Under the title of "The Star."

SAINT JOHN, N. B., TUESDAY, AUGUST 12, 1851.

VOL. XXIV.—NO. 8.

The Weekly Observer.
Published on Thursday, by ROBERT A. GILMOUR, at his Office, corner of Prince William and Church Streets, over the Store of Messrs. French, Clothing and Reading.—Terms: 15s. per annum, half in advance.

MUTUAL INSURANCE COMPANY.
THIS Company is prepared to receive applications for insurance against FIRE upon Buildings and other Property, at the Office of the Secretary, 1, WOODWARD, St. John, Nov. 11, 1846.

UNION MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY.
Capital $150,000.—Charter unlimited.
POLICIES issued at REDUCED RATES for Mercantile purposes. SPECIAL PERMITS for sea voyages and for California residence at reduced premium.

It is believed that any Parish, or association of ladies, or others, for that special purpose, or any benevolent individual, desiring of securing an amount, to be paid to a Clergyman or other person on attaining the age of 40, 50 or 60 years, or to his family in the event of his death sooner occurring, will find on examination of the prospectus of this Company, which is always furnished gratis by the Agents, or by mail if written for, that it offers greater facilities for the attainment of that object than any other similar Institution. (See extracts from Charter, and remarks, page 17 of Prospectus.) Persons insured in this Company on the mutual plan—the "only plan," says Chambers, (see page 10 of Prospectus), "which the public at large are concerned to support"—will be returned to them all of the profits, instead of a portion only, as is proposed by some of the stock or mixed companies. Late annual dividend, seventy five per cent. on the premiums paid by mutual members. On Policies for Life, half the premiums vested in the party's own hands at simple interest.

The Finance Committee (who are among the most reliable financiers in this country) superintend all investments of the Company.

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL.
May 13, 1851.

Hall's Clothing Store.
GENTLEMEN who like good SHIRTS can have them made to measure in any style, well made, and warranted to fit.
Silk Under SHIRTS and DRAWERS, a very fine article for the season; Silk, Lisle Thread and Cotton SOCKS; light Summer STOCKS, in Queen, and the members of their family; the portraits of Her Majesty and Prince Albert being placed in the ball-room. The Picture Gallery displayed some of the choicest treasures of art, being particularly rich in specimens of the Flemish school, including the works of Rembrandt, Van Dyck, Hobbema, Cypri, and Rubens, as well as some of the very finest works of Teniers. The Gallery also contained fine pictures by Wouverman, Mieris, Ostade, Jan Steen, and our own Reynolds, whose "Death of Dido" and "Cynon and Iphigenia" occupy conspicuous places. Some beautiful statues, by Canova, at one end of the Gallery, added very considerably to its many other attractions. While the mind could thus dwell with so much pleasure on these fine productions of artistic genius, the eye could not fail of being delighted with the brilliant hues of a never ending variety of the most beautiful flowers, which were displayed in lavish profusion throughout the whole scene, from the foot of the grand staircase to the Throne of the Queen. Every vacancy, and every opportunity which the architectural ornaments of the apartments gave for the introduction, was used for the display of these most beautiful productions of nature, and it is difficult to imagine anything more charming in its effect.

Chairs of State were placed on a haut pas in the Ball-room for Her Majesty and Prince Albert. The party and the ladies were dressed in the most elegant and costly costumes, and the ladies wore white, ornamented with silver. The choicest exotics and most beautiful flowers were behind and around the chairs of the Queen and Prince Albert. The Queen wore a dress of pink tulle, covered with pink crepe lisse, trimmed with pink roses and wreaths of silver leaves, ornamented with diamonds. Every vacancy, and every opportunity which the architectural ornaments of the apartments gave for the introduction, was used for the display of these most beautiful productions of nature, and it is difficult to imagine anything more charming in its effect.

JULY, 1851.
Just received from New York, a supply of
CENTS Fine Drab Union HATS,
Leghorn and Panama DO,

Invitation to the Young.
BY WILLIAM GAYLORD CLARKE.
"They that seek me early shall find me."—Prov. vii. 17.
Come, while the blossoms of thy youth are bright,
And while thy youthful heart is glowing with delight,
Come while the redness of youth is bounding light,
And while thy pure soul's tremble in thy way;
Come while sweet thoughts, like summer birds, are flying,
When rich feelings in the careless hours,
While yet thy hand the instrument of truth is holding,
Come and secure immortal rest.
Soon will the freshness of thy days be over,
And thy free buoyancy of soul be flown;
Pleasure will fade, and grief and trouble and sorrow
Will form the embryo of the world's long gloom;
Those who now love thee will have passed forever;
Their looks of kindness will be lost to thee;
Then will need hasten to lead thy spirit's fever,
As thy sick heart hovers over years to be.
Come, while the morning of thy life is glowing;
Ere the dim passions thou art closing die;
Ere the gay spell which earth's charms throw,
Fades like the sunset of a summer's sky.
Life has but short days, save a transient given,
Which lights the future with a fadeless ray;
Oh, mark the scripture; was a hope in heaven?
Come, turn thy spirit from the world away.
Then will the crosses of thy brief existence
Seem airy nothing to thee; and thou wilt
And, shining brightly in the forward distance,
Will thy path be lit up by the goal.
Hence of the weary where, in peace repose.
The spirit hovers in uncertainty;
Though ever it clings to the transient earth is closing,
Who would not early choose a path like this?

Come while the redness of youth is bounding light,
And while thy pure soul's tremble in thy way;
Come while sweet thoughts, like summer birds, are flying,
When rich feelings in the careless hours,
While yet thy hand the instrument of truth is holding,
Come and secure immortal rest.
Soon will the freshness of thy days be over,
And thy free buoyancy of soul be flown;
Pleasure will fade, and grief and trouble and sorrow
Will form the embryo of the world's long gloom;
Those who now love thee will have passed forever;
Their looks of kindness will be lost to thee;
Then will need hasten to lead thy spirit's fever,
As thy sick heart hovers over years to be.
Come, while the morning of thy life is glowing;
Ere the dim passions thou art closing die;
Ere the gay spell which earth's charms throw,
Fades like the sunset of a summer's sky.
Life has but short days, save a transient given,
Which lights the future with a fadeless ray;
Oh, mark the scripture; was a hope in heaven?
Come, turn thy spirit from the world away.

THE QUEEN'S STATE BALL.
On the evening of the 11th July, the Queen gave the last of a series of splendid State Balls at Buckingham Palace, unparalleled in their number and brilliancy. The Times says:—
"Not only has the Royal hospitality been largely extended throughout the whole circle of the nobility and gentry and the more distinguished members of the literature, science and art of the kingdom, but all the more celebrated foreigners who have been drawn to this country to view the industrial efforts of the civilized world, have been honored from time to time with the Sovereign's gracious invitation to meet the notables of the empire assembled in the salons of the Palace."
Protective and not ungenerous as these have been the Royal entertainments, there were yet many distinguished foreign visitors, thronging the British metropolis who but for the fall of last night would have had to leave the country without an opportunity of paying their respects to the Sovereign, and of meeting all that is illustrious, noble, and distinguished in the kingdom; while so numerous and brilliant a State reception had the effect of detaining many families in town, who would otherwise have quitted London long ere this for the country, and so far have deprived the trading portion of the metropolitan benefit of their presence.
The invitations exceeded 1700 in number, and the whole of the beautiful suite of State apartments was thrown open for the reception of the guests, and displayed in the most brilliant and effective manner. In addition to their own architectural and decorative ornaments, the walls of the apartments were adorned with the portraits of George III, his Queen, and the members of their family; the portraits of Her Majesty and Prince Albert being placed in the ball-room. The Picture Gallery displayed some of the choicest treasures of art, being particularly rich in specimens of the Flemish school, including the works of Rembrandt, Van Dyck, Hobbema, Cypri, and Rubens, as well as some of the very finest works of Teniers. The Gallery also contained fine pictures by Wouverman, Mieris, Ostade, Jan Steen, and our own Reynolds, whose "Death of Dido" and "Cynon and Iphigenia" occupy conspicuous places. Some beautiful statues, by Canova, at one end of the Gallery, added very considerably to its many other attractions. While the mind could thus dwell with so much pleasure on these fine productions of artistic genius, the eye could not fail of being delighted with the brilliant hues of a never ending variety of the most beautiful flowers, which were displayed in lavish profusion throughout the whole scene, from the foot of the grand staircase to the Throne of the Queen. Every vacancy, and every opportunity which the architectural ornaments of the apartments gave for the introduction, was used for the display of these most beautiful productions of nature, and it is difficult to imagine anything more charming in its effect.

Chairs of State were placed on a haut pas in the Ball-room for Her Majesty and Prince Albert. The party and the ladies were dressed in the most elegant and costly costumes, and the ladies wore white, ornamented with silver. The choicest exotics and most beautiful flowers were behind and around the chairs of the Queen and Prince Albert. The Queen wore a dress of pink tulle, covered with pink crepe lisse, trimmed with pink roses and wreaths of silver leaves, ornamented with diamonds. Every vacancy, and every opportunity which the architectural ornaments of the apartments gave for the introduction, was used for the display of these most beautiful productions of nature, and it is difficult to imagine anything more charming in its effect.

Porter.
JENNY KISSED ME
Jenny kissed me when we met,
Jumping from the chair she sat in:
'Twas you first, who put me to it,
Sweets into my list to get in.

Say I'm weary, say I'm sad,
Say that health has missed me—
Say I'm growing old, but add—
Jenny kissed me!

THE WIFE'S NIGHT CAP.
The following will tell story with an excellent moral, we copy from the New Orleans Delta:

Mr. —, who does not live more than a mile from the Post Office, in this city, met some "Northern friends with Southern" principles the other evening, and in extending to them the hospitality of the "Crescent City," visited so many of our princely saloons and "marble halls," imbuing spiritual consolation as they journeyed, that when he left them at their hotel at midnight hour, he felt, decidedly, that he had a "brick in his hat."

Now he has a wife, an amiable, accomplished and beautiful lady, who loves him devotedly, and finds but one fault with him. That is, his too frequent visits to the palaces where these "bricks" are obtained.

After leaving his friends, Mr. — passed a moment, took his bearings, and having shaped a course, on the principle that continental angles meet, made sail for home. In due course of time he arrived there, and was not much astonished, but rather frightened, to find his worthy lady sitting up for him. She said: "Dear, you are home!"

"How are you dear?" said she, "you stand out so late, that I feared you had been taken sick."

"No, —, I'm not sick, but don't you think I'm in a little tight?"

"A very little, perhaps, my dear—but that is nothing—you have so many friends, as you say, you must join them in a social glass once in a while!"

"Yes, —, you're too good—in the truth, I'm—d—drunk!"

"Oh, no, indeed, my dear—I'm sure that even another glass wouldn't hurt you. Now, suppose you take a glass of Scotch ale with me just as a night-cap, dear?"

"You are too kind, my dear, by half—I know I'm drunk!"

"Oh, no—only a julep too much, love—that's all!"

"Yes—juleps—McMasters makes such stiff juleps!"

The striking circumstance, however, is that such a wife as we have mentioned, imposes upon herself the pitiable fate which she shares with the maid in the kitchen, while the latter yields reluctantly to what is a necessity of her condition. The latter could not help herself at home, she would do it; but she would do it, but the other compels herself to go abroad for joy.

God in the Compass.
When Jesus pledged himself that before the end of the world his gospel should be preached in all nations, the one-half of the globe was not known, nor were the principles with which men were acquainted, was there any possibility that the remainder could be discovered. At that time it would have been as reasonable to expect the discovery of the means to accomplish a voyage to the moon, as one to the countries on the other side of our globe.

By the discovery of the compass, we are told, there was no guide in the ocean but the sun and stars; and the most daring navigators durst not venture beyond the sight of land. The most distant voyages were slowly and dangerously performed by creeping along the coast. How, then, was the gospel to reach all nations? By the discovery of that wonderful instrument, the magnet, which communicates to an iron rod the virtue of pointing to the poles of the earth; and by conferring on Flavio Gioia, a citizen of Anagni, in the kingdom of Naples, who observed the phenomenon, the sagacity to perceive its advantage, and to invent the magnetic needle. By means of this wonderful instrument, man is put in possession of the globe, and access to all its scattered islands is opened to him. He steers through the midst of the ocean, as if he had the sagacity of instinct like birds of passage, and finds his way in darkness through the trackless deep. Now, an invention that was absolutely necessary to give accomplishment to a Divine prediction must be from God. It is as truly divine as the mariner's compass had been sent from heaven by the hand of an angel.

What a grand view does this give us of the scheme of salvation! Every event on earth is some way connected with it, and one plan may be traced in its operation throughout every age from the foundation of the world. The discovery of this property in the magnet was not only in operation for several centuries to give effect to the Divine prediction at the resurrection of light, but the conferring of that property on the magnet had, in the very creation of matter, the intention of serving as a guide to the spirit to every island of the seas. Known unto God are all his works from the beginning. This key of the world was formed at the creation, but was not given to men until it was necessary to open it for the gospel.

For what purpose were the magnets formed? Why did its wonderful property remain so long undiscovered? Why was it discovered at such an early time? Why was sagacity given to perceive its use, and invention to turn the discovery to its destined purpose? How miraculously did a thousand chances meet in one grand design in the year 1342, just in time to second the zeal of the navigators of the fifteenth century, to provide a theatre for the gospel revival in the sixteenth!

The Great Cemetery.
The sea is the largest of cemeteries, and its slumbers sleep without a monument. All other graveyards, in their order and plan, show some symbol of distinction between the great and the small, the rich and the poor; but in that ocean cemetery, the king and the clown, the prince and the peasant, are alike undistinguished. The same wave rolls over all—the same requiem by the minstrelsy of the ocean is sung to their honors. No marble rises to point out where the dead are gathered, and where the loved of the good or wise can go and shed the tear of sympathy. Who can tell where lie the tens of thousands of Africa's sons, who perished in the "middle passage"? Yet that cemetery, both ornaments of Jehovah. Never can I forget my days and nights as I passed over the noblest of cemeteries without a single human monument.

Increase the Manure Heap.
Good farmers will cart matter into their cattle-yards to increase the manure heaps. There is no other mode of preventing the waste of manure so certain, as the mixing of the excrement of animals with such materials as will retain their virtues. We must have bulky heaps, and we have no fagfin in the doctrine that a little essence carried in one's pocket can possibly be equal in virtue to a good cart load of matter.

Peat mud is not the only matter suitable for the cattle-yard. Soil from the side of the road, or from the side of fields next to a wall, are often found to be quite as good as peat mud—though there is as much difference in peat mud as in soils. Some men are much deceived by the colour of the article they put into their yards. Black mud is supposed to be richer than that of other colours. But this is not always the case. Still any kind of mud or soil will answer a good purpose, compared with the poor practice of yarding cattle in summer without supplying the means of retaining all the rich matter which is dropped there. Yards ought to be cleared out twice each year—once for planting in the spring—and again for sowing down in August and September. If no sowing is then done, the summer manure may be used to much advantage on grass lands in October. But by all means take good care and keep a good quantity of matter in the cow-yard and in the hopen, for otherwise you waste what cannot be easily replaced.

All have leisure enough after planting to attend to this business—a business that was not much attended to fifty years ago. Then not one farmer in fifty took care to supply his cow-yard with matter to retain or to increase his manures. When the soil was first broken up, the manure, which was expected and actually obtained without the application of manures—Mass. Ploughman.

Manures.—I make it a point of morality never to find fault with another for his manures; they may be awkward or graceful, blunt or polished, or rustic, I care not what they are, if the man means well and acts from honest intentions, without eccentricity or affectation. All men have not the advantage of good society, as it is called, to school themselves in all its fantastic rules and ceremonies, and if there is any kind of manners, it is one founded in reason and good sense, and not upon those artificial regulations. Manners, like conversation, should be extemporaneous, and not studied. I always suspect a man who meets me with the same perpetual smile on his face, the same congealing of the body, and the same premeditated shake of the hand. Give me the—it may be rough—and the careless nod of recognition, and when occasion requires, the homely but welcome salutation, "How are you, my old friend?"

Philosophy of Swimming.
The following rules and reasons, given many years ago, by Elixar Wright, of Boston, ought to be republished every summer in every newspaper of the land. No branch of education has been so much neglected as this. Man is the only animal which does not swim naturally. He sinks in deep water, from the size of his brain, and not properly exercised. That is to say, that weight of his brain above his nose sinks, that organ a little beneath the surface, when he is in an erect position, before his body displaces its weight of water, and thus finds an equilibrium. With the nose under, one must breathe water and drown. But when the brain comes to be exercised enough to throw the head back and the nose up, pointing to the very zenith, and you keep hands and feet carefully under water, then, by the eternal laws of hydrostatics, the nose will continue above water, and the person will float like an empty bottle, which is so balanced as to keep its mouth uppermost. No air is necessary, and in still water of any depth, lying on the back with hands and feet under water.

Inventions.
It is said that a young artisan of Cincinnati has succeeded in the art of jappaning freestone slabs with an enamel of a kind of glass, which will resist the action of all common acids, thereby making the stone to represent perfectly the finest Egyptian marble, and the like at a very trifling cost. Slabs for counters, &c., can be furnished by the inventor at about the price of common wood.

The Worcester Spy states that a machine has been invented in Leicester for measuring and folding cloth of every description at one operation, at the rate of eighty yards a minute in yard folds. It is simple in construction, and does the work in a neat and perfect manner.
