOODS

BRITISH COLUMBIA—INQUIRY AS TO FEDERAL ASSISTANCE

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Frank Howard (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a question to the Minister of National Defence about a subject I discussed with him earlier. Consequently he has had notice of my question. Can the minister give the house and country any information about any activities that his department may engage in with respect to the very serious situation in the Bella Coola valley in British Columbia, which is liable to be flooded at any moment?

Hon. Léo Cadieux (Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I have checked with my department. We have not had a request for help from the provincial authorities. We will, of course, respond quickly to any call in this particularly grave situation. We checked further this afternoon with the area commander to know whether he can be of immediate assistance if the entire situation is reviewed.

[Translation]

SHIPPING

ST. LAWRENCE RIVER—INQUIRY AS TO WINTER NAVIGATION

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Gilles Grégoire (Lapointe): Mr. Speaker, may I put a question to the Minister of Transport?

Is the minister in a position to say now whether he has received the report he has been expecting from the officials of his department since the beginning of winter on shipping on the St. Lawrence river? Furthermore, would the minister tell us if he intends to table his report in the house and to comment on it?

[English]

Hon. Paul Hellyer (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, unfortunately I was delayed this morning in arriving at Ottawa. Just before I came into the house I was briefed. I hope to have most of the points raised in that briefing down on paper so that they can perhaps be given tomorrow to hon. members who are interested.

[Mr. Sharp.]

AGRICULTURE

REPORTED SUGGESTION FOR CHANGE IN CONTROL OF WHEAT BOARD

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Lawrence Watson (Assiniboia): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a question to the Prime Minister. Can the Prime Minister advise the house whether the Minister of Agriculture was advocating government policy when he is reported to have said publicly that the Canadian Wheat Board should become the agent of the federal government instead of the agent of the farmers? Would this policy, if implemented, mean public control over the acres that could be planted in western Canada?

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I shall have to consult with the minister to see if in fact he said that.

VETERANS AFFAIRS

INTRODUCTION OF LEGISLATION RESPECTING PENSION INCREASES

On the orders of the day:

Mr. G. L. Chatterton (Esquimalt-Saanich): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Veterans Affairs. Accompanying the cheques to disability pensioners in January was a notice that the adjustment to take care of the increase, which is to be retroactive to January 1, will be made after parliament has passed the necessary legislation. Can the minister say when this legislation will be introduced?

Hon. Roger Teillet (Minister of Veterans Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I think I indicated when I made the announcement that we would take advantage of the first supplementary estimates to come before the house in the hope that the house will approve an item in those estimates to authorize payment of the adjustment.

Mr. Chatterton: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Can the minister then say when those supplementary estimates will be introduced so that veterans will know when their adjustment cheques will be issued.

An hon. Member: Haven't you heard of austerity?

Mr. Teillet: I cannot answer that, I am afraid.

Mr. H. W. Herridge (Kootenay West): I wish to direct a supplementary question to the Minister of Veterans Affairs. Can he inform the house of the latest development with respect to the translation of the Woods report? What has happened in that regard?

Mr. Teillet: Mr. Speaker, perhaps I might answer the earlier question with respect to estimates. I have been informed that the supplementary estimate will be ready early in February. My latest advice is that the Woods report should be ready very shortly, perhaps by the middle of February. However, I hesitate to make that a firm statement in view of recent experience.

Hon. E. D. Fulton (Kamloops): Would the Minister of Veterans Affairs issue a further announcement with their cheques advising veterans that parliament cannot deal with the legislation until the government introduces it, so that the responsibility can be properly attributed?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Chatterton: Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a supplementary question to the minister. In his absence on December 21 last I asked whether the government was giving consideration to an increase in the war veterans allowance payments. Can the minister answer that question now?

Mr. Teillet: Yes, Mr. Speaker. This matter has been very seriously considered, and while some W.V.A. recipients will receive a very small adjustment in view of the G.I.S. the decision has been made that no increase will be given at this time.

Mr. Herridge: As a supplementary question, in view of the decision not to give an increase at this time, would it be possible to increase the permissive income ceiling to accomplish the same effect?

Mr. Teillet: I am quite sure that has been done. I understand it was raised from $600 to $800 for a single person and from $900 to $1,200 for married people. I shall get the specific dates and supply that information to my hon. friend.

Hon. Gordon Churchill (Winnipeg South Centre): Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the Minister of Finance whether he will bring forward the appropriate estimate to cover the promised increase in pensions for disability pensioners inasmuch as an estimate can be passed at any time and I am sure the house would pass this one very quickly.

[Later:]

Mr. Churchill: Mr. Speaker, the question I addressed to the Minister of Finance should have gone to the President of the Treasury Board, who was anxious to answer it.

Hon. E. J. Benson (President of the Treasury Board): Mr. Speaker, I wonder whether my hon. friend would repeat his question.

Mr. Churchill: It is very simple. In the interests of the veterans of this country would the President of the Treasury Board bring forward as soon as possible the appropriate estimate to cover the promised increase which was announced quite some time ago? An estimate can be passed any time.

Mr. Benson: Mr. Speaker, we will bring it forward just as soon as possible. I understand the increase will be effective as of January 1, as indicated by the Minister of Veterans Affairs.

PROPOSED TRANSFER OF HOSPITAL FACILITIES, SAINT JOHN, N.B.

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Thomas M. Bell (Saint John-Albert): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a question to the Minister of Veterans Affairs. Has the minister received a communication from the Royal Canadian Legion asking for a delay in the transfer of the D.V.A. hospital facilities at Saint John West and, if so, what was his reply?

Hon. Roger Teillet (Minister of Veterans Affairs): Yes, Mr. Speaker, we have received such a representation. On the surface it appeared to be reasonable and at the moment we are re-examining the date of that transfer.

Mr. Bell (Saint John-Albert): Will the minister keep in mind the assurances that were given that no operational transfers would take place until new facilities are available?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

GREECE—DIPLOMATIC RECOGNITION OF PRESENT GOVERNMENT

On the orders of the day:

Mr. R. N. Thompson (Red Deer): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a question to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. Are the recent press reports true that Canada has extended diplomatic recognition to the present government of Greece?

Hon. Paul Martin (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, like other governments we are continuing our relations with Greece.

Mr. Thompson: A supplementary question. From the reports it seemed to me that deliberate action had been taken by the Canadian government in that the reports stated that Canada was now re-establishing diplomatic recognition. Is that not true?

Mr. Martin (Essex East): Mr. Speaker, recognition is accorded to the head of state, who continues to be the king, and we announced on Friday that we are continuing relations with the government of Greece.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

REQUEST FOR STATEMENT ON LEGISLATION TO BE DEALT WITH

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a question to the Prime Minister. Either today or tomorrow will he indicate to the house what items of legislation the government wishes parliament to deal with during the remainder of the present session?

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, we will be very glad to look into that possibility and make available to the house what we would like to get passed before we prorogue this session but, of course, whether we will be able to do it all will depend on the progress we make on the legislation now before the house.

AIR TRANSPORT

INQUIRY AS TO IMPLEMENTATION OF REGIONAL POLICY

On the orders of the day:

Hon. W. G. Dinsdale (Brandon-Souris): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a question to the Minister of Transport. Can the minister inform the house when the regional air policy, announced by the former minister in September, 1966 will be implemented?

Hon. Paul Hellyer (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, this is a general policy question on which I do not think it would be appropriate for me to comment. It is a very complicated problem but I would be glad to discuss it with my hon. friend at an appropriate time, perhaps when the departmental estimates are before the house.

Mr. Dinsdale: In view of the fact that this matter is of utmost importance to western Canadians I am sure the minister will want to take urgent action.

Mr. Hellyer: Yes, Mr. Speaker, urgent action is exactly what is required.

LABOUR CONDITIONS

INQUIRY AS TO ACTION TO MEET UNEMPLOYMENT SITUATION

On the orders of the day:

Hon. George Hees (Northumberland): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a question to the Prime Minister. In view of that fact that the number of unemployed persons in this country increased by 87,000 in the 12 months prior to December 1 last, according to the latest figures available from the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, does the government have any immediate plans to lay before parliament to stimulate the economy and correct this situation?

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, long experience has taught me to look into my hon. friend's figures before I reply to any of his questions.

Mr. Hees: Mr. Speaker, may I assure the house that the figures I used in both questions I asked today were from the D.B.S. and were absolutely correct.

NATIONAL DISASTERS

SICILIAN EARTHQUAKES—ASSISTANCE BY CANADA

On the orders of the day:

Mr. David Lewis (York South): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a question to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. The other day an hon. member asked him about the possibility of Canadian assistance to the victims of the earthquakes in Sicily and the minister referred to keeping in touch with the International Red Cross. Would he inform the house whether further inquiries have been made, whether the government has decided to offer assistance to the victims of these disasters and, if so, to what extent?

Hon. Paul Martin (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I am not in a position to give a definite answer today but I hope to do so very soon.

COMMONWEALTH RELATIONS

RHODESIA—PROPOSED CONFERENCE IN CANADA

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Andrew Brewin (Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a question to the right hon. Prime Minister and I regret I have not given him notice of it. In view of the crucial importance to the future of the commonwealth that the problems of Rhodesia be satisfactorily resolved, has the Prime Minister given consideration to the suggestion made, I believe by the Prime Minister of Zambia that the right hon. gentleman should take the initiative in arranging a commonwealth conference in Canada?

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, there would not be much purpose in having a conference of this kind to deal with this particular subject without the wholehearted approval of the government of the United Kingdom because that is the government that still remains primarily responsible. There have been exchanges of views between commonwealth governments as to the holding of a commonwealth prime ministers meeting, but no decision has been reached on whether it should be this spring, next autumn, or indeed when. I have had some correspondence with the heads of two commonwealth governments in Africa, including the President of Zambia, and I hope to have a talk with the Prime Minister of the United Kingdom when he visits Ottawa toward the end of next week.

[Later:]

Hon. Gordon Churchill (Winnipeg South Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Secretary of State for External Affairs. Now that the Canadian government has recognized the government of Greece would the minister follow the same precedent and establish relations with the government of Rhodesia, which is similarly illegal?

Hon. Paul Martin (Secretary of State for External Affairs): No, sir.

INQUIRIES OF THE MINISTRY

On the orders of the day:

Mr. J. A. Byrne (Kootenay East): Mr. Speaker, I should like to address a question to the Minister of Labour which is of very great concern to the fabric and woollen industry in Canada. Has the minister replied to a telegram from the employees of Saltsman dry cleaning enterprises about the refusal of that company to conform to the minimum wage law proposed by the New Democratic party?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Ed. Schreyer (Springfield): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct my question to the parliamentary secretary to the Minister of Transport. It relates to his question earlier today. I should like to ask him whether he has ever heard of the saying attributed to Mark Twain that one should get his facts straight before—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

[Translation]

Mr. Gilles Grégoire (Lapointe): Mr. Speaker, I wish to put a question to the right hon. Prime Minister.

In view of the resolution endorsed and adopted during the week end by the Liberal convention concerning the monarchic system in Canada, does the Prime Minister intend to adopt such legislation during the present session?

[English]

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

VIET NAM—REPORTED USE OF POISON GAS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Heath Macquarrie (Queens): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Secretary of State for External Affairs with reference to recent public charges by Dr. Vennema regarding the use of poison gas by United States forces in Viet Nam. Since Dr. Vennema was in Viet Nam under the auspices of the external aid office, has the minister made an investigation of these very serious charges and, if so, to what extent?

Hon. Paul Martin (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I understand that the information which appeared in the press was contained in a letter sent by Dr. Vennema to a friend in the United States. I have asked the external aid office to contact Dr. Vennema. Dr. Vennema has reported that his statement was taken out of context. We are waiting now for a further direct report.

Inquiries of the Ministry

TRADE

POSSIBLE IMPORT OF FROZEN BEEF FROM ARGENTINE

On the orders of the day:

Mr. C. S. Smallwood (Battle River-Camrose): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Agriculture. Is it true that the government is considering importing frozen beef from the Argentine?

Hon. J. J. Greene (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, I can assure the hon. member that the Department of Agriculture is not. I cannot speak for other departments, but to my knowledge they are not.

HOUSING

TORONTO—PROPOSED DEVELOPMENT OF MALVERN LANDS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Robert Stanbury (York-Scarborough): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the President of the Treasury Board. I am sure the minister is aware of the shortage of housing in the metropolitan Toronto area despite the fact that last year was a record year for starts in Canada and that this year will be another record year—

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Would the hon. member kindly resume his seat.

An hon. Member: That is all he wanted to say anyway.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member is trying indirectly to put statistics on the record.

Mr. Stanbury: I was just making preliminary remarks. I have not mentioned any statistics.

Some hon. Members: Order.

Mr. Stanbury: Can the minister report on the progress being made toward development of the Malvern lands owned by the federal and Ontario governments in partnership? Will homes be available at Malvern by next fall, as promised by the Ontario government?

Mr. Speaker: If the hon. member is only worried about next fall the question should be placed on the order paper.

Mr. Stanbury: I am afraid they would have to be started before then.

[Mr. Martin (Essex East).]

CO-OPERATIVES

INQUIRY AS TO INTRODUCTION OF LEGISLATION

On the orders of the day:

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Burnaby-Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a question to the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs. In view of the fact that for some three years now successive ministers have indicated the government's intention to bring down a national co-operatives act, may I ask the minister if work has proceeded to the point where such legislation will be introduced at this session?

Hon. John N. Turner (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I said to the Canadian Co-Operative Association last year and also when a delegation from that body visited me later that we wished to bring down amendments to the Canada Corporations Act which would be linked with any new Canadian co-operatives bill. We are also looking into certain constitutional aspects. I am hopeful that when we bring down amendments to the Canada Corporations Act in the very near future we will be able to introduce a new bill in the co-operatives field.

Mr. Douglas: Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask a supplementary question in two parts. First, do I understand it is the intention of the minister that there should be a separate co-operatives act as requested by the co-operative organizations and, second, will such legislation be introduced at this session?

Mr. Turner: Mr. Speaker, it would be my intention to have a separate co-operatives act. With regard to whether we will be able to introduce it at this session, I rather doubt that.

WOMEN

INQUIRY CONCERNING APPOINTMENT OF REPLACEMENT TO ROYAL COMMISSION

On the orders of the day:

Mrs. Grace MacInnis (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Prime Minister. On December 5, in regard to my question concerning a replacement for the member who resigned from the royal commission on the status of women, the Prime Minister replied that he hoped to make an appointment before long. Can the Prime Minister now say when the appointment will be made and whether he will consider an appointment from an unrepresented section of the population, the trade union movement?

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I have been in touch with a very well qualified gentleman in this field and have asked him whether he would fill the vacancy which has resulted from the resignation. I am waiting to hear from him.

VETERANS AFFAIRS

MEANS TEST FOR LOAN APPLICATIONS UNDER LAND ACT

On the orders of the day:

Mr. G. L. Chatterton (Esquimalt-Saanich): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Veterans Affairs. Last Monday I asked whether the government would give reconsideration to the directive stating that veterans who apply for loans under the Veterans Land Act will be subject to a means test. Has the government given consideration to the matter and what is the decision?

Hon. Roger Teillet (Minister of Veterans Affairs): First of all, Mr. Speaker, I cannot accept the statement of the hon. member about a means test. The purpose of the directive was simply to ensure that in the use of the funds being made available to establish veterans no hardships would result and therefore these examinations would be very carefully made so that no one would suffer in the allocation of the available funds.

Mr. Chatterton: Mr. Speaker, may I ask this supplementary question. So that members will be in a position to answer questions from veterans when the flood begins, will the minister ensure that members will be able to acquire copies of directives Nos. 4 and 5 which outline this procedure?

Mr. Teillet: I have inquired into this. It is my understanding that it is not usual to supply members of parliament or anyone else with interdepartmental documents. However, I am quite sure that the substance of those directives could be made available. I believe this information has been made available to the hon. member already.

Mr. H. W. Herridge (Kootenay West): Mr. Speaker, I have a related supplementary question. Is the minister now in a position to inform the house of any change in the regulation with regard to income ceilings for recipients of war veterans allowances?

Mr. Teillet: Mr. Speaker, I have the information with me. I could not locate it a moment ago. I was quite correct in saying that the increase in casual income ceilings is from $600 to $800 for a single veteran and from $900 to $1,200 for a married veteran. These regulations were approved by order in council on January 4 and the direction went out to the offices on January 9.

NATIONAL SECURITY

INQUIRY AS TO REPORT OF ROYAL COMMISSION

On the orders of the day:

Hon. E. D. Fulton (Kamloops): Mr. Speaker, may I ask the right hon. Prime Minister whether he has heard lately from the royal commission on security and whether he is able to advise us when we may expect a report from that commission?

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): Yes, Mr. Speaker. I discussed this matter with one or two members of the commission over the week end. I was informed that they hope to have their report completed by this summer and to be able to present it then.

COMPANY OF YOUNG CANADIANS

QUEBEC—REPORTED PURCHASE OF SPORTS CARS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Robert Simpson (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the right hon. Prime Minister. Can the Prime Minister say whether he is in receipt of a letter of complaint from a card carrying Liberal in Pointe Claire, Quebec, to the effect that the Company of Young Canadians, Quebec branch, has recently purchased $33,000 worth of sports cars?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Simpson: Has the Prime Minister had time to check that complaint?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

HEALTH AND WELFARE

POSSIBLE TRANSFER OF FOOD AND DRUG DIRECTORATE

On the orders of the day:

Mr. David MacDonald (Prince): Mr. Speaker, can the Prime Minister tell the house whether, in light of the increasing interest in consumer affairs being taken by the food and drug directorate, it is considered likely that the directorate will be transferred from the Department of National Health and Welfare to the new Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. This question might be placed on the order paper.

GRAIN

REQUEST FOR POLICY STATEMENT RESPECTING PRICES

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Ed. Schreyer (Springfield): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Agriculture. In view of the major resolution passed by the meeting of western Liberals, at which I believe the minister was present, having to do with grain prices and the price of wheat in particular, can he say whether he intends to make any policy statement before prorogation of this session of parliament?

Hon. J. J. Greene (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, any statement I had to make in respect of that western Liberal meeting was made in Winnipeg.

Mr. Schreyer: I was not attempting to cast any aspersions on any statement the minister may have made at that time. I should like to know, however, whether he has any intention of making a policy statement to the house in that regard.

Mr. Greene: Mr. Speaker, the representations of that responsible organization, like the representations of other responsible organizations, will be considered. If there is to be any statement made by the government it will, of course, be made in this house in the proper fashion.

BROADCASTING

IMPLEMENTATION OF CANADIAN POLICY

The house resumed, from Friday, January 26, consideration in committee of Bill No. C-163, to implement a broadcasting policy for Canada, to amend the Radio Act in consequence thereof and to enact other consequential and related provisions—Miss LaMarsh—Mr. Batten in the chair.

The Chairman: When the committee rose on Friday clause 2 (g) (i) was under consideration, with an amendment proposed by the hon. member for Red Deer. Clause 2 (c) was allowed to stand.

On clause 2—Broadcasting policy for Canada.

Mr. Thompson: Mr. Chairman, at the close of the debate last Friday on Bill C-163 I moved an amendment to clause 2 (g) (i). I did so because I am convinced that if this bill is to be of any use to the management of the C.B.C. and if it is to give us any assurance that the management in relation particularly to programming, will be more effective than it has been under the former arrangement it is necessary that guide lines be laid down in a more effective way than is the case with those already in existence. It may seem that the amendment is a very minor one and does not in any way really change the intent of this clause, but I believe it is important because it lays down a guide line that is vital to the well-being of this country. During this debate I have spoken as a parent concerned about what is being presented over our public broadcasting system that may be damaging to family life and the welfare of our youth in an age which has more pressures and temptations than ever before.

The amendment deserves to be given very serious consideration by the minister. It also certainly deserves the support of the members of this house who I believe are just as concerned as I am about the environment in which young people generally and our own children find themselves today. Television can be a tremendous force for good if it sets objectives directed toward supporting that aspect of our society which is vital to the future of our country. There is no more important aspect than home and family life. It is my belief that the public broadcasting system has a greater and more real responsibility to the parents, families and young people of this country than perhaps even our educational institutions, and I do not detract from their responsibility in any way. Certainly television, if it faces up to its responsibility in this area, could be a tremendous force for good, and it is in this light that television management should view its responsibility.

Many of my constituents and others from all provinces of Canada who have written me are concerned that, unfortunately, the C.B.C., our public broadcasting system, is producing the opposite effect in its television broadcasts. It would seem, as many of these letters suggest, that there must be some people who are intentionally and deliberately attempting to break down our culture and the concept of family life in this country. Otherwise the type of programming we now have could not continue as it does.

The second part of the amendment might be considered from the aspect of whether programs disseminated over our public broadcasting system can be considered as encouraging criminal activity. That is a pretty serious statement to make but I am convinced that is exactly what is happening. No better evidence of this could be provided than the program last night relating to the drug culture. I do not know how many saw it. At first it did not seem to me to be such a bad presentation. As I studied it and made note of some of the remarks and what seemed to be the over-all objective, I could come to no other conclusion but that it was not a public affairs show and not entertainment but a very subtle and clever job of selling drugs as an acceptable part of the new morality. This program was thoroughly advertised to ensure a very large audience. I am sure the majority of those who watched it were teenage university and high school students.

An hon. Member: When was it shown?

Mr. Thompson: It was shown on the C.B.C. program "The Way It Is" between ten and eleven o'clock p.m., Sunday, January 28.

I am so concerned about this drug culture program shown on C.B.C., after weeks of advertising to ensure a large audience, that I feel it can only be termed the greatest betrayal of Canadian youth and the most potentially dangerous emanation from any broadcasting agency ever to be seen in Canada. The tragedy is that almost no adults watching it would understand the dangers.

Mr. Lewis: Except the hon. member, no doubt.

Mr. Thompson: I am convinced that I was not the only one who recognized the dangers. As a result of the telephone calls and telegrams I received this morning I realize there are thousands of parents across this country who agree with me.

It seems to me that Ross McLean, the producer of "Drug Culture", and Patrick Watson deliberately attempted to encourage the teenage population to take up the use of drugs. To understand the show you have to put yourself in the place of a Canadian or American teenager watching it. Young people in cities and towns all know of some of their friends who have tried drugs, or have heard of someone who has, particularly around the schools and colleges. In fact, I have a personal friend whose daughter attends a high school in western Canada and just last week she was approached by drug pushers right in the high school where she attends classes.

• (3:50 p.m.)

Miss LaMarsh: Did you report it to the police?

Mr. Thompson: Therefore there is a temptation to try these drugs. We have all experienced that young, impressionable period of life and we should know that such things appeal because they are different and unknown. What could this program do for the youth who watched it except encourage them to experiment with drugs?

Not even one, strong statement was made about the danger of taking drugs. The one person on the panel who opposed it was an old man whose statements were for the most part all right but were anything but forceful. I ask hon. members to listen to what a leading medical man has to say, as quoted in today's Globe and Mail. "L.s.d. is a desperately dangerous drug", said Dr. J. S. Prichard, chief of neurology at the Hospital for Sick Children. Then he said:

> Enough evidence is in now that youngsters shouldn't even take one dose—and I'm not talking about the legal or moral aspects, but about the physical.

Later he referred to the evidence that l.s.d. causes breaks in the chromosomes which carry the genes that transmit hereditary characteristics and also govern certain processes within the body. He said there have also been reports of psychoses, that is, severe mental illnesses, resulting from the use of l.s.d.

On the program last night there was not one single reference to the adverse effects of using drugs. The producers of the program attempted to encourage their use and to give the impression that the taking of them was not really harmful. "Enough evidence is in now", said Dr. Prichard, "that youngsters shouldn't even take one dose." He referred to other scientific evidence to support his statement. These statements were made in the course of a seminar for teachers. Last week a statement attributed to the department of health of New York city revealed that in that city there are at the present time at least 150 young people who are in mental institutions as a result of taking l.s.d.

I have in my hand a quotation from an issue of the New York Times published only a few months ago. One of the world's authorities on the use of drugs, when speaking at the University of California, Los Angeles, Dr. Constandinos J. Miras, a pharmacologist from the University of Athens, said that chronic users of marijuana usually suffer adverse personality changes and are subject to damage to the brain and other organs. Dr. Miras said, further:

> I can recognize a chronic marijuana user from afar by the way he walks, talks and acts.

Canadian Policy on Broadcasting

This newspaper article continues:

He said personality changes after use of the drug included slowed speech, lethargy, lowered inhibitions and loss of morality. But users may also become suddenly violent without apparent provocation. They will even kill," Dr. Miras said. The common medical belief is that marijuana is not harmful to health.

That was the idea that was put across in the program last night, without any mention of the statements by health authorities. Dr. Miras went on to say that these symptoms occur after only two cigarettes a day for two years or longer. He said that personality changes result.

I can only add to these reports that I know that in California tragic numbers of people have been drawn into the use of heroin and other drugs by starting on marijuana, and most of them started on marijuana while attending educational institutions. Look at the police records in the United States and see how many of their young criminals had their moral level lowered by marijuana and entered upon crime without a moral qualm as a result, it is believed, of using the drug.

I say; Wake up Canada. There are men in the C.B.C. who would betray this country. Any research of any consequence at all would have turned up these facts for the producers of "The Way It Is" if they had been interested in presenting the other side of the story. Any responsible producer would have put these facts in their proper perspective on that show last night. But what did we see? No strong voices were opposed to the misuse of these drugs. There was only subtle discussion giving the pros and cons in a very calm and deliberate way.

It is obvious that the producers of this show deliberately selected their panelists, their audience and their film clips to play up the joys of drug-taking, making only a token reference to the dangers thereof. There was one short, quick sequence of a man writhing about in the withdrawal symptoms but minutes on end portraying good looking, intelligent boys talking about the fun, appeal and joyous effects of taking drugs. They are, in the words of one youth, king for a day.

This program last night even showed youth how to prepare the needle and how to prepare the powdered drug and put it into the needle. Then it showed where and how to inject it. Is this necessary on a public show which has the intention, or at least should have the intention, of showing the dangers of taking drugs? I do not think it is.

[Mr. Thompson.]

There was a bearded professor from Buffalo on the program who is at this very moment facing drug charges in the courts of the United States. He was brought to Canada to appear on a panel show that would give our young people the impression of promoting the use of drugs. This professor gave a long harangue on the virtues of the drug culture. Then an eloquent youth from the audience did likewise. He said, "What if only four or five die each year from l.s.d.? What is that compared with the millions killed in the war in Viet Nam? We in the drug culture are against war". Take drugs, was his message, and join the new generation who would save the world.

There was not one protest from that youthful audience against the use of drugs; there was only support. I know there are many responsible young people in our institutions and in our society who are opposed to the use of drugs and are protesting against the increasing traffic in drugs in our educational institutions. But where were their voices last night? They were not included, and it was not intended that they should be. If I were a member of the Mafia I would pay $1 million to promote a program such as we heard last night on "The Way It Is." Perhaps we had better look into that too. The sad thing is that most adults, as I did at first, would not even catch the subtle appeal that was intended to attract youth to accepting the message that drugs are okay. Try it, the youth implied, lots of kids do; there is no trouble getting out of it if you want to stop it afterwards.

I quote the words of the moderator of the program, Mr. Saywell, as I took them down, "We have come a long way from hostility to drugs to the investigation of them." So now mothers and fathers need not warn their children of the dangers of drugs; this question is being investigated to find out whether there is any harm in them. That was the gist of his remarks.

It is necessary to understand the appeal of television. It is not the words that matter so much as the appeal to the emotions. The camera played on the face of a beautiful boy several times for periods up to a minute while apparently he was under the influence of drugs. What a come-on for youth.

With regard to air pollution the C.B.C. portrayed on a feature program a few months ago, a spine-chilling spectacle of the tragic human consequences of fluoride polluted air. But with drugs there is no presentation. Instead there is a quiet approach showing that drugs are not really so bad after all.

• (4:00 p.m.)

I believe that the national television network is being used to promote something that is not only destroying the moral resistance of our young people but is also breaking their health, apart from the fact that they are breaking the law by so doing. I think it is important that there be a guide line in this paragraph which would make producers responsible before the law for the production of programs which might be considered to be criminal in nature.

Mr. Knowles: I wonder whether the hon. member thinks it is fair to John Saywell to suggest that his approach in the show last night was favourable to the use of drugs. I received the impression that both John Saywell and Patrick Watson were scared stiff of them.

Mr. Thompson: I would hope that the hon. member's statement is right, but I have here the words used by Saywell. He said:

> We have come a long way from hostility to drugs to the investigation of them.

That kind of statement does not carry the message which the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre is suggesting.

Mr. Knowles: I do not have John Saywell's words in my mind but I certainly remember Patrick Watson saying that because of his puritanical, Ontario background this thing scares hell out of him.

Mr. Thompson: I should like to think that something would scare some hell out of Patrick Watson because in my opinion he is doing a lot of damage in this country on the C.B.C. I can only say that as I listened to some young people explaining last night's program to me, my daughter being one of them, I understood it carried the subtle message that the use of these drugs is all right, that they should go ahead and try it and be king for a day because it is a great experience and there is nothing wrong with it. It also implied that the use of these drugs should not be considered a criminal act.

I do not intend to speak much longer. I commend this amendment to the minister and to the committee as one which merely sets down some guide lines for management in controlling not only the technical and financial aspects of public broadcasting but also programming in relation to what is apparently the attitude today among many television producers that free speech gives them the right to use the airwaves to promote their particular idea of what is right and wrong and in a way they think is right. Not only must we ascertain that the taxpayers' money is well spent; it is also necessary to ensure that a program dealing with the drug problem or the drug culture, as it is called, is fair in its approach and attempts to present the other side of the picture, at least by giving the general impression that the use of drugs is wrong. Therefore I hope that the committee and the minister will consider the amendment as being a useful guide line to the corporation's management.

Mr. Mather: Mr. Chairman, in speaking on the amendment, which I hope will be brought to a vote and disposed of very shortly, may I recall to the memories of hon. members something of the very long background of our deliberations on this legislation. When the legislation was introduced last year I believe I was one of the first to urge that it be sent as quickly as possible to the standing committee on broadcasting. I did this, as others did, because in considering as complex and detailed a matter as the one with which we are now concerned it is surely obvious that the standing committee, where all parties can be represented and where a detailed discussion can take place, is the best place in which to carry on an efficient examination of the legislation. We did get it to the committee and, as others have said earlier, we discussed it there for 12 days, clause by clause, paragraph by paragraph, and in some cases word by word. Not only were members of the broadcasting committee privileged to take part in the discussion but, as we all know, any hon. member who has an interest in the subject before a committee can come to the committee and speak on that point.

I believe that in some respects our consideration of the bill in committee was very similar to the earlier committee consideration and discussion of the white paper which preceded the legislation and was considered in committee for days and days. All these considerations followed very far reaching examinations by at least one important commission studying the broadcasting situation in Canada. After these deliberations and the detailed and largely impartial committee consideration have taken place, here we are back in the house where we have spent all of last week going over all these clauses very much as we did at the committee level. With these facts in mind I must admit I was wrong when I urged that the matter be sent to the committee for consideration because it has turned out that we might just as well have continued the discussion here in the house instead of sending the matter to the committee. In that way at least we would have avoided duplication of our discussions.

I imagine that in a matter such as broadcasting it is impossible to make much speed when we are considering clauses of this type because what should be broadcast is very largely a matter of personal opinion. As someone has said before me, broadcasting is rather like sex. A lot of it is not much good but it is all interesting. I think this quality of interest is what spurs some hon. members to discuss this matter. I believe that the length of the discussion we have had in committee of the whole house should now spur us to bring the amendment before us, and no doubt others which will follow, to a vote as soon as possible.

I remember when we were in the standing committee one hon. member remarked at the end of a tedious session, in which I think we made a change of one word in a subclause, that had Moses had the same problem with his legislation when he brought it down from above and gave it to the children of Israel and had he had the same orators to contend with in his organization as the ministers and others have here, the children of Israel would probably still be somewhere in the wilderness debating an amendment to a subclause on a point in the tenth commandment which is in part at least that it is wrong to covet thy neighbour's wife. No doubt the amendment would be to the effect that it would be all right to do so between the hours of 5 and 7 p.m., particularly if nothing came of it.

In speaking against the amendment—and I do not want to take up any more time of the house—I hope that in what I have said I do not appear in any way to be putting myself above any member of the house or of the broadcasting committee. I believe many other hon. members share the general views I have expressed on the need for making better progress. I would say there are three reasons therefore. First, Canada needs this legislation and has been waiting for it for a long time. Second. New officials in the public sector have been appointed and are waiting to receive the legislation in order to go to work to improve some of the matters about which hon. members have complained. Finally, the broadcasting situation, important as it is, is by no means the only major problem confronting the Canadian people at this time. So I sit down in the hope we will have an early vote on the amendment before us. Personally, I intend to vote against it.

Mr. Nugent: Mr. Chairman, I should like to speak on this amendment for a moment. I think the amendment proposed by the hon. member for Red Deer is unnecessary, particularly if we are to give import to the words "high standard". I cannot imagine a program being of high standard if it gives encouragement to criminal activity or if it does not help to safeguard sound family life. A program of high standard in which there is a free and frank discussion affecting family life cannot do anything else but achieve the objective sought by the hon. member in his amendment. We could put in a dozen clauses to cover the many worthy objectives and virtuous things we would like to see done. However, I believe these objectives are covered by the words "high standard", and we rather weaken the meaning of those words by trying to go in the direction the hon. member is suggesting.

• (4:10 p.m.)

Mr. Prittie: Mr. Chairman, my remarks will be very brief in relation to the amendment proposed by the hon. member for Red Deer. I think there should be a little balance on the record in this regard. Everyone would not view the broadcast to which reference has been made in the same light as the hon. member did. I watched it, and indeed a number of young people from the church my teenagers attend came to our place to watch the program and to listen to the discussion. We encouraged them to do so. The hon. member for Red Deer has very little faith in young people if he believes they are all automatically going to take drugs as a result of seeing the program.

Generally speaking, we found the program to be quite good and the panel discussion seemed to be good. I do not like these amendments that keep coming up which seem to impose more and more control all the time. I thought that the panel discussion part of the program was very useful, not only for the young people but for myself as a member of parliament. I was interested in listening to it because I know that later we will be discussing bills which bear upon the use of drugs in our country. I do not see the reason for all the alarms which have been sounded by the hon. member for Red Deer, and I am sure most members do not either.

Mr. Cowan: Mr. Chairman, in rising to comment on the amendment proposed by the hon. member for Red Deer I should like to refer back to the discussion of this clause in the standing committee. You will find it reported in the official report of the committee for November 23, 1967. There are some questions and answers on page 109 of that issue, and I quote myself:

> Mr. Cowan: We are talking about clause 2(g) (i): "the national broadcasting service should (i) be a balanced service of information, enlightenment and entertainment for people of different ages, interests and tastes covering the whole range of programming in fair proportion."

I then asked the minister to tell us what a balance in fair proportion was in her opinion, and I will give her answer in a moment. I should like to point out that last week I gave two quotations from the minister's remarks when discussing C.A.T.V. I cited her remarks in the committee report for November 28, page 166, where she said:

> I am not very familiar with the economics of them—

On page 167 of the same report she is reported as having said:

> No, but of my knowledge I do not know that much detail about it.

Those are the two statements the minister made about C.A.T.V. I should like to read the statement she made on November 23 in connection with the clause we are discussing right now. I asked the minister to tell us what proportion of balance, in her opinion, was fair. This is the answer I received.

> I believe that is a rhetorical question, Mr. Chairman.

It was not a rhetorical question but the minister gave me that snappy answer. That was her reply to a man who was seeking some information from her. I asked the minister to tell us what proportion of balance, in her opinion, would be fair. I then said:

> Well, are these not rhetorical words in here?

The words to which I referred were:

> —the national broadcasting service should be a balanced service of information, enlightenment and entertainment for people of different ages, interests and tastes covering the whole range of programming in fair proportion.

This is the snappy answer I got when I asked if these were not rhetorical words in the subclause. The Secretary of State, the person responsible to parliament for the C.B.C. and the Board of Broadcast Governors, answered as follows as reported on page 109:

> It is intended to mean exactly what it says; but I am not in a position to define what the individual words of it mean.

There is an answer for you if you ever got one, and it is contained in an official government report of the proceedings of this committee whose work the hon. member for New Westminster has been extolling. Talk about progress, when the minister responsible for this whole broadcasting field answers a question about the meaning of this clause now under discussion by saying "it is intended to mean exactly what it says, but I am not in a position to define what the individual words of it mean."

I went on to state:

> The words were not chosen because they are so nebulous, were they?

The answer was "No." I then went on to point out what a balanced program is in the opinion of the C.B.C. and the Board of Broadcast Governors because I had with me at that committee meeting, as I have here in the House of Commons, a copy of the Fowler report of 1965. This report is looked upon evidently as the Bible of broadcasting by those in the television and broadcasting world. During the committee meeting I pointed out the following to the minister, who had advised me she did not know what the words meant but that they meant exactly what they said. As reported on page 109 of the committee report I said:

> At the top of page 29 of the report of the committee on broadcasting 1965, you will find the following: B.B.G. program categories—all television stations (March 1-7, 1964) English language—C.B.C. owned and operated; information 37.5 per cent; light entertainment, 52.2 per cent. Would you call the light entertainment at 52.2 per cent a balanced or a fair proportion of the programming of the C.B.C.?

Here is another enlightening answer from the minister:

> If you are asking for my personal opinion, of course, I can give it but I do not know that this helps the committee very much. My personal opinion on that is no more important than that of the other 20 million people in the country.

The Secretary of State, responsible for the C.B.C. and the Board of Broadcast Governors, informed the committee, and I am now advising the house, that her opinion was no more important than that of the other 20 million people in the country. Such humility is to be admired. However, I ask her to assume the responsibilities that have been entrusted to her by the parliament of Canada. I then said:

> We have here figures showing the English C.B.C. giving 37.5 per cent to information—that is mentioned here in this section—52.2 per cent to entertainment; and for enlightenment—which, I presume, would include arts, letters and the sciences—2.2 per cent. Is this what you would call a balanced service and a fair proportion between information, enlightenment and entertainment, when the enlightenment brings us 2.2 per cent of the programs?

The minister's reply was:

> Of course I do not agree that it is a balance.

Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, if you look at page 29 of this Bible of the Canadian broadcasting world, the Fowler report for 1965, you will find that all the English language stations in Canada, during the period March 1 to 7, 1964, devoted 34 per cent of time to information, 57 per cent to light entertainment and 1.6 per cent to the arts, letters and sciences. If any clause as nebulous as this ever needed amending, this one is it. The Secretary of State says she does not know what the words mean. When the hon. member for Red Deer stands up and tries to clarify the directions given to the C.B.C. and the new council on radio and television, then people say we should not be giving more directions to this organization than those contained in this most nebulous clause.

If you feel that the English language stations have been pretty light on enlightenment in devoting 1.6 per cent of their time to enlightenment, which means they devote 98.4 per cent to information and light entertainment, then look at the French language stations. These figures are contained on the same page 29 of the report. The French language television stations between March 1 and 7, 1964 devoted 32.9 per cent of their broadcasting time to information and 58.6 per cent to light entertainment. Evidently the French are more interested in enlightenment than the English sector. The English stations gave only 1.6 per cent of their time to enlightenment whereas the French stations topped that figure with a magnificent 1.7 per cent. This means that 0.1 per cent more time was given to enlightenment on the French networks than on the English.

• (4:20 p.m.)

The interesting thing about the English stations giving 34 per cent of their time and the French stations 32.9 per cent to information is this. I should like to know how much of this information is repetitive. Do they regard their news broadcasts for five minutes every hour on the hour and for three minutes every half hour on the half hour as being information? If you were to listen, Mr. Chairman, to these news broadcasts over a period of 24 hours—and many newspaper publishers and newspaper people have done so over the years—you would find that the repetition of news items is nauseating. News broadcast on television or radio stations over a period of six hours can produce not one new item of news from start to finish.

I checked into this point in the past 20 months with some radio stations in Canada and I was informed that news items on radio are put on tapes. Then at night when the staff is reduced to save expenses, probably to save money for the enlightenment programs in the daytime, these tapes are played over the radio at 11 p.m., 12 p.m., 1 a.m., 2 a.m., 3 a.m., 4 a.m., 5 a.m., and 6 a.m. and also at 12.30 a.m., 1.30 a.m., 2.30 a.m., 3.30 a.m., 4.30 a.m. and 5.30 a.m. What you get is the same news both on the hour and on the half hour for six hours on end. This is called information, Mr. Chairman. How in the name of heaven can you call the same item of news "information" when it is repeated ad nauseam?

What hope is there, Mr. Chairman, for enlightening the people of this nation through the television stations of the country when they are devoting the magnificent total, French and English stations combined, of 1.6 per cent of their time to the subject? If it were not for the fact that we have a commission on biculturalism today, about which we hear so much yackety-yack, we would probably get only 0.8 per cent of broadcast time devoted to culture. However, since we have two cultures 1.6 per cent of the time is devoted to culture and 98.4 per cent of the time to information and light entertainment.

Why in the name of heaven should we have to tax the people of Canada so that they can be provided with light entertainment by our television stations for a period representing 57.3 per cent of their broadcast time? More than half the time is taken up with providing light entertainment. Are the people of Canada unable to entertain themselves? Must the taxpayers continue to pour out money in order to entertain somebody in Newfoundland, somebody else in the back end of Ontario and somebody else in Saskatchewan? Cannot the public today entertain themselves as they did in past days, or must we saddle the Canadian taxpayer with a bill of hundreds of millions of dollars to finance Canadian radio and television systems which devote 57.3 per cent of their time to light entertainment?

I welcome the amendment moved by the hon. member for Red Deer because it endeavours to give some specific direction to station programming. I have already made reference to three answers given by the Secretary of State, who has been entrusted with the task of piloting this measure through the House of Commons. I have noted three statements made by her to the committee proving that she does not know what she is talking about, and this on her own admission. We have been asked to support her, on the strength of a broad, general statement made on three different occasions. When I have finished reading the committee reports I shall have picked out some additional admissions. I like the openness of the Secretary of State; very few ministers are as frank as her.

I repeat, Mr. Chairman, that this bill should be referred back to cabinet so that it can receive some attention from people who know what they are talking about. This parliament should not be asked to endorse a bill the words of which the minister says are intended to mean exactly what they say, though she is not in a position to define those words. I support the amendment.

Amendment (Mr. Thompson) negatived: Yeas, 12; nays, 42.

The Chairman: I declare the amendment lost. Shall clause 2(g)(i) carry?

Mr. Cowan: Mr. Chairman, may I ask the Chair a question at this stage? The hon. member for St. Paul's made some very interesting comments on clause 2 (g) (i), which are to be found on pages 109 and 110 of the committee report. I have not seen the hon. member for St. Paul's today and I should like to ask whether it is permissible in committee of the whole house to read into the record extracts of the evidence given before the committee on broadcasting, films and assistance to the arts so as to put on record the opinion of the hon. member for St. Paul's.

Mr. Knowles: Is it relevant?

Miss LaMarsh: Mr. Chairman, it seems to me that anything that is part of the committee proceedings is already part of the public record.

Mr. Cowan: I thank the minister for her intervention; it is part of the public record. I am sorry to say that that record is not always read by the public, whereas Hansard gets much wider distribution. If I am not mistaken, something like 800 copies in English and 350 copies in French are printed of the committee reports. The printing of Hansard runs somewhere in the neighbourhood of 35,000 to 40,000 copies per issue.

• (4:30 p.m.)

To answer the question of the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre who asked, "Is it relevant", I refer to a discussion that took place in the committee on broadcasting, films and assistance to the arts on clause 2 (g) (i). After I pointed out the ridiculous situation in regard to a balanced program service in fair proportion as represented by the action of television stations in the past, which devoted 33.9 per cent to information, 57.3 per cent to light entertainment and 1.6 per cent to enlightenment, the hon. member for St. Paul's made these comments as found on pages 109 and 110:

> Presumably, this breakdown shown in the Fowler report, and which my friend Mr. Cowan has just quoted, is the C.B.C.'s understanding of what is a balanced program. If this is not balanced, then we should tell the C.B.C. because the wording in clause 2(g) is practically a copy of what the C.B.C. has considered to have been its mandate for years, as set out on page 124 of the Fowler report. Perhaps I might read it. In the latest version, the mandate that the C.B.C. conceives it has received from parliament is:
>
> "(a) to be a complete service, covering in fair"—

There is that word "fair" again.

> —"proportion the whole range of programming; bringing things of interest, value and entertainment to people of all tastes, ages and interests." And so on. Clause 2(g), Madam Minister, practically copies the mandate that the C.B.C. has given to itself for years. The program distribution that Mr. Cowan has read is the C.B.C.'s interpretation of what a balanced program is. If this is not a balanced program, according to the committee, then I think it should make its views known to the C.B.C. The wording, in effect, in clause 2(g) is practically a copy of what the C.B.C.'s mandate has been for some years.
>
> Miss LaMarsh: I have just been asking Mr. Steele where this statement about the C.B.C.'s mandate came from. Perhaps I should ask him to explain where that statement in the Fowler report had its origin.
>
> I presume what you are trying to suggest, Mr. Wahn, is that somebody in parliament enunciated this—that this has been what C.B.C. says it is following, therefore if we use the same kind of language there would be no change. I think that is a basically incorrect assumption.
>
> Perhaps Mr. Steele could give the comittee the derivation of that mandate.
>
> Mr. G. G. E. Steele (Under Secretary of State): Committee members will undoubtedly know that there never has been placed before parliament and actually discussed, in the way in which the bill now sets forth, the so-called mandate of the corporation. This was their interpretation, as expressed in their own annual reports from time to time, and also, when asked by the advisory committee on broadcasting to state what their objectives were, as a corporation, the words which appear in the advisory committee report were the words which were used by the C.B.C.

The point still is that it has never really been formalized into the type of wording which now has been set down in the broadcasting bill.

I ask you, are we to consider the proportion of 1.6 per cent for enlightenment a fair or balanced proportion of the programming? What kind of direction is this? True enough, the Secretary of State has already said that the whole of clause 2 is simply declaratory. That has bothered the hon. member for Lapointe because it does not say that ownership must be of a certain nature. It has bothered the hon. member for Lotbinière because it does not say that the French and English stations must be built immediately but uses this circumlocutory phrase "as public funds become available". It is declaratory. So why in the name of heaven does it say in subclause (g)(i), "be a balanced service of information, enlightenment and entertainment for people of different ages, interests and tastes covering the whole range of programming in fair proportion," when only 1.6 per cent is given to enlightenment while 53.7 per cent is going to light entertainment and 33.9 per cent is going to information? Are we not going to give the broadcasters of the nation more precise directions than those contained in this nebulous phrase?

It is marvellous to see the direction it involves. A broadcaster can do anything he wants to do under that phrase. The first part is declaratory. The second part does not mean a thing. The minister herself says she does not know what those words mean. If the minister herself does not know what they mean, how can any broadcaster be expected to know what they mean? Do you consider that 1.6 per cent of the time devoted to enlightenment is fair or balanced when light entertainment is 57.3 per cent? I suppose we can include in that a few prize fights that we now see today in addition to the prize fights we see on hockey rinks as broadcast on television. What is the light entertainment involved there, particularly when we know that at least one man has been killed in professional hockey recently? Is this light entertainment? I am not saying that was seen on television, but it could have been. It could happen in a game broadcast over the Canadian television networks at some time in the future.

[Mr. Cowan.]

Are we going to consider that light entertainment is of such prime importance to the people of this country, to the taxpayers? When we tax them are we going to say: Well, when they scream about paying their income tax at the end of April each year they only scream once, and for the other 364 days of the year we give them light entertainment in the proportion of 57.3 per cent so perhaps they will forget about it?

I think this phrase means exactly nothing. It is nebulous; it has no point. The minister says she does not know what it means. Therefore it is going to be impossible for a broadcaster to violate this declaratory injunction to the television stations and radio stations of the Dominion of Canada. I think it is foolishness even to put it on the law books of the nation.

The Chairman: Shall clause 2(g)(i) carry?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

The Chairman: Shall clause 2(g)(ii) carry?

Mr. Prittie: Mr. Chairman, I raised this matter earlier and referred to the white paper on broadcasting and to the government's announced intention to reserve four places in Canada for new C.B.C. television stations. Is it still the intention of the government, after the present fund crisis is over, to go ahead with the construction of C.B.C. owned stations in Saskatoon, Sudbury, Victoria, British Columbia, and the Saint John-Fredericton area of New Brunswick?

Miss LaMarsh: I cannot answer that categorically yes or no. I do not know why the government should not do as it intended, but we do not know how long the present strictures will continue. Also, we may be overtaken by drastic changes in technology which may outdate the proposed system. But I do not know why the government should not continue to maintain the position set out in the white paper, when the financial strictures are eased.

The Chairman: Shall clause 2(g)(ii) carry?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

The Chairman: Shall clause 2(g)(iii) carry?

Mr. Cowan: Mr. Chairman, on Friday evening the Secretary of State expressed a little regret that I did not enlighten her further about the Spanish kings of 1493. She should have known that she would hear from me further historical references. I note that clause 2(g)(iii) reads:

(g) the national broadcasting service should—
(ii) be in English and French, serving the special need of geographic regions, and actively contributing to the flow and exchange of cultural and regional information and entertainment,

I presume that that means splitting equally the 1.6 per cent of enlightenment by way of regional information and news into two languages. With regard to the national broadcasting service today, in English and French, it is quite noticeable in this country and has been for the past few years that there has been tremendous emphasis given to French, French, French, French, French, French, French, French, French and French. As a member said the other day, it has got to the point where the cabinet does not introduce a bill without having a clause in it two or three times to say that everything has to be in English and French.

• (4:40 p.m.)

It is interesting to note that there were only a few French speaking people in Canada when Wolfe came over in 1758. He cleaned up at Louisburg and the following year cleaned up at Quebec. Since then Canada has been thought to be an English speaking nation. In light of this declaratory statement that the national broadcasting service should be in English and French, this in a country where the English forces under Wolfe obtained the mastery and under the British North America Act certain privileges were given to the conquered people to speak French in the legislative halls at Quebec city and in the parliamentary halls at Ottawa, I think it would be interesting to the French minority in Canada if they were to consider the situation in Alsace-Lorraine. I regret I have not the time this afternoon to speak further for the benefit of the Secretary of State on the kings of Spain and Portugal, to whom I made passing reference the other day, but I do think it is interesting to consider the situation in Alsace-Lorraine where the French are in the dominant position. It is known in history as the Kingdom of the Franks, and I hope the Secretary of State will be as interested in it as she was in Spanish history.

In the Kingdom of the Franks, involving Alsace-Lorraine, prior to 1870 the French tongue was generally spoken in the valley of the Rhine. But in 1870, as you will recall, as a result of the Franco-Prussian war the Germans overran France. They had no trouble whatever doing so. They captured Paris and in Paris proclaimed the formation of the German Republic, and they brought Alsace-Lorraine into the orbit of Germany. These people became a conquered people under the heel of the conquerors, the Prussians, or as they called themselves after 1870, the German element.

The Chairman: Order.

Mr. Cowan: I think it is interesting—

The Chairman: Order. I have to say to the hon. member for York-Humber that I think he is now outside the confines of the clause before the committee. The committee is dealing with clause 2 (g) (iii) and I would ask the hon. member to confine his remarks to that particular subclause of the bill.

Mr. Cowan: Mr. Chairman, I am speaking on clause 2 (g) (iii) and referring in particular to the phrase "in English and French". There happen to be two tongues spoken in this country and I was drawing a parallel to the handling of two tongues in Alsace-Lorraine where the two tongues are French and German. I can see a direct connection between the two tongues, French and German, in Alsace-Lorraine and the two-tongue situation in Canada involving English and French. I wish to point out that after the Franco-Prussian war of 1870, when the Germans took over Alsace-Lorraine they forced the people of Alsace-Lorraine to speak German—

The Chairman: Order, please. Again I must interrupt the hon. member and point out to him that clause 2 (g) (iii) says that the national broadcasting service should be in English and French, and I would suggest to him that any comments he has to make regarding English and French must be in relation to national broadcasting.

Mr. Cowan: I sincerely hope, sir, your ruling is perfectly clear to you. Unfortunately it is not clear to me. I want to point out that in Canada the English gave the conquered people the right to speak French in the halls of parliament at Quebec city and at Ottawa. Not so in Alsace-Lorraine. The conqueror there did not grant that privilege to the conquered. Since I must confine myself to clause 2 (g) (iii), dealing with English and French, I would point out that in 1918, after Alsace-Lorraine was given back to the French—

The Chairman: Order. I shall have to quote to the hon. member standing order 59 (2), found on page 56 of our standing orders:

Speeches in committee of the whole house must be strictly relevant to the item or clause under consideration.

I would again ask the co-operation of the hon. member for York-Humber in confining his remarks to clause 2(g) (iii).

Mr. Cowan: While I am on my feet, Mr. Chairman, I would like to commend the generosity of those speaking the English tongue in conferring certain special privileges on the conquered in this country. It is too bad that elsewhere throughout the world the magnificent example shown by the English in 1867 has not been followed as one worthy of imposition in other areas. I believe there are many fields in which Canada leads and I believe that the treatment by the English of their French speaking compatriots sets an example to the world. I regret exceedingly that our French speaking compatriots have not looked upon it as a fine example to be followed in other areas where they happen to be the conquerors.

This is a declaratory clause. It binds nobody. Here it is used by the cabinet to please our French speaking compatriots. It says that the national broadcasting service should be in English and French. It says "should be". We should pay our bills. We should be civil to chairmen. We should be civil to one another. We should be civil to people of foreign tongues. The things we should be are a mile long. Unfortunately the things we do are sometimes different.

I cannot object to the passage of this subclause when I know it is only declaratory, as the Secretary of State herself has said. But why put it in if it is only declaratory? We should all be good. We should attend church. We should be moderate in our actions. What is the use of putting such declarations in our law books if there is no penalty to see that they are carried out? I am pleased to praise the English for the manner in which they treated the French in 1758 and in 1867, but I regret that the example was lost on the French of France.

Mr. Schreyer: Mr. Chairman, it is possible to infer from this subclause something which may not be intended. It refers to what shall be done in the case of special needs of certain regions. In regions where ethnic groups are heavily concentrated, and here I am not making any reference to the English and French broadcasting aspect, it would seem that this subclause could be interpreted to mean that where an ethnic group forms 70 or 75 per cent of the population and has attempted over the years to maintain its language and culture, without official recognition by the state or the constitution but solely within the confines of its social institutions, then the national broadcasting service should make an effort on a regional basis to broadcast in the language of that ethnic group. I do not think this is the intent, and I would like to ask the Secretary of State if this is so.

Miss LaMarsh: That is not the intention. The governing phrase is "be in English and French, serving the special needs." It does not say anything about other languages.

• (4:50 p.m.)

Mr. Schreyer: I do not intend to argue the point. The hon. lady has explained the intentions and I should be satisfied. I rise only to point out that one certainly could infer that something a little more was intended because it refers to the special needs of geographic regions and in some regions of the country the special need has to do with the language and culture of ethnic groups other than English and French. However, in these days and times when we are confronted with the major problem of Canadian unity I certainly do not wish to be a party to complicating matters further.

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, I should like to comment on some remarks of the hon. member for York-Humber (Mr. Cowan). One of these conquered individuals may be allowed to say a few words about his conquerors. Supposing the member for York-Humber had been a captain in the army of General Wolfe when he achieved victory and then, in his words, Canada—

[English]

Miss LaMarsh: He was in charge of knifing in the back.

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, I did not understand what the hon. Secretary of State said.

The fact remains that I should like to remind my hon. friend for York-Humber that none of the conquests in the world has ever helped the conquerors. England conquered India and what happened? It had to withdraw.

[English]

The Chairman: Order, please. I would suggest to the hon. member for Lapointe that the remarks he is now making are not relevant to the clause before the committee.

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, I come back to the paragraph under consideration. I should like to add that France conquered some countries from which it later had to withdraw. And why, Mr. Chairman?

Mr. Habel: France wants to conquer Quebec.

Mr. Grégoire: In this regard, Mr. Chairman, I point out to my hon. friend for Cochrane that France has no intention whatsoever of conquering Quebec.

And so, I say to my hon. friend for York-Humber that all the imperialist countries that made conquests had to withdraw. The time has now come for the friends of the hon. member for York-Humber to withdraw.

[English]

The Chairman: Order, please. I again must ask the hon. member for Lapointe to confine his remarks to the subclause before the committee. He is not doing that now.

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, I think I said what I had to say.

This clause deals with a French-language broadcasting service and I have no objection quite the opposite, I support it. On the other hand, I object to the desires and wishes of the member for York-Humber in trying to compare Quebec to a conquered people. I know that, in this house, many share his views. Maybe I should congratulate him on being the only one who dares to utter out loud what others think and whisper among their friends. The member for York-Humber for one has the courage to say so. If a secret vote were held in this house, I believe that the majority would approve what the member for York-Humber has just said.

[English]

The Chairman: Shall clause 2(g)(iii) carry?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

The Chairman: Shall clause 2(g)(iv) carry?

Mr. Prittie: Mr. Chairman, I see that the minister has left the chamber for a few moments. I would prefer to discuss this subclause in the presence of the minister. May I ask, Mr. Chairman, whether we have disposed of clause 2(c) yet?

Some hon. Members: No.

Mr. Prittie: I wonder whether the Chair would consider reverting clause 2(c) in the absence of the minister.

An hon. Member: She is right here.

Mr. Prittie: I see that the minister is not far away, Mr. Chairman. I will go ahead with my remarks in respect of clause 2(g)(iv). The subclause provides that the national broadcasting service should:

> —contribute to the development of national unity and provide for a continuing expression of Canadian identity;

When this bill was first introduced I did not express my misgivings about the wording referring to national unity. This is a very difficult thing to do. No one wishes to speak against the words "national unity" since this would perhaps leave him open to the charge that he is against national unity. However, I did express some thoughts on this matter earlier. I question very much whether these words should be contained in subclause 2(g)(iv).

First of all, I do not really believe that the government is too serious about this provision because when we asked that it be considered as a charge upon all broadcasters in Canada the amendment was defeated. At the time I pointed out that there are more private than public radio and television stations in Canada and that if national unity is important it should be the duty of all broadcasters in the Canadian system to promote national unity. I hear remarks about the private stations. We have already declared in clause 2 that the airwaves belong to everyone. Some private stations broadcast in French at certain times and, though not directly from taxes, about $120,000 or $130,000 of the money of the people of Canada is being used to support this service. However, the government has rejected our amendment.

I rather feel that subclause (g) is adequate as it stands. It requires the national broadcasting service to provide a balanced service. As the hon. member for York-Humber claims, the service may not be balanced but it is possible to achieve balance by means of sports programs, public affairs programs, comedy, drama and so on. Second, it can be extended to all parts of Canada if we are willing to pay for it. Third, it can be in both languages if we are willing to pay for it.

The question of national unity is a difficult one. I do not think it can be defined at all. When speaking the other day the hon. member for Hochelaga said, as reported at page 6017 of Hansard—I am paraphrasing his words—that he doubted the justification of the provision. At that time he was speaking against the amendment I had proposed in respect of subclause (b). I notice that the minister when speaking on another amendment used words which are rather appropriate. When the hon. member for Red Deer presented an amendment to another subclause she had this to say, as reported on page 5917 of Hansard for January 24:

> I do not think that anyone should be required to decide, as a matter of statute law, what a broadly held opinion is.

May I interject to say that one could say the same thing about national unity. The minister continued:

> Those who are in this chamber or in public life know that broadly held opinions in this country may vary almost daily or almost hourly. To ask some individual to determine what a broadly held opinion is, is to place on that individual an unsupportable burden.

She went on to say that the words are innocuous. This was in respect of the amendment presented by the hon. member for Red Deer. These words may be innocuous, Mr. Chairman, but they may not be. I have looked at the statutes governing the British Broadcasting Corporation and the independent television authority. These statutes do not require these broadcasters to promote national unity although they deal with a complex country. The words may not be innocuous because they might be used against people under certain conditions.

I am sure the present minister and the present government have no intention to engage in a witch hunt against the people employed in broadcasting. I am sure also that the new senior officers of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation are not the type of people who would do that. However, under certain conditions of management this could be done. When one is in that frame of mind one is apt to consider almost anybody whose expressions of opinion are at variance with those of the majority to be a person subject, in this case, to being fired because of not promoting national unity.

[Mr. Prittie.]

• (5:00 p.m.)

We might as well be frank about this. Where do these words come from? They are not in the previous broadcasting act. They result, I am sure, from the fact that members of the government caucus have said we must get at these separatists in Radio Canada at Montreal. I know this controversy has been going on for some time and I have heard members of this house from the province of Quebec denounce the separatists and so-called separatists in Radio Canada at Montreal.

It seems to me that if there is a problem here it is a problem for the management of the corporation. The minister will probably reply that management has not done its job in the past, that there is new management and that if there is a problem new management ought to see that the producers in Montreal and elsewhere carry out their duty to see that there is a balanced presentation on controversial public programs. I am afraid that with these words in the law people will be able to use them at some time in the future to say that management is weak and that this person or that person is working against national unity and should be fired.

An hon. Member: Or an individual program.

Mr. Prittie: We have already heard a number of complaints about programs. I realize this is not an easy argument to make but it seems to me that if the requirements of broadcasters, as contained in subclause (g) (i) and subclause (g) (iv), in respect of expression of Canadian identity are adhered to there would be adequate control without the necessity of these words which specifically suggest that broadcasters must promote national unity. I find this objectionable and I therefore move:

> That clause 2(g) of Bill C-163 be amended by deleting the words "contribute to the development of national unity and".

Clause 2 (g) would then simply read, "provide for a continuing expression of Canadian identity."

To continue for one moment, let me say I am sure the hon. member for Lapointe is anxiously waiting to support my amendment. This gives me some misgivings because I recall that after the bill was introduced the premier of Quebec called it "Fascist". I do not go so far as to use such strong words. I also recall that the producers in Montreal communcated their feelings to the minister. I think I agree with the views they expressed although they expressed them rather strongly. Regardless of who are the allies one might have in a matter like this, I think this is a phrase we ought not include in our broadcasting act.

Miss LaMarsh: As my hon. friend knows, the objection which was raised was contained in a telegram to me on October 26 from the association of producers in Montreal. I responded to that telegram by letter on November 9, in which I set out the whole purport of the bill and repeated things which were said at the very beginning of broadcasting legislation in Canada by the then prime minister of Canada, Mr. Bennett. He indicated that one of the purposes of setting up a broadcasting system, which was then of course only radio, was to have a more effective instrument for nation building. He also referred to it as an agency by which a national consensus might be fostered and national unity still further strengthened.

It seems to me that from the beginning of broadcasting in Canada that has been one of its goals. Indeed, were this not an aim there would seem to be very little reason to have broadcasting publicly underwritten in this country. We have our transportation systems, public and private. We have a number of other institutions which have developed uniquely in Canada with the private paralleling the public. The reason we still have the public system as well as the private relates to the special role the public system has in unifying a country whose national pull is north to south rather than east to west. The whole purpose of establishing a broadcasting facility in this country was really to foster Canadianism. Therefore I cannot accede to my hon. friend's suggestion that these words should be removed.

With the permission of the committee I would ask that the correspondence of the producers association, which is attached as an exhibit to the proceedings of the committee, be shown as an appendix to these proceedings. This correspondence clearly sets out, as I think it should, what is meant by national unity within the provisions of this act.

I might say that following that exchange of correspondence no public outcry or speech of any kind has ever been made, nor has there been a further objection or complaint received by my office from any source in this regard. There has only been the discussion my hon. friend and I have had here and before the parliamentary committee. It would seem to me that while hon. members may be particularly interested in discussing this matter, the words contained in this correspondence illustrate the intent of the legislation and its draftsmen. If my hon. friend and other members of the committee have no objection I will ask that the correspondence in both languages be appended to these proceedings.

Mr. Knowles: That cannot be done while we are in committee but I have no objection to the request being made when we are back in the house.

Miss LaMarsh: I will do that at six o'clock.

Mr. McCleave: Mr. Chairman, in the absence of the hon. member for Royal, who is the chief spokesman for this party on broadcasting, I should like to make a few comments on the amendment proposed by the hon. member for Burnaby-Richmond. I have great respect for him but I think his argument can very easily be exposed in that he should either have moved the deletion of the whole phrase or let it stand. We are dealing with two concepts, both of which may be brittle and difficult to grasp but are both important objectives to a broadcasting system.

The first of these is the idea of national unity. Whether this is easy or difficult to define, it is an honoured phrase which has existed since Right Hon. R. B. Bennett brought in broadcasting legislation. The other phrase related to Canadian identity. I suggest that expression is as easy or difficult to grasp as national unity. In order to have been consistent the hon. member should have moved to strike out everything or let it stand.

I am one who thinks these phrases should stand. We have spent and I think we will spend a considerable amount of money to improve means of communication in this country. Surely we should at least use this national means of communication to help weld us together as a nation rather than give up the fight after one hundred years of growth and say that we cannot adopt the concept of national unity. I hope this idea will commend itself to members of the committee and that the amendment will be defeated.

• (5:10 p.m.)

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, I rise on a point of order.

Before we go any further, I wish to point out what I think is a difference between the English and the French version of the bill. The English version talks of "Canadian identity", and the French version uses the expression "réalité canadienne". In my opinion, the two expressions do not have exactly the same meaning.

If I had to translate the expression used in the English version, I would translate it as "identité canadienne" and not "réalité canadienne". I should like to know which of these two is the official version, and I would ask the hon. Secretary of State what she means by this expression, for there is a difference between the French and the English version in this respect.

Mr. Béchard: Mr. Chairman, I am not a linguistic expert, but I think that to translate "identity" by "identité" would be an Anglicism.

In my opinion, the translation of "identity" by "réalité" in French is quite accurate, but the word "identité" would be an Anglicism.

Mr. Grégoire: No, Mr. Chairman, because "identité" is a French word and not an anglicism. To identify means exactly to personalize something or give a complete definition, while the word "realité" is not at all identifiable. The identity is always real, but reality is not always identifiable.

Mr. Béchard: I did not mention the word "to identify"; I spoke about the word "identité", as the hon. member for Lapointe did earlier.

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, the Secretary of State could perhaps indicate what should be the meaning of the term "Canadian identity."

[English]

Miss LaMarsh: Mr. Chairman, unless my hon. friend has some indication that there is an obvious error, I would point out that the government of Canada hires people to do these translations. I am unhappily, certainly not as bilingual as my hon. friend. Realities are clear to most people. I must be guided by my hon. friend, my parliamentary secretary, who is far more bilingual than I am and who says that "reality" is the French equivalent of "identity", in one sense at least. Unless my hon. friend can indicate that it is quite improper, perhaps other learned linguists in the chamber have some comments to offer with respect to this matter.

[Mr. Grégoire.]

Mr. Pelletier: Mr. Chairman, I do not particularly like to be introduced as a learned person—

Mr. Lewis: She did not say that. She said "learned linguist".

Mr. Pelletier: That even less.

[Translation]

But I am sorry to disagree on that matter. The parliamentary secretary is probably right: "identité canadienne", in French, looks like a translation and it is probably an Anglicism. But it seems to me that the hon. member for Lapointe (Mr. Grégoire) is right when he says that there is an important difference of meaning between "réalité canadienne" and "Canadian identity".

In my opinion, the word "identity" describes the particular character of a group of people. It is a word which refers to a cultural context, whereas the term "réalité canadienne" seems much better to me because television, radio, the whole field of broadcasting must bring to the people the whole reality, for instance the industrial development as well as the physical nature of Canada. There are probably in Nova Scotia people who will never know what British Columbia looks like except from what they see on television or in the movies.

I think there is an obvious difference in meaning, which could lead to some misunderstandings.

Now, not being a learned linguist, I would not know how to translate "réalité canadienne" into English, but I would much rather have that than translate "Canadian identity" by "identité canadienne", a term which seems to me rather dubious in French, as the parliamentary secretary said, and which does not translate the exact meaning of "Canadian identity".

I think that this is really a problem of different concepts instead of linguistics. I very well understand the drafters who used the term "réalité canadienne", because in my understanding and that of the majority of us, about the role of broadcasting, it is a question of translating the whole Canadian fact with all its aspects, its spiritual aspect as well as its industrial, material and physical aspects. Broadcasting is meant for everyone and must reflect all the aspects of life.

I would rather ask English-speaking learned linguists to translate into English the words "réalité canadienne".

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, I have a dictionary here with the definition—

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order, please. Would it not be better to deal with the amendment and then, to deal with a question, if it arises?

Mr. Grégoire: In the amendment, the words "identité canadienne" are mentioned. Had it been "réalité canadienne", I would have voted for the amendment, but if we leave the words "identité canadienne", then I cannot vote for the amendment.

Let us see what it means in French.

Identité: ce qui fait qu'une chose est de même nature qu'une autre. Ensemble de circonstances qui font qu'une personne est bien telle personne déterminée.

Then, it would be because of circumstances that Canada is really Canada.

[English]

Miss LaMarsh: Mr. Chairman, I should be very happy to use the word "reality" in both languages, if that will make hon. members content.

Mr. Lewis: That is pretty poor English.

Mr. Lambert: I doubt that it will make hon. members content. What is "reality"?

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, is the minister changing the word in the English version to "reality"?

Mr. Lambert: That is meaningless in English.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Is the committee ready for the question?

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Are you going to accept the word "reality"?

Miss LaMarsh: Yes, to please you.

[English]

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Chairman, I am not going to make a long speech. I hope the Secretary of State will think about the matter a little before she yields to this suggestion and uses the words "Canadian reality". In any case the French is in the plural, as I remember. I do not know exactly what "Canadian reality" would mean. "Identity" to the English speaking person has meaning. The only suggestion that occurs to me is to use the word "personnalité" in French as the translation of "identity", but that probably makes it worse.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Is the committee ready for the question?

Mr. Churchill: Mr. Chairman, I have been listening to the argument put forward by the hon. member for Lapointe. He said he could not vote for this clause until the word was changed. I do not think that argument carries much weight—

Mr. Lewis: Hear, hear.

Mr. Churchill: —because he will probably vote against it in any event.

Mr. Prittie: Mr. Chairman, whether the hon. member for Hochelaga likes it or not, I consider him to be a learned person. I am going to pay him the compliment of quoting him because I thought what he said the other day was very well put. I refer to the hon. member's remarks as reported on page 6017 of Hansard. He was speaking to an amendment that I had moved to subclause (d) with regard to national unity and he said, according to the English translation:

It is so normal to provide that a public broadcasting system will contribute to Canadian solidarity that the mere fact of mentioning it, of writing it out in full, may lead some people to believe that it is not a matter of promotion but of propaganda, which is, as I can testify, far from the intentions, both of the government, that has drafted the legislation, and of the committee which has considered the matter.

• (5:20 p.m.)

This is quite true. As I mentioned earlier, the hon. member stated that he had some misgivings about the expression. Being familiar with people in the field of broadcasting he will know the fear they have—it is not that I am against national unity or that he is or that many of his friends in broadcasting are—of the use to which this type of legislation can be put. I suppose national unity can mean anything. At the very least it means keeping Canada together as a country. What does this mean when you apply it to various people? Mr. René Lévesque does not believe that Quebec should continue to be part of confederation, nor does Mr. Pierre Bourgault or Mr. Gilles Grégoire.

Mr. Lewis: Who is he?

Mr. Prittie: If some producer in Montreal puts these people on programs, is he to be charged by some person who looks at a program with not contributing to national unity, and is he to be fired? There is a possible danger of that happening. I am sure the minister would not do it, but if we put it into the legislation and if someone wishes to get at someone he suspects of being a separatist, whether it is proved or not, there will be justification for taking that kind of action.

Mr. Knowles: Mr. Chairman, I should like to support the plea of the hon. member for York South that the Secretary of State not make the change to which she is willing to agree. It seems to me there is nothing wrong with parliament legislating the same concept in different words in the two languages. If we pass the bill with the French version reading "réalité canadienne" and the English version "Canadian identity", then the bill is the law of the land. I do not know enough of the French language to know what damage it would do to the French version to change what is there now, but I do know enough English to say that it would have no meaning at all for us to say that the national broadcasting system should provide for a continuing expression of Canadian reality. That has no meaning at all. I suggest that "Canadian identity" remain in the English version and "réalité canadienne" remain in the French version.

Mr. Grégoire: The two phrases do not have the same meaning.

Mr. Knowles: I suggest that the meaning which we get from the phrases is the same even if the words are different, just as the words "ask" and "demand" are different.

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, on—

[English]

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: May the Chair suggest that we dispose of the amendment and then carry on the discussion which is taking place now? I think this would be in order. Is the committee ready for the question?

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, you are asking us to vote first on the amendment before coming back to the main question and then discuss the accuracy of the expression.

But, in my opinion, the amendment seeks to restrict the subclause to the following words:

—the national broadcasting service should provide for a continuing expression of Canadian identity.

We are therefore being asked to vote for such a term. That is why I wonder whether it would not be better to first settle the problem of the definition and then ask the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre if he really wants us to pass a piece of legislation with different meanings in English and in French, but in whose two versions would nevertheless be official? I would be surprised if that was his intention.

[Mr. Prittie.]

[English]

Mr. Knowles: My answer to that is that what parliament passes is authentic in both languages, and if we pass a bill with one expression in one language and another expression in the other each of these expressions is authentic. As we have heard from the hon. member for Hochelaga and from others who are fluent in the French language we are getting the same idea from the phrases "réalité Canadienne" and "Canadian identity".

Mr. Johnston: I think we should realize that the operative part of the original paragraph is "contribute to the development of national unity" but as this is such a sensitive topic in Canada today I am sure the people who assisted in the drafting of this paragraph realized that that sort of unadorned statement would be far too meaningful to be let in the bill as it is and that it had better be dressed up slightly in both languages. So we now have a little ornamentation added to soften the charge on the C.B.C. that it contribute to national unity.

I really do not see what the hon. member for Lapointe is worried about if the phrase is meaningless in both languages. I cannot see why we should be too excited about it. I would have had some sympathy for the amendment moved by the hon. member for Burnaby-Richmond if it had been to delete the window dressing following the phrase "national unity". We know that he presented a worth-while amendment to subclause (d) when we were considering the bill earlier which urged that the entire broadcasting system contribute to the national unity of the country. I expressed a half-formed suspicion at that time that what the hon. member was doing was to strike at the clause now before us and the charge on the public broadcasting section of the system to concern itself with the development of national unity. I would have thought that a sense of propriety or embarrassment would have prevented the hon. member from rising today to move an amendment eliminating from public broadcasting what previously was a worth-while addition to the entire system.

I think we should reject the amendment and accept the clause as it is because if we cannot charge any part of the broadcasting system with concerning itself with national unity then we are in a parlous state regarding national unity. I would not worry too much about propaganda and its possibilities because we are well aware of how extensive this practice is. All governments in all parts of the world engage in this activity and that it can have most worthy ends as well as more devious ones at times. I believe the clause is a reasonable one and that the amendment, in the light of the debate at a previous sitting of the house, is most strange and should be rejected.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Is the committee ready for the question?

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, I have absolutely no objection to the French version of the amendment of the hon. member for Burnaby-Richmond (Mr. Prittie) being put to a vote. It stipulates:

That the national broadcasting system should provide for a continuing expression of Canadian identity.

The Canadian identity is very simple. The right hon. Prime Minister of Canada put it very well last night, at the banquet of the Quebec branch of the Liberal Federation of Canada, when he said: There is a power group in Canada which wants to try to make Quebec more independent.

That is the Canadian reality. But if the national broadcasting system should provide for the continuing expression of Canadian identity, that is, recognize that there is in Quebec a group that is powerful enough—as the right hon. Prime Minister said—and who thinks that, in the whole present Canadian context, it is preferable that Quebec be independent, both for the people of Quebec and for those outside the province, and if this is the expression of Canadian reality in that case, Mr. Chairman, I am in favour of the amendment and I think it should be supported.

• (5:30 p.m.)

[English]

Miss LaMarsh: I am glad the hon. member for Lapointe has made things so clear. Since there has been no amendment with respect to either the French or the English versions and I would assume they will stand the way they are printed in English and French, and since no one else has since moved to change it we will leave it as "réalité Canadienne" and all we will have to do is deal with the amendment.

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, if I am not mistaken, clause 2 (g) (iv) will read in French as follows:

... contribuer au développement de l'unité nationale et exprimer constamment la réalité canadienne;

Some hon. Members: Yes.

Mr. Grégoire: Very well, that is what I wanted.

[English]

Miss LaMarsh: Yes, the hon. member made it clear what the difference would mean.

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: That is exactly what I said, leave in the French version the words:

—réalité canadienne.

In fact, the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles) stated that the French version was as binding in law as the English version. If that is the case, our national broadcasting service must express the Canadian reality.

As stated by the Prime Minister (Mr. Pearson) there is in Quebec a group of people who believe and fight sincerely because they feel it would be good for Quebec to become independent. That is the Canadian reality and that is what the C.B.C. should express.

[English]

Mr. Cowan: Mr. Chairman, one of the speakers this afternoon, in commenting on the amendment which has been moved by the hon. member for Burnaby-Richmond, expressed regret at the action of the hon. member in so doing. I should like to congratulate him on his integrity. A while ago the hon. member for Burnaby-Richmond moved an amendment which would have called upon the private sector of the Canadian broadcasting world to be subject to the same directions as the national broadcasting system with regard to Canadian unity and Canadian identity. This was a very worthwhile amendment to an ill-prepared bill and it should have been adopted by this committee. When it was voted down I felt 100 per cent certain that the hon. member for Burnaby-Richmond, being the honourable man he is, would move to have this clause with regard to directions to the national broadcasting service deleted because he wants the private sector of broadcasting to be operating under the same directives as the national broadcasting system. I sincerely believe that this clause should be eliminated for the simple reason that these directives are not to be made applicable to the private sector, as was the wish of the hon. member for Burnaby-Richmond.

I have been sitting here during the protracted discussion of this bill and I have heard hon. members talking about the development of national unity. Most members seem to refer to the development of the two-nation concept, national unity for the French speaking people and national unity for the English speaking people, according to the peculiar belief they have that there are two nations in this country. Who can argue with that interpretation of national unity if these people believe there are two nations in this country of Canada? They are fully entitled to argue that we should develop national unity on that basis.

While I was listening to that interesting interpretation of the phrase "national unity" I could not help but think of the Solicitor General who represents the riding of Brant-Haldimand because he has six nations in his constituency. Is the C.B.C. to be entrusted with the development of national unity for the six nations that exist there, which were recognized by Queen Victoria and are recognized by Canada today as the Six Nations Confederacy? There are six nations in the riding of Brant-Haldimand.

We have some members, notably the hon. member for Lapointe, who argue that there are two nations in this country. I was very distressed during the summer by the loss of two very great close friends of mine whom I have known intimately for 35 years. One of them was the late Mr. Harry Benjamin of Montreal and the other the late Mr. Leo Paperny of Calgary, Alberta. My life is going to be much poorer as a result of the death of these two men, close friends of mine, in widely separated parts of Canada. I looked forward to every possible contact with them and enjoyed their company at all times. In memory of these two magnificent Canadians—

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order, please. I know all members of the committee are very sympathetic with regard to the loss the hon. member has sustained but at the moment we are speaking to the amendment proposed by the hon. member for Burnaby-Richmond. I ask the hon. member to direct his remarks to that amendment.

[Mr. Cowan.]

Mr. Cowan: I intend to finish my remarks, and if you will hear me out you will understand the phrase "national unity". I paid $30 to the Jewish national fund for the planting of trees in memory of my friend the late Harry Benjamin of Montreal and I paid $30 to the Jewish national fund, Marlee avenue, Toronto, in memory of my friend the late Leo Paperny of Calgary. Over the week end I received in the mail my official receipt for $60 from the Jewish national fund, Marlee avenue, Toronto. Some may talk about nationalism but I am talking about national unity, the Jewish national fund of Toronto and the Six Nations Confederacy. These gentlemen here, members of the House of Commons, talk about two nations in Canada. I believe this amendment should be supported.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: I regret to interrupt the hon. member but in my view he is not speaking to the amendment which is under consideration.

Mr. Cowan: I regret that I am prohibited from expressing myself on what you are talking about.

Miss LaMarsh: Shame.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Is the committee ready for the question?

Some hon. Members: Question.

Amendment (Mr. Prittie) negatived: Yeas, 12; nays, 42.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: I declare the amendment lost. Shall subclause 2(g)(iv) carry?

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, before subparagraph 2 (g) (iv) is passed, I should like to say why I agree to it.

To contribute to the development of national unity does not mean much in itself; it all depends upon the interpretation given to these words.

The Prime Minister clearly said that there are two nations in Canada and I agree with him on that. During their recent convention the Progressive Conservatives approved this concept of two nations in Canada, two founding nations. If they still exist, there are two nations, in Canada. If one disappeared, let us say so. Our friends the members of the New Democratic party also supported this concept of two nations.

Therefore, there are two nations in Canada. If they are founding nations, they still exist. If they no longer exist, let it be proclaimed. If one of the two founding nations has disappeared, let it be proclaimed.

I wonder whether the hon. member for York South (Mr. Lewis) would rise and say that one of the two founding nations has disappeared. What will the hon. members for Hochelaga, Lévis, Chicoutimi, Champlain (Messrs. Pelletier, Guay, Langlois and Matte) say, what will all the hon. members from Quebec say when they are told that one of the founding nations has disappeared, that we have disappeared? Have we disappeared, or are we still alive? We are a founding nation; we have not disappeared. If we are one of the two founding nations, we must still exist and still be one of the two living nations in Canada. Two nations, that I do believe in; it is a concept almost unanimously accepted in the house. In fact, all parties have accepted the principle of the two nations. So, the House of Commons unanimously accepts the fact that there are two nations in Canada.

• (5:40 p.m.)

National unity is mentioned. If the term "nations" has a meaning, when used as a substantive, it must inevitably keep the same meaning when used as an adjective. In the expression "two nations", it is used as a substantive. Then, national unity is mentioned. So, it should have the same meaning. In fact, what does national unity mean? It is unity within a nation. It does not mean unity of two nations. If the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Pepin) wants to contradict me, let him!

National unity is exactly what it says. When the intention is to speak of unity between two nations, the term "international unity" is used.

I see the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources protesting. Let him give us his argument, unless the French words no longer have any meaning. Unity between two nations means international unity. That is the definition of the term. If the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources does not agree, he should return to France to learn again the meaning of the words. It is clear: unity between two nations is international unity. So, there are two nations in Canada. If unity between two nations was referred to, inevitably the term "international unity" would be used. That is not what is being said. National unity is mentioned. There are two nations in Canada and that has been accepted by all parties in the house.

It is so true that we have two broadcasting systems, the French network and the English network. Furthermore, we have two national anthems, two national flags. Everything being done relates to two nations.

Therefore, contributing to the development of national unity means that there must be unity within each of the two nations: national unity of the French group and national unity of the English group. That is what this means and on this point, I agree. Mr. Chairman, I will be voting for the paragraph because I feel each nation must find its unity for a better understanding and then for better direction.

That was the function of the Estates General of French Canada: to achieve the national unity of French Canadians, to create a French Canadian national philosophy.

To my mind, the C.B.C. must co-operate in the purpose set down by the Estates General, that is to rebuild the French-Canadian national unity, to state a French-Canadian ideology. In fact, that is what this bill states.

I think that in order to be more specific, the wording should read: contribute to the development of both national unities, both the French-Canadian and English-Canadian national unities, because we do not wish to be the only ones to be united. We also want the English-Canadian group living in Canada to find its unity again. Today, unfortunately, it tends more and more to lose it, because it is allowing itself to be assimilated by the Americans. It should also regain a national identity and a national purpose. I hope it does, in the same way as the French-Canadian group is trying to recover its national identity, a national unity, a national purpose, a national ideology.

Mr. Chairman, I feel the hon. member for York-Humber was perfectly right in suggesting that the term "two nations" is accepted by all parties. Therefore national unity necessarily means, beyond any doubt, the unity of all French-Canadians towards their common objective, that is, their own ideology, their own entity. For the English Canadians, it would also mean national unity within their group. I hope they find it as soon as possible, because they tend increasingly to become Americanized instead of endeavouring to establish a true English Canadian national identity.

For our part, we are trying more and more to find our French-Canadian national unity.

Mr. Goyer: Mr. Chairman, I cannot let the member for Lapointe get away with this. I must point out to him that when he speaks of nations his argument is completely fallacious. He disregards completely the fact that a group of persons with a common tongue, common mores, customs and way of life, can live together with a group of people on the same territory and pursue common goals; this, to my mind, constitutes a true nation.

When the hon. member for Lapointe wants us to believe that the nation is rather an ethnical matter, I think that he is completely wrong. And even in a separated Quebec, there would not even be a single nation, because nevertheless, there would be an English-speaking minority and it would also be a polyethnical and multilingual society.

Therefore, if the hon. member for Lapointe wishes to separate up to that point, he should leave parliament where he is a poor representative when he speaks thus.

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, my comments are so true that when the hon. member for Dollard (Mr. Goyer) wishes to compare the concept of nation with that of territory, I must tell him that he is mistaken.

North Viet Nam and South Viet Nam are two quite distinct geographic areas, but they make up a single nation. West Germany and East Germany occupy two distinct territories as far as political geography is concerned, but they make only one nation, and the German people would only be too glad to become one entity again, because they are in fact one nation. The same applies to Korea.

This is why I say to the member for Dollard that he is mistaken when he assimilates the word "nation" to the word "territory". In our present-day world, one can think of a number of examples where nations extend beyond their territories and of other examples where nations do not respond to the notion of territory at all. In Canada, for example, we have two nations in what we can call today one country.

On the other hand, in Germany, there is one nation and two countries.

The hon. member for Dollard makes therefore a mistake when he compares the concept of "nation" to that of a political territory and I believe that the example of Germany, of Korea and of Viet Nam will show him that he is wrong.

The same could be said of communist China and Nationalist China: one nation only, even though there are two territories at the present time, because that may be temporary. There is, in the history of the world, a certain temporariness relating to a number of political territories and countries. Such is the case in Germany, Viet Nam, Korea and also Canada, for the very reason that those nations were artificially created, as stated so well by the hon. member for Burnaby-Coquitlam (Mr. Douglas). We must not, as the hon. member for Dollard is trying to do, confuse the notion of territory with that of nation. That is why I suggest that my definition of a nation is the right one.

Mr. Goyer: Mr. Chairman, the hon. member for Lapointe would need some retraining in the political sciences.

Mr. Grégoire: I think the member for Dollard would need more than just retraining.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Shall clause 2 (g) (iv) carry?

Some hon. Members: Carried.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Shall clause 2(g) carry?

Some hon. Members: Carried.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: The committee will now revert to clause 2 (c). At the last sitting the hon. member for Edmonton-Strathcona proposed an amendment which sought to add between the words "expression" and "subject" in line 19 the following:

—and the right of Canadians to receive all broadcast programs available to them.

• (5:50 p.m.)

[English]

Miss LaMarsh: Mr. Chairman, I do not like to delay the business of the house but we have been back to this clause a number of times and my hon. friend has been trying to find a form of words that I would find acceptable. Therefore I think I owe it to him and the committee to say why I do not find his present words acceptable. The difficulty is that the phrase uses the qualifying word "available". You can only put a technical interpretation on that, it seems to me. If you have the technical means for transmitting broadcasts you can make broadcasts available. If someone comes along and says, "I have an open frequency for radio and/or a channel for television and the money to buy equipment, "that person can make a program available. If that formal language were adopted you would have to issue a licence when someone like that came along, without giving the matter any other consideration. Even where issuing a licence in such circumstances might be undesirable you would have to issue it. To make a program available you must have a transmitter and then you must have a number of people who receive that program.

Surely there is more to the regulation of our broadcasting system than this, and here I am referring to the word "available" in the limited definition that I have emphasized. We have to look into all kinds of things, as the B.B.G. has done for the last ten years and is still doing. We have the obligation to decide whether under certain circumstances to permit a C.A.T.V. licence to be issued, as the hon. member knows. Good heavens, we have heard the hon. member for York-Humber about eight or nine times already on the subject of C.A.T.V.

Mr. Cowan: More.

Miss LaMarsh: When the B.B.G. turns down an application it gives reasons. Some of those are that they do not want an area to be taken up by C.A.T.V. They may refuse a C.A.T.V. licence because of the possibility of C.B.C. or private stations, which originate programs, coming along. I think that all in the chamber agree that stations which broadcast originating programs are preferable to C.A.T.V. If we do not have originating stations in the country, how can we have Canadian television? Most C.A.T.V. programs are brought in from another country, and in no case yet have there been any C.A.T.V. applications which they meant to be originating stations.

The board has to look at a lot of things. For instance, the only channel that is open may be the one that the C.A.T.V. people are applying for and the board may feel that it should hold that channel open. Of course, if the hon. member means that everyone has the right to receive everything that is available, that is different. There would be no reason, unless it were technical, for the B.B.G. to require an examination of that right.

I think that the statement in the amendment is too wide. It is too much to say that there is an inalienable and unquestioned right to hear, in that sense. For that reason I cannot accept the amendment.

Mr. Lewis: May I ask a question?

Miss LaMarsh: When I have finished. As I said previously, we took advice from the B.B.G. and the Department of Justice. Neither department felt content with the language and we tried, as did the hon. member, to provide something which could express what he wants, that is, that people have the right to hear, under certain circumstances. I do not think it is for us to make that an absolute or complete right, as it would appear to be from the amendment.

If my hon. friend persists and feels that he must put something in, he might like to examine subclause (j) of clause 2 which says:

> —the regulation and supervision of the Canadian broadcasting system should be flexible and readily adaptable to scientific and technical advances;

That paragraph is so worded in order to take account of any technical advances and other factors that may come along, the effect of which would be to give to Canadian broadcasters the cheapest and most efficient means of broadcasting.

In considering this amendment perhaps my hon. friend might wish to add to this subclause words such as "in order that Canadians may enjoy the widest practical range of broadcasting services." I do not know whether that says what he means but it would spell out the objective of the widest possible choice of service within the context of the regulation and supervision of the system. A minimum of such regulation and supervision is necessary in order to let the system fit together. It is therefore with reluctance, having spent several days trying to find a consensus, that I must say I am not prepared to accept the amendment.

Mr. Nugent: I do not accept the minister's argument. Apparently she objects to language that says Canadians may receive programs that are available. I think that was reasonable language. I do not know whether to withdraw the amendment, especially since the minister's argument was essentially the argument that her officials had put forward. Her reasoning, I understand, is the reasoning of her officials as evidenced in their appearance before the committee. I moved my amendment because at the end of subclause (c) is found the language "subject only to generally applicable statutes and regulations, is unquestioned." From my reading of those words that involves the right to freedom of expression.

In her explanation the minister has said that that right does not mean that anyone can start a television station and begin broadcasting anywhere merely because he can broadcast or rebroadcast certain signals through his equipment. The minister objected to the right of freedom of expression previously just as she now objects to the right to receive any programs that are available. If our right to receive whatever is available is curtailed, then surely our right to freedom of expression is affected, because the language of my amendment is the same in spirit as the language of a previous subclause that I referred to. Naturally, the rules and regulations are there and they affect those who are affected by this legislation. Nevertheless the minister's reasoning, which follows the reasoning of her officials leaves me cold.

It is late today but I want the committee to know that I intend tomorrow to move another amendment which will be milder than the one I moved before. Instead of including the words "all programs available" my new amendment will read, "and the right of persons to receive programs". That change will remove the words to which the minister objects. I hope the committee will give favourable consideration to my new amendment. We must have certain rights and I submit that the right to freedom to receive should be included in this clause. May I call it six o'clock, Mr. Chairman.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order, please. Since it is six o'clock it is my duty to leave the chair in order that the house may proceed to the consideration of private members' business.

• (6:00 p.m.)

Miss LaMarsh: Mr. Speaker, during the course of the debate this afternoon in committee of the whole I offered, with the consent of the house, to have made an appendix to Hansard an exchange of correspondence which I had, the original being in French, with the Association des Réalisateurs of Montreal with respect to the term regarding national unity which appears in clause 2(g)(iv). If the house would now consent I would like to have this correspondence annexed to Hansard in order that it will be clear in future what parliament intended by this particular phrase.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is this agreed?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

SUBJECT MATTER OF QUESTIONS TO BE DEBATED

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It is my duty, pursuant to provisional standing order 39A, to inform the house that the questions to be raised at the time of adjournment tonight are as follows: The hon. member for New Westminster (Mr. Mather), Airports—Vancouver —protest against imposition of tolls on approach; the hon. member for Mackenzie (Mr. Korchinski), Grain—wheat—inquiry as to increased delivery quotas; the hon. member for Kootenay West (Mr. Herridge), Power—British Columbia—location of neutron generator.

It being six o'clock the house will now proceed to the consideration of private members' business as listed on today's order paper, namely, notices of motions.

[Mr. Nugent.]

TRANSPORT

FRENCHMAN BUTTE-HEINSBURG—RAILWAY FACILITIES—SUGGESTED REFERENCE OF QUESTION TO COMMITTEE

Mr. A. C. Cadieu (Meadow Lake) moved:

That the question of providing railway facilities and services between Frenchman Butte, Saskatchewan, and Heinsburg, Alberta, be referred to the standing committee on transport and communications, and that it be an instruction to the committee to inquire into, report upon and make recommendations with respect to the question within thirty days after it has been referred.

He said: Mr. Speaker, in proposing this motion I do so in the belief that the matter is one of considerable urgency and great importance not only to a large number of producing Canadians in northwestern Saskatchewan and northeastern Alberta but to the national economy as well. This is not the first occasion on which I have tried to impress upon the house the importance of this question. I would refer Your Honour to my remarks, reported in Hansard for January 13, 1967, page 11761, during the clause by clause consideration of the bill dealing with railway line abandonment.

At the present time there is no direct rail connection between Alberta and Saskatchewan north of the North Saskatchewan river. This leaves a huge gap in railway transportation in an area of Canada that is producing great benefits for the nation as a whole and whose potential in mineral development, mixed farming and other industry is tremendous.

Briefly the picture is that one east-west line of the C.P.R. ends at Meadow Lake, Saskatchewan, leaving a gap of approximately 75 miles between that point and Grand Centre in Alberta. A little farther south a C.N.R. line ends at St. Walburg, leaving a transportation gap of about 50 miles between there and Heinsburg, Alberta. Farther south still, and just north of the Saskatchewan river, a C.N.R. branch line stops at Frenchman Butte. This line branches off the St. Walburg line of the C.N.R. at Spruce Lake and is 28 miles in length. Between Frenchman Butte and Heinsburg, Alberta, is a gap of 38 miles. This pyramid of missing railway connections leaves no rail transportation north of the North Saskatchewan river from Edmonton to North Battleford and Prince Albert. I do not believe that there can be any sound, progressive development of the rich mineral and agricultural areas of northwestern Saskatchewan and northeastern Alberta until this gap is filled.

I suggest that the soundest method of filling the gap is by the C.N.R. completing the 38 mile stretch between Frenchman Butte and Heinsburg. Unfortunately, Mr. Speaker, the branch line between Spruce Lake and Frenchman Butte is one of those slated to go under the axe of rail line abandonment. That is why I believe the matter is urgent, as I said earlier, not only for the people of the area but for the whole country. Because it is urgent and important I believe it advisable for this question to be placed before the standing committee on transport and communications immediately, with instructions to the committee to make recommendations upon it within 30 days. I ask the house to consider my motion favourably from the standpoint of the national interest. I ask hon. members to send this question to the committee before it is too late to do anything about it.

I remember the time 40 years ago when the railways were fighting to get rights to build westward through our area. I remember the great plans and announcements of the railway at the time the first sod was turned at Shellbrook in 1928 for the line which the railway company today dismisses as a mere branch line and expendable. In those days the veteran settlers and pioneers of the area were promised that it was to be the start of a great main line connection linking Prince Albert, North Battleford and other cities and towns in Saskatchewan with their western neighbours north of the river. For half a century this dream has been dangled before our eyes. Now after 50 years of empty promises we are to lose even the dream through the proposed plan of rail line abandonment. I urge hon. members to consider this matter carefully before it is too late.

The C.N.R. even went so far some years ago as to prepare a right of way, a roadbed for the connection between St. Walburg and Grand Centre. But this too was abandoned. Today trees grow on that roadbed. That link is dead.

But the shorter and easier route a little to the south remains a sound possibility. It is comparatively easy ground from a construction point of view. It takes in the old district of Fort Pitt, Onion Lake and Seekaskootch Indian reserve which is excellent mixed farming territory. A railway line would help greatly to open up an area fabulously rich in mineral wealth.

I recall how many people scoffed when the former Conservative government undertook to encourage the construction of the Pine Point railway line. It was laughed at as a wilderness line, a line to nowhere. We all know today the manner in which this project paid off for Canada. I believe that the line I am suggesting be considered will also pay big dividends for the people of the area and, through them, for Canada as a whole. Apart entirely from consideration of dividends and other payments I believe this line is required in the name of simple justice. It would be the fulfilment of promises and undertakings made years ago by both railway companies when they were desperate to acquire rights to build lines in that area. For years they reaped the advantage of a selective system of railroad operation that had nothing to do with the convenience or commercial interests of the residents but rested solely on profits for the railroads.

• (6:10 p.m.)

The railway has an obligation to the people of this area to construct this one small line. If the railway is unwilling to do so voluntarily it should be compelled by parliament to do it. I believe I have said sufficient to convince reasonable people that this question deserves immediate consideration by the standing committee. It has been brought forward by myself on numerous occasions. I have been joined in my representations by the hon. member for Athabasca (Mr. Bigg) and the hon. member for Vegreville (Mr. Fane) who has seconded this motion as being the best means by which to insist upon early consideration of this matter.

In concluding my remarks I should like to say that this question is one which is of truly urgent as well as national and local importance. I trust that the house will see fit to refer the matter to the standing committee on transport and communications in the terms outlined in my notice of motion.

Extension of Railway Facilities

Mr. Reid: Mr. Speaker, may I ask the hon. gentleman a question? I should like to know what produce would be carried on this line of 38 miles. Are there any mineral deposits or is there any agricultural production which might be developed? Could the hon. member give us an indication in this regard? Second, could he tell us whether this line is intended to come under the axe as a result of branch line abandonment and, if so, what would be the use of extending it another 38 miles if that extension in turn is to be axed?

Mr. Cadieu (Meadow Lake): Mr. Speaker, may I first answer the hon. gentleman's question concerning the produce and the wealth lying along this line which would warrant such an expenditure. This is very good mixed farming country. In linking up with Heinsburg, Alberta there would be access to what I believe is one of the wealthiest salt mines in northern Canada. All the way through there are mineral deposits. This line would link up with the Indian reservation at Seekaskootch. This is a large tract of good farm land. In fairness to these people I think this railway line is warranted. It would give them access to Prince Albert for their timber and pulpwood. This Paradise Hill country is considered to be one of the best farming areas in northwestern Saskatchewan. From Frenchman Butte the terrain over the 38 miles is all good mixed farming country.

I cannot understand why this link was not constructed in the first place. I do not know how the railway expected the line to be a paying proposition when 38 miles were left unfinished. It is for these reasons that I have brought up this matter many times before the committee on transport and communications. I have also brought it up with Mr. Gordon. He agreed with me. I asked him how in the world they could have expected this line to be a paying proposition. When one looks at the map and notices the geographical location of this line one will see that the north Saskatchewan river is a natural barrier to the south and that there is no connecting railway line. All three attempts to have a railway line constructed across that provincial boundary have failed. We cannot understand the reason for this.

I could point out at great length the reasons that this line should be built. For instance, the rail line to Fort McMurray was built to serve all the people of northern Canada, yet in Saskatchewan we have no way to get to it without going around through Edmonton. These are injustices which the people have put up with for half a century. I hope this answers the hon. member's question.

[Mr. Cadieu (Meadow Lake).]

Mr. John M. Reid (Kenora-Rainy River): Mr. Speaker, I should like to thank the hon. member for Meadow Lake (Mr. Cadieu) for his answer. I asked the question because the last time a bill in respect of the C.N.R. was put through the house it concerned a new line which involved an extension in the Kenora region of my constituency of Kenora-Rainy River. Before speaking at this time, I went through the debates and I discerned three conditions which must be met before the government would undertake to promote such a bill in the House of Commons.

The first provision was that the line should be capable of doing three things. First, it should provide a substantial increase in the revenue of the railway. More important, this was described in terms of a substantial profit. In this particular case, which is described in Hansard for April 25, 1966, page 4267, the profit was outlined as $1 million per year. Second, the line must have a specific purpose. In other words, there would have to be some form of development that was available to it before the government would undertake to raise the money for the railway line. In this case it was the development of a new open pit mine known as the Griffith mine, owned and controlled by the Steel Company of Canada, which would be producing one and a half million tons of iron pellets annually.

The third item was that there must be a guarantee of traffic. In other words, the mine must contract with the railway to provide the railway with a stated amount of tonnage per year in order to provide for the proper paying off of the cost of building the line. In that case the railway went so far as to demand that in the event the production of pellets did not come up to the anticipated levels the mine would pay the difference in revenue to the railway company. So the railway was properly protected and was guaranteed the profit and revenue necessary to operate the line. This seems to be the procedure that has been followed in other cases.

Canadian National Railways is working on another line at present, the 235-mile Alberta resources railway which it is building under a leasing agreement with the province of Alberta. I gather this is the line to which the hon. member referred when he mentioned Fort McMurray.

Some hon. Members: No.

Mr. Reid: I am sorry, I apologize. In any event the agreement, which is outlined very briefly in the December 30, 1967, year end review by Mr. MacMillan, president of Canadian National Railways, indicates that the C.N.R. has gone into partnership with the government of Alberta in order to put itself into a position where it will not be subject to the risk of loss. It seems to be the intent of railways in Canada now not to go into areas where they do not have a guarantee of revenue or profit, or preferably both.

I sympathize with the hon. member in respect of the situation in which he is involved. The problem seems to be that the line in which he is interested is slated for the hatchet block because of the branch line abandonment program of the Canadian Transport Commission.

Mr. Cadieu (Meadow Lake): Mr. Speaker, may I point out that it is only a 28-mile stretch of this line which is up for abandonment. The section involved is that which runs to St. Walburg. Only 38 miles would be required in order to make it a line which would run directly through from Edmonton to Prince Albert. This is the point I wish to bring out. I do not understand how the C.N.R., when it obtained the charter, hoped to have a paying line when they left this gap in between.

• (6:20 p.m.)

Mr. Reid: Of course, that focuses on the very problem itself. Obviously the C.N.R. must feel that the line going to St. Walburg is not a paying proposition and there is no sense in extending it. In my experience, the C.N.R. has been very anxious to extend its lines wherever a profit can be found.

One of the great misconceptions in Canada today is that because the government owns a railway or airline it will do what the government wishes. Nothing could be further from the truth. The reason is that although the government owns the line and has set up by statute certain regulations under which the board of directors must operate, there is nothing the government can do to threaten them. It would be my expectation that the government would get more co-operation from the C.P.R. than the C.N.R. for the simple reason that we have already done the worst we can possibly do to the C.N.R., whereas the C.P.R. is still in the position that we could take it over. This is one of the real difficulties we have in dealing with government owned corporations.

Let me take this thought one step further. It came to our attention during the meetings of the broadcasting committee, that in respect of the government owned British Broadcasting Corporation, the postmaster general has the right to dictate what programs can or cannot be shown over that network. Yet never once has that authority been exercised. The reason is not that the authority should not have been exercised for cause but rather because the governors of the B.B.C. indicated to the postmaster general that in such a case they would attribute a certain proportion of cost to the postmaster general in their annual report. This treat seems to have been effective in offsetting any such threat of control.

I suggest there is one possible alternative open to the hon. member and his constituents. They could take their case to the Canadian Transport Commission, specifically to the railway committee. By my reading of the act, although it is a little hazy since we passed it about eight months ago, there is a rather involved procedure set forth to be followed by anyone who wants to prevent the abandonment of a line under the branch line abandonment program. I do not recall whether there is any procedure one follows in order to convince the board of the necessity to build a certain piece of line between points "x" and "y", as in the case now before us. This is a possibility the hon. member might look into, although I do not feel it holds too much hope.

In concluding his remarks the hon. member mentioned the Pine Point railway and indicated the C.N.R. had built this line as a matter of speculation. It is my information that the Pine Point line was built not as a matter of speculation but to reach a particular industrial development, namely the Pine Point mine developed by Cominco. I have also been told, although I am not sure how authoritative this information is and throw it out for what it is worth, that the railway was ready to advance with the construction of this line long before Cominco was ready to develop its ore deposits.

In any event the basic requirement was that Cominco find a market for the vast amounts of ore it would have to mine in order to meet its contractual obligations to the C.N.R. If you check Hansard for 1961, I believe, you will find the same guarantee I have described in respect of the Bruce Lake line. The line must be able to show a profit, must be constructed in a specific location where there is a need, and there must be a traffic guarantee contract. Whatever traffic can be generated along the line in addition to the guarantee would amount, in a sense, to gravy for the C.N.R.

The real objection to extending the line in this case is the decision evidently reached by the C.N.R. that there is not sufficient profit to be made either by the line now operating or by the line as extended. How does one go about convincing the C.N.R., then the board and then parliament, which has not only to put up the money but guarantee the loss should the line be unprofitable? I suggest it would be very difficult to do this during a period of austerity when we are spending money on a number of other projects and have no money left to build 38 miles of line just for the fun of it. An historian once described the development of Canadian railroad progress in comparison with other countries by saying the Germans built lines to build an empire, the United States built lines to conquer a continent, but Canadians built lines for the hell of it. If anyone looks at our patchwork transportation lines he will see that this historian, Mr. Lower, I believe, was not very far off the mark.

Perhaps I should also bring to the hon. member's attention that it is possible for the C.N.R. to build that line without parliamentary authorization, although this involves a slow process. Under the Canadian National-Canadian Pacific Act the C.N.R. is authorized to build up to four miles per year without going to parliament for authorization. Such a line could be built out of the current revenue fund.

Mr. Fane: It is 20 miles.

Mr. Reid: My understanding is that they can build four miles, and my authority for saying that is the then minister of transport, Mr. Pickersgill. The hon. member for Saint John-Albert (Mr. Bell), as recorded on page 4269 of Hansard for April 25, 1966, asked how many miles the C.N.R. could build per year, to which Mr. Pickersgill replied as follows:

> —Canadian National Railways cannot build one inch more than four miles of railway without the prior approval of parliament.

Mr. Fane: May I ask the hon. gentleman a question? Is he aware that the National Transportation Act passed last year allows Canadian National Railways to build a spur line of 20 miles without reference to parliament?

Mr. Reid: I stand corrected and thank the hon. gentleman for that information. This just goes to show how little reliance one can place on last year's debates and how quickly facts become obsolete.

In any case I can now conclude my remarks by saying that there is a ray of shining hope there for the hon. member for Meadow Lake provided he can convince the company to take advantage of this forward looking provision of the act and build 20 miles of railroad per year until they close the gap.

Mr. F. J. W. Fane (Vegreville): Mr. Speaker, I should like to commend the hon. member for Meadow Lake (Mr. Cadieu) for bringing this matter before the house and for his very able presentation. I assure you that I am very honoured to have been allowed to second this motion. I have debated the extension of this line on almost every occasion I have made a major speech in the house during the last ten years that I have been here. I was unable to work this subject into my speechs on issues such as the national flag and unification of the armed forces, but had I had a little more time at my disposal I am sure I could have found some way to do so.

After listening to the remarks of the hon. member for Kenora-Rainy River (Mr. Reid) on this subject I wonder whether he is on the side of the people of Canada or on the side of Canadian National Railways.

• (6:30 p.m.)

Mr. Byrne: It is the same thing.

Mr. Fane: It is the same thing, only Canadian National Railways do some things that are awfully hard to understand. I must tell you also, Mr. Speaker, that in 1958, the year I came down here, five members of parliament from the government side made arrangements to go to Montreal and talk to the then president of Canadian National Railways about this very subject. These were the hon. member for Meadow Lake (Mr. Cadieu), the hon. member for Athabasca (Mr. Bigg) and myself, who are still here; and we were accompanied by the former member for Jasper-Edson, Dr. Horner, and the former member for Grey-Bruce, Mr. Winkler.

We did not get very far with the then president of Canadian National Railways. Even though the minister of transport had made arrangements and there was a firm understanding that we would be there on that day, the president was not going to see us. We had to practically threaten him in order to get an audience with that mighty person. We were only members of parliament, and therefore just a bit of a nuisance. We finally got 17 minutes with him, and I must say that he was very, very difficult to deal with. Two of our number almost came to blows with him. The president of Canadian National Railways said to us, "What do you fellows think you are going to do? Are you coming down here to tell me how to run my railway?" Of course we took very violent exception to this. That is the sort of reception we received.

I must go a little more into the history of the building of this 38 or, as it used to be, 39.1 miles of railway from Heinsburg in Alberta to Frenchman Butte in Saskatchewan. The cold weather over the last couple of weeks may have shrunk it to 38 miles, but anyway the difference is very, very little. I believe it was in 1927 that Canadian National Railways built a line from Edmonton to St. Paul, Alberta, which is not in my constituency. This was a branch line that went to Grand Centre, which is now the town just outside the gate of the Cold Lake air base.

It was all arranged that when this line was built it would go straight through from Edmonton to meet the C.N.R. spur at Frenchman Butte, but somehow or other the money ran out. All they needed was $3 million to finish those 39.1 miles of railway line. God only knows how much money it would cost at this time to finish that railway, but back in 1927, I believe it was, it was only $3 million.

The right of way was started. The building up of the roadbed was started. I understand this is fairly easy country through which to build a road. I believe the line was not finished at that time because of lack of money. It is not an extension of a railway; it is just joining up the sides of a gap that was left. It goes through very profitable and prosperous farming country, and also services the salt mines at Lindbergh and Heinsburg. I believe that at Heinsburg there is supposed to be at present the most productive salt mine or salt well in Canada. I am told that it supplies Windsor Salt for all of Canada, whereas at one time the salt all came from Windsor, Ontario.

The short C.N.R. line from south of St. Walburg, at Spruce Lake, is in existence. It should be in operation, but because it is just blind line, for some reason or other Canadian National Railways want to close it. If it were joined up to this other line between Frenchman Butte and Heinsburg, the line could not help but pay its way. As it is, all the products of that area that can be served from Heinsburg through the St. Paul area, and from all the other prosperous area between Edmonton and Heinsburg, have to be hauled back through Edmonton, a matter of approximately 200 miles. The railway does not haul these products back at no cost. It seems very, very absurd to me that in all these years nothing has been done about the line. It is high time something was done, and something constructive, even if it is only constructing these 39.1 miles of railway from Heinsburg to Frenchman Butte.

I did not give the hon. member for Athabasca (Mr. Bigg) enough publicity and enough credit previously. I must now speak of that hon. member, who has not been able to arrive in Ottawa because no air traffic is landing in the city today. The hon. member is held up in Toronto and could not get to Ottawa. He has been extremely active in pushing this line, which goes through his constituency. While the part that should be built does not go through my constituency, it affects very greatly the prosperity of the people in certain portions of my constituency.

The hon. member for Athabasca has raised this question time and time again. I think perhaps he won an election on his efforts in trying to get this gap closed, but somehow or other we just have not been able to get anywhere with the problem and I think it is high time the matter was referred to the standing committee on transport and communications, as this motion requests. It should be discussed there and should receive a proper airing, where witnesses from the C.N.R. and from other interested parties in the province of Alberta can be called. I should like to see this happen at the very earliest moment, and I assure the house that I will try to provide details to the standing committee on transport and communications when this matter comes before that body.

• (6:40 p.m.)

I shall take my cue from the mover of the motion and terminate my remarks at this point. Again I will say that I hope this matter will be sent to the standing committee on transport and communications at the earliest possible moment.

Mr. Norman Fawcett (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, I do not want to take up much of the time of the house for the simple reason that I do not want to be placed in the unhappy position of helping to talk out a notice of motion which I support. However, I would like to comment on this notice of motion because the area involved in the completion of this line is one which I know very well. I recall that during the drought years on the prairies, when a good portion of the southern and central part of Saskatchewan was little or not more than a desert, people were going into that area in droves. As a result of the interest shown in the area I made it a point to go to that part of the country. I certainly support everything that the two previous speakers have said with respect to the country through which the proposed line would go. It is an area ideally suited for mixed farming, and during the period I was there it was only partially settled. I understand that since then the whole area has been developed by experienced people who moved there from other parts of the province, and it is now one of the best mixed farming areas in the whole of Saskatchewan.

I should like to comment on one of the remarks made by the hon. member for Kenora-Rainy River (Mr. Reid), when he drew a parallel between a new spur line to a mining area and a line such as this one which connects two points and goes through a developer area. As the hon. member has said, I cannot understand why such a line would not be completed, because obviously a line which starts at one point and ends nowhere would not be very effective. There should be a connecting link.

Perhaps we should give some second thought to the railway transportation in this country as a whole. Even though numerous bills have been presented with respect to the incorporation of pipe lines, it will be many years before we can do without railways, particularly in some areas in Canada. Our national railway has a responsibility to provide required service in areas where it is badly needed. Perhaps it is all right to approach this matter from the point of view of the profit which such service would bring, particularly in the case of a line going to a newly developing mining area. But this is another matter altogether, and the country as a whole has a responsibility to ensure that people in these areas get the service they require.

I support the notice of motion. I will conclude my remarks so as not to be placed in the embarassing position of talking it out. I hope it will receive the consideration it deserves.

Mr. H. A. Olson (Medicine Hat): Mr. Speaker, in my opinion the hon. member for Meadow Lake (Mr. Cadieu) made a perfectly reasonable request, that the matter of the gap between Heinsburg and Frenchman Butte be referred to the transport and communications committee. I am sure the hon. member will agree that it is necessary for some study of this subject to be made by members of the House of Commons to determine whether or not this proposal is adequate to provide satisfactory transportation of grain to the line going south between Edmonton and Lloydminster, and from that part of the area on the west side of the border but in Saskatchewan, to St. Walburg, because a change has taken place between what is now moved by highway and what a few years ago was considered almost exclusively railway traffic. I am not suggesting that this changes the situation, but there is a need to look at it in the light of the current and potential future development.

There are one or two remarks which I should like to make. I think the hon. member and the people whom he represents have become apprehensive about the situation which might develop because the line running west of St. Walburg is not protected by the order protecting certain lines throughout western Canada until 1975. I can fully understand their apprehension because it appears to me there will be some farmers in the area who will be 20 miles farther away from an elevator and from a market for their grain, if indeed the C.N.R. come to the Canadian Transport Commission and is successful in an application to abandon that line. I am sure the application for the abandonment of that portion of the railway line has already been made because I think applications have been made for all unprotected lines. But of course hon. members know that what is holding this up at the present time, and quite properly so, is the need for establishing a costing formula to determine how much revenue and how much cost can properly be attributed to any of these branch lines. I think it is only proper to hold up the abandonment of these unprotected lines until such time as members of the house and other interested parties across the country are able to agree on the factors that will go into the costing formula.

I will not take time today to explain this matter, but let me say that in my experience the figures advanced by the railway companies are quite often loaded in favour of their argument. In light of the fact that at present we do not have an accepted formula, I can understand the additional apprehension which exists. I do not know whether or not the farmers near Heinsburg in Alberta pay a higher rate for the transportation of their grain through Edmonton and then to the lakes, or whether this is calculated as if there were a line going across. This is something else the committee should look into. For example, do these farmers pay more per hundredweight or per bushel than farmers closer to Edmonton, taking into consideration the fact there is a backhaul to the west and then a haul to the east again? If they do, and if that is unjustified, then of course I believe these farmers have the right to press, as they have been doing through the hon. member and his colleague the hon. member for Athabasca (Mr. Bigg), to have this line built, or an adjustment made in the freight rate which would take into account the capital cost of construction. There is always of course the matter of the volume of traffic today and the potential traffic that would be moving east from the area in the immediate future. This traffic might include such things as the rather extensive production of salt from two or three mines in the area, as well as the present and potential grain production for export from the area.

• (6:50 p.m.)

I suppose the decision is one for the management of the Canadian National, based to some extent on these considerations. I feel it is important also that the members of this house who represent the people in the area, as well as many people in other parts of the prairies, ought to have a thorough explanation from someone as to why it is uneconomic to construct this line. The hon. member for Meadow Lake (Mr. Cadieu) said he could not understand why this gap had been left in the first place. He could not understand why, over the last half century, no action had been taken to fill the gap. I am sure he has kept himself well informed of all the developments and the explanations that have been given by the railway company throughout these years. If he is still able to say he cannot understand why action has not been taken long since, then I believe the members of this house, through the committee on transport and communications, have an obligation to find those answers for him.

I do not know what it would cost to build that railway today. The hon. member for Vegreville (Mr. Fane) suggested that in 1927 the cost would have been a little over $3 million. I am sure the cost today would be two or three times that. This would be one of the factors which would have to be related to the amount of revenue and the volume of traffic that would result from the construction of the line.

However, Mr. Speaker, this is not the only serious problem existing in connection with gaps in railway lines on the prairies. In my constituency there is an unprotected line from Hays to Suffield. If this line, about 30 miles in length were removed, a similar situation would be created to the one about which the hon. member has been complaining. This railway line, however, is in existence, as is the bridge over the South Saskatchewan river. I know that the figures advanced by the Canadian Pacific Railway respecting the number of carloadings originating on sidings along that line were not substantiated by the figures available through the Board of Transport Commissioners. Here, again, we need to have these facts substained before the committee. As I said earlier, we have been able to investigate and ascertain that the railways were advancing figures that were not accurate. Perhaps they have been doing the same thing in the case about which the hon. members complained affecting northeastern Alberta and northeastern Saskatchewan. I believe we should have available to give evidence before the committee, those experts who have studied the matter. Then we could give consideration to whether or not the capital required is reasonable in relation to the potential earnings.

Another point mentioned by the hon. member which impressed me was that it is not always a matter of dollars and cents so far as the railway is concerned. There is also the matter of providing an equal opportunity for the people throughout western Canada to operate their farms and have facilities available which would enable them to be competitive with other parts of the prairies. Even if there were a slight loss, therefore, I would favour the construction of this line. If a substantial loss were projected by the officials of the railway company appearing before the committee, then of course we would have to decide how great a loss would be justified in order to satisfy the requirements of the people in that area.

I know the hon. member for Nickel Belt (Mr. Fawcett) said this was a rich farming area today and probably will continue to be. Indeed there is probably a lot more land up there that could be exploited for farm purposes. This would add to the potential volume of traffic. So, Mr. Speaker, I am going to close my remarks at this time. Good arguments have been advanced for the committee to hear this case. I would hope a situation like this could be corrected, provided the evidence brought before the committee appeared to justify the capital outlay when compared with possible revenues.

Mr. Raymond Rock (Jacques-Cartier-Lasalle): The hon. member for Meadow Lake (Mr. Cadieu) may have excellent reasons for requesting that railway facilities be provided between Frenchman Butte, Saskatchewan and Heinsburg, Alberta, and for having this important request referred to the standing committee on transport and communications. Perhaps the committee should study this problem in the same way as it studied the intention of the Canadian Pacific to remove its trans-Canada train called the Dominion. I believe that shortly the hon. member will have the opportunity of speaking to the new president of the Canadian National, when the railway officials appear before the committee. As I said before—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I regret to interrupt the hon. member but the time assigned to the consideration of private members business has now expired. The house will resume the business interrupted at six o'clock.

BROADCASTING

IMPLEMENTATION OF CANADIAN POLICY

The house resumed consideration in committee of Bill No. C-163, to implement a broadcasting policy for Canada, to amend the Radio Act in consequential and related provisions—Miss LaMarsh—Mr. Batten in the chair.

The Chairman: It being seven o'clock I do now leave the chair.

At seven o'clock the committee took recess.

AFTER RECESS

The committee resumed at 8 p.m.

Mr. Nugent: Mr. Chairman, before supper I was making a few remarks relative to the amendment now before the committee wherein I was expressing my surprise at the reasoning put forward by the minister. If the committee would bear with me I will repeat the essence of my remarks, which simply is this.

We have gone to the trouble of enshrining in clause 2 (c) of the bill the right to freedom of expression, subject to the applicable statutes and regulations. Bearing in mind that there is considerable concern in the country about the right to receive programs that are broadcast and that there is an immense disparity in the reception of programs in different parts of the country, in view of the many new opportunities now afforded our citizens, through the means of cablevision and other systems, to receive all programs that are available, I thought it essential to include in the bill a right that goes hand in hand with freedom of expression, namely freedom to see and hear all broadcast programs that are available.

My present amendment before the committee has been watered down from the original version I first proposed last Tuesday night, in that it seeks to give Canadians the right to receive all programs. The minister has suggested that this would open the door to unlimited demands that all programs be made available. With respect, Mr. Chairman, I do not follow that interpretation of my amendment. If it were included in this paragraph of clause 2 it would in any event be subject to the relevant statutes and regulations. Under the terms of the bill the cablevision systems, rebroadcast systems—rediffusion systems, as they are called—are brought within the control of the regulatory body.

I do not think it can be suggested that the inclusion of the freedom to receive all programs could be given any wider or narrower application than freedom of expression, because both rights are subject to the relevant statutes and regulations. Therefore, to be consistent, if the minister suggests that the inclusion of the words "freedom to receive all programs" would open the door to all sorts of demands for rebroadcasting, amplifying or rediffusing all kinds of signals without regard to the law, then she must also say that the same construction can be placed on the words "freedom of expression", about which she should have the same fears.

There can be but one reason, Mr. Chairman, for the refusal of the minister to include in the bill an affirmation of the right of the people to receive all broadcasts, namely that the government is insisting on the right of censorship so it can refuse citizens of this country reception of certain programs.

This amendment is not placing upon the government the burden of making sure that everyone in Canada should have the right to receive all programs wherever they may originate. That seemed to be the purport of the minister's comments. My amendment cannot be read in that way. All I am contending is that if the amendment is accepted, and this expression included in the bill, it would affirm that there is a right to receive all programs. I does not add one iota to the duty of the government or any regulatory body to ensure that those programs are made available; neither does it detract from their authority to establish the necessary rules and regulations governing the broadcasting or distribution of such programs.

Therefore, Mr. Chairman, unless the minister can show that my reasoning is unsound and that there is a difference in principle between the right to receive and freedom of expression, the government should accept this amendment. It should give equal weight to the other freedom that I suggest is a corollary of the freedom of expression, namely the right to hear and see all programs.

Mr. Nowlan: Mr. Chairman, I have listened to the remarks of the hon. member for Edmonton-Strathcona with a great deal of interest. I also heard some of the debate last week. When the hon. member originally proposed his amendment the minister was not too happy with its wording and thought that the week end might produce a more satisfactory amendment. The minister has kindly given a further reply today which seemed to deal with some of the semantics involved here, as well as some of the difficulties created by granting an unlimited right to reception of programs.

I think the remarks of the hon. member for Edmonton-Strathcona demand very close scrutiny by the committee, because in this bill we are talking about freedom of speech or freedom of expression. Hon. members opposite are Liberals in the true sense—certainly they are in the classical sense—and they should be most concerned about this clause in the bill. Those to my left who have talked so eloquently about freedom of speech and ensuring that clause 2 (d) does not prescribe any sort of censorship or direction should, I suggest, pay very close attention to this particular paragraph.

If the present wording of the clause were accepted by the committee we would be admitting not only that the licence to broadcast should be controlled but that the right to freedom of speech is ensured. Yet, in remote areas, the freedom of Canadians to hear or see programs carried by cable is severely restricted. That freedom is governed by this bill, since what is involved is not broadcasting but reception only.

• (8:10 p.m.)

Regardless of the generality of the principle of the freedom to hear and see via cable television, another criticism must be levelled at this clause. This bill is another one of those that try to define some sort of national policy and to bring together various regions of the country. I am thinking particularly of the Atlantic area. That area is not one of the great growth areas of Canada, it is not Ontario or Quebec and does not have all the competitive companies that are now engaged in the cable television field. It is not proposed to put many television stations into that area to cover it. I think one new station is to be installed by the C.B.C., and another by C.T.V. An application is under way with respect to a station at Moncton, but that station will extend an existing network. I do not think it will be an originating station.

In an area that has not much growth you do not find that operators will open lucrative television stations; nor will you find many originating stations in that area. This afternoon the minister talked about the necessity to have originating stations. Certainly I should like to know what she and her officials foresee will be the future of originating stations in the Atlantic area. Where you have no originating stations, or few of them, and where the country is slow growing, the only way that many Canadians in that part of the country can receive programs is through the medium of cable television. This bill will restrict the development of cable television, and bring it under the broadcasting legislation. I have been informed, nevertheless, that it is extremely difficult to get anyone in the department even to listen to a request from the east for cable television.

What good is it to have freedom of speech, which as Canadians we all ought to have, if we cannot see and hear programs that are carried by television or by cable television? This is almost the reverse side of the coin; it is almost a reverse type of censorship to which the hon. member for Edmonton-Strathcona referred previously.

Members of the committee have often talked about freedom of speech. To a certain extent we may have abused that freedom here. When we talk about the freedom of speech we cannot divorce it from the freedom to hear—the right to hear and see all programs that are to be heard and seen. You cannot take away that right from those who live in parts of the country that do not have a good growth rate and that do not provide lucrative markets for originating stations, such as you have in Ontario and Quebec. I hope hon. members of the committee will find favour with and support the amendment moved by the hon. member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Surely, Mr. Chairman, in such an important matter it is only a question of evolving the right phrase to fit the circumstances. Surely the law officers, the minister and her officials could find a way of bringing some protection in, under this clause. I think they should try to follow the reasoning of the hon. member for Edmonton-Strathcona in the language they use.

We talk about freedom of speech, and yet, when it comes to the potential development of cable television for the Atlantic provinces, the freedom to see and hear is to be denied to some of the people of the areas. We ought to pay some attention to the freedom to see and to hear.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Is the committee ready for the question?

Mr. Cowan: Mr. Chairman, as the last speaker, the hon. member for Digby-Annapolis-Kings has stated, clause 2(c) is the heart of the matter, particularly when you consider that the right of free speech is being trampled underfoot by those who favour the adoption of such a clause as 2(c).

I was speaking the other night on this clause when my time expired. At that time I referred to a judgment of the Supreme Court of British Columbia, to which the Secretary of State herself had referred me. As I said, I have discussed it more than once with her. I wanted to advise the committee of the contents of that judgment because they are very, very vital to the question under discussion right now.

I pointed out that the province of British Columbia had endeavoured to gain control over the reception of radio signals, or television signals because, after gaining control over the reception operation, they would be able to regulate and tax such installations. The cablevision companies in Victoria and the lower mainland of British Columbia took the case to the British Columbia Supreme Court, asking for a ruling on the matter and maintaining that they were under federal jurisdiction. But, in giving the judgments that they did on the matter, the Supreme Court of British Columbia made reference to decisions of the Privy Council of Great Britain. These decisions clearly establish that in the broadcasting world you cannot divide the transmitter from the receiver.

I should like to refer to some pages that I have before me. Bear in mind that the Secretary of State herself asked me to read the judgment, although I had read it several times before she referred me to it. I got an extra copy of it from the Supreme Court of Canada library.

I have here in my hand the judgment of the Supreme Court of British Columbia, as recorded in the Dominion Law Reports. The case is in re Public Utilities Commission and Victoria Cablevision Limited, et al. The learned judges of the Supreme Court of British Columbia said in part:

> The receiving of the programs by air is beyond doubt within the exclusive jurisdiction of the Dominion. In Re Regulation & Control of Radio Communication, A.-G. Que. v. A.-G. Can., (1932) 2 D.L.R. 81 (1932) A.C. 304, 39 C.R.C. 49, (1932) 1 W.W.R. 563,—

That is clear to the Secretary of State. She is a lawyer.

> —Viscount Dunedin in delivering the judgment of the Privy Council stated at p. 85:
>
> "Now does broadcasting fall within the excepted matters? Their Lordships are of opinion that it does, falling in (a) within both the words "telegraphs" and the general words "undertakings connecting the province with any other or others of the provinces or extending beyond the limits of the province"."
>
> And at p. 86:
>
> "Once it is conceded, as it must be, keeping in view the duties under the Convention, that the transmitting instrument must be so to speak under the control of the dominion, it follows in their Lordships' opinion that the receiving instrument must share its fate. Broadcasting as a system cannot exist without both a transmitter and a receiver. The receiver is indeed useless without a transmitter and can be reduced to a nonentity if the transmitter closes. The system cannot be divided into two parts, each independent of the other."
>
> The receiver is indeed useless without a transmitter and can be reduced to a nonentity if the transmitter closes. The system cannot be divided into two parts, each independent of the other.

• (8:20 p.m.)

I have a second opinion to read to you also, Mr. Chairman, but this bears exactly on the point under discussion in clause 2(c) where the Canadian cabinet is endeavouring to split the right of free speech in two by making great mouth filling statements and high sounding platitudes about the fact that the right to freedom of expression is unquestioned. What good is the freedom of expression if people are not allowed to hear what is being said? Of all the idle, empty phrases I have seen in my life I have never seen the equal of this, that the right to freedom of expression is unquestioned. Are we cutting out the right of freedom to hear? You do not have the right of freedom to speak when you are out in the middle of the Sahara desert or out on the frozen shores of Hudson Bay. You must have an audience to have freedom of speech.

What we have here is a proposed legal action, without precedent in the world, endeavouring to split the freedom of speech into two parts, but Viscount Dunedin has ruled that you cannot split the transmitter from the receiver in the matter of freedom of broadcasting. He went on to say:

> The argument of the province really depends on making, as already said, a sharp distinction between the transmitting and the receiving instrument. In their Lordships' opinion this cannot be done ... Broadcasting as a system cannot exist without both a transmitter and a receiver—
>
> Now, a message to be transmitted must have a recipient as well as a transmitter. The message may fall on deaf ears, but at least it falls on ears. Further, the strict reading of the word "telegraph", making it identical with the ordinary use of it, has already been given up in Toronto v. Bell Telephone Co. of Canada (1905) A.C. 52.

Then the judgment went on to point out the futility of trying to split into two what is really one undertaking. At the conclusion of his judgment Viscount Dunedin said:

> Although the question had obviously to be decided on the terms of the statute, it is a matter of congratulation that the result arrived at seems consonant with common sense. A divided control between transmitter and receiver could only lead to confusion and inefficiency.

Then the judgment went on:

> In my view the exclusive legislative jurisdiction of parliament extends up to the point where the T.V. signal is received by the subscriber and that the undertaking of the respondents is nothing more or less than an integral part of the receiving facilities.

Despite this opinion of the Privy Council of Great Britain, which has been quoted as authority by the supreme court of British Columbia, in this case we are asked to split the right of freedom of speech into two. We will allow the person who wants to speak the right to do so. His right to freedom of expression will be unquestioned, period. But there is nothing said in this bill about the right of the public to hear what is being said. That is really splitting the atom, right here in the House of Commons. We cannot see it being done, but if you will consider the matter, Mr. Chairman, you will see the cabinet is taking away the right of freedom of information from people in areas where they have not got C.A.T.V. installations, areas in which applicants are endeavouring to establish C.A.T.V. installations.

On Friday afternoon the Secretary of State gave reasons why she could not accept the amendment introduced by the hon. member for Edmonton-Strathcona. In speaking on this matter of freedom of speech, and the right to receive signals in your own home by whatever mechanical means you wish, so long as they do not violate any of the statutes of the Dominion of Canada, I have endeavoured to show that I do not personally hold the Secretary of State ignorant of the facts of C.A.T.V. operations. She is expressing views on behalf of the cabinet, and I hold the cabinet responsible for the ignorance that is displayed during discussion of these matters on this bill.

On Friday afternoon I could not believe my ears when I heard the Secretary of State speaking. As she spoke I tried to write down the reasons she was advancing. Now I am happy to have a copy of Friday's Hansard before me. I may say that I have heard her remarks more than once, and I would like to answer her arguments seriatim to show members of the committee the uproar that is being developed to becloud the entire issue. I uphold the freedom of speech and the right of C.A.T.V. operators to instal C.A.T.V. installations wherever they want to instal them. But on Friday afternoon the Secretary of State started off her remarks by saying this:

> Mr. Chairman, the objection I have to this amendment found support both from the Department of Justice and the Board of Broadcast Governors.

I endeavoured to answer that by pointing out that she did not pay so much respect to the Department of Justice when she was in opposition as she obviously seems to be anxious to pay to that department today. Of course the Board of Broadcast Governors is going to be in favour of her objection, believing that it should have the power to license C.A.T.V. installations. After all, that board has been doing this informally for some time. Its members believe that the bigger the empire they can build, the bigger and more important they will be in their own eyes and in the eyes of the public. To say that the Board of Broadcast Governors agrees with her argument is no argument at all in such circumstances. No one in his right senses would expect the Board of Broadcast Governors to say, "We would not like to extend our empire. We would like to be a big frog in a small pond." After its last public sessions we were told that the B.B.G. agreed with the argument that C.A.T.V. installations should be licensed by it.

On Friday afternoon the Secretary of State continued her remarks by saying:

—I do not think any of us believe there is or should be a restriction on the reception of programs that are received in the normal course.

This afternoon I asked what is meant by balanced programs, and here we have the phrase "received in the normal course." Evidently this is a slap at C.A.T.V. reception facilities. It is an intimation that if a person has a home receiving set with a home receiving antenna, then what he receives comes to him in the normal course. But for several reasons that argument falls the moment it is uttered.

Why is the Royal York hotel in Toronto allowed to receive programs over a community antenna system while other people are denied the right to instal such a system? Is it the "normal course" for the Royal York hotel to receive its programs over a community antenna system? I believe it is; but by the minister's own arguments she says this is not receiving programs in the normal course. I maintain that the Royal York hotel is receiving its signals in the normal course by community antenna.

On the other hand according to the minister and to the Department of Transport, people who live in apartment houses, are receiving their signals in the normal course. What does the Secretary of State mean by stating, "as long as the programs are received by the normal course, I agree"? If a community antenna television system is the normal course for an hotel and an apartment house, then it is also the normal course for receiving signals through the air, even if a person lives in a real estate subdivision.

To show, how by a lot of wordage the issue can be confused, the Secretary of State went on to say:

However, signals must come from a properly licensed station ... we would not want them to receive them unless the station were licensed.

• (8:30 p.m.)

I do not know of a single C.A.T.V. installation in the entire Dominion of Canada that is receiving signals from any other than a properly licensed station. When a C.A.T.V. applicant is licensed by the Department of Transport—and that department is the only body which has need to handle the application—I can assure you they are told what stations they can pick up. You can rest assured that the Department of Transport specifies only properly licensed stations.

What is this hogwash about saying that the C.A.T.V. signals must come from properly licensed stations? No C.A.T.V. station in Canada has ever asked for the right to pick up any other signal than that of a properly licensed station. Why make this foufaraw on this matter? It reminds me of the story of the divinity student who was relating his experiences in preaching on the subject of defective speaking. The student pointed out that sometimes he was not too sure of his statements. He said, "I am not too convinced in my own mind that what I am telling the congregation is correct doctrine. Sometimes I hesitate to speak, and lower my voice". But his professor said, to him "When you are on weak ground shout and stamp your feet; the weaker your argument, the louder you shout and the harder you stamp your feet."

Some hon. Members: Louder, louder.

Mr. Cowan: Why are we bringing in this argument about a properly licensed station? The C.A.T.V. never picks up anything else. Then they bring in the business about pirate stations. No C.A.T.V. station ever picks up a pirate station. In commenting on the minister's remarks about pirate stations, I should like to point out that she makes a backhanded reference to not wanting people to listen to unlicensed stations. If there were unlicensed stations on the Atlantic or Pacific coasts I am sure you would only need to tell the fine people of British Columbia or Nova Scotia that they should not listen to those stations, to build up the biggest audience a radio or television station ever had. I am sure the minister must have been reading about the wreck of a pirate ship in the maritimes in recent days. The minister states:

Technically it would be possible to set up a broadcast or a rebroadcast station and make its programs available to everyone. However, I do not think the B.B.G. should be required to license them simply because such stations are technically feasible.

Once again we are off on a tangent. We are talking about C.A.T.V. stations which are nothing but reception centres; there is no broadcasting involved. They make no use of the air waves. But, the minister says that technically it would be possible to set up a broadcast or a rebroadcast station, and she does not think the B.B.G. should be required to licence them simply because such stations are technically feasible. I could not agree more. I am old enough to remember the four-month period back around 1930 when the people who were trying to get into the radio world were screaming that they should not be licensed, and that the Canadian government had no right to say that they could or could not go on the air. The only difficulty is that electronically there are only so many channels available for radio stations, and in order to prevent congestion on the air someone has to authorize certain stations to use certain channels. For a period of time the United States government, the Mexican government and the Canadian government agreed that they would not restrict applications for radio licences. There are certainly a few male members of this house—none of the women are old enough—who will recall the episode about 35 years ago when they allowed all those people who wanted to do so to go on the air, and you could not pick up a station and make intelligent use of it because of the interference from other stations, some with weak power and nearby, and others with strong power and a distance away.

Then they decided they must limit the number of people who could get into broadcasting. A certain number of the channels in the air were limited to Canada, a certain number were limited to Mexico and a fair number were limited to the United States. In the case of C.A.T.V. the number of channels on the air has nothing to do with their applications. They have no use of the airwaves; they simply pick up the program in the air and transmit it by wire to their subscribers. Again, in her speech of Friday afternoon, the minister said this:

> Other considerations come into play, such as whether or not a C.A.T.V. or a rebroadcast station of some kind should be licensed in a given area.

What balderdash is involved here? Other considerations come into play, such as whether or not a C.A.T.V. or a rebroadcast station of some kind should be licensed in a given area. Well, what did they do in Wawa? There was already a radio station in there, and they put in a rebroadcasting station right on top of the station at Wawa.

What does the minister mean when she says that other considerations come into play, such as whether or not a C.A.T.V. or a rebroadcast station of some kind should be licensed? She is making out that they are incompatible one with the other. We have a concrete case in Wawa where the C.B.C. put in a rebroadcasting station on top of the C.A.T.V. They do not interfere with each other. One is a broadcasting unit making use of the airwaves, and the C.A.T.V. is a reception centre. They are not incompatible. There is no need to make a statement like that except to confuse the issue. Then we were told by the minister on Friday:

> Sometimes the B.B.G. turns down such applications because they believe that a broadcasting station will at some time in the future be built in the area and this would be more in the interests of the community concerned.

Who says that it will be in the interests of the community concerned. If the people in Napanee, Prescott and Gananoque wish to have a C.A.T.V. installation so that they can pick up more programs than are available to them over the Kingston station, or the one or two Ottawa stations which are available there, that is the concern of the people in the area, and nobody else. Why should people be denied the right of freedom of choice in picking up television programs from other stations that are available to them while they are waiting for another station to be put into their area? What would you think of a situation in which a community wants a highway built so that they could bring in trucks and motorcars—perhaps an area in northern Ontario or northern Saskatchewan—if the government said that they would not give them a highway because it is quite possible that a railway may go in there in the future? The people would not stand for such an answer.

Now, however, the Secretary of State and the cabinet are trying to tell the people in Napanee, Gananoque and Prescott that they cannot look at any stations other than the presently available stations because in the future the C.B.C. might wish to put in another station. Mind you, they say they are not stopping their plans, that they are really just pulling them in. But how long will it be before they put a second station in that area? In the meantime they deny these people freedom of viewing.

• (8:40 p.m.)

Then we have the Secretary of State saying this:

> The difficulty that both justice and the B.B.G. inform me they see in this amendment is that the phrase it seeks to add to the bill means different things to different people.

There is an argument, I am telling you. We have not heard that more than a million times in the past. That is, we cannot do something because a phrase means different things to different people. What about the clause on national unity that we were discussing the other day and again this afternoon, when the hon. member for Burnaby-Richmond pointed out that the phrase "national unity" is or could be an entirely different thing from the phrase "Canadian unity"? If you are going to argue about two nations in this country you are going to have national unity practised by two different peoples. The hon. member for Burnaby-Richmond was endeavouring to have the clause read "Canadian unity" so there could be solidification of the situation.

We were told by the minister on Friday that she does not like the amendment suggested by the hon. member for Edmonton-Strathcona because justice and the B.B.G., forsooth, advise her that they seek to add a phrase which means different things to different people. That is why we have judges, because one firm says the law says this and another firm says the law says that, so obviously it means different things to different people. We have judges to decide. I should like to see any phrase in the English language that has only one meaning. We are given this puerile excuse that the B.B.G. and justice have informed the Secretary of State that the phrase seeks to add something which means different things to different people. Every phrase means different things to different people.

I regret having to say this, but in Hansard of Friday afternoon at page 6039, and carrying over to the next page, the Secretary of State is recorded as having said this:

> These signals may come from a C.A.T.V. station—

I have said before, and I must repeat again, that the minister does not know what she is talking about, because a C.A.T.V. system does not issue a signal. The minister stands in her place here and endeavours to persuade this House of Commons to vote in a certain manner by making a statement that is absolutely incorrect. This is the same thing as trying to tell you that water runs uphill or that black is white. You would not swallow that. The minister does not know what she is talking about when she says these signals may come from a C.A.T.V. station. C.A.T.V. stations do not issue signals; but the statement has been made, and there you are.

This is on all fours with a situation that developed in the committee on broadcasting, films and assistance to the arts. We had expert witnesses there and one morning we had the expert of experts. The minister knows who he is, but I cannot place him now. He made the flat footed suggestion to the committee in answer to a question by me that in the United States C.A.T.V. stations are licensed up to 50 subscribers. I never heard such a thing and I said to this expert of experts, "What are you talking about; where is this licensing authority?" He replied "yes; yes there is such an authority up to 50 subscribers." I have never heard of a C.A.T.V. station that works with as few as 50 subscribers.

During our noon adjournment I telephoned two authorities I know in western Canada and two people in Washington and I found there is no licensing authority in the United States of America for C.A.T.V. stations. We came back in the afternoon to an in camera session of that broadcasting committee. I thought that the expert of experts who had made this false statement in the morning would be there in the afternoon. The in camera session carried right on and finished its work about half past three. At that point a gentleman came over to me, also from the Department of the Secretary of State and said to me: "I want to tell you, sir, that there is no licensing authority in the United States. That was a mistake made this morning." Well, I might state that in the parlance of the street I really chewed his head off.

At that time I said to him: "What in the name of heaven do you mean by telling me, after the committee has brought in its report and has met in camera, that information given to us this morning is false information? Why do you tell me after the committee has risen that it is false?" He said to me he was not the man who made the statement in the morning. I said: "Oh, yes, everybody in the civil service who is responsible is always away on something much more important."

Here we have the minister herself standing up and stating that these signals may come from a C.A.T.V. station. This is a false statement because it is impossible; but it is given to you in evidence in order to persuade you to take some course of action. I say to you that in the committee on broadcasting we were given false information which was corrected after the committee rose. If we are going to make decisions on that kind of information we should reconsider the bill very carefully, clause by clause and sentence by sentence.

Then again on Friday afternoon the minister said:

> There is no quarrel with the proposition that operators who are licensed and lawfully transmitting signals should be able to broadcast to all.

We are not even talking about that, and no one is quarrelling with it. We are talking about the right of people to receive signals that have been properly and lawfully authorized. Why bring in this line of hokum? There is no quarrel with the proposition that operators who are licensed and lawfully transmitting signals should be able to broadcast to everyone; but those are broadcasters. This phrase, the right to freedom of expression—

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: I regret to interrupt the hon. gentleman but his allotted time has now expired. Is the committee ready for the question?

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, I found the remarks made by the hon. member for York-Humber (Mr. Cowan) very interesting, and I think that if someone intervenes between his two speeches, he will perhaps be able to continue his observations.

That is why I think I should say that freedom of expression implies also, as the hon. member for York-Humber pointed out so ably, freedom for each individual to hear the programs he wants.

[English]

Mr. Cowan: Mr. Chairman, I was referring to the remarks of the Secretary of State of last Friday afternoon, when she referred to the question of licensing of broadcasters. We are not worried about the licensing of broadcasters. We are talking about the right of reception, which is part and parcel of freedom of speech. The splitting of hairs is simple compared to the splitting of the right to freedom of speech, which I have never heard of being split anywhere else on the face of the earth. I should like to know about any place where anyone has tried to do this before the Canadian cabinet dreamed up this marvellous idea on its own.

The minister having referred to this issue of lawfully licensed broadcasters, which were not being discussed whatsoever, said:

> Consider, for example, the C.A.T.V. operator. Let us say that he wishes to rebroadcast four United States signals.

That statement again proves she does not know what she is talking about because a C.A.T.V. operator does not rebroadcast. The use of this expression confuses the issue and makes people wonder what this uproar is all about. This uproar is all about a lot of foufaraw and houfaraw introduced by the Secretary of State in respect of a question which is clear-cut, namely the right of freedom of speech, the right of the public to know and the right of the public to listen to every lawfully constituted bit of information it can pick up either in printed form, by word of mouth, on television or on radio.

Now this Canadian cabinet, which used to be called Liberal, says it is going to split freedom of speech because there is going to be the right of the broadcaster to freedom of expression. Lord Dunedin of the Privy Council rendered a judgment which has been quoted with great satisfaction by the Supreme Court of British Columbia, in which he said that you cannot separate the broadcaster and the transmitter; there is one operation, and to have freedom of speech you have to have ears.

I say to you that this idea of stating to certain areas that they cannot obtain the programs available because the Board of Broadcast Governors feels another television station may go into the area shortly, and that it would be inimical to its interests if there was a C.A.T.V. station there, is ridiculous. Leaving aside this statement, which proves that she does not know what she is talking about, let us assume that a broadcaster wishes to rebroadcast four United States signals. Under this operator's licence the B.B.G. still requires him to carry the national program in Canada. Why get so excited about bringing in four United States signals? I have referred on numerous occasions to the station at Pembroke where there is one local T.V. station. Two applications were made for a C.A.T.V. franchise up there. All they wanted to do was bring in three signals from Ottawa. All they could do mechanically and technically was bring in three T.V. stations from Ottawa.

• (8:50 p.m.)

Surely we will admit that the programs originating in Ottawa are Canadian and are national. But no, the last two applicants were refused the right to bring in the three channels from Ottawa because the local T.V. station would suffer economically from it. As I have explained more than once—and it looks as though I have to keep on explaining in the hope that facts and reason may permeate the minds of people—the applicants were turned down. I ascertained in a circuitous way that after two applications were turned down in the year ending March 31, 1967, because their operation would be inimical to the economic viability of the local Pembroke station, lo and behold a C.A.T.V. application was granted for the present year, since March 31, 1967.

It is a mighty funny situation when two men are turned down before March 31, 1967, because if they were granted a licence it would affect the local T.V. station in Pembroke; but since last April another gentleman who applied has been granted a licence for a C.A.T.V. station in Pembroke, and he is only able to bring in the three extra channels from Ottawa. In Pembroke they have had to look at the one T.V. station, the one operator, for some years, and I am told by the hon. member for North Renfrew that they are quite happy that they now have a selection of four channels because of this C.A.T.V. station.

But when C.A.T.V. operators make application to establish a business in Canada—and I am told by many of my friends in the province of Quebec that most of the C.A.T.V. installations in that province have been erected to bring in Montreal or Quebec city more clearly—and when one discusses the question of C.A.T.V. applications, there is always dragged in the argument that C.A.T.V. stations may bring in American stations. These people ignore the fact that many C.A.T.V. installations in Canada are bringing in only Canadian programs from more distant areas than the people can pick up with a home antenna.

The minister went on to say:

> Let us say that he wishes to—

I will not use her word "rebroadcast", but "pick up"—

> —four United States signals. In giving this operator a licence the B.B.G. requires that he also carry at least the national program of Canada from his local station.

The minister is learning fast, because I read to you her statement before the broadcasting committee in November, in which she said that one of the objections to C.A.T.V. was that it blanks out the local station and only brings in American stations; you cannot get the local station. But standing in her place on January 26 last, which is about two months after her original statement, she said:

> Let us say that he wishes to—> —bring in—

> —four United States signals. In giving this operator a licence the B.B.G. requires that he also carry at least the national program of Canada from his local station.

I am pointing out that the Department of Transport demands that the local Canadian station that is available, if one is available, must be on the C.A.T.V. dial. The minister went on to say:

> If people have the right to receive all programs, this operator technically could pick up 10 or 12 signals, but he would be able to transmit only about six. So a conflict arises there in that the hon. member contends that people have the right to receive whatever programs are available to them, and these programs would be available if the C.A.T.V. operator broadcast them.

Toward the end of that last sentence the minister again used the word "broadcast", which shows that she is wrong. Let me dwell on this point for a moment. In Hamilton about four years ago there were three C.A.T.V. operators. If you wanted to hook in to a C.A.T.V. station in Hamilton you made your deal with any one of the three operators with whom you chose to deal. It turned out, of course, that three operators trying to cover a pretty big area such as Hamilton, by wire, was very expensive, and over the course of time the coverage developed into geographical areas.

I point out that if the Secretary of State is going to worry about picking up all 12 signals, you can put two operators into a town and let them each have six channels on their wire and you can then pick up 12 channels quite easily. In Ottawa they have followed the practice—that is, the Department of Transport and the city council—of splitting the town into two areas at Bank street. I do not know how many channels there are on the two wires, one east of Bank street and one west of Bank street.

But if the Secretary of State is going to worry about the people not getting all the signals that are available, I would point out that this problem can be solved by allowing the C.A.T.V. operators in Ottawa to cover the entire city. Then you could get six channels on one and six on the other. Don't sit back and say, "Well, we can't let the people look at C.A.T.V. because the chap can only bring in six programs, and 12 will be available." You do not have to do it that way; it can be done on a geographical basis and you can give people in the city all the coverage that is available. In this way they could bring in all the available programs.

But it is a specious argument to say that C.A.T.V. has to pull in every program coming over the air. Are you telling me that people looking at their television sets every night are trying to bring in all the programs available to them at any one time? They make a selection and look at the program that will please them most. To say that the subscribers to a

C.A.T.V. station are limited by the number of channels the C.A.T.V. station brings in is begging the question. You do not have to sign a contract with the C.A.T.V. operator before you learn what channels will be available to you. If you do not like the stations he is going to transmit to you by wire, you do not have to subscribe to his service. To make the statement that if you subscribe to the service you are then under the control of the operator, is ridiculous. This is still a free country. The people of Canada still have the right to make a choice in this regard. They should not be told, "This is the program you can look at. We are the wise guys. We won't let C.A.T.V. into Napanee, Prescott or Gananoque because it might stop another T.V. station coming in there."

The Secretary of State went on to say on that Friday afternoon:

> The law officers of the crown and our technical advisers, the Board of Broadcast Governors, do not feel there should be any stricture on the right to receive programs, any more than there is a stricture on the right to read newspapers.

I am glad to know that they subscribe to that belief, but I wish they would put into practice the belief that they claim to hold. The Secretary of State then went on to say:

> But if parliament were to endorse such a broad principle and say that all programs should be available to the people, this may cause considerable difficulty in the application of our licensing requirements—

What is the difficulty in subscribing to the broad principle of freedom of speech? We have the right to hear what we wish to hear. We have the right to hear what is being said. That is a broad principle, and thank God this nation up to now has subscribed to it. I am thinking here of the comments of the Secretary of State about pirate radio stations and that we would not want people listening to them.

My first hunting trip into northern Ontario, into the country of my hon. friend the member for Cochrane, was in 1951. We flew in from Smooth Rock Falls down toward the mouth of the Matagami, where it enters into Kapuskasing. I was in the area with a son-in-law and a nephew who was five years in the Canadian army overseas. We were really amazed with the small, battery-operated radio set that we had taken with us up to where the Matagami and Kapuskasing joined, because when we flicked the switch one evening we found the Russian stations coming in by the handful. We had never heard that kind of program before. Every so often they would give a 15 minute broadcast in English and announce from what part of Russia they were broadcasting. We were picking up pretty far north, as far as the transcontinental railroad and, as they say up there, we were on the downhill slide from the north pole. Russia was coming over the northern ice cap and Russian radio stations were plainly audible to the hon. member for Cochrane. Is the government thinking of licensing these people so they cannot pick up the Russian programs in that area? Perhaps it is because the Russian programs are so freely available in that area that the hon. member for Cochrane is so original in his views, because he must be listening to them occasionally.

• (9:00 p.m.)

If the government is saying that we cannot let the pirate radio stations be heard by people because the B.B.G. has not authorized them, then it is also saying we cannot let Canadians listen to the Russian stations coming in across the top of the world because the B.B.G. has not licensed them. How ridiculous can you get? But parliament endorsing a broad principle such as freedom of speech and saying that all programs should be available to the people, is held up to us as a bogey. What in the name of heaven is our attitude in this day and age of 1968. I say to you that the right to freedom of speech involves the right to receive information no matter where it comes from, as long as it comes lawfully and in accordance with our Canadian regulations and statutes.

The minister went on to say:

> But this would mean, at least theoretically, that if in a given area 10 or 12 signals could be received the people there would have a right to receive them if they had television sets.

I am glad she said that. I have never run across a person who picked up television signals without a television set. However, to return to the matter in hand, why should the people in Vancouver have a choice of seven available channels just because they are close to the United States border, and because there are a large number of television stations in Vancouver, yet the Canadian government tells somebody in Napanee "You will listen to the Kingston station or you won't have a program at all". Is this fair treatment for Canadians, a situation whereby in places such as Toronto or Vancouver where it is possible to pick up seven channels it is quite all right so far as the Canadian cabinet is concerned; but in places such as Napanee, where all they can pick up is Kingston, that is all they will be permitted to look at because a second television station might be opened in the future? How ridiculous can the government's stand be on a matter of this nature?

The Secretary of State went on to say:

> They cannot receive all these signals unless something brings them to their sets. The C.A.T.V. operator might reply by saying: "I have six stations I want to transmit. The regulations say I cannot. I must transmit all 12, because parliament says everyone has a right to receive everything that is available."

Parliament should say that everyone has the right to receive everything that is available. As I said before, I do not pick up four television programs at one time on my home set. They are all available to me, but I do not pick them up simultaneously. I pick them up individually whenever I may wish to do so. For the Secretary of State to use the argument to a C.A.T.V. operator that he must transmit all 12 signals because parliament says everyone has the right to receive everything that is available is childish in the extreme. Why should a Canadian be limited only to the local T.V. station when more channels are available to him through an installation such as C.A.T.V. which is legal and proper in every way and which we have licensed in many parts of Canada?

I have already referred to the fact that it is stated in the B.B.G. report for the year ended March 31, 1967 that the Department of Transport has made 91 informal references to them on applications for C.A.T.V. licences. In making these references to the B.B.G. they said that 84 of the 91 applications would not compete with the local broadcaster. I have already asked why the cabinet is so solicitous of the local broadcaster. Why does he require protection from competition of the daily newspapers which sell advertising in the area? The newspapers are not protected against the T.V. operator, yet the T.V. operator is to be protected by the government against any competition which might make his economic life a little hard. The report states that C.A.T.V. must not be licensed because it can hurt the economic life of the local T.V. station.

I have in my hand the annual reports of the B.B.G. for the year ending March 31, 1963/64, 1964/65 and 1965/66. I have placed on the order paper, and it will appear in Wednesday's issue, a request to the Secretary of State to advise us what applications have been turned down for C.A.T.V. licences in these three years, because we are told the following in the report ended March 31, 1965:

> In the fiscal year ended March 31, 1965, the board examined 59 such applications and found that 46 of them, in its judgment, would not make the operation of existing T.V. stations uneconomical or inhibit the provision of alternate service.

This means that in that year 13 applications were turned down. I have asked to be advised which 13 areas were denied the privilege of freedom of speech, the right to look at whatever stations they could bring on a C.A.T.V. application by a C.A.T.V. installation, and the reasons for those refusals.

As I pointed out, in the year ended March 31, 1967 seven applications were turned down, two of which were in Pembroke, and since then the B.B.G. has informally advised the Minister of Transport to grant a licence to a third applicant. Also, since March 31, 1967, the B.B.G. said, an application for a C.A.T.V. licence in Clermont, Quebec was turned down; but now that it is after April 1, All Fool's Day, they are in favour of granting a licence to Clermont, Quebec, and it has been granted. Why is it that the B.B.G. has reversed its decisions that were evidently made on proper grounds, as set forth in their learned opinions, as each application is received and dealt with?

In the year ended March 31, 1966, the B.B.G. stated that the minister referred 82 C.A.T.V. applications to the board. The number included applications for new licences, extensions of existing systems, and changes in the channels carried. It stated further:

> The board found that 72 of them, in its judgment, would not make the operation of existing T.V. stations uneconomical or inhibit the provision of alternative service.

In the year ended March 31, 1966, the board turned down 10 applications. In the year ended March 31, 1965 they turned down 13 applications, and in the year ended March 31, 1967 they turned down seven applications, making a total of 30. I think the public of Canada and parliament are entitled to know which 30 areas have been deprived of the privilege of C.A.T.V. installations. It would also be interesting to know what applications are being considered by the B.B.G. at present.

I regret the hon. member for Kamloops is not here because I showed him a letter which I received from a man who pointed out that in Vancouver they have seven channels from which they can select the one they want to see, but when he and his wife go to visit a daughter and son-in-law in Kamloops there is only one program available to them, namely the local T.V. station in Kamloops. Yet applications have been made for a C.A.T.V. installation in Kamloops and they are in the hands of the Minister of Transport. I am advised by the hon. member for Kamloops that there is a freeze on until parliament deals with the Broadcasting Act now before us. Why should the people in Vancouver be given such freedom of choice when it comes to television programs while the people in Kamloops are told to look at one local station and nothing else? They are told what is good for them. The people in Vancouver can do what they like; there are too many of them to be browbeaten, but there is a small group in Kamloops which will be told what to look at.

The other evening the hon. member for Prince Edward-Lennox told us of another application which has been turned down from a Mr. Dawson who applied for a C.A.T.V. licence in Napanee. I happen to know of two other applications in the Kingston area which have been turned down. Why does the B.B.G. interfere with the right of the people to pick up the programs they might wish, over the C.A.T.V. installation, which will not cost the Canadian taxpayers a cent, for which subscribers to the C.A.T.V. service have to pay in monthly instalments, and for which they are willing to pay as is obvious from the tremendous number of subscribers which has built up over the years?

• (9:10 p.m.)

I should now like to revert to the comments made by the Secretary of State in explaining why she could not accept the proposed amendment of the hon. member for Edmonton-Strathcona. Let me refer again to the comments made by the minister on Friday. She said she was told by Justice and the Board of Broadcast Governors that the ramifications of the suggested amendment were too wide and she was advised not to accept the amendment. We now find ourselves in the beautiful position where, in 1962, we screamed because the administration headed by Right Hon. J. G. Diefenbaker would not produce an opinion from the Department of Justice on the question of import and export taxes and the rebates that were made on tariff collections. We were told then that the government never produces these confidential, highly secret and very learned opinions that are exchanged between the Department of Justice and other divisions of the federal cabinet. So we screamed to the high heavens that this was not right. We were told that the cabinet was accepting the advice and that we, in the opposition, had to accept the opinion of the law officers of the crown, because the law officers of the crown never make a mistake.

We, in the opposition, and the Secretary of State was one of them, objected to this high handed action on the part of the cabinet in telling the elected representatives of the people that what they wanted to see was being withheld from their eyes. Now the Secretary of State, who five years ago shrilled and trilled with the rest of us against the high handed action of the Diefenbaker cabinet, stands in her place and says she is told that the ramifications of the amendment are too wide and she is advised not to accept it. In view of the fact that the Diefenbaker cabinet never did produce the opinion of the law officers of the crown in 1962—and I hope the hon. lady does not forget that we turned out the Diefenbaker government—I am not going to ask for the production of the document today. I do not want to see the lady get up and ape the Diefenbaker cabinet by stating, "We cannot produce an opinion that is so anxiously demanded." She might have demanded such an opinion in 1962, and she was right then. If I ask for a copy of the opinion in 1968, she will tell me I am wrong. I do not like that kind of thinking. If you are right in 1962, then you are right in 1968. You cannot be right in 1962 and wrong in 1968 on the same issue. I believe there are reasonable people in this house who will agree with me on that point.

The hon. member for Peace River speaking on Friday afternoon made a very interesting comment to the Secretary of State when he said, as reported on page 6041 of Hansard:

> I have not intervened in this discussion so far, but I believe it would be a serious error of judgment if we were to leave the subject in the absence of an indication that there is no restriction on the right to receive programs.

This clause has to be amended. The right of freedom of speech is too important to the people of Canada for a so-called Liberal government to allow a provision that the broadcaster's right to express himself is unquestioned to become the law of the land. Someone has to stand up for the individual viewer who wants to receive the programs that are being broadcast. There is no virtue in allowing people to broadcast programs and refusing the people of the nation the right to pick up those programs if they so desire. I ask the committee to support the amendment moved by the hon. member for Edmonton-Strathcona. We dare not deny the right of freedom of speech to the people of this country unless we are going to admit we no longer have a democratic form of government.

The Chairman: Is the committee ready for the question?

Amendment (Mr. Nugent) negatived: Yeas, 22; nays, 44.

The Chairman: I declare the amendment lost. Shall the subclause carry?

Mr. Nugent: As I indicated earlier to the minister, if the amendment was still too sweeping I would have another to suggest. The argument used by the minister against the amendment the other day was to the effect that the words "by any means whatever" made it too wide. This amendment has just been defeated. The minister's entire argument was based on the fact that the amendment referred to "all programs available". The reasoning of the minister and her advisers apparently was based on the premise that the right to receive was going to complicate the situation to such an extent that the obligation of the government to make programs available would be involved. Since this was the case, I felt that we should then move an amendment which would preserve the right or freedom to receive without running into the dangers the minister envisaged. I will just have to take it for granted that the hon. members who voted against the amendment listened to the minister's reasons and therefore rejected the amendment on that ground.

I shall therefore present to the committee an amendment which is free of that criticism and which I hope the minister and her supporters will be able to accept. The amendment I propose reads as follows:

Clause 2, subclause (c) of Bill C-163 is amended by inserting between the words "expression" and "subject" in line 19 thereof the following: "and the right of persons to receive programs".

The clause as amended would then read:

(c) all persons licensed to carry on broadcasting undertakings have a responsibility for the programs they broadcast but the right to freedom of expression and the right of persons to receive programs, subject only to generally applicable statutes and regulations, is unquestioned.

Now, Mr. Chairman, the argument in support of the right to receive programs is simply the argument in support of the freedom of speech. It is just useless to enshrine within an act such as the Broadcasting Act that there is a right to freedom of expression unless, along with that, is the simple right to see and to hear what has been expressed. The amendment I have moved simply provides for the right to receive what has been broadcast or what has been expressed. This right is not a blanket right but is subject to the rules and regulations. I must confess that I am very surprised at the attitude shown by the minister's advisers in this regard.

[Mr. Cowan.]

• (9:20 p.m.)

It is argued that there is a great difference today between the programs available in different parts of the country. Cablevision is available to some citizens and not others. We have yet to feel the benefit of satellite television which the government will have to regulate with a great deal of flexibility. We have not yet begun to handle problems created by educational television on high frequency channels.

The minister has expressed the present feeling of her advisers, which seems to be that because we have dared express the view in the amendment that Canadians should be given the right to freedom of reception, it must be rejected on the ground that it would open the door to additional difficulties. If this is the case, then I feel that her advisers will be unable to make the changes that are required in our programming patterns and our broadcasting patterns to meet availability of reception through the different media in operation.

Surely I am not unjustified in suggesting that some areas of Canada receive more programs than others. For example, Edmonton, Saskatoon and Regina have one or perhaps two channels and no cablevision. In Vancouver and Toronto a multiplicity of channels is available and the government seems disposed to continue this situation.

Surely it is only fair to suggest that the reason one group of Canadians has a choice of programs and another does not is because the government wants to keep its thumb on those who cannot escape government supervision. In a nutshell, the government is saying that although it cannot restrict reception of those Canadians who are close enough to the border to receive programs from the United States, it can restrict reception of those who subscribe to cablevision because it has the power to license such systems.

I am wondering, Mr. Chairman, why the minister will not accept this amendment. Does she want to control reception of programs because, in order to justify government expenditure on broadcasting, there must be a guaranteed audience? Is it because these programs are not up to standard and that this captive audience would not watch them if other programs were made available? If the minister is not going to accept this amendment I trust she will advance further reasons for our not having satisfied the sensibilities of her advisers in this regard.

The reason I have moved this amendment to this particular paragraph of the clause and not to another clause, as suggested by the minister, is because this paragraph deals with the freedom of expression. A corollary of freedom of expression, I submit, is the freedom to see and hear programs. Therefore the amendment properly belongs to this paragraph.

Second, we must not forget that freedom of expression is limited by the responsibility of the government to make regulations which ensure that our airwaves are properly and regularly used. My amendment similarly would be subject to the relevant statutes and regulations.

I acknowledge the considerable interest of the members of the New Democratic party in this matter, their having voted with the minister on the last amendment. I hope this was because they were persuaded by the arguments of the minister that the amendment would create such demand for television channels, for cablevision, and so on, that the power to regulate in proper manner would be inhibited.

However, Mr. Chairman, even those who have such faith in regulation cannot find any such objection to the present amendment, which merely asks for freedom to receive programs along with the freedom of expression. I have not suggested reception of all programs broadcast "by any means whatsoever". There can be no implication here of pressuring the government to meet any further demand. Neither would my amendment further inhibit the regulatory authority in any way.

Any suggestion that Canadians should be deprived of freedom to receive programs on the ground that some civil servant advisers are afraid of this right, or that it would cause more trouble in drafting regulations is, I submit, unacceptable. If that is their attitude, what is to prevent them from taking the next logical step? Having considered an application for a licence the authorities could tell the applicant that, although his application may not infringe the regulations, at some time in the future they might want to draw up further regulations which might be jeopardized were the application granted. Surely if the government believes in freedom of speech the minister has the duty to see that somebody takes a stand somewhere.

All my amendment does is to continue the concept of freedom of speech by adding the freedom to receive what is expressed. There is nothing in my amendment to create difficulty and I trust the minister will accept it in the interest of free speech in this country.

• (9:30 p.m.)

Miss LaMarsh: Mr. Chairman, before you put the amendment may I say that I do not think my hon. friend really intended to make an attack on the civil service. Our civil servants are paid to give expert advice to members of the house who, obviously, are not experts themselves. They have the responsibility to advise those in the executive branch of the house how to do what the government has decided to do. I know the hon. member is very generous and does not mean to impute some improper motive to civil servants who are doing their proper job.

I am sorry that the hon. member talked to such length but it seemed, since he was entering such high flights of rhetoric, that it would be a pity to interrupt him to say that I was prepared to accept his amendment.

Mr. Cowan: To say what?

Mr. Nugent: The amendment is accepted?

Mr. Cowan: Does the Secretary of State say she is prepared to accept the amendment?

An hon. Member: That's what she said.

The Chairman: Is the committee ready for the question. Shall the amendment carry?

Some hon. Members: Carried.

Amendment (Mr. Nugent) agreed to.

Clause 2 (c) as amended agreed to.

The Chairman: The committee will now proceed to consideration of clause 2 (h).

Mr. McCleave: Mr. Chairman, the hon. member for Winnipeg South wishes to move an amendment here. Because of today's weather he could not get from Winnipeg to Toronto and could not come here. I am therefore speaking on his behalf. I understand that the minister is agreeable to standing this subclause until tomorrow.

Miss LaMarsh: Agreed.

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, before this clause is allowed to stand, would the hon. Secretary of State give us a few explanations? I do not find the clause very clear, and I would ask her to give us a few explanations.

[English]

Miss LaMarsh: Well, the whole thing is stood. I think the debate should be stood at the same time.

The Chairman: Is it agreed that the subclause stand?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

The Chairman: The committee will now consider clause 2(i). Shall clause 2(i) carry?

Mr. Cowan: Mr. Chairman, referring to clause 2(i) that is before us now and which reads:

—facilities should be provided within the Canadian broadcasting system for educational broadcasting;

I can only ask this: Is there never going to be a halt at all on the amount of money that is to be spent in the broadcasting world, or do we simply keep on going and going, throwing money into the hopper for radio and television year after year, in ever increasing amounts?

Education, as we know and admit, is a provincial matter. While I regret that that is so—

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Cowan: —I have to admit it and live with it. But when we talk about spending money for increasing the facilities for education broadcasts, I mean it when I say that we are talking about the past and not about the future.

I cannot see spending money on educational broadcasting, on educational programs, and for a very self-evident reason. All the classes in certain grades are following a curriculum that is laid down generally by the provincial department of education. The end result is that the teachers in the various classes throughout the large and small municipalities will bring some children to the same examination point, let us say, in the month of June, so that they will all be equally taught to answer the questions that are put to them in the final examinations. But surely no one in this house is going to say that all the children, day by day and week by week throughout the school year, are making the same progress and are discussing the same chapters in the prescribed books? We know for a fact that an epidemic may close a certain school for a week or so, and throw its students behind the other students in the same municipality and in the same grades.

I have always got a kick out of two girls who went to college and took the course in religious knowledge. I was a Presbyterian and enrolled in a Methodist institution. At least, it was Methodist when I was enrolled—Victoria University. They had a course in religious knowledge. Since there is nothing in religious knowledge that a Methodist can teach a Presbyterian, I never took it. But I did know of two girls who were taking religious knowledge and they had different professors, because of the schedule that had been handed to them.

One day one girl, walking across Queen's Park, said to the other, "How are you doing in religious knowledge?" The other girl replied, "We're doing very well. We're in the midst of original sin." The other girl said to her, "That's nothing, in the class I'm in we're past redemption."

I only tell you the story to show you that if two classes—

An hon. Member: Whom are you speaking about?

Mr. Cowan: I am speaking of two girls, my friend.

An hon. Member: In original sin and past redemption?

Mr. Cowan: I will admit I am in original sin where I am standing.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Cowan: I gave you that little story to show that classes do not maintain the same speed. There are other reasons for that. Teachers vary in their ability to impart knowledge, and classes vary in their ability to receive the knowledge and to absorb it properly.

I have the great good fortune of having resided in Toronto for the past 50 years, and during the last several years in my work with the Toronto Star—

An hon. Member: Good fortune or misfortune?

Mr. Cowan: —I had the opportunity of providing the school systems of Etobicoke, North York and Scarborough in particular, and some of the schools in the city of Toronto, with educational film. The use of educational film in the school systems of Canada is growing by leaps and bounds. The hon. member for Scarborough is an ex chairman of the board of education for the borough of North York.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Cowan: I have to tell you that the educational film programs of the borough of North York, the borough of Scarborough and the borough of Etobicoke are without peer in the Dominion of Canada, and in my opinion they are certainly in the forefront of educational film in North America.

Each film is available to a classroom teacher. A great many of the films come from the National Film Board. They are not made available free of charge to the school boards, and in many, many cases the school boards accept contributions of educational film from firms that are willing to provide this assistance to the educational film division of the borough.

The interesting thing to me is that the Toronto Star used to supply—and it may to this day, for all I know—used to supply a couple of thousand feet of educational film every month to the educational film division of Scarborough, North York and Etobicoke.

The point I want to impress on members of the committee is this. The teachers used to tell each other that they valued the film highly. It was placed in the library of the local borough governing the school system, and when the teachers wanted it they simply requisitioned the film, or sent for it. It was run off over the school projector and the teacher instructed the class in the meaning of the pictures and the idea behind the entire film.

• (9:40 p.m.)

The fact that these films are placed in a central library and sent out to the individual schools as requested, shows that the individual classes are not studying the same subject at the same time throughout the school year. Are we going to be asked to invest millions of dollars in an educational broadcasting system that may very well prove unworkable? What hope is there of maintaining every grade 7 class in Ontario at the same speed of comprehension on the part of the children, and at the same speed of instruction on the part of the teachers, throughout the year?

Individual classrooms can receive a benefit from educational film made available to them as their individual teachers request, but they will not receive the same advantage from educational film being shown to them over the airwaves of the nation. I believe this fact is self-evident.

The Secretary of State can state that clause 2 is only declaratory. I have been trying to tell the hon. member for Lotbinière and the hon. member for Lapointe that I do not mind voting for a declaratory clause which deals with English and French because that declaratory clause does not say that we are going to spend now the money involved. But why should we have a declaratory statement that facilities should be provided for educational television within the Canadian broadcasting system? By having this clause we are making a half promise that we will spend millions of dollars in the future. I say that we do not need to make such a declaration. We do not need to make a commitment at the present time.

Educational matters are being adequately and very completely covered by the national film board series of films, and by the educational films available through provincial departments of education and through tourist bureaus. British Columbia will send into Ontario beautiful films which show the geographic and commercial features of British Columbia and British Columbia schools can get similar films from the province of Ontario and the province of Quebec. The beauty of this arrangement is that teachers are able to use those films in keeping with the progress of their classes.

If you bring in educational television on the national broadcasting system it is going to be like the bed of Procrustes. Every teacher is going to know, no matter whether his class is ready to receive it or not, that the eleventh lecture on the history of Canada will be shown on next Thursday morning. In an individual class lectures Nos. 8, 9 and 10 may have been delayed. Why should a child who has only had lectures Nos. 1 to 7 suddenly be exposed to lecture No. 11 simply because a national television education system says that will be the lecture to be shown at eleven o'clock the following Thursday morning?

I am speaking from knowledge of the system in the borough of York North, the borough of Scarborough and the borough of Etobicoke which are in the forefront of matters pertaining to educational film. Teachers of classes in those boroughs can use educational films when they want to, and not when some broadcaster on the air feels impelled to lecture the children of a certain geographical division on a certain topic. I say this clause is unnecessary and should not be in a declaratory part of the bill, where it has no teeth.

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, clause 2(i) reads as follows:

—facilities should be provided within the Canadian broadcasting system for educational broadcasting;

Now, through a bill on broadcasting, the federal government is interfering in a field which, in accordance with the British North America Act, comes exclusively under the provincial jurisdiction. We know that the educational field comes under the provinces. I will be told that it deals with the equipment of educational broadcasting.

Mr. Chairman, for a hundred years, we have been aware of precedents in other fields. The federal government uses a loophole to intrude into a field which does not come under its jurisdiction and once its position is established, it seeks to monopolize and take everything.

For years, for one hundred years in fact, Quebec and other provinces have consistently refused to allow the federal government to interfere in the field of education.

Today, by the roundabout way of legislation on broadcasting, the hon. Secretary of State is trying to open a small side window into the wall, in order that the federal government may penetrate in a field whose jurisdiction is exclusively provincial.

One might say that one intended only to provide to the Canadian broadcasting system educational broadcasting facilities. However, Mr. Chairman, Quebec is already working in that direction. Educational broadcasting is already in existence. In the area of Saguenay-Lake St. John, every day, morning and evening, there are educational programs entitled "Québec-télévision scolaire", produced by the Quebec government.

The Quebec government already has its own organization in the field of educational programs. It already has its own equipment for educational television and two television stations are already broadcasting, on a trial basis, educational programs. The federal government now wants to venture into that field, when a provincial government has actually spent money to buy such equipment, which means that the federal government would also like to buy more equipment for exactly the same purpose, thus duplicating our funds and taxes.

[Mr. Cowan.]

In the province of Quebec—and maybe in the others also, I am not quite sure, the matter is perhaps under consideration—such equipment has already been purchased, a committee has been formed to operate it, films have been produced and are broadcast every day, morning and night, on the screens by private television stations in the Saguenay-Lake St. John area.

The two stations of our area, those of Chicoutimi and Jonquière, broadcast these films every morning and every night and give courses to those wishing to continue their 7th, 8th, 9th or 10th grades.

It has already started. The expenditures have been made. The equipment has been purchased. Why pay a second time and when it is already there and, furthermore, this is an exclusively provincial jurisdiction. What moves the Secretary of State to spend money to buy a second time what has already been purchased?

Are we also going to train another crew to use this equipment? Mr. Chairman, there is already a crew. It exists, it is there, more advanced than the embryo stage, because it has already started to prove its worth, if we are to judge by what we can see on the television screens.

If it exists, why this duplication? I was told—and I made an effort to see them this morning, also in Ottawa—about educational films prepared by the Ontario department of education which are fine indeed. Naturally, education falls within provincial jurisdiction, and Ontario attends to it. There could be an exchange of French language films between Quebec and Ontario, even though the member for York-Humber (Mr. Cowan) shakes his head. Indeed, English language films could be exchanged by the departments of education of British Columbia, Newfoundland and Ontario.

It is already the case, it has already been paid for once, in the form of taxes. Our taxes paid to the Quebec government have already been used to buy all that, but they would want the Quebec citizens to pay a second time for some equipment which would be placed in another building, which would come under the Ottawa government, another equipment exactly the same as the Quebec equipment, being a duplication thereof.

Why, Mr. Chairman? I admit that sometimes—and it is an argument which has been already put forward—the federal government has interfered in certain fields, precisely due to the lack of action by the provincial governments.

When the house passed the hospital insurance scheme, it was said that the provinces had taken no action and that the citizens who could not afford it still had the right to be hospitalized. It was true, the provinces had taken no action.

However, in this case, the provinces have already taken some action. The equipment has already been bought, already paid for and some crews have already been given the responsibility to use that equipment. Professors have already been hired; they have already prepared lectures and the films produced are shown on television. A series of lectures has already started since the beginning of January, I think. They have been shown by the Jonquière and Chicoutimi television stations. The equipment purchased was tested successfully.

If it has already been bought, the federal government can no longer say that the provinces are taking no action. This argument no longer applies, for Quebec already owns this equipment. So it would be a needless expenditure on the part of the federal government, since it has already been done, and there would be a duplication of taxes for Canadians.

I cannot see why the hon. Secretary of State would want to do that, since the field of education is a provincial matter.

I will be told that the provinces are the ones which will decide how to use the facilities and which will set up their own courses. I cannot imagine the Quebec government, which is already fully equipped, turning to the C.B.C. and telling them: You have the facilities, we will use them. I cannot imagine the Quebec government wanting to borrow the facilities of the federal government when Quebec already fully controls facilities which a group of competent professors is already using, since they have more experience in that field than the officials of the federal government.

In my opinion, that clause is unnecessary, it is one more infringement of the Canadian constitution, in short it violates the Canadian constitution.

We will be told that nothing will be imposed on us in the field of education. I know the argument of the Secretary of State, but provinces have already complete and very adequate equipment. Why then put at the disposal of a province equipment which has already been purchased and paid for? It is a good argument since Quebec already has such equipment to produce its own school films. The minister can no longer put forward the pretext that it is to purchase equipment which she will make available to provinces, because provinces already have it. Such a reason can no longer be put forward.

What are they trying to hide by introducing such a clause? Would the hon. Secretary of State like the Canadian broadcasting system to have an educational network which would produce its own films? Mr. Chairman, in my opinion this clause is useless both from the constitutional and from the practical point of view. It would perhaps have been useful a year and a half or two years ago, when the provinces had taken no initiative in this field, but not now, when the provinces have taken steps in this respect, bought facilities and acquired experience. In fact, in the province of Quebec, courses are already being telecast, and the hon. members for Roberval and Chicoutimi (Messrs. Gauthier and Langlois) will no doubt bear testimony to this, since they must have seen these courses produced by the province of Quebec, using Quebec equipment and with the help of a team of Quebec professors. Moreover, education falls within the jurisdiction of the province of Quebec.

In my opinion, to spend again some taxpayers' money to purchase equipment already available would be duplication of public funds and this is unacceptable. A second series of programs is perhaps planned.

Mr. Chairman, may I call it ten o'clock.

[English]

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: It being ten o'clock, shall I rise, report progress and request leave to sit again at the next sitting of the house?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Progress reported.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

A motion to adjourn the house under provisional standing order 39A deemed to have been moved.

Proceedings on Adjournment Motion

AIRPORTS—VANCOUVER PROTEST AGAINST IMPOSITION OF TOLLS ON APPROACH

Mr. Barry Mather (New Westminster): Mr. Speaker, before the house recessed last month I sought, on orders of the day, to raise a question concerning whether the government had received protests from the Vancouver area about the government's declared intention to link, by means of a toll crossing, Vancouver and Sea island on which the Vancouver international airport, one of the great airports, is located. This question was not accepted by the Chair at that time. Therefore, I wish to raise it again this evening. I do so in the hope that by raising the question a situation which I think is of considerable interest to the people in the lower mainland of British Columbia might be clarified. I think I am right in saying there is no other great Canadian airport which is or will be hampered by a toll approach. If the Vancouver Sea island approach is to be subject to toll, this will amount to an unfair tax and a great deal of annoyance to all concerned.

• (10:00 p.m.)

My colleague, the hon. member for Burnaby-Richmond (Mr. Prittie), is of the opinion that while he welcomes the idea that the government is going to erect this crossing or bridge he regrets very much that it will be subject to toll. That hon. member in this regard also stated:

> As far as I can determine tolls might have been avoided if the B.C. government had agreed to share the costs. In any case it will be several years before the bridge is actually in operation. In the meantime in order to relieve the pressure on the two lane Moray Channel bridge and Oak street bridge the municipality of Richmond has asked that the Department of Transport build a causeway over the middle arm of the Fraser from Sea island to Lulu island (generally in the Gilbert road area). Such a causeway wouldn't cost a great deal and could handle southbound traffic to Richmond and Delta. In November the Minister of Transport informed me that it "is receiving urgent attention". Let us hope that this project escapes the austerity cuts.

I have little or nothing to add to that. I shall only repeat that I hope by raising the question again in connection with this potentially strategic and important crossing and the regrettable idea of imposing tolls, the government will give an answer tonight to clarify this whole situation.

Mr. J. A. Byrne (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, the federal government has undertaken to provide access to Sea island to service the new international airport being built by the Department of Transport for Vancouver and the lower British Columbia mainland. The terms and conditions under which the federal government accepted this responsibility were that user charges would be sufficient to recover the capital cost of the facility over a reasonable amortization period. It is not now and never has been the responsibility of the Department of Transport to provide vehicular access to and from crown owned airports.

The government has been of the opinion that it could not logically be expected to provide roadways to airports on a non-toll basis. It must be readily apparent that the capital cost of undertaking such a policy on a national scale would be enormous, especially in major centres such as Montreal and Toronto.

However, in Vancouver we have a rather unique situation. The airport is located on an island that is not now adequately serviced by crossings to meet the demand of the existing airport. It was also made apparent by local municipal authorities that they were not in any position to finance the construction of facilities required to meet existing and future traffic demands expected to be generated by the opening of the new international air terminal later this year.

For these reasons the federal government agreed to construct the necessary facilities to provide adequate access to the new airport on the understanding that tolls, sufficient to recover the capital cost of the facilities over a reasonable number of years, would be levied on the users.

I want to make it quite clear on behalf of the government that the government on the other hand does not intend to levy these tolls against residents of Sea island who have a traditional right of free access to the island. Special arrangements will be made to ensure that anyone who is now resident on the island will not face toll charges to get to and from his residence and place of work.

GRAIN—WHEAT—INQUIRY AS TO INCREASED DELIVERY QUOTAS

Mr. S. J. Korchinski (Mackenzie): Mr. Speaker, I regret that the Minister of Trade and Commerce (Mr. Winters) is absent. However, I understand his duties will keep him away until the middle of February. Under the circumstances I feel I must raise the complaint I originally made on December 18 and 19 in the hope that somebody else will answer on his behalf.

The nature of my complaint is that the government is leading farmers to believe they are to receive at least $1.95½ for every wheat sale the government makes when in fact the replies of the Minister of Trade and Commerce on two specific dates, December 18 and 19 when I raised this question on orders of the day, would not indicate that to be the case.

Furthermore, the entire question of $1.95½ for No. 1 wheat is related to the over-all annual pool operated by the wheat board. Last year the pool was closed off on January 13. This year the minister has indicated that the pool will not be closed off until some time in March.

The minister, in his replies to my questions on December 18 and 19, was contradictory and evasive. With the continuing delay in closing the pool, the returns to the wheat producers will progressively get lower. On December 18 last I asked the minister whether as a result of the wheat sales to China there would be appropriations from the federal treasury to the wheat board fund. I was dealing specifically with one sale. The purpose of my question was to determine whether the latest sale to China was at a price lower than the $1.95½ which was supposedly guaranteed by the government.

The next day I asked the minister whether the supposed guarantee of $1.95½ was to apply to each individual sale and contract, or whether it applied to the over-all average of the pool for one year. The minister then replied that they were working out the details but as of then it applied to each individual contract. Indeed, these two statements were contradictory.

I urged the minister to close off the pool as early as possible in order that the wheat producers might receive the highest return possible for the 1966-67 crop year. I have obtained the high and low prices for wheat in each month following the closing of the wheat pool in the previous year, that is, January, 1967. In order to complete my argument I will list the highs and lows for each month up to and including part of January, 1968, for No. 1 northern wheat, basis the lakehead. The highs were as follows, from January, 1967, to January 1968, $2.13, $2.12⅞, $2.13, $2.13⅛, $2.12⅞, $2.14½, $2.07¾, $2.06¼, $1.96¼, $1.96, $1.91⅜, $1.91⅜, $1.92. The lows for the same period were as follows: $2.11⅞, $2.12⅛, $2.12½, $2.12⅝, $2.12⅝, $2.08⅝, $2.05½, $1.96, $1.91, $1.91⅞, $1.89⅜, $1.89⅜, $1.90⅝.

Calculations of the average high from January, 1967, to the end of July would indicate that the average high from the time that the last wheat pool was closed off until the end of July, which was the previous crop year, was $2.12. The average low in that same period was $2.11. So that the average price received in the first seven months of 1967 would have been between $2.11 and $2.12.

Since the new crop year, in which the government has allowed the Canadian farmers to be without a wheat agreement, the average high from August until the present time has been $1.94. The average low in that same period is calculated to be $1.91. So that if one averages out the highs and lows, the average receiving price without a wheat agreement is in the order of $1.92½.

In the determination of the amount in the pool at the time of closing, all the moneys received from the date of the last closing until the announcement of the 1966-67 closing date of the pool are thrown in together and an average price is determined.

During the first seven months of 1967 the volume of sales has remained relatively high. However, since the beginning of the new crop year not only have the prices come down but the sales, too, have been reduced. A headline in the Manitoba Co-operator of January 4, 1968, reads, "Wheat and Flour Exports Smallest for Twelve Years". The article goes on to say that Canadian wheat, aggregating 97,561,000 bushels for the first four months of the current crop year, is the smallest movement for that period since 1955-56.

I have urged the minister to close off the pool as of January, at the same time as he closed off the pool last year. Between January, 1967, and January, 1968, the average high asking price, basis the Lakehead, was $2.03. The average low in the same period was $2.01. So that if the pool were closed off immediately, the average price, without calculating freight and other carrying charges, might be in the order of $2.02 on No. 1 wheat. However, since the asking price since September has continuously been below $2, it does not take much of a mathematician to realize that if the 1967-68 pool is not closed off immediately, the returns will not be $2.02 but will progressively continue to decline with each passing day.

• (10:10 p.m.)

The minister now is pretending to suggest to the farmers that he is guaranteeing them $1.95½ for wheat. In fact what he is doing is manipulating the wheat pool and the farmers' own money, and awaiting the day when he will announce the final payment which will no doubt be above the $1.95½, but will, as I have already pointed out, be below the maximum they might have received if the pool had closed off on the same date as it did in the previous year.

The minister is now playing with averages. He has more time because he has fewer sales. However this is not in the interests of the farmers. Calculations of the pool should be made in such a manner as to provide the maximum returns to the farmers. By stalling, the minister is not giving them the maximum returns. He will no doubt achieve his prediction that it will cost the government little or no money to guarantee $1.95½ if he manipulates with the pool account.

If the minister closes off the pool in March, he will then have only four months in which to guarantee $1.95½. Since the sales are relatively slow, it will be easy for him to recover this amount once the new grains agreement comes into effect, that is if the countries sign the agreement.

I therefore suggest that the minister should immediately close off the pool for the maximum benefit to the producer, and he should unequivocally state that farmers will receive $1.95½ for every sale that is made, rather than manipulate the fund and deceive the producers into thinking that they are receiving $1.95½ for every sale when in fact he intends to average out the annual returns in order that the $1.95½ be achieved.

Mr. Jack Davis (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I am sure the Minister of Trade and Commerce would like me to express his regrets at not being able to be here this evening to listen to the hon. member's very effective submission. As he knows, the minister is away in Europe and Asia on a selling mission, and I am sure we all wish him well. We certainly hope he will be able to sell more wheat during his mission there.

The hon. member for Mackenzie has asked whether there will be a transfer of funds to the Canadian Wheat Board as a result of the recent sale of wheat to China. Perhaps I should repeat the government's guarantee to western grain producers as announced by the Minister of Trade and Commerce to the House of Commons on September 27, as recorded at page 2558 of Hansard:

> Pending ratification and only until that date, the government is prepared to make up the difference between the agreed schedule of Geneva minimum prices, related to approximately $1.95½ basis No. 1 Northern in store at the Lakehead, and any wheat sold by the Canadian Wheat Board below this level during the period August 1, 1967 and July 1, 1968.

[Mr. Korchinski.]

This means that on any and each sale made by the Canadian Wheat Board between August 1, 1967 and June 30, 1968, at prices under the agreed international grains arrangement minimums, the government will make up the difference to the board. This action was intended to enable the board to price competitively without undermining the per bushel return to producers.

Hon. members are aware that for commercial reasons it has been the long standing practice on the part of the government not to divulge the selling price of wheat in individual markets. I cannot therefore comment on any individual sale by Canada in relation to the minimum prices set out in the new international grain agreement. I can only repeat that the government will reimburse the wheat board for each sale negotiated at a price level under the I.G.A. minimums. The government will shortly be tabling an estimate in the house for this purpose.

POWER—BRITISH COLUMBIA—LOCATION OF NEUTRON GENERATOR

Mr. H. W. Herridge (Kootenay West): Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to see that a scientist, the parliamentary secretary to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources, will reply to me when I complete my brief remarks. I may say that I represent a riding which includes several research groups interested in scientific achievements. In these groups we find the very large and competent group of the Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company, the research group in Notre Dame University at Nelson, the research group of Selkirk College at Castlegar, and the group concerned with forest research in the Celgar Corporation in the Castlegar district.

All these groups have followed very closely the developments in the research industry, in government and in universities, and they have followed very closely the development of the intense neutron generator. In this connection I want to quote very briefly from Science Forum, to indicate the importance of this astounding development. I am quoting from an article entitled, "I.N.G.: A vehicle to new frontiers" by L. G. Elliott, W. Bennett

Lewis and A. G. Ward, men well known in this field:

> Possibly the most contentious issue in Canadian science today is the proposal by Atomic Energy of Canada Limited to build the intense neutron generator. Dispute has arisen primarily because of its high cost (between $150 and $200 million capital cost plus $20 million a year operating cost) and the fear that it will sap government funds away from other areas of science. But there are other issues besides this question of national priorities. Some scientists feel that there has been insufficient discussion of the project, and even that debate has been discouraged. The deans of Canada's engineering schools have expressed concern about I.N.G., but the Science Council of Canada has given its provisional approval. Cabinet approval still is needed before the project can go ahead.
>
> In order to promote discussion of this important issue, Science Forum has sought opinions on both the pros and cons of I.N.G. from its principal proponents and other scientists knowledgeable in several areas—engineering and materials science, nuclear physics and high energy physics. These are presented in this and the following articles. Other aspects are dealt with in the comment section.

The article is a complete analysis of the situation from various points of view. There is another article that deals briefly with the opposing views and it is entitled, "I.N.G.: The wrong thing, in the wrong place, at the wrong time". The article reads in part:

> Nevertheless I believe that I.N.G., which is possibly the biggest and certainly the most expensive single undertaking in the history of Canadian scientific research is the wrong thing, in the wrong place, at the wrong time.

The author goes on to give the reasons he has for coming to this conclusion.

Then, I go to another article entitled, "I.N.G.: A good thing—under certain conditions", by K. G. McNeill. He has this to say in part:

> There are, then, two very major logistic problems connected with placement and timing. At the moment, only at Chalk River can the initial development be done, but the final location must be elsewhere—somewhere within an easy hour or two of an international airport, a large industrial centre, industrial research laboratories, a number of universities, teaching hospitals, a major arterial road. With respect to timing, it must be built sufficiently swiftly that exciting experiments are not done elsewhere (as they undoubtedly will be in time), but the urgency must not be such that everything is built abroad. Such matters require decision—and I believe one of the worst things that can happen is for a firm decision about the future of I.N.G. to be delayed or not made clear. If that happens we may finally end up, not with an accelerator in hand, but with an accelerator in the bush, which no one by then will really want.
>
> In summary, I believe I.N.G. is good for science, and that with the right conditions it can be good for Canadian science and good for Canada. But I do not see the guarantee of these right conditions in current plans.

The conditions which this gentleman lays down as to the location, point very definitely to the Kootenays as a suitable site for this development. We have an airport there; we have research laboratories, teaching hospitals, universities and all the rest. It was as a result of the interest in my riding in this important development, Mr. Speaker, that I asked the following question on January 23 of the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Pepin):

> Mr. Speaker, I should like to address to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources a question of considerable importance to the people of this country. In view of press reports about the recommendation of the Science Council of Canada that an intense neutron generator be built at a cost of $150 million, and in view of press reports that the federal cabinet has approved the expenditure of $1 million to investigate a site which would provide an ample source of cheap power, what action has been taken on this question to date and has the minister received representations from mayor F. E. DeVito of Trail, on behalf of the regional district, that the Kootenays be considered for this site as being an appropriate one for the development of cheap power—

• (10:20 p.m.)

The United States is carrying on investigations in this respect in Chicago. Unless we are very careful the United States will be ahead of us in this very unusual and outstanding development. I look forward to the parliamentary secretary's reply with respect to the government's intentions and policy, based on the recommendations of the Science Council of Canada.

Mr. Jack Davis (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I listened with great interest and not a little sympathy to the submission made by the hon. member for Kootenay West. As he well knows, his area, and certainly the Trail area, has been active in the past in nuclear programs. It was the first source—a very efficient and economic source—of heavy water back in the early days of atomic energy in the mid-40's. From some of the things he said and from some of the things I have read I see no reason why his area would not be seriously considered for the location of a big research project of this type.

I.N.G.—the intense neutron generator project—would if undertaken in this country be the largest basic research program Canadians have ever initiated. Its capital cost would be in excess of $150 million and it would have an annual operating budget of $20 million a year. This is big money in anyone's terms.

The hon. member said that there had been insufficient discussion of this subject. He derived that statement from the new publication "Science Forum", which I think is an excellent one. The authors of this publication are to be commended for their interest not only in I.N.G., its nature, its pros and cons and its location, but also for their intention of going on to explore other scientific projects, as well.

This publication states that the pros and cons of I.N.G. should be looked into very carefully. I can assure the hon. member that the government is looking into them very carefully. The budget for the coming fiscal year 1968-69 is approximately $1.5 million. Those funds are being devoted to further investigation into the desirability of this project being undertaken over the next six or seven years.

There is also the important matter of logistics—as the "Science Forum" described it—of location as well as timing. The hon. member is quite correct; you do need good transportation facilities and an industrial airport. You also need nearby an industrial complex that is really interested in scientific research so that the scientists can talk to other scientists in related disciplines. You need research laboratories of other types.

It is not clear that the I.N.G. development should be located at Chalk River. It could be located in one of half a dozen other areas in Canada. My understanding is that if this project were to go ahead it would have a high Canadian content—75 per cent or more—and would employ at least 50 top grade scientists.

As I said at the beginning, Mr. Speaker, a big decision is involved. It is a very expensive project, one which can, however, break new ground in a big way in basic research in this country. It is being looked at carefully, and I have mentioned the scale of the budget so as to indicate the government's continuing interest and intent in this regard.

Motion agreed to and the house adjourned at 10.26 p.m.

APPENDIX

BROADCASTING—CORRESPONDENCE RESPECTING PROMOTION OF NATIONAL UNITY

[Translation]

Montreal, Que., November 6, 4:18 P.M.

The Honourable Judy LaMarsh,
Secretary of State,
House of Commons,
Ottawa, Ontario.

Madame, you have recently stated on private and public television that the CBC must be a factor in national unity, and whoever is not ready to conform to this aim should leave the corporation. You are already interpreting the bill on broadcasting in a manner which is most disturbing and which compromises the exercise of our profession. We take objection to the wording in a law which reads: The national broadcasting service should...contribute to the strengthening of national unity... We believe that our prime role, as producers, is to reflect and to interpret the living reality in a country. We do not believe that official government thinking is necessarily the kind of objective thinking which should be the basis of political and cultural information. The CBC is obliged to bring to light all forms of power in the sense that it must allow a confrontation of forces and debates on the relative values of any given society. If we are to be the vehicle for or to promote one political line then we are willingly conniving with an organ of propaganda. We have at all times refused to do so; we refuse to do so today, when what you are saying is in short, that the Left will be tolerated on the condition that it be reactionary. And in this way our function as producers will remain while governments come and go. And thus will it be as long as "Ici Radio Canada" and "This is the CBC network" are heard by Quebeckers, "Canadiens" and "Canadians".

The Association of Producers

Claude Sylvestre, Secretary

P.S. The Association includes CBC television producers in Montreal, Quebec, Ottawa, Halifax, Cornerbrook, St. Johns (Newfoundland), Winnipeg, Edmonton, Vancouver. For the promotion of the interests of "Canadiens" and "Canadians".

THE SECRETARY OF STATE
Canada

[Translation]

Ottawa, November 10, 1967

Dear Mr. Sylvestre,

I have your telegram of November 6 on behalf of the Association of Producers.

Let me first offer the reassurance, if such is required, that there is nothing in the Broadcasting Act nor is there any intention on the part of the government to in any way interfere with the fundamental right of Canadians, whether CBC employees or otherwise, to hold personal and private political views of their own choosing. The issue then is solely in terms of the responsibilities of CBC employees as, in a very real sense, the custodians of a powerful and valuable national asset provided and supported by the people of Canada.

I trust that I am interpreting your telegram correctly in thinking that we are agreed, too, that no CBC employee has the right to use these facilities entrusted to him as a vehicle for promulgating his own political viewpoint, no matter what that might be. Nor has any employee the right to use these facilities in a manner subversive to the democratic process.

As for your role in positive terms, I support, and I believe the legislation supports, your own interpretation that it is "to reflect and to interpret the living reality in a country." I accept that statement, provided you mean by "reflect" an honest attempt to mirror the broad spectrum of Canadian viewpoints, and by "interpret" an honest effort to present and explain these viewpoints with balance and perspective.

Nor can I take any objection nor find any in the legislation to your thesis that the CBC should not be "an organ of propaganda" in promoting particular political policies or points of view of any government, party, movement or indeed of any individual.

The Corporation does have a definite right, indeed an obligation, to ensure that these various policies and points of view are exposed to the Canadian people. But the decision as to which proposals are to be implemented rests surely with the people who, forming their judgments on the basis of the varied information available from the CBC and other media, express their will through their legislatures and their governments. The Corporation's mandate, in short, is to expose problems and identify options for the people, in a fair and balanced way, but not to dictate solutions or choices to them.

The question then is whether Section 2 (g) (iv) in the Broadcasting Act, in fact, infringes either on the essential independence of the Corporation from particular political policies and pressures or on the equally fundamental requirement that the citizens of Canada have available to them through the CBC a comprehensive and balanced exposition of all available viewpoints.

I think one must look for the answer to this question first and foremost among the reasons why we have a Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, why it was decided in 1932 to establish a publicly-owned broadcasting system and why that system has been supported and re-enforced by succeeding Parliaments continuously since that time. Let me refer to but two of the statements which the then-Prime Minister, R. B. Bennett, made in introducing the legislation in question:

"Canadians have the right to a system of broadcasting from Canadian sources equal in all respects to that of any other country. The enormous benefits of an adequate scheme of radio broadcasting controlled and operated by Canadians are abundantly plain. Properly employed radio can be a most effective instrument in nation-building with an educational value difficult to estimate."

And again:

"First of all, this country must be assured of complete control of broadcasting from Canadian sources, free from foreign interference or influence. Without such control radio broadcasting can never become a great agency for the communication of matters of national concern and for the diffusion of national thought and ideals and without such control it can never be the agency by which national consciousness may be fostered and sustained and national unity still further strengthened."

The underlining is, of course, mine—to stress the most fundamental fact!—the CBC was created, and has been maintained since, not as an agency independent or neutral from Canadian unity, but precisely to foster and enrich that unity. Or, to use the words of Bill 163-C, "to contribute to the strengthening of national unity."

Certainly the CBC is independent of government. As you so aptly put it, its function remains "as governments come and go." But the CBC never has been and is not now independent from Canada, from the existence of this country as a single sovereign state. In truth, the Corporation draws its own existence from the very fact of Canada.

That does not mean, of course, that the CBC is bound by the concepts of national unity laid down by Mr. Bennett in 1932 or by any other government, past or present. Surely the applicable concept or form of national unity at any point in time is precisely what the people of Canada at that point in time want it to be for that point in time. If the process of nation-building is never ending, so certainly the political arrangements of a single unified state are not bound in time or cement.

As I have noted previously, we agree that the CBC has a right and obligation to contribute to that process by, in your own words, reflecting and interpreting the various viewpoints available at any particular time concerning these arrangements. But in meeting this responsibility, the CBC must act within the bounds of its overall mandate to contribute to the development, not the destruction, of our national unity, whatever particular form the people of Canada might will for it at any given point in our history.

In that context and in those terms, I find nothing in the new broadcasting legislation to contradict the role of CBC producers as you yourselves envisage your professional responsibilities.

Sincerely,
Judy LaMarsh.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Tuesday, January 30, 1968

The house met at 2.30 p.m.

LABOUR AND EMPLOYMENT

First report of standing committee on labour and employment—Mr. Faulkner.

[Editor's note: Text of foregoing report appears in today's Votes and Proceedings.]

CANADIAN CONSTITUTION

STATEMENT ON ARRANGEMENTS FOR FORTHCOMING CONFERENCE

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I should like to make a short statement about arrangements in contemplation of the forthcoming constitutional conference which opens next Monday.

The agenda of the conference was included with my letter of January 16 to the provincial premiers, copies of which were tabled in the House of Commons on January 25 and included in Hansard of that day. In my letter I suggested to the premiers that "we agree to make public the opening sessions of the first day when the various governments ordinarily present their initial statements". I also suggested that consideration could be given to having the closing session public. Arrangements are accordingly being made to permit full coverage by television, radio and press for these sessions.

So far as admission to the conference room itself is concerned, the main problem is space. The conference will be held in room 200 of the west block. After providing for the various delegations and their staffs, for television and radio facilities, and for the translation and secretarial facilities that are necessary, there will, I am afraid, be very little space in the actual chamber itself for members of parliament, for representatives of the press or for others. It has seemed to the government to be best to divide what space there is equally between representatives of the information media and members of the different political parties represented in the House of Commons. I wrote yesterday to the leaders of the various parties indicating that there would be, of course, accommodation for the leaders themselves, and giving an allocation of seats on a party basis roughly in proportion to representation in the house. It will be for each party to determine to what members the seats should be allocated.

For other members of parliament who may be in a position to be present and for the press we will have closed circuit television in a number of rooms in the west block. In addition there will be the normal television and radio facilities.

As I said yesterday, it will be for the conference to decide when and to what extent it may be desirable to hold executive sessions. Several of the premiers have expressed the view that executive sessions may be necessary for the purpose of negotiation and full and frank discussion leading to agreement. Such private sessions have, of course, been the almost invariable pattern, for federal-provincial conferences in the past, but I think a substantial departure from past practice is desirable because of the special nature and importance of the matters to be discussed.

As members are aware, the Minister of Justice is visiting the provincial capitals to have advance discussions with the premiers and their advisers in order to ensure that the meeting beginning February 5 will be as productive as possible. The government will also be publishing, and will table in the House of Commons later this week, a document on its proposal for the establishment of a Canadian charter of human rights. The recommendations of the royal commission on bilingualism and biculturalism have of course been public for some weeks and they will be on the agenda. I shall be making an opening statement to the conference, which I expect will be accompanied by additional material that will be made public—that is, the additional material —before the conference opens.

It is the hope of the government, as I am sure it is the hope of all members of the house, that we may see real progress at the conference itself and at meetings to follow, in the achievement of more satisfactory arrangements within the confederation of today and in the review of our constitution to ensure as effective provision as possible for the confederation of the future.

Canadian Constitution

• (2:40 p.m.)

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank the right hon. Prime Minister for his statement and the information he has given about the arrangements relating to the conference, in particular the arrangements made for representatives of parties in the house to attend as observers, as well as arrangements for other members of the house to follow the proceedings on closed circuit television.

The conference is, of course, one of tremendous importance. I would think it is certainly the most important federal-provincial conference to be held in my time in politics. It will certainly be the fervent wish of all members of the house, and indeed of all people in the country, that substantial progress be made.

The Prime Minister referred to a charter of human rights to be tabled in the house. We shall not attempt to make any comment on that until we see the proposed charter. If I may express a particular hope, however, it would be that it will be possible for the conference to make initial, substantial progress. I think we all recognize that the problems are of such an order that it would not be practical to expect a complete solution to be achieved in two or three days or even several times two or three days, but I hope the accomplishments in those two or three days will be substantial. I also hope that at the conference arrangements will be made for continuing not only discussion but working parties, so the country can proceed with actual work on these very important matters.

I repeat what I said when I started, that I regard this as a conference of the greatest importance and I wish the Prime Minister, his colleagues and the provincial premiers the utmost success in their deliberations.

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Burnaby-Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, we are appreciative of the arrangements the Prime Minister has made so the various parties in this house can have representatives as observers at the proposed constitutional conference. I think this is a very useful move if the members of the house are to be properly informed so that later we can discuss intelligently the whole question of constitutional change in this country.

I would like to ask the Prime Minister whether he would give some thought to making it clear to the provincial premiers that if they in turn would like to include in their delegations representatives from the opposition parties in the legislatures, they would be entitled to do so. I happen to know that in one or two instances premiers have indicated a willingness to do so, provided this were acceptable to the federal government. I think the more people we can involve in this dialogue that will go on for the next few months in Canada, the better the chance that we will get some mutual understanding of the problems.

[Mr. Pearson.]

I would also like to ask the Prime Minister whether he would give some thought to the possibility of the observers being allowed to sit through the closed sessions of the conference. I know this is not customary when federal-provincial conferences are discussing financial matters and agreements, but in view of the fact that at this exploratory conference matters will be discussed which will ultimately have to be debated in parliament and in all the provincial legislatures, it seems to me there would be a better opportunity for an understanding in depth of the problems that confront this country if the observers were allowed to attend throughout the entire conference. I recognize, of course, that the Prime Minister himself could not make this decision and that the premiers in attendance would also have to agree, but I would like to proffer it to the Prime Minister as a suggestion.

Finally I would urge again, as we have done so often in the past, that following this conference the Prime Minister give serious consideration to the setting up of a parliamentary committee to discuss the constitutional changes which may be necessary in this country to ensure that our constitution is in keeping with the times in which we live. The parliamentary committees which have been in operation during the past few years on a number of topics have demonstrated the extent to which it is possible in this house to achieve a consensus on many controversial subjects. I think a parliamentary committee might do the same thing with respect to constitutional changes.

I should like to say also that we consider this constitutional conference to be one of the most important gatherings in our time. We hope it will be a success, and certainly anything we can do to contribute to a better understanding and to better co-operation among all parts of Canada will be done to the fullest extent possible.

[Translation]

Mr. C.-A. Gauthier (Roberval): Mr. Speaker, we have listened to the statement made by the Prime Minister and, for the time being, we are satisfied, though we will attend the conference as observers only, since I understand that representatives from every party will be invited.

I consider this conference as one of the most important ones up to now. We are entering in a negotiation era which will concern all the provinces and the whole country. I think that this conference greatly interests all the parties in the house.

We bitterly regret that our parliamentary system does not allow representatives of the opposition to participate actively in the negotiations instead of attending the conference only as observers. Having been elected by the people, I feel that we are all equal and that we have the same responsibilities. I have always deplored the fact that, in such a case as this, we attend simply as observers while the party in power negotiates the agreements. To my mind, this is a defect in our parliamentary system.

I should like to ask the right hon. Prime Minister and, indirectly, the premiers of all provinces, to look into the possibility of inviting us to the negotiating table in this most important circumstance for the whole of the country.

We will consider it a pleasure and a duty to appoint a representative of our party as an observer to follow the progress of this conference which, I hope, will suggest a constitution more beneficial to all provinces and more likely to contribute further to unite Canada from coast to coast.

• (2:50 p.m.)

[English]

Mr. A. B. Patterson (Fraser Valley): Mr. Speaker, we would like to thank the Prime Minister for the outline he has given us today with respect to the forthcoming federal-provincial conference. I think it is logical to give the members of this house the opportunity of attending the conference, at least as observers, because in recent months some criticism has been voiced over the fact that we seemed to be moving in the direction of government by federal-provincial conference. I believe this move will assist in dispelling the fears in this direction.

The Prime Minister has indicated something of the agenda for the conference. I was rather perturbed to read in the newspapers the other day a statement to the effect that an outline of the government's proposals to be advanced at the conference was presented to the Quebec Liberal convention. I thought this was rather improper, if such was the case, and perhaps there should be some clarification of this point.

I am sure we all desire the further development of our confederation. Without question there will be a wide divergence of opinion as to how this objective is to be achieved. As has been stated, this conference will be more or less of an exploratory nature and it will take a great deal more discussion and many more conferences to work out a program that will be adequate for the needs of Canada and contribute to the development of this great nation.

OIL

INQUIRY AS TO ARRANGEMENTS RESPECTING EXPORTS TO U.S.

On the orders of the day:

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a question to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources and ask whether undisclosed commitments have been made by the minister or by the government of Canada regarding the export of our oil to the United States.

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): I too have seen the article which appeared in this morning's Globe and Mail and which contains a certain number of innuendos. One of these innuendos is that there is something tricky about the fact that the figures related to this arrangement have not been revealed. I have no objection to saying that some communications have taken place between the two governments on certain levels of oil export in order to avoid difficulties later. We do not want to have export controls; consequently we have to accept certain restraints in connection with this matter.

I want to say also that the recent exchange is part of the continuing process of negotiation on oil matters between the two countries. There is nothing new in this method. The process has been followed by the present government in the past as well as by previous governments. Let the record speak. The record has spoken eloquently in the past and I am sure it will speak eloquently in the future.

Mr. Stanfield: Does the minister propose to disclose what are these levels to which he has alluded?

Inquiries of the Ministry

Mr. Pepin: No. In my announcement of the 23rd, I think it was, I did refer to a framework of the agreement. This phrase was deliberately chosen. The framework of the agreement is something extremely complex. It includes all sorts of things like the good will of both countries in oil matters; our desire to avoid export controls; our desire not to lose what is referred to as "overland exemptions"; our interest in building the loop—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Stanfield: In the next few days, Mr. Speaker, will the minister make a statement on motions or on some appropriate occasion outlining the present objectives of this government with regard to oil policy, so the house and the country will be brought up to date on these objectives?

Mr. Pepin: Mr. Speaker, a month or so ago we had a full two day debate on these matters. I spoke for 45 minutes on the subject, and I shall be delighted to send my hon. friend copies of my speech.

Mr. Stanfield: Mr. Speaker, do I understand my hon. friend to indicate that he will not be making such a statement as I requested?

Mr. Pepin: At the time, Mr. Speaker, I said—perhaps it was not very political or partisan on my part—that the policy introduced in 1961 by some hon. members now on the other side of the house was still a valid one, but I said we were improving upon it every day.

Mr. David Lewis (York South): Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources a supplementary question. In view of the fact that any arrangements between the two governments regarding levels of exports would necessarily involve the plans of the companies concerned, would the minister inform the house whether these levels agreed upon in the communications to which he has referred have been communicated, in whole or in part, directly or indirectly, to the oil companies concerned?

[Translation]

Mr. Pepin: Mr. Speaker, it is the second insinuation that I find in that article and I am very happy to be able to answer it as follows. It is normal for the government of Canada to co-operate with private companies, large and small, in all circumstances, in the interest of Canada.

[Mr. Stanfield.]

Second, I would like to say that the project now under way, that is the Chicago looping, had the support not only of the major companies but also of the independent companies. That is shown by the statements made beforehand and by the messages of congratulations we received from the Independent Petroleum Association of Canada.

I would also like to point out to the hon. member that 54 per cent of the shares of the Interprovincial Company are held by individuals.

[English]

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Lewis: A further supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. I thank the minister for his general lecture about his co-operation with independent as well as large companies, but may I ask the minister whether, be the companies large, small, independent or dependent, the information that he refuses to give the house has been given, in whole or in part, directly or indirectly to any of those companies?

[Translation]

[Later:]

Mr. Pepin: Evidently, Mr. Speaker, no company would have invested $100 million in the United States and $80 million in Canada without having an idea of the economic possibilities of the project.

Mr. Lewis: That is no answer.

[English]

Hon. E. D. Fulton (Kamloops): Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask the minister what I hope is a straightforward and direct question to which I also hope he will give a reply.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Fulton: Do not hon. members opposite also hope they will get a reply? My question is, are there in effect between the government of Canada and the government of the United States any arrangements with respect to the control of exports of oil from Canada beyond those that have been disclosed to the house or made public?

Mr. Pepin: Mr. Speaker, I have said very clearly that some communications on levels have taken place. I said this was not new, that it had been done previously by this government and by governments before that. However, I insist that even disclosure of figures would not give a true picture of the situation because the situation is more complex than that. I also insisted on the fact that there were other factors that would have to be taken into account in order properly to judge the situation.

Mr. Fulton: Mr. Speaker, my question did not relate to communications about levels; my question related to arrangements in effect. Are there any arrangements in effect between the two governments beyond those that have been disclosed?

Mr. Pepin: My hon. friend knows that these arrangements that are in effect are made every year. I have been minister—

Mr. Fulton: But they are usually disclosed.

Mr. Pepin: No—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. We are now embarking upon a debate. This is the question period.

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Burnaby-Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, may I ask a supplementary question on this subject. Is the minister prepared to divulge to the house the levels that have been suggested between the two governments with respect to any restriction on oil exports? Is he prepared to give the house the information that has already been given to the oil companies in question?

Mr. Pepin: Mr. Speaker, my simple "no" answer must be understood in the context of what I have already said on this subject.

[Translation]

EMERGENCY MEASURES ORGANIZATION

INQUIRY AS TO ESTABLISHMENT OF SCHOOL IN QUEBEC

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Gérard Laprise (Chapleau): Mr. Speaker, I should like to put a question to the Minister of Industry and Minister of Defence Production.

Can he tell the house whether an agreement has been reached between the federal government and the Quebec government with a view to establishing a civil defence school in Quebec?

Hon. C. M. Drury (Minister of Industry): Mr. Speaker, I had talks last week with the secretary of the province of Quebec with regard to his intention of establishing in that province civil defence schools, such as exist in other provinces. No agreement has been reached in that connection.

[English]

NATIONAL DEFENCE

NORAD—POSSIBLE CHANGE IN CANADIAN COMMITMENTS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. A. B. Patterson (Fraser Valley): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of National Defence. In view of reported negotiations between Canadian and United States officials respecting an overhaul of continental air defence, could the minister advise whether the government intends to bring before the house in the near future proposals that would drastically alter Canada's commitments to NORAD?

[Translation]

Hon. Léo Cadieux (Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, the hon. member uses a word which is not quite correct when he talks about negotiations.

We have been aware of certain possible options which the United States government could take and which could concern the North American defence, but no decision in that respect has been taken and no negotiations, as such, have been entered into.

[English]

Mr. David MacDonald (Prince): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. In view of these considerations would the Minister of National Defence agree to the calling of a joint meeting of the committees on defence and external affairs to consider these far reaching agreements?

[Translation]

Mr. Cadieux (Terrebonne): It has already been accepted, Mr. Speaker, and I think that the committees should convene in the near future.

[English]

INDUSTRY

CHATHAM, ONT.—CLOSING OF SUGAR REFINERY

On the orders of the day:

Mr. H. W. Danforth (Kent, Ont.): I wish to direct a question to the Minister of Industry. Can the minister indicate to the house whether any steps were taken by the government in an attempt to keep the Canada and Dominion Sugar Refinery in operation at Chatham, Ontario? Or are there any current plans to encourage the reopening of the plant after the unfortunate announcement yesterday by the company that it would close the plant permanently?

Inquiries of the Ministry

Hon. C. M. Drury (Minister of Industry): During the course of the year there have been discussions with the sugar company with a view to seeing whether any arrangements were possible to enable it to continue in operation in that area.

Mr. Mac T. McCutcheon (Lambton-Kent): A supplementary question to the Minister of Agriculture, Mr. Speaker. In regard to the closing of the C and D sugar refinery, what arrangements have been made, will be made or are to be undertaken respecting the payment of subsidies for the growers in that area who supplied the sugar company? Will there be any change in this regard?

Hon. J. J. Greene (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, the subsidy payments for past years will of course be consummated, but inasmuch as the sugar company is closing its plant there may be no sugar beet business in the area in the coming year. In that event I would take it that subsidy payments will be discontinued. The whole matter will be looked into. I am meeting with the directors of the sugar company this afternoon and everything that is possible within the law will be done to protect the position of the farmers in the area.

Mr. McCutcheon: A further supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. It is pretty obvious that there should not be any sugar subsidy payments if sugar is not being refined. I was referring to the year 1967—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member is presenting argument, not asking a question.

Mr. McCutcheon: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker, the subsidy payment is on the 1967 crop. Actually it is paid in 1968. I merely want to know what the plans are for the 1967 crop.

Mr. Greene: The announcement of the sugar company was only made known to my office yesterday. To the best of my knowledge that is the first time it was made public. Certainly this entire matter will be reviewed, and I shall be very pleased to let the hon. member know about any decisions that are made with respect to any change that may be applicable, just as soon as the government has any change to announce.

Mr. W. H. A. Thomas (Middlesex West): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Could the Minister of Agriculture assure the house and the sugar beet producers of Ontario in the region affected that the contracts as arranged for the 1967 crop will be completed?

Mr. Greene: Mr. Speaker, this matter will certainly be looked into and everything possible will be done to protect the position of the farmers who, as the result of the closing, certainly find themselves in a most difficult position.

HEALTH AND WELFARE

MEDICARE—REQUEST FOR ANNOUNCEMENT FOLLOWING PROVINCIAL REPRESENTATIONS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Burnaby-Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a question to the Prime Minister. I understand the Prime Minister told the press that the cabinet did not finalize its decision with respect to the implementation of medicare in its meeting this morning, but hopes to do so on Thursday. I ask the Prime Minister, does he intend to make a statement on Thursday or Friday on motions with respect to the government's final decision on this matter?

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I hope we shall complete this consideration on Thursday. As my hon. friend knows, we are re-examining this matter in the light of requests made by provincial governments. When our consideration is complete it is my intention then to convey to the provincial governments and the House of Commons the decision we have reached as the result of the request for re-examination, but I cannot give the exact day on which that will be possible.

Hon. Michael Starr (Ontario): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. I ask the Prime Minister whether the government has tried to be flexible about the four points that are set out in the bill so some of the plans that now exist in provinces that have medical care schemes can be considered.

Mr. Pearson: Well, Mr. Speaker, I am afraid my hon. friend will have to wait until I make my statement in the house and to the provinces. I hope to do that with a minimum of delay, I assure you.

Mr. Douglas: A further supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. May I ask the Prime Minister whether this reconsideration by the cabinet applies only to the date of implementation and not to the medicare plan itself as it is contained on the statute books?

Mr. Pearson: Mr. Speaker, in our re-examination we are concerned only with the time of implementation.

LABOUR CONDITIONS

INQUIRY AS TO ACTION TO MEET UNEMPLOYMENT SITUATION

On the orders of the day:

Hon. George Hees (Northumberland): Yesterday I asked the Prime Minister whether, since the number of unemployed in Canada increased by 87,000 during the past year, the government had any plans to lay before the house to correct this serious situation. The Prime Minister declined to answer my question because he felt my figures might be incorrect. Now that he has been able to read the Dominion Bureau of Statistics daily bulletin for January 11—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Will the hon. member kindly put his question?

Mr. Hees: Mr. Speaker, now that the Prime Minister has been able to verify my figures by reading the document I referred to, is he able to advise the house what the government plans to do to correct this serious situation of rising unemployment?

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): All our plans and policies are designed to keep unemployment to a minimum, and I hope in that regard we shall be more successful than the government of my hon. friend was some years ago.

Mr. Hees: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Since the government considers it quite satisfactory to have unemployment increase by 87,000 during the year, will it reconsider its plans and see if it cannot do a little better in the months ahead?

[Translation]

CLOSING OF PAPER PLANT IN CLARKE CITY, QUE.

On the orders of the day:

Mr. J. R. Keays (Gaspé): Mr. Speaker, I should like to put my question to the hon. Minister of Manpower and Immigration.

In view of the closing down of the Gulf Pulp and Paper Company plant at Clarke City, the only local industry, can the hon. minister tell us if efforts are still being pursued with a view to finding employment for the hundreds of workers who were laid off in that area?

Hon. Jean Marchand (Minister of Manpower and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, that duty falls to our manpower centres, and I believe they are at work trying to find employment for those people.

FLOODS

QUEBEC—REPORTED DAMAGE IN NICOLET AND RICHELIEU COUNTIES

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Florian Côté (Nicolet-Yamaska): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a question to the hon. Minister of Transport?

Has the hon. gentleman received a request from the municipal authorities of the towns of Sorel, Lac St-Pierre, and Port St-François located in the Nicolet and Richelieu constituencies, as a result of flood damage by the St. Lawrence river? If so, would the hon. Minister of Transport be prepared to designate that area as a distressed area?

[English]

Hon. Paul Hellyer (Minister of Transport): I have received some representations; I cannot say specifically from which organizations they came without first checking my files. I have made a full inquiry into the background of the whole situation. The brief report I have prepared on the subject is now ready, but I do not yet have a translation. I hope to have it for tomorrow, when it will be available to the hon. gentleman.

[Translation]

Mr. Gilles Grégoire (Lapointe): Mr. Speaker, may I put a supplementary question and ask the Minister of Transport whether the report he was supposed to receive from his department about the work of icebreakers on the St. Lawrence is ready and whether the minister intends to make a statement in the house in connection with that report?

[English]

Mr. Hellyer: This is the report to which I was just referring. I am not sure that I should make it to the house, but the background will be available to hon. members tomorrow when I would, of course, be able to answer any other questions by way of amplification.

Mr. J. M. Forrestall (Halifax): I trust this is the report resulting from inquiries to ascertain whether icebreaking is the cause of the flooding or whether some other cause is responsible. In saying he is not sure he should make the report to the house is the minister suggesting that this matter is not sufficiently important to be dealt with—

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Mr. Hellyer: No; it is a very important subject, and I hope the information available will be to the hon. member's satisfaction.

BRITISH COLUMBIA—INQUIRY AS TO FEDERAL ASSISTANCE

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Frank Howard (Skeena): I have a question for the Minister of National Defence concerning the matter I raised with him yesterday, namely the serious threat of floods in the Bella Coola valley. May I ask whether the hon. gentleman has anything to report to the house about the situation?

Hon. Léo Cadieux (Minister of National Defence): I have received a report from the area commander who says he is aware of the serious situation on the Bella Coola. He also informs me that he has had no request for help from the provincial authorities.

Mr. Howard: I am amazed that the provincial government does not exhibit more interest in this matter. Perhaps I might ask the Prime Minister whether any mechanism exists within the federal structure which would permit this area to be declared a disaster area and thus enable—

Mr. Speaker: Order. I do not think that question is in order.

Mr. Howard: On a question of privilege, a few minutes ago the hon. member for Nicolet-Yamaska was permitted to ask a question related to a declaration concerning a disaster area. This is an equally serious matter concerning an area of British Columbia—

Mr. Speaker: Order. The hon. member's first question was permitted. He then asked whether there was a mechanism or procedure available, and I do not think a question of that kind is in order.

[Mr. Hellyer.]

TRADE

REPORTED HEAVY IMPORTS OF VEGETABLE OILS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. George Muir (Lisgar): My question is directed to the Minister of Agriculture. Is the government initiating any steps on behalf of the sunflower growing industry of Canada which is presently threatened by heavy imports of vegetable oils amounting to an estimated 39 million pounds in 1967?

Hon. J. J. Greene (Minister of Agriculture): I shall be pleased to take the question as notice.

Mr. Muir (Lisgar): While he is looking into this question would the minister take notice of the fact that 2,000 tons of sunflower oil has been purchased from overseas for delivery at Toronto—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Reynold Rapp (Humboldt-Melfort-Tisdale): Would the minister also look into the imports of rapeseed oil?

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Greene: I would be very happy to do so, as I am aware of the great concern felt by the hon. gentleman for rapeseed and rapeseed oil.

[Translation]

CANADA LABOUR CODE

INQUIRY AS TO REPORT ON TRANSPORT INDUSTRIES

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Fernand-E. Leblanc (Laurier): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the hon. Minister of Labour.

Does he intend to give effect to the recommendations made by the Murchison commission concerning the Canadian Labour Code and exclude highway truckers from the normal provisions in the code?

[English]

Hon. J. R. Nicholson (Minister of Labour): As I believe I have stated on two occasions in the house within the last ten days, the Murchison report is being considered by officials of my department in the light of representations which have been made both by drivers and employers. When conclusions have been reached by my officials I shall be laying the matter before cabinet.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

MIDDLE EAST—INQUIRY AS TO RENEWED HOSTILITIES

On the orders of the day:

Mr. W. B. Nesbitt (Oxford): I have a question for the Secretary of State for External Affairs. Is the minister in a position to give the house any information about serious hostilities which have broken out in the Middle East, reportedly around noon today?

Hon. Paul Martin (Secretary of State for External Affairs): No, Mr. Speaker, I can add nothing to what came over the wire.

CANADIAN CONSTITUTION

REPORTED STATEMENT BY JUSTICE MINISTER RESPECTING PRIORITY

On the orders of the day:

Hon. E. D. Fulton (Kamloops): I have a question to direct to the Prime Minister. Has the attention of the right hon. gentleman been called to a statement made by his colleague the Minister of Justice during a recent television interview, when he said, referring to last April:

> My feeling then was that the constitution was not very high on the list of priorities as things that this country must do. Quite frankly it's still pretty much my feeling now.

In the light of the statement made today by the Prime Minister about the importance of this forthcoming conference and the urgency attached to it, may I ask the right hon. gentleman whether that statement by the Minister of Justice reflects government policy?

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): There's no use the hon. gentleman attempting to drive a wedge between the Minister of Justice and myself.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Fulton: I am glad the Prime Minister admits a gap is there.

TRADE

SUPPORT OF IMPORT RESTRICTIONS BY U.S. UNION LEADERS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. H. W. Herridge (Kootenay West): I wish to direct a question to the Minister of Finance. Has the minister been informed of the changing policy by the A.F.L.-C.I.O., that is to say by the heads of the international unions in the United States, by virtue of which instead of supporting liberal trade policies they intend to support protectionist policies aimed at restricting imports, including textiles, manufactured goods and oil, from countries such as Canada in an effort to protect the living standards of United States workers? If so, what does the hon. gentleman intend to do to protect the living standards of Canadian workers?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Minister of Finance): I have not heard of any change in the attitude of those organizations, but I am sure the house would agree that if a policy similar to that suggested were followed by organizations such as these throughout the world, mutual impoverishment would result.

FISHERIES

REPORTED EXCLUSION OF HUMANE SOCIETY OBSERVERS FROM SEAL HUNT

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Andrew Chatwood (Grand Falls-White Bay-Labrador): May I direct a question to the Minister of Fisheries. It has to do with press reports claiming that Mr. Alex MacLaurin, president of the Canadian Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, has expressed a complaint that the Canadian government has barred his observers from the annual seal hunt in the gulf. Can the minister confirm or deny this allegation and, if it is correct, why was this action taken?

Hon. H.-J. Robichaud (Minister of Fisheries): A few days ago I read with astonishment a Canadian Press report which appeared in a number of Canadian newspapers to the effect that the president of the Canadian S.P.C.A. had protested to the Canadian government about being barred, for the first time, from sending observers to the seal hunt.

The facts are as follows. About two weeks ago I wrote to the president of the Canadian S.P.C.A. advising him, well in advance of the seal hunt, that in view of the heavy departmental commitments in connection with law enforcement during the hunt the helicopters and other equipment available to the department must be used solely for departmental purposes. This is altogether different from barring S.P.C.A. representatives as observers from the annual seal hunt.

Mr. J. R. Keays (Gaspé): May I ask the minister whether he will consider notifying the president of the New Brunswick humane society in order to avoid publication of fictitious reports on the hunt.

Inquiries of the Ministry

AIR CANADA

INQUIRY AS TO CHANGE IN FINANCING METHODS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Thomas M. Bell (Saint John-Albert): I have a question to direct to the Minister of Finance. Can the minister report any progress with regard to his desire as expressed in the budget speech, to make Air Canada more public?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Minister of Finance): Our discussions in connection with the financing of Air Canada are proceeding. I know the Minister of Transport shares my view that very substantial progress is being made in this direction.

WINNIPEG—JET OVERHAUL FACILITIES

On the orders of the day:

Mr. L. R. Sherman (Winnipeg South): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Transport. I wonder whether the minister is in a position to confirm reports to the effect that Montreal will be the future site of intercontinental supersonic air traffic; and does Air Canada still feel its major jet overhaul facilities should be maintained in Winnipeg?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I doubt whether this is an extremely urgent matter. I would think it is the type of question which should be placed on the order paper.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

REQUEST FOR MEETING OF HOUSE LEADERS ON BROADCASTING BILL

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct this question to the Minister of National Health and Welfare in his capacity as government house leader. In view of the fact that we have now spent at least eight sitting days on one clause of the broadcasting bill, would the government house leader consider calling a meeting of the various house leaders in an effort to see whether we can reach some agreement concerning the amount of time we will spend on this matter?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Yes, Mr. Speaker. I have already had a word with the house leader of the official opposition. I hope we will get together this afternoon to discuss a possible time limitation with regard to this measure which is now before the committee.

[Mr. Keays.]

INQUIRY AS TO CALLING OF PUBLIC ACCOUNTS COMMITTEE

On the orders of the day:

Mr. A. D. Hales (Wellington South): Mr. Speaker, my question is addressed to the Minister of National Health and Welfare in his capacity as house leader. Is it the intention of the minister to call the public accounts committee and, if so, when may we expect that announcement?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I would be happy to have a word with my hon. friend, as chairman of the committee, to determine whether a reference should be made to it.

REQUEST FOR CONSIDERATION OF REFERENCE TO TRANSPORT COMMITTEE

On the orders of the day:

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, while I am on my feet, as a point of order may I draw to the attention of members of the house the government order with regard to the reference to the standing committee on transport and communications. There is some desire on the part of hon. members in all parts of the house to have this committee set up. I wonder whether I might call this as the first item of government business on the understanding that it would be passed without debate.

Mr. Starr: We agree to that, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: Is it agreed?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

VETERANS AFFAIRS

INQUIRY AS TO INCREASE IN CEILING ON PERMISSIVE INCOME

On the orders of the day:

Mr. G. L. Chatterton (Esquimalt-Saanich): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Veterans Affairs. Yesterday, in reply to a question asked by the hon. member for Kootenay West concerning an increase in the permissive income ceiling for war veterans allowance recipients, the minister gave a certain answer. Has the minister now informed himself, and can he give the house the correct answer?

Hon. Roger Teillet (Minister of Veterans Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I gave the correct answer as part of the answer to another question raised a few moments later. I think the hon. member will find it a little later on in the proceedings.

FREIGHT RATES

CREAM—INQUIRY AS TO APPLICATION OF NEW RATES

On the orders of the day:

Mr. S. J. Korchinski (Mackenzie): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Transport. On November 27 the minister indicated that the proposed 1,000 per cent rate increase on cream shipments by rail would be postponed for 60 days to allow for further consultation. Since 60 days have almost elapsed has the minister any further information with regard to the rates?

[Later:]

Mr. Korchinski: Mr. Speaker, may I ask the minister if he does not have the answer to my question today, whether he will give it at a future date.

Hon. Paul Hellyer (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I do have the answer. I was involved in the solution of a very important problem at the time the hon. member asked the question. I appreciate his geniality and co-operation in posing the question a second time.

I presume he is referring to the freight rates on cream. The railways have advised the commission that they will file tariff supplements to further postpone the coming into effect of the increase on cream and return empties for a period of at least another 30 days beyond February 3.

[Translation]

ROYAL CANADIAN MOUNTED POLICE

SHORTAGE OF BILINGUAL OFFICERS ON PARLIAMENT HILL

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Gilles Grégoire (Lapointe): Mr. Speaker, I wish to put a question to the Prime Minister.

In view of the fact that more than four years ago, the Prime Minister promised that members of the R.C.M.P. on duty on parliament hill would be bilingual, and in view of the fact also that nothing seems to have been done in this direction until now, could the Prime Minister tell me when measures will be taken to ensure that members of the R.C.M.P. on parliament hill are bilingual to greet people coming from all parts of Canada?

Mr. Speaker: I do not believe this is truly an urgent question that may be put at this time.

If the hon. member considers there is really an emergency, he might bring it up on the adjournment motion.

Mr. Grégoire: I must admit there is no great urgency because this matter has been under consideration for four years.

[English]

CANADA PENSION PLAN

TOBACCO—INCREASED EXEMPTIONS TO ASSIST GROWERS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. W. H. A. Thomas (Middlesex West): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of National Revenue. Is the minister prepared to answer the question I asked on January 22, with regard to increasing the exemptions for contributions under the Canada Pension Plan for casual workers in agriculture?

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of National Revenue): Mr. Speaker, I am not in a position to reply today but I will do so tomorrow.

[Translation]

[Later:]

Mr. Chrétien: Mr. Speaker, I am now ready to answer the question asked by the hon. member for Middlesex West.

A change such as that suggested by the hon. member would require an amendment of the Canada Pension Plan which would have to be approved by the provinces. This matter, like all those concerning which representations have been made, will be given careful consideration the next time the house studies the Canada Pension Plan with a view to effecting changes therein.

[English]

FINANCE

PROTECTION FOR GREENHOUSE OPERATORS—REPORTED STATEMENT BY TRADE MINISTER

On the orders of the day:

Mr. H. W. Danforth (Kent (Ont.)): Mr. Speaker, may I direct this question to the right hon. Prime Minister. I do so because of the grave importance this matter has in respect of the greenhouse industry. Has the Prime Minister's attention been drawn to a recent speech by the Minister of Trade and Commerce in Toronto in which he is reported to have said that he suspects that any protection given the greenhouse industry will be of a temporary nature so the growers can phase out their capital commitments and seek other means of earning a livelihood. May I ask the right hon. gentleman whether this is a reflection of official government policy in this regard.

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, my attention has not been directed to this report of the speech. I shall be glad to look into it.

SHIPPING

REPORT ON ADMINISTRATION OF SMALL BOAT HARBOURS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. T. S. Barnett (Comox-Alberni): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Transport. Now that he has solved his problem for the moment I should like to ask him, in view of the growing concern among commercial fishermen and other boat owners on the coast of British Columbia about the continued application of the 1964 wharfage regulations, whether he is now in a position to inform the house what are the intentions of the government in respect of implementing the recommendations in the report of Dr. Tom How concerning side wharfage and small vessel harbour administration.

Hon. Paul Hellyer (Minister of Transport): I am not in a position to do so at the moment, Mr. Speaker. This is a very complicated question, as my hon. friend knows. I might try to do so at a later date, but I do not have the information at the moment.

Mr. Barnett: Mr. Speaker, would the minister be bold enough to give us some target date by which he expects to make an announcement?

Mr. Hellyer: I think I would be prudent not to do so, Mr. Speaker.

[Translation]

AGRICULTURE

INQUIRY AS TO REPORT OF TASK FORCE

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Auguste Choquette (Lotbinière): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a question to the Minister of Agriculture.

Some months ago, the government established a committee to inquire into the situation of farm problems in Canada. Is the preliminary report of this committee expected soon?

Hon. J. J. Greene (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, the first report is expected in December 1968.

[Mr. Danforth.]

[English]

TRANSPORT

PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND CAUSEWAY—INQUIRY AS TO PROGRESS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. David MacDonald (Prince): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Public Works. Since Colonel Edward Churchill has been working for about half a year on the rescheduling and revising of plans with regard to the Northumberland strait crossing, can the minister tell us when we may expect a resumption of that important project?

Hon. G. J. McIlraith (Minister of Public Works): Mr. Speaker, the project is proceeding very well at the present time. I do not know what the hon. member means by "resumption".

CANADIAN CONSTITUTION

ATTENDANCE AT CONFERENCE OF PROVINCIAL OPPOSITION PARTY REPRESENTATIVES

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Andrew Brewin (Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Prime Minister. I understand that on motions my leader, the hon. member for Burnaby-Coquitlam, suggested that the Prime Minister might indicate to the provincial premiers that the provincial opposition leaders or their representatives might be invited to the forthcoming federal-provincial conference in the same capacity as the opposition members of this house. Will the Prime Minister give consideration—perhaps favourable consideration—to this suggestion?

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): I shall be very glad to do that, Mr. Speaker. Of course it is entirely up to the premiers of the provinces whether they would wish to bring with them representatives of the other parties. We would have no objection whatever. Of course the question of space would be involved, and we might have to throw out some of the press and radio representatives.

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Speaker, I wish to ask a supplementary question and ask the right hon. Prime Minister whether the independent members will also be invited as observers to this conference?

[English]

Mr. Pearson: Mr. Speaker, I think my hon. friend should be given representation in exactly the same proportion as the other parties.

INDIAN AFFAIRS

INQUIRY AS TO CONFERENCE ON ADMINISTRATIVE PROBLEMS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. S. J. Korchinski (Mackenzie): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development. On November 20 the minister indicated he had received representations from Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta pertaining to Indian affairs, particularly as they affect the responsibility of provincial governments in respect of child welfare. Has any decision been reached as a result of these representations and is the minister in a position to disclose that decision to the house?

Hon. Arthur Laing (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): Mr. Speaker, I think a not dissimilar question was asked by the hon. member on November 20. I told him at that time that we had replied to the prairie provinces suggesting that in our view the problems were different in each province and that we might prepare some background papers before we met. I received a letter today from Hon. Mr. Colborne of Alberta who thinks it is quite unnecessary to prepare papers and wants a meeting held soon.

I want to assure the house that I am gratified by what I interpret as an indication on the part of the prairie provinces that in their view now the Indians of Canada, in addition to being Canadian citizens, are also citizens of the provinces. I am sure hon. members will also be gratified by that realization. There seems to be an indication that the provinces are agreed that the services granted to all other citizens in the provinces should be granted as well to the Indians, so we will not be long delayed in meeting with the provinces.

TRANSPORT AND COMMUNICATIONS

CONSIDERATION OF ATLANTIC PROVINCES TRANSPORTATION PROBLEMS

Hon. Paul Hellyer (Minister of Transport) moved:

That the Standing Committee on Transport and Communications be empowered to consider and report upon all aspects of transportation as they relate to the Atlantic Provinces, taking account of the conclusions and recommendations of the Atlantic Provinces Transportation Study, January, 1967, Volumes 1 to 12, prepared by the Economist Intelligence Unit Limited, and the Report of the Royal Commission on Transportation, 1961, Volumes 1 and 2, and recommend what measures should be initiated in order that the national transportation policy may be as fully implemented as possible in the Atlantic Provinces.

That the said Committee shall examine, in particular, the effectiveness of the Maritime Freight Rates Act with power to study and make recommendations concerning:

(a) changes or alterations which may now be desirable in the Maritime Freight Rates Act; and

(b) alternative methods of assisting transportation in the Atlantic Provinces either in addition to the Maritime Freight Rates Act or in substitution therefor in whole or in part with the purpose that maximum benefits be obtained by the Atlantic Provinces from the expenditure being made.

That for the purposes of this inquiry, the said Committee shall be empowered to adjourn from place to place within Canada; that the Clerk and necessary supporting staff be authorized to accompany said Committee, and that the Committee be authorized to engage the services of counsel, accountants, etc.

Motion agreed to.

BROADCASTING

IMPLEMENTATION OF CANADIAN POLICY

The house resumed, from Monday, January 29, consideration in committee of Bill No. C-163, to implement a broadcasting policy for Canada, to amend the Radio Act in consequence thereof and to enact other consequential and related provisions—Miss LaMarsh—Mr. Tardif in the chair.

On clause 2—Broadcasting policy for Canada.

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, when the house adjourned last night, I was stating my opposition to the passing of clause 2(i) of Bill No. C-163.

I was saying that education is not a matter of federal responsibility but that, under the British North America Act, it comes under the jurisdiction of the provinces. That is why I do not see any need for paragraph (i) which stipulates that:

—facilities should be provided within the Canadian broadcasting system for educational broadcasting.

I was saying, Mr. Chairman, that Quebec already has facilities for educational broadcasting and I would like to correct my statement to that effect. It would have been more accurate to say that Quebec owns a studio and that it has rented some equipment to make films that would be shown on television as educational programs.

In fact, there is now a pilot project known as "Tévec" which is merely an experiment, as should be done normally. A quite numerous team is now working on this.

A series of studio programs has been produced with rented equipment, it is true, and not only is the project under way, but it is making good progress.

A few members of that team were telling me today that if the experiment proved a success, Quebec would purchase equipment for educational broadcasting and if it failed, it would drop the project. Therefore, I am of the opinion that it is useless to provide the Canadian broadcasting system with such equipment which will be of no use, since experiments would have been unsuccessful.

Therefore, I wonder why that subclause is included in Bill No. C-163. I think that it would be a duplicate use of public funds, since Quebec is now organizing such an educational broadcasting system, since it already has a well-experienced team working in that field and has rented the complete equipment to start producing educational programs. I wonder why Ottawa would start over and pay again for present facilities.

Administrative efficiency requires indeed that duplication of expenses be avoided for already available equipment.

This is why, Mr. Chairman, as a result of the constitutional and practical arguments which I put forward yesterday in affecting to that subclause, the presentation of an amendment is advisable.

Therefore, I would move that subclause (i) of clause 2 be purely and simply deleted, because it adds nothing to the bill on Canadian broadcasting and, moreover, it is contrary to the constitution, to the British North America Act.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: If the hon. member is against this subclause of clause 2, all he has to do to show his disapproval is to vote against it when it is put to the vote.

Mr. Grégoire: As you wish, Mr. Chairman; do that.

[English]

Mr. Prittie: Mr. Chairman, I do not want this part in respect of educational facilities to pass without making some remarks about it. When the committee on broadcasting begins its hearings on educational television one of the problems it will have to solve is the definition of educational television. I suggest it might be a little difficult to define this phrase because there are two possible definitions. The first relates to educational television for elementary and secondary schools and perhaps colleges. The second relates to adult education.

Having regard to school broadcasting, it seems to me there has been an inexcusable delay in bringing in a bill to establish facilities for educational television. At least two provinces that I know of, Alberta and Ontario, have been pressing the federal government for some time to build these transmission facilities. Indeed, Alberta was ready to start a year and a half ago and Ontario has been rather impatient.

The committee on broadcasting is going to begin its hearings on this subject on February 8. It will be hearing from those provinces which wish to be represented and from representatives of private organizations and perhaps from individuals. At the rate we are dealing with broadcasting matters here in Ottawa it is difficult to tell when this program will actually come into force. The committee will hold hearings in February and March and some time after that the bill will come back to the house. So educational broadcasting may not even begin in the year 1968.

• (3:40 p.m.)

I have the feeling so far as school broadcasting is concerned that we are once again in the position where events may overtake us. It seems to me that before very long schools in the urban areas of Canada will not be requiring the regular, through the air transmission facilities. With the developments which have taken taken place in closed circuit systems, more extensive use of films and videotapes and that sort of thing, it seems to me that the larger centres and any school district which is in an urban area will not need through the air facilities. They may still be required for some time to come in rural areas, but I suggest that technical developments are overtaking us in this field.

With regard to the second possible definition of educational television, that concerning adult education, I think there are some difficulties. The definition is very difficult. "Adult education" can mean almost anything. It can mean the ordinary type of public affairs broadcasting which is now taking place on the regular television and radio stations, it can mean actual instruction in university and college courses for adults, and it can mean instruction of the type with which the department of manpower is concerned. I remind the hon. member for Lapointe that this is a very legitimate concern of the federal government which recognizes that it is responsible for manpower training. Television can be used for this purpose.

It seems to me that the general heading of "adult education" might be interpreted in some provinces to mean political broadcasting as well, and this is where the difficulty may lie. If some attention is not given to this aspect of the matter we will have ten provincial systems of broadcasting in relation to adult educational programs and while some of the broadcasting carried out may indeed provide adult education some of it may simply be propaganda or politics.

I do not know how this difficulty can be overcome. It may be that in each province it will be necessary to establish an authority such as the Independent Television Authority in Britain to be responsible for adult educational broadcasting. I am thinking of an authority on which would be represented the Canadian Association for Adult Education, or the provincial equivalent, the school trustees, associations of teachers, and perhaps chambers of commerce and trade unions. It seems to me that unless we figure out how this matter is to be handled by some independent authority, educational television under the general heading of "adult education" will be open to possible abuse. There are very great possibilities in this area which need to be explored and exploited. I hope we can find a way of doing it so that this type of broadcasting does not become simply a propaganda arm for provincial governments.

Mr. Noble: Mr. Chairman, it seems to me that many of the complaints, suggestions and observations which hon. members have been making in the last few days respecting the operations of the C.B.C. and Bill C-163 have been made in succeeding sessions of parliament for several years. Yet the C.B.C. goes on its merry way paying very little attention, if any, to appeals made by members of this house in their crusade for the elimination of programs from the C.B.C which are offensive to a wholesome and decent way of life. The type of degrading—

Mr. Stanbury: On a point of order, Mr. Chairman, which subclause is under discussion? If it is subclause (i) I think the hon. member is off base.

Mr. Noble: I will come to that, Mr. Chairman, if you will give me a little time. I think we can deal in generalities.

Miss LaMarsh: No, you cannot.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order, please.

Miss LaMarsh: We have been on this bill for nine days and nobody can deal in generalities.

Mr. Noble: The type of degrading programs that many objected to as far back as October, 1964, have been presented from time to time without moderation. We appear to be as helpless today as we were then in having action taken that would assure clean entertainment. Two films that were viewed on the C.B.C in recent weeks and which aroused the ire of people across the country were "Waiting for Caroline" and "The Ernie Game". These films were indecent, immoral and revolting. They were produced jointly by the National Film Board and the C.B.C. at a total cost of $831,-813.72 and their completion took 70 people 84 weeks and five days.

Miss LaMarsh: Mr. Chairman, the hon. member is now seeking to circumvent your ruling. He must be aware of the rules because he has been a member of the house much longer than I have, and he must know after nine days of debate that the house has a number of times decided that we would stick strictly to the subclause under discussion. "The Ernie Game" and "Waiting For Caroline" were programs of general entertainment value on the C.B.C. and have absolutely nothing to do with educational television.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: I agree that the hon. gentleman may not be confining his remarks to the discussion of this particular subclause. I was listening to him very carefully and hoping that eventually he would come back to the subclause. I presume that is what he intends to do.

Mr. Noble: The showing of these films by the C.B.C. was an insult to the intelligence and moral standards of this nation. Hundreds of letters and telephone calls were directed to members of parliament and senators voicing their disgust and anger.

Miss LaMarsh: What are you reading from?

Mr. Noble: It seems that the powers that be in the C.B.C. who are charged with the responsibility for programming have depraved and perverted minds and their desire and motive are to reduce all Canadians to their own level.

Miss LaMarsh: What are you reading from?

Mr. Noble: There was evidence of such behaviour on the program "The Way It Is" on January 21 last, when a young man, apparently well educated—

Miss LaMarsh: I am sorry to keep returning to this subject, Mr. Chairman, but there is a great deal of public business to be done. The members of the opposition who were on the committee have had their say. We have had nine days of debate on this clause. The hon. member is making a mockery of the rules of the house. He is reading from a prepared script, and his remarks have nothing whatsoever to do with the clause now under debate.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: To make the matter a little clearer may I read the subclause we are studying at the moment. It reads as follows:

(i) facilities should be provided within the Canadian broadcasting system for educational broadcasting;

That is the subclause under study at the present time.

Mr. Sherman: Mr. Chairman, perhaps it would help matters if I pointed out to my colleague the hon. member for Grey North that, as he is probably aware, subclause (h) was stood for consideration yesterday in deference to my request, and suggested that perhaps the hon. member's remarks would apply more aptly to the study of subclause (h) with regard to which we propose to move an amendment, as the minister knows. It might help to expedite the passage of the subclause now under discussion if the hon. member would take that into consideration.

Mr. Noble: If this is your wish, Mr. Chairman, I will gladly postpone my remarks until subclause (h) is under discussion and will speak then.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Actually this is not the wish of the Chair. The wish of the Chair is that the hon. member confine his remarks to the subclause under study. I doubt very much that if he waited until subclause (h) was under study what he has been saying would apply. I am sure the committee would prefer, and the rule is, that the hon. gentleman confine his remarks to the subclause under study.

• (3:50 p.m.)

Mr. Noble: Mr. Chairman, if the minister is going to continue interrupting I will wait until I am in order to make my speech. If the minister really wanted to get this bill through she would not make these interruptions and I would have completed my speech by now.

Miss LaMarsh: We have been here for the last nine days.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Is the committee ready for the question? Shall subclause (i) carry?

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, I wish to insist upon the fact that education in no way falls under the jurisdiction of the federal government and, before we vote on this clause, I should like to emphasize that education is a matter for provincial jurisdiction.

We talk about constitutional reform, but the first thing we do is to put the constitution completely aside.

Mr. Béchard: Mr. Chairman, I rise on a point of order.

The hon. member knows very well that the central government recognizes the jurisdiction of the provinces in the matter of education. The right hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Pearson) and the Minister of Justice (Mr. Trudeau) have made statements to this effect on several occasions. However, education is not an issue here, since subclause (i) deals with technical facilities for educational broadcasting and not with education itself.

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, the parliamentary secretary says that technical facilities by means of radio and television broadcasting are involved. On the other hand, the broadcasting system is under control of the federal government. The federal government has authority over the broadcasting system and controls the facilities of educational broadcasting and, obviously, the federal government will control the educational broadcasts. That is what paragraph (i) provides:

—facilities should be provided within the Canadian broadcasting system for educational broadcasting;

This means that educational television will be turned over to the federal government. If this is done only to simplify things, the fact that the Quebec government and other provincial governments already have facilities for educational television should also be taken into consideration.

There is in Quebec a pilot-project called "Tévec" created by an organization presenting educational programs in Jonquière and Chicoutimi. It is a pilot project being tried out in the Saguenay-Lake St. John area. Obviously, the Quebec government did not wish to extend it throughout Quebec until tests are made in a given area. Precisely, the area of Saguenay-Lake St. John was chosen as a pilot area for educational TV.

The member for Lake St. John (Mr. Simard) is here; he is aware that every morning and every night, the private television stations are broadcasting educational programs under the Tévec plan.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order, please. The hon. member is now speaking of educational programs supplied by the province. The clause now under discussion states:

—facilities should be provided within the Canadian broadcasting system for educational broadcasting;

This does not means, in the opinion of the Chair, that the federal government will interfere in educational programs. The educational programs mentioned by the member are provincial educational programs and are not in the least related to the clause now under consideration.

Mr. Grégoire: Exactly, Mr. Chairman, to connect it to the clause, I take the following example: If the Quebec government already has its own television facilities for educational purposes, why should the federal government interfere in the field of education? That does not make sense.

I say that education comes under provincial jurisdiction and the federal parliament wants to get into a field which is the sole responsibility of the provinces by including in one of its bills a clause which says:

—facilities should be provided within the Canadian broadcasting system for educational broadcasting.

I am told: We do not want to interfere in the field of education, we want only to provide facilities for educational broadcasting within the national broadcasting service. Why then would the federal government get equipment for educational broadcasting if it has no intention of using it?

Mr. Béchard: Mr. Chairman, I rise again on a point of order.

I repeat that the federal government has no intention of interfering in the field of education, which is exclusively provincial. Subclause (i) reads as follows:

—facilities should be provided within the Canadian broadcasting system for educational broadcasting;

If we recall recent interventions of the hon. member for Lapointe on the words "should" and "shall" I think he should take into consideration what is written, and not make a speech on education.

On the other hand, broadcasting is a field of exclusive federal jurisdiction. Then, anything which may happen in the field of educational television within the provinces should become the subject of an agreement with the federal government, since broadcasting comes exclusively under federal jurisdiction.

Then, Mr. Chairman, I believe, that this house is wasting its time when it discusses education with regard to facilities for educational broadcasting.

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, the house is not wasting its time unless the matter is badly explained. The parliamentary secretary stated that broadcasting comes under federal jurisdiction. He also added that education is under provincial jurisdiction.

Now, when the British North America Act was drafted, there was no radio nor television. But nevertheless, there were educational systems. However, they decided that the field of education was exclusively within provincial jurisdiction. The word "exclusively" is clearly mentioned.

Now the parliamentary secretary stands up and tells us that, in order to have educational programs, an agreement between the federal and provincial governments is necessary. If an agreement is necessary, then we cannot speak of the matter being exclusively within provincial jurisdiction.

The parliamentary secretary says that an agreement is necessary because broadcasting comes under federal jurisdiction. Let us admit that broadcasting comes under federal jurisdiction; there is nothing to prevent educational television programs now broadcast in the area of Saguenay-Lake St. Jean, to be broadcast following an agreement with the federal government.

What happens is this: the Quebec government has rented some equipment so as to prepare school films, which are shown on television through private stations, for an hour in the morning and at night, at a given time. Such initiative did not require any agreement between the federal and the provincial government because the latter does not have to conclude an agreement with the Ottawa government with regard to education.

The provincial government had the right to reserve periods of time with the private stations in Quebec, and it did so, and no agreement with federal government is required.

In the light of the proposed paragraph—the parliamentary secretary points out that it says "should" and not "shall", and that therefore there is no obligation—however, it must be recognized that the word "should" and not "shall" is found all through the clause. In fact, paragraph (b) reads as follows:

—that the Canadian broadcasting system should be effectively owned and controlled by Canadians—

• (4:00 p.m.)

It does not say "shall". All through that clause which includes about ten paragraphs, we can read "it should be this way", and not necessarily "it shall be this way". The word "should" is always used. It is clumsy from start to finish. It is with "should"s that, at one point, thanks to precedents, the whole thing becomes "shall". You say: It is not compulsory, but the system should be equipped for educational broadcasting. Will you have me believe that the C.B.C. will not do something about that? Not at all. The C.B.C. will have its own educational broadcasts and school programs, unless the hon. Secretary of State can explain things otherwise for that is what I read in this paragraph. If there is another explanation, perhaps the hon. Secretary of State can clarify the meaning of that clause.

[English]

Miss LaMarsh: Perhaps my hon. friend will permit me to ask him a question. Does he understand that the word "system" in this subclause and throughout the bill does not mean the C.B.C. but rather refers to both the public and private sectors?

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Let us grant it may be public and private. I cannot see very well how private television could afford the equipment for educational purposes, when these are non profitable and cannot be sold. The government does not sell commercials—

[English]

Miss LaMarsh: Did my hon. friend not just tell us that there are pilot projects in the province of Quebec in the private sector of broadcasting? How else does he think there can be such pilot projects unless there are facilities for them?

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Yes, Mr. Chairman, some educational television programs are shown in the Saguenay-Lake St. John area; it is a pilot project. Why? For two reasons. The first is that Quebec has acquired the facilities required to make excellent educational films. The second is that the Quebec government has bought time from television stations. But private stations do not have any facilities for educational programs; it is not up to private stations to pay for the broadcasting of educational programs. Education does not come under the jurisdiction of private stations but of the Quebec department of education. Private stations will not acquire all the facilities required for educational programs, because they are costly and do not pay.

Who, then, will have the facilities for educational broadcasting? The hon. Secretary of State says that these facilities will be provided within the Canadian broadcasting system. But we know very well that, in the final analysis, this means the C.B.C. The public broadcasting system is the one which will have these facilities, because it is financed by the federal government using taxes paid by the whole Canadian people. When the public broadcasting system has these facilities, it will be a crown corporation, a federal body and will produce its own educational programs.

This is contrary to the constitution and provides for duplication in the use of public funds, since the provinces have begun to acquire these facilities and are sponsoring pilot programs, experimenting and developing educational television.

Why such a duplication of public funds? Why should we pay taxes to the provincial government and the federal government, for something that is needed but once, that is one set only of facilities for educational broadcasting?

That is what I do not understand in the argument of the hon. minister and her parliamentary secretary. I wonder why they insist so much on including those words. The minister suggests that it does not necessarily imply the C.B.C., but rather the Canadian broadcasting system. However, it is not the broadcasting system that is going to buy what is needed for televised lectures, but rather the department of education of the province of Quebec, just as in Ontario it is the department of education which already presents such lectures—I have seen some here, on Ottawa television, in both French and in English.

But those programs are prepared by the Ontario or the Quebec department of education and that is normal. If, the Quebec government wants to rent periods of time from private stations, it is quite free to do so, because nothing compels it to enter into an agreement with the federal government under the pretext that broadcasting is a federal jurisdiction. It can deal directly with the private stations for these courses; it is as simple as that.

That is why I claim that this clause should not exist. First, because education is an exclusive provincial jurisdiction and secondly, because the departments of education in the various provinces have already taken action to acquire—

Mr. Béchard: Mr. Chairman, on a point of order, again and for the last time, because such a discussion should not be allowed to drag on, something that could easily happen with the hon. member for Lapointe.

I feel that the hon. member for Lapointe is intelligent. He understands very well what paragraph (i) is all about, but to serve his own selfish political ends, he goes on and on about the interference of the federal government in the field of education, which is not the case here. In fact, the whole thing is about technical broadcasting facilities, a matter that comes under federal jurisdiction.

The hon. member said earlier that when the Canadian constitution was written, television did not exist. Many things did not exist then. But today if the provinces want to use those very efficient information media, television or radio, for educational purposes, that paragraph must be included in the act, because broadcasting is a matter of federal jurisdiction.

Then, Mr. Chairman, I think that to settle the matter, we should put this clause to a vote and see the result.

Mr. Grégoire: On the point of order—

Mr. Laniel: Mr. Chairman, on this point of order, I should like just like to ask the parliamentary secretary—

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, I had the floor.

Mr. Laniel: Mr. Chairman, I am speaking on the point of order—

Mr. Grégoire: Questions are not asked on a point of order.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: The hon. member for Beauharnois-Salaberry has the floor on the point of order.

Mr. Laniel: Mr. Chairman, the parliamentary secretary has just referred to technical equipment and means used to broadcast educational programs.

I wonder if it would not be more simple to alter subclause (i) which reads as follows:

—facilities should be provided within the Canadian broadcasting system for educational broadcasting;

And to substitute therefor:

—that the Canadian broadcasting system should be in a position to broadcast educational programs.

We would then provide it with the necessary technical tool to broadcast such programs.

This is what I am inquiring about.

Mr. Grégoire: Of course, in that case it would not be the same any more. When clause 2 (i) refers to:

—educational broadcasting facilities—

This means the facilities for the production of the courses it has in views and not necessarily the facilities to broadcast the program. Facilities for broadcasting, namely television and radio stations, already exist.

What we want to-day are facilities to produce films or courses. But this does not fall within the province of the federal government. Anybody can set up a studio and produce educational films, without any authorization being necessary from the federal government. It is the broadcasting station which is within the jurisdiction of the federal government, not the facilities for the production of courses.

To prepare a course is not to broadcast it. Now, when the course is produced, when the equipment has been used to produce a film, then it has to be broadcast, and since education comes under provincial authorities, the Quebec department of education can rent periods of time with the C.B.C., which is a federal agency. If Quebec rents periods of time with private stations, it deals with those private stations which receive their licence from the federal government. The equipment to produce the films and the courses, that is what makes the broadcasting of education possible, in short the elaboration of a program and not the broadcasting on the air, does not come under federal jurisdiction.

That is why I propose to that clause 1—

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: The hon. member for Villeneuve on a point of order.

Mr. Caouette: No, Mr. Chairman, it is not on a point of order but on the clause now under consideration, paragraph (i)—

Mr. Choquette: The word clause in French is not correct.

Mr. Caouette: On paragraph (i). We can see that the hon. member for Lotbinière has just returned from France.

Mr. Chairman, I think this is a storm in a tea cup. The question here concerns simply the definition or use of certain terms, which seems to worry the hon. member for Lapointe and the parliamentary secretary. They both said earlier that the paragraph says:

—facilities should be provided—

Instead of "shall be provided".

However, "should" always becomes "shall" and there is no great difference between the two.

—should be provided within the Canadian broadcasting system for educational broadcasting;

We must not forget, Mr. Chairman, that this new legislation, Bill No. C-163, does not only affect one province, but the whole of Canada. It is not stipulated here that the C.B.C.—if that is the case, and I think it is—will broadcast educational programs according to the standards or the rules laid down by the federal parliament.

Now, I admit that after the words:

—facilities . . . for educational broadcasting.

The words: "in order to meet the needs of the provinces" could have been added.

Even if we recognize that some provinces now have broadcasting facilities, most of them do not. I rather think that if the C.B.C. is getting facilities for educational broadcasting, it is not so much to enter into the field of education but rather to serve the provinces.

If the C.B.C. were to undertake educational broadcasting on a national scale, then each of the provinces would be free and have the right to object to the interference of the C.B.C. or a crown corporation in a field over which it has exclusive provincial jurisdiction. That is my opinion. It seems to me that we must end that storm in a teapot.

I do not believe for a moment that the C.B.C. is getting educational television facilities which could be used in Quebec to serve all the provinces. We are told about an experiment taking place in the Lake St. John district, but it has not been tried yet in Abitibi, in the eastern townships, in Sherbrooke or in the Quebec area. A pilot projet is under way in the Lake St. John-Saguenay area.

If the C.B.C. had the necessary facilities for educational broadcasting, I think that the province of Quebec could use it freely to promote education within its own territory. The same thing could happen in Ontario and in other provinces which do not have at the present time facilities for educational broadcasting.

Mr. Chairman, I believe sincerely that if we agree that broadcasting comes under the federal government, nothing prevents the latter from having full educational broadcasting facilities without being accused of getting into the field of education. On the other hand, if the federal government does not have the right to dispense education, it certainly has the right, for instance, to get such facilities and to put them at the disposal of the provinces to allow them to elaborate an educational broadcasting system that suits them. That is how I understand the meaning of that paragraph (i).

• (4:10 p.m.)

[English]

Mr. Cowan: Mr. Chairman, I regret that the hon. member for Bonaventure was not called to order under standing order 35 when he referred to the hon. member for Lapointe as having spoken on this clause from an egotistical standpoint only. I am opposed to this clause and if the hon. member for Bonaventure wishes to state that I am speaking from an egotistical standpoint I am going to ask the Chair for a ruling under standing order 35.

I spoke for a few minutes last evening on this clause relating to educational television and I stated that education was a provincial matter. While I regret that it is not a national matter I accept the fact that education comes within the purview of the provinces. If the hon. member for Lapointe wishes to defend this particular section of the constitution he has a perfect right to do so.

In commenting on this matter the Secretary of State said that we should bear in mind that the subclause sets out that facilities should be provided within the Canadian broadcasting system for educational broadcasting and that the Canadian broadcasting system embraces both the private and public sectors. I am glad she made that statement but I hope that the educational facilities provided within the Canadian broadcasting system will be provided only by the private sector because the publicly owned sector that is paid for by all the taxpayers of Canada should not be used for educational purposes since education comes entirely within the jurisdiction of the provinces.

If someone tells me that the federally-owned facilities should be used for education and that the provinces will pay for the use of those facilities, then I ask whether the rental charged for the equipment will be sufficient to cover the capital cost of those facilities and the cost of their installation? Many people feel that anything sponsored under the name of education must be good, and I can very well see the publicly owned sector of the Canadian broadcasting system being leased to the provinces for educational purposes at a rental of $1,000 an hour when the actual cost to the Canadian taxpayer, including the capital cost of facilities, the capital cost of films used, the cost of the technicians employed and so on, may amount to $40,000 an hour. Whereupon we will probably be told that since this equipment is used for educational purposes we are helping the provinces in the field of education. I suggest that if the public sector of the Canadian broadcasting system is to be used for educational purposes the provinces should be charged a stiff rental so that all taxpayers throughout Canada will not be contributing to the costs of education of individual provinces which have the sole jurisdiction over education.

I regret very much that subclause (i) is in the bill at all. Education has nothing to do with the federal government; it is a provincial matter. My only solace if the paragraph should carry, though I hope it will not, is that the clause commences with the words "it is hereby declared that". There then follow a number of subclauses, of which (i) reads:

(i) facilities should be provided within the Canadian broadcasting system for educational broadcasting;

I should like to call the attention of the committee to the statement made by the Secretary of State on December 21, as reported on page 5741 of Hansard, when she answered some comments on the broadcasting bill in these words:

—this is a declaratory clause and we have tried to use appropriate language throughout.

I emphasize the fact that it is only a declaratory clause. It even commences with the words "it is hereby declared that".

In one of her comments during the consideration of this bill the Secretary of State referred to the obligations that are imposed by clause 2. I should like to point out that I know of no obligations imposed by clause 2. Nevertheless, when the bill passes people will regard it as the broadcasting policy of Canada.

Since I did not accept her money I listened to the C.B.C. news this morning at eight o'clock. At that time it was stated that these clauses of the bill call for broadcasting in English and in French. They do not "call for"; according to the clause the wording is "it is hereby declared that." If the Secretary of State is going to "call for" obligations and the C.B.C. is going to say that clause 2 of this bill "calls for" facilities to be provided within the Canadian broadcasting system for educational broadcasting, in spite of the fact that the wording at the commencement of the clause is "it is hereby declared that", then my only solace if the clause passes is that people will realize the provisions of the clause are only declarations and are not mandatory.

As I said before, Mr. Chairman, the hon. member for Lapointe and the hon. member for Lotbinière both pointed out that these clauses are only declaratory in nature. They recognize the difference between what is mandatory and what is merely a declaration. But will the administrators of the Canadian broadcasting system, or are they going to tell us that the Secretary of State has referred to them as obligations and that therefore they are called for?

I do not want to see the publicly owned sector of the broadcasting world involved in education as long as that publicly owned sector is owned by the nation. Education is a provincial matter. I admire the way the hon. member for Lapointe defends that right of the provinces under the national constitution and I intend to vote against subclause (i).

• (4:20 p.m.)

[Translation]

Mr. Asselin (Charlevoix): Mr. Chairman, I paused to look more closely at clause 2(i). The wording of this clause, as some hon. members said, gives rise to confusion. In fact, it reads as follows:

—facilities should be provided within the Canadian broadcasting system for educational broadcasting:

If I am not mistaken, this clause opens wide the doors to infiltration by the C.B.C. in a field of exclusive provincial jurisdiction. That does not mean that the C.B.C. would use this clause to get equipment for educational broadcasting as is stipulated, because even if this clause is merely declaratory, it gives the C.B.C. the opportunity to enter into this field. It is not necessary to speak at great length. Several hon. members mentioned, and rightly so, that education is of exclusive provincial jurisdiction.

We notice now that Quebec and the other provinces are anxious to organize their own network of educational television, in the interests of their taxpayers, because they want to preserve at all costs a jurisdiction exclusively theirs. If the C.B.C. decides to get equipment for educational broadcasting, I think it is simply to rent it to provinces which could use it. That is why, I think, I agree with the statement made a moment ago by the hon. member for Villeneuve (Mr. Caouette) who said that a few words might be added to that subclause to clarify it, because it is too ambiguous. The C.B.C. should not be charged with trying to interfere in that field of exclusive provincial jurisdiction.

I am of the opinion that the following words could be added at the end of this paragraph:

—to serve the provinces.

If it were provided that this should exclusively serve the provinces, it might to my mind, clarify the clause and thus certainly prevent some members from accusing the C.B.C. of trying to interfere in an area of exclusive provincial jurisdiction.

So, if the Secretry of State (Miss LaMarsh) would clarify the paragraph, she need only add at the end the words I just suggested: "to serve the provinces."

[Mr. Cowan.]

Mr. Pelletier: Mr. Chairman, I have the feeling that we are now discussing something that should be considered later before the committee on broadcasting, films and assistance to the arts. What we are doing is discussing the contents of a clause that defines no contents, which intentionally does not define the contents, so as to avoid constitutional problems at this stage of the discussion.

I was listening a while ago to the member for Lapointe and I think it might be wise to avoid discussion of this type because he was giving us a constitutional interpretation under which, for instance, since the Canadian National Railways are under the federal government, if educators from the province of Quebec were to travel on these train, it would amount to usurpation of the jurisdiction of the province of Quebec in matters of education. If this argument is pushed to its limit, to its logical conclusion, that is where we would arrive.

At the present time, what precisely is the question? The only thing involved are technical facilities for educational broadcasting. What type of equipment, what role it will play, who will use it and how? This is exactly the discussion which must take place in the committee on broadcasting films and assistance to the arts. We will surely have the opportunity to discuss all this, and all members of the house who are concerned with this—as I am—will have the opportunity to state this concern exactly and put some contents in this clause.

So I think that this discussion is premature. Furthermore, it is also erroneous because it leads us into the wrong path from which we will not be able to free ourselves, since there is no question at the present time of defining this clause. It is simply a matter of stating that, in our Canadian broadcasting system, which as the Secretary of State mentioned, refers to the whole Canadian broadcasting apparatus, there should be provided facilities for educational broadcasting. This does not prejudge in the least the users of such facilities or all the constitutional arrangements to be taken by the governments, as the parliamentary secretary has just pointed out.

If conclusions are to be drawn, the only one that can be is that, of course, the provinces will have to use those facilities, since education is involved. I therefore submit that we are now discussing prematurely a matter which is supposed to be debated later at a predetermined date.

I would therefore ask the members who wish to speed up the business of the house to enable us to pass this extremely important piece of legislation as soon as possible, and to postpone this discussion for the time being, not that it is unjustified, on the contrary, but because I feel it is improper at this stage of the discussion of the bill before us.

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, I would be ready to accept the proposal of the hon. member for Hochelaga (Mr. Pelletier). He admits that the clause is not precise, that its contents is not definite and vague and he asks us to postpone the debate to a date which has already been set. I would agree with him, provided that passage of this clause shall also be postponed to that date.

If the hon. member for Hochelaga accepts the proposal for postponement of passage of this clause following the discussion in committee, I fully agree with him.

Evidently at that time, the debate will be better prepared. During consideration in committee, this clause will be clarified. But he admits that the clause is not precise, that it is vague and indefinite.

On the other hand, we are asked to pass it as is, and we are told that it will be debated later on. I believe we should first debate it, define its wording, and clarify its meaning before passing it. If a debate on this matter is anticipated, why not delay the passing of this clause until the end of the debate in committee, which seems to me would be the normal process?

Would the hon. parliamentary secretary to the Secretary of State be ready to accept that, since there is going to be a debate in order to define and specify the meaning of this clause? Would not the hon. parliamentary secretary be prepared, as suggested by the hon. member for Hochelaga, to postpone the debate as well as the passing of this clause?

Mr. Béchard: Postpone the debate, very well, but we are now discussing the Broadcasting Act and since educational broadcasting will necessarily be using airwaves, since radio or television is concerned here—the clause before us merely provides the use of television for educational purposes, under the authority which will be established later on during the discussion of this bill.

• (4:30 p.m.)

Once again, it is not a question of studying education or educational television. It is merely a question of placing under the jurisdiction of the Canadian Radio-Television Council that agency which later on will be entrusted by another bill with all the questions pertaining to educational television once the matter has been studied by the committee to which it will be deferred. The member for Lapointe (Mr. Grégoire) can then participate in the discussions and he will soon have the opportunity of doing so. That is the object the legislator has in mind by introducing paragraph (i) in the Broadcasting Act.

Mr. Grégoire: That is precisely what I had in mind, Mr. Chairman. First of all, we are asked to accept a vague principle, on which we are not too clear; later on that principle is destroyed. If the definition and the standards of the principle are not acceptable, we will then be told: The principle of educational television has already been accepted in Bill No. C-163.

The hon. member for Villeneuve (Mr. Caouette) said a while ago: If Ottawa wants to interfere in fields of provincial jurisdiction, let the provinces protest.

Well, we have direct interference here.

The hon. member for Charlevoix (Mr. Asselin) expressed his fears in the face of that interference. But if we accept the principle of interference, it will then be far more difficult to force retreat. We all know that is the way it goes: First you open the door, and once it is open, it is easy to go in.

The hon. member for Villeneuve argued that if the C.B.C. had been in charge of the school television project, the whole region would probably have benefited therefrom. But when the C.B.C. or the federal government make an experiment, they do it on a regional scale because experimenting, broadcasting programs is not everything. Quebec, in its pilot project, is not only broadcasting programs: a staff of research assistants contact the students—30,000 persons are enrolled in these televised courses—in order to learn how well the lectures have been received and how to improve them according to the results on these 30,000 persons.

Such an experiment, covering the whole of Quebec, would not have met with so much success, since the results of the courses could not have been analysed in depth.

Of course, the Quebec government could have extended the courses through all the private stations in the province, but it did not do so, because it preferred to have the experiment limited to one small area, in order to learn what effect it had on the people following the courses. There are hundreds of teachers who meet with some of the individuals attending the lectures on television, so as to be able to measure the rate of progress.

That is the reason why I say it is not because the C.B.C. would have been in charge of these courses that the experiment would have been carried out throughout the province. The Quebec government could also have extended the courses throughout the province, but if it has limited them to one area only, it is precisely because the project is still at the experimental stage and results are unknown. To know, the people attending the lectures must be interviewed, and the experiment must be limited to a region in order to be profitable.

We are told that the provinces can oppose, if it cares to, the C.B.C. stepping into the private sector. But once it has started something, it is much more difficult to make the federal government back down.

If the C.B.C. gets into the field of education, people will say: The airwaves come under federal jurisdiction. That is true, but what sort of education will then be provided? Will people perhaps be taught how to use LSD? That is the sort of education which one could expect these courses to provide.

Would it not be more reasonable to leave this matter in the hands of the authority which is truly responsible for education, that is, the department of education of the province of Quebec?

I agree with the hon. member for Hochelaga (Mr. Pelletier) who says that this is indefinite, vague, equivocal. Since the hon. member for Hochelaga tells us that the matter will be studied later, I am glad, but I would answer that we should at least wait until we have studied the matter before we adopt this clause.

The hon. member for Charlevoix said, quite rightly, that this opens a door. Of course it opens a door. And when the door is open, it is much more difficult to close it, because the federal government does not abandon an area once it has entered into it; it stays there instead.

In the case of hospital insurance, it was said that health came under provincial jurisdiction. The federal government interfered in that field and it was said: Those who do not want hospital insurance are not forced to take it. However, the federal government passed it with this comment: The provinces are not doing anything about it.

In this case, the provinces have started to do something about it. They have arrived at the stage preceding that which the federal government is about to undertake, that is the stage of experimentation and pilot projects.

Now that hospital insurance has been passed, we are taxed to pay for it and even if the province does not want it, we are still taxed. If Quebec, which already has its school television project, does not want that of the federal government, it will still have to pay taxes for it. We are always treated in the same way.

The Quebec premier said that he did not want the hospital insurance, for the time being, but the Quebec people will still pay taxes for that insurance which will be implemented in other provinces. Do you think that the federal government—

Miss LaMarsh: Ontario too.

Mr. Grégoire: But Ontario has no more sense, because the reason it has given is that it would not be normal for other provinces to pay taxes—

Mr. Béchard: When citizens are sick, is it not Mr. Johnson who pays the bills?

Mr. Grégoire: Organize another monetary system. Maybe the provinces will then have money to pay for those who are sick. It is our system that is sick, and the individuals cannot be treated as they would like to be.

Mr. Caouette: Nobody introduces programs to take care of that system.

Mr. Grégoire: Nobody introduces any remedy to cure the system that is sick.

Instead of taking care of problems that come directly under provincial jurisdiction, why is the federal government not taking its responsibilities in the areas that are within its jurisdiction?

Unemployment is increasing, for instance. That problem is a federal matter. Why not spend the money of the federal government to fight unemployment? When the provinces are already spending money for education in schools, why does the federal government also get into that field? We pay twice for the same thing. That is what bowls me over, that is what I do not understand: Always spend money twice to achieve only one result.

Even if there are two sets of educational broadcasting facilities, there will be only one series of courses. But money will have been spent twice. We always pay twice to achieve only one result.

I am saying that the federal government is interfering in a field of provincial jurisdiction. I am more afraid than the hon. member for Villeneuve who says that the provinces have only to protest and to object to that. I think that the experience of the past proves that even when the provinces protest, the federal government does not step back.

That is probably the reason why the provinces decided some time ago not to withdraw when they encroach upon fields of federal jurisdiction. When the Quebec government was directly invited to attend a conference on education in Gabon, the federal government protested saying that that was its jurisdiction. But the provincial government did not withdraw. Why? Because the federal government never moves back when it interferes in fields of exclusive provincial jurisdiction. And education is of exclusive provincial jurisdiction. I would be quite happy to see the hon. member for Villeneuve support that principle of the constitution which is one of the guarantees of Quebec rights.

If this bill is passed, it will be exactly the twentieth which will sanction the direct or indirect, and more often indirect interference of the federal government in the field of education, because the federal government comes in by the back door and never by the front door, when it interferes in the field of education.

It is exactly the twentieth bill of that kind and every year, others are added, so that before long the federal government will be controlling the educational system in Quebec.

I would rather see the hon. member for Villeneuve support me and try to defend the jurisdiction of the province of Quebec. I would not say this, if Quebec were inactive, because something must be done in that field. But Quebec has been acting and is far ahead of the federal government. Why should we not stubbornly defend one of the jurisdictions which still belong to the province of Quebec? Why not defend such jurisdiction? Education is one of the most important fields and the hon. member for Charlevoix rightly expressed his concern before that new intrusion of the federal government in a field of provincial jurisdiction.

The hon. member for Hochelaga said so: it is indefinite, vague, nebulous, but we shall discuss it later on; let us accept this bill, even if it is vague and indefinite.

Mr. Béchard: He never said that.

Mr. Grégoire: It amounted to the same thing. The hon. member for Hochelaga said: Let us accept this clause and, later on, something has been anticipated in the committee on broadcasting, films and assistance to the arts, as regards the study of educational broadcasting.

Before accepting the principle, let us see what it involves. The clause is far from precise. It may lead to all kinds of interpretations and, if passed, it can allow for an almost unlimited intrusion on the part of the federal government in the field of education. Let us see what it says.

• (4:40 p.m.)

It is simple, I mean brief. It does not say much but it opens all the doors. It says the following:

—facilities should be provided within the Canadian broadcasting system for educational broadcasting;

It is as simple as that, but it keeps many doors open. That is why I am firmly opposed to this paragraph.

Mr. Asselin (Charlevoix): Does the parliamentary secretary to the Secretary of State not deem it advisable to add, at the end of the paragraph, the words I mentioned earlier to the effect that the educational broadcasting facilities should be used by the provinces, or something of the kind, so as to clarify, as suggested earlier by the hon. member for Hochelaga (Mr. Pelletier), that clause which is not quite clear?

The parliamentary secretary himself admits that those educational broadcasting facilities will meet the needs of the provinces. Then, why not add those five words to clause 2(i)? I feel this would clarify and simplify a paragraph that I find vague and which encourages the intrusion of the federal government in the field of education.

Mr. Béchard: Mr. Chairman, I think that the suggestion of the hon. member for Charlevoix, in spite of his good intentions, is unacceptable. As a matter of fact, not only the provinces are involved, since it could be a provincial organization rather than merely a province.

Mr. Asselin (Charlevoix): If it is an organization within a province, the federal government cannot stick its nose into it; it is up to the province to legislate on educational matters.

Mr. Béchard: There is no question of sticking our nose into education. It has been said since the start that education is not involved. The point is to provide the provinces with technical facilities for broadcasting and television. That is why it is said that this discussion is somewhat premature.

Mr. Latulippe: Mr. Chairman, I shall be very brief. I simply want to make a few remarks.

I support to a large extent the suggestions of the member for Lapointe. The paragraph under consideration does not comply with provincial jurisdiction from the constitutional viewpoint and furthermore it is far from clear. For these reasons, I think the committee should withdraw this paragraph and bring it down later after consideration by the committee on broadcasting, films and assistance to the arts. Many people have made this suggestion which I strongly support.

To my mind, this is not clear and might be misinterpreted. It is so confused that it is impossible to draw clear conclusions from it.

Then, since it lends to confusion, it is absolutely necessary that this clause be withdrawn and considered further. Therefore, with the consent of the house, I would ask the committee to withdraw it and give it further consideration.

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, the parliamentary secretary to the Secretary of State just made a remark that leaves me sceptical. The hon. member for Charlevoix is asking the parliamentary secretary if he could not add, at the end of subclause (i), the following words: "for the needs of the provinces".

This means that the facilities would be used for the provinces' needs. The parliamentary secretary rises and says: "We cannot mention that, in case there would be an organization or another group."

Therefore, an association could use that educational broadcasting equipment, without the knowledge of the provinces, to broadcast school courses. That is what I think I understood from the answer given by the parliamentary secretary. It is what the hon. member for Charlevoix also seems to have understood.

Then, think about the tremendous power of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation which has a whole educational broadcasting equipment. A group, let say the Canadian Association for the Education of French-speaking or English-speaking Canadians comes up to the body which owns that educational broadcasting equipment and says: Our group would like to use your equipment to give some courses. The federal government is free to decide whether or not it will make its equipment available to that group. Just before that answer, the Secretary of State had been more cautious; she was careful not to give that answer. In fact, she did not mention that possibility.

Does that mean that the equipment may be made available to any group which would like to use it? Would the hon. parliamentary secretary clarify his thinking on that? Could the equipment be made available to any association? Is that what the parliamentary secretary means?

[English]

Miss LaMarsh: Mr. Chairman, I think the hon. member will have to wait to see the draft bill. Then we will be in a position to hear from a number of groups. My hon. friend obviously knows absolutely nothing about what is going on in this field outside the province of Quebec. In most of the other provinces there are very active organizations which are most anxious to use any facilities which might be available. Of course, matters which are extracurricular would have to be dealt with by the provinces but there may be things which are not extracurricular because this provision applies to teenagers and adults in many fields. There are many parts of the federal government which are responsible for education. As you know, the federal government is responsible for the education of Eskimos and, in some instances, for the education of Indians. There is also the matter of education with regard to re-employment and retraining. A great many departments of government will be interested and have already indicated their interest in using the facilities when they are available in furtherance of their responsibilities, not in furtherance of education as it exists under provincial jurisdiction.

There are hundreds and hundreds and hundreds of questions to be answered in the whole field of educational television in Canada before any facilities are built. These facilities will be enormously expensive. The committee will have to delve into this matter very deeply. If my hon. friend really is interested in educational television, one way in which he can find out more about it is to assist in the passage of this legislation. The chairman of the committee on broadcasting, films and assistance to the arts has had to postpone the hearings on educational television until the committee of the whole has dealt with this legislation because the members of the committee cannot be in two places at the same time. All I can say to my hon. friend is that if we want to have school or adult educational broadcasts we must have the facilities with which to do this. All that this part of clause 2 says is that those facilities, wherever they are and whatever is broadcast over them, will have to be a part of the broadcasting system of Canada. I am sure my hon. friend does not disagree with this.

My hon. friend has been occupying the time of the committee now for almost an hour and a half on something which really depends on the legislation as it finally comes to the house after the subject of educational television has been considered by the committee.

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, those are exactly the answers which I find alarming. The minister just told us that there will not only be an educational television, but also Departments of Education, groups and federal departments which could use educational television, in short, groups which never have any educational jurisdiction. The minister states that there are hundreds of ways to use educational broadcasting equipment. But she does not specify them. We are told that some decision will be taken later. We are asked to approve that principle immediately even though later its terms may be completely disastrous. The minister pointed out that the discussion has been going on for 1½ hours. But 1½ hours, before such an important intrusion by the federal government in the educational field, is not long. Indeed, the objection should be much more extended and be accepted by the minister.

The hon. minister wants to expedite the work. I shall ask her whether she would agree to suspend consideration of subclause (i) until 8 p.m., to give me an opportunity to draft an amendment more in line with what the hon. member for Charlevoix and the hon. member for Beauharnois-Salaberry (Mr. Laniel) were suggesting earlier. Would the hon. minister be agreeable to suspending the consideration of subclause (i) until 8 P.M., so that I may draft a satisfactory amendment?

• (4:50 p.m.)

[English]

Miss LaMarsh: I think my hon. friend is displaying quite a bit of temerity in asking me to co-operate with him in any way.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Is the committee ready for the question?

Some hon. Members: Question.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Shall subclause (i) carry?

Mr. Grégoire: No.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Shall subclause (i) carry on division?

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, I suggest that we vote on clause 2 (i).

[English]

Subclause (i) of clause 2 agreed to: Yeas, 49; nays, 11.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: I declare the subclause carried. We will now proceed to subclause (j).

Canadian Policy on Broadcasting

Mr. Noble: Mr. Chairman, I think it is about time the attitude of the C.B.C. was changed. In most instances the man who pays the bills calls the shots. If any control is ever going to be exercised over the expensive top-heavy bureaucracy it must come from this chamber.

Miss LaMarsh: How?

Mr. Noble: Nothing is going to happen if we continue simply to hope the problem will disappear. The C.B.C. is a public body and should be responsible through parliament to the people of Canada.

There has been a great deal of discussion about this bill because we are living in a democratic country. In a democracy nothing is so precious as free expression. That is why members on both sides of the house are so concerned about the implications of this bill on broadcasting.

It is not my intention to review the whole scene in so far as broadcasting is concerned. I am concerned mainly about freedom of expression, that is, freedom to speak and freedom to know. We hear a great deal about freedom of speech and very little about freedom of learning, the right in a democratic society to have full information and to have both sides of an issue factually presented. We also have the right to see to it that our channels of expression are neither monopolized nor muzzled by a group representing a particular interest or point of view. If the national channels belong to the people, let the people speak. Let the people have a voice. Let us not have imposed on the people alien and destructive creeds and philosophies, the property of a small, self-perpetuating group. That is what has been happening.

In a free and democratic society a state-owned broadcasting system is something of an anomaly because it gives to the state control over a medium of expression which today is the most powerful medium in our society. If we believe in freedom of speech and freedom of expression, we must regard the state as an intruder in the field of free expression.

We must be suspicious of state control and state intervention. The socialists say that the state and the people are synonymous but history suggests differently. History shows that governments and those in governments, administrators and those in administrations, bureaucrats and those in the bureaucracies, are human. They are not immune to human instincts such as the lust for power, the urge to self-perpetuation, the urge to remove themselves from the power of public censure or public criticism. We must at all times be careful of the power we place in the hands of the state and the hands of bureaucracy. Governments must at regular intervals be brought back forcibly and sometimes brutally to the realization that they are the servants, not the masters of the people. The more power we in this house stand ready to surrender to governments, administrations and bureaucrats, the fewer will be the possibilities of bringing governments to book and taking them to task on the use of their powers.

The C.B.C. is a mighty and powerful organization in this country today. Who can control it? It is spending $150 million of the people's money this year. We had the spectacle of a minister of the crown saying that the C.B.C. suffered from "rotten management". They laughed at her. The C.B.C. are the modern untouchables; they cannot be controlled, they cannot be criticized, they cannot be questioned and they cannot be examined. We as a parliament have been lax in our duty.

Any organization spending millions of dollars of the taxpayers' money must be responsible to parliament. Yet day after day in this very chamber we hear the statement by well-meaning individuals: "We cannot interfere with the C.B.C." Of course we can interfere with the C.B.C. and we must interfere with the C.B.C. Are we going to maintain from the public purse an organization in this country which is above criticism, above control and will not respond to suggestion, an organization which throws money around on trifling and pointless extravagances and has now reached the point where it is above ministers, above the government and above parliament? I for one am not. As long as parliament votes money belonging to the people of Canada parliament has a duty to see to it that that money is properly spent. Parliament cannot endure without financial responsibility.

We as parliamentarians have submitted tamely while bureaucrats and government administrators have taken over powers belonging to the people. It is time to call the C.B.C. to account. It is time to demand to know where the money is going. It is time to insist on an accounting for every last dollar spent by the C.B.C. and I do not intend to accept the C.B.C. estimates when they come down until there is such an accounting.

What of Bill C-163? It does nothing to place the C.B.C. under some sort of governing power. It simply increases the powers and freedom from responsibility which the C.B.C. already possesses. It stipulates that in any conflict private broadcasting takes second place. For the first time in a democratic nation we have free enterprise legislated into a second class category. One would expect that from a party with the traditions of the Liberal party. It has always been a party of centralization, socialism in disguise, a wolf in sheep's clothing. This is the true face of Liberalism. This bill perpetuates the uncontrollable and ungovernable monolith that is the C.B.C., relegates private broadcasting to an inferior position and makes it possible for the C.B.C. to extend the swollen powers which it already possesses.

I do not deny that the C.B.C. has done some good things for Canada. Private broadcasting has also done some good things for Canada. It has become obvious in recent months that there is at the core of the C.B.C. a group whose only interest is the total destruction of our institutions. Night after night, day after day, week after week, we have had purveyed to Canadians by the C.B.C. programs of a nature to destroy faith in our institutions and our society. Whence came the mandate of these people? Who elected them? Where do they derive the right to impose on Canadians their half-baked, immature and often imported opinions? It is not freedom of speech when the massive resources of the state-owned medium are taken over by a small group in the interests of a destructive and derisive philosophy. If these people want to preach anarchy and destruction, let them hire a hall. There is nothing in Magna Carta or the Bill of Rights that says they are entitled to do so at the expense of the Canadian taxpayers.

• (5:00 p.m.)

The C.B.C. has suffered dismally from a failure of management. The Secretary of State, with that remarkable propensity of her sex for perception, made a statement that was a factual description of what is going on in the C.B.C. It is time to halt the headless horsemen of the C.B.C. and to restore to that organization and its programming a sense of perspective. The pious proclamations in this bill and in countless other instruments put forward by this government, the wishful thinking of royal commissions, and the hopeful prognostications of other groups have not in fact been realized. Rather than protecting, defending and encouraging freedom and our way of life the C.B.C., or a section of it, has been a Trojan horse in our midst, attacking, destroying and spreading filth and disease in this nation. Some may think such language is too strong. I am not concerned about that. I go by the opinions of Canadians in their hundreds and thousands who now regard this organization with the same mixture of horror and dread as a runaway engine. That is what it has become.

I think this bill is too strongly favourable to the C.B.C. I think they should be given fewer, not greater, powers. I do not think they should be legislated into a superior position over private broadcasting, any more than the C.N.R. should be legislated into a superior position over the C.P.R. or government employees legislated into a preferred position over employees in private enterprise. At any rate, this is not what my constituents sent me here to do. I will oppose any attempt to foster, expand, enlarge, encourage or entrench the C.B.C. in any manner or fashion until parliament is given some reason to believe that this organization will act in a responsible manner.

We all have the greatest respect for Dr. Davidson. We have considerable sympathy for and understanding of the difficult task he has agreed to accept. Everyone will recall the relief with which the Prime Minister announced his acceptance. One can only hope that Dr. Davidson will not become a prisoner of the C.B.C. untouchables. I believe he can count on the support of parliament and its members in those actions which he feels he must take to return the C.B.C. to a sense of public responsibility and public ownership, rather than ownership by a small, irresponsible and reckless group. Canadians want to be proud of the C.B.C. They want it to do the job it was set up to do. In the past two years they have had little reason to be proud of or to give support, financial or otherwise, to a public organization which has run amuck.

According to the Auditor General's report and the public accounts for 1967, the C.B.C. spent $141 million on the production and distribution of programs. Of this amount $98 million was for production, $27 million for distribution and $13 million for administration. This is a vast amount of money. Advertising revenue from programs totalled $35 million. There is, therefore, a shortfall of approximately $100 million in meeting expenses, and this money comes from the Canadian taxpayer.

Surely, Mr. Chairman, an agency coming to parliament and asking for $112 million should not object to giving a few facts about its operations. There is a necessity for a rigid and detailed financial examination of C.B.C. programming. If we are to spend $112 million on the C.B.C., we must ask ourselves whether that organization is fulfilling its purpose. This question is dealt with in the bill under clause 2 (g)(i), which provides as follows:

(g) the national broadcasting service should

(i) be a balanced service of information, enlightenment and entertainment—

This is not what we have been getting. Surely the government and the C.B.C. must be aware by now that there is something wrong in the way the C.B.C. if fulfilling its purpose. What we have been getting is an unbalanced, unenlightened service, dealing to a considerable extent with propaganda. We have had a steady parade of drug addicts, people of doubtful gender, purveyors of obscenity and apostles of revolution. Why should the national facilities be use to provide a platform for those who are destroying our institutions? We are in a situation where the state is being asked to subsidize its own destruction and society is officiating at its own suicide. All across this country Canadians are fed up with the parade of eccentrics purveyed by the C.B.C. in the name of culture. They do not want any more.

C.B.C. expenditures have gone up 18.2 per cent over 1966. Are we supposed to endorse this? C.B.C. loans from the government now total $55 million. Subsidized dissent comes high. There is no objection to dissent but there is objection when dissent becomes the monopoly of the few and when the enormous power of state owned facilities is turned over to a small group.

I ask the committee to turn to page 23 of volume III of the public accounts of Canada for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1967. I ask the minister what action she and the government have taken to correct the situation revealed there? I refer to a letter from the Auditor General of Canada to the Secretary of State. In that letter the Auditor General points out that the C.B.C. board of directors in December, 1966, granted to a retiring vice president a bonus of $25,000. The Auditor General says they had no right and no authority to do this. We have had this kind of situation before. I do not know the name of the person in question and I do not want to know it. I want to know what action was taken to recover the money. The Auditor General said in his letter dated May 29, 1967:

> At a meeting held in December, 1966, the board of directors passed a resolution that the vice president whose term of office expired on January 25, 1967, be granted a retiring allowance equivalent to one year's salary.
>
> In my opinion, this resolution was not within the competence of the directors of the corporation and payment of the retiring allowance purported to be granted thereby was not within the powers of the corporation under the Broadcasting Act.

The Auditor General went on to say that the amount of $25,000 was not shown in the financial statement relating to remuneration of directors. The minister received this letter last May. What was done about it? Was the money returned? I cite this as an example of financial irresponsibility of a kind to cause great uneasiness to taxpayers everywhere in this country.

Perhaps what I have said has been critical to the extreme, but it has been stated that extremism in the defence of liberty is no vice; moderation in the pursuit of justice is no virtue. In politics, as in love, timing is everything. I think this is the time and the place to put my observations on the record.

I would like to conclude on a positive note. I firmly believe that Dr. Davidson, in assuming the presidency of the C.B.C, faces the greatest challenge of any leader in Canada today. I also believe that the C.B.C., in its position of great influence, can be the most prominent power in building strength into the spiritual, moral and economic fibre of this nation and at an opportune time when Canada stands poised on the threshold of her second century.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Shall subclause (j) carry?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: The committee will now revert to clause 2 (h). Shall subclause (h) carry?

Mr. Sherman: Mr. Chairman, it is my intention to move an amendment to this subclause. Without speaking at tedious length on the reasons therefor, I thank the minister for having stood this clause yesterday and giving me an opportunity to speak to the clause and move my amendment today. I told the committee that I intended to move an amendment to this subclause because I am unhappy with the authoritarian and arbitrary type of permanent decision the present wording would seem to make where disputes between private broadcasters and the national service, the C.B.C., are concerned. My amendment is:

That in subclause (h) of clause 2 all the words after the word "system" be struck out, and the following substituted therefor: "the public interest must prevail".

Therefore, Mr. Chairman, the subclause, if amended along the lines I have suggested, would read as follows:

(h) where any conflict arises between the objectives of the national broadcasting service and the interests of the private element of the Canadian broadcasting system, the public interest must prevail.

• (5:10 p.m.)

My reasons for suggesting this amendment were expressed in the debate on December 21 and I have made reference to them on the two or three occasions when I have spoken during the clause by clause examination of the legislation in the past week and a half. My reasons are that the clause as worded at the present time lays down a rigid, codified decision of a permanent nature from which there is no appeal and no escape. I envision a situation where possibly two, three or four years from now, some time in the future when all the innuendoes and philosophizing in this debate have been concluded, when the legislation is written into the statute books and becomes the code under which the broadcasting authorities, administrators and operators in this country carry out their function, a dispute might arise over a given broadcasting prize, whether it be a channel, a frequency, a type of program or an event available for transmission. In such a case the authority—the B.B.G. or the Canadian television commission as it may become known—would have one firm guide line under which to act and there would be no opportunity for the private operator to have his case fairly heard.

I say that because I think any honest and conscientious examination of the wording will lead all hon. members to the same conclusion. On looking at these words one finds that the proposed legislation stipulates that where any conflict arises between the objectives of the national broadcasting service, that is, the C.B.C., and the interests of the private element of the Canadian broadcasting system, the objectives of the national broadcasting service must prevail. These objectives can cover a wide variety of interests, plans, hopes, dreams and aspirations.

The word "objectives" is most ambiguous, far reaching and all embracing. It is open to many interpretations. It is possible, as I suggested, that the objective of the C.B.C. might be to obtain a certain channel, frequency or access to the coverage of an event. I believe that this type of objective was not envisaged by those who drafted the legislation. The framers of the legislation and those of us who were exposed to the wording in the standing committee on broadcasting had a more abstract and perhaps a more esoteric idea of the objectives. But the fact is that in the harsh light of dawn and under the harsh light of examination by members of this committee the term as it stands in the proposed legislation is fraught with difficulties and dangers so far as the freedom of the Canadian society in the future is concerned.

The amendment I propose eliminates the danger of authoritarian permanency which is contained in the original wording and provides that where such a conflict arises the public interest must prevail. I suggest that this in an entirely acceptable position to all members of the house regardless of their political persuasion, regardless of their partisanship on the question of broadcasting, and regardless of whether they favour public over private broadcasting or vice-versa. It is the public interest that is important, not the interests of the national broadcasting service or its objectives, nor the interests of private broadcasters or their objectives.

Therefore I move, seconded by the hon. member for Halifax (Mr. McCleave):

That in subclause (h) of clause 2 all the words after the word "system" be struck out, and the following substituted therefor: "the public interest must prevail;"

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Is the committee ready for the question?

Mr. Davis: Mr. Chairman, I would like to say a word or two on this amendment. I agree substantially with what the hon. member for Winnipeg South has said. There are two other words in the clause that I do not like. I do not like the word "objectives" in so far as it relates to the national broadcasting service, the C.B.C., and I do not like the word "interests" in so far as it is applied to the private sector. My reason for saying that is that the clause as it stands says in effect that the C.B.C. will always have its way and that the will of the C.B.C. will always prevail. In the clause as it now stands we are comparing objectives on the one hand and interests on the other. Surely we should be comparing objectives with objectives, or interests with interests, and not clothing the plans of the C.B.C. in the best possible raiment by using the word "objectives" and downgrading the plans and intentions of the private sector by calling them merely "interests".

We have been told that the broadcasting system in Canada is made up of two substantial sectors, the public sector and the private sector, and that both are in many ways equally important. My understanding is that in terms of capital investment or employment they are comparable in size and are doing a comparable job for the country. Therefore in this respect both merit consideration. In other words, the terms of reference given to the over-all broadcasting authority which should arbitrate between them should a conflict arise should not be such as to load the dice heavily in favour of one sector. I suggest that under the present wording the dice are heavily loaded in favour of the national broadcasting service.

I suggest also that the clause as it stands downgrades the powers of the over-all regulatory authority. If the objectives of the national broadcasting service must always prevail against the private interests, then surely many cases can be settled out of court without any argument. Surely the C.B.C. will have little difficulty in proving its case. All it needs to say is that its plans are consistent with its objectives and then in effect it is home free. Rarely will it say that its plans are in fact in conflict with its objectives.

I can imagine cases such as the following. Let us assume that the C.T.V. network has lined up the Grey cup game, as I believe it has in fact done for the next period of years in a contractual arrangement with the Canadian football league, and the national broadcasting service comes along as it did some years back, and says that it wants a piece of the Grey cup broadcast. All it needs to do is to point to one of those wonderful objectives which are outlined in subclause (g), that of covering most or all of Canada, and it is home free.

• (5:20 p.m.)

Its objective of covering all of Canada is consistent with its plan to get the Grey cup broadcast, or vice-versa. This plan is consistent with one of these great objectives.

I would much rather see this clause provide that when there is a conflict between the national broadcasting service and the private sector the issue be resolved by the over-all authority and that the criteria be the public interest. I do not like the word "objectives" and I do not like the word "interests". I do not like the way one is attached to the national broadcasting service and the other to the private sector to the detriment of the latter. I would support the amendment as it has been put forward and I would certainly like to see the words "objectives" and "interests" struck out of this clause.

Miss LaMarsh: This subclause was the subject of considerable discussion during the meetings of the broadcasting committee. I should like to say, in the first place, that I cannot agree with the amendment or with the member who supports it or with the amendment similar to this which he said he had in mind. These are the reasons: This subclause has to be carefully read. It does not oppose objectives with objectives, nor does it oppose interests with interests. The subclause opposes, and this is the first thing you have to be careful to read, the objectives of the national broadcasting service with the interests of the private broadcasters.

Presumably it is the public interest for which this committee is legislating. Clause 2 contains the objectives of the national broadcasting service as set out by this committee. This clause and subsequently clause 15 give responsibility currently to the B.B.G. or the council, whatever name may be given to the regulatory body, for seeing that the C.B.C. carries out these objectives. So there is no question of opposing objectives and private interests. It is not the C.B.C. which sets itself up as the judge; it is the regulatory authority which must decide, first, whether the objectives as laid down by parliament are in conflict with the interests and, if so, parliament clearly says that the objectives of the public service are the ones which must prevail.

Now, why is this so? It is so because parliament has made a difference, and always has made a difference, between the private broadcasters and the public agencies which parliament has selected and for which it has provided money to carry out the operations. The parliamentary committee, in studying the white paper and in studying this bill, dealt at considerable length with this problem. It was because the parliamentary committee came back in its report on the white paper two or three times to the difference and underlined the importance of the C.B.C. that we have specifically dealt with the C.B.C. in a slightly different way from the private interests. The concluding paragraph of the report on the white paper on broadcasting, over the signature of the hon. member of York-Scarborough, presented on March 21, 1967, reads:

> We express our conviction that the primacy of the public sector should be the paramount and continuing objective of the new legislation; that we must make more effective, and not undermine the main instrument by which "national consciousness may be fostered and sustained and national unity still further strengthened."

The committee, as I say, repeatedly underlined the fact it felt there was a position of primacy for the C.B.C. While I do not believe I have ever told a joke before in the House of Commons, this decision which members took reminds me of an old story I heard about a man who had been married twice. His first wife was named Matilda and she died and was buried. When the old man was dying he was asked about the place of his burial. His second wife's name was Bertha. The old man said, "When I die, bury me between Matilda and Bertha". He thought for a while and then he said, "Tilt me a little toward Bertha". It seems to me that really is what parliament wants us to do. If there is a primacy as between the private and public sectors, parliament feels it should be given to the instrument of the people of Canada in broadcasting, the public sector.

This clause does not say, nor is it intended to say, that when the interests of the private sector are opposed to the interests of the public sector the interests of the public sector shall hold sway. If it said that I would agree with hon. members that it would intend that the C.B.C., whenever it came into conflict with private broadcasters, must win. This is not the case. It is the objectives this parliament has laid down which must be paramount. Otherwise you would have a situation where the B.B.G., or whatever the new regulatory body is, would be put in the position that it would have to try to hold the C.B.C. paramount over the interests of the private broadcasters. I do not believe anyone really means to argue that.

I cannot, therefore, agree with the amendment which is offered nor with those who support it from this side. I should like to say that it is quite clear what would happen if you oppose interests and interests, but you must realize that is not what is being done here. It is not intended that the C.B.C. shall, wherever it finds itself in a conflict such as the one cited by my hon. friend from Vancouver, automatically win. It is only where the objectives are in conflict that the public service must be upheld.

Mr. Thompson: Mr. Chairman, I have listened with interest to what the minister has said. In spite of the reference she made to the report of the broadcasting committee it seems to me she has missed entirely the over-all objective of this bill. This bill is not intended merely to outline the objectives of the C.B.C., the public broadcasting service, but is intended to outline general responsibilities in the entire area of broadcasting. I agree that subclause (g) spells out the objectives of the C.B.C. There is nothing in this bill, and I do not believe there should be anything in it, stating that these are the only objectives. Surely the bill, as its title, the Broadcasting Act, implies, is intended to outline the general responsibilities in the field of broadcasting. The bill does specify certain objectives as the intended objectives of the public broadcasting service, but it is wrong to say that the private sector does not have objectives, that it only has interests.

The reasons the hon. lady advanced in answer to the arguments of the hon. member for Coast-Capilano seem to me, therefore, to be entirely irrelevant to the points with which we are dealing in this subclause. I found myself in complete agreement with the hon. member for Coast-Capilano, and that is why I intend to support the amendment. I regret that the amendment does not go farther than it does. I regret also that the hon. member did not move his suggested amendment to the amendment because I think it is more inclusive and expresses in a more effective way the objective of the hon. member for Winnipeg South. Whether we are placing interests against interests or objectives against objectives, in my opinion this clause is intended to mean that where any conflict arises between the public broadcasting system on the one hand and the private sector on the other the overriding consideration is to meet the public need. I think this is what the hon. member for Winnipeg South was trying to say. We are not attempting to favour the public broadcasting system.

• (5:30 p.m.)

I think it is entirely wrong to say that we have to tilt this legislation toward the one and away from the other. The legislation must be fair when conflicts arise and if there is any tilt it should be toward the public interest and not the public broadcasting service. Although the argument of the minister may have some basis if it is considered that the purpose of this subclause is to tilt the legislation toward the public broadcasting service, nevertheless I contend that this approach is wrong. It is the general public interest that must be the deciding factor and therefore this subclause should be rephrased.

I hope that the hon. member for Winnipeg South will make his amendment a little more inclusive by amending the wording. If this is not possible, Mr. Chairman, when we have disposed of the amendment there should be a further amendment expressing the thoughts presented by the hon. member for Coast-Capilano.

Mr. Wahn: Mr. Chairman, the explanation of the minister is most helpful but it does seem to me that some steps should be taken to clarify the meaning of this subclause. Subclause (h) provides:

(h) where any conflict arises between the objectives of the national broadcasting service—

That means the C.B.C.

—and the interests of the private element—

The private stations.

—of the Canadian broadcasting system, the objectives of the national broadcasting service must prevail;

This could mean that in the event of a conflict between the state-owned C.B.C. and the private stations it must be resolved in the interests of the state-owned C.B.C. This does not make any sense at all to me. Generally speaking, we in Canada, tend to have mixed systems. For example, in the transportation field we have the state-owned Canadian National Railways and the privately owned Canadian Pacific Railway. It would be complete nonsense to me if we were to provide in the National Transportation act that in the event of a conflict between the C.N.R. and the C.P.R. the interests of the C.N.R. should automatically prevail. Yet this is what we seem to be saying in this subclause. At any rate, it might be interpreted in that way.

I would suggest to the minister if I may, Mr. Chairman, that the word "objectives" at least should be clarified. What is meant in this legislation by the reference to the objectives of the C.B.C.? Does it mean the objectives of the C.B.C. as set out in subclause (g) of clause 2? If so, why does it not say so? I suggest that such a change is the least that the minister should accept in the interest of clarifying the subclause and removing some of the fears which hon. members have about it.

[Mr. Thompson.]

During the course of this rather long debate many members have expressed concern about the type of programs that the C.B.C. has provided from time to time in the past. Personally I am inclined to think that their concern is not soundly based. I believe that the days of a free-wheeling C.B.C. are clearly over. The debate that has taken place in this house indicates that the free-wheeling C.B.C. of the past is dead and that in the future a much greater danger is that the C.B.C. will become the strong right arm of the state, with all the forebodings that that implies. Bolstered by large public revenues, immune from control by parliament, the C.B.C. could become in the future a danger to the public interest rather than a supporter of the public interest. In these circumstances the suggestion that this subclause should be amended in order to provide that where there is a conflict between the state-owned C.B.C. and the privately owned stations it should be resolved in the public interest should commend itself to members on this side of the house as well as to opposition members.

I urge the minister to reconsider the possibility of moving a very simple amendment to clarify, first, the meaning of the word "objectives" and, second, to make it entirely clear that there is to be no automatic resolution of any conflict in favour of the state-owned system but rather that the public interest will be the governing factor.

Miss LaMarsh: Mr. Chairman, I thought I had made it perfectly clear that the latter was the case and also that the objectives were those in subclause (g) and those preceding it. It is very clear that these are the objectives that parliament has set for its servants.

Mr. McCleave: Mr. Chairman, I support the amendment moved by my colleague. I went to the table and borrowed The Concise Oxford Dictionary in order to determine the difference between the word "objectives" and the word "interests". The minister is quite right when she says there is a difference in meaning, but I suggest that it is more a dictionary difference than one that has practical application here. The word "interest" in the particular context under debate means "Thing in which one is concerned", according to The Concise Oxford Dictionary. "Objective" means a "point aimed at".

In the practical context under discussion it is almost impossible to distinguish between what is an objective of the C.B.C. and what is an interest of the private element. This would certainly be the case if both were to become engaged in a dispute about, for example, the issuance of a licence or who should carry the Grey cup broadcast or the like. I think that any lawyer who was trying to interpret this subclause would do his darndest to see that the point in dispute became an objective of the C.B.C. and an interest of the private element. In the event of a conflict—and the bill does say "where any conflict arises"—if he could label what the C.B.C. was after as an objective and what the private element was after as an interest he would have won the battle. Perforce the dispute must be decided in favour of the C.B.C.

I do not think that that is what we said in the report of the broadcasting committee. Surely that twists the intent of the language beyond all sensible meaning. I can see that in most cases, other things being equal, requests made by the public sector, the C.B.C., would receive the support of the Canadian Radio-Television Council, and I would not object to that. But I would object if in any dispute that arose between the two sides the referee would invariably raise the hand of the C.B.C. aloft and say: The C.B.C. in this conflict is battling for objectives, the private station is battling for interests, and therefore I declare the C.B.C. the winner.

• (5:40 p.m.)

To those who are not taking part in this debate I suppose this argument is about as interesting as the medieval argument about how many angels could squat on the head of a pin. But, speaking practically, we are not getting anywhere by hair splitting or quibbling. I hope the committee will support the amendment of the hon. member for Winnipeg South. Perhaps hon. members may want to think about it and take another look at it over the supper break.

To repeat something I said earlier, suppose both sides in broadcasting, the C.B.C. and a private element, go after a station in Saskatoon or Moncton. The C.B.C. might say: To meet the objective of the national broadcasting system we should be given a station here. The C.T.V. people might say: We are interested in having a station and we think we should have it. Under subclause (h) the decision must go in favour of the C.B.C., although the C.B.C. may not have the money to build the station for years and years and years. At the same time someone with private capital lying around may be prepared to erect a station. What is the public interest then?

I suggest that the public interest can best be served by providing an alternate service for the people of cities that already have a single service. It will not be served by giving the right to build a station to the C.B.C., which may not have the money to do so for years and years and years, but by giving the right to erect a station to those who can make that station available immediately. I hope the minister will reconsider the matter and accept what I think is a sensible amendment.

Miss LaMarsh: Before the hon. member for Burnaby-Richmond interjects with his pointed remarks, to meet the point which has been raised, perhaps the amendment might be changed to read something like, "where any conflict arises between the public interest as determined by the objectives of the national broadcasting service and the interests of the private element of the Canadian broadcasting system, the public interest must prevail." In other words, that would pretty well define the public interest as being the objective here.

Mr. McCleave: Is the minister suggesting that the words, "the public interest must prevail", should be inserted in the amendment?

Miss LaMarsh: I was suggesting that the wording should be, "where any conflict arises between the public interest as determined by the objectives of the national broadcasting service", and so on, and that the last phrase on line 35 should be, "the public interest must prevail". I do not ask for comment now but I think we should think about this while listening to the hon. member for Burnaby-Richmond.

Mr. Prittie: Mr. Chairman, the words of the subclause were inspired by a member of the Progressive Conservative party, the hon. member for Royal. As a member of the steering committee I can remember that the language of the subclause was largely inspired as a result of the work performed by the hon. member for Royal. I agreed with him and applauded him for the wording which he suggested in the steering committee. I am sorry he is not here today because no doubt he would make a statement defending the words which he suggested in the first place.

I agree with the Secretary of State that there should be tilt in favour of the public system. The hon. member for Coast-Capilano said that private and public broadcasting in Canada are equally important. They are not equally important so far as parliament is concerned, and that is evident from the bill.

In this bill clause 2(g) imposes a special responsibility on the national broadcasting service. If some of the arguments that have been put forward were adopted we would in fact be running counter to some of the arguments for national unity. That is a special charge imposed on the national broadcasting service. It must also extend broadcasting services to all parts of Canada, as clause 2 suggests, even where that may not be profitable. No one blames private broadcasters for not establishing stations where there is no market. But people in all parts of Canada should receive broadcasting services, whether or not those services are profitable, and in this bill we are talking about providing such a national broadcasting service in both langauges.

I am sure the hon. member for York-Humber will say there is no apparent market in Toronto for French broadcasting. The same holds true for Vancouver because there is no market there for a French station. Even though there is no market in the commercial sense, the public broadcasting service will extend its service to those areas. Through subclause (g) the national service is charged with a special responsibility to express the Canadian identity and to attempt to forge national unity. It seems to me clear that Mr. R. B. Bennett, in planning the public broadcasting service, intended that service to be the predominant service in the country. Parliament expects that service to be predominant. Almost every national organization, including the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, the Canadian Labour Congress and the Canadian Association of Consumers, has expressed this view when they have appeared before the broadcasting committee.

I take issue with what the hon. member for Winnipeg South suggests. There is nothing rigid about this provision. This clause is a preamble and declaration and I doubt that every word in it could be enforced in a court of law. Nevertheless it is a declaration of parliament and I think the wording should stand. I again remind members of the official opposition that it was their chief broadcasting critic, the hon. member for Royal, who moved the adoption of the wording we have now.

Mr. Nowlan: Mr. Chairman, I must say that I found the lady minister's humour more acceptable than the change she suggested with regard to the point brought to the committee's attention by the hon. member for Winnipeg South and amplified by the hon. member for Coast-Capilano.

[Mr. Prittie.]

Miss LaMarsh: You did not laugh.

Mr. Nowlan: No, but I smiled. I did not write down the suggested change, but I do not think the wording corrects the situation. At first blush it appears to make it worse because you are defining the public interest and including words such as "shall be the objective of the national broadcasting service". It surprises me, as it has surprised many others here, that a government labelled as Liberal should advocate such a clause as this which is perhaps one of the most invidious in the bill in that as drafted it says that any conflict between public and private broadcasters shall be resolved in favour of the national broadcasting service.

I am also amazed that members of the N.D.P. should think the words and actions of Mr. R. B. Bennett are sacrosanct. Undoubtedly in the 1930's, when the national broadcasting service was radio only, the setting up of such a service was a tremendous accomplishment. The service has performed well. I have always been amazed that members to the left who profess to be so progressive, so go-go, so up to date with everything, whose ranks are joined in ever-increasing numbers by columnists and commentators who want to participate in politics, should go back to the thirties in their thinking and imagine that the thinking of the thirties can provide a cure for today and the future.

The hon. member for Burnaby-Richmond in his usual way drew a red herring across our arguments. He said in effect that this clause contains only terms of reference. All I can say to that is that we have spent several days discussing these terms of reference. As the minister has said, this clause is the heart of the bill. Clause 2 is the guts of the bill, and while the subclause we are now considering, when passed, may not have the force of law, it certainly will contain terms of reference which will guide the new council.

• (5:50 p.m.)

As the hon. member for Halifax suggested, there can be a considerable difference between one's interest and one's objective. Take the case of the unfortunate gentleman —perhaps fortunate, depending on how one views the state of matrimony—who had two wives. His objective was to be buried between the two ladies. That was his objective. But he had an interest in being tilted toward one rather than the other. There is no doubt that the gentleman wanted to be buried between the two ladies, but he had a little more interest in one of them.

Miss LaMarsh: But what was his objective?

Mr. Nowlan: His objective was to be buried. Any activity after that was pretty sterile.

Miss LaMarsh: Then surely the hon. member realizes that his interest and his objective were the same.

Mr. Nowlan: Let us say that any amorous objective had long ceased and expired.

Be that as it may, the story does illustrate the difficulty in trying to define an interest as apart from an objective. One could have an objective and at the same time have an interest which pursued that objective, but I do not know whether the reverse cannot be true. It occasionally happens that a phrase in French cannot be transcribed into English because of semantic difficulties. Here, in the English language, we find a paragraph which can only add to the difficulties of the council in any attempt it may make to distinguish between interest and objective, no matter what semblance of plausibility the minister may appear to give to the clause.

This is a key clause. The position taken by the hon. member for Burnaby-Richmond, with all his eloquence and sincerity, confirms our belief that this is a fundamental concept. It does not matter greatly who drafted the provision or what has taken place since the committee hearings. I am completely opposed to a clause which, without further ado, would resolve matters completely in favour of the C.B.C. Even if the committee accepted the plausible explanation given by the minister in defining "interest" and "objective", the provisions as set out are so general as to encourage the council to decide automatically in favour of the public network.

We have gone far beyond Mr. Bennett and the thirties. For example, we have developed a modern transportation service, as the hon. member for St. Paul mentioned. Let us go out west to the region the hon. member for Burnaby-Richmond comes from. No doubt he would tell us he would like to see one state-owned air service in Canada. Fortunately, not very long ago we had a progressive government which did something about public transportation in the air and developed competition between Air Canada and Canadian Pacific Airlines. I should like to hear the hon. members for Burnaby-Richmond, Burnaby-Coquitlam and New Westminster, who all come from the beautiful province of British Columbia where I was fortunate enough to practice law for several years, say in this house today that they do not like this development or that it has is not helped to improve Air Canada service as well as provide better service for the public.

An hon. Member: And provide the biggest payrolls in British Columbia.

Mr. Nowlan: That is so. I know that birds flock to Victoria to a far greater extent than they do to Ottawa, but in any event I doubt that there is any wish to revert to the old transportation system and allow all questions to be resolved in favour of Air Canada. If this had been done there would today be no alternative air service over the Rocky Mountains.

As I say, we have advanced beyond the thirties. I was somewhat disappointed to hear the hon. member for Burnaby-Richmond reverting to the thirties for his argument and trying to keep us in that period when we have progressed beyond it, notably with regard to the affairs of the Canadian National and the Canadian Pacific. We have established the Canadian Transport Commission to resolve conflicts. Air Canada and Canadian Pacific Airlines now supply alternative services, with the Canadian Transport Commission or the Air Transport Board ready to resolve differences.

Why, then, should there be so much hesitation about writing into the bill a provision such as we are suggesting? As things stand, with the prestige of the C.B.C. and the weight of public money flowing into that organization there would have to be a very strong case indeed before the council would fail to resolve in favour of the C.B.C. I say the effect will be to castrate the council. Why give powers to the council as is done under clause 16 unless room is given for the exercise of those powers and the reaching of a fair determination when conflicts arise?

For these reasons and many more which I could advance I hope the minister will reconsider the position she has taken. The amendments advanced by the hon. member for Winnipeg South might, in my opinion, have included a few words to make it clearly understood that when conflict does arise between the national system and the private system the interest of the public should prevail. I see nothing archaic or antediluvian about this or any bar to its adoption by the government which prides itself on traditional forms of Liberal philosophy. I think I shall now call it six o'clock.

Miss LaMarsh: Would the hon. member answer one question? I was sad to hear him say he was distressed by reference to the late R. B. Bennett. Has he made such violent objection on every occasion when his former leader went back a hundred years or so to Sir John Macdonald?

Mr. Nowlan: The hon. lady cannot have heard me in many debates because today I was not really violent at all. My voice was just going up and down. It was simply that I was disappointed in the approach of the hon. member for Burnaby-Richmond.

The Chairman: Order. It being six o'clock the house will now proceed to the consideration of private members' business.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

SUBJECT MATTER OF QUESTIONS TO BE DEBATED

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It is my duty, pursuant to provisional standing order 39A, to inform the house that the questions to be raised at the time of adjournment tonight are as follows: The hon. member for Brandon-Souris (Mr. Dinsdale), Vocational Training —protest by students respecting living allowance; the hon. member for Halifax (Mr. McCleave), Industrial Relations and Disputes Investigation Act—Inquiry concerning statement by assistant deputy minister; the hon. member for Vancouver East (Mr. Winch), Public Works—Vancouver—Construction of federal building.

It being six o'clock the house will now proceed to the consideration of private members' business as listed on today's order paper, namely private bills, public bills.

• (6:00 p.m.)

PRIVATE BILLS

RAINBOW PIPE LINE CORPORATION

The house resumed, from Tuesday, November 7, consideration in committee of Bill No. C-105, to incorporate Rainbow Pipe Line Corporation—Mr. Orange—Mr. Batten in the chair.

[Mr. Nowlan.]

The Chairman: When the committee rose on Tuesday, November 7, clause 1 of the bill was under consideration. Shall clause 1 carry?

On clause 1—Incorporation.

Mr. Howard: Mr. Chairman, as you have said, this matter was given some consideration on November 7. Some time last June the committee of the whole house also considered the bill and it had, of course, been dealt with somewhat extensively, though not as extensively as some of us would have liked, in the standing committee on transport and communications.

If one looks in a cursory way at the debate in committee of the whole it will be found that there has been a considerable amount of opposition and adverse speculation concerning the intent and purpose of this company. The speculation and opposition and the doubts about the company and the operation of the pipe line itself stem from all parties in the house. Therefore the concern in regard to this company has not been narrow or partisan but rather pretty broad and general.

I do not, of course, wish to put the hon. member for the Northwest Territories in an awkward position in respect of this bill, but quite frankly the fact that the proceedings with regard to the bill have been delayed from time to time indicates to me that even the sponsor of the bill had some doubts about its merits and what the operations of this company might be. One has only to look at the number of times the bill has been called to be proceeded with and then has been permitted to stand.

My hon. friend holds up a finger to indicate that this occurred once. It occurred last Thursday as well and on other occasions prior to the bill being given second reading. If I am mistaken I stand corrected and apologize to the hon. member for the Northwest Territories. However, this is my understanding from watching the proceedings in respect of this bill. My understanding is that it has not been proceeded with on several occasions when called by the Chair. We all know that when this happens with regard to a private bill it simply means either that the sponsor is not in possession of all the information he would like to have about the structure of the operation of the company or that he has some doubts about it which need to be resolved in his own mind.

Because a number of objections and doubts have been expressed by members in the house and in committee concerning the bill I am quite sure the officers and agents of the company, not to mention the hon. member for the Northwest Territories, have looked at these objections and doubts and are perhaps prepared to try to allay the doubts and fears expressed by hon. members. It may be that at some subsequent stage of the bill the hon. member for the Northwest Territories may have some comments to make concerning the doubts that have been expressed in the past. He may not have that opportunity today, incidentally, and whether the opportunity will arise on some subsequent Thursday is problematical. However, as long as the doubts which have been expressed by members on both sides of the house remain I think it behoves us not to pass the bill until they are cleared up. This matter will be explored later by some of my colleagues.

One aspect of the bill that concerns me is one which has concerned me in respect of other companies that have come before us during this hour to seek authorization. I refer to the ownership, control and authority behind the particular company. This is set out on page 7 of the minutes of proceedings and evidence of the standing committee on transport and communications for June 20 last. Mr. Barroll, vice president of Mobil Oil Canada Limited, pointed out that the ownership of Rainbow Pipe Line Corporation was fairly well equally controlled by three major oil companies. He lists the ownership. He states that Imperial Oil Limited has a 33⅓ per cent equity, that Mobil Oil Canada Limited has a 33⅓ per cent equity, that Acquitaine Canada Limited has a 30 per cent equity and that Banff Oil Limited has a 3⅓ per cent interest. Later there was some mention of the possibility that Acquitaine Canada Limited owned and controlled Banff Oil and that if that were the case the ownership, either directly or indirectly, was equally shared among Imperial Oil Limited, Mobil Oil Canada Limited and Acquitaine Canada Limited.

As I understand it, not one of these parent companies is a Canadian company in the sense that it is owned and controlled in Canada, even though the bill says that not less than two-thirds of the directors of Rainbow shall, at all times, be persons resident in Canada and Canadian citizens. I submit that this would not detract from the degree of foreign ownership which, incidentally, is 100 per cent. In this case, as I believe we have proposed on other occasions with regard to insurance companies, I think there should be an element of Canadianism involved and that we should develop some wording—and I believe there is ample precedent for such wording to be used—which we could insert in the bill to indicate that parliament will give the company a reasonable period of time in the future to divest itself of its foreign ownership and complexion and become Canadian owned and controlled. In fact this is one aspect which I think should be cleared out of the way before we proceed to give final passage to the bill.

Another point about which I am concerned, and about which I expressed some thoughts on another occasion, involves the export of raw materials. The Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development not many months ago, although I cannot from memory either quote the words or cite the occasion, propounded fairly strongly the concept that particularly in the Northwest Territories and the Yukon Territory we should bend every effort to develop the resources in the area. In other words, we should try to process in the territories whatever resource it may be through the various steps to the final manufactured or finished product. I am sure the hon. member for Northwest Territories, the sponsor of the bill, supports that principle. We all do because we are thinking in terms of Canadianism and the parochial necessity to develop industries close to the source of the raw material. This is true because such development provides the greatest amount of economic wealth to the area.

• (6:10 p.m.)

As one of the objectives of the bill the company intends to export the raw material not only from the Northwest Territories to other parts of Canada but also out of the country. Information in this regard was given to the committee. Mr. Barroll, vice president of Mobil Oil, said the following, as recorded on page 3 of the minutes of proceedings and evidence of the committee on transport and communications for Tuesday, June 20 last:

> If you will permit me, I might make a statement here as to the location of the Rainbow Pipe Line system relative to the major crude oil distribution systems that exist in Canada today.

Apparently they had a map, although I did not see it, not being a member of the committee. Presumably this was pointed out to the members. He then said:

> As shown on this map Rainbow Pipe Line system, as it is currently constructed, some 478 miles to this point here, connects to the terminals of Trans Mountain Pipe Line and Interprovincial Pipe Line. These are the main trunk line systems that supply crude oil to the west coast refineries and the general export area here on the northeast coast of Washington.

If this company ever gets into operation, part of its proposal is to connect producing crude wells in the Northwest Territories with export systems which eventually reach the northwestern United States. Mr. Barroll then went on to say, as recorded on the same page:

In addition, of course, the system ties into the Interprovincial system which extends down through the United States to eastern Canada and supplies the important prairie markets and the markets in the Great Lakes area and, of course, the Sarnia market which is the principal destination for this crude.

The primary purpose of this company is to get the crude out of the Northwest Territories and to the Sarnia market. Mr. Barroll then talks about the desire of the company to enter the Chicago market which, at least at that time, was a relatively short crude oil area, as he put it.

I suggest that we should explore this whole matter thoroughly because we are apparently being asked to express a lack of concern for the well-being of the economy of the Northwest Territories in which this field exists. We are being asked to allow the extraction of crude oil from the Northwest Territories. Crude oil in its original state is of small value because it has received only the smallest amount of processing. As a raw material is processed its value increases. We are being asked, by allowing the export of this raw material, to disregard the potential interests of the people of the Northwest Territories. This is contrary to what the minister responsible for Indian affairs has suggested in respect of the national resources of these areas. We should not take the raw materials out of these areas before processing because this results in the lowest revenue for the people at the source. Surely that is not good in terms of Canadianism.

I am also disturbed by the requested powers and authority for this company. It has been said that the Rainbow Pipe Line Company is looking merely for a hunting licence. The company apparently wants to be placed in a monopoly position in order that it may do whatever it likes with the resources of this area, but let me remind hon. members that such a monopoly position puts everybody else in a disadvantageous position.

[Mr. Howard.]

Let me refer again to the proceedings of the committee to indicate the philosophy inherent in the promotions of this company. Mr. Barroll said, as recorded on page 9, after quite extensive explanation about other aspects:

As a matter of prudence the solicitors for, and the management of, Rainbow Pipe Line Company deemed it advisable to get powers as broad as this committee saw fit to grant, so that they would be in a position to move into any area of transportation through pipe lines.

In other words, the company was saying, let us get everything we can. We may never need what we get but let us have the right to do sundry things. This company is seeking the right, without restriction or confinement, to do a variety of things. By way of comparison I think it is reasonable at this stage to refer to the bill which was being considered by the house earlier today. That bill would provide authority to a corporation to operate radio stations, microwave systems, television stations, interstation radio communication facilities, teletype, telephones and heaven only knows what else in the field of communications without restriction and without regard to whether or not the activity of that corporation is in the best interests of the country or the people of Canada. That corporation seeks authority in blanket form from the parliament of Canada to own, lease, operate and maintain all these facilities subject to the regulations and provisions of the Radio Act or any other statute relating to such communications facilities.

• (6:20 p.m.)

In almost every case which has come to our attention of a company seeking authority such as this the officers of that company have had the grace to say they only want such authority and power for the purpose of carrying out its business activities. The company named in the bill before us suggests that its solicitors and management feel it prudent, in Mr. Barroll's own words, to obtain the broadest powers possible. So they even, and I submit they did it deliberately, excluded the normal saving words in such a clause restricting the company particularly to its own undertaking. Of course, sundry other rights are asked for in the bill, including permission to carry out various activities such as the maintenance and operation of aircraft and aerodromes—In this instance they point out that this activity is for the purpose of the company's undertaking—together with all the facilities and appurtenances that go along with the operation of aircraft and aerodromes.

Now I come to the hunting licence aspect of the bill. The company seeks the right to search and prospect for gas, oil and other hydrocarbons and related substances or any of them, the right to drill for, extract and produce, store, refine, process, purchase, transport and distribute natural and artificial gas, oil and so on and, in fact, to do whatever other things oil companies do with respect to their search activities.

The Chairman: Order, please. I must advise the hon. member that the time allotted to him has expired.

Mr. Peters: Mr. Chairman, we had before us the other day a bill that contained the same type of garbage about which the hon. member for Skeena has been speaking. In that case the company decided that there obviously had to be some compromise between its hope to operate a pipe line and the lawyers' hope to have everything but the kitchen sink included in the bill. The company thought it would be wise to present a bill which would enable it to operate as a pipe line rather than presenting one that had no chance of passing. Therefore they compromised to the extent of presenting a bill asking for permission to operate a pipe line.

It is my opinion that the fault does not lie only with the lawyers who advise pipe line companies. Certainly I am not presuming to tell Imperial Oil whom it should hire as lawyers. I think some of the fault lies with the Senate. I believe that the legislation it is providing as a model for pipe line companies is a disgrace to that august body, and it is legislation that we certainly do not intend to endorse. The sooner the other place is advised that a company coming before parliament should ask only for what it wants, the better chance that company will have of receiving permission to do those things. Companies that ask for many things they do not really want but which they presume there might be a faint possibility of using 50 years later had better ask for those things when they are wanted and members of parliament will consider them. A good example is this bill and several earlier pipe line bills.

For the last few days we have been discussing the Broadcasting Act. We will be creating in effect a new television and radio communications system. That bill deals with satellites, radar towers and all the other paraphernalia that go with communications systems.

To be fair to the pipe line companies, many of them have very sophisticated communications systems which are necessary for their operations and to enable them to keep in communication with stations along the line. But when they present legislation to us such as that contained in this bill I say it is a disgrace for members of parliament to vote for it. This is especially so when the company has told the committee that it has no intention of using some of the powers for which it is asking. Yet we allow such bills to pass because some lawyer in a fantasy thinks it is a service or function that might be useful at some time and it is therefore included in the bill.

I am interested in this bill for two reasons. I believe that before the bill passes the garbage should be removed from it. I think that will be done if the company sincerely wants to operate a pipe line. In that event they will ask for permission to operate a pipe line and will present a bill which will enable them to do so. They will not ask for permission to operate a communications system or systems, the right to own houses, distribute power and do the many other things included in the bill.

The other problem is much more important. It involves a discussion we had with several people concerning a bill that was passed previously. That bill was in the same field as this and provided somewhat the same coverage. I would like to refer to the minutes of proceedings and evidence of the standing committee on transport and communications of June 20 last and the evidence of Mr. Barroll. The company made a presentation to the committee and Mr. Barroll, the vice president of Mobil Oil, gave evidence before the committee. The seventh point in the conclusions he presented to the committee was as follows:

> Finally, the people of Canada have a direct financial interest in development of petroleum resources in federally administered territories. It is to the advantage of Canada, we believe, to pass enabling legislation permitting the development of these resources so as to accelerate return to the government of Canada of royalty and lease sale revenue.

I agree with this. I also think that we have to decide for ourselves whether it is advantageous. We have to decide whether what we are doing is to the advantage of Canada or to the advantage of the oil company concerned. This company makes no bones about the fact that Imperial Oil owns one-third of its stock and Mobil Oil, which I always thought was Imperial Oil, owns one-third. I am still of the opinion that these two companies have a very close connection. The other company concerned is one of Mr. de Gaulle's French companies and it owns, through a split between Aquitaine and Banff, the other 33⅓ per cent of the stock.

These companies are obviously interested in producing oil. They are in the distribution business, the refinery business and the transportation business. This company would be set up to handle transportation business also, and this raises the problem of whether it will really be a common carrier. I think a good example of a common carrier is Interprovincial Pipe Line, owned entirely by Imperial Oil. Interprovincial was established as a stock company and a common carrier. I believe its record in this field has been fairly good. We have to ensure that a common carrier is just that and carries oil from the area. But in this case we are asked to pass a bill that will establish a pipe line—we passed a similar bill last week—and provide a hunting licence in an area in which there is no oil at the present time. I say there is no oil in the area but I am quite sure there will be. I am sure the indications are that oil is available there. But the oil now being developed is at Norman Wells, and I do not think it is anticipated that that field is large enough to warrant a line from Edmonton through an extension of the Rainbow pipe line. Therefore I presume that the company is really looking for oil which they will drill and develop in the Rainbow field north of the Alberta border and in the developments that are taking place in the tar sands of Athabasca and the Northwest Territories. There are several developments in those areas.

For this reason I believe we must look at the bill in terms of what the National Energy Board has done in this area. I am not a member of the committee but I have read its report. I was very impressed by two gentlemen who asked a number of very pertinent questions and I am very displeased with the answers given by this company because they really parroted the type of answers given previously to the same type of questions. One of those questions would be whether it is wise to provide a hunting licence or a number of them in the same area. Another would be whether the National Energy Board or some government agency acting on our behalf is in a position to decide whether this company should be given a licence in the area requested by them, and more particularly in the broad terms of their application.

• (6:30 p.m.)

I spoke to someone the other day who told me that the company now have a 24 inch line and two 20 inch lines, in other words three separate lines going into the Rainbow field, that the Rainbow field has not proven satisfactory and that the three connecting lines into that field do not bring a revenue because the capacity of the transportation facilities is considerably beyond the capacity of the field to produce oil. Yet we have now granted another licence to the Vawn Pipe Line which will allow them to go hunting in this area.

According to my information I believe that if the people who operate the line into Rainbow want it to be an economic venture, they have to go into the Northwest Territories, and this is the reason that the line was built. What concerns me is that we are passing this type of legislation without having really considered what is good for the Northwest Territories and for the companies which exist there at the present time, and whether it is in the interest of the area. I am of the impression that the hon. member sponsoring this bill, who himself comes from that area, has these matters in mind. We are all aware that in the whole of the northern area an attempt is being made to exploit its full potential projected many years ahead. I am sure that those who lived in Ottawa in days gone by will remember when northern Ontario was opened and when the original railways were used for the transportation of lumber and for colonization. In the city of Ottawa 15 or 20 charters were granted by the federal government for the construction of railways in northern Ontario. In fact, the history of the O'Brien family could be written by thousands and thousands of people who bought stock in railway companies which were never developed after having been granted charters. It is an interesting history and several books have been written about this romantic age. I am sure the hon. member for the Northwest Territories will agree that this stage is not yet over in the Northwest Territories, where everyone wants to have a pipe line or a railway so long as they can exploit its potentianl value. They do not pay too much attention to the people who will be exploited in the process, whether they are the shareholders in a company which will never produce or people who are settling in an area which might not turn out to be as profitable as they had hoped.

When we set up the National Energy Board we stated that it should look after some of our responsibilities in this field. Frankly I do not think they are doing a good job in the south because they have allowed everything to go to the United States, to the extent that the Americans are now complaining about the export of our natural resources in the field of petroleum. We have not asked the National Energy Board whether it is necessary for 10 common carriers to go into the Northwest Territories, where as yet no oil is being produced, apart from Norman Wells and several other small developments. I exclude Norman Wells because there is a refinery there, but it is the only producer in the area. Yet we have now granted one charter and we are being asked to grant another. I believe that in the next two or three years we might be asked to grant five or six others. I ask hon. members: Why have we not called the National Energy Board before us in connection with these bills and asked some of their experts to give us a projection of the need for petroleum in the Northwest Territories? This is not a provincial matter, but one which is the responsibility of the federal government. We are acting both as a pseudo provincial government and as the federal government, and therefore we have a double responsibility in this field.

I think hon. members are either being unfair to themselves or stupid, and I suggest it is not the latter. The situation in which we find ourselves is partly due to the way in which these bills are presented and partly to the unfairness of the committee structure and the way in which we operate, which does not allow us to provide the necessary protection. We have not called on the National Energy Board to come before the committee and make its recommendations. I should like to see the sponsor of the bill ask that the bill be returned to the committee for further study and that the National Energy Board be requested to provide us with some information with regard to the necessary protection. I note the Canadian National Railways and the Canadian Pacific Railway, through the Vawn Pipe Line and the Rainbow Pipe Line, have explored the area and have found there is not enough crude for both of them, and that in fact there will not be enough crude for either of them if the potential is not there. I was advised that this was the situation so far as the Rainbow Pipe Line is concerned and that the three lines which are now going out of the Rainbow field into Edmonton have a greater capacity than is justified. This field did not turn out quite as well as was anticipated.

These matters should be considered by members of parliament. It is not good enough for us to give a rubber stamp approval to these private companies. If there is any reason for their wishing to be incorporated by parliament, then there is a justification for giving greater attention to these bills. I am certainly not suggesting that the sponsor of the bill has not considered this matter sufficiently because I am sure he has, in view of the fact that the people he represents will be the ones who will really suffer if we do not handle the granting of these licences so as to protect the people who will invest in these companies, who will work in these fields in an atmosphere of exhilaration and who may find themselves in a sad state if the companies are not successful in their operations.

Another consideration must be taken into account so far as the National Energy Board is concerned, and that is the fact that we are importing into Canada more oil than we are exporting. Surely the National Energy Board should consider that. In view of this, perhaps we should consider the construction of an east-west pipe line which would handle enough crude to supply the needs of the eastern markets, rather than import crude from Venezuela. If this is not feasible, then perhaps we should make an arrangement with the United States to bring in oil where it is easier and to return it from another area from which it can be supplied easier. We should consider some such arrangement, rather than the haphazard one which the National Energy Board seems to be planning. If this were done we may find it preferable not to grant further drilling permits in the Northwest Territories at this time, because I anticipate that vast quantities of oil will be discovered in that area. We may then find ourselves in a situation similar to that of Elliot Lake, where a large development took place and a great outlay of capital was made, following which there was no longer a market for the product.

• (6:40 p.m.)

Who suffers? The company does not suffer because it has a tax exemption over a long period of time. The shareholders do not suffer because they will be able to liquidate their holdings long before the man who has a house in the new community which is dependent upon this resource. For these reasons, Mr. Chairman, I would entreat the hon. member for Northwest Territories to refer this bill back to the standing committee so we can have a look at it. I am not so sure we were right in passing the last bill, since I have found certain implications in it which I did not realize were there. We made representations, and those representations were met. I think we have some responsibility in the matter. Now that I have pursued the matter further and in greater depth, I feel the member has a responsibility to investigate the potential for exploitation that will obviously prevail with the granting of an interprovincial licence, which will allow this company to move from Alberta. I am sure everyone will agree there has been a great deal of exploitation in Alberta. This province does not seem to mind as long as you pay for it. We may find that the Northwest Territories cannot be compensated in a way that will produce anything for the people or for the rest of Canada.

Before I resume my seat, Mr. Chairman, I suggest that if some of these things are not clarified in the bill, and some of the junk removed, then I feel this will indicate the company does not want to proceed with the bill. I will consider it in that light.

Mr. Churchill: While other members were speaking, Mr. Chairman, I reviewed the debate on this particular bill and I noted it received considerable attention on two occasions, last June and again in November. It is now before parliament for the fourth time and does not have much prospect of being passed. From time to time we hear complaints from people about parliament being very slow in passing certain legislation. I have on occasions wondered about so many of the private bills which appear to stand on the order paper for a considerable length of time. It seems to me that sponsors of bills of this nature should pay closer attention to the operations of parliament.

As I read over the earlier debates I found, and I may have missed a few names, that the hon. members for Acadia, Kindersley, Edmonton West, Calgary South, Timiskaming, Skeena and Comox-Alberni have all had useful and appropriate remarks to make with regard to this particular bill. Despite this, the bill has not been modified. We have not heard from the sponsor as to whether it is going to be modified in accordance with the suggestions made by these members. and perhaps others who may have spoken. The bill is still in the house and is being debated today. Obviously it will not go through.

Other bills, which perhaps are less contentious, are held back. At some stage, people who have private bills before this house should give some attention to the objections that are raised, particularly when the objections are raised by able members of parliament such as the ones I have mentioned. Of those I have mentioned, some are residents of the province of Alberta and are fully aware of the area affected by the bill in question. However, we have not heard from the sponsor of the bill as to whether the objections that have been raised will be considered. I feel that this is not good practice. These people who are anxious to obtain the charter should very quickly, if they are seriously concerned with getting the charter, make some accommodation with the members of this house.

Over and above the debates to which I have drawn attention, this bill was studied in the appropriate committee of the house. Witnesses were questioned and certain objections were raised during the course of the committee proceedings. Instead of anyone raising objections about parliament holding up private bills, the objection that should be raised is that the people who are anxious to get this bill through should meet with members in order to effect some compromise. In this way we may get on with other important matters which other people have brought before parliament.

I hope that the member who has introduced this bill will make some statement today and let us have some idea as to what the plan is for the future. Is this bill simply to come forward again? Are the same arguments in opposition to it to be advanced again? There is no other course open to the members of the house if they are not satisfied with the bill which is placed before them. It is that type of co-operation that should prevail between members of this house, and people who are interested in getting bills through and not the situation which we have now. Looking back at the debates which occurred, as they are recorded in Hansard for June, one finds there was ample opportunity between June and November for the interested parties to modify the bill or discuss with interested members of this house how it might be adjusted so that parliament might give its consent to it. So far as I am concerned, basing my judgment on the statements made by various members who have spoken, I am in a position where, unless they inform me otherwise, I could not support the bill.

I ask the hon. member who is sponsoring this bill what accommodation is to be made with regard to the argument there should be ample opportunity for Canadian ownership of this company. What is the answer to the suggestion that this company might have an effective monopoly in the area with which it is concerned? What is the answer to the objection that the profits might be used for further exploration rather than for a reduction of the tariff for moving products through the pipe line? Just glancing quickly at the various submissions that have been made on the bill itself, I do not discover answers to these particular questions.

Now, Mr. Chairman, the only reason I have intervened has been to express my concern at this method of dealing with bills of this nature, which we must assume are of importance to the people who have brought them to the attention of parliament. I doubt if you would be able to find in the total membership of this institution anyone who opposes the development of our country. This is one of our major objectives. We are not opposed to pipe lines or railway lines or roads to resources. This has been one of the outstanding features of parliament during the years I have been here,—to further the resource development of our country. Yet, Mr. Chairman, we have before us a bill aimed at resource development that is not passing readily through the house.

• (6:50 p.m.)

This is not the first pipe line bill that has come to the attention of parliament. I well remember many years ago a very distinguished member of the house from Vancouver Quadra, Hon. Howard Green, took a keen interest in bills of this nature and drew to the attention of the house the significance of some of the bills which came to his attention at that time. His alertness in dealing with those bills subsequently proved advantageous when even more important measures relating to pipe lines were brought before parliament. So there has been plenty of experience in the past in the matter of pipe line bills.

In what respects, Mr. Chairman, does this bill differ from others of similar nature that have been debated in this house? If this bill is similar to the others that have gone through, then I can only suggest that perhaps parliament made a mistake in passing the other bills, or that there is now more knowledge available to members in dealing with bills of this nature.

I urge the member of the committee who is sponsoring this bill to give us a statement now so as to clear the air for the next occasion on which this bill comes to our attention. In order not to consume all of the time I will now bring my remarks to a close.

Mr. Barnett: Mr. Chairman, apparently the sponsor of the bill is not prepared to take up the suggestion that has just been made by the hon. member for Winnipeg South Centre; I was rather hoping that he was. If one follows through some of the discussion that has taken place on this bill he cannot help but share the concern over the way it has been dealt with, as it was expressed by the hon. member for Winnipeg South Centre. Certainly I was glad to hear him express the concern about this bill that a number of other members of the house have been expressing.

The point is well illustrated if one refers to the proceedings of the standing committee on transport and communications for June 20 last, where one discovers that the committee itself was not very happy with the result of the rather desultory consideration given the bill in the period during which the committee met. The members of the committee were not too well satisfied with the information, or with what some of them felt was the lack of information, provided by the witnesses appearing on behalf of the applicants.

This is very well illustrated at the point in the proceedings that appears at page 15 of the committee report. Apparently the committee had passed most of the clauses, but the chairman of the committee was in effect stifling the request of the hon. member for Jacques Cartier-Lasalle to get some further information about shareholders before the bill was finally approved. At that point the hon. member for Acadia said:

> The officials have not denied the fact that Imperial Oil and Mobil Oil are American owned and that the Acquitaine group is French owned. If the government, as it proclaims, is working in the interests of the Canadian public at this time—

The hon. member was interrupted at that point by the chairman, who said:

> Let us not go into that, Mr. Horner. Order, please. This is a private member's bill, Mr. Horner, as you know. Mr. Horner, you are getting out of line now. You are free to vote against it.
>
> Mr. Horner (Acadia): I may just do that.
>
> The Chairman: That is your prerogative.

I will ask for a vote. Those in favour of the preamble carrying, please signify? Those opposed? The vote is tied. The preamble carries.

Mr. Horner (Acadia): Wait a minute. Did you vote, Mr. Chairman?

The Chairman: I am just casting the deciding ballot.

Mr. Horner (Acadia): All right; so long as the committee understands that.

I have been a member of a number of committees of the house from time to time that have dealt with bills, and certainly had I been a member of this particular committee at that time I would have considered that a tied vote on whether or not the preamble of the bill should carry was bringing the hearing of the bill to an end on a very unhappy note. It is obvious that the members of the committee were not very well satisfied with their consideration of the bill.

I have drawn those excerpts from the proceedings of the standing committee to the attention of this committee of the whole in order to underline the remarks just made by the hon. member for Winnipeg South Centre about the general discontent that some of us feel, not only about this bill but about the procedure for dealing with matters of this kind.

We are here dealing with a bill which, if it does involve the building of transportation facilities for the carrying of a commodity, is in direct conflict and competition with another bill that we passed in this house a few days ago. One cannot help but ask whether this is a logical and rational course of action for this parliament to follow. Certainly it is the kind of question that requires consideration and goes far beyond the scope of any one of these bills.

Coming back to my reference to the committee—

The Chairman: Order. I must interrupt the hon. member and advise the committee that the hour for the consideration of private members business has expired. Shall I rise, report progress and request leave to sit again at the next sitting of the house?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Progress reported.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Does the house agree to resume the business interrupted at six o'clock?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

[Mr. Barnett.]

BROADCASTING

IMPLEMENTATION OF CANADIAN POLICY

The house resumed consideration in committee of Bill No. C-163, to implement a broadcasting policy for Canada, to amend the Radio Act in consequence thereof and to enact other consequential and related provisions—Miss LaMarsh—Mr. Batten in the chair.

The Chairman: Order. House again in committee of the whole on Bill No. C-163. It being seven o'clock I do now leave the chair.

At seven o'clock the committee took recess.

AFTER RECESS

The committee resumed at 8 p.m.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order, please. When the committee rose at six o'clock it was considering clause 2 (h) and the amendment thereto by the hon. member for Winnipeg South.

Mr. Nowlan: Mr. Chairman, I called it six o'clock. I find it difficult to reconcile the language of this clause with the classical definition of small "l" liberal philosophy. I find it repugnant to see in legislation any clause which says that any conflict between the private and public sectors in broadcasting shall be, ipso facto, resolved in favour of the public sector. The minister ought to display again her spirit of compromise and good sense by eliminating that part of the clause altogether.

As I said before the supper adjournment, we have come a long way since the 1930's when the C.B.C. was first established. Many of the relevant considerations of those days need not necessarily be today's considerations. In a country like Canada it is necessary to have all sorts of hybrid systems. We are a large country with few people, and we have hybrid systems in the Canadian National and Canadian Pacific Railways, as well as in Canadian Pacific Airlines and Air Canada. In the legislation covering those organizations there is no clause that says that any conflict between private and public sectors in transportation shall be resolved in favour of the public sector.

Though the minister tried valiantly to explain the meaning and intent of the clause I submit that she did not, herself, believe in the explanation she gave the committee. She suggested that the objects of the C.B.C. shall be the public interest. I can only say that at times the objectives, policies or programs of that body are not in the public interest. The hon. member's amendment says that where there is conflict between the private and public parts of the broadcasting system, the public interest shall prevail. I see nothing wrong with that.

I ask the minister whether any legislation covering the various hybrid bodies that I have talked about, where the federal government works in co-operation with companies in the private sector, contain any clause saying that a conflict between the public and private sector shall be resolved in favour of the public sector. Instead of indulging in semantics and trying to translate from French to English and vice-versa, trying to clarify meanings in both languages, the whole business could be avoided if the clause were eliminated or scrapped. If this is done, what is there to be lost?

During my brief examinations of legislation covering the Board of Transport Commissioners and the Air Transport Board I have seen no clause that says that in a conflict between the public and private sectors the interest of the public sector shall prevail. Admittedly we are dealing with broadcasting, the brainwashing avenue, or potentially so. But when you talk about freedom of speech and all the other freedoms my friends to the left talk of, you are not abrogating any of those freedoms and you are not going against the public if you say that the interest of the public shall prevail. There is a slight difference there.

If the minister cannot accept the amendment of the hon. member for Winnipeg South and the further refining definition of the hon. member for Coast-Capilano why does she not eliminate the clause? What is to be lost? Are the private and public sectors of the broadcasting service any different from the private and public sectors of our railways or air lines? Regulations and boards govern our transport systems, and boards resolve conflicts between the public and private sectors. Is broadcasting any different?

Another criticism of this bill is that we are trying to legislate too much in one bill. We talk about various viewpoints, programming, whether this program is good or bad, so on. Part of the difficulty is that we are trying to legislate too much in this field and trying to introduce too many terms of reference to an area that is fluid and cannot be restricted always by terms of reference. The minister ought to remember the divergence of opinion that arose when the government tried to legislate with respect to programming.

• (8:10 p.m.)

In connection with subclause (h) I feel the minister has fallen into the trap of trying to legislate more widely than is necessary. We should remember that whether this amendment passes or not, whether this clause remains in the bill or not, there will still be the council to resolve conflicts. I urge the minister to exercise the good sense for which she is sometimes known by leaving out the clause entirely, thus demonstrating liberal philosophy with a small "l", or at least to go as far as accepting the amendment put forward by the hon. member for Winnipeg South.

As I said earlier, this clause if left unamended would in effect castrate the council and upset its work in seeking to resolve differences fairly. Further, if the minister would read tomorrow the explanation she gave earlier to the committee in rationalization of the difference between interest and objectivity she would understand the difficulties which this clause presents. Unless the hon. lady can tell me that in other areas where there are public boards on one hand and private companies on the other similar clauses have appeared in governing legislation, I shall remain convinced that the clause needs amending.

Indeed, she would be well advised to omit the clause altogether. Such a decision would no doubt expedite the passage of the bill before us, avoiding what might otherwise provoke a great deal of discussion from this side of the house where, so far, we have been remarkably restrained in our criticism, though criticism has been expressed on all sides in connection with other aspects of the legislation. For us it is repugnant that there should be a council set up to resolve differences when, at the same time, the bill states in definite terms that should a conflict arise it is to be resolved in favour of a national broadcasting system, that is to say, the C.B.C.

This, to my mind, is a fundamental flaw in the bill and I say this without meaning any disparagement of the C.B.C.

[Translation]

Mr. Pelletier: Mr. Chairman, I would like to speak about that matter, because I feel that it is very important for the future of broadcasting in Canada. To give an idea of the general tone of my remarks, I must say first of all that the only amendment I can support is the formula proposed by the Secretary of State (Miss LaMarsh) before the dinner recess.

I would like to begin with an answer to a question put by the hon. member for Digby-Annapolis-Kings (Mr. Nowlan) at the end of his remarks. He asked: If we discard that subclause, what will be lost? I would like to say that, in my opinion, we would lose something that is essential and absolutely necessary, namely a clear standard of judgment to guide the members of the Board of Broadcast Governors.

What does this paragraph do? It indicates specifically in what sense difficult decisions will be taken, difficult problems will be solved by the B.B.G., in what sense, I repeat, these decisions will be taken, in what sense these problems will be settled. This paragraph indicates that, other things being equal, from the technical standpoint or from the audience point of view, the board will have to take into consideration that the C.B.C. is a public service and the private stations are private enterprise, and that there is a difference in nature between them. If we do not give the B.B.G. this criterion, it will be a very bad service to do them.

I have often heard from professional workers in broadcasting a criticism that seems well founded to me, it is that heretofore legal texts governing broadcasting in Canada were not sufficiently explicit. Decision making cannot be left to a board of governors if the legislator does not write into the act his own interpretation of the role the board of governors is to fulfil. If the government fails to indicate in what direction the rules must be made, the men appointed to the board are left in doubt and uncertainty and they are put in a most difficult situation because we ourselves as legislators have failed to take our responsibilities.

Why must we supply this standard of judgment and indicate to the authorities who will be intrusted with making the rules in what direction parliament wants those decisions to be made? As I said, there is a difference in nature between the crown corporation and the private sector.

Since the beginning of the debate, I was surprised to realize to what extent most of the speakers recognized in fact that the C.B.C. was a public service and operated in special circumstances and also to what extent, in the area of principles, it was sought to ignore the very same fact. For instance, after the criticism formulated here in the past week one might be tempted to conclude that the crown corporation alone commits all the sins of Israel, whereas private stations are pure virgins who never had any thought of making a questionable gesture.

When, for instance, it is known that on several private stations across the whole country we are imposed the views of a group of sorry nitwits "open line" programs—I do not have the French equivalent—one wonders why no one has ever mentioned it here. What are we to think, for instance, of certain private stations forcing us to listen for hours to the advice of woeful idiots who claim to answer questions telephoned in to them on matters as different as theology, philosophy, law and medicine? I do not say that telephoned programs are wrong by nature. I know some of them are all right and I think it is a credit to the C.B.C., when such programs are broadcast to do them with someone well-informed and capable of dealing with one subject at a time.

It is called democracy; I heard someone cry it out from the right. As for me, I have never sought to equate idiocy and democracy. I think we should distinguish between the two and if the hon. member did not, I am wondering why he is here.

If I am not mistaken, I am the first one in this house to speak of the low intellectual level, of the pitiful cultural level, of the deplorable nonsense to which audiences of certain private stations are subjected in this country. Why did not the other members say something about it? The only reason I can find, is that they kept all their harshness in store for the C.B.C., because that corporation has a special status, because it has a special authority, and because parliament must consider it as its own creature.

If the C.B.C.—and I am not discussing that at this moment—deserves, since it is this parliament's creature, the criticisms it was subjected to, some of which are justified, while some others are ridiculous, in short, if the C.B.C. on account of its status, deserves those criticisms, I think it is equally justifiable that in the legislation, it receives particular attention from this parliament of which it is a creature.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

• (8:20 p.m.)

Mr. Pelletier: That is why I shall vote against the amendment of the hon. member for Winnipeg South. That is why, if the Secretary of State retains the second wording which she asked us to consider during the supper hour, I shall be able to support it. But in my opinion, it would be ill-advised to delete the whole clause, as suggested. It is a standard of judgment that would be lost, and it would prove a great loss.

Before resuming my seat, I should like to deal also with some other interventions made late this afternoon. For instance, when it is suggested that there is no difference between the words "objectives" and "interests" and that it is merely a matter of semantics, I feel this does not mean anything. It is quite clear that the objectives of the C.B.C. and the interests of private stations are very different. Anyone can readily understand what is involved. As far as the corporation is concerned, it is a formal mandate conferred on it by parliament and written out in full in this piece of legislation.

Mr. Asselin (Charlevoix): With our own money.

Mr. Pelletier: Exactly. That is why the C.B.C. must be given a clear mandate and that is also why it must be given a special protection. When private stations are involved, I do not see why anyone should wonder that less attention is given to them by the government. When objectives are involved, it is clear. They are defined in the act. When the interests of private stations are mentioned, if some members do not know what is involved I think I am capable of explaining it to them.

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, if I may rectify. There was no question of the interests of private stations but of public interest. It is not the same thing.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order. The member for Hochelaga has the floor.

Mr. Pelletier: I wonder why the member for Lapointe raised this objection, Mr. Chairman, when it is clearly stated in the text:

—where any conflict arises between the objectives of the national broadcasting service and the interests of the private element—

So, if that is not the question in the mind of the member for Lapointe, it is because he has not read the act. He should read it at once, in view of the fact that he has already made three speeches on the subject.

I was saying that if some people question the meaning of the interest of private stations, let them table with private broadcasters. Let them ask them, for instance to make cultural broadcasts and they will be given the answer I received a hundred times and that the house committee received at least fifteen times: We have to make profits. So we cannot make this kind of programs because they are not profitable. That is the interest of the private stations, nothing else. And when one refuses to make a distinction between people who quite legitimately—as people can legitimately manufacture shoes or automobiles—commercially operate a wave length and a crown corporation, and when one refuses to make such a distinction and pretends not to understand the interests of private stations, I think it is a mockery. The interests of the private stations are very well and constantly understood by the owners of the stations. When they appeared before the committee, they stated: You cannot ask this, you cannot ask that which you are asking of the C.B.C. because the corporation is financed by public funds whereas private stations must make profits.

In my opinion, those who claim that there is only a difference of words between the objectives of a public corporation and the commercial interests of the private stations are willfully closing their eyes to the real difference.

I would like to say also that I find unjustified the objection of those who claim that in any conflict the board of governors will have to settle in favour of the C.B.C. if the legislation is passed as it stands now. That is not so. In view of the way the legislation is drafted, it is obvious that the prefernce will be given to the C.B.C. only when its mandate it involved.

That is why I see no objection to the amended version proposed by the hon. Secretary of State. We, in this house, are responsible for formulating the objectives of the C.B.C. in such a way that they will coincide with the public interest in broadcasting matters. And if we have not managed to do that in the wording of the act the error does not lie in that paragraph, but rather in the whole clause in which parliament formulates the mandate of the C.B.C.; this mandate must express the public interest in matters pertaining to broadcasting in Canada. This means that, should conflicts be brought before the Board of Broadcast Governors, should it be asked to decide who should broadcast a hockey or football game, the governors will surely understand, unless they are credited with very little brains, that the objectives of the C.B.C. are not involved in that case.

But, on the other hand, should conflicts arise where, for instance, they have to choose between allowing the setting up of a private station in a large city, and such a case will come up very shortly, or, on the same wave length, serving two stations in a territory which is not reached by the C.B.C., the board of governors will then have that subclause to use as a guide to reach its decision and I think that it will be greatly needed.

I will end my remarks, Mr. Chairman, by saying that the whole structure of that legislation makes an extremely important distinction which was not understood at all—I am thinking of the general intent of that legislation—if it was not understood that the C.B.C. is a creature of this parliament which must keep a strict hand over it but—I am trying to find the right words—must also care for it, because it is its own creature.

Therefore, if that subclause is dropped from the legislation, it is the whole structure of that bill, the whole spirit of the bill which would be destroyed and I think that this would be extremely serious.

Therefore, Mr. Chairman, I will vote against the amendment before us.

[English]

Mr. Nowlan: Mr. Chairman, may I direct a question to the hon. member.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: The hon. member for Digby-Annapolis-Kings.

Mr. Nowlan: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I have something else I should like to say later concerning the remarks of the hon. member, but I should like to ask him this question now. In view of the fact that Air Canada and the Canadian National Railways also are creatures of this parliament, could he tell me what clause in their incorporating acts sets out such a term as is in this broadcasting bill, so far as the public interest is concerned? Has not the public interest been protected in the decision of the respective boards that govern these bodies?

[Mr. Pelletier.]

• (8:30 p.m.)

[Translation]

Mr. Pelletier: Mr. Chairman, I should like to answer the question put by the hon. member for Digby-Annapolis-Kings (Mr. Nowlan) by another question and ask him whether he makes a distinction between a transport company and a broadcasting company, that is, between a business enterprise and a cultural institution?

[English]

Mr. Fulton: Mr. Chairman, I think this is a very important and very interesting discussion we are having here on the matter of conflict between the objectives of the national broadcasting system and the interests of the private broadcasting system. I listened carefully to the remarks of the minister this afternoon, in which she endeavoured to establish that what is really involved here is not an interest against an interest, but rather an objective set by parliament on the one hand in respect of a public interest and on the other a private interest. I wish I could agree with the hon. lady because I would then have no difficulty at all in accepting her view and supporting the subclause without amendment. But I cannot accept her view as to how the word "objective" will be interpreted, and I regret I have to reject her argument. Therefore I support the amendment moved by my colleague, the hon. member for Winnipeg South.

I have some examples I should like to cite in support of my contention that the minister's interpretation is simply not applicable. If one looks at a dictionary, and I believe in fact my colleague the hon. member for Halifax has done so, one will find that the dictionary definition differs as between the interpretation of the words "objective" and "interest". That is all very well, but when busy members of a board are interpreting an objective they are not going to look up the dictionary definition. If they do they will be argued out of their position by the practical situation of the moment.

I am quite satisfied that if the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation has an interest in reserving a position for a station in any particular city, it will readily make an interpretation to the Board of Broadcast Governors, or the new radio-television council, to the effect that this is in the interests of or in accord with the objectives of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation. I am sure they will say that in order to achieve our great national objectives it is necessary that this reservation be maintained, and that it is necessary as an objective of the national broadcasting service that the second outlet in city "x" be reserved for the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation and not given to a private broadcasting interest.

On this basis, they will maintain, we have a conflict between the objectives of the national broadcasting service on the one hand and the interests of some private station on the other, and it must be resolved in favour of the public system. This is nonsense. I submit, with respect, that it is nonsense to suppose that the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation will be able to maintain that nice distinction between this interest on the one hand and the objectives of a national broadcasting service on the other.

I should like to give an example, which astounded me, in respect of the practical application of this situation. In my own city of Kamloops there has been for some time an interest in the establishment of a second AM-FM radio station outlet. The application was submitted to the Board of Broadcast Governors for approval. Recently I was asked to take the matter up with the board, and I have done so. I have been informed that the applicant is aware of the policy, announced some time ago, to refrain from recommending favourably on licences for additional radio stations in markets, in which we are seeking to introduce alternative television. It so happens that the only T.V. station in Kamloops is a private station, although it is a C.B.C. affiliate. As far as I can gather, the board is concerned and interested to see that there is an extension of C.B.C coverage in Kamloops. That is a very proper interest and the people there will be happy, although this is a separate matter.

In this case we have a situation in respect of which the C.B.C. will argue that because it is in their interest to have a second C.B.C. television outlet there, the board should not allow the establishment of a second radio outlet. Could anything be more ridiculous than that the citizens of the Kamloops area should be deprived of the opportunity of a second radio outlet because somebody at an obscure height has set a policy that the board will not allow a second radio outlet until a second television outlet has been established?

At this moment I do not suggest this is C.B.C. policy, or a policy imposed by the C.B.C. on the board, but I do give this as an example of the kind of ridiculous situation we will have if an act of this parliament suggests that when there is a conflict, the conflict will always be resolved in favour of the public agency.

For these reasons I cannot see any real or cogent argument against the proposition incorporated in the amendment submitted by my colleague, the hon. member for Winnipeg South. That amendment suggests that where there is a conflict in any area, the conflict will be resolved in favour of the public interest. It suggests that the public interest must prevail. I hope very much that a direction is adopted which is as simple as that, and that such direction be incorporated in the act. That is what this amendment would do. The Board of Broadcast Governors or the new radio and television council would then have a very simple directive.

What is the public interest in the city of Kamloops and area? That is the question the board, with this directive, would ask itself. The public interest in that area is in obtaining an additional radio station. It would then be very simple to make a decision in the public interest. But this decision would not be made as a result of the present wording of subclause (h).

That is all I have to submit on this matter, but I hope that by the example I have cited the minister will be persuaded to take another look at the implications of what she said this afternoon. It is also my hope that the arguments submitted by my colleague, the hon. member for Halifax, will have perhaps even more effect than the argument I have submitted. The minister seems to have paid more attention to them.

Miss LaMarsh: He is closer than you are.

• (8:40 p.m.)

Mr. Fulton: The minister is a very practical person, and it is my hope that she will pay some attention to the practicality of the situation; that is, that no board or body will pay any attention to the dictionary definition of the words "objective" and "interest". Certainly the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation is not going to pay any attention to that difference. They will interpret an "interest" as an "objective". Also, it will be very difficult for the new council to differentiate between what is submitted by the C.B.C. as an "interest" on their part and an "objective" on their part, as they interpret their responsibility under this bill.

Miss LaMarsh: Mr. Chairman, does the hon. member not concede that since their representative has been in the gallery throughout the whole of this debate, that is highly unlikely?

Mr. Fulton: Not at all, Mr. Chairman. If the minister means to suggest that a representative of the C.B.C. has been here in the gallery—

Miss LaMarsh: A representative of the B.B.G.

Mr. Fulton: If the minister means to suggest that because a representative of the B.B.G. has been here in the gallery, he is going to influence the position taken by the C.B.C., I think she is rather more naïve than I give her credit for.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Chairman, I hope the Secretary of State will not yield on this clause in any way, because in my submission it is the touchstone of the attitude of this parliament to the public broadcasting system which parliament set up. I say, with all kindness to my friend the hon. member for Kamloops, that if he really meant what he said when he was discussing the lack of difference between "objective" and "interest", he has a great deal less intelligence than I have always given him credit for.

The hon. member starts by saying that if you look up the dictionary there is no difficulty; the dictionary makes very clear the difference between the word "objective" and the word "interest". Then he goes on to say, in effect, as I understood him—and I am not quoting him—that the C.B.C. will delightfully ignore the difference which the dictionary gives and, furthermore, that the Canadian radio-television council that is being set up by this bill, which is the body with authority, will also ignore the difference that he admits is the normally accepted difference between the two words.

I suggest to him, also, that as a gentleman learned in the law, in the context of this particular statute what he said is utter nonsense, as is the case with what was said by other hon. members previously, because we define the objectives to which the C.B.C. has to pay attention; we define them in the immediately preceding subclause. We say, in subclause (g) that "the national broadcasting service" shall do certain things. These are the objectives of the national broadcasting service. The national broadcasting service must provide a balanced service of information, enlightenment, entertainment, etc. This service must be extended to all parts of Canada, as public funds become available. It must be in English and French, serving the special needs of geographic regions.

Mr. Fulton: Mr. Chairman, could I ask the hon. member a question? Where in those definitions, for instance, does he find the justification for the decision that certain areas will be reserved for C.B.C., and therefore people will be deprived of secondary outlets?

Mr. Lewis: The point I was making—

Mr. Fulton: Is that an "interest" or an "objective"?

Mr. Lewis: I will come to that in a moment. As I read subclause (h), there is no suggestion that this is the kind of thing with which it deals, as far as the national broadcasting service is concerned.

Mr. Fulton: That is the kind of thing that is in effect now.

Mr. Lewis: Just hold it for a moment. There are other considerations in this question. I am saying that the objectives of the national broadcasting service, about which my hon. friend was talking, are set out in subclause (g) of the bill. I was drawing attention to the fact that it must be in English and French, serving the special needs of geographic regions, and so on; and it must contribute to the development of national unity and provide for a continuing expression of Canadian identity. As I read subclause (h), all it says in effect is that if these objectives come into conflict with the profit-making interests of the private sector, these objectives are to prevail. That is all it says. It says no more than that.

Mr. Sherman: Mr. Chairman, would the hon. member permit a question? He says that as he reads subclause (h), all it says is so-and-so. Then he extends that to subclause (g). I would ask the hon. member whether he thinks that subclause (g) says specifically that paragraphs (i), (ii), (iii) and (iv)—these and no more—are the objectives of the national broadcasting service.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Chairman, I would have no hesitation in saying to the hon. member for Winnipeg South that these, in the general area, are the objectives of the C.B.C. That is what this parliament says. There may be some headings for which you cannot put every word down; but the objectives, the purposes, the reason for the existence of the corporation are set out in subclause (g), and all that subclause (h) says is that when the profit-making interests of the private sector come into conflict with these objectives of the C.B.C., the objectives which we in parliament have placed before the corporation, the objectives of the C.B.C., are to prevail. That is what it says, and that is what it means.

I do not think the intelligent members of the official opposition would have had any difficulty in seeing the difference between "objective" and "interest", that is, the difference that this subclause insists on, the difference in the public, social purposes which the public corporation, we say—by "we", I mean parliament—is to sanction, and the private, profit-making interests of the private channels and stations of the private radio and television companies, were it not for the fact that they have used it, as have people generally in the house during this debate, as a Roman holiday for all their opposition to public broadcasting as such.

What they would really like to see is the C.B.C. tied hand and foot, confined and gripped, as to programming, purposes and expansion in order that the private sector of the broadcasting service may have more opportunity for enlarging the already large profits it has made over the years. The basic philosophy underlying this argument is that the public corporation has all the air that is being used and all the other facilities which broadcasting requires, and these things are a public trust. As I pointed out in a speech during another stage of the proceedings under this bill, even in the United States of America, where all the private networks have flourished almost beyond belief, they have finally required—

An hon. Member: Hear, hear.

Mr. Lewis: I say "flourished" in terms of the money they make, and not in terms of the programs they produce, let me hasten to assure the hon. member who applauded. The junk which comes over their networks I can do without, but there is a great deal of profit in it. Even in that country it was found necessary for Congress within the last few months to establish a public broadcasting corporation and for public funds to be made available to supply that corporation with the necessary wherewithal with which to continue.

Mr. Nowlan: Ten million dollars for a research project.

Mr. Lewis: This is just a start, and if my hon. friend does not know it, he should read the report. This is just a beginning of the public broadcasting service that has started in a country which is said to be the leader of all private enterprise, ideas and lack of them.

I said when I started that I hope the minister will not budge on this clause, because it is the touchstone of the bill. Is parliament genuinely desirous of having a public broadcasting system and of having that system serve the purposes set out in subclause (g), or is it prepared to permit the private profit making radio and broadcasting companies to interfere with that purpose and the purposes set out in the act?

• (8:50 p.m.)

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Lewis: If hon. members did not know before that my love of the profit motive is not as great as theirs, I can tell them that that is the case.

Some hon. Members: Oh, no.

Mr. Nowlan: Has the hon. member socialized his fees yet?

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Chairman, you will forgive me if I do not deal with these really cheap personal remarks.

I say that this is the touchstone of the act and that parliament should not recede from the proposition that the purposes of the public service system as defined in the statute must take precedence over private networks which serve another purpose than those we set down in the statute. We should not be led astray by the attempt to suggest that there is no difference between the objectives on the one hand and the interests on the other.

It is obvious to me that the intention of the subclause is to put the social objectives of the public broadcasting system above the company interests of the private broadcasting companies, and this should remain in the act.

Mr. Fulton: Mr. Chairman, I think nothing can be more revealing in the alliance of the hon. member for York South with the minister sponsoring this bill with respect to subclause (h) than the obvious illustration of the fear of the hon. member for York South of the interpretation of the words "public interest".

Mr. Lewis: Oh, poof.

Mr. Fulton: Oh, yes, the hon. gentleman is very good at imputing motives to others but when his own motives are revealed he resorts to callous and stupid interjections. The hon. member is afraid of the introduction into this bill of words which say that when there is a conflict it must be settled in accordance with the public interest. That is what he is afraid of.

Mr. Lewis: May I ask the hon. member for Kamloops a question? Would the hon. member, who I am sure wants to be fair, not agree that the public interest is defined in subclause (g) as being the objective of the national broadcasting service? I need not take any lesson from him or anyone else about the public interest and my regard for it.

Mr. Fulton: If my hon. friend is satisfied with that definition of public interest, why does he object to its reintroduction in subclause (h)? His position seems to me to be most extraordinary. He says that public interest in broadcasting is defined in subclause (g), yet he objects to its reintroduction in subclause (h) as the arbiter of differences between the interests of one sector of the system and the other.

Mr. Lewis: It is already introduced.

Mr. Fulton: My hon. friend's position is completely inconsistent. It is all very well to talk about profits.

I did not intend to get into an argument with my friends on the left. My quarrel is with my friends on the other side, because they are the ones who introduced the bill. However, it is interesting indeed to see the alliance between the government and the members of the N.D.P. on this matter. It is also interesting to recall the tenor of the debate up to this point, and the extent to which neither the government nor the N.D.P. is prepared to see parliamentary control asserted over the C.B.C.

We are prepared to take our stand on the matter of parliamentary control over the C.B.C. and on the matter of the public interest being the arbiter of differences between the public broadcasting corporation and the private sector of the system. We are happy to take it against both the N.D.P. and the government in combination.

Mr. Lewis: Dual courage.

Mr. Fulton: My friend, the hon. member for York South, ridiculed me because I ventured to suggest that the Board of Broadcast Governors or the Canadian radio-television council might not be prepared to pay too much attention to the strict dictionary definition of the two words "objectives" and "interests". I do not withdraw one word of what I said, and I am reinforced in my view as to how it will be interpreted by the hon. member for York South who attempted to predict the way in which the board would interpret the word "interest", so far as the private sector is concerned, as being exclusively profit making opportunities. He said that all that would be imposed here would be public objectives on the one hand and profit making opportunities for the private stations on the other. He said that is all that the board should consider.

Mr. Lewis: That is right.

Mr. Fulton: That is a perfect example of the approach of the N.D.P. and, I am afraid, of the approach taken by the minister with respect to this act. I do not admit for a moment that there is not a proper place for the private segment of the broadcasting system, nor do I take second place to anyone in my belief that there is a large place for the public segment, namely the C.B.C. But I say that in view of the tremendous costs that are now a concomitant of broadcasting, especially colour television broadcasting, it behooves parliament to recognize that the whole field cannot be filled by the public agency, and that therefore we must provide a proper place and proper protection of, as well as regulation for the private interests or private segment of the broadcasting system. Since it is inherent in the approach of the government —although they give it place in only small, lower case letters—that there is a place for both the publicly owned corporation, namely the C.B.C., and the private segment, I do not understand why the minister and the government will not place them on a fair footing.

All that the amendment of my colleague, the hon. member for Winnipeg South, attempts to do is to place the two sectors on a fair footing. I repeat that we in the official opposition are prepared to see, as the arbiter of differences which may arise between them, not a predisposition to judge in favour of the public corporation but rather the fair and true test of the public interest, and we take our stand on that basis.

Miss LaMarsh: May I ask the hon. member a question? Will he tell me why the official opposition, whose spokesman he is now professing to be, bothers to choose and send to committees of the house representatives who purport to speak for that party, and then completely repudiates them when the bill returns to the house?

• (9:00 p.m.)

Mr. Fulton: This is not the case at all. My hon. friend cannot get away with that kind of self-serving argument. If she can show me where anything I have said is inconsistent with the stand taken by this party in the broadcasting committee, then I would think her statement may have some validity.

Miss LaMarsh: Did the hon. member not hear the hon. member for Burnaby-Richmond say earlier that this phraseology was the phraseology which had been drafted by the Conservative party spokesmen in the standing committee on broadcasting?

Mr. Fulton: I am speaking of the amendment to this clause, which is put forward officially by the official opposition.

Mr. Berger: Mr. Chairman, if I might be allowed, very briefly I should like to say through you to the minister, that I have spent nearly 16 years in private enterprise radio and television as an announcer, writer and commentator. I do not pretend that I am blessed by God, or a certified expert in this field; however, I think I should at least have some worth-while ideas on this matter which would be as sound and as justified as many others which have been expressed at length during the debate on this bill.

If you will allow me, I should like to go back to my native French in which I am much more fluent so that there will be no mistakes. Before doing so, however, I should like to say I have a great deal of respect for my colleagues in the radio field, the hon. member for Winnipeg South and the hon. member for Halifax, both of whom have spent many years in this field. In so far as the amendment is concerned, I want to point out right away that I cannot agree with it in view of the discussion in the committee, both in public and in camera.

[Translation]

Mr. Chairman, I should like to tell you how I regret that the diligent and very hard work of the representatives of the different parties of the public and closed meetings of the committee on broadcasting, films and assistance to the arts and to prepare the legislation, reconsider it, to accept, as the minister mentioned a moment ago, the good ideas, the intelligent ideas which, it must be admitted, come from all sides of the house, should not be considered more seriously. The suggestions were taken into consideration and, in this case, it was precisely one of the distinguished members of this house whom I admire and will always admire as much as I can, who helped us to write out the exact wording.

[English]

This was agreed to by the hon. member for Burnaby-Richmond and many others, all very nice people. I could refer to the hon. member for Prince and the hon. member for Royal; we all agreed that this was the best way in which to circumscribe the problem. I cannot understand why we have had to spend all this time listening to speeches from members. We are spending many futile hours discussing this problem.

[Translation]

Now, to revert to a problem of concern throughout the country, it is unfortunate that this work should not be considered more seriously by certain members of the house. We have spent hour upon hour in serious discussions to arrive at a solution and all this work now seems useless. I am wondering what purposes are served by committees of the house, unless they provide an opportunity by common agreement and community spirit, by the exchange of ideas that accept and exchange, to arrive at an appropriate draft legislation?

[English]

Mr. Asselin (Richmond-Wolfe): It is a good show.

Mr. Berger: It is a good show, but it will be a better one if you stand up.

[Translation]

It would surely be a good show although difficult for me to give in spite of my slight talent for comedy. The hon. member who has just interrupted me is greater than I and I pay homage to him.

Mr. Asselin (Charlevoix): You just won an Oscar.

Mr. Berger: I should like to tell you, Mr. Chairman, that I have always believed—it may be an illusion of youth, or one who would remain young,—that we could work seriously in this house without always meeting some opposition from all corners of the house. It seems to me that a bill which has been examined in committee and worked over, as a jeweller does to make a finer piece of jewellery, should be studied most seriously instead of being subjected to petty political attacks like the ones I can see showing opposite.

Mr. Grégoire: On a point of order, Mr. Chairman, it would be advisable that you call the hon. member for Montmagny-L'Islet (Mr. Berger) to order, because we are not discussing at present the work of the committee or the community of spirit, but rather the amendment moved by the Conservatives.

Now, when we are out of order, we are called to order. I would ask, therefore, that the hon. member for Montmagny-L'Islet deal with the amendment, which he has not done up to now. Then, let us discuss the amendment. Members on that side must stop delaying the business of the house and dealing with all kinds of questions, except the bill.

[English]

The Chairman: Order. I am sure that if I were to suggest to the hon. member for Montmagny-L'Islet that he now return to the subject of subclause 2(h) he would be willing to do so.

Mr. Berger: It is a pleasure.

[Translation]

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

And now, for the information of the hon. member for Lapointe, if we complied with the standing orders he should be sent back to the province of Quebec, but not to his riding which he has repudiated by his failure to meet the wishes of his constituents.

Mr. Chairman, in order to please the hon. member for Lapointe—it might be one of the last favours granted to him in the house—I must say that I had made a careful study of this amendment and explain. After a serious and intense work to which the hon. member refrained from participating, for reasons which may be valid—

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, I rise on a question of privilege.

The hon. member for Montmagny-L'Islet accuses me of not having contributed to the work of the committee. I must say that I do not sit on any committee because I was discriminated against and excluded from the committees.

[English]

The Chairman: Order, please. The hon. member has no point of privilege.

[Translation]

Mr. Berger: Mr. Chairman, I thank the hon. member for Lapointe. Quite often his objections are well taken but I should like to know why he did not attend the committee sittings, and did not raise questions as did others? It is probably because Expo was not over yet, at the time of the discussion or he might have had some other causes for concern? At any rate, he would rather ask his questions in the house, the "show" is better.

I apologize, Mr. Chairman. Someone has just explained to me that the hon. member was in France at the time, busy with fostering better relations—

[English]

The Chairman: Order, please. I would think the hon. member may have completed his introductory remarks.

• (9:10 p.m.)

[Translation]

Mr. Berger: Mr. Chairman, I thank you for calling me to order. I know that with your usual courtesy, you may have allowed a French-speaking member to speak a little longer, but when there are interruptions from all quarters, unfortunately we require more time.

To come back to what I specifically mentioned in my opening remarks, I cannot but support the hon. Secretary of State (Miss LaMarsh) in spite of my personal friendship with my former colleagues in private radio and television, the members for Winnipeg and Halifax.

However, if I may, Mr. Chairman, I should like to pour a little well-deserved balm over some of the statements on private enterprise of my highly respected colleague, the hon. member for Hochelaga (Mr. Pelletier).

This is precisely the question I want to raise about the amendment to subclause (h) dealing with the conflicts which may arise between the objectives of the national service, and so on. I would just make this one small point. In my view, perhaps the hon. member for Hochelaga's words went further than his thoughts when he spoke about private enterprise, in which, I will have you note, I have spent 16 of my best years. I only hope I have a few left to give to the house.

I would nevertheless point out to the hon. member for Hochelaga that it is not because of the money that I worked in private enterprise, for my salary there was half what it was elsewhere.

One must admit, Mr. Chairman, that private enterprise has rendered services of immense value to all Canadians, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and for that reason we must not persecute it.

I merely wished to raise this minor point. The hon. member said that all that private enterprise is seeking is to make money. It is obvious that when my former employers sold profitable businesses to embark upon a venture, which at that time was promising—and is still promising—it was not merely for philanthropic purposes. Nevertheless, I sometimes waited a whole week before cashing my pay cheque. Therefore, it was not merely for the sake of money or to enable the owner to make more money, but also to develop a whole area, that of new Quebec, before the government's broadcasting services stepped in. Such was the case in Rimouski, where CJBR was one of the pioneer stations, and in Matane, station CKBL, where I had the pleasure of working for several years.

It seems to me we have done our duty and my colleague for Hochelaga has himself benefited, at a time when he was engaged in labour relations, by the services of private enterprise. Private enterprise enabled him to reach certain strikers who wished to claim their rights.

I have no doubt about the sound judgment of the member who moved the amendment and the one who seconded it. I always had great respect for the hon. member for Kamloops (Mr. Fulton). I met him in Quebec city, I had a personal interview with him and I have always been under the impression that he was a real gentleman.

[English]

The hon. member is a real gentleman in the true sense of the word, but it does seem to me that his image has deteriorated a little bit. I say that in appreciation of what he has done in the past and I hope to see him make his comeback as soon as he can.

[Translation]

Now, about subclause (h), I hope that we all agree on the meaning of the word "conflict". Many hon. members indulged in semantics, quoted the dictionary, juggled with the words. For instance, if a conflict should arise between the "objectives" of the national broadcasting service and the "interests" of the private sector.

In some remote parts of western Canada or in the lower part of the north shore which I know well, the C.B.C. might have helped those people more if it had given them news commentaries. It would be preferable to avoid conflicts of jurisdictions and give the Board of Broadcast Governors—which might go under another name but which will surely be revamped thanks to the hon. members who took part in the proceedings of the committee, in short which will be stronger and will give up-to-date, healthier and better planned management—to honest officials a chance to prove their worth and thus enable us to help some remote areas of our country which until now have not benefited from the services of that Crown corporation.

I see the hon. member for Chapleau (Mr. Laprise) and several others who claimed that their area was not served by the C.B.C. We should not delay the work of a corporation which would be in a better position to give that assistance.

I say that in all logic and with all the good will in the world. It seems to me that we cannot, accept this amendment even if we agree with these happy suggestions.

I wanted to mention that, and I hope that these few objective remarks will enable us, by common consent, to find the best and most efficient solution for the moment. It will always be possible to bring about further improvements.

Once again, I want to say before concluding that I regret that the work of the committee did not allow us to make faster progress until now. I am looking at my friend from Winnipeg South (Mr. Sherman)—

[English]

Mr. Sherman: Would the hon. member for Montmagny-L'Islet permit a question. He expressed the opinion in his opening remarks that the debate that has gone on up to this point may in some way militate against the committee system, because this subject was supposed to have been thoroughly examined by the standing committee on broadcasting. In fairness, Mr. Chairman, I am sure the hon.

member will admit and recall that during the examination of this particular clause by the standing committee no less a member of this house than his own colleague from Burin-Burgeo and others in the house raised objection to the wording of this paragraph and gave notice that it would be raised before the committee of the whole.

[Translation]

Mr. Berger: I admit that the comments of my hon. friend for Winnipeg South are quite in order. But we must soberly discuss, especially to enable the house to obtain more tangible results than previously. It seems to me that we could, as we commonly say, meet half-way. If everybody did so, we would make greater progress.

Mr. Asselin (Charlevoix): Mr. Chairman, I listened very attentively to the speech of the hon. member for Montmagny-L'Islet (Mr. Berger). It is rather a lecture on rhetoric. He spoke of his past experience in private broadcasting stations. We know that he was once a brilliant announcer. But after the premises which he has just put forward, we immediately conclude that the amendment of our Conservative colleague should be carried.

The hon. member for Montmagny-L'Islet pleaded very remarkably in favour of fair play which must exist between the private sector and the C.B.C.

Of course, at the end of his speech he surrendered, as did several of his colleagues, when he said that it was absolutely necessary to follow the party line. This is why he ended up by admitting in a nearly inaudible voice that he had to support the position of the Liberal party and vote against the amendment of the member for Winnipeg South (Mr. Sherman).

Naturally, I am extremely surprised at the attitude of the member for Montmagny-L'Islet (Mr. Berger) considering that he said earlier that he is one of those who sacrificed his life to the edification of a private system of broadcasting in Quebec, a system which, I think, should remain in operation, in spite of the objections of the member for Hochelaga (Mr. Pelletier).

I understand perfectly, Mr. Chairman, that the member for Hochelaga can present himself as a regular defender of the C.B.C. It is a known fact that he was a member of the C.B.C. for many years. But when the hon. member tells us that parliament must support the objectives set in this bill, with regard to the C.B.C., he should keep in mind also that private radio and television stations must survive in Canada.

When the hon. member for Hochelaga said earlier that from his own experience and after interviewing owners of private radio and television stations, he found they were interested in profit rather than in culture, he may have been right. However, he forgot to mention that Canadian taxpayers are paying $90 or $100 million a year to meet the expenses of the C.B.C. and that the House of Commons must draw up a fair play legislation, so as to enable private radio and television stations to compete effectively with the C.B.C.

It is easy to put forward such great and noble goals as those contained in this bill with regard to the C.B.C. But we, the members of this house, represent the people who, through their taxes, contribute $90 million or $100 million a year to allow this crown corporation to operate this service.

Mr. Chairman, I was not surprised either to hear the echo—

• (9:20 p.m.)

[English]

Miss LaMarsh: The C.B.C. spends approximately $5 a year of the hon. member's money.

Mr. Asselin (Charlevoix): May be, may be.

[Translation]

Nor was I surprised to hear the echo of the C.B.C. in the House of Commons. I mean the hon. member for York South (Mr. Lewis) who stated his views a while ago. From the start of the debate, we wanted to respect the integrity and independence of the C.B.C.—but we all know that the greatest defenders of the C.B.C. are the members of the New Democratic party who have crept into the C.B.C. and who control its ideas and philosophy.

Naturally, it is not surprising that the hon. member for York South should defend the interests of that crown corporation, but I feel that private radio stations must be given the fair play they deserve. These people operate a private business enterprise. They have invested considerable funds in order to set up their organization. Quite objectively, I think that we should support the amendment introduced by our colleague so that the public interest will become the main objective, since it is a question of the objectivity of the provisions set out in clause 2(h).

For this reason, Mr. Chairman, I am willing to support the amendment introduced by a member of our party.

[English]

Mr. Bigg: Mr. Chairman, when people start losing an argument they always get dirty.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Bigg: They call each other names. The hon. member for Kamloops defined our problem very clearly, and his point was important. We should know what it is we are putting into law. From all the divergent views that have been expressed here, obviously we are not clear about what we are putting into the law. I will speak of what I think we should put into it.

We talk about the public interest, and this is a very high sounding phrase. I believe the public interest should be served at all times. That does not necessarily mean to me or to the majority of my party that the public interest is necessarily the C.B.C.'s interest. When I talk of the C.B.C. I ask right away, "Who is the C.B.C.?" The term "C.B.C." does not mean the minister of the crown. Apparently in the past it has not been the upper echelons of the C.B.C. that administered that body. The stuff that has been coming out of the other end of the funnel is unmitigated red propaganda, and that is why red propaganda is being defended by some members of the house tonight.

We speak about the rat; naturally the rat bites. We must be careful about what we are putting into law. It is no good saying afterwards, "Well, we thought we put something into the act and it wasn't there." The public interest in Canada means the interest of all the people of Canada, including me, and the people of Canada really want full coverage of the airwaves as outlined in (g). The problem is how to get what you have outlined in (g) out of the other end of the funnel? We must have the mechanics for doing what we want, and if we are hoodwinked, if we give the C.B.C.—and I put that term in parenthesis because I want to know who are they, who is the C.B.C.—full power to pollute the Canadian airwaves, that is not the intention of the house or committee.

In plain words, in conservative words or anyone else's words, we want fair treatment on the airwaves. That does not mean that just because you lean to the left your opinions should not be heard. We want to hear them, but we also want to hear fair comment from other people in our population—separatists, royalists or ordinary Canadians like myself.

We want to know if the C.B.C. administration will have teeth and if Mr. Davidson, a very able man, will be allowed to use his ability to clean up this mess that is called the C.B.C. that spends each year we are told, $170 million, plus of our money.

The lady minister says that it definitely is not her job to monitor what comes over the C.B.C. and she is desperately looking around for someone to take on that responsibility. Not many months ago this same lady explained that the reason for buying 120 colour television sets and distributing them was that she and her colleagues wanted to do just that—to monitor the C.B.C at our expense. They did not have enough money at $35,000 a year to buy themselves sets, so they had to buy them at public expense.

Miss LaMarsh: I hope the hon. member doesn't mind, but I am leaving to watch mine.

Mr. Bigg: So far we do not know who bought them or where they went, but we do know who is paying. We do not know who is using them or whether they have been given back.

They talk about listening to this or that program, but when it comes to drafting definite laws, they are not so clear. I predict that by the vote on this amendment they will know in good, clear, ordinary conservative language, what is wanted. If they do not want to do what is to be done, if they do not give the power to someone to clean up the mess, then we shall see that it is done. If this government will not do what is necessary it will not take long for the Canadian public to know about it. If it is not done under this government it will be done when we get in.

Mr. Nowlan: I wish to say something more on this clause. Since eight o'clock increasing numbers of members have come to this chamber. I wonder if the members on the government side appreciate that the clause we are discussing is pregnant with difficulties.

An hon. Member: What is it bringing forth.

• (9:30 p.m.)

Mr. Nowlan: A few words have been used in the clause which may be misinterpreted. I understand the position of my friends to the left and I refer particularly to the hon. member for York South. I can appreciate many of the remarks of the hon. member for Montmagny-L'Islet, but the question under discussion does need to be resolved by those who have experience in broadcasting. This is not a question of broadcasting philosophy but of political philosophy.

I can understand the hon. member for York South; his position is clear. I understand his strong objection to any amendment in this clause. If he had his way there would be no private network in this country. If he had his way there would be no private system anywhere. But I find it impossible to understand the thinking of many of my friends on the government side with respect to this clause. What does the amendment do? It merely says that the public interest shall prevail, and the council to be set up under this legislation shall determine in its deliberations what the public interest is.

The basic guide lines in the bill are set out in (b) and (g) and this amendment strikes me as perfectly reasonable. If it does not strike Liberal members that way, then I say it is high time for those members who say they espouse the classical Liberal philosophy to find what is their political id. Before they go to that convention in April they had better find out whether they are Liberals or whether they are sitting over here to my left. The hon. member for York South talked about a Roman holiday. He has not participated in this debate to any great extent. The hon. member for Burnaby-Richmond has, it is true, taken a positive part in it. But the hon. member for York South should remember that until we went into committee 42 members of this house spoke on this bill on the resolution stage and during second reading, 12 of whom came from Her Majesty's loyal opposition and seven from the rump to my left. Records will show that during the clause by clause study members of Her Majesty's opposition have been remarkably restrained in their comments on the bill. The objections came from hon. members to my left when private enterprise was the subject for consideration. But will they speak out now in connection with an amendment which should commend itself to those who are as liberal in thought as hon. members sitting to my left?

The hon. member for York South described this as the "touchstone" of the bill. He does not know what he is talking about. The touchstone of the bill has already been considered—when we were seeking to define the terms of reference governing both the C.B.C. and the private system in subclauses (d) and (e). The hon. member for Hochelaga gave a good example, from his point of view, of the difficulties this house gets into when trying to define what is good taste and what is poor taste. It appears he is against private enterprise because some of our private enterprise people in the back areas of the land, I take it, put on public opinion programs where you phone in—

Mr. Pelletier: I should like to make it clear to the hon. member that the programs I was mentioning are put out in Montreal.

Mr. Nowlan: I listen to the hon. member with respect when he talks about technical aspects of broadcasting because he, the hon. member for Winnipeg South and a number of other hon. members know more about technical aspects of it than I do. But this clause has nothing to do with technical matters. It concerns basic political philosophy.

I am not in favour of private enterprise unhampered by rules and regulations. But in line with the spirit of this amendment, I say that private enterprise should not concede its position to the national broadcasting system beforehand. Let us get the facts and then, if it comes within the terms of reference set out in the bill, the council will resolve the dispute. As things stand, any dispute would obviously be decided in favour of the national network. As I have pointed out, we already have an airways system competing with private enterprise and a railway system which does the same. Where, in the enabling statutes, is there such a clause as this which strikes at the very foundation of private enterprise in those fields? This is not a technical clause; it concerns one's basic political philosophy and this is why I believe any member can contribute to our discussion of a statute which says, in effect, that before all the facts are known matters in dispute are to be resolved in favour of the national service.

A great many of the comments made in this chamber during the last four or five days have been directed against the C.B.C. for a variety of reasons, some good and some bad. My comments on this clause have no relation to C.B.C. programs. While the hon. member for Hochelaga spoke eloquently he completely evaded the point I was making, which had nothing to do with the desirability or popularity of phone-in programs. If nothing else, these are programs which relieve frustration. If the hon. member had listened to Rawhide this morning he would understand that there are many ways in which to get rid of frustration. While he himself might not like these programs, there are members on all sides of the house who do, and who do not like certain C.B.C. programs. However, programs have nothing to do with the point I am making and I was disappointed that the hon. member did not stick to the point. St. Paul was converted on the road to Damascus and the hon. member for Hochelaga has obviously been converted. But when he takes a position similar to that taken by the hon. member for York South, I would say his conversion has gone quite far enough.

I hope members of the committee will take a second look at the import of this clause which, I say, castrates the council in its dealings with disputes arising between the private and public sector.

Mr. Howard: After listening to what has been, if you will pardon me, Mr. Chairman, a low-level speech by the hon. member for Digby-Annapolis-Kings I can understand precisely what the hon. member for Athabasca meant when he began by saying that if you begin to lose an argument you get dirty.

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, clause 2 (h) deals with the conflicts that could arise between the objectives of the national broadcasting service and those of the private broadcasting service. Therefore, we are talking about conflicts.

One thing is missing in that subclause. Should a conflict arise between the national broadcasting service and the Secretary of State (Miss LaMarsh)—who is responsible to the house for the management of the C.B.C.—who will settle the matter? If the minister charges that the C.B.C. is rotten and the management says that it is not so, who will decide where the rottenness is? There is nothing in that subclause which states what objectives and interests will prevail should such a conflict arise.

Recently, more conflicts arose between the C.B.C. and the Secretary of State than between the private sector and the corporation. We made no special provision at that time, but I should like to know whether the Secretary of State intends to include an amendment in subclause (h) providing for the creation of a body who would settle such conflicts. In the case of a conflict as the one I just mentioned, should the Secretary of State's interests prevail over those of the C.B.C., or should it be otherwise?

Hon. members will recall that the minister charged the C.B.C. with rotten management. There is no provision as to the way of solving this conflict.

Some machinery should be provided for the settlement of those conflicts, because doubts exist as to charges put forward by the minister against the C.B.C.

I wonder if it would not be advisable to include some provision in the bill. I see that the parliamentary secretary is motioning to me that it is useless to do so. Nevertheless, he knows quite well that conflicts are not restricted to private and public sectors. Why always leave the Canadian people doubtful? Canadians are now wondering where is the rot. The minister cannot say yes or no, because there is no provision, no machinery to settle the differences and the question, to wit: where and at what level is the rot.

I am therefore wondering whether we should not add to subclause (h) a provision, capable of anticipating any conflict liable to arise between the hon. Secretary of State and the C.B.C. I think it is important to prevent any recurrence of those disgraceful scenes which we have been witnessing recently, and it is imperative to try and find a way to settle them once and for all.

• (9:40 p.m.)

[English]

Mr. Aiken: Mr. Chairman, I shall take only a minute or two to add a few comments to what has been said. I must admit that I agree entirely with my hon. friend from Digby-Annapolis-Kings. I wish to speak on a rather technical point. Subclauses (d) and (g) set out in very broad general terms the objectives of the public broadcasting system. It seems to me that it will be impossible for the commission to make a decision in individual cases based upon these general objectives when we say, for example, in subclause (g) that the national broadcasting service should be a balanced service of information, enlightenment and entertainment for people of different ages, interests and tastes covering the whole range of programming in fair proportion. That wording is so broad that I believe it would make it impossible for a specific decision to be made in any case. In other words, how could the commission ever say that it had made its decision on the two conflicting points of view of the national broadcasting service and the interests of private broadcasting?

I say that these words are so vague that they would not enable one to come to a fair conclusion. Therefore I believe the commission would have an impossible task in endeavouring to reach its decision on the objectives. This would seem to be a situation where we have nothing against nothing, when we attempt to reach a decision under subclause (h). In that case I can hardly see how the decision could be based on the objectives of the national broadcasting system, until these are spelled out. Obviously they will have to be spelled out in detail by the national broadcasting system. Therefore the broadcasting system will go before the board and say that in conformity with their general approach to a balanced service of information, enlightenment and entertainment they feel that a certain situation must apply. If we should find that this is part of our objective and that this is the way it is applied, how could others hold a contrary view because they reached their decision under the umbrella of subclauses (d) and (g)?

Subclauses (d) and (g) were designed to express as clearly as possible what the objectives are, but they certainly were never set up to spell out particular cases or to give anyone the ability to say what is meant in a particular case. Surely subclauses (d) and (g) are very much like a statute which would say that the public broadcasting system may enact regulations, which regulations would spell out exactly what is meant. So in this case we have the ability of the national broadcasting service to spell out by regulation the case it is trying to put before the commission. I believe it would be an impossible and unfair task for the commission to attempt to make anything out of subclauses (d) and (g) in respect of a specific case, if the broadcasting system claimed that it was in the national interest.

Having reached this conclusion, it would be difficult for one to accept subclause (h) as it stands as representing the objectives of the national broadcasting service which should prevail, because there really is nothing on which to base a decision. Surely the national interests should prevail in such a case. I believe that in defining this one must take into consideration not only subclauses (d) and (g) but the whole situation. I think the subclause as it stands would permit an impossible situation. It would permit the national broadcasting service to declare its own objectives specifically, and therefore hamper any independent decision by the commission.

[Mr. Aiken.]

Mr. Sherman: Mr. Chairman, I believe the hon. member for Parry Sound-Muskoka has identified a very important ingredient in this debate. He has isolated an element which some of us have been groping for and which some members farther to the left in this chamber believe has already been identified in the wording of the legislation as it potentially stands. The element to which I refer is the definition of the objectives of the national broadcasting service.

I cannot subscribe to the argument of the hon. member for York South, so far as the objectives of the national broadcasting service are concerned. I do not believe that the legislation as presently worded defines the objectives of the national broadcasting service. If it is our intention to isolate and articulate the objectives of the national broadcasting system, why do we not say so? We do not say so here. We say that there are several things the national broadcasting service should do. One is that it should constitute a balanced service of information; another is that it should be extended to all parts of Canada; another is that it should be in English and French and should contribute to a continued expression of Canadian identity.

I subscribe with the utmost enthusiasm to all these things, but this does not cover the whole area of philosophical thought, national preoccupation or the direction in which this country is moving in the whole area of broadcasting or in the area of creative or industrial activity.

• (9:50 p.m.)

This isolates four points in respect of which there should be guide lines for services performed by the C.B.C. These should be adhered to as principles, philosophies and means. Do these cover the application of national objectivity? Of course they do not. I can think of other areas of objectivity for the guidance of the C.B.C., or any other national broadcasting system. These are not covered by the wording of subclause (g). Subclause (g) does not purport to set out these objectives. It simply identifies four things that a national broadcasting system should either be or constitute. These are entirely acceptable to everyone in this chamber. No one is more enthusiastic about the provisions of that subclause than I am, but that does not mean they cover the whole realm of possibility so far as national broadcasting service is concerned. For these reasons I suggest the argument of the hon. member for York South is specious. I think he has conveniently and intelligently evaded and avoided the point at issue here.

What we are talking about is the letter of the law. This is something we hear a great deal about in terms of our society, our legal system and our jurisprudence. The letter of the law is that when such and such a conflict arises, for time immemorial and from this day forward, the objective of a national service shall prevail. No matter what interpretation the hon. lady places on this; no matter what philosophy hon. members contrive to purport, and no matter what objectives members of the N.D.P. want to suggest, the fact is we are talking about the letter of the law. No matter what aspect arises in respect of a dispute regarding this whole matter, the main point of the debate on subclause (g), is that the authorities should follow the guide lines imposed by this parliament.

It may well be that someone will ask why they should.

An hon. Member: And why should they?

Mr. Sherman: That is a very good question, and I should like to reply. Let me suggest to the hon. member for Kenora-Rainy River that we are talking about a hypothetical idealistic situation which cannot exist. It is unrealistic to expect that in four or five years from now, when two litigants to a broadcasting dispute come before whatever authority might be in existence, the authority will be acquainted with the various aspects and convolutions of this debate, and the debate in committee before the legislation reached this stage. They are not going to be aware of the different philosophical approaches adopted during this debate, but they should not be deprived of the varying aspects of those approaches.

Earlier, the minister, when making a representation to my colleague the hon. member for Kamloops, asked if that member did not think the B.B.G. representatives who have sat in the gallery throughout this debate would get the point that we in the opposition are trying to make in the interest of the public. I think that was the substance of her question. This question begs the greater question namely, are we talking about the letter of the law? It does not really matter whether the representatives of the B.B.G. understand what we are talking about, but it does matter that future representatives of that body have guide lines based on our approach.

Miss LaMarsh: Would the hon. member permit a question? Does he propose to impose on my generosity any further by asking to stand other clauses in order that he may be in the house to occupy our time during the consideration of this bill?

Mr. Sherman: Let me just say in answer that if in the course of the examination of any legislation introduced by the hon. lady or any other minister we find a clause, subclause or paragraph in respect of which there is a vital interest at stake to my constituents or Canadians in general, I hope that we will be able to examine it to the fullest, and that no arbitrary or cursory rule will shut off such examination.

Miss LaMarsh: I suggest that you should be here in the future when these things are considered.

Mr. Sherman: As I said earlier today, I appreciate the indulgence the minister has shown me in respect of this particular subclause. I have made it clear that this is one part of the bill which disturbs me greatly. The minister must concede that a great number of members in this chamber, including some of her own colleagues, are also disturbed. I do not think we have resolved this point.

Miss LaMarsh: If you sit down we will do so by a vote.

Mr. Sherman: I will sit down when I have completed what I have to say. I should like to make reference to what the minister proposed earlier in the day, which could be termed a sort of amendment to the amendment, or a proposal to a change. I am sure the amendment originally moved is not acceptable to many members on this side. It imposes restrictions and constrictions such as those already contained in subclause (h). It would result in a disadvantage to private enterprise in this country to a more severe extent than the subclause as it now stands. I do not find the suggestion of the minister acceptable.

Mr. Chairman, may I call it ten o'clock.

Progress reported.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

Mr. Fulton: Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask whether we may assume that there is no change in the business of the house and that it is the intention to continue with this bill until it is concluded?

Mr. Turner: Yes.

Proceedings on Adjournment Motion

• (10:00 p.m.)

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

A motion to adjourn the house under provisional standing order 39A deemed to have been moved.

VOCATIONAL AND TECHNICAL TRAINING—PROTEST BY STUDENTS RESPECTING LIVING ALLOWANCE

Hon. W. G. Dinsdale (Brandon-Souris): Mr. Speaker, in 1960 a vocational and technical training act was approved by parliament to make up for the tragic gap in our educational facilities that had existed far too long. It was a great success, as has been witnessed by many, including the Minister of Manpower and Immigration (Mr. Marchand) who in a recent speech made the statement that during the last three months of 1966 and early in 1967, the monthly enrolment in these schools doubled compared to last year. Then he went on to say that such success, impressive as it might be, is not enough.

Unfortunately, the present government was not satisfied with this success and they brought in a new act on April 1, 1967. Since that time our technical training program has been in serious difficulty right across the country. It is not necessary for me, nor is there time, to recite all the difficulties, but they include the problem of drop-outs, which is one of our major educational problems; and the schools, notwithstanding the rising rate of unemployment, are only half full. In addition, the program costs more, which is mainly due to increasing administrative costs. The able bodied, who formerly were able to undergo technical retraining, are now back on the relief rolls. Students who took an upgrading course last year find they are not eligible this year for continued subsistence under the O.T.A. allowances program.

The real reason for the difficulty has been the failure of the federal government to consult with the provinces. In an attempt to get to the bottom of these problems I have found that even though the act was passed by this house last April, no agreement was put before the provinces until May, after the act was actually passed. I found, too, that the manpower department had bought more space than they were able to use, with the result that the program is not fulfilling the need, as I have indicated.

The specific problem to which I should like to refer tonight arises from a protest that arose during the Christmas period in the Manitoba technical school—

[Mr. Turner.]

Mr. J. C. Munro (Parliaimentary Secretary to Minister of Manpower and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, I do not want to take up the time of the hon. member, but I should like to ask him a question. With regard to the specific question which I understand he is now going to raise, has he not received a reply from the minister? If so, was he satisfied with the contents of that reply? I believe the minister replied to the hon. member's question, and also to the students involved at the technical school at Brandon. I understand that replies were sent out, which I believe corrected the situation. I just wanted the hon. member's comments on this.

Mr. Dinsdale: In reply to the interjection of the parliamentary secretary, Mr. Speaker, I would say that I did receive a reply. I have not yet stated the problem. Perhaps I had better state it before answering the parliamentary secretary's question. The specific difficulty arose immediately before Christmas because it was announced that the allowances would not be paid during the Christmas recess. Several hon. members raised this question. Then hard on the heels of this withdrawal of assistance was a holdback, during the first week after Christmas, of one week's allowance to build up a sort of emergency fund to take care of any eventualities that might arise.

I did contact the minister suggesting that this holdback might be delayed until such time as the students could recoup their fortunes. The wire I received from the minister was in the following words:

> I appreciate your point concerning arrangements for payment of training allowances following the Christmas recess. This action is being implemented gradually during January to minimize trainees difficulties.

When I returned to Ottawa a headline appeared in the Brandon Sun as follows, "Students Denounce Allowance Holdback Scheme." It was dated January 18 after my wire, dated January 12, was received. My question to the minister the other day was whether he had received this protest from the 200 students at the Manitoba vocational and technical school in Brandon, and if so what reply had been given or what action he had taken to resolve this difficulty. I could read the specific points which were raised by the students in their protest but I do not think it is necessary. All that I wish to have at this time is an assurance that the students' protest was dealt with. According to this newspaper article, they also sent a wire. I should like to know what action was taken to resolve this difficulty.

Mr. Munro: Mr. Speaker, in answer to the hon. member I should like to say that undeniably we have been experiencing some difficulty in administration, but we believe that the problem has been largely ironed out and that the living allowance cheques are getting there on time now. We believe that the explanation we gave to the students involved was satisfactory, and we doubt there will be a recurrence of this problem; we certainly hope there will not be.

INDUSTRIAL RELATIONS AND DISPUTES INVESTIGATION ACT—INQUIRY CONCERNING STATEMENT BY ASSISTANT DEPUTY MINISTER

Mr. Robert McCleave (Halifax): Mr. Speaker, earlier this month the Labour Gazette published an article which has caused considerable but perhaps quiet excitement in some corners of the country, due to the fact that on a rare occasion in its history it published in toto the speech of an official of the Department of Labour, the highly respected Bernard Wilson, the assistant deputy minister (labour relations) of the Department of Labour. This was a speech he gave to a panel of the Canadian Association of Administrators of Labour Legislation at its twenty sixth annual conference in Ottawa, held last September. Perhaps there is nothing in the introduction to that speech which would generate special excitement, but at the end of his speech the assistant deputy minister made the following suggestion which is to be found at page 13 of that issue of the Labour Gazette:

> The following extra provision, added to existing federal or provincial labour legislation, might be considered in seeking less labour unrest while giving recognition to rights that a large part of labour consider fundamental.
>
> Notwithstanding the provisions of sections 21 and 22 of this act (the Industrial Relations and Disputes Investigation Act), where a strike or lockout has taken place and has been in effect for 14 days from the date of its inception, the governor in council may, if the strike or lockout imperils the safety or security of Canada or the economic welfare and livelihood of great numbers of its citizens, other than those participating directly in the strike or lockout, promulgate regulations for the resumption of operations by the employer and by the employees, and for the final settlement of the dispute without further strike or lockout.
>
> To forestall the inevitable objection that the government will be brought into every important dispute in essential industry, it should be pointed out that that situation exists now. In further extenuation, it can also be argued that, where great questions of public interest, critical national or regional economic loss and the exercise of human rights are concerned, there are few matters of more importance to governments, and more deserving of their time.

Indeed, the gentleman is right; this is one of the big issues of our time, namely how far the government interferes or intervenes in questions of disputes. I checked the latest speech of my friend from the Dalhousie University law school, the Minister of Labour, delivered to the University of Western Ontario law forum on January 27 and found that his position does not come up to that of Mr. Wilson.

On that occasion he said:

• (10:10 p.m.)

> The government's role surely should be a conciliatory and a mediatory one, a role that will bring the disputants together and encourage them to find a formula for settlement less costly to their immediate and separate interest than the continuation of their rigid positions would be.
>
> In essence then, the optimum role and the responsibility of government is to continue to hold available to disputants suitable procedural machinery to enable them to find their own solutions within a reasonable period of time.

Later on in that same speech, the minister had this to say:

> Because a whole new range of puzzling problems is arising in industrial relations today, I visualize —and have been planning for—a new role for my department. No longer shall we be merely the referees: now we are taking and will continue to take anticipatory initiatives. Since the very existence of our conciliation branch presupposes a possible breakdown of collective bargaining, I would view it as the greatest achievement of a Minister of Labour to make it an unnecessary part of what is now my department.
>
> Our emphasis should—and I hope will—change to becoming a trusted and "honest broker" before real trouble breaks out. We should become fire prevention officers, not firefighters.

Well, Mr. Speaker, I think there is probably enough difference in these points of view to indicate that this is a matter of some considerable public concern, and something which will be debated in Canada no doubt over the next five or ten years. In view of this fact, I thought I would pose a question to the minister to see if his philosophy leans one way or the other or whether Mr. Bernard Wilson was merely floating a very large balloon, the largest balloon I have seen floated by a civil servant in Canada. I am endeavouring to ascertain whether Mr. Wilson was expressing something which will eventually become government policy.

Proceedings on Adjournment Motion

Hon. J. R. Nicholson (Minister of Labour): When the question was put a few days ago by my hon. friend, I thought my parliamentary secretary gave a very good answer. He said emphatically and unequivocally that no legislation such as that suggested in the question was in contemplation. Perhaps, Mr. Speaker, a word of explanation as to how the article came to be published would be of interest. There is an organization in Canada known as the Canadian Association of Administrators of Labour Legislation. The membership consists of the federal deputy minister and the ten provincial deputy ministers of labour. They, and their senior officials, meet annually to discuss matters or to think out loud about what may or may not be done to improve labour-management relations in this country.

Last year's meeting that took place in Ottawa in September last was the one in which the assistant deputy minister, to whom reference has been made by my hon. friend put forward as a suggestion the one referred to by my hon. friend, amongst a number of other suggestions. It so happens one of the western provinces, Alberta I think, has legislation similar to that which was suggested as something that might be considered by the group attending this conference. The suggestion was put forward merely as something that might be considered by those in attendance. There are a number of other suggestions in the paper.

One of those suggestions was that the right to strike might even be extended on certain occasions rather than curtailed, which is the exact antithesis of what was covered in the question raised by my hon. friend. I assure my hon. friend and others that these meetings which are held regularly, and I have been following them now for over two years, are really worth while. They are stimulating. This provocative paper which was presented by the assistant deputy minister was one of several put forward to provoke discussion. I wish we had a lot more discussions of that kind. The paper was so good the editor of the Labour Review published the article almost in toto. Therein lies the explanation for the article and how it came to be published.

Motion agreed to and the house adjourned at 10.16 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Wednesday, January 31, 1968

The house met at 2.30 p.m.

[Translation]

GOVERNMENT DOCUMENTS

PROVISION FOR PRINTING IN BOTH ENGLISH AND FRENCH

Mr. Patrick T. Asselin (Richmond-Wolfe) moved for leave to introduce Bill No. C-199 intituled "An Act respecting bilingual documents".

Some hon. Members: Explain.

Mr. Asselin (Richmond-Wolfe): Mr. Speaker, as Canada is a bilingual country, it is advisable that all documents sent from time to time to Canadians by the various departments of the government, in order to get statistical information or for other reasons, should be written in both official languages of the country: French and English.

[English]

Motion agreed to and bill read the first time.

QUESTIONS

(Questions answered orally are indicated by an asterisk.)

LESS THAN CARLOAD FREIGHT TRAFFIC

Question No. 430—Mr. Nowlan:

1. What volume in tons of less than carload freight traffic was (a) loaded and (b) unloaded at railway stations in (i) Canada (ii) the Atlantic Provinces (iii) Ontario and Quebec (iv) Western Canada, during the years 1960-1966, inclusive?

2. What volume in tons of less than carload express traffic was (a) loaded and (b) unloaded at railway stations in (i) Canada (ii) the Atlantic Provinces (iii) Ontario and Quebec (iv) Western Canada, during the years 1960-1966, inclusive?

3. What annual increase or reduction in revenue expressed in dollars is expected to accrue to the Canadian railways from the introduction on September 5, 1967, of new rates for the movement of non-carload traffic?

4. What percentage increase or reduction in revenue do the railways anticipate from the new non-carload rates in relation to the formerly applicable LCL freight rates in (a) Canada (b) the Atlantic Provinces (c) Ontario and Quebec (d) Western Canada?

5. What percentage increase or reduction in revenue do the new non-carload rates represent to the railways over the formerly applicable LCL express rates in (a) Canada (b) the Atlantic Provinces (c) Ontario and Quebec (d) Western Canada?

6. If the data requested in Parts 4 and 5 are not available by provinces, what are they for the territories of Maritime, Eastern and Western as described in the Board of Transport Commissioners Waybill analysis for Atlantic Provinces, Ontario and Quebec, and Western Canada, respectively?

Mr. J. A. Byrne (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): The Canadian Transport Commission advises as follows: 1. Information requested is contained in the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reports "Railway Freight Traffic". Data has been extracted for the years 1960-1966 inclusive and is shown hereunder:—

2, 3, 4, 5 and 6. No information is available with respect to these questions.

Tons of L.C.L. freight

Year	Loaded in Canada				Unloaded in Canada
	Canada	Atlantic provinces	Ontario and Quebec	Western Canada	Canada	Atlantic provinces	Ontario and Quebec	Western Canada
1960.....	1,110,768	187,398	622,652	300,718	1,211,354	263,305	618,272	329,777
1961.....	991,832	213,203	514,721	263,908	1,047,347	237,295	528,573	281,479
1962.....	1,057,466	230,229	548,549	278,688	1,130,146	263,775	572,587	293,784
1963.....	971,543	203,609	493,971	273,963	1,025,823	237,972	487,991	299,860
1964.....	865,265	153,049	413,251	298,965	918,172	209,271	392,668	316,233
1965.....	1,151,296	194,147	612,679	344,470	1,198,875	234,969	605,128	358,778
1966.....	891,238	158,160	421,001	312,077	951,300	206,913	420,846	323,541

Questions

C.N.R. EMPLOYEES LAID OFF IN NEWFOUNDLAND

Question No. 625—Mr. Knowles:

1. How many employees of the Canadian National Railways in the Province of Newfoundland were laid off in each of the following years: 1957, 1958, 1959, 1960, 1961, 1962, 1963, 1964, 1965 and 1966?

2. With respect to the above, how many in each year were (a) scheduled employees (b) non-scheduled employees?

Mr. J. A. Byrne (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): The management of Canadian National Railways advises as follows: 1. and 2. By the nature of the railroad industry, across the system, lay-off and recall is a day by day local activity of which aggregate records are not maintained. Since 1965, the company has extracted aggregate data for those lay-offs exceeding 30 days or any complete calendar month. In 1965 and 1966, such lay-off actions affecting scheduled employees numbered 151 and 269 respectively. Employee recalls, for those who had been laid-off, in those years or prior years, for more than 30 days or any complete calendar month, numbered 704 and 660 respectively. The classification "laid-off" is not normally used in respect of non-scheduled employees.

C.N.R. TRACKAGE, EASTERN QUEBEC—N.B.

Question No. 796—Mr. LeBlanc (Rimouski):

In the Chaleur Region of the Canadian National Railways, how many miles of main railroad track (excluding sidings) are there in (a) Quebec (b) New Brunswick?

Mr. J. A. Byrne (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): The management of Canadian National Railways advises as follows: (a) 648.24 miles; (b) 781.09 miles.

C.N.R. PASSENGER TRAFFIC, EASTERN QUEBEC—N.B.

Question No. 797—Mr. LeBlanc (Rimouski):

In each of the last five years, how many passengers boarded Montreal bound Canadian National Railways trains at (a) Bathurst (b) Campbellton (c) Mont-Joli (d) Rimouski?

Mr. J. A. Byrne (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): The management of Canadian National Railways advises as follows: It has not been the practice nor is it considered in the best interests of the company to disclose information of a nature which would be of value to its competitors.

[Mr. Byrne.]

C.N.R. REVENUE AT CERTAIN STATIONS

Question No. 798—Mr. LeBlanc (Rimouski):

What was the revenue of the Canadian National Railways in each of the stations of (a) Halifax (b) Moncton (c) Bathurst (d) Campbellton (e) Edmundston (f) Mont-Joli (g) Rimouski, in each of the years (i) 1962-63 (ii) 1963-64 (iii) 1964-65 (iv) 1965-66 (v) 1966-67, for A) passenger tickets and (B) tickets for berths and roomettes?

Mr. J. A. Byrne (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): The management of Canadian National Railways advises as follows: It has not been the practice nor is it considered in the best interests of the company to disclose information of a nature which would be of value to its competitors.

C.N.R. STAFF ON CHALEUR TRAIN

Question No. 799—Mr. LeBlanc (Rimouski):

1. How many employees of the Canadian National Railways are part of the staff serving the travelling public on the Chaleur train which serves the people of the Lower St. Lawrence and the Gaspe Peninsula?

2. Of this number, how many speak French only?

3. How many speak only English?

4. How many are bilingual?

Mr. J. A. Byrne (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): The management of Canadian National Railways advises as follows: 1. 139.

2. Nil.

3. 39.

4. 100.

It is the company's policy and practice, through language instruction, to encourage and assist employees in acquiring the degree of proficiency in either language required by their present or prospective positions.

MAINTENANCE OF HAINES ROAD

Question No. 802—Mr. Nielsen:

1. For each of the years during which the Haines road has been maintained during the winter months, what has been the cost thereof to (a) the Canadian Government (b) the Government of the United States of America?

2. For each of the said years, has the Canadian Government paid any money to the Government of the United States for the maintenance by the American Government of any portion of the said road in Canada and, if so, how much money was so paid?

3. Does any similar cost-sharing arrangement with the Government of the United States exist with respect to any other road in Canada?

Hon. Judy V. LaMarsh (Secretary of State): I am informed by the Department of Public Works as follows: Until the winter of 1963-64 the southern section of the Haines road from the Port of Haines to Mile 48 (six miles within the Canada-U.S.A. border), and the northern section from Mile 94 to the junction with the Alaska highway (Mile 159), had been kept open to provide access to United States army pumping stations which were vital links on the oil pipe line to Alaska. The state of Alaska kept open the southern section and Canada kept open the northern section on repayment by the United States army. The central section (Mile 48 to 94) was closed during the winter.

In 1962 the state of Alaska opened a marine ferry for freight, truck, car and passenger traffic between Prince Rupert and the Alaskan panhandle ports, including Haines. With the opening of this ferry, pressure developed to keep all of the Haines road open during the winter as a connecting link for traffic to the Yukon and Alaska. This was first attempted during the winter of 1963-64 on an experimental basis. As Canada did not have the necessary heavy snow clearing equipment available, agreement was reached with the state of Alaska for the state to provide equipment and crews on repayment. By the spring of 1967 it had been established that winter maintenance was feasible. The Canadian government accordingly made arrangements to take over full responsibility for the maintenance of the Canadian section of the road.

1. (a) The cost, in Canadian dollars, including the payments to the state of Alaska set forth in Part 2 below, to the Canadian government:

Year	Mile 42-94	Mile 94-159
Winter of 1963-64	153,516	Nil
" " 1964-65	159,569	Nil
" " 1965-66	155,594	Nil
" " 1966-67	162,798	Nil

(b) The Department of Public Works has been provided with certain cost figures on which to base our payment which has a maximum limit; however, we cannot affirm that these figures represent the total cost to the state of Alaska and the United States (United States army) for maintenance. In any case, we cannot publish these figures without first having been given appropriate consent.

2. Payments, in Canadian dollars, were made to the state of Alaska under the terms of the winter maintenance agreement with the Department of Public Works:

Year	Mile 42-94
Winter of 1963-64	137,248
" " 1964-65	138,098
" " 1965-66	135,943
" " 1966-67	138,098

3. So far as the Department of Public Works is concerned, there is no other similar cost sharing arrangement with respect to any other road in Canada.

CANCELLATIONS OF AIR CANADA FLIGHTS 390 AND 391

Question No. 843—Mr. Peters:

1. How many times during the months of October and November was the regular Air Canada Flight No. 391, originating out of Montreal and going to airports of Ottawa, Val d'Or, Rouyn, Earlton, North Bay and Toronto, cancelled and for what reason in each case?

2. During the same period, was the regular Flight No. 390, originating in Toronto and going to the airports of North Bay, Earlton, Rouyn, Val d'Or, Ottawa and Montreal, cancelled and, if so, for what reason in each case?

3. In each case, in both 1 and 2, how many people were involved in each cancellation at each airport, and what alternative did the Air Line provide in each case?

4. What reason for cancellation was given to the passengers?

5. Has any suggestion been made by the carrier to offer better service to the public served by Air Canada Flights No. 391 and No. 390?

Mr. J. A. Byrne (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): The management of Air Canada advises as follows: 1. Flight 391, October: cancellations: nil. November: cancellations: 8, reason: weather.

2. Flight 390, October: cancellations: nil. November: cancellations: 9, reason: weather.

3. Since the flights did not operate, records have not been retained of numbers of passengers involved. The airline provided first available air or surface transportation for the passengers to their destinations, in accordance with their wishes.

4. Adverse weather conditions caused the cancellations and the passengers were so advised.

5. Improvement in operations in the Rouyn-Earlton area would require vast sums of money to be spent on runways, landing aids, etc. and Air Canada has not felt justified in recommending such expenditures on the part of the government.

Questions

EMPLOYEES ON C.N.R. FERRIES, MARITIME PROVINCES

Question No. 873—Mr. MacDonald (Prince):

1. On November 1, 1965, 1966 and 1967, how many persons were employed aboard the vessels, M.V. Abegweit, S.S. Prince Edward Island, M.V. Confederation and S.S. Scotia, operated by Canadian National Railways, in all capacities, e.g., deckhands, stewardesses, wipers, electricians, firemen, oilers, stewards, carpenters, boatswains, engineers all classes, etc.?

2. What is the legal requirement concerning the number of men serving aboard these ships for the purpose of operating lifeboats, other lifesaving equipment, fire prevention, etc.?

3. Is it contemplated that between now and May 1, 1968, any persons employed full-time are to be laid off and, if so, when and what positions and for what duration of time?

Mr. J. A. Byrne (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): The management of Canadian National Railways advises as follows: 1. The number of crew, excluding relief personnel, as at November 1st, each year was as follows:

	1965	1966	1967
M.V. Abegweit	95	99	99
S.S. Prince Edward Island	(a) 69	94	100
M.V. Confederation	85	(b) 58	(b) 37
S.S. Scotia II	52	(b) 15	(c) 2

(a) Vessel in drydock.

(b) Vessel laid up.

(c) Vessel laid up without power or steam and all machinery immobilized.

2. The Canada Shipping Act states that "every steamship registered in Canada shall be manned with a crew sufficient and efficient from the point of view of safety of life for the purpose of her intended voyage". The legal requirement established by the Canadian steamship inspection board is 16, 17 and 19 certificated lifeboatmen per shift on the Abegweit, Prince Edward Island and Confederation, respectively, when in operation. The Canadian National complies to the fullest extent with these regulations.

3. While no further lay-offs are presently contemplated, management must exercise its judgment in relating the size of the work force to the volume of traffic moving and seasonal factors.

[Mr. Byrne.]

C.N.R. PASSENGER TRAIN SERVICE, NEWFOUNDLAND

Question No. 879—Mr. Schreyer:

With respect to C.N.R. Passenger Train Service in Newfoundland:

1. What was the number of passengers carried for the years 1961, 1962, 1963, 1964, 1965 and 1966 by coach and first class?

2. What was the revenue from passenger traffic for the years noted in Part 1?

3. What was the cost to the Railway for operating the passenger trains for the years noted in Part 1?

4. What was the average number of coach cars, parlour cars, dining cars and other cars used in passenger service per train for the years noted in Part 1?

5. What was the number of S.D. and P.C. and other train passenger employees for the years noted in Part 1?

6. What was the number of new cars and other equipment purchased for train passenger service for the years noted in Part 1?

7. What is the number of employees that will be displaced, if the train passenger service is discontinued, and their total earnings for 1966?

8. What is the fastest time that a train proceeded from Port aux Basques to St. John's and at what stations or sidings did it stop?

9. Prior to the public announcement on April 4, 1967, that a bus service would start by the C.N.R., were discussions held with any governments?

Mr. J. A. Byrne (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): The management of Canadian National Railways advises as follows:

1. The total number of revenue passengers carried in each of the years 1961 to 1966 inclusive is as follows: 1961, 151,491; 1962, 126,567; 1963, 111,586; 1964, 118,307; 1965, 119,046; 1966, 87,796.

Data is not readily available to furnish a breakdown of these passengers by coach and sleeping car prior to the year 1966. During the year 1966 there were 71,481 coach and 16,315 sleeping car passengers.

2 and 3. It is considered not to be in the best interests of the company to disclose publicly this type of information. However, pursuant to section 314I, subsections 3, 4 and 5 of the Railway Act, the railway is required to submit on a confidential basis, such information to the railway transport committee of the Canadian transport commission which then determines and makes public the actual loss or profit figure. In this connection, that committee by order No. R-507 dated November 6, 1967 has established that the said passenger train service incurred an actual loss of $918,000 in the year ended December 31, 1966.

Questions

4.

Year	Coach	Sleeper	Dining	Other
1963—Summer	4	4	2	2
Winter	4	3	1	2
1964—Summer	5	4	2	2
Winter	4	4	2	1
1965—Summer	4	5	2	2
Winter	5	5	2	2
1966—Summer	4	4	2	2
Winter	4	4	2	2

5.

	S.D. and P.C. employees		Train and engine crew
Year	Summer	Winter	Summer	Winter
1961	76	54	36	32
1962	62	46	36	22
1963	72	35	36	22
1964	73	42	36	22
1965	92	39	40	24
1966	66	30	40	24

6. No new passenger equipment was purchased for the Newfoundland service during the years in question. However, during the period 1949 to 1958, 48 units of various types were acquired.

7. It is not possible at this time to state exactly how many employees will be displaced since there are a number of labour crafts, and seniority regulations of each craft which will be involved. It is currently estimated that about 130 permanent positions and 56 seasonal positions will become redundant. The total salary rates for these positions is approximately $955,000. However, it is expected the proposed bus operation will require approximately 57 permanent employees, the total annual payroll of which would be about $340,000. Every effort will be made to fill these new positions with, or offer alternate employment to, those displaced if the passenger train services are discontinued.

8. The fastest scheduled time for passenger trains operating between St. John's and Port aux Basques was for train No. 101 which covered the route in 21 hours during the summer of 1967.

9. No.

OIL POLLUTION IN NATIONAL HARBOURS

Question No. 892—Mr. McCleave:

1. How many cases of oil pollution were investigated in Halifax Harbour, referred to on page 5662 of Hansard, in 1965, 1966 and 1967; how many were traced to source; and how many actions were launched in courts?

2. What were the equivalent experiences in Montreal and Vancouver in each of the three years for cases investigated, sources of pollution traced, and actions launched?

Mr. J. A. Byrne (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): 1. 1965: Cases investigated, two; traced to source, nil; court actions, nil. 1966: Cases investigated, three; traced to source, three; court actions, one; 1967: Cases investigated, four; traced to source, one; court actions, nil.

2. Vancouver: 1965: Cases investigated, one; traced to source, nil; court actions, nil. 1966: Cases investigated, four; traced to source, three; court actions, one. 1967: Cases investigated, six; traced to source, six; court actions, two. Montreal: 1965: Cases investigated, 18; traced to source, 10; court actions, four. 1966: Cases investigated, 19; traced to source, 14; court actions, four. 1967: Cases investigated, 24, traced to source, 16; court actions, 12.

EMPLOYMENT SERVICE EMPLOYEES ABROAD

Question No. 905—Mr. Laprise:

How many employees does the National Employment Service have in (a) the United Kingdom (b) France (c) other countries?

[Translation]

Mr. John C. Munro (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Manpower and Immigration): The Canada Manpower Division (formerly known as the National Employment Service) has no employees outside Canada.

Questions

[English]

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE, EMPLOYMENT SERVICE AND MANPOWER EMPLOYEES, NOVA SCOTIA

Question No. 912—Mr. Coates:

1. How many employees were involved in the operation of the Office of the Unemployment Insurance Commission and the National Employment Service at Amherst, Nova Scotia, as of January 1, 1963?

2. How many employees were involved in the operation of the Manpower Office at Amherst, Nova Scotia, as of January 1, 1968?

3. How many employees were involved in the operation of the Office of the Unemployment Insurance Commission and the National Employment Service at Springhill, Nova Scotia, as of January 1, 1963?

4. How many employees were involved in the operation of the Manpower Office in Springhill, Nova Scotia, as of January 1, 1968?

Hon. Judy V. LaMarsh (Secretary of State): I am informed by Unemployment Insurance Commission and the Department of Manpower and Immigration as follows:

1. Twelve employees.

2. Eight employees.

3. Eight employees.

4. Four employees.

MANPOWER CENTRE DESK CALENDARS

Question No. 915—Mrs. Wadds:

1. How many desk calendars for the year 1968 were supplied to the Canada Manpower Centre, 17 Church Street East, Smiths Falls, Ontario, and under whose authority?

2. What was the total cost of these calendars?

3. Were other Canada Manpower Centres across Canada supplied with similar calendars and, if so, at what locations and in what numbers?

4. What was the total cost involved in all of the above?

Mr. J. C. Munro (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Manpower and Immigration): 1. 51 calendars for the year 1968 were supplied to the Canada Manpower Centre, Smiths Falls, Ontario, under the authority of the director of the Ontario region, Canada Manpower division.

2. $19.38.

3. Each Canada Manpower Centre in the Ontario region was supplied with similar calendars. The number given to each centre was in proportion to the number of employers serviced by the centre.

4. The total cost was $2,158.01.

[Mr. Munro.]

MRS. CATHERINE MORESIDE

Question No. 917—Mr. Macquarrie:

Since the return of the answer to Question No. 368 on October 16, 1967, has any information or documentation been received to indicate that Mrs. Catherine Moreside is not the oldest person in Canada?

Hon. Judy V. LaMarsh (Secretary of State): I am informed by the centennial commission: No.

TRANSFER OF NATIONAL REVENUE OFFICES, AMHERST, N.S.

Question No. 922—Mr. Coates:

Is it the intention of the government to transfer the offices or any part of the offices of the Department of National Revenue presently located at Amherst, N.S. and, if so, (a) how many employees will be involved in the transfer, where will they be relocated and how many will remain at Amherst (b) on what date is the proposed transfer to take effect?

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of National Revenue): On January 15, 1968, the excise tax audit office of the Department of National Revenue was transferred from Amherst, N.S., to become a part of a new district excise tax office at Moncton, N.B., encompassing all excise tax functions. As a consequence of this transfer the four persons formerly employed at the Amherst excise tax audit office are now employed at Moncton. Eight employees of the customs and excise division of the department continue to be employed at Amherst. No other transfers are planned at the present time. The taxation division of the department has no office at Amherst.

MANPOWER CENTRE DESK CALENDARS

Question No. 925—Mr. Hales:

1. How many Canada Manpower Centre simulated leather desk calendars have been purchased and what is the total cost?

2. How many of these calendars have been distributed and what is the cost of mailing?

3. To whom were these calendars mailed?

4. Were these calendars made in the U.S.A.?

5. What is the name and address of the firm from whom these calendars were purchased?

6. Were tenders called for these calendars?

Mr. J. C. Munro (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Manpower and Immigration): 1. 5,606 calendars at a total cost of $2,158.01.

2 and 3. No exact count is available, as the calendars, showing the Canada Manpower Centre's telephone number, were for staff to leave with employers they visit, in the area serviced by the centre. Calendars were not mailed.

4. No. For some of the calendars the Canadian supplier used some components purchased from the U.S.A.

5. Advertising Gifts Company, 370 Bloor Street East, Toronto, Ontario.

6. No.

HARBOURS AND RIVERS EXPENDITURES, CUMBERLAND COUNTY, N.S.

Question No. 927—Mr. Coates:

What has been the total expenditure of the Harbours and Rivers Engineering Branch of the Department of Public Works in Cumberland County for the fiscal years 1963-64, 1964-65, 1965-66, 1966-67 and the estimated expenditure for 1967-68?

Hon. G. J. McIlraith (Minister of Public Works):

Year	Expenditures
1963-64	$ 99,400
1964-65	46,900
1965-66	104,300
1966-67	23,300
1967-68	264,800 (estimated).

[Translation]

MOTIONS FOR PAPERS

Mr. Albert Béchard (Parliamentary Secretary to Secretary of State): Mr. Speaker, would you be kind enough to call notice of motion No. 43?

Mr. Speaker, I ask that the remaining notices of motions be allowed to stand.

INQUIRY AS TO EXTRA-JUDICIAL DUTIES OF JUDGES OF DISTRICT AND COUNTY SUPERIOR COURTS

Question No. 43—Mr. Caouette:

That an humble Address be presented to His Excellency praying that he will cause to be laid before this House a return showing what judges of "District and County Superior Courts" within the meaning of section 96 of the B.N.A. Act were appointed to extra-judicial duties such as Royal commissions, advisory committees, etc.; what extra remuneration, if any, above regular salary have these judges received in such cases; and what is the policy of the government concerning the appointment of such judges to extrajudicial duties.

Inquiries of the Ministry

Mr. Albert Béchard (Parliamentary Secretary to Secretary of State): Mr. Speaker, there is no document such as the one mentioned by the hon. member in his motion for production of papers. While I am asking him to withdraw his notice of motion, I can assure him that the departments concerned will provide answers to the points raised in his notice of motion if he will place his written question on the order paper and allow some time to obtain an answer.

Mr. Speaker: Is the notice of motion withdrawn?

Mr. Réal Caouette (Villeneuve): Agreed, Mr. Speaker.

Motion withdrawn.

[English]

ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE

ALLEGED IMPROPER CONDUCT IN ARREST OF U.K. FUGITIVE

On the orders of the day:

Hon. E. D. Fulton (Kamloops): Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask the Solicitor General if he has had brought to his attention allegations made by Mrs. Wilson of improper conduct by a Scotland Yard superintendent in Canada, and also improper interference by the R.C.M. Police with the service of a process arising out of this matter. If so, can the Solicitor General tell us what are the facts of the situation?

Hon. L. T. Pennell (Solicitor General): Mr. Speaker, I am advised as follows. The R.C.M.P. arrested Charles Wilson pursuant to section 16 of the Immigration Act. This section does not require a warrant for arrest of a person who, there are reasonable grounds to believe, came into Canada by reason of false or misleading information or other fraudulent or improper means.

Certain articles and money were taken into the possession of the R.C.M.P. with the consent of Mr. Wilson. Mr. Butler was present for purposes of identification, but he did not make the arrest nor did he participate in the search of the premises. All moneys and articles taken into the possession of the R.C.M.P. were later given back to Mr. Wilson, and a receipt was obtained for them. Mr. Wilson in turn gave $1,200 in Canadian money to Mrs. Wilson, who had been granted bail in the sum of $1,000.

Inquiries of the Ministry

According to press reports counsel for Mrs. Wilson "is thinking of taking action against the R.C.M.P. for obstructing justice". Under the circumstances I believe I should not go into the merits of that allegation at this time, but I wish to stress that what I said should not be taken as meaning that I agree with the allegation that there was improper conduct on the part of the R.C.M.P.

Mr. Fulton: I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Was Mr. Wilson in fact physically deported from Canada before the expiry of 24 hours after the deportation order was made? Perhaps the Minister of Manpower and Immigration might answer the question.

Hon. Jean Marchand (Minister of Manpower and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, I shall have to check into that matter.

CANADA DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION

INQUIRY AS TO INTRODUCTION OF LEGISLATION

On the orders of the day:

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Burnaby-Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a question to the right hon. Prime Minister with reference to the speech from the throne which opened this session on May 8 last, in which the government indicated its intention of bringing down legislation to set up the Canada Development Corporation. In view of the fact that this commitment has been made every session since 1963 without ever materializing, I want to ask the Prime Minister whether he can tell the house when this legislation will be brought down, in order that members of the house may have an adequate opportunity to study it.

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I am unable to answer that question. We hope to bring this legislation before the house before the end of this session. However, that will depend on the progress we make in respect of legislation which is now on the order paper, and I hope that progress will be sufficient to deal with the legislation to set up the Canada Development Corporation. If not, it will certainly be brought forward early in the next session.

PRIVILEGES AND ELECTIONS

REFERENCE TO COMMITTEE OF REPORT ON ELECTION EXPENSES

On the orders of the day:

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Burnaby-Coquitlam): I have a related question, Mr. Speaker. In the same speech from the throne the government indicated its intention to send the report of the committee on election expenses to the standing committee on privileges and elections. Since some eight months have gone by without any action being taken, is it the government's intention to send the report on election expenses to the standing committee of the house?

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): I think that question was asked of me a few weeks ago, and I had better ascertain what reply I gave then. As I remember I said there was no reason why this should not be done, but I had better check on my own words. I can see no reason why it should not be done this session.

[Translation]

INDUSTRY

REPORTED PRESSURE TO LOCATE IN ONTARIO RATHER THAN QUEBEC

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Réal Caouette (Villeneuve): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the hon. Minister of Industry but, in his absence, I will put it to the right hon. Prime Minister.

On the local news last night the mayor of Hull, Mr. D'Amour, complained that federal officials have exerted pressure upon a French industrialist to set up his industry in Ontario rather than in Quebec, since it would then be easier to come to transact business with the United States. Is the right hon. Prime Minister aware of these facts and does he intend to inquire into the situation and report to the house?

[English]

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): I am not aware of it, but I will try to make myself aware of it immediately.

SUGAR

REQUEST FOR STATEMENT ON NATIONAL POLICY

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Howard Johnston (Okanagan-Revelstoke): My question is for the Minister of Agriculture. Considering the serious economic repercussions that the announced closing of the Canada and Dominion Sugar Company refinery at Chatham will have on the agricultural industry there, and the warnings that this closure sets a pattern for the rest of Canada, will the minister, in conjunction with the Department of Trade and Commerce, be announcing the development of a comprehensive sugar policy for Canada which will permit the continuation of this part of the agricultural industry in Canada?

Hon. J. J. Greene (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, I have seen the officials of the company which is closing its plant in the Chatham area, and I intend to see the producers concerning the effect on their livelihood of the closing of the plant and the possibility of diverting to other crops. I will certainly be discussing the situation with the officials of trade and commerce. If there is any change in government policy as a result of this move, of course it will be announced in the normal fashion.

Mr. Johnston: Will the minister be consulting the other areas of the country that are engaged in the sugar industry so he can ascertain the situation there before the fact, rather than after the announcement of closures at other points in Canada?

Mr. Greene: There is no indication to date of any plants in western Canada contemplating stopping their activities or going out of production. The indications are that the protection the western manufacturer has by reason of the freight advantage is sufficient to make the industry a viable and economic one in western Canada. Certainly I would be very pleased to listen to any representations, if there are any, from the west, but I have not had any as yet.

Mr. A. D. Hales (Wellington South): In view of the fact that contracts for 1968 must be signed not later than March, will the minister be holding this conference immediately?

Mr. Greene: As I say, I have already met with the company officials. I think the producers were made aware of the situation only the night before last. I am certain I will hear from them as soon as they have had their meeting, and I will be prepared to meet with them immediately.

Mr. E. F. Whelan (Essex South): May I ask a supplementary question. I should like to ask the President of the Privy Council if the closing of this sugar plant in Chatham is not another perfect example of foreign ownership.

Mr. W. H. A. Thomas (Middlesex West): I should like to ask the Minister of Agriculture whether in his opinion there is still hope that this factory may be kept in operation.

Mr. Greene: Well, in all candor, Mr. Speaker, my conversation with the company officials did not indicate any hope that they would contemplate keeping the factory open for sugar purposes. They did instruct me, however, that they were keeping the factory and had expectations they could use the plant for an agricultural purpose within the area. They are not able to define that purpose yet, or have come to no conclusion at the present time.

INDUSTRY

SYDNEY, N.S.—REQUEST FOR TABLING OF LETTERS RESPECTING STEEL PLANT

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Donald MacInnis (Cape Breton South): I have a question for the Prime Minister. I should like to ask the Prime Minister if he has communicated with Premier Smith of Nova Scotia respecting the tabling of an exchange of letters in connection with the Sydney steel situation. If so, is he prepared to release that information now?

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): Well, Mr. Speaker, the premier of Nova Scotia has received the letter and is giving consideration to it. I hope to see him when he arrives on Sunday, to see whether we can agree to make the exchange public early next week.

Mr. MacInnis (Cape Breton South): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. In view of the statement by the Minister of National Health and Welfare that a solution to this problem is being desperately sought, do I take it that because of the interchange of letters the government has refused the proposal put forward by the Nova Scotia government?

Mr. Pearson: Mr. Speaker, we have made proposals to the Nova Scotia government which I hope they will find helpful in the circumstances.

[Later:]

Mr. Pearson: I should like to add to the reply I gave to my hon. friend from Cape Breton South. I have just learned that a reply had come in from Premier Smith before lunch this morning saying he had no objection to the tabling of the correspondence, so it can be tabled tomorrow.

Inquiries of the Ministry

INQUIRY OF THE MINISTRY

On the orders of the day:

Mr. E. Nasserden (Rosthern): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Prime Minister. In view of their unequalled contribution to Canadian history and world security, does the Prime Minister not think a day should be set aside in honour and memory of our armed services before unification is proclaimed?

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

VIET NAM—INQUIRY AS TO SAFETY OF CANADIANS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. W. B. Nesbitt (Oxford): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Prime Minister. Is the Prime Minister in a position to tell the house whether the Canadian members of the international control commission in Viet Nam have been in any danger or have suffered any casualties as a result of the street fighting in Saigon?

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, we have received a preliminary report from our delegation in Saigon which indicates that to the best of the delegation's knowledge there have been no casualties among Canadians serving with the delegation.

However, in the disturbed conditions now prevailing it may take a little time to obtain formal confirmation of this from those Canadians who are serving at commission posts outside Saigon, and also from Canadians living and working in South Viet Nam in capacities other than commission assignments. We are making inquiries as to the position of those Canadians outside Saigon, and as soon as we receive some information I will make it available to the house.

Mr. Nesbitt: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. I was wondering whether the government was considering advising those Canadians who are not in Viet Nam on official duty as members of the international control commission, but who are on other duties that are perhaps of a non-governmental nature, to leave the country under the present circumstances.

Mr. Pearson: Mr. Speaker, I think the members of the commission do have information about Canadians working outside the commission. The commission is trying to get in touch with them, and if there are developments that would require them to leave their official duties, or their duties whatever they may be, and come back to Canada I am sure they will be given that advice. However, I hope to have a report on all this shortly, and I will be able to give more information at that time.

Mr. David Lewis (York South): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. May I ask the right hon. gentleman whether the report of the Canadian envoy who went to Hanoi as a result of the peace feelers has yet been received and, if so, what it indicates?

Mr. Pearson: Mr. Speaker, the only report I have received is from our representative who is in Hanoi. It indicates that he has had discussions there, that he will be returning to Saigon very shortly—indeed, he may have reached Saigon within the last day or so—and that when he does return to Saigon he will be in a position to send a report on his mission. That report I have not yet seen. Whether it has come in during the day I am not sure, but I will make inquiries.

COMPANY OF YOUNG CANADIANS

REPORTED REQUEST FOR WITHDRAWAL FROM PRAIRIE PROVINCES

On the orders of the day:

Mr. H. R. Ballard (Calgary South): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a question to the Prime Minister. Can the Prime Minister advise the house whether he has received a request from any of the premiers of the three prairie provinces requesting the withdrawal of members of the Company of Young Canadians from that part of the country? If so, what was the nature of his reply?

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): No, Mr. Speaker, I have received no such request.

Mr. Howard Johnston (Okanagan-Revelstoke): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question for the Prime Minister. On January 26 I asked the Acting Prime Minister whether the reported drive for charitable funds on behalf of the Company of Young Canadians to replace the $400,000 reduction in their budget allocation had been submitted to the government for its approval. The Acting Prime Minister said he would endeavour to ascertain whether that was the case. I wonder if the Prime Minister could now report on the matter.

Mr. Pearson: I have not received a report, but I will be glad to make inquiries this afternoon and see if I can reply tomorrow.

COAL

PART PLAYED BY FEDERAL GOVERNMENT AND C.P.R. IN JAPANESE CONTRACT

On the orders of the day:

Mr. H. W. Herridge (Kootenay West): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct to the Minister of Transport a question of great interest to the Canadian people as a whole and to those in the Kootenay country in particular.

Mr. Byrne: Hear, hear.

Mr. Herridge: Since an agreement has been signed between the coal industry in British Columbia and the Japanese steel industry for the delivery of $650 million worth of coal, would the minister mind informing the house what part the federal government and the Canadian Pacific played in bringing this matter to a satisfactory conclusion?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I wonder whether the question as asked is acceptable. The hon. member has referred to events which have happened. He is asking for information which in my view had better be given at the time of motions.

[Translation]

TRADE

TEXTILES—SUGGESTED RESTRICTION ON IMPORTS FROM JAPAN

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Maurice Allard (Sherbrooke): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a question to the Minister of National Revenue.

Following the numerous lay-offs in the textile industry, particularly at the Dominion Textile plant in Sherbrooke, under the pressure of foreign imports, would the minister tell the house if the government intends to take immediate steps to invite Japan to limit its exports of textile products to Canada and to respect more faithfully the agreements now in force?

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of National Revenue): Mr. Speaker, that problem comes under the Department of Finance, but I can assure the hon. member that the Minister of Finance (Mr. Sharp) follows the situation very closely and that all the necessary steps have already been taken.

[English]

POSSIBLE IMPORTS OF FROZEN BEEF FROM ARGENTINE

On the orders of the day:

Hon. E. D. Fulton (Kamloops): Mr. Speaker, on Monday the Minister of Agriculture gave the hon. member for Battle River-Camrose a categorical assurance that no official of his department was taking part in discussions with the Argentine regarding the importation of frozen beef. Would the minister now care to modify his answer in light of the return yesterday from the Argentine of Mr. R. J. McClenaghan an officer of the minister's department, reported to have been taking part in such discussions?

Hon. J. J. Greene (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, to the best of my understanding there is some discussion with respect to non-canned beef coming in with respect to the ability of that beef to meet our standards of health and sanitation. Certainly as I understood the hon. member's question there is no question of purchase by the government. I may have misunderstood—

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Greene: Certainly anyone can apply to our department for health and medical standards, and these inquiries are coming in all the time. I understand there is some application from the Argentine to pass non-canned beef with respect to health and medical standards.

Mr. Fulton: Then I ask the minister whether his department or government contemplates the importation of such meat into Canada.

Mr. Greene: Mr. Speaker, I do not believe that approval for this calibre of beef has yet been given, but I shall be glad to check for my hon. friend. If it has been approved I shall be pleased to let him know tomorrow.

GRAIN

WHEAT—INQUIRY AS TO FINAL PAYMENT FOR 1966-67 CROP

On the orders of the day:

M. R. D. McLelland (Rosetown-Biggar): I have a question that should ordinarily be directed to the Minister of Trade and Commerce. In his absence I shall ask the Prime Minister if he can inform the house and the many interested farmers and businessmen of western Canada when the wheat board will be making the final payments to the farmers on the 1966-67 wheat crop deliveries, as some cheques for the 1965-66 crop year were dated January 17, 1967.

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I am not able to answer that question, but I shall try to find the answer as quickly as possible.

Inquiries of the Ministry

FLOODS

BRITISH COLUMBIA—INQUIRY AS TO FEDERAL ASSISTANCE

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Frank Howard (Skeena): I should like to direct a question to the Minister of National Defence. In the light of the fact that R.C.A.F. personnel at the Comox base participated in a shuttle service to provide water to the community at Campbell River following recent flooding, and the fact that Reeve MacDonald of Campbell River was able to obtain the services of army engineers from Chilliwack to assist in measures against flooding, is there any opportunity for the forces at the minister's disposal to act directly in connection with the serious situation at Bella Coola, of which we have spoken on a couple of occasions.

Hon. Léo Cadieux (Minister of National Defence): I shall be very glad to study those precedents.

POLLUTION

INQUIRY AS TO INTRODUCTION OF LEGISLATION

On the orders of the day:

Mr. G. H. Aiken (Parry Sound-Muskoka): I have a question to direct to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. I should like to ask whether there is any likelihood of legislation in connection with water and air pollution being brought forward this session.

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): That is my hope, Mr. Speaker, but I am a realist and recognize that it may not be possible to do so at this session, but only possible in the course of the next one.

LABOUR CONDITIONS

NORTH SYDNEY, N.S.—REQUEST FOR ASSISTANCE FOR DOCK WORKERS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Robert Muir (Cape Breton North and Victoria): My question is intended for the Prime Minister. In view of the fact that the right hon. gentleman stated in the house yesterday that all the government's plans and policies were designed to keep unemployment to a minimum, may I ask what plans and policies the Prime Minister has in mind to assist the more than 600 dock workers in the port of North Sydney who will be unemployed as a result of this government's plans and policies?

[Mr. Pearson.]

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): I can hardly accept the suggestion that these dock workers are losing their employment as a result of government policies, but I hope that government policies will be able to restore them to employment in this or some other occupation.

Mr. Muir (Cape Breton North and Victoria): May I ask the right hon. gentleman whether he will get in touch with his colleague the Minister of Transport in connection with this matter within the next few days because, as I understand it from the Canadian National, lay-offs are about to commence; and will he issue a statement outlining the plans the government has in mind to assist this large group of people?

CANADA PENSION PLAN

INQUIRY AS TO REFUNDS TO EMPLOYERS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. A. D. Hales (Wellington South): I have a question for the Minister of National Revenue arising from an answer I received to a question on the order paper concerning overpayments made to the Canada Pension Plan by employers. Having been advised by the former minister that no technical problem existed with regard to repayments, can the hon. gentleman now assure us that these overpayments will be refunded to employers, as was done in the case of employees to the extent of about $8 million?

[Translation]

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of National Revenue): Mr. Speaker, first of all, I do not know whether my predecessor made a statement along these lines but, according to my information, an amendment would have to be made in the act to enable us to refund that part to employers, and for that, we need the consent of the provinces.

[English]

Mr. Hales: The former minister said the government was obtaining this information from the provinces. Has it not been received as yet?

[Translation]

Mr. Chrétien: Mr. Speaker, the program is now under consideration and we are making inquiries to clarify the situation.

[English]

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

REQUEST FOR STATEMENT ON LEGISLATION TO BE DEALT WITH

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, on Monday I asked the Prime Minister whether he would indicate to the house the items of legislation which the government wishes parliament to deal with during the remainder of the present session, and the right hon. gentleman indicated that this could be done. I wonder whether the list is ready today.

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): I have been looking into this matter, and on orders of the day tomorrow I hope to be able to make a short statement which will indicate the program of legislation we would like to submit to the house immediately after we have dealt with the bill now before the house, if we ever are able to deal with it.

Mr. Knowles: Will the list include provision for increasing the pensions of retired civil servants, so this matter can be dealt with before the present Prime Minister retires?

Mr. Pearson: I would only be in a position to submit the pieces of legislation which are very urgent and of immediate importance; and while the item to which the hon. member refers is of great importance, it is not on the immediate and urgent list.

Mr. Knowles: Why not?

EDUCATION

REQUEST FOR FEDERAL ASSISTANCE IN TEACHING IMMIGRANT CHILDREN

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Andrew Brewin (Greenwood): I should like to address a question, if I may, to the Minister of Manpower and Immigration. In view of the continuing difficulties encountered by local education authorities in providing the children of immigrants with special English classes so they can fit into the normal school system, and in view of the fact that the federal government is responsible for immigration and has invited the parents to this country, will the minister and his colleagues not reconsider their present policy with regard to assisting to meet the extra expense involved in the area I have indicated?

Mr. Speaker: Order. I suggest to the hon. member that this question cannot be asked now. It is much too general in nature and would require by way of reply a statement of the kind normally made on motions.

NATIONAL PARKS

SASKATCHEWAN—INQUIRY AS TO SECOND PARK

On the orders of the day:

Mr. R. R. Southam (Moose Mountain): My question is directed to the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development. In view of the fact that the second session of Canada's twenty-seventh parliament is fast drawing to a close, and bearing in mind the deep interest taken in Saskatchewan in the subject of a second national park, can the minister indicate when the long awaited report on the location of such a park will be available to the house and, if possible, the date on which the development will commence?

Hon. Arthur Laing (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): I was hopeful and still am hopeful that an announcement can be made some time this summer.

[Later:]

Mr. E. Nasserden (Rosthern): I have a question for the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development supplementary to the one asked several minutes ago. Is the delay in announcing plans for a second national park in Saskatchewan due to the inability of the provincial government to make up its mind where it wants the park to be?

Mr. Speaker: Order. The hon. member's question as asked is argumentative.

Mr. Nasserden: If I may rephrase it, Mr. Speaker, I wish to ask is the delay due to the failure of the provincial government to advise the minister where it would like the park to be located?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I find it difficult to see a difference between the two questions. I think both are out of order.

HEALTH AND WELFARE

MEDICARE—REQUEST FOR ANNOUNCEMENT FOLLOWING PROVINCIAL REPRESENTATIONS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. William Dean Howe (Hamilton South): My question is addressed to the Prime Minister. Has the government made a firm decision with regard to the date of implementation of medicare?

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): I tried to deal with this question yesterday, Mr. Speaker, and at this time I cannot add anything to what I said.

INCOME TAX

REPORTED LATE DISPATCH OF T-4 FORMS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Jack McIntosh (Swift Current-Maple Creek): I have a question for the Minister of National Revenue. Bearing in mind the late dispatch of the T-4 personal income tax forms from the department to the various regions of Canada, will the minister consider waiving the penalty clause to the extent that the tax forms were late? Would the minister, in addition, tell the house why these forms were late in arriving this year?

[Translation]

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of National Revenue): Mr. Speaker, I am taking note of the question and I shall give an answer to the hon. member tomorrow.

[English]

TRADE

REPORTED HEAVY IMPORTS OF VEGETABLE OILS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. George Muir (Lisgar): I have a question for the Minister of Agriculture. Is the minister now in a position to give me an answer to the inquiry I made yesterday with regard to the assistance the sunflower producers can expect from the government to offset the effect on that important industry of the importations of vegetable oil?

Hon. J. J. Greene (Minister of Agriculture): I am instructed that the officials of my department, and in particular the officials of the agricultural stabilization board, have already met to consider the representations of the sunflower producers and processors and have heard the representations made in this regard. If any action is to be taken an announcement will be made in the proper manner.

With regard to the question asked by the hon. member for Humboldt-Melfort-Tisdale, in view of his keen interest in rapeseed and rapeseed oil, I may say that officials of my department have informed me they are watching the situation in connection with these products very closely.

[Mr. Howe (Hamilton South).]

[Translation]

INDUSTRIAL RELATIONS AND DISPUTES INVESTIGATION ACT

CONSIDERATION OF AMENDING LEGISLATION BY HOUSE COMMITTEE

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Maurice Allard (Sherbrooke): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the hon. minister of Manpower and Immigration.

As Bill No. C-186 was referred to a committee on December 5, could the hon. minister tell us when it will be considered in committee of the whole house and whether this legislation will be passed during the present session?

Hon. Jean Marchand (Minister of Manpower and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, this is more than I can answer at the present time. All I know is that the committee has been established and that the bill has been referred thereto. Like my hon. friend, I am at the disposal of that committee.

[English]

RESEARCH

SUGGESTED ESTABLISHMENT OF STANDARDS OF ANIMAL CARE

On the orders of the day:

Mrs. Grace MacInnis (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a question to the right hon. Prime Minister. In view of the formation yesterday of a national advisory body in connection with scientific experiments on animals, is it the intention of the government to introduce legislation early to establish standards of animal care in Canada and a qualified inspectorate to enforce such standards?

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): I shall be glad to take this question as notice, Mr. Speaker.

• (3:10 p.m.)

BROADCASTING

IMPLEMENTATION OF CANADIAN POLICY

The house resumed, from Tuesday, January 30, consideration in committee of Bill No. C-163, to implement a broadcasting policy for Canada, to amend the Radio Act in consequence thereof and to enact other consequential and related provisions—Miss LaMarsh—Mr. Batten in the chair.

The Chairman: Order. On Friday, last; January 26, when the hon. member for Digby-Annapolis-Kings had proposed an amendment to clause 2(d) of Bill C-163, an act to implement a broadcasting policy for Canada, a question of order arose concerning the reading of the French version of the amendment. At that time only the English version of the amendment was available. The Deputy Chairman offered to take the question under consideration and at that time, as recorded at page 6038 of Hansard, the committee agreed.

Since that time I have had the opportunity of discussing this point with Mr. Speaker, with the Deputy Chairman, and with the Clerk and his assistants, and I would be prepared to make a ruling now if the committee wishes me to do so. Is it the wish of the committee that I proceed?

Mr. Fulton: Mr. Chairman, while the point itself does not seem to be of much interest there are surrounding issues which are of very considerable importance. I was not present when the incident took place and I wonder to what extent there has been discussion of this point of order in the committee and in the house. I also wonder what guidance might be given to the Chair on this matter. I have some very definite views with respect to it. I would hesitate to hear your ruling and then ask to be allowed to make representations. I do not want to take up the time of the committee and so may I suggest that we might hear Your Honour's ruling. Then, if it runs counter to what some of us think, and we feel that the matter is of such importance, it might be possible to have it appealed to Mr. Speaker. I hope it would be understood, however, that this would be done without reflection on the Chair. It would be done simply because of the importance attached to the matter.

Mr. Knowles: May I ask Your Honour a question? Is there really a point of order before the committee? As I understood it, a point of order was raised last Friday but in the course of time the Deputy Chairman said the point of order had disappeared. He then had the amendment in both languages, he read it in both English and French, and the question was voted on. As I understand it, rulings have to be given on points of order when those points of order are actually before the house. This point of order was not held over. The issue dissolved. I just wonder whether this is an occasion when a firm ruling is called for, or whether it is simply an occasion when Your Honour may give us the benefit of your thinking on this point in case it arises again. I would be interested in hearing Your Honour's views on the matter, but it seems to me that a firm ruling should not be given since there is no point of order before the committee at the present time.

Mr. Pugh: Mr. Chairman, at the time the point arose debate was taking place. The Deputy Chairman then arose and said that the point of order had disappeared, because at that stage he had the French translation in his hand, and therefore there was no point of order. It was then pointed out, and I believe properly so, that the point of order still existed, and after a few words the Deputy Chairman agreed to reserve decision on that point of order. I take it that that is the one upon which you are about the rule now. In reply to the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre I point out that a point of order was definitely raised. Adjudication was asked on it. No adjudication was given and the point of order was reserved.

Mr. Fulton: Mr. Chairman, I fully support the contention of the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre, that in fact there being no active point of order we might well be better served if we do not have a firm ruling on one.

The Chairman: Maybe it is the wish of the committee that any ruling to be made on this particular point might be reserved until a similar point of order is raised again. Does the committee agree?

Mr. Lambert: Mr. Chairman, I think I will raise a point of order. It was reported to various members of the house that the officer of the house in charge of proceedings at that time gave an indication that amendments must be in the two languages. I would point out to Your Honour that in my not inconsiderable experience this has never been a stipulation. In fact I would put it to Your Honour that it would be an impossible one to carry out.

Amendments are proffered to the Chair in English or in French, and this hold true whether in committee or when Mr. Speaker is in the chair. If what has been suggested were to be made a rule, then the Chair could not rule until it had an officially certified translation of an amendment in the language other than that of the hon. members proposing it. I would put it to Your Honour that this could never be so.

We have a translation service that is as official for amendments as it is for the appearance of translations in Hansard, and for the edification and understanding of hon. members. There can be no distinction between amendments in both languages. Therefore I put it to the committee that the question would not arise and should never have arisen.

• (3:20 p.m.)

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: On that occasion, Mr. Chairman, I was the one who had asked you to read in both languages the amendment before the house. The hon. member for Medicine Hat (Mr. Olson) raised several points of order. He felt that the simultaneous translation was enough and that it was not necessary for the chairman to translate the amendment in both languages.

I then raised a point of order myself, under standing order 43 which provides:

> When a motion is seconded, it shall be read in English and in French by Mr. Speaker, if he be familiar with both languages; if not, Mr. Speaker shall read the motion in one language and direct the Clerk at the Table to read it in the other,

It is quite simple. This means that a motion or an amendment must be read by the chairman in both languages, so as not to leave it to the translator to provide a translation, which, besides, would not be official.

At that time, the chairman of the house took my request into consideration, since he did not allow the amendment to be discussed before it was translated officially and read in the two languages.

It seems to me a ruling was given then and there since, in fact, what the standing orders say was accepted.

The member for Edmonton West (Mr. Lambert)—unless I am mistaken, because there were technical difficulties at that point and I did not quite understand what he said—stated that the chairman could not be asked to read the amendment in the two languages—

Mr. Lambert: No, not at all. Nothing in the standing orders forbids a member to ask the Chair to read the amendments in the two languages. I said that standing orders did not require a member to introduce an amendment in the two languages.

Mr. Grégoire: That is what was said the other day and I admit that the point of the member for Edmonton West is well taken, that nothing requires a member to introduce an amendment in both languages. However, the standing order requires that on request of a member the chairman shall read the amendment in both languages.

We are told today that it is not necessary to make a ruling on this point; let us wait until the problem arises another time and postpone the ruling.

On the contrary, I think that standing order No. 43 is being questioned, and that a ruling by the chairman of the committee of the whole should be made on this question. If, a member makes such a request in the future, the present discussion will not be repeated, because we will know exactly where we stand. If someone requests it, the reading of such an amendment must be made in both languages.

That is why, Mr. Chairman, I think your ruling should be made today so that this matter will not be left in abeyance.

[English]

Mr. Cowan: Mr. Chairman, as one who was in the house at the time of the episode I must state that I agree one hundred per cent with the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre. There is no point of order before the Chair and there has not been since the episode occurred. I see no reason for any ruling now by Mr. Deputy Speaker. I would much rather have a ruling by Mr. Speaker. In any event I suggest that we proceed with the discussion of the bill as there is no point of order before the house or the committee.

The Chairman: Is it the wish of the committee to proceed with Bill No. C-163?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

On clause 2—Broadcasting policy for Canada.

The Chairman: When the committee rose last evening clause 2 (h), with an amendment moved by the hon. member for Winnipeg South was under consideration.

Mr. Sherman: Mr. Chairman, at the hour when the committee rose last night I was in the midst of trying to explain once again my reservations in respect of the wording of subclause (h). I had an exchange with the minister at that time and suggested I could not subscribe to the change in the amendment which she suggested earlier in the day, because I felt it still did not protect the public interest by definitely taking the position we find is necessary to be articulated on behalf of that public interest. Therefore I felt that the kind of change the amendment proposed was an unacceptable one. I am not sure that the remarks I made during the concluding phase of last night's debate on the point were made as clearly as I intended.

My point is that I am worried about future interpretation, not the present interpretation. The minister had referred to the presence in the gallery of representatives of the Board of Broadcast Governors during the course of this debate, and I had made reference to the minister's conclusion that the members of the board would thus be familiar with the unhappiness of hon. members on this side of the house with subclause (h) and with the substance of our argument on behalf of the public interest, to the effect that this would not be known to representatives of a future Board of Broadcast Governors.

I am not concerned about today's representatives of the Board of Broadcast Governors but rather about future broadcasting authorities who at some future time will be placed in the position of arbitrating broadcasting disputes. I submit they will not be familiar with all the arguments and different interpretations that have been placed on this terminology and, as I attempted to suggest last night, will act in keeping with the letter of the law as stipulated in subclause (h), as it appears to us.

We feel the objectives of a national broadcasting service have not been enunciated in specific, all-embracing and conclusive terms. Admittedly, some of them have now been taken care of by subclause (g), but is this all embracive, inclusive and conclusive in description of those suggestions? I believe there is room for doubt on that score, and there is considerable room for the suggestion that in certain areas of disputes and activities in the future it is possible there may be other objectives of the national broadcasting service not contemplated in clause (g), and therefore not covered by this wording. These objectives will be lumped together with all the objectives of the national broadcasting service as principles and considerations that must prevail in the interest of the private broadcaster, should any dispute between the two arise.

What I have been attempting to stress is our concern about a future interpretation on the basis of the letter of the law as it is proposed in this legislation, and our concern for the public interest which does not seem to be protected by subclause (h) as it is worded at this time. I understand that a possible compromise has been worked out by the government and the opposition on this point. I am not certain what the wording of the compromise amendment to subclause (h) consists of, or the final form it will take. However, I am as concerned as the minister or anyone else in this committee that we process this legislation with all reasonable speed, provided all reasonable care is taken. It is my hope that we can reach a satisfactory solution to this impasse in respect of subclause (h) and move to other clauses of the legislation.

