The Times New Reporter.

As a result it is probable that the rocky candy mine will be closed, and Chairman Lewis and his aldermanic committee discharged. A trammer who asks less than twenty dollars for his services on May 1st will not be living up to his opportunities. It is for him to ask and none dare refuse. Mr. Peter Binka was seen hurrying along the street this morning with a motto under his arm, a hatchet in his hand, and various articles protruding from his pockets. He looked a little and his toilet had not been completed. He wore a collar, but no necktie, and his waistcoat was only partially buttoned. There was a smudge on Mr. Binka's nose, and a rent in his pantaloons. "We're moving," said Mr. Binka to the Times New Reporter, who was accompanied by him as he saw the reporter surveying his outfit. "We move every year. Mrs. Binka finds it is necessary to her health. The search for a house is so invigorating. And after we move we have a new set of neighbors to see up." "God Bless Our Home," worked in green letters on a yellow ground. The letters were a little dirty, some leaning against each other and some a little off, but that was no doubt due to the excitement of moving. Mr. Binka passed only for a moment, and then hurried on, just as Mr. James Jones turned the corner with a clock and a basket of dishes. "We're moving," he said, "and I don't expect to do anything but get out of my hand for a week. My wife says a change is good for us, and we are moving into a most aristocratic neighborhood. You haven't a pin, or a nail, have you? My suspense--"

The Crimson Slipper.

BY DORA LANGLOIS,

"I think," he said gravely, "that if they don't alter their plans through getting wind of us, in four and twenty hours or thereabouts she will receive a sum of money and be set at liberty. That, in fact, is why I cleared out of Bowden so soon."

"I don't quite follow you," I confessed. "Why should you come away without doing anything?"

"Because," he answered, "the place is full of detectives, all asking questions, and if there was much more of it it might reach the man's ears, and then the lady might not get away so easily."

"The will walk right into the arms of the police," I said dubiously.

"Better that, sir, than for her to stay one hour in that man's company after he has begun to find her in his way."

"He may make that discovery any minute," I replied, with helpless irritation. "I can't tell you frankly, Mr. Howell, I dare not tell Mr. Duncan that we are waiting doing nothing, and leaving things to take their chance at Bowden."

"Because, sir, I did not come back here to do nothing," Howell retorted, smiling, showing for the first time that professional toughness which I afterwards found so characteristic in him. "I came back because I think I can work it easily and quickly, and much more safely than this end."

"I started at him in astonishment. "Oh, how's no great mystery," he continued. "The question for us is simply this: Who do you suppose those two foreigners are? I haven't had time to ask myself the question," I replied, "but since you put it to me, I suppose they are agents of the person in town, to whom Danvers was to have handed the paper, sent down to find out what has become of it."

"And when did you first notice them watching Mr. Duncan?" he inquired.

"I thought for a moment and then answered, "I saw them hanging about the house, and so did Missing, I believe, for the first time on the day that Mr. Duncan was away in London."

"That is to say, the day after the sale?"

"Yes, the day after the sale."

"Does it strike you that if they were agents of the man in London, whose plans were frustrated by Mr. Danvers's death, they let a long time go by before coming to look for the paper?"

"It didn't strike me, but you're right," I answered.

"Look at the date and the circumstances once again," he urged. "They arrive on the spot directly Mrs. Montgomery has failed to secure the chest at the sale, and they evidently knew the district round Bowden well—a district close by here isn't it much more likely, then, that they are the persons or agents with whom Mrs. Montgomery was treating for the sale of the paper when she left Mr. Danvers's house?"

"It would be reasonable to suppose that in fact, it would be difficult to suppose anything else," I admitted. "If we could be all sure that Missing and I saw the man on the first day of his departure?"

"My dear sir, it's quite plain," Howell urged. "They were watching his house; and what interest had his house for them or anyone until the day after the sale? But we needn't worry about the theory. I've verified the facts since I cleared out of Bowden, and I am in a position to show them they did arrive here from Bowden on the very day you saw them first, that they lodged at the White Hart, and that the conversation that took place between the two was the Crown."

"And if they are colleagues of Mrs. Montgomery's," I asked, "what is their business?"

"Why, here," he replied, "since they are foreigners, are probably found, or revealed; and if so we can find out where to look for that place quite as well here as at Bowden."

"In what way?" I queried.

"This way," he explained. "If there is any person here related to, or dependent on Mrs. Montgomery, who can be shown to have a home or connections in Bowden, that house or the home of those connections is the place we have to call at."

"Yes, yes," I said, eagerly. "I see your point; we must set about it at once. I believe that we shall find her; but Mr. Howell, since it's quite evident that the paper is lost, and that Miss Denzell's arrest can serve no useful purpose, don't you think that if we get ahead of the police who have treated us so badly, we might—"

"Might what, sir?" he demanded, as the words stood in my throat.

"Might give her a warning, or something," I stammered, "and so save Mr. Duncan a very unpleasant ordeal."

"We might do it of course," Howell answered, drily, "but he has a weak man's relief of having a knotty question solved for him. That is quite true, and it's no part of our business to help at his expense. But the question is, what am I to tell him now?"

"Only that I've traced her on to the man, and that when last seen she was, and unharmed," Howell answered. "His opinion of the lady will keep him from worrying on the truth; so you can see him directly and take my message."

"No," I answered, nervously. "I'll leave Missing to do that. He can't tell more than he knows, but he will embroider the story much better than I could set to work with you at once if I may?"

"Half a minute, sir," said Howell, gravely. "I think I've made it pretty clear that for the moment Miss Denzell is fairly safe, but there is one person who is in a very awkward fix just now, who can't be helped so far as I can see, unless we help him. Now, what do you say, are we justified in depriving Mr. Duncan of our services for an hour and going to help what the police have got against Sir Robert Birchall?"

"They surely can't have much against him," I urged, "and the newspaper accounts—"

"The newspaper accounts won't give prominence to the things that we should notice," he interrupted, "and the police would never have arrested a baronet if they hadn't a fairly strong case."

"It seems we've a sort of responsibility," I answered. "It's Hobson's choice we must go."

"Then sharp's the word, sir," said Howell, "for we're late already."

"They've identified the weapon as Sir Robert's," whispered an excited individual, who kindly made room for us in a corner when we reached the already crowded town hall. "That's it on the table with a white label on it, and the case is a pair of foot in Sir Robert's own house. The man in the box is his valet; he's giving the magistrate a lot of trouble. He's very much attached to Sir Robert, and he wants to hush things up it's quite clear."

"So much the worse for his master," said Howell, glancing meaningly at me and then across at the poor, agitated, anxious fellow in the box. "Mr. Harman, Sir Robert will be sent up for trial, I fancy, and the magistrates will settle their minds to it before this witness stands down."

I turned my attention from Howell to the man in the dock, fuming with him and dined with him many a time, no doubt, and as I listened to the story that the prosecution was laboriously dragging out of the witness, I recognized that the baronet's position was much graver than I had supposed.

I cannot give the valet's examination in extenso, with its reiterated questions and monosyllabic replies, but briefly summarized, his evidence amounted to this: He knew that his master had bought a pair of pistols on a certain date months ago; sometimes he drank heavily, sometimes he was sober for months. Sometimes he quarrelled with Lady Birchall because he was drinking; sometimes he drank because the quarrels were generally over money; the quarrels were quite sure of that. No one knew that the quarrels were Lady Birchall's fault; but her ladyship had money, and Sir Robert got an idea she drew it in his face that he was poor, when she complained of extravagance. Yes, they did quarrel about Mr. Danvers. Yes, he had taken up with Mr. Danvers after a quarrel about some woman; that is, her ladyship liked Mr. Danvers, and gave him a good bit of her company nowadays, and no harm was meant. Sir Robert took offence, and that led to quarrels. He (the witness) had been in many places where the master wouldn't have thought anything about it was his view, but he didn't deny that Sir Robert hated Mr. Danvers.

About the pistols, Sir Robert bought them in drink, and once threatened his own life, and once threatened his wife's. Then they were straight for me. And gave up the drink, and ceased to carry one of the pistols. He was going on all right when the quarrels were over, and to give his vote and interest to Montgomery. He started a drinking bout at the time, and then tried to interfere, and then there was trouble.

Yes, he did recollect the afternoon of August 10th; that was the day when Sir Robert first heard that Mr. Danvers had been seen at a meeting of the opposition party. He came into the drawing-room and made a fuss. He said that Mr. Danvers had "rattled," and he threatened "to do something to him."

At this point a little scene occurred. The man was pressed to give the nature of the threat, and to repeat the words of abuse used. He got hot and restive at once. He said that it was his business "to hear, see, and say nothing," and that every gentleman's servant knew that. When sharply reminded of the nature of his oath he tried to explain that what he meant was that he had formed a habit of forgetting that sort of thing, and now could not rely on his memory. Then, in a burst of temper, he added that there were others who had heard it all, and that they ought to be asked to repeat it instead of him. He immediately the poor man was asked to name the persons alluded to, and, much crestfallen, he complied. If fancy he saw he would have done better to let it go on an unsupported testimony than to call others to confirm the tale. However, nothing came of it immediately, for the man of two persons he referred to turned out to be a guest who had gone away the following day, Sunday, owing to a slight disagreement with Sir Robert over his conduct to Lady Birchall, and a groom, now in the hospital suffering from an accident in the stable yard.

After this the poor witness, too nervous to re-assert, admitted that Sir Robert did say, speaking of Danvers, "I'll have his life," much the same as any gentleman might if his temper was up. Moreover, he had to tell how he had that night (the 12th) found one of the pistols in his master's coat pocket when he took the clothes to brush them.

At about ten that night he (the witness) went to the gun-room, and happened to look at the pistol case; one of the pistols was gone. He couldn't explain why he went to look at the pistol, nor why he immediately went to his master's room, which he found locked. He wouldn't go so far as to say he was frightened, either by his master or anybody else, but he admitted that he called another manservant, and both of them tried to get into the room. He stooped and looked through the keyhole, but he was not of opinion that because he could see into the room the door must have

PROF. ADLER TALKS PLAIN Tells American People About Source of Moral Corruption (From the Address of Prof. Felix Adler, at Carnegie Hall, New York, Sunday.) A fabled atmosphere morally surrounds us and seems to suffocate us in our higher life. It proceeds primarily from the corruption and death in our public life, and we feel it necessary to clean the springs of our public life in order that we may live.

Scientists and Smokers. The non-acceptance of money wrongfully acquired for the purposes of religion will not do us any good. It is a half-way measure, never correct at the best. At the same time it is wrong to judge a man on his money. He must have a chance to do money. It is for the Church to which he belongs, if found guilty, to discipline him, to suspend him, to bring him to repentance. The reason why the election of this particular sequester or a number of sequesters will not do us any good is that it is the evil of a part separating itself from the whole, the evil of individualism—that is, the evil of people setting their own selfish interests as the last end of life. Individualism is insane, and it has made us insane—this setting of a reputation against the whole. A life insurance scandal is filling the atmosphere with a moral mist, a stench of repugnance. The reason why the insurance is a most sacred trust. For an insurance official to imperil that fund or to say in any way that he is like the man on his own estate, is also a confession that he is a man of straw. That even beyond the grave he may still be the headstrong, to impair the value of that fund could be likened to the act of one who would strike the cup of consolation from the lips of the dying. Unfortunately we put dead men in charge of these sacred trusts. They are spectres, ghosts in their moral nature. They are dead. They cannot make the elementary distinction of what is right and proper in a fiduciary position. They don't seem to realize that they have broken the fiduciary relation the instant they contemplate personally profiting under that relation. Every moral relation is of a fiduciary character. The same inability to discriminate between right and wrong is seen in a thousand places. The president of a railway is also a contractor doing business with that railway of which he is a trustee. In his capacity of contractor he secures an advantage over himself as president—that is, in his fiduciary capacity. We can trace it down even to the household where the servant receives a percentage from the trades people for all the supplies entering the employer's house. What is the essential underlying source of all our moral corruption? It is unquestionably a lack of comprehension of the true nature of the fiduciary relations. The trustee would not be the great menace they are today if they had not acquired that great initial velocity through the corruption of bankers and legislators who were unworthy of the trust reposed in them. From the crown of its head to the soles of its feet our society is poisoned with this disease. And it makes no difference whether wrongful gains are measured by millions or by a few paltry dollars. Patriotism in its broadest sense is the only remedy for the evil. Public spirit of the right kind will overcome this insidious individualism. We need public spirit—the kind of public spirit that means always having the fiduciary relations right.

RADIUM CURE NEW YORK, April 20.—Experiments now under way at the Flower hospital in this city are reported by the World to indicate the discovery of an almost certain cure for cancer. It consists of a new method for the application of radium. A chemist of this city claims to have succeeded in dissolving radium and that the resulting solution exerted all the activity of the pure radium. Surgeons and physicians of the Flower hospital staff decided to give the solution a trial and selected an old woman 82 years of age who was dying from a cancer on the instep of her left foot. Two weeks ago she received her first treatment. Six days later the doctors say the cancer dropped off and showed healthy flesh beneath. Nothing remained but to heal the tissue which was finally accomplished, although the treatment is still being continued. Tomorrow another experiment will be undertaken.

A TEMPERANCE LESSON (Kennebec Journal) There is a good temperance lesson in the "Marathon race" of twenty-five miles which is always a feature of Boston's celebration of Patriot's Day. The doctor's fore and immediately after the race declare that those who are the most successful and suffer the least injury from the contest are the ones who have been given no alcoholic stimulants either before or during the long, hard race. In several cases the runners who were given a drink of whiskey or other stimulant during the race soon find themselves in distress and are obliged to quit running. The winners had only a bit of lemon juice or an occasional swallow of water.

THE EVENING TIMES.

SAINT JOHN, N. B., APRIL 29, 1905.

The St. John Evening Times is published at 19 and 21 Canterbury Street, St. John, N. B. (Monday excepted), by the St. John Times Printing & Publishing Co., Ltd., a company incorporated under the Joint Stock Companies Act, A. M. BELDING, Editor.

NOT SO FAVORABLE

At the beginning of the week the Times made some observations relating to favorable conditions, from the industrial standpoint, existing this spring in St. John. It was remarked among other things that, if the logs came down, the mills would all be busy. The outlook today is not so favorable as it was in that respect. The logs are not moving as lumbermen would like, because of the continuous dry weather. It is a question whether the logs will come out, or a large quantity be dumped in the streams. Following a winter remarkable for heavy snowfall, we have had a spring no less remarkable for the absence of rain.

The drought also affects the farmers. The spring rains are essential to good crops. They are also needed in the city, to wash out the gutters and clear away the accumulated grime that threaten the public health.

Of course there may be heavy rains in May. The like has occurred in the past. The logs may all come out, and intervals of rain may be expected. The St. John board of health may behold a lightening of its burdens, and the street department a happy deliverance from some of its troubles.

But today the skies are brass and the streams are low, and the snow is rapidly melting out of the woods, without the usual spring freshet. Therefore, the universal desire is for the friendly rain.

THE COAL DUTY

The Montreal Gazette is not in favor of the agitation promoted by some Ontario papers to have the duty removed from imported coal, which would seriously affect the Nova Scotia industry. The Gazette says: "These duties as at present maintained and understood are held to be necessary to keep the Canadian market for the coal industry as a protection the tariff justification of protection the tariff has afforded. Their imposition was followed by a development of the eastern Canadian coal mining district greater even than was expected. It will not be the course of wisdom to remove them under any conditions that presently promise to arise. It is safe to hold that they will not be removed."

JEW IN AMERICA

Sitting in the Opera House one evening last week a gentleman commented upon the number of people of the Hebrew race who were present, in comparison with the very small proportion to be seen in St. John audiences years ago. The man thought entire one's mind in walking through some sections of the business section of the city. The proportion of Hebrews in the population of the city is increasing. The like is true of other Canadian cities, and even more so in those of the United States. In that country they are talking of a celebration of the anniversary of the first landing of the Jews. They have found in America personal and religious liberty, and have improved their opportunities. A leading Boston journal says the following tribute to the Jews in America:—"Without the substance and the mental force which the Jews have contributed to the development of this country it would stand upon a much lower level of prosperity and power than is now the case. About a fifth of the population of New York city is Jewish, and when we consider the standing of that element in the business of the city and the country its importance as a factor is still more notable. The metropolis has twenty-eight synagogues, and the number is increasing. In spite of the efforts of the Zionists this ratio is likely to increase rather than diminish. They have taken foremost places, not alone as money-getters, but in science, in literature and in movements of broad philanthropy and public spirit. "Just now there seems to be a new departure among some of the representatives of the race in this country. They are manifesting an attraction back to the soil in instances that seem to be all the while growing more numerous. As a rule they have not engaged to any great extent in the country's fundamental industry; but during the past and present years colonies of them have come into public notice. Even in New England they have taken hold of certain abandoned farm sections and are showing how prosperity can be wrung from acres that have about discouraged generations of former occupants. They are not of the class for whom out-rippers and almshouses are mainly constructed. Law-abiding, thrifty and industrious, in their process of Americanization they are competent to give lessons as well as to receive them. America is

SMALL BANKS

The multiplication of small banks is not regarded in the United States as an evil; but as a decided step in advance. For example, the New York Commercial says: "Five years ago the national banking law was so amended as to permit the organization of small banks, with such a satisfactory result that the author and supporters of the measure must feel deeply gratified. Apparently it was such a law as the country stood greatly in need of. In the five years succeeding its adoption the number of national banks has increased from 3,604 to 5,587, showing an addition of 1,983 banking institutions of this character throughout the country. New England is the only section showing little increase. Pennsylvania leads among the States with more than two hundred new banks in the five-year period. The banks in the South have almost doubled in number. The middle-western and western States show a large increase in the number of banks, and in every section the deposits, representing the wealth of the people, are largely added to.

Within the five years the combined capital stock of the eastern banks has increased $85,000,000, and the additional deposits exceed $40,000,000. In a half-century middle-western States the increase is no less apparent; their capital stocks have been swelled by $40,000,000. The Pacific coast shows an increase of 100 per cent. in its deposits. "It is a marvelous story of harvested wealth. The savings banks repeat it in the interests of the masses, but that the national banks were needed and are performing their service excellently is shown by a simple comparison of the figures presented in this analysis."

TRADE SCHOOLS

Governor Douglas of Massachusetts maintains with great force and vigor his position with regard to trade schools, which he asserts are necessary for the industrial salvation of the New England States. In an article in the Independent he writes:

In the last generation the position of Massachusetts as a manufacturing state has greatly changed. Processes which we supposed a century ago were ours by a certain sort of right have been transferred to other states. This process has continued and will continue in the future until economic laws—which it is useless for us to oppose—will show us that we are practically limited in this state to work of the highest skill. "Skill in workmanship will decide the future of Massachusetts, and only by the use of the best skilled labor can we compete with the German, English and French. The education of the young men to make them skilled artisans should be heartily approved.

The skilled labor necessary to our industries should be furnished, not by skilled labor imported from abroad, but by the young men from 15 to 21 years of age who are to become citizens. We take away their birthright when we refuse them the means of instructing the young men adequate to the requirements of the present mode of industry, we leave our young men without any means for reproducing the skilled labor of the generation now passing off the stage.

Competition and the present day industrial organization demand a new system of industrial education. Great corporations are making a greater demand for educated labor than ever before. The poor man's son can graduate from a trade school, and his diploma will mean as much, if not more, than the diploma awarded the rich man's son by the various colleges and universities. Competition can best be met and overcome with expert labor. The trade school will unquestionably give us this expert labor and it should be a pleasure as well as a duty to do all that we can to bring about the establishment of trade schools."

There is great force in these arguments, and there can be little doubt that legislation along the lines suggested by Governor Douglas will ultimately be adopted, despite the opposition of some of the trades and labor leaders who mistakenly believe that trade schools will strengthen competition and lead to reduction of wages. The young coming up must live in some way, and it is the duty of their parents and the State to give them an equipment, and the State afford an opportunity. Trade schools offer an opportunity. It is to be regretted that in the schools of St. John not even the simplest manual training has found sufficient notice. The school authorities to ensure its introduction. There is need for an awakening in that respect.

It is stated that the electric locomotive recently built for the New York Central terminal service, between Croton and New York, has broken all its records this week by attaining a speed of 83 miles an hour, pulling a heavy train. The record was made in the presence of a party of visitors from the New York, New Haven and Hartford, and Northern Pacific Railroad Companies. It will, however, be sometime yet before the steam locomotive has outlived its usefulness for heavy and long distance railway traffic.

NEW YORK, April 28.—While there were no official developments in the affairs of the Equitable Life Assurance Society today, it was rumored in Wall street that Vice-President George Tarbell has decided to retire and to be succeeded by a new company, it was understood that he had an interest in capital backing for the new company, and it was intended to offer the presidency to President James W. Alexander, of the Equitable, if he is willing to accept.

WILL TRY SLAG ON THE STREETS

Moncton Will Make a Thorough Experiment in Paving

Work Is Now Slack in the I. C. R. Traffic Department—Wanted Rev. Mr. Bamford—Bad for Trainmen—A Fishing Club.

MONCTON, April 29.—This has been rather a busy week in the police court, with the result that the business for the circuit court at Dorchester next week has been considerably increased. Three prisoners have been forwarded to Dorchester within the past two or three days for trial and all are for serious offences. Howard Briggs is to be tried for a serious assault upon Robert Tingley, and the two Greeks, taken to Dorchester yesterday, will be tried on the charge of stealing clothing from the I. C. R. section men's tool house.

Slag for Streets. Moncton is to try another experiment with slag scoured from the Londenberry iron mines for the streets. Some fifteen tons of slag were used by the city council of that time and today that portion of Main street where it was used is pointed to as one of the best bits of pavement put down. The question of street paving is one that has given the civic authorities a great deal of thought and the various experiments have not all proved successful. An order for Londenberry slag has been placed and it will be given a more thorough test this summer in the effort to solve the problem of street improvement.

I. C. R. Rush is Over. It is probable that quite a number of I. C. R. conducting and drivers who have been promoted during the past few months in consequence of the extraordinary rush of traffic all over the road, will be compelled to go back braking and firing for the next few months, as work has slackened off very materially of late. Conductors who were making thirty and forty days in a month during the winter and up to a week ago, are now glad to get in twenty days. A large number of brakemen and firemen were taken on the road during the rush in the winter and some of these will be laid off altogether until traffic picks up again. The fall in business on the Intercolonial is particularly noticeable in consequence of the unprecedented rush that has prevailed since late fall.

Fred Nickerson, I. C. R. brakeman, who was so seriously injured in the Amherst yard some five or six weeks ago, and has since been in the hospital at Amherst, was brought to his home in Moncton yesterday. He will soon be able to resume work at his occupation.

Hon. Mr. Jones. Hon. W. P. J. Jones, a legislator general paid his first visit to Moncton as a member of the provincial government yesterday. He was on a trip of inspection over the Intercolonial Railway in company with surveyor general Sweeney.

Miss Zimmerman, daughter of Judge F. W. Emerson, returned yesterday from Ottawa, where she has been paying an extended visit to Mr. Zimmerman, daughter of the minister of railways.

The annual meeting of the Adgevoosack Fishing Club is to be held here on Tuesday afternoon next. The club within the last year or two has added fishing privileges by leasing a portion of the Kouchibouguac River and is in a prosperous condition.

John Fraser, boarding house keeper, was fined $30 yesterday for Street Act violation.

The annual meeting of the Moncton Exhibition Association will be held on Monday evening next when a financial statement of last year's work will be considered. The association is a good year, and another successful season with the race track is being looked forward to.

Wanted Rev. Mr. Bamford. Considerable disappointment is felt among members of the First Baptist church over the inability of Rev. Frederick Bamford to supply their pulpit on account of his having accepted a call to the Carleton (St. John) Baptist church. Many members of the Moncton church had their eyes on Rev. Mr. Bamford as Mr. Hutchinson's successor and had it in view to extend him a call, but the Carleton church rather got ahead of them. The Moncton church is consequently still on the search for a pastor. Rev. Gideon Gwyn, of Appashaqui, formerly pastor of the Baptist church here, is to occupy the pulpit on Sunday next and after that the Rev. Mr. Curry, of Carleton county, is expected to supply for a time.

Duncan Brooks, the young man wanted by the I. C. R. police for assaulting station agent Price at Pettitville, is still at large, but the I. C. R. authorities do not purpose to abandon the chase until they get him. Station agent Price carries a load mark over the eye as the result of being struck by a lamp thrown by Brooks.

Rainbow Coupons. Pipe-smokers should see that their pouch of Rainbow Cut Plug Tobacco contain coupons—these are valuable.

Either.—The Hugwells evidently are still much in love with each other. "Martha"—"Yes, but it isn't nice in them to show 'em their people, it actually tends to raise the suspicion in the minds of strangers that they are not married."

INTERESTING NEWS FROM PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND

Must Have More Money From Ottawa or More Home Revenue--The Schools--Ill-Paid Teachers--Light Company Will Fight Civic Ownership--Appeal for Better Communication.

CHARLOTTETOWN, April 29. -- The budget speech was delivered in the provincial legislature this week by Premier Patten. He had every reason to feel in a happy mood. In his appeal to the people a few months ago his government had been returned with a larger majority than ever, the parties standing 22 to 8. It was a matter of regret, however, that there was a deficit of over $40,000 last year, due to a falling off in the receipts and an increase in the expenditure, especially in public works. Further reduction of an expenditure which is now not sufficient to give the desired public service, is scarcely advisable, and an increase of local taxation would be unavoidable unless an outside source of additional revenue is sought. The Premier is quite hopeful that before another session he will secure the increase in revenue by the settlement of the Fishery Award claim, and from a re-adjustment of the subsidies. He recalls that the Premier of Quebec, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick assuring him that they were in line with Prince Edward Island in pressing for a readjustment of the subsidies; and the recent utterance of Premier Gouin at the Quebec banquet is another encouraging element in the situation. As to the Fishery Award, Quebec and New Brunswick are also making demands, but the claims of Prince Edward Island are stronger than theirs, as the greater part of the evidence, on which the Halifax award was made, came from this province. In case those claims peter out, which seems hardly likely, and an increase of taxation comes, it is probable that the system of self-valuation now in vogue may be discarded and official assessors appointed, as was the case at the time of the Davies Assessment Act. The Premier, however, is quite hopeful that the desired settlement of the claims will render this last resort unnecessary.

The Public Schools

The report of the public schools of the province was tabled in the legislature on Wednesday. Almost the entire expenditure for education is borne by the government and amounts to about half of the revenue. Last year it was $121,000. The total expenditure for education was $108,700, being $20.85 for each pupil enrolled and $14.31 for each in daily attendance. The government salaries are made up of supplements from the districts, and it is encouraging to note that there was an increase in supplements last year over the preceding year of $4,000, showing an awakening interest in education. The fact that many teachers are leaving the profession and that the number of vacant schools increased from 18 in 1903 to 28 in 1904 will be another incentive to the districts to pay up better, or shut up their schools. The educational movement has made good headway. The first Macdonald school will be opened next month at Mount Herbert, about ten miles from Charlottetown. Five districts are united and a splendid building has been erected. The educational movement has been successful on their own responsibility, with successful and encouraging results so far. There are many suitable sites for consolidated schools in this province and further progress is confidently expected. On the Island last year there were 300 teachers employed and 19,031 pupils enrolled. Outside of Charlottetown and Summerside no teacher receives a salary of more than $425. Of the 160 districts which pay no supplement a large proportion employ second class teachers, men receiving $225 and women $190 per year. The salary of third class teachers is $180 for men and $130 for women.

Breach of Promise Case

The breach of promise case instituted some time ago by Isabel M. Donnelly of Boston, against Richard F. Jamieson, formerly of the Island and now accountant of the Experimental Farm, Ottawa, has been settled at the suggestion of the court, the defendant through his attorney agreeing to settle for damages. An agricultural exhibition open to the Maritime Provinces, the fifth interprovincial exhibition, will be held at Charlottetown from September 29th to 29th. This exhibition receives a grant of $4000 per year from the provincial government. This week a bill was passed in the provincial legislature authorizing the funding of the provincial debt, and thus saving about $7000 in interest. The total debt is over $700,000, but as $200,000 of the amount is now in debentures the balance of $500,000 only will be consolidated. The report of the Provincial Hospital for the Insane tabled in the legislature this week shows that the number of cases under treatment was 233, 64.17 per cent of those admitted recovered. The expenditure for maintenance was $28,000.

For Civic Ownership

A bill empowering the city of Charlottetown to install or acquire an electric light and gas plant in the city for commercial and domestic purposes, is now before the council. The bill as submitted by the council is the result of a pamphlet taken this winter which gave a strong impetus to favor of civic ownership. There is no provision in the bill for the protection of vested rights, and the opinion is held that the Charlottetown Light & Power Co., who have the only electric light and gas plant in the city, should not be hampered by death with. An amendment is proposed to the effect that the city shall not levy any rate for or construct works for commercial electric lighting until the council has fixed a price to offer for the works of the Charlottetown Light & Power Co. and in case the city and company do not agree the price shall be determined by arbitration.

Appeal for Justice

The council of the board of trade are sending out a circular in favor of the transportation difficulties under which this province laborers, and asking those in co-operation and influence in securing improvement. The blockade of last winter, the great financial loss to the province it interrupted in the course of business, which was practically demoralized for the whole winter season, is pointed out, and the circular concludes as follows: The strong feeling here aroused by the grievance mentioned has been recognized this season by our Good Legislators, who unanimously passed a resolution framed by a committee of both sides of the House, asking the Dominion government to adopt vigorous and immediate measures of relief; also to carry out the contract entered into at the time of Confederation when by we were guaranteed continuous and efficient steam communication between this Island and the mainland, winter and summer, thus connecting the P. E. Island with the railway system of the Dominion. We feel that you can render us valuable assistance by bringing those facts to

A NEW IDEA.

Tonic Treatment for Indigestion --New Strength for the Stomach from New, Rich Red Blood. The Tonic Treatment--that is the latest and only scientific care for indigestion. All the leading doctors of Europe and America are using it with sensational success. No more purgatives, no more pills, no more patent foods, no more long diet lists saying, "Thou shalt not eat this or that." No more of all this--nothing in fact, but plenty of new, pure, rich, red blood to tone the liver and give the stomach strength for its work. That is the Tonic Treatment for Indigestion. The tonic treatment is based on the idea that drugs which digest the food for the stomach really weaken its powers through disease. The digestive organs can never do their work properly until they are strong enough to do it for themselves. The only thing that can give the stomach and the liver new strength is good blood--and the only thing that can actually make new blood is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. They have long been regarded as the greatest blood-making medicine in the world, and all the highest medical authorities agree that the one scientific cure for indigestion is the Tonic Treatment. The marvellous success of the treatment has been proved in every corner of the Dominion. One of the latest witnesses is Mr. Joseph Rochette, St. Jerome, Que., who says: "I simply hated the thought of food. Of course I could not eat, but I was so weak that I always suffered with dull, heavy pains in the stomach. I seemed to be bilious all the time. I had a general weakness, which further aggravated my unfortunate position. I grew pale, fell away in weight and the trouble seemed to be undying. I had a general weakness, and several remedies, but without success; a doctor whom I consulted advised absolute rest. But this was out of the question, as I had to work for my living. Fortunately for me, one of my friends advised me to use Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I decided to do so. After taking the pills for several weeks there was a decided improvement in my condition. Not only was my digestion better, but my general health improved in every way. New blood seemed to be entering through my veins, bringing new health and strength every day. I took eight boxes of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills altogether, and those who see me now would never know I had seen an unwell day in my life. I owe my splendid health to these pills, and strongly advise every very dyspeptic or weak person to lose no time in taking them." Mr. Rochette's statement is a strong tribute to the Tonic Treatment. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cured him because they actually made new, rich blood for him. These pills go right to the root of the trouble in the blood and cure that. The new blood they make carries healing, health and strength to every part of the body. That is the new Tonic Treatment, and the highest medical authorities now recommend this treatment for all the common ailments such as anæmia, headaches, backaches, rheumatism, sciatica, neuritis, nervousness, dyspepsia, and general weakness. These are all caused by bad blood, and therefore are all cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. You can get these pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at $6 a box, or six boxes for $2.60 by writing to the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Local Theatres Had Strong Attractions This Week

JOE JEFFERSON'S DEATH

The Chester De Vonde Company at the Opera House—Sheeley-Youngs' Performances—Jere McAluffe in Halifax.

St. John was steeped in crime this week, judging from the offerings presented at the Opera House and the York Theatre.

In the bills offered at both houses scenes of violence were as common as strawberries in the summer season, in fact they are now becoming so common that these effects are very often lost.

At the York Theatre the Sheeley-Youngs Company presented two "hair raising" in "Why Women Sin" and "The Stowaway."

Opera House patrons had an opportunity to "sit up and take notice" when the Chester De Vonde Company opened their two week engagement.

The Devil's Auction, that pleasing conglomeration of trick scenery and effects, will follow the De Vonde Company at the Opera House.

The Glover Leat Company is the next booking at the York Theatre. It entitles the company to the York Theatre for three nights.

Jere McAluffe is in Halifax this week playing to big houses. His "Tota" is playing at the company and the genial Col. W. J. Stanton is still the man in the front of the house.

The death of "Joe Jefferson," as he was affectionately called by fellow-actors and journalists, leaves a void that will not be easily filled.

Jefferson was no doubt prompted by artistic instinct to select and develop the character he had so successfully popularized.

With a man of his temperament, as Irving chose could hardly have been merely the result of some happy hit or chance suggestion.

The special Spring tour of the Pittsburgh orchestra with Emil Paur, conductor, and Madame Gaskin, soloist, began Monday.

Talk about the grim realism of "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" or the gruesome features of "The Yellow Wallpaper" or the terrible, as Katharine, as is the principal character in the De Vonde play, "when the fit is on him."

It is a grave question with me if legislation should not be enacted to prevent the presentation of such a blood curdling succession of awful pictures.

It is now doubtful if the "Bonny Briar Bush" will be seen here this season. It was booked for the York Theatre, but Mr. Stoddard is ill and although the company has succeeded him in the cast it is said to give a remarkably fine performance.

There is no better known or more consistent baseball roster in New York than the "Tribune" star of "The Education of Mr. Pipp," and as an evidence of his appreciation of Mr. Bell's predilection for the national game, President Andrew Freeman of the New York National team, included him as one of his guests in his private box at the opening game of the season.

A little box, which looked as if it might contain a piece of jewelry, reached Paul Armstrong, author of "The Heir to the Hoop," in the mail at the Hudson Theatre, New York, the day after the play opened last week.

Jefferson was no doubt prompted by artistic instinct to select and develop the character he had so successfully popularized.

With a man of his temperament, as Irving chose could hardly have been merely the result of some happy hit or chance suggestion.

HORSEMEN EXPRESS A VARIETY OF OPINIONS

As to Whether Horses Owned in the U. S. Should or Should Not Be Allowed to Compete on Maritime Tracks.

With the result of last season's racing there was much discussion among horse owners as to whether American owned horses should be allowed to compete on Maritime tracks...

As far as I am concerned, personally, I would say let the Americans come. I do not see any difference in buying American horses and starting them on the Maritime tracks...

I should think as we are trotting under the National Association trotting rules that could not win in their own class in U. S. and furthermore there is always more interest displayed in the races than if only local horses were to start...

John Ross, secretary Gentlemen's Driving Club, St. John.

Among the replies received were the following:—F. Duncanson, Fairview, N. B., writes: "I am in favor of allowing American horses to compete in our races in the province."

Richard Hebert, Moncton, N. B., writes: "I am in favor of allowing American horses to compete in our races in the province."

Wallace Cole, Chester, owner of Rita M., 2:19 1/2, the fastest green pacer ever bred in the Maritime provinces...

J. B. Gilchrist, Greenfield, N. B., owner of Donnell, 2:29 1/2.

Dr. F. A. Taylor, Moncton, owner Fleetstep, 2:20 1/2.

While in my opinion it is scarcely fair to Province bred and owned horses, still from the standpoint of the trotting tracks, I believe it is better to let them compete in some races at least—so I have invariably noticed that it does not seem to make much difference to the people where the horse comes from, so long as the fast time is made.

Dr. F. A. Taylor, Moncton, driver of Cassarina, 2:35, etc.

Afflicted with Erysipelas For Ten Years.

Cured by Four Bottles of Burdock Blood Bitters.

Mrs. N. Peister, of Brighton, Ont., was Cured Two Years Ago and Has Had No Return of It Since.

Read what she says:—"It is now about two years since I was cured of a terrible attack of Erysipelas, with which I had been afflicted for about ten years. I had tried almost everything, including medicine from several doctors, but could get no relief. I had given my case up as hopeless, but I procured five bottles of Burdock Blood Bitters, and it completely cured me. In fact, the cure has been permanent. It is now two years since I took Burdock Blood Bitters, and I have not had the slightest sign of the disease returning. I fully believe that your wonderful remedy has taken it so completely out of my system that I shall never be bothered again with it. I have the greatest faith in Burdock Blood Bitters."
