The copy filmed here has been reproduced thanks to the generosity of:

Société du Musée
du Séminaire de Québec

The images appearing here are the best quality possible considering the condition and legibility of the original copy and in keeping with the filming contract specifications.

Original copies in printed paper covers are filmed beginning with the front cover and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression, or the back cover when appropriate. All other original copies are filmed beginning on the first page with a printed or illustrated impression, and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression.

The last recorded frame on each microfiche shall contain the symbol \rightarrow (meaning "CONTINUED"), or the symbol ∇ (meaning "END"), whichever applies.

Maps, plates, charts, etc., may be filmed at different reduction ratios. Those too large to be entirely included in one exposure are filmed beginning in the upper left hand corner, left to right and top to bottom, as many frames as required. The following diagrams illustrate the method:

PREFACE.

IT is probable that the original design and principal motive of every teacher, in publishing a school-book, is the improvement of his own pupils. Such, at least, is the immediate object of the present compilation; which, for brevity of expression, neatness of arrangement, and comprehensiveness of plan, is, perhaps, superior to any book of the kind. My chief end has been to explain the general principles of grammar as clearly and intelligibly as possible. In the definitions, therefore, easiness and perspicuity have been sometimes preferred to logical exactness."

Orthography is mentioned rather for the sake of order than from a conviction of its utility; for, in my opinion, to occupy thirty or forty pages of a grammar in defining the sounds of the alphabet, is quite preposterous.

On Etymology, I have left much to be remarked by the teacher, in the time of teaching. My reason for doing this is, that children, when by themselves, labour more to have the words of their book imprinted on their memories, than to have the meaning fixed in their minds; but, on the contrary, when the teacher addresses them vis à voce, they naturally strive rather to comprehend his meaning, than to remember his exact expressions. In pursuance of this idea, the first part of this little volume has been thrown into a form more resembling heads of lectures on grammar, than a complete exposition of the subject. That the teacher, however, may not be always under the necessity of having recourse to his memory to supply the deficiencies, the most remarkable observations have been subjoined at the bottom of the page, to which the pupils themselves may occasionally be referred.

The desire of being concise has frequently induced me to use very elliptical expressions; but I trust they are all sufficiently perspicuous. I may also add, that many additional and critical remarks, which might have, with propriety, been inserted in the Grammar, have been inserted rather in the Key; for I have studiously withheld every thing from the Grammar, that could be spared, to keep it low-priced for the general good.

The Questions on Etymology, at the 172nd page, will speak for themselves: they unite the advantages of both the usual methods, viz. that of plain narration, and that of question and answer, without the inconvenience of either.

Syntax is commonly divided into two parts, Concord and Government; and the rules respecting the former, grammarians in general have placed before those which relate to the latter. I have not, however, attended to this division, because I deem it of little importance; but have placed those rules first which are either more easily understood or which more frequently occur. In arranging a number of rules, it is difficult to please.

every reader. I have frequently been unable to satisfy myself; and therefore, cannot expect that the arrangement which I have at last adopted will give universal satisfaction. Whatever order be preferred, the one rule must necessarily precede the other; and since they are all to be learned, it signifies but little whether the rules of concord precede those of government, or whether they be mixed, provided no anticipations be made which may embarrass the learner.

For Exercises on Syntax, I have not only selected the shortest sentences I could find, but printed the lines closely together, with the rules at the bottom on a small type, and by these means have generally compressed as many faulty expressions into a single page, as some of my predecessors have done into two pages of a larger size. Hence, though this book seems to contain but few exercises on bad grammar, it really contains so many, that a separate volume of exercises is quite unnecessary. Whatever defects were found in the former edition, in the time of teaching, have been carefully supplied.

On Etymology, Syntax, Punctuation, and Prosody, there is scarcely a rule or observation in the largest grammar in print that is not to be found in this; besides, the rules and definitions, in general, are so very short and pointed, that compared with those in some other grammars, they may be said to be hit off rather than made. Every page is independent, and though quite full, not crowded, but wears an air of neatness and ease invitingly sweet,—a circumstance not unimportant. But, notwithstanding these properties, and others that might be mentioned, I am far from being so vain as to suppose this compilation is altogether free from inaccuracies or defects; much less do I presume that it will obtain the approbation of every one who may choose to peruse it; for, to use the words of Dr. Johnson, "He that has much to do, will do something wrong, and of that wrong must suffer the consequences; and if it were possible that he should always act rightly, yet when such numbers are to judge of his conduct, the bad will censure and obstruct him by malevolence, and no good sometimes by mistake."

Those pupils that are capable of writing, should be requested to write the plural of nouns, &c. either at home or at school. The Exercises on Syntax, should be written, in their corrected state, with a stroke drawn under the word corrected.

K. means Key; the figures refer to the No. of the Key, not the page.

ENGLISH GRAMMAR.

ENGLISH GRAMMAR is the art of speaking and writing the English Language with propriety.

ORTHOGRAPHY.

ORTHOGRAPHY teaches the nature and powers of Letters, and the just method of spelling Words.

A LETTER is the least part of a word.

There are twenty-six letters in English.

Letters are either Vowels or Consonants.

A Vowel is a letter, the name of which makes a full open sound.—The vowels are, a, e, i, o, u, w, y.—The consonants are, b, c, d, f, g, h, j, k, l, m, n, p, q, r, s, t, v, x, z.

A Consonant is a letter that has a sound less distinct than that of a vowel; as, l, m, p.

A Diphthong is the union of two vowels; as, ou in out.

A proper Diphthong is one in which both the vowels are sounded; as, oy in boy.

An improper Diphthong is one in which only one of the two vowels is sounded; as, o in boat.

A Triphthong is the union of three vowels; as, eau in beauty.

A Syllable is a part of a word, or as much as can be sounded at once, as, far in far-mer.

A Monosyllable is a word of one syllable; as, fox.

A Dissyllable is a word of two syllables; as, Pe-ter.

A Trissyllable is a word of three syllables; as, but-ter-fly.

A Polysyllable is a word of many syllables.

Why should judgement, abridgement, &c. be spelled without e? How can g be soft like j, without it? See Walker's Dic. under judgement.

ETYMOLOGY.

ETYMOLOGY treats of the different sorts of Words, their various modifications and their derivation.

THERE are nine parts of Speech:—Article, Noun, Adjective, Pronoun, Verb, Adverb, Preposition, Interjection, and Conjunction.

Of the ARTICLES.

An Article is a word put before a noun, to show the extent of its meaning; as, a man.

There are two articles, a or an and the. A is used before a consonant.*—An is used before a vowel, or silent h; as, an age, an hour.

Of NOUNS.

A Noun is the name of any person, place, or thing; as, John, London, book.

Nouns are varied by Number, Gender and Case.

OBSERVATIONS.

* A is used before the long sound of u, and before w and y; as, A unit, a euphony, a ewe, a week, a year, such a one.—An is used before words beginning with h sounded, when the accent is on the second syllable; as, An heroic action; an historical account.

A is called the indefinite article, because it does not point out a particular person or thing; as, A king, that is, any king.

The is called the definite article, because it refers to a particular person or thing; as, The King; that is, the king of our own country.

A noun without an article to limit it, is taken in its widest sense; as, Man is mortal; namely, all mankind.

A is used before nouns in the singular number only. It is used before the plural in nouns preceded by such phrases as, A few, a great many; as, A few books; a great many apples.

The is used before nouns in both numbers, and sometimes before adverbs in the comparative and superlative degree. as more I study grammar: the better I like it

Of NUMBER.

Number is the distinction of one from more.

Nouns have two numbers; the Singular and the Plural. The singular denotes one the plural more than one.

1. The plural is generally formed by adding s to the singular; as, Book, books.

2. Nouns in s, sh, ch, x or o, form the plural by adding es; as, Miss, Misses; brush, brushes; match, matches; fox, foxes; hero, heroes.—p. 10. b.†

3. Nouns in y change y into ies in the plural; as, Lady, ladies:—y with a vowel before it, is not changed into ies; as, Day, days.

4. Nouns in f or fe, change f or fe into ves in the plural; as, Loaf, loaves; life, lives.

OBSERVATIONS.

Nouns ending in ch, sounding k, form the plural by adding s only; as, Stomach, stomachs.

Nouns in io, with junto, canto, tyro, grotto, portico, solo and quarto, have s only in the plural: as, Folia, folios; canto, cantos.

Nouns in f, have their plural in s; as, Muff, muffs; except staff, which sometimes has staves.

Dwarf, scarf, wharf, brief, chief, grief, kerchief, handkerchief, mischief; gulf, turf, surf, life, strife, proof, hoof, roof and reproof, never change f or fe into ves.—14. change f or fe into ves, 27 don't.—K. 22. b.

Nouns are either proper or common.—Proper nouns are the names of persons, places, seas, rivers, &c.; as, Thomas, Scotland, Forth.*

Common nouns are the names of things in general; as, chair, table.

Collective nouns are nouns that signify many: as, Multitude, crowds.

Abstract nouns are the names of qualities abstracted from their substances; as, Wisdom, wickedness.

Verbal or participial nouns are nouns derived from verbs; as, reading.

* Proper nouns have the plural only when they refer to a race or family; as, The Campbells; or to several persons of the same name, as, The eight Henrys, the two Mr. Bells, the two Miss Browns, (m without the n equally concerned, and also when the names are titles, data or all are the title, (Mr. or Miss) and write Misses Brown, R. & S. Roy; Messrs. (for Messieurs, Fr.) Guthrie and Tail.

ENGLISH ETYMOLOGY.

EXERCISES ON NUMBER.

Write, or tell, or spell, the Plural of Fox,* book, leaf, candle, hat, loaf, wish, fish, sex, kiss, coach, inch, sky, bounty, army, duty, knife, echo, loss, cargo, wife, story, church, table, glass, study, calf, branch, street, potato, peach, sheaf, booby, rock, stone, house, glory, hope, flower, city, difficulty, distress.

Day, boy, relay, chimney, † journey, valley, needle, enemy, an army, a vale, an ant, a sheep, the hill, a valley, the sea, key, toy.

Correct the following Errors :

A end, a army, an heart, an horn, an bed, a hour, a adder, a honour, an horse, an house, an pen, a ox, vallies, chimnies, journies, attornies, a eel, a ant, a inch, a eye.

Exercises on the Observations.

Monarch, tyro, grotto, nuncio, punctilio, ruff, muff, reproof, portico, handkerchief, gulf, hoof, fife, multitude, people, meeting, John, Lucy, meekness, charity, folly, France, Matthew, James, wisdom, reading.

* What is the plural of fox? Foxes. Why? Because nouns in s, ch, ck, z, or o, form the plural by adding es.—What is the plural of book? Books. Why? Because the plural is generally formed by adding s to the singular.—What is the plural of leaf? Leaves. Why? Because nouns in f or fe change f or fe into ves in the plural.—What is the plural of army? Armies. Why? Because nouns in y change y into ies in the plural.—What is the plural of day? Days. Spell it. d, a, y, s. Why not d, a, i, e, s? Because y with a vowel before it is not changed into ies: it takes s only.—What is the difference between adding and changing?—K. No. 37, 40, 41.

† Many eminent authors change ey in the singular into ies in the plural; thus:—Chimnies with scorn rejecting smoke.—Swift.

Still as thou dost thy radiant journies run.—Prior.

But rattling nonsense in full vollies breaks.—Pope.

The Society of Procurators or Attornies.—Boswell.

This mode of spelling these and similar words is highly improper. How inconsistent is, "Attornies" "journeyed."

ENGLISH ETYMOLOGY.

Of NOUNS.

Some nouns are irregular in the formation of their plural; such as,

Singular	Plural.
Man*	men
Woman	women
Child	children
Foot	feet
Ox	oxen

Singular.	Plural.
Tooth	teeth
Goose	geese
Mouse	mice
Louse	lice
Penny	pence

* The compounds of man form the plural like the singular, namely, by changing a of the singular, into e of the plural. — Musculman, not being a compound of man, is musselmans; it is so in the plural; I think it should always be musselmans in the plural.

SINGULAR.

- Brother
- Sow or swine †
- Die (for gaming)
- Die (for coining)
- Aide-de-camp
- Court-martial
- Cousin-german
- Father-in-law, &c.

- brothers, &c.
- sows, or swines
- dice
- dies
- aides-de-camp
- courts-martial
- cousins-german
- fathers-in-law, &c.

† Brethren is generally applied to the members of the same society or church, and Brothers to the sons of the same parents.
 ‡ The singular of some nouns is distinguished from the plural by the article a; as, A sheep, a swine.

OBSERVATIONS.

Names of metals, virtues, vices, and things that are weighed or measured, &c. are in general singular; as, Gold, meekness, drunkenness, bread, beer, beef, &c., except when the different sorts are meant; as, Wines, teas.

Some nouns are used only in the plural; such as, Antipodes, literati, credenda, minutia, banditti, data, folk.

The singular of literati, &c. is made by saying one of the literati—Bandit, the singular of banditti, is often used in newspapers.

The words Apparatus, hiatus, series, brace, dozen, means, and species, are alike in both numbers.—Some pluralize series into serieses—Brace, dozen, &c. sometimes admit of the plural form; thus, he bought partridges in braces, and books in dozens, &c.

News and arms are generally used in the singular number, but sometimes in the plural.—News is generally plural.

Peas and fish are peas when we mean the species; as, peas are dear, fish is cheap; but when we refer to the number, we say, peas fishes; as, Ten peas, two fishes.

Horse and foot, meaning cavalry and infantry, are used in the singular form with a plural verb; as, A thousand horses were ready; ten thousand foot were there.—Men is understood.

Of NOUNS.

As the following words, from foreign languages, seldom occur, except a few, the pupil may very properly be allowed to omit them, till he be farther advanced.

Animula	animule	Fœcus	fœci
Antithesis	antithesēs	Genius	gēniī †
Apices	apices	Gēnus	gēnera
Appendix	appendices	Hypōthesis	hypōtheses

Axis	axes	Lamina	laminæ
Basis	bases	Magus	māgi
Calx	calces	Memorandum	memoranda, or memorandums
Cherub	cherubim, cherubs	Métamorphosis	métamorphōses
Crisis	crises	Monsieur	messieurs
Crítèrion	critéria	Phenomenon	phenomena
Datum	data	Rádus	radii
Desideratum	desiderata	Stämen	stämina
Diaëresis	diaëreses	Séraph	séraphim, séraphs
Efflūvium	efflūvia	Stimulus	stimuli
Ellipsis	ellipses	Stratum	strata
Emphasis	emphases	Vertex	vertices
Encômium	encômia encômiums	Vortex	vörtices
Erratum	errata	Virtuôso	virtuôsi

It was thought unnecessary to give a list of such words of our own as snuffers, scissors, tongs, &c. because they are evidently to be used as plural; but it may be proper to observe that such words as mathematics, metaphysics, politics, ethics, pneumatics, &c. though generally plural, are sometimes construed as singular, as, Mathematics is a science; and so of the rest.

* RULE. Nouns in um or on have s in the plural; and those which have is in the singular have es in the plural.

† Genii, ærial spirits; but geniuses, persons of genius.—For when reason L. Murray, Elphinston, Oulton and others pluralize such word as genius and rebus by adding es to the singular, making them geniuses, rebuses, instead of geniuses, rebuses, it is not easy to guess; as words ending with a single s are never accented on the last syllable, there can be no good reason for doubling the s before es. Hence rule 2^d, page 7th, begins with "Nouns in s," because those in s include æce in ss.

Indexes, when it signifies pointers or tables of contents. Indices, when it refers to algebraic quantities

ENGLISH ETYMOLOGY.

Of GENDER.

Gender is the distinction of sex.

There are three genders: the Masculine, Feminine, and Neuter.

The Masculine denotes the male sex; as A man, a boy.

The Feminine denotes the female sex; as A woman, a girl.

The Neuter denotes whatever is without life; as, Milk.

There are three ways of distinguishing the sex;

1. By different words; as,

MALE.	FEMALE.	MALE.	FEMALE.
Bachelor	maid, spinster	Horse	mare
Beau	belle	Husband	wife
Boar	sow	King	queen
Boy	girl	Lad	lass
Brother	sister	Lord	lady
Buck	doe	Man	woman
Bull	cow	Master	mistress
Bullock, ox or steer	heifer— hēf-er	Milster	spawner
Cock	hen	Nephew	niece
Colt	filly	Ram	cwe
Dog	bitch	Singer	songstress, or singer
Drake	duck	Sloven	slut
Earl	countess	Son	daughter
Father	mother	Stag	hind
Friar	nun	Uncle	aunt
Gander	goose	Wizard	witch
Hart	roe	Sir	madam

OBSERVATIONS.

Some nouns are either masculine or feminine; such as, parent, child, cousin, infant, servant, neighbour, &c.

Some nouns, naturally neuter, are converted into the masculine or feminine gender; as, when we say of the sun, He is setting; and of the moon, She is eclipsed.

Of NOUNS.

2. By a difference of termination; as,

MALE.	FEMALE	MALE.	FEMALE
Abbot	abbess	Jew	Jewess
Actor	actress	Landgrave	landgravine
Administrator	administratrix	Lion	lioness
Adulterer	adulteress	Marquis	marchioness
Ambassador	ambadress	Mayor	mayoress
Arbiter	arbitress	Patron	patroness
Author (often)	authoress*	Peer	peeress
Baron	baroness	Poet	poetess
Bridegroom	bride	Priest	priestess
Benefactor	benefactress	Prince	princess
Caterer	cateress	Prior	prioress
Chanter	chantress	Prophet	prophetess
Conductor	conductress	Protector	protectress
Count	countess	Shepherd	shepherdess
Deacon	deaconess	Songster	songstress
Duke	duchess	Sorcerer	sorceress
Elector	electress	Sultan	{sultanness, or {sultāna
Emperor	empress	Tiger	tigress
Enchanter	enchantress	Traitor	traitress
Exécutor	exécutrix	Tutor	tutoress
Governor	governess	Tyrant	tyranness
Heir	heiress	Viscount	viscountess
Héro	hër-o-ine	Vótary	vótaress
Hunter	huntress	Widower	widow
Hóst	hóstess

3 By prefixing another word; as,

A cock-sparrow, a hen-sparrow; a he-goat, a she-goat; a man-servant, a maid-servant; a he-ass, a she-ass; a male-child, &c.; male-descendants, &c.

* It does not appear to be necessary, nor even proper, to use authoress; for the female noun or pronoun that almost invariably accompanies this word, will distinguish the gender in it as well as in writer.

Of the CASES of Nouns.

Case is the relation one noun bears to another, or to a verb, or to a preposition.

Nouns have three cases; the Nominative, Possessive, and Objective.*

The Nominative and Objective are alike.

The Possessive is formed by adding an apostrophe and s to the nominative; as, Job's.

When the plural ends in s, the possessive is formed by adding only an apostrophe; thus,

	Singular.	Plural.	Singular.	Plural.
Nom.	Lady	Ladies	John	—†
Poss.	Lady's	Ladies'	John's	—
Obj.	Lady	Ladies	John	—

† Proper names generally want the plural.—See page 7th, last note.

EXERCISES

ON GENDER, NUMBER AND CASE.

† Father, brothers, mother's, boys, book loaf, arms, wife, hats, sisters', bride's, bottles, brush, goose, eagle's wings, echo, ox's horn, mouse, kings, queens, bread, child's, glass, tooth, tongs, candle, chair, Jane's boots, Robert's shoe, horse.

* The Nominative merely denotes the name of a thing.

The Possessive denotes possession; as, Ann's book.—Possession is often expressed by of as well as un's.—K. 57 to 63, also 194 and 195.

The Objective denotes the object upon which an active verb or a preposition terminates.

† One method of using the above exercises is as follows:—

Father, a noun, singular (number), masculine (gender), the nominative (case), plural, fathers. Brothers, a noun, plural, masculine, the nominative. Mother's, a noun, singular, feminine, the possessive.—Spell it.—K. 44.

By parsing in this manner, the pupil gives a correct answer to the questions, What part of speech is father? What number? What gender? What case? without obliging the teacher to lose time to no purpose in asking them.—The pupil, however, should be made to understand that he is giving answers to questions which are always supposed to be asked.

As the Nominative and Objective are alike, no inaccuracy can result from the pupil's being allowed to call it always the Nominative, till he come to the verb.—Case may be altogether omitted till that time, the case of pronouns excepted.—See Note, page 30.

Cf ADJECTIVES.

An Adjective is a word which expresses the quality of a noun; as, A good boy.

Adjectives have three degrees of comparison; the Positive, Comparative and Superlative.

The comparative is formed by adding er to the positive; and the superlative, by adding est; as in Sweet, sweeter, sweetest. *—K. 67.

Disyllables in y change y into i before er and est; as, Happy, happier, happiest. †

ADJECTIVES COMPARED IRREGULARLY.

Positive.	Comparative.	Superlative.
Good, (well an Adv.)	better	best
Bad, evil, or ill	worse	worst
Little	less	least
Much or many	more	most
Late	later	latest or last
Near	nearer	nearest or next
Far	farther	farthest
Fore	former	foremost or first
Old	older or elder	oldest or eldest

OBSERVATIONS

* The Positive expresses the simple quality; the Comparative a higher or lower degree of the quality; and the Superlative the highest or lowest degree.—K. 68, 72.

Adjectives of one syllable are generally compared by adding er and est; and those of more than one by prefixing more and most; as, More numerous, most numerous;—or, by less and least; as, Less merry, least merry.

Disyllables ending with e final are often compared by er and est; as, Polite, politer, politest; ample, ampler, amplest.

† If a vowel precede y, it is not changed into i, before er and est; as, Gay, gayer, gayest; coy, coyer, coyest.

Some adjectives are compared by adding most to the end of the word, as, Upper, uppermost.—Some have no positive; as, Exterior, extrem. Nouns are often used as adjectives; as, A gold-ring, a silver-cup.—Adjectives often become nouns; as, Much good.

Some adjectives do not properly admit of comparison; such as, True, perfect, universal, chief, extrins, &c.

Much is applied to things weighed or measured; Many to those that are numbered.—Elder and eldest to persons; older and oldest to things.

When the positive ends in a single consonant, preceded by a single vowel, the consonant is doubled before er and est; as, Big, bigger, biggest.

Of PERSONAL PRONOUNS.

A Pronoun is a word used instead of a noun; as, John is a good boy; he obeys the master.

There are three kinds of pronouns; Personal, Relative and Adjective.—The Personal Pronouns are thus declined:—

	SINGULAR.			PLURAL.
	Nom.	Poss.	Obj.	Nom.	Poss.	Obj.
First Personal pronoun m. or f.	I	mine	me	We	ours	us
2. m. or f.	Thou	thine	thee	You*	yours	you
3. m.	He	his	him	} They	theirs	them
3. f.	She	hers	her
3. n.	It	its	it

EXERCISES ON PERSONAL PRONOUNS.

I, thou, we, me, us, thine, he, him, she, hers, they, thee, them, its, theirs, you, her, yours, yours, mine, his, I, me, them, us, it, we.

* Ye is often used instead of you in the nominative; as, Ye are happy.

Mine and thine were formerly used instead of my and thy before a vowel or an h; as, Blot out all mine iniquities; Give me thine heart. Hers, its, ours, yours, theirs, should never be written her's, it's, our's, your's, their's; but hers, its, ours, &c.

The compound personal pronouns, Myself, thyself, himself, &c. are commonly joined either to the simple pronoun, or to any ordinary noun to make it more remarkable.—See K. 80, 96.

These pronouns are all generally in the same case with the noun or pronoun to which they are joined; as, "She herself said so;" "They themselves acknowledged it to me myself;" "The master himself got it."

Self, when used alone, is a noun; as, "Our fondness for self is hurtful to others."—K. 96.

In some respectable grammars the possessive case of the different personal pronouns stands thus: 1st, my or mine, our or ours—2d, thy or thine, your or yours—3d, her or hers, their or theirs. I see no impropriety in this method; the one I have preferred, however, is perhaps less liable to objection.

Of RELATIVE PRONOUNS.

A Relative Pronoun is a word that relates to a noun or pronoun before it, called the antecedent; as, The master who taught us.*

The simple relatives are, who, which, and that; they are alike in both numbers, thus:

Nom.	Who.
Poss.	Whose.
Obj.	Whom.

Who is applied to persons; as, The boy who.†

Which is applied to inferior animals, and things without life; as, The dog which barks; the book which was lost.

That is often used instead of who or which; as, The boy that reads; the book that was lost.

What is a compound relative, including both the relative and the antecedent; † as, This is what I wanted; that is, the thing which I wanted.

OBSERVATIONS.

In asking questions, Who, which and what are called interrogatives; as, Who said that? What did he do?—K. p. 84, note.

The relative is always of the same gender, number and person with its antecedent, but not always in the same case.—K. p. 43, b.

Which has properly no possessive case of its own. The objective with of before it supplies its place. Our best writers, however, now use whose as the possessive of which; as, "A religion whose origin is divine." BLAIR.—See more remarks on Which at p. 151.—For the relative as, see p. 146.

* The relative sometimes refers to a whole clause as its antecedent; as, The Bill was rejected by the Lords, which excited no small degree of jealousy and discontent; that is, which things, or circumstances, as cited, &c.

† Who is applied to inferior animals, when they are represented as speaking and acting like rational beings.

‡ What and which are sometimes used as adjectives; as, "I know not by what fatality the adversaries of the motion are impelled;"—which things are an allegory. Which here is equal to these.—Page 67, b.

Whoever, whosoever, and whoso, are compound relatives, equal to He who; or the person that.—K. 88.

Whatever and whatsoever, with whichever and whichever, are sometimes adjectives, and combine with or and; and sometimes con-

ADJECTIVE PRONOUNS.

There are four sorts of Adjective Pronouns

1. The Possessive pronouns, My, thy, his, her, our, your, their, its, own.*†
2. The Distributive, Each, every, either, neither.
3. The Demonstrative, This, that,‡ with their plurals, these, those.||
4. The Indefinite, None, any, all, such, whole, some, both, one, other, another; the last three are declined like nouns.

OBSERVATIONS.

Compound relatives, equal to that which.—These compounds, however, particularly whoso, are now generally avoided. Whatever and whosoever are in most used.

* His and her are possessive pronouns, when placed immediately before nouns; but when they stand by themselves, his is accounted the possessive case of the personal pronoun he, and her the objective of she.

† Its and own seem to be as much entitled to the appellation of possessive pronouns as his and my.

‡ You, with former and latter, may be called demonstrative pronouns, as well as this and that. See Syntax, R. 23, b.

|| That is sometimes a relative, sometimes a demonstrative pronoun, and sometimes a conjunction.—K. 90.

That is a relative when it can be turned into who or which, without destroying the sense; as, "The days that (or which) are past, are gone for ever."

That is a demonstrative pronoun when it is placed immediately before a noun expressed or understood; as, "That book is new." "That is not the one I want."

That is a conjunction when it cannot be turned into who or which; but marks a consequence, an indication, or final end; as, "He was so proud, that he was universally despised." He answered, "That he never was so happy as he is now." Live well, that you may die well.

All the indefinite pronouns (except none) and even the demonstrative, distributive, and possessive, are adjectives belonging to nouns, either expressed or understood; and in parsing, I think they ought to be called adjectives—None is used in both numbers; but it cannot be joined to a noun.

The phrase none other should be no other.—Another has no plural

Promiscuous Exercises on Nouns, &c.

A man, he, who, which, that, his, me, mine, thine, whose, they, hers, it, we, us, I, his, its, horse, mare, master, thou, theirs, thee, you, my, thy, our, your, their, his, her, his, these, that, those—each, every, either, any, none, bride, daughter, uncle, wife's, sir, girl, madam, box, dog, lad, a gay lady; sweet apples; strong bulls; fat oxen; a mountainous country.

Compare, Rich, merry, furious, covetous large, little, good, bad, near, wretched, rigorous, delightful, sprightly, spacious, splendid, gay, imprudent, pretty.

The human mind; cold water; he, thou, she, it; woody mountains; the naked rock: youthful jollity; goodness divine; justice severe; his, thy, others, one; a peevish boy; hers, their strokes; pretty girls; his droning flight; her delicate cheeks; a man who; the sun that; a bird which; its pebbled bed; fiery darts; a numerous army; five unbounded; a nobler victory; the gales; nature's eldest birth; earth's lowest room; the winds triumphant; some flowery stream; the tempestuous billows; these things; those books; that breast which; the rich man's insolence; your queen; all who; a boy's drum; himself, themselves, myself.*

* The personal pronouns, Himself, herself, themselves, &c. are used in the nominative case as well as in the objective; as, Himself shall come.

Mr. Blair, in his Grammar, says, they have only one case, viz. the nominative: but this is a mistake, for they have the objective too.—K. 50.

OF VERBS.

A Verb is a word that affirms something of its nominative; or

A Verb is a word which expresses being, doing or suffering; as, I am—I love—I am loved.

Verbs are of three kinds, Active, Passive and Neuter.

A verb Active expresses action passing from an actor to an object; as, James strikes the table.*

A verb Passive expresses the suffering of an action, or the enduring of what another does; as, The table is struck.

A verb Neuter expresses being, or a state of being, or action confined to the actor; as, I am, he sleeps, you run.†

AUXILIARY VERBS.

The auxiliary or helping verbs, by which verbs are chiefly inflected, are defective, having only the Present and Past Indicative; thus,

Pres. Do, have, shall, will, may, can, am, must.
Past. Did, had, should, would, might, could, was, must.

And the Participle (of be) being, been.—Be, do, have, and will are often principal verbs.‡

Let is an active verb, and complete. Ought is a defective verb, having only the present indicative.—p. 47, mid.

* Active verbs are called transitive verbs, because the action passes from the actor to the object.—K. p. 58, note.

† Neuter verbs are called intransitive, because their action is confined to the actor, and does not pass over to an object.—Children should not be troubled too soon with the distinction between active and neuter verbs.

‡ It was thought quite unnecessary to conjugate the verbs have and do, &c. through all their moods and tenses; because a child, that can readily conjugate the verb to love, can easily conjugate any other verb.

A verb is declined by Voices, Moods, Tenses, Numbers, and Persons

Of the MOODS of VERBS.

Verbs have five moods; namely, the Indicative, Potential, Subjunctive, Imperative and Infinitive.

The Indicative mood simply declares a thing; as, He loves, he is loved; or it asks a question; as, Lovest thou me?

The Potential mood implies possibility, liberty, power, will, or obligation; as, The wind may blow; we may walk or ride; I can swim; he would not stay; you should obey your parents.

The Subjunctive mood represents a thing under a condition, supposition, motive, wish, &c., and is preceded by a conjunction expressed or understood, and followed by another verb; as, If thy presence go not with us, carry us not up hence.

The Imperative mood commands, exhorts, entreats, or permits; as, Do this; remember thy Creator; hear, O my people; go thy way.

The Infinitive mood expresses a thing in a general manner, without distinction of number or person, and commonly has to before it; as, To love.

Explanations of the moods and tenses of verbs are inserted here for the sake of order; but it would be highly improper, to detain the learner so long as to commit them to memory; he ought, therefore, after getting the definition of a verb, to proceed to the inflection of it, without delay; and when he comes to the exercises on the verbs, he can look back to the definition of a verb active &c. as occasion may require.

Of TENSES, or DISTINCTIONS of TIME.

The Present tense expresses what is going on just now; as, I love you; I strike the table.

The Past tense represents the action or event either as passed and finished; as, He broke the bottle, and spilt the brandy; or it represents the action as unfinished at a certain time past; as, My father was coming home when I met him.

The Perfect tense implies that an action has just now or lately, been quite finished; as, John has cut his finger; I have sold my horse.

The Pluperfect tense represents a thing as past, before another event happened; as, All the judges had taken their places, before Sir Roger came.

The Future represents the action as yet to come; as, *I will see you again, and your heart shall rejoice.

The Future Perfect intimates that the action will be fully accomplished at or before the time of another future action or event; as, I shall have got my lesson before ten o'clock to-morrow.

* Mr. Walker and others have divided the first future, into the future foretelling, and the future promising or commanding. That this distinction is absolutely necessary, as Mr. Walker affirms, is exceedingly questionable; for when a learner has occasion to use the future tense this division will not in the least assist him in determining whether he ought to use will, rather than shall, &c. Therefore this division serves no purpose.

REMARKS ON SOME OF THE TENSES

ON THE PRESENT.

1. The Present Tense is used to express a habit or custom; as, He snuffs; She goes to church. It is sometimes applied to persons long since dead, when the narration of their actions excites our passions; as, "Nero is abhorred for his cruelty." "Milton is admired for his sublimity."
2. In historical narration, it is beautifully used for the Past Tense; as, "Cæsar leaves Gaul, crosses the Rubicon, and enters Italy with five thousand men." It is sometimes used with fine effect for the Perfect; as, "In the book of Genesis, Moses tells us who were the descendants of Abraham,"—for has told us..
3. When preceded by such words as when, before, as soon as, after, it expresses the relative time of a future action; as, When he comes, he will be welcome. As soon as the post arrives, the letters will be delivered.
4. In the continue, progressive or compound form, it expresses an action began and going on just now, but not complete; as, I am studying my lesson; he is writing a letter.

ON THE PAST.

The Past Tense is used when the action or state is limited by the circumstance of time or place; as, "We saw him yesterday." "We were in bed when he arrived." Here the words yesterday and when limit the action and state to a particular time.—After death all agents are spoken of in the past tense, because time is limited and defined by the life of the person; as, "Mary Queen of Scots was remarkable for her beauty."

This tense is particularly appropriated to the narrative style, because all narration implies some circumstance; as, "Socrates refused to adore false gods." Here the period of Socrates' life being a limited part of past time, circumscribes the narration.—It is improper then to say of one already dead, "He has been much admired; he has done much good:" but, "He was much admired; he did much good."

Although the Past Tense is used when the action is circumstantially expressed by a word or sentiment that limits the time of the action to some definite portion of past time, yet such words as often, sometimes, many a time, frequently and similar vague intimations of time, except in narration, require the perfect, because they admit a certain latitude, and do not limit the action to any definite portion of past time; thus, "How often have we seen the proud despised."

ON THE PERFECT.

The Perfect Tense chiefly denotes the accomplishment of mere facts without any necessary relation to time or place, or any other circumstance of their existence; as, Philosophers have endeavoured to investigate the origin of evil. In general, however, it denotes,

1. An action newly finished; as, I have heard great news. The post has arrived, but has brought no letters for you.
2. An action done in a definite space of time, (such as a day, a week, a year,) a part of which has yet to elapse; as, I have spent this day well.
3. An action perfected some time ago, but whose consequences extend to the present time; as, We have neglected our duty, and are therefore unhappy.

Duration, or existence, requires the perfect; as, He has been dead four days. We say, Cicero has written orations, because the orations are still in existence; but we cannot say Cicero has written poems, because the poems do not exist; they are lost; therefore we must say, Cicero wrote poems.

The following are a few instances in which this tense is improperly used for the past:—

"I have somewhere met with the epitaph of a charitable man, which has very much pleased me." Spect. No. 177. The latter part of this sentence is rather narrative than assertive; and therefore it should be, "which very much pleased me," that is, when I read it.—"When that the poor hath cried, Cæsar hath wept." Shakesp. The style is here narrative: Cæsar was dead; it should therefore be, "When the poor cried, Cæsar wept."—"Though in old age the circle of our pleasure is more contracted than it has formerly been, yet," &c. Blair, serm. 12. It should be, "than it formerly was;" because in old age, the former stages of life, contrasted with the present, convey an idea, not of completion, but of limitation, and thus become a subject of narration rather than of assertion. "I have known him, Eugenius, when he has been going to a play or an opera, divert the money which was designed for that purpose, upon an object of charity whom he has met with in the street." Spect. No. 177. It should be, "when he was going," and "whom he met with in the street;" because the actions are circumstantially related by the phrases, when going to a play and in the street

ON THE FUTURE PERFECT.

Upon more careful reflection, it appears to me that the Second Future should have will or shall in all the persons, as in the first. Mr. Murray has excluded will from the first person, and shall from the second and third; because they appear to him to be incorrectly applied; and in the examples which he has adduced, they are incorrectly applied; but this is not a sufficient reason for excluding them altogether from every sentence. The fault is in the writer he has applied them wrong, a thing that is often done with will and shall in the first future as well as in the second.

If I am at liberty to use will in the first future, to intimate my resolutions to perform a future action, as, "I will go to church, for I am resolved to go," why should I not employ will in the second future, to intimate my resolution or determination to have an action finished before a specified future time? Thus, "I will have written my letters before supper," that is, I am determined to have my letters finished before supper. Were the truth of this affirmation, respecting the time of finishing the letters, called in question, the propriety of using will in the first person would be unquestionable; thus, You will not have finished your letters before supper, I am sure. Yes, I will. Will what? Will have finished my letters.

Shall, in like manner, may with propriety be applied to the second and third person. In the third person, for instance, if I say, "He will have paid me his bill before June," I merely foretell what he will have done; but that is not what I intended to say. I meant to convey the idea, that since I have found him dilatory, I will compel him to pay it before June; and as this was my meaning, I should have employed shall, as in the first future, and said, "He shall have paid me his bill before June."

It is true that we seldom use this future; we rather express the idea as nearly as we can, by the first future, and say, "He shall pay his bill before June;" but when we do use the second future, it is evident, I trust, from the examples just given, that shall and will should be applied in it, exactly as they are in the first.—See 1 Cor. xv. 24. Luke xvii. 10.

OF THE AUXILIARY VERBS.

The auxiliary verbs, as they are called, such as, Do, shall, will, may, can and must, are in reality separate verbs and were originally used as such, having after them, either the past participle, or the infinitive mood, with the to suppressed, for the sake of sound, as it is after bid, dare, &c. (see Syntax, R. vi.) Thus, I have loved. We may to love. He will to speak. I do to write. I may to have loved. We might to have got a prize. I would to have given him the book. All must to die. I shall to stop. I can to go.

These verbs are always joined in this manner either to the infinitive or participle; and although this would be a simpler way of parsing the verb than the common, yet, in compliment perhaps to the Greek and Latin, grammarians in general consider the auxiliary and the following verb in the infinitive or participle as one verb, and parse and construe it accordingly.

Several of the auxiliaries in the potential mood refer to present, past, and future time. This needs not excite surprise; for even the present indicative can be made to express future time, as well as the future itself. Thus, "He leaves town to-morrow."

Present time is expressed in the following sentence:—"I wish he could or would come just now."

Past time is expressed with the similar auxiliaries; as, "It was my desire that he should or would come yesterday." "Though he was ill, he might recover."

Future.—I am anxious that he should or would come to-morrow. If he come, I may speak to him. If he would delay his journey a few days, I might, could, would, or should accompany him.

Although such examples as these are commonly adduced as proofs that these auxiliaries refer to present, past, and future time, yet I think it pretty evident that might, could, would, and should, with may and can, merely express liberty, ability, will, and duty, without any reference to time at all, and that the precise time is generally determined by the drift or scope of the sentence, or rather by the adverb or participle that is subjoined, or understood, and no: by these auxiliaries.

Must and ought, for instance, merely imply necessity, and obligation, without any necessary relation to time: for when I say, "I must do it," must merely denotes the necessity I am under, and do the present time; which might easily be made future, by saying, "I must do it next week." Here future time is expressed by next week, and not by must. & I say, "I must have done it." Here must merely expresses necessity, as before, and I have done, the past time. "These ought ye to do:" Here ought merely denotes obligation, and do the present time. "These ought ye to have done:" Here ought merely expresses duty or obligation, as before; but the time of its existence is denoted as past, by to have done, and not by ought, as Mr. Murray and many others say.

As must will not admit of the objective after it, nor is even preceded or succeeded by the sign of the infinitive, it has been considered an absolute auxiliary, like may or can, belonging to the potential mood.

Ought, on the contrary, is an independent verb, though defective, and always governs another verb in the infinitive.

OF WILL AND SHALL.

Will in the first person singular and plural, intimates resolution and promising; as, I will not let thee go except thou bless me. We will go. I will make of thee a great nation.

Will, in the second and third person,* commonly foretells; as, He will reward the righteous. You; or they, will be very happy there.

Shall, in the first person, only foretells; as, I, or we, shall go to-morrow. In the second and third person, Shall promises, commands, or threatens; as, They, or you, shall be rewarded. Thou shalt not steal. The soul that sinneth shall die.

But this must be understood of affirmative sentences only: for when the sentence is interrogative, just the reverse commonly takes place; as, Shall I send you a little of the pie? i. e. will you permit me to send it? Will James return to-morrow? i. e. do you expect him?

When the second and *third person are represented as the subjects of their own expressions, or their own thoughts, SHALL foretells, as in the first person; as, "He says he shall be a loser by this bargain." "Do you suppose you shall go?" and WILL promises, as in the first person; as, "He says he will bring Pope's Homer to-morrow." "You say you will certainly come."

Of Shall, it may be remarked, that it never expresses the will or resolution of its nominative; Thus, I shall fall; Thou shalt love thy neighbour; He shall be rewarded; express no resolution on the part of I, thou, &c.

Did will, on the contrary, always intimate the resolution of its nom. the difficulty of applying will and shall would be, at an end; but this cannot be said: for though will in the first person always expresses the resolution of its nom. yet in the second and third it does not always foretell, but often intimates the resolution of its nom. as strongly as it does in the first person; thus, Ye will not come unto me that ye may have life. He will not perform the duty of my husband's brother.—Deut. xxv. 7—see also verse 9. Accordingly would, the past time of will, is used in the same manner; as, And he was angry, and would not go in.—Luke xv. 28.

Should and would are subject to the same rules as shall and will; they are generally attended with a supposition; as, Were I to run, I should soon be fatigued, &c.

Should is often used instead of ought, to express duty or obligation as, We should remember the poor. We ought to obey God rather than men.

* "The remaining tenses of the subjunctive mood are, in every respect, similar to the corresponding tenses of the indicative mood, with the addition to the verb of a conjunction expressed or implied, denoting a condition, motive, wish, or supposition."—See p. 33, note 2nd.

† The imperative mood is not entitled to three persons. In strict propriety, it has only the second person in both numbers. For when I say, Let me love; I mean, Permit thou me to love. Hence, let me love is construed thus: let thou me (to) love, or do thou let me (to) love. To, the sign of the infinitive, is not used after let. See Syntax, E. VI. No one will say that permit (me to love) is the first person singular, imperative mood; then why should let (me to love,) which is exactly similar, be called the first person? The Latin verb wants the first person, and if it has the third, it has also a different termination for it, which is not the case in the English verb.—K. 118.

EXERCISES ON THE TENSES OF VERBS, AND CASES OF NOUNS AND PRONOUNS.

* We love him, James loves me; it amuses him; we shall conduct them; they will divide the spoils; soldiers should defend their country; friends invite friends; she can read her lesson; she may play a tune; you might please her; thou mayst ask him; he may have betrayed us; we might have diverted the children; John can deliver the message.

I love; to love; love; reprove thou; has loved; we tied the knot; if we love; if thou love; they could have commanded armies; to love; to baptize; to have loved; loved; loving; to survey; having surveyed; write a letter; read your lesson; thou hast obeyed my voice; honour thy father.

The teacher, if he chooses, may now acquaint the learner with the difference between the nominative and the objective.

The nominative acts: the objective is acted upon: as, He eats apples.

The nominative commonly comes before the verb, the objective after it.

Concerning pronouns, it may be observed, that the first speaks; the second is spoken to; and the third (or any noun) is spoken of.

* We may parse the first sentence, for example. We love him. We, the first personal pronoun, plural, masculine or fem., the nominative. Love, a verb active, the first person, plural, present, indicative. Him, the third personal pronoun, singular, masculine, the objective.

QUESTIONS WHICH SHOULD BE PUT TO THE PUPILS.

How do you know that love is plural? Ans. because we its nom. is plural. How do you know that love is the first person? Ans. Because we is the first personal pronoun, and the verb is always of the same number and person with the noun or pronoun before it.—K. 112, 104.

Many of the phrases in this page may be converted into exercises of a different kind; thus, the meaning of the sentence, We love him. may be expressed by the passive voice; as, He is loved by us.

It may also be turned into a question, or made a negative; as, Do we love him? &c. We do not love him.

These are a few of the ways of using the exercises on a single page, but the variety of methods that every ingenious and diligent teacher may invent and adopt, to engage the attention and improve the understanding of his pupils, is past finding out.

Of VERBS.

An Active or a Neuter Verb may be conjugated through all its moods and tenses, by adding its Present Participle to the verb To be. This is called the Progressive form: because it expresses the continuation of action or state. Thus,—

Present.

I am loving Thou art loving
He is loving, &c.

Past.

I was loving Thou wast loving
He was loving, &c.

The present and Past Indicative are also conjugated by the assistance of do, called the emphatic form: Thus,— Present.

I do love
Thou dost love
He does love, &c.

Past.

I did love
Thou didst love
He did love, &c.

RULE I.

Verbs ending in ss, sh, ch, x, or o, form the third person singular of the Present Indicative, by adding Es: Thus,—

He dress-es, march-es, brush-es, fix-es, go-es.

RULE II.

Verbs in y, change y into i before the terminations es, est, eth, and ed; but not before ing; y, without a vowel before it, is not changed into i: Thus,— Pres. Try, triest, tries, or trieth. Past. Tried. Part. Trying.

Pres. Pray, prayest, prays, or prayeth. Past. Prayed. Part. Praying.

RULE III.

Verbs accented on the last syllable, and verbs of one syllable, ending in a single consonant, preceded by a single vowel, double the final consonant before the terminations est, eth, ed, ing; but never before s; Thus,— Allot, allottest, allots, alloteth, allotted, allotting.

Blot, blottest, blots, blotteth, blotted, blotting.

Of ADVERBS.

An Adverb is a word joined to a verb, an adjective, or another adverb, to express some quality or circumstance of time, place, or manner, respecting it; as, Ann speaks distinctly; she is remarkably diligent, and reads very correctly.

A LIST OF ADVERBS.

* So, no, not, nay, yea, yes, too, well, up, very, forth, how, why, far, now, then, ill, soon, much, here, there, where, when, whence, thence, still, † more, most, little, less, least, thus, since, ever, never, while, whilst, once, twice, thrice, first, scarcely, quite, rather, again, ago, seldom, often, indeed, exceedingly, already, hither, thither, whither, doubtless, haply, perhaps, enough, daily, always, sometimes, almost, alone, peradventure, backward, forward, upward, downward together, apart, asunder, viz. to and fro, in fine.

OBSERVATIONS.

* As and so, without a corresponding as or so, are adverbs.

The generality of those words that end in ly are adverbs of manner or quality. They are formed from adjectives by adding ly; as, from foolish comes foolishly.

The compounds of here, there, where and hither, thither and whither are all adverbs, except therefore and wherefore, occasionally conjunctions.

Some adverbs are compared like adjectives; as, often, oftener, of tenest. Such words as ashore, afoot, aground, &c. are all adverbs.

† When more and most qualify nouns they are adjectives; but in every other situation they are adverbs.

An adjective with a preposition before it, is by some called an adverb; as, in general, in haste, i. e. generally, hastily.—It would be a piece of vexatious refinement to make children, in parsing, call in general an adverb, instead of in, a prep.—general, an adj. having way or sense understood. That such phrases are convertible into adverbs is not a good reason for calling them so.

There are many words that are sometimes used as adverbs; as, I am more afraid than ever—and sometimes as adjectives; as, He has more wealth than wisdom—See next page.

Exercises on ADVERBS, IRREGULAR VERBS, &c.

Immediately the cock crew. Peter wept bitterly. He is here now. She went away yesterday.* They came to-day. They will perhaps buy some to-morrow. Ye shall know hereafter. She sung sweetly. Cats soon learn to† catch mice. Mary rose up hastily. They that have enough‡ may soundly sleep. Cain wickedly slew his brother. I saw him long ago. He is a very good man. Sooner or later all must die. You read too little. They talk too much. James acted wisely. How many lines can you repeat? You ran hastily. He speaks fluently. Then were they glad. He fell fast asleep. She should not hold her head awry. The ship was driven ashore. No, indeed. They are all alike. Let him that is athirst drink freely. The oftener you read attentively, the more you will improve.

OBSERVATIONS.

* To-day, yesterday, and to-morrow, are always nouns, for they are parts of time; as, Yesterday is past, to-day is passing, and we may never see to-morrow. When these words answer to the question when, they are governed by a preposition understood; as, When will John come home? (on) to-morrow, for he went away (on) yesterday.

Much is used 1. as an adverb; as, It is much better to give than to receive.

2. as an adjective; as, In much wisdom, is much grief.

3. as a noun; as, Where much is given, much is required. In strict propriety, however, much can never be a noun, but an adjective; for were the question to be asked, Much what is given? it would be necessary to add a noun, and say, where much grace is given, much gratitude is required.

† To, before the infinitive of verbs, is an adverb, according to Johnson, and according to Murray, a preposition. The two together may be called the infinitive.

‡ Enough (a sufficiency) is here a noun. Its plural—enoughs, is applied like many, to things that are numbered. Enough, an adj. like much, should perhaps be applied only to things that are weighed or measured.

Of PREPOSITIONS.

A Preposition is a word put before nouns and pronouns, to show the relation between them; as, He sailed from Leith to London in two days.

A LIST OF PREPOSITIONS, TO BE GOT ACCURATELY BY HEART.

About, above, according to, across, after, against, along, amid, amidst, among, amongst, around, at, athwart. Bating, before, behind, below, beneath, beside, besides, between, betwixt, beyond, by. Concerning. Down, during. Except, excepting. For, ^{p. 51 b.} from. In, into, instead of. Near, nigh. Of, off, on, over, out of. Past. Regarding, respecting, round. Since. Through, throughout, till, to, touching, towards.* Under, underneath, unto, up, upon. With, within, without.

OBSERVATIONS.

Every preposition requires an objective case after it.—When a preposition does not govern an objective case, it becomes an adverb; as, He rides about. But in such phrases as cast up, hold out, fall on, the words up, out, and on, must be considered as a part of the verb, rather than as prepositions or adverbs.

Some words are used as prepositions in one place, and as adverbs in another; thus, before is a preposition when it refers to place; as, He stood before the door; and an adverb when it refers to time; as, Before that Philip called thee, I saw thee. The word before, however, and others in similar situations, may still be considered as prepositions, if we supply an appropriate noun, as, Before the time that Philip, &c.

* Towards is a preposition, but toward is an adjective, and means "Ready to do or learn; compliant with duty; not froward." Toward is sometimes improperly used for towards.

The Inseparable Prepositions are omitted, because an explanation of them can impart no information without a previous knowledge of the radical word. Suppose the pupil told that con means together, will this explain conveys to him? No: he must first be told that con signifies to come, and then CON, together. Would it not be better to tell him at once that conveys means to come or call together?

Some grammarians distribute adverbs into classes; such as adverbs of negation, affirmation, &c.—prepositions into separable and inseparable—and conjunctions into seven classes besides the two mentioned next page.—Such a classification has been omitted here, because its utility is questionable.

Of CONJUNCTIONS.

A Conjunction is a word which joins words and sentences together; as, You and I must go to Leith: but Peter may stay at home.

A LIST OF CONJUNCTIONS.

Copulative—Also, and, because, both, for,* if, since, that, then, therefore, wherefore.

Disjunctive—Although, as, as well as, but, either, except, lest, neither, nor, notwithstanding, or, provided, so, than, though, unless, whether, yet.

EXERCISES ON CONJUNCTIONS, &c.

Though he was rich, yet for our sakes he became poor. Blessed are the meek; for they shall inherit the earth. The life is more than meat, and the body is more than raiment. Consider the ravens; for they neither sow nor reap; which have neither store-house nor barn; and God feedeth them. You are happy, because you are good.

OBSERVATIONS.

* When for can be turned into because, it is a conjunction.

Several words which are marked as adverbs in Johnson's Dictionary, are in many Grammars marked as conjunctions; such as, Albeit, else, moreover, likewise, otherwise, nevertheless, then, therefore, wherefore. Whether they be called adverbs or conjunctions, it signifies but little.

But in some cases is an adverb; as, "We are but (only) of yesterday, and know nothing."

Sometimes the same words are used as conjunctions in one place, and as prepositions or adverbs in another place; as, Since (conj.) we must part, let us do it peaceably; I have not seen him since (prep.) that time; Our friendship commenced long since (adv.)?

† As many distinctions, however proper in themselves, may prove more hurtful than useful, they should not be made till the learner be perfectly acquainted with the more obvious facts.

Of INTERJECTIONS.

An interjection is a word which expresses some emotion of the speaker; as, Oh, what a sight is here! Well done!

A LIST OF INTERJECTIONS.

Adieu! ah! alas! alack! away! aha! begone!
hark! ho! ha! he! hail! halloo! hum! hush!
huzza! hist! hey-day! lo! O! O strange!
O brave! pshaw! see! well-a-day! &c.

ON PARSING.

Having the Exercises on Parsing* and Syntax in one volume with the Grammar is a convenience so exceedingly great, that it must be obvious. The following set of exercises on Parsing are arranged on a plan new and important.

All the most material points, and those that are apt to puzzle the pupil, have been selected, and made the subject of a whole page of exercises, and, where very important, of two. By this means, the same point must come so often under his eye, and be so often repeated, that it cannot fail to make a strong impression on his mind; and even should he forget it, it will be easy to refresh his memory by turning to it again.

To give full scope to the pupil's discriminating powers, the exercises contain all the parts of speech, promiscuously arranged, to be used thus:—

1. After the pupil has got the definition of a noun, exercise him in going over any part of the exercises in parsing, and pointing out the nouns only. This will oblige him to exercise his powers of discrimination in distinguishing the nouns from the other words.†

2. After getting the definition of an adjective, exercise him in selecting all the adjectives from the other words, and telling why they are adjectives.

3. After getting all the pronouns very accurately by heart, let him point out them, in addition to the nouns and adjectives.

4. Then the verb, without telling what sort, or what number, or person, or tense, for several weeks, or longer, till he can distinguish it with great readiness.

5. Then the definition of an adverb; after which, exercise him orally with many short sentences containing adverbs, and then on those in the book.

* Parts should be pronounced parce, and not part.—See Key, p. 71.

† Those accustomed to use Mr. Murray's lessons in parsing, will perhaps think the following too difficult; let such, however, reflect that Mr. Murray's are too easy; for when no other words are introduced than an article and a noun, no exercise is given to the pupil's judgement at all; for in every sentence he finds only an article and a noun; and in the next set, only an article, an adjective, and a noun, and so on.—There is no room for discrimination here, and yet discrimination is the very thing he should be taught.

6 Get all the prepositions by heart, for it is impossible to give such a definition of a preposition as will lead a child to distinguish it with certainty from every other sort of word.

7 Get all the conjunctions by heart. They have been alphabetically arranged, like the prepositions, to facilitate the committing of them to memory.

8 After this, the pupil, if very young, may go over all the exercises, by parsing every word in the most simple manner, viz. by saying, such a word—a noun, singular, without telling its gender and case—such a word, a verb, without telling its nature, number, person, tense and mood.

9. In the next and last course, he should go over the exercises, and tell every thing about nouns and verbs, &c. as shown in the example below.

In the Exercises on Parsing, the sentences on every page are numbered by small figures, to enable the reader to find out any sentence in the Key which he may wish to consult.

The small letters refer to the Nos. For example, p. in the first sentence of No. 8. directs the learner to turn to No. p. page 74, and remark that it says, "The verb to be or to have is often understood;" intimating to him by this reference, that to be is understood after was in the first sentence of No. 8.

O how stupendous was the power,
That raised me with a word!
And every day and every hour,
I lean upon the Lord.

O, an interjection—how, an adverb—stupendous, an adjective in the positive degree, compared by more and most, as, stupendous, more stupendous, most stupendous—was, a verb, neuter, third person singular, past indicative, (*agreeing with its nominative power, here put after it)—the, an article, the definite—power, a noun, singular, neuter, the nominative—That, a relative pronoun, singular, neuter, the nominative, here used for which; its antecedent is power—raised, a verb, active, third person singular, past indicative, (agreeing with its nominative that)—me, the first personal pronoun, singular, masculine or feminine, the objective, (governed by raised)—with, a preposition—a, an article, the indefinite—word, a noun, singular, neuter, the objective (governed by with)—And, a conjunction—every, a distributive pronoun—day, a noun, singular, neuter, the objective (because the reposit through or during is understood)—and, and every, as before—hour, a noun, singular, neuter, the objective (because day was in it, and conjunctions couple the same cases of nouns, &c.)—I, the first personal pronoun, singular, masculine or feminine, the nominative—lean, a verb, neuter, first person singular, present indicative—upon, a preposition—the, an article, the definite—Lord, a noun, singular, masculine, the objective, (governed by upon.)

A good conscience and a contented mind will make a man^h happy.¹ Philosophy teaches us to endure afflictions, but Christianity² to enjoy them, by turning them into blessings³. Virtue ennobles the mind, but vice debases it³. Application in the early period of life, will give happiness and ease to succeeding years⁴. A good conscience fears nothing⁵. Devotion promotes and strengthens virtue; calms and regulates the temper; and fills the heart with gratitude and praise⁶. Dissimulation degrades parts and learning, obscures the lustre of every accomplishment, and sinks us into universal contempt⁷.

If we lay no restraint upon our lusts, no control upon our appetites and passions, they will hurry us into guilt and misery⁸. Discretion stamps a value upon all our other qualities; it instructs us to make use of them at proper times, and turn them honourably to our own advantage: it shows itself alike in all our words and actions, and serves as an unerring guide in every occurrence of life⁹. Shame and disappointment attend sloth and idleness¹⁰. Indolence undermines the foundation of every virtue, and unfits a man for the social duties of life¹¹.

There are delivered in Holy Scripture many weighty arguments for this doctrine. Were he at leisure, I would wait upon him. Had he been more prudent, he would have been more fortunate. Were they wise, they would read the Scriptures daily. I would give more to the poor, were I able. Could we survey the chambers of sickness and distress, we should often find them peopled with the victims of intemperance, sensuality, indolence and sloth. Were he to see it, I would not believe it, because he told a lie before. Gaming is a vice pregnant with every evil; and to it are often sacrificed wealth, happiness and every thing virtuous and valuable. Is not industry the road to wealth, and virtue to happiness?

The infinitive, or part of a sentence, being equal to a noun, is often the nominative to a verb.

No. 15.

To be ashamed of the practice of precepts which the heart approves and embraces, from a fear of the censure of the world, marks a feeble and imperfect character.

To endure misfortune with resignation, and bear it with fortitude, is the striking characteristic of a great mind. To rejoice in the welfare of our fellow-creatures, in a degree, to partake of their good fortune; but to repine at their prosperity, is one of the most despicable traits of a narrow mind.

To be ever active in laudable pursuits, is the distinguishing characteristic of a man of merit. To satisfy all his demands, is the way to make your child truly miserable. To practise virtue is the sure way to love it. To be at once merry and malicious, is the sign of a conceited heart and a weak understanding. To bear adversity well is difficult, but to be temperate in prosperity is the height of wisdom. To advise the ignorant, relieve the needy, and comfort the afflicted, are duties that fall in our way, almost every day of our lives. To dread no eye, and to suspect no tongue, is the great prerogative of innocence.

* When neither the subject nor the object is a noun, the infinitive is the subject, as in the sentence, To be a good man is the duty of every Christian. When the infinitive is the object, as in the sentence, To be a good man is his duty, it is the object of the verb, and the subject is a noun, as in the sentence, To be a good man is his duty.

He who performs every part of his business in its due place and season, suffers no part of time to escape without profit. He that does good for the sake of virtue, seeks neither praise nor reward, though he is sure of both at the last. He that is the abettor of a bad action, is equally guilty with him that commits it. He that overcomes his passions, conquers his greatest enemies. The consolation which is derived from a reliance upon Providence, enables us to support the most severe misfortunes. That wisdom which enlightens the understanding and reforms the life, is the most valuable. Those, and those only, who have felt the pleasing influence of the most genuine and exalted friendship, can comprehend its beauties. An error that proceeds from any good principle, leaves no room for repentance. Those who raise envy will easily incur censure. He who is a stranger to industry, may possess, but he cannot enjoy; he only who is active and industrious, can experience real pleasure. 1. While I am reading, you should be listening to what I read¹. He was delivering his speech when I left the house². They have been writing on botany³. He might have been rising to eminence⁴. I have been writing a letter, and I am just going to send it away⁵. She was walking by herself when I met her⁶. We are perishing with hunger: I am willing therefore to surrender⁷. We should always be learning⁸. A good man is always studying to be better⁹. We were hearing a sermon yesterday¹⁰.

2. These only are truly good, who are really good¹¹. Few set a proper value on their time¹². Those who despise the admonitions of their friends, deserve the mischiefs which their own obstinacy brings upon them¹³. Among the many social virtues which attend the practice of true religion, that of a strict adherence to truth is of the greatest importance¹⁴. Love no interests but those of truth and virtue¹⁵. Such as are diligent will be rewarded¹⁶. I saw a thousand¹⁷. Of all prodigality, that of time is the worst¹⁸. Some are naturally kind; and some bold and active; but all are not alike¹⁹.

EXERCISES IN PARSING.

The Past Participle has uniformly either a relative or personal pronoun, with some part of the verb to be understood before it.

No. 6.

Make the study of the sacred Scriptures your daily practice and concern; and embrace the doctrines contained in them, as the real oracles of Heaven, and the dictates of that spirit that cannot lie. Knowledge softened with complacency and good-breeding will make a man beloved and admired. Gratitude and thanks are the best returns which children can make to their parents for the numberless obligations conferred on them. Precepts have little influence when not enforced by example. He is of all human beings the happiest, who has a conscience untainted by guilt, and a mind so well-regulated as to be able to accommodate itself to whatever the wisdom of Heaven shall think fit to ordain. Mere external beauty of little estimation; and deformity, when associated with amiable dispositions and useful qualities, does not preclude our respect and affection. True honour, as defined by God, is the concurrent approbation of good men. Modesty seldom resides in a breast not enriched with nobler virtues.

* It is often difficult to supply the relative of the verb to be. An adverb is often understood. The relative and the particle must sometimes what part of to be and what shall, shall be left. It is necessary, should be supplied.

EXERCISES IN PARSING

Supply all the words that are understood. The verb to be, or to have, is often understood.—Not so, that is understood after and and or, is frequently the cause of error.

Disdain even the appearance of talent, nor allow even the image of deceit to enter in your mind. Those who are of a fortitude of mind, seem to be the most prudent leader, and are the most successful in accident. They lost their mother when very young. EXERCISES IN PASSING

1. The objective after an active verb, especially when a relative is often understood, is improperly omitted, and should be supplied.

16. He that moderates his desires enjoys the best happiness this world can afford¹.
Our reflections are more distressing than those we make on our own ingratitude². The more true merit a man has, the more does he complain it in others³. It is not easy to see those we do not esteem⁴. Our good or bad fortune depends on the choice we make of our friends⁵. An ever cautious attention to the evil of other things turns upon us: the more we are heedless into misfortune, the more we are heedful to avoid it⁶.
Who have a moderate and temperate stomach, eat and drink moderately, and hear and see moderately, live longer and better⁷. Let him that has a hard heart, have to do with a soft one⁸.
The moderation of every duty were the best way to the perfection of it⁹.
It is the duty of those who have been that have delivered themselves from their misfortunes, to be contented with what they have¹⁰.
Who live in quiet family can be best¹¹.
Who live in busy world can be best¹².
Who have any part of the world, and are contented with it, are best¹³.
Who have no part of the world, and are contented with it, are best¹⁴.
Who have a part of the world, and are contented with it, are best¹⁵.
Who have no part of the world, and are contented with it, are best¹⁶.

Who have a part of the world, and are contented with it, are best¹⁹.
Who have no part of the world, and are contented with it, are best²⁰.

EXERCISES, IN PARSING.

1. The objective generally comes after the verb that governs it; but when a relative, and in some other cases, it comes before it.
2. When two objectives follow a verb, the thing is governed by the verb, and the person by a preposition understood.

The cultivation of taste is recommended by the happy effects which it naturally tends to produce on human life⁹. These curiosities we have imported from China¹⁰.

2. And he gave him tithes of all¹¹. Who gave thee this authority¹²? Ye gave me meat¹³. He gave them bread from heaven¹⁴. Give me understanding¹⁵. SYNTAX.

SYNTAX is that part of Grammar which treats of the proper arrangement and connection of words in a sentence.

A sentence is an assemblage of words making complete sense; as, John is happy.

Sentences are either simple or compound.

A simple sentence contains but one subject and one finite verb; as, Life is short.

A compound sentence contains two or more simple sentences connected by one or more conjunctions; as, Time is short, but eternity is long.

A phrase is two or more words used to express a certain relation between ideas, without affirming any thing; as, In truth; with you.

The principal parts of a simple sentence are the subject, (or nominative), the attribute, (or verb), and the object.

The subject is the thing chiefly spoken of; the attribute is the thing affirmed or denied; and the object is the thing affected by such action.

A phrase is two or more words used to express a certain relation between ideas, without affirming any thing; as, In truth; with you.

ENGLISH SYNTAX

RULE I.—A verb must agree with its nominative in number and person; as,—Thou readest; He reads; We read.

EXERCISES.

I loves reading. A soft answer turn away wrath. We is but of yesterday and knoweth nothings. Thou shalt not follow a multitude to do evil. The days of man are but as grass. All things is naked and open to the eyes of him with whom we have to do. All things was created by him. In him we live and move. Frequent commission of crimes harden his heart. In our earliest youth the contagion of manners is insupportable. The pyramids of Egypt has stood more than three thousand years. The number of our days are with thee. A judicious arrangement of studies facilitates improvement. A variety of pleasing objects charm the eye. A few pangs of conscience now and then interrupt his pleasures and whisper to him that he once had better thoughts. There is more cultivators of the earth than of their own hearts. Nothing but vain and foolish pursuits delight some persons. Not one of those whom thou see clothed in purple are happy. There is two or three of us who have seen the work.

They and he were of the same age.

1. The verb "loves" agrees with "I" in person, number, and case; and "is" agrees with "we" in person, number, and case. At the same time, "is" is used as a copula, and "knoweth" as a verb. "Thou" is used as a pronoun, and "shalt" as a verb. "A" is used as an article, and "soft" as an adjective. "Answer" is used as a noun, and "turn" as a verb. "We" is used as a pronoun, and "is" as a verb. "But" is used as a conjunction, and "of" as a preposition. "Yesterday" is used as an adverb, and "and" as a conjunction. "Knoweth" is used as a verb, and "nothings" as a noun. "Thou" is used as a pronoun, and "shalt" as a verb. "A" is used as an article, and "multitude" as a noun. "To" is used as a preposition, and "do" as a verb. "Evil" is used as an adjective, and "the" as an article. "Days" is used as a noun, and "of" as a preposition. "Man" is used as a noun, and "are" as a verb. "But" is used as a conjunction, and "as" as a preposition. "Grass" is used as a noun. "All" is used as an adjective, and "things" as a noun. "Is" is used as a verb, and "naked" as an adjective. "Open" is used as an adjective, and "to" as a preposition. "The" is used as an article, and "eyes" as a noun. "Of" is used as a preposition, and "him" as a pronoun. "With" is used as a preposition, and "whom" as a pronoun. "We" is used as a pronoun, and "have" as a verb. "To" is used as a preposition, and "do" as a verb. "All" is used as an adjective, and "things" as a noun. "Was" is used as a verb, and "created" as a verb. "By" is used as a preposition, and "him" as a pronoun. "In" is used as a preposition, and "him" as a pronoun. "We" is used as a pronoun, and "live" as a verb. "And" is used as a conjunction, and "move" as a verb. "Frequent" is used as an adjective, and "commission" as a noun. "Of" is used as a preposition, and "crimes" as a noun. "Harden" is used as a verb, and "his" as a pronoun. "Heart" is used as a noun. "In" is used as a preposition, and "our" as a pronoun. "Earliest" is used as an adjective, and "youth" as a noun. "The" is used as an article, and "contagion" as a noun. "Of" is used as a preposition, and "manners" as a noun. "Is" is used as a verb, and "insupportable" as an adjective.

Rule II.—An active verb governs the objective case; as,—We love him; He loves us.*

EXERCISES.

He loves us. He and they we know, but who art thou? She that is idle and mischievous, reprove sharply. Ye only have I known. Let them and I the battle try. He who committed the offence thou shouldst correct, not who am innocent.

Esteeming themselves wise, they became fools. Upon seeing he turned pale. Having exposed himself too much to the fire of the enemy, he soon lost an arm in the action.

The man whom he raised from obscurity is dead. Who did they entertain so freely? They are the persons whom we ought to respect. Who having not seen we love. They who opulence has made proud, and who luxury has corrupted, are not happy.

I Repenting him of his design, it will be very difficult, to bring his conduct within the principles he professes. Goplike was away into the land of Judah.

I shall premise with two or three general observations. He ingratulates with some by traducing others.

* The participle, being a part of the verb, governs the same case.

† Note. When the objective is a relative, it comes before the verb that governs it. (Mr. Murray's 4th rule is unnecessary.—See No. 10: p. 21.)

‡ Rule I.—Neutral verbs do not admit of an objective. Thus, Repenting him of his design, should be, Repenting of his design.

§ Rule II.—Active verbs do not admit of a preposition after them. Thus, I must premise with three circumstances, should be, I must premise the three circumstances.

RULE III.—Prepositions govern the objective case; as, —To whom much is given, of him much shall be required.

EXERCISES.

To ^{me} who will you give that pen? Will you go with ^{me} ~~it~~? Without ^{me} ~~it~~ ye can do nothing. Withhold not good from ^{me} ~~it~~ to who ^{it} is due. With ^{whom} do you live? Great friendship subsists between he and ^{me} ~~it~~. He can do nothing of himself. They willingly, and of themselves, endeavoured to make up the difference. He laid the suspicion upon somebody, I know not who, in the company. Who do you speak ^{of} ~~to~~? Who did they ride with ^{me} ~~it~~? Who dost thou serve under? Flattery can hurt none, but those who it is agreeable to. It is not ^{with} ~~to~~ them art engaged with. It was ^{not} ~~to~~ he that they were so angry with ^{me} ~~it~~. Who didst thou receive that intelligence from? The person who I travelled with has sold the horse which he rode during our journey. Does that ^{man} ~~he~~ know who he speaks to? I hope it is not ^{that} ~~he~~ thou art displeas'd with.

† He is quite unacquainted with, and consequently cannot speak upon, that subject.

• RULE I.—The preposition should be placed immediately before its relative which it governs; as, To whom do you speak?

The preposition is often separated from the relative; but though this is generally allowable in familiar conversation, yet, in a literary composition, the placing of the preposition immediately before the relative is more perspicuous and elegant.

• RULE II.—It is elegant to connect two prepositions, or one and an object word, with the same verb; for example, They were refused entrance here, and forcibly driven from the house; should be, They were refused entrance into the house, and forcibly driven from it.—I ween to, and counsel him; should be, I ween to him and counsel him.

RULE IV.—*Two or more singular nouns coupled with AND, require a verb and pronoun in the plural; as,—James and John are good boys; for they are busy.

Two or more singular nouns separated by OR, or NOR, require a verb and pronoun in the singular; as,—James or John is dux.†

EXERCISES.

Socrates and Plato were the most eminent philosophers of Greece. The rich and poor meet together. Life and death is in the power of the tongue. The time and place for the conference was agreed on. Idleness and ignorance is the parent of many vices. John and I reads better than you. Wisdom, virtue, happiness, dwells with the golden mediocrity. Luxurious living and high pleasures begets a languor and satiety that destroys all enjoyment. Out of the same mouth proceedeth blessing and cursing.

Neither precept nor discipline are so forcible as example. Either the boy or the girl were present. Neither character nor dialogue were yet understood. The modest virgin, the prudent wife, or the careful matron, are much more serviceable in life than the petticoated philosophers. It must be confessed that a lampoon or a satire do not carry in them robbery or murder. Man is not such a machine as a clock or a watch, which move merely as they are moved.

*And is the only conjunction that combines the agency of two or more who has; for, as well as, never does that; but merely states a sort of comparison; thus "Cicero, as well as Cato, was eloquent." With is sometimes used for and.—See Miscellaneous Observations, p. 141 & 142.

†Or but are the only conjunctions applicable to this rule.

RULE V.—Conjunctions couple the same moods and tenses of verbs; as,—Do good and seek peace. Conjunctions couple the same cases of nouns and pronouns; as,—He and I are happy.

EXERCISES.

He reads and writes well. He or we must go. Neither he nor her can attend. Anger glances into the breast of a wise man, but will rest only in the bosom of fools. My brother and him are tolerable grammarians. The parliament addressed the king, and has been prorogued the same day. If he understands the subject, and attend to it, he can scarcely fail of success. Did he not tell thee his fault, and entreated thee to forgive him? And dost thou open thine eyes upon such a one, and bringest me into judgement with thee? You and he enjoy many privileges. Professing regard, and so accidentally, mark a base mind. If a man have a hundred sheep, and one of them go astray, doth he not leave the ninety and nine, and goeth into the mountains, and seeketh that which is gone astray?

Rank may confer influence, but will not necessarily produce virtue. She was proud though now humble. He is not rich but respectable. Our season of improvement is here and whether used or not will soon pass away.

*After some forms of the verb must be understood.
Conjunctions frequently couple different moods and tenses of verbs; but in these instances the copulative is generally suppressed; as, He may read, and he will not attend.
The copulative is generally retained, even in the same mood and tense, when a contrast is stated with and, not, or though, but, as in this example.*

RULE VI.—One verb governs another in the infinitive mood; as,—Forget not to do good.^{*}
 To the sign of the infinitive, is not used after the verbs, bid, dare, need, make, see, hear, feel, let, perceive, behold, observe, have, and know.†

EXERCISES.

Strive ^{to} learn. They obliged him ^{to} do it. Newton did not wish obtrude his discoveries on the public. His penetration and diligence seemed ^{to} vie with each other. Milton cannot be said have contrived the structure of an epic poem. Endeavouring ^{to} persuade. We ought ^{to} forgive injuries.

They need not ^{to} call upon her. I dare not ^{to} proceed so hastily. I have seen some young persons ^{to} conduct themselves very discreetly. He bade me ^{to} go home. It is the difference of their conduct which makes us ^{to} approve the one, and ^{to} reject the other. We heard the thunder ^{to} roll. It is a great support ^{to} virtue, when we see a good ^{to} maintain its patience and tranquillity under injuries and afflictions, and ^{to} cordially forgive its oppressors. Let me ^{to} do that. I bid my servant ^{to} do this, and he doeth it. I need not ^{to} solicit him to do a kind office.

* The infinitive mood is frequently governed by nouns and other words, as, They have a desire to learn: Worthy to be loved. Fit to be imitated. In this manner.

† It is generally used after the sign of these verbs, except let and bid may stand in either. He would not go; and sometimes after the sign of the participle, especially after the principal verb; as, I and he went on the way—see p. 61, 2.

The infinitive is often independent of the rest of the sentence; as, To proceed. To surprise the truth. Love to be true.

RULE VII.—When two nouns come together signifying different things, the first is put in the possessive case; as,—John's book; on eagle's wings; his heart.

When two nouns come together signifying the same thing, they agree in case; as, Cicero the orator; The city Edinburgh.

EXERCISES.

Pompey's pillar. Virtues reward. A mans manner's frequently influence his fortune. Asa's heart was perfect with the Lord. A mother's tenderness and a fathers care are nature's gifts for mans advantage. Helen's beauty was the cause of Troy's destruction. Wisdom's precepts are the good mans delight. Peter's, John's, and Andrew's occupation was that of fishermen. He asked his father as well as his mother's advice.

Jesus's feet. Moses's rod. Herod's sake. Righteousness's sake. For conscience's sake. And they were all baptized in him in the river Jordan.

* RULE.—When several nouns come together in the possessive case, the apostrophe with s is omitted in the last, and understood in the rest, as, Jane and Lucy's book.

When compound nouns, the term of the possession should be annexed to each; as, This gained the King's as well as the people's approbation. To prevent too much of the hissing sound, the s after the apostrophe is generally omitted when the first noun has an s in each of its two last syllables, and the second noun begins with s, as, Righteousness's sake, For conscience's sake, Francis's sake.

It has lately become common when the nominative singular ends in s, or sh, to form the possessive by omitting the s after the apostrophe, as, James' book, Miss' shoes, instead of James's book, Miss's shoes. This is improper. Put these phrases into questions, and then they will appear ridiculous. Is this book James'? Are these shoes Miss'? Nor are they less ridiculous without the interrogatory form; as, This book is James' book.—K. 125-6-7.

We sometimes use of instead of the apostrophe and s, thus we say, The wisdom of Socrates, rather than Socrates's wisdom. In these instances we use the of and the possessive termination too; as, the discovery of Sir Isaac Newton's, that is, one of Sir Isaac Newton's discoveries. A picture of my friend, means a portrait of him: But a picture of my friend's means a portrait of some other person, and that it belongs to my friend.

As precedes rules for the formation of the possessive case, in all other

RULE VIII.—When a collective noun conveys unity of person, the verb and pronoun should be singular; as, The multitude was large. When a noun of multitude conveys plurality of idea, the verb and pronoun should be plural; as,—My people do not consider they have not known me.

EXERCISES.

The meeting was well attended. The people had no opinion of their own. Send the multitude away, that it may go and buy itself bread. The people was very numerous. The council were not unanimous. The flock, and not the fleece, are, or ought to be, the objects of the shepherd's care. When the nation complain, the rulers should listen to their voice. The regiment consist of a thousand men. The multitude eagerly pursue pleasure as its chief good. The parliament are dissolved. The fleet were seen sailing up the channel. Why do this generation seek after a sign? The shoal of herrings were immense. The remnant of the people were persecuted. The committee was divided in its sentiments. The army are marching to Cadiz. Some people are busy, and yet does very little. Never were any nation so infatuated. But this people who know not the law are cursed.

When a collective noun conveys unity of person, I shall merely mention a few correct examples for the pupil's imitation; thus, I left the parcel at Smith's the bookseller; the Lord Mayor of London's authority; For David thy father's sake; He took refuge at the governor's the king's representative; Whose glory did he emulate? He imitated Caesar's, the greatest general of antiquity. — See also note under rule III. also rule XII.

RULE IX.—*The verb TO BE should have the same case after it that it has before it; as, I am he; I took it to be him.

EXERCISES.

It was me who wrote the letter. Be not afraid, it is me. It was not me. It was him who got the first prize. I am sure it was not us that did it. It was them who gave us all this trouble. I would not act the same part again, if I were him. He so much resembled his brother, that at first sight I took it to be he. Search the Scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life; and they are them which testify of me.

I saw one whom I took to be she. Let him be whom he may, I am not afraid of him. Who do you think him to be? Whom do men say that I am? She is the person who I understood it to have been. Whom think ye that I am? Was it me that said so? I am certain it was not him. I believe it to have been they. It might have been him. It is impossible to be them. It was either him or his brother that gained the first prize.

* When the verb to be is understood, it has the same case after it that it has before it; as, He seems the leader of a party; I supposed him a man of learning;—that is, to be the leader, &c.; to be a man, &c. Part of a sentence is sometimes the nominative both before and after the verb to be; as, He was a man, the master of the vessel.

The verb to be is often followed by an appositive.—See No. 2.

Some verbs which signify naming, and some noster verbs, have a nominative after them; as, He shall be called John; He became the slave of irregular passions. Stephen did a martyr for the Christian religion.

Some noster verbs admit an objective after them; as, John was first called apostle, then he was promised them, then he was called them.

RULE X.—Sentences that imply contingency and futurity require the subjunctive mood: as,—*If he be alone, give him the letter.
When contingency and futurity are not both implied, the indicative ought to be used; as,
If he speaks as he thinks, he may safely be trusted.

EXERCISES.

If a man smites his servant, and he die, he shall surely be put to death. If he acquires riches they will corrupt his mind. Though he be high, he hath respect to the lowly. If thou live virtuously, thou art happy. If thou be Christ, save thyself and us. If he does promise, he will certainly perform. Oh! that his heart was tender. As the governess were present, the children behaved properly. Though he falls he shall not be utterly cast down.

1. Despise not any condition, lest it happens to be thy own. Let him that is sanguine, take heed lest he miscarry. Take care that thou break not any of the established rules.

2. If he is but discreet he will succeed. If he be but in health, I am content. If he does but ultimate his desire, it will produce obedience.

* The exercise may all be extracted by the rule at the end of the page.
 1. RULE I.—Lest and that connected to a command require the subjunctive mood; as,—Lest thou sleep, lest thou come to poverty. Take heed that thou speak not to Jacob either good or bad.
 2. RULE II.—Lest and that following a wish, futurity is denoted, require the subjunctive mood; as, If he do but touch the hills, they shall melt. But when futurity is not expressed, the indicative ought to be used. In the subjunctive the auxiliaries shall, should, &c. are generally to be denoted; as, Though he fall, I care though he should fall. God's repentance compasses his mind, i. e. until repentance shall compose.—K. 233

RULE XL.—Some Conjunctions have their correspondent conjunctions; thus,

Neither	requires	Not	after it; as, Neither he nor his brother was in.
Though	Yet	Though	he was rich, yet for our sakes, &c.
Whether	Or	Whether	he will do it or not, I cannot tell
Either	Or	Either	she or her sister must go.
As	As	Mine	is as good as yours.
As	So	As	the stars as shall thy seed be, as the one dieth, so dieth the other.
So	As	He	is not so wise as his brother. To see thy glory so as I have seen it, &c.
So	That	I am	so weak that I cannot walk.

EXERCISES.

It is neither cold or hot. It is so clear ^{that} I need not explain it. The relations are so uncertain, as that they require a great deal of examination. The one is equally deserving as the other. I must be so candid to own that I have been mistaken. ~~He~~ would not do it himself, nor let me do it. He was as angry as he could not speak. So as thy days, so shall thy strength be. Though he slay me, ^{so} will I trust in him. He must go himself, or send his servant. There is no condition so secure as cannot admit of change. He is not as eminent, and as much esteemed as he thinks himself to be. Neither despise the poor, or envy the rich, for the one dieth as as the other. As far as I am able to judge, the book is well written. His raiment was so white as snow.

* The poets frequently use Or—er, for Either—er; and Not—nor for Neither—nor.—In prose not—nor is often used for neither—nor. The not after though is frequently and properly suppressed. Or does not require either before it when the one word is a mere explanation of the other; as, 10s. or £1 sterling is enough. † See K. No. 104.

The

RULE XII.—*When the present participle is used as a noun, it requires an article before it, and of after it; as,—The sum of the moral law consists in the obeying of God, and the loving of our neighbour as ourselves.

EXERCISES.

The Learning of languages is very difficult. The learning any thing speedily requires great application. By the exercising our faculties they are improved. By observing of these rules you may avoid mistakes. By obtaining of wisdom thou wilt command esteem. This was a betraying the trust reposed in him. The not attending to this rule is the cause of a very common error.

† Our approving their bad conduct may encourage them to become worse. For his avoiding that precipice he is indebted to his friend's care. ¶ What is the reason of this person's dismissing his servant so hastily? I remember it being done.

* These phrases would be right, were the articles and of both omitted; as, The sum of the moral law consists in obeying God, and loving our neighbour, &c. This manner of expression is, in many instances, preferable to the other. In some cases, however, these two modes express very different ideas, and therefore attention to the sense is necessary; as, He confessed the whole in the hearing of three witnesses, and the Court spent an hour in hearing their deposition.—K. No. 234.

† The present participle with a possessive before it sometimes admits of of after it, and sometimes not; as, Their observing of the rules prevented error. By his studying the Scriptures he became wise.

When a proposition follows the participle of to (inadmissible); as, His depending on promises proved his ruin. His neglecting to study when young rendered him ignorant all his life.

‡ RULE.—A noun before the present participle is put in the possessive case; as, Much will depend on the pupil's assiduous industry.

Sometimes, however, the sense forbids it to be put in the possessive case; thus, What do you think of my horse's running to-day? Do you think I should let his run? but, What do you think of my horse's running? means, He has run, do you think he ran well?

RULE XIII.—The past participle is used, after the verbs have and be; as,—I have written a letter; he was chosen.

EXERCISES.

He ha swrote his copy. I would have wrote a letter. He had mistook his true interest. The coat had no seam, but was wave throught. The French language is spoke in every kingdom in Europe. His resolution was too stroing to be shook by slight opposition. The horse was stole. They have chose the part of honour and virtue. The Rhine was froze over. She was showed into the drawing-room. My people have slid backwards. He has broken the bottle. Some fell by the way-side, and was tread down. The price of cloth has lately rose very much. The work was very well executed. His vices have weakened his mind, and broke his health. He would have went with us, had he been invited. Nothing but application is want to make you an excellent scholar.

He soon began to be weary of having nothing to do. He was greatly heated, and he drank with avidity. The bending hermit here a prayer began. And end with sorrows as they first began.

A second deluge learning thus began.

And the monks finished what the Goths began.

* Rule.—The past participle must not be used instead of the past tense. It is improper to say, he began, for he began; he rose, for he rose.

RULE XIV.—Pronouns agree in gender, number and person with the nouns for which they stand. as,—John is here, he came an hour ago. Every tree is known by its fruit.

EXERCISES.

Answer not a fool according to her folly.
 A stone is heavy; and the sand weighty;
 but a fool's wrath is heavier than both.
 Can a woman forget his sucking child, that she should not have compassion on the son of her womb? yea, they may forget, yet will I not forget thee. Take handfuls of ashes of the furnace, and let Moses sprinkle it towards heaven, in the sight of Pharaoh; and it shall become small dust. Can any person, on their entrance into life, be fully secure that they shall not be deceived? The mind of man cannot be long without some food to nourish the activity of his thoughts.
The boys are diligent. I have not seen him the ten days. You have been absent the two hours. These sort of people fear nothing. We have lived here the many years. The chasm made by the earthquake was twenty feet broad, and one hundred fathoms in depth. There is six feet water in the hold. I have no interests but that of truth and virtue. These sort of favours did real injury.

Note.—Nouns and numeral adjectives must agree in number according to the sense. Thus, This boys, should be, these boys, because boys is plural: and six feet, should be, six feet, because six is plural.

Note should never be joined to common nouns in the plural; thus, Almost the whole inhabitants were present; should be, Almost all the inhabitants; but it may be joined to collective nouns in the plural; thus, Two cities were swallowed up by the earthquake.

Rule XV.—The relative agrees with its antecedent in gender, number, and person; as, Thou who readest; The book which was lost.

EXERCISES.

Those which seek wisdom will certainly find her. This is the friend which I love. That is the vice which I hate. This moon which rose last night. Blessed is the man who walketh in wisdom's ways. Thou who has been a witness of the fact, can give an account of it. The child which was lost is found. The tiger is a beast of prey, who destroys without pity. Who of those men came to his assistance.

It is the best which we ever got. Solomon was the wisest man whom ever the world saw. It is the same picture which you saw before. And all which beauty, all which wealth, &c. The lady and lap-dog which we saw at the window. Some village Hampton, which with dauntless breast, &c.

It is not necessary to me that it is harsh and laudable, as Mr. Murray says, to apply who to children, because they have little reason and are not capable of it, but what is applicable to any age and apply who to them. That seems preferable to either. In our translation of the Bible, who and that are both applied to children, but never which. See 1 Sam. xii. 14 and 15. Mat. ii. 16. Gen. xii. 5.

Which is applied to inanimate things, and also to persons in talking of themselves or to those whom they are talking of.

RULE.—That is used instead of Who or Which.

1. After adjectives in the superlative degree, after the words Some and Any.
2. To have the antecedent consists of two nouns, the one referring Who or Which to the other.
3. The that and the howe and we saw yesterday.
4. Who or Which is used after Who; as—Who that has any sense of religion would have served time?
5. There seems to be no satisfactory reason for preferring that to who after the and all, except usage. There is indeed no good authority for using who after all, so for using that. Authors, for instance, use all and that several times in one paper.

Rule XVI.—When the relative is preceded by two antecedents of different persons, it and the verb generally agree in person with the last; as,—Thou art the boy that was dux yesterday.*

EXERCISES.

I am the man who command you. I am the person who adopt that sentiment, and maintains it. Thou art a pupil who possesses bright parts, but who has cultivated them but little. I am a man who speak but seldom. Thou art the friend that has often relieved me, and that has not deserted me now in the time of peculiar need. Thou art he who dried up the Red Sea before thy people Israel.

The king dismissed his minister without any faculty who had never before committed so unjust an action. The soldier, with a single companion, who passed for the bravest man in the regiment, offered his services.)

* Sometimes the relative agrees with the former antecedent; as,—I saw verily a man who was a Jew.

The propriety of this rule has been called in question, because the relative should agree with the subject of the verb, whether the subject be next the relative or not. This is true; but it is also true that the subject is generally next the relative, and the rule is calculated to preserve the propriety of choosing from one person of the verb to another, as in the 3rd example.

When we address the Divine Being, it is, in my opinion, more difficult and bold to make the relative agree with the second person, in the Scriptures this is generally done: See Job. ix. 7; &c. This expression is more proper, as it is in the third person singular of verbs, the solemn and majestic to become the dignity of the Almighty better than the familiar or, than, I saw the Lord by God; who seemed this to me; &c. &c. See by the way that thou shouldst go;—is there needed that, I was the Lord thy God, who seemed that to people who seemed that, to all to whom all I will, some other.

Rule.—The relative ought to be placed next its antecedent; to give more emphasis; thus, The boy had his companion, whom every body believed incapable of doing mischief; should be, The boy, whom every body believed incapable of doing mischief, had his companion.

RULE XV II.—When singular nominatives of different persons are separated by or or nor, the verb agrees with the person next to it; as,—Either thou or I am in fault; I, or thou, or he, is the author of it.

EXERCISES.

Either I or thou are greatly mistaken. He or I is sure of this week's prize. Either Thomas or thou has spilt the ink on my paper. John or I has done it. He or thou is the person who must go to London on that business.

PROMISCUOUS EXERCISES.

Your gold and silver is cankered. Fear and a snare is come upon us. The master taught him and I to read. Let not a widow be taken into the number under threescore years old, having been the wife of one husband, well reported of for good works; if she have brought up children, if she have lodged strangers, if she have washed the saints feet, if she have relieved the afflicted, if she have diligently followed every good work. The candidate being chosen was owing to the influence of party. The winner has not been as good as we expected it to be. Him and her were of the same age. If the night have gathered aught of evil dispense it. My people do not consider.

RULE XVIII.—A singular and a plural nominative separated by OR or NOR, require a verb in the plural; as,—Neither the captain nor the sailors were saved.*

The plural nominative should be placed next the verb.

EXERCISES.

Neither poverty nor riches was injurious to him. He or they was^{ere} offended at it. Whether one or more was concerned in the business, does not yet appear. The cares of this life, or the deceitfulness of riches, has^{ere} choked the seeds of virtue in many a promising mind. Neither the king nor his ministers deserves to be praised.

† A great cause of the low state of industry was^{ere} the restraints put upon it. His meat were locusts and wild honey. His chief occupation and enjoyment were controversy.

‡ Thou and he shared it between them. James and I are attentive to their studies. You and he are diligent in reading their books, therefore they are good boys.

strong is our natural love of brevity, that such a tedious and formal attention to correctness would justly be reckoned stiff and pedantic. It is better to avoid both forms of expression when it can be conveniently done.

* The same observation may be made respecting the manner of supplying the ellipsis under this rule, that was made respecting the last. A parsimonious love of brevity is the cause of the ellipsis in both, and in a thousand other instances.

† RULE I.—When the verb or an auxiliary stands between a singular and plural nominative, it agrees with the one next it, or with the one which is more anteriorly the subject of it; as, "The wages of sin is death."

‡ RULE II.—When a pronoun refers to the words of different persons, singular and plural, it becomes plural, and agrees with the last person when I or We is mentioned; and with the second, called I or We, if not mentioned; as, "John and I will lend you our books." James and you have got your lessons.

RULE XIX.—It is improper to use both a noun and its pronoun as a nominative to the same verb; as,—Man that is born of a woman, he is of few days, and full of trouble;—
*omit he.

EXERCISES.

The king he is just. The men they were there. Many words they darken speech. My banks they are furnished with bees. Who, instead of going about doing good, they are perpetually intent upon doing mischief. Disappointments and afflictions, however disagreeable, they often improve us. Simple and innocent pleasures they alone are durable.

† Which rule, if it had been observed, a neighbouring prince would have wanted a great deal of that incense which has been offered up to him. † Man, though he has great variety of thoughts, and such from which others as well as himself might receive profit and delight, yet they are all within his own breast.

|| For he bringeth down them that dwell on high; the lofty city he layeth ~~it~~ low.

The friends thou hast, and their adoption tried,
Grapple them to thy soul with hooks of steel.

* In some editions here the word is is rightly cancelled, the repetition of it in the preceding sentence is not only allowable but even elegant. See The Lord is in the camp. 1 Kings, xviii. 24; see also Deut. xxxi. 6.

† It ought to be, if this rule had been observed, a neighbouring prince would have wanted a great deal of that incense which has been offered up to him.

|| RULE.—It is improper to use both a noun and its pronoun as an objective after the same verb; thus in Deut. iv. 2. Your eyes have seen what the Lord did because of Baal-peor, for all the men that followed Baal-peor, the Lord thy God hath destroyed them from among you: now a supposition, as a transposition of the last clause, will show this. For the Lord hath destroyed all the men that followed you that followed Baal-peor.

RULE XX.—The infinitive mood, or part of a sentence, is sometimes used as the nominative to a verb; as,—For me to live is Christ, and to die is gain. His being idle was the cause of his ruin.*

EXERCISES.

To be carnally minded ~~are~~ death, but to be spiritually minded ~~are~~ life and peace. To live soberly, righteously, and piously, ~~are~~ required of all men. That warm climates should accelerate the growth of the human body, and shorten its duration, ~~are~~ very reasonable to believe. To be temperate in eating and drinking, to use exercise in the open air, and to preserve the mind from tumultuous emotions, ~~is~~ the best preservatives of health.

That it is our duty to promote the purity of our minds and bodies, to be just and kind to our fellow-creatures, and to be pious and faithful to him who made us, admit not of any doubt in a rational and well informed mind.

* The infinitive is equal to a noun; thus, To play is pleasant, and boys love to play; are equal to, Play is pleasant, and boys love play.

The infinitive is sometimes used instead of the present participle; as, To advise; To attempt; or advising, attempting; this substitution can be made only in the beginning of a sentence.

NOTE.—Part of a sentence is often used as the objective after a verb, as, You will soon find that the world does not perform what it promises. Therefore, the clause, that the world does not perform, &c. must be the objective after find. Did I not tell you that your wickedness would bring me to ruin? Here the clause, that your wickedness would bring me to ruin, is the objective after tell.

RULE XXI.—Double comparatives and superlatives are improper; thus,—Mine is a more better book, but John's is the most best; should be, Mine is a better book, but John's is the best.

EXERCISES.

The nightingale's voice is the ~~most~~ ^{sweetest} sweetest in the grove. James is a ~~worse~~ scholar than John. Tray is the ~~most~~ ^{swiftest} swiftest dog. Absalom was the most beautifullest man. He is the ~~chiefest~~ among ten thousand.

His assertion was most untrue. His work is ~~perfect~~; his brother's more ~~perfect~~; and his father's the ~~most~~ perfect of all.

PROMISCUOUS EXERCISES.

The great power and force of custom forms another argument against keeping bad company. And Joshua, he shall go over before thee, as the Lord hath said. And God said, let us make man in our image, after our likeness, and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, &c. And the righteous men they shall judge them, &c. If thou be the King of the Jews, save thyself. The people, therefore, that was with him, when he raised Lazarus out of his grave, bare record. Public spirit is a more universal principle than a sense of honour.

* Chief, universal, perfect, true, &c. Mine is the most better book, but John's is the most best. In English, however, the word most is used in the superlative sense, as in the above. A more correct style would naturally use the word perfect of the last.

And his father's the most perfect of all. The word most is used in the superlative sense, as in the above. A more correct style would naturally use the word perfect of the last.

Pierre Bouchard

RULE XXII.—*Two negatives in the same sentence are improper; * thus,—I cannot by no means allow it; should be, I can by no means allow it, or, I cannot by any means allow it.*

EXERCISES.

I cannot drink ~~no~~ more. He cannot do anything. We have not done nothing to-day. He will never be ~~no~~ taller. They could not travel ~~no~~ farther. Covet neither riches nor honours, nor ~~no~~ such perishing things. Nothing ~~never~~ affected her so much. Do not interrupt me thyself, nor let ~~no~~ one disturb me. I am resolved not to comply with the proposal, neither at present, nor at any other time.

MISCELLANEOUS EXERCISES.

As far as I can judge, a spirit of independency and freedom, tempered by sentiments of decency, and the love of order influenced in a most remarkable manner the minds of the subjects of this happy republic. James and I ~~are~~ cousins. Thy father's merits sets thee forth to view. That it is our duty to be pious admit not of any doubt. If he becomes very rich, he may be less industrious. It was writtⁿ extempore. Romulus, which founded Rome, killed his brother Remus.

* Sometimes the two negatives are intended to be an affirmative, as, You did they not persuade him; that is, They did persuade him. In this case they are proper.

When one of the negatives (such as no, no, no, no, &c.) is joined to another word, the two negatives form a pleasing and delicate variety of expression; as, His language, though simple, is not inelegant; that is, it is elegant.

RULE XXIII.— *Adverbs are for the most part placed before adjectives, after verbs active or neuter, and frequently between the auxiliary and the verb; as,—He is very attentive; She behaves well, and is much esteemed.

EXERCISES.

We should not be overcome totally by present events. He unaffectedly and forcibly spoke, and was heard attentively by the whole assembly. It cannot be impertinent or ridiculous, therefore, to remonstrate. Not only he found her employed but pleased and tranquil also. In the proper disposition of adverbs, the ear carefully requires to be consulted as well as the sense.

† The women contributed all their rings and jewels voluntarily to assist the government. † Having [not known, or having not considered, the measures proposed, he failed of success. He was determined to invite back the king, and to call together his friends.

‡ Ask me never so much dowry.

* This is but a general rule; for it is impossible to give an exact and determinate rule for the placing of adverbs on all occasions. The easy flow and perspicuity of the phrase ought to be chiefly regarded.

† The adverb is sometimes placed with propriety before the verb, or at some distance after it; as, The women voluntarily contributed all their rings and jewels, &c. They derived their proposition farther.

‡ Not, when it qualifies the present participle, comes before it.

§ Never is often improperly used for ever; thus, "If I make my head, never so clean," should be, "Ever so clean."

¶ The note in former editions, stating that "Ly is cut off from exceedingly when the next word ends in ly," has been removed, because it properly belonged to the 2d rule, and because it was in some degree encouraging a breach of that rule. Two words which end in ly, succeeding each other, are almost a little offensive to the ear, but rather than write bad grammar, it would be better either to offend it, or avoid the use of exceedingly in this case altogether; and instead of saying, "He used me exceedingly discreetly," say "He used me very discreetly," or, if that is not strong enough, vary the expression.

RULE XXIV.—Adjectives should not be used as adverbs, nor adverbs as adjectives; as,— Remarkable well, for remarkably well; and, Use a little wine for thine often infirmities, instead of thy frequent infirmities; or, Adverbs qualify adjectives and verbs—Adjectives qualify nouns.

EXERCISES.

They are miserable poor. They behaved the noblest. He fought bolder than his brother. He lived in a manner agreeable to the dictates of reason and religion. He was extreme prodigal, and his property is now near exhausted. They lived conformable to the rules of prudence. He speaks very fluent, reads excellent, but does not think very coherent. They came agreeable to their promise, and conducted themselves suitable to the occasion. They hoped for a soon and prosperous issue to the war.

* From whence come ye? He departed from thence into a desert place. Where† are you going? Bid him come here immediately. We walked there in an hour. He drew up a petition, where‡ he too frequently represented his own merit. He went to London last year, since when I have not seen him. The situation where I found him. It is not worth his while.

* RULE I.—From should not be used before hence, thence and whence, because it is superfluous. In many cases, however, the omission of from would render the sentence incoherently dull and disagreeable.

† RULE II.—After verbs of motion, motion, motion and motion should be used, and not hence, thence and whence.

‡ RULE III.—Where and whence should not be used as nouns, but where can preposition and a relative, as for which &c.—For whence, R. 288.

RULE XXV.—The comparative degree, and the pronoun other require than after them, and such requires as; as.—Greater than I. No other than he. Such as do well.

EXERCISES

He has little more of the scholar besides the name. Be ready to succour such persons who need thy assistance. They had no sooner risen but they applied themselves to their studies. Those savage people seemed to have no other element but war. Such men that act treacherously ought to be avoided. He gained nothing farther by his speech, but only to be commended for his eloquence. This is none other but the gate of paradise. Such sharp replies that come in his life. To trust in him is no more than to acknowledge his power.

† James is the wisest of the two. He is the weakest of the two. I understood him the best of all others who spoke on the subject. Elizabeth was the fairest of all her daughters. He is the likeliest of any other to succeed. Jane is the wittiest of the three, not the wisest.

* Such, meaning either a consequence or so great, requires that; as His behaviour was such, that I ordered him to leave the room. Such is the influence of money, that few can resist it.

† Rule.—When two objects are compared, the comparative is generally used; but when more than two, the superlative; as This is the greatest of the two. Mary is the wisest of them all.

When the two objects form a group, or are not so much opposed to each other as to require than before the first, such admissible without the superlative, and say, "James is the wisest of the two." He is the wisest of the two." The superlative is often more allowable in the first; nor is the sense injured. In many cases a strict adherence to the comparative form renders the language less stiff and formal.

† A comparison in which more than two are compared, may be expressed by the comparative, as well as by the superlative; and in some cases better; but the comparative considers the objects compared as belonging to different classes; while the superlative compares them as RULE XXVI.—A pronoun after than or as, either agrees with a verb or is governed by a verb or preposition understood; as,—He is wiser than I (am); She loved him more than (she loved) me.*

EXERCISES.

John can write better than me. He is as good as her. Thou art a much greater loser than he by his death. She suffers hourly more than he. They know how to write as well as him; but he is a better grammarian than them. The undertaking was much better executed by his brother than he. They are greater gainers than we. She is not so learned as him. If the king give us leave, we may perform the office as well as they that do.

Who betrayed her companion? Not he. Who revealed the secrets he ought to have concealed? Not him. It was her. Whom did you meet? Her. Who bought that book? He. Whom did you see there? He and she. Whose pen is this? Mine.

Illustration of the use of the comparative is used thus: "Greece was more polished than any other nation of antiquity." Here Greece stands by itself as opposed to the other nations of antiquity. She was none of the other nations. She was more polished than they. The same idea is conveyed by the superlative when the word other is absent; thus, "Greece was the most polished nation of antiquity." Here Greece is ranked in the highest place in the class of objects among which it is numbered—the nations of antiquity—she is one of them.

When the immediately follows than, it is used improperly in the objective case; as, "I loved him more than a greater king ever reigned." See note in the grammatical. It ought to be, than any; because when the superlative is used understood. "I love him more than any king who has ever reigned." It is true that most of our best writers have used than more; but it is also true, that they have used other phrases which we have rejected as ungrammatical; then why not reject than more? The objection in the early edition will have been corrected.

NOTE.—The word containing the answer to a question, never is in the case that will be shown under case by, as, "Who said this?" (said he.) "Which book are these?" John's (books)

RULE XXVII.—*The distributive pronouns, each, every, either, neither, agree with nouns and verbs in the singular number only; as,—Each of his brothers is in a favourable situation; Every man is accountable for himself; Either of them is good enough.

EXERCISES.

Let each esteem others better than ^{him} ~~them~~ selves. Every one of the letters bear date after his banishment. Each of them, in their turn, received the benefits to which they are entitled. Every person, whatever be ~~their~~ station, are bound by the duties of morality and religion. Neither of those men seem to have any idea ~~that~~ their opinions may be ill-founded. By discussing what relates to each particular in their order, we shall better understand the subject. ~~And~~ either of these men your friend?

† And Jonathan the son of Shimeah, ~~was~~ a man of great stature, that had on ~~each~~ hand six fingers, and on ~~every~~ foot six toes.

‡ Nadab and Abihu, the sons of Aaron, took either of them his censor. The king of Israel and the king of Judah, set ~~either~~ ~~each~~ of them on his throne.

* This relates to two or more objects, and signifies both of the two, or every one of any number taken singly.

† This relates to more than two objects, and signifies each one of them all taken individually.—It is quite correct to say, Every one is wise, &c.

‡ Either signifies the one or the other, but not both. Neither imports not either.

§ Each is sometimes improperly used instead of each, as, On either side of the river was there the tree of life: instead of, On each side of the river.

RULE XXVIII.—When two persons or things are contrasted, that refers to the first mentioned, and this to the last; as,—Virtue and vice are as opposite to each other as light and darkness; that ennobles the mind, this debases it.

EXERCISES.

Wealth and poverty are both temptations; that tends to excite pride, that discontentment. Religion raises men above themselves, irreligion sinks them beneath the brutes; that binds them down to a poor pitiable speck of perishable earth, that exalts them to the skies.

And the cloud came between the camp of the Egyptians, and the camp of Israel, and it was a cloud and darkness to them, but it gave light to these. Moses and Solomon were men of the highest renown: the former was remarkable for his meekness, the latter was renowned for his wisdom. I have always preferred cheerfulness to mirth; the former I consider as an act, the latter as a habit of the mind. Body and soul must part; the former brings its way to its almighty source, the latter drops into the dark and noisome grave.

Former and latter are often used instead of that and this. They are alike in both numbers.

That and this are seldom applied to persons; but former and latter are applied to persons and things indiscriminately. In most cases, however, the position of the nouns is preferable to either of them.

RULE XXIX.—*In the use of verbs and words that in point of time relate to each other, the order of time must be observed; for example,—I remember him these many years, should be, I have remembered him &c.

EXERCISES.

I have compassion on the multitude, because they continued ^{here} with me now three days. And he that ~~was~~ ^{had been} dead set up, and began ^{to speak}. The next new year's day I shall ~~be~~ ^{be} at school three years. The court laid hold on all the opportunities which the weakness or necessities of princes afford ^{it}, to extend its authority. Ye will not come unto me that ye might ^{have} life. His sickness was so great that I often feared he would ~~have~~ ^{die} before our arrival. It would ~~have~~ ^{give} me great satisfaction to ^{have} relieve him from that distressed situation.

† I always intended to ~~have~~ ^{reward} my son according to his merit. We have done no more than it was our duty to ~~have~~ ^{do}. From the little conversation I had with him, he appeared to ~~have~~ ^{be} a man of letters. It was a pleasure to ~~have~~ ^{receive} his approbation of my labours. I intended to ~~have~~ ^{write} you last week.

* The best general rule that can be given, is, To observe what course necessarily requires.

† RULE.—After the past tense, the present infinitive (and not the past) should be used; as, I intended to write to my father, and still I intended to have written—for however long it now is since I thought of writing, to write when present to me, and want still to be considered as present when I bring back that time and the thoughts of it.

Rule XXX.—It is improper to place a clause of a sentence between a possessive case and the word which usually follows it; thus,—
 She began to extol the farmer's, as she called him, excellent understanding; should be, She began to extol the excellent understanding of the farmer, as she called him.

They very justly condemned the prodigals, as he was called, senseless and extravagant conduct. They implicitly obeyed the protractor's, as they called him, imperious commands. Beyond this, the arts cannot be traced of civil society. These are David's, the king, priest, and prophet of the Jewish people's (psalms). This is Paul's, the Christian's, and great apostle of the Gentile's advice. However beautiful they appear, they have no real merit. In whatsoever light you view him, his conduct will bear inspection. On whatsoever side they are contemplated, they appear to advantage. However much we may be struck by the maxims of the king's administration, he kept a total silence on that subject.

EXPOSURE OF ROME

The Romans reduced the world to their own power. He provided them with every thing. We insist for it. He seems to have a taste of such studies.

He died for thirst. He found none whom he could safely confide in. I dissent with the examiner. It was very well adapted for his capacity. He acquitted me from any imputation. You are conversant with that science. They boast of their great riches. Call on James to walk with you. When we have had a taste for the pleasures of virtue, we can have no relish for those of vice. I will wait of you. He is glad of her company. She is glad of his company. strict observation of times and fashions. This book is a replication of the general rule. He died a martyr for Christianity. This change is to be observed. His productions were scrupulously exact and conformable with all the rules of good writing. He died of the sword. She finds a difficulty of fixing her mind. The prince was naturally averse to study. A freholder is bred with an aversion to subjection.

ENGLISH GRAMMAR

RULE XXXIII. All the parts of a sentence should contributed to make either an affirmative or a negative construction throughout be carefully preserved. For example, the sentence, "He was more beloved, but no so much admired, as Cinthio" is inaccurate; because more requires than after it, which is nowhere found in the sentence. It should be, "He was more beloved than Cinthio, but not so much admired."

A proper choice of words and a perspicuous arrangement should be carefully attended to.

THE FUTURE OF THE REFORMATION.

The reward is his due, and it has always been ready, or will hereafter, be given to him.
He was guided by interests always different, sometimes contrary to those of the community. The intentions of some of these philosophers, nay of many, might ^{have been} and probably were good. No person was ever so perplexed as he has been in his mortifica-tions as he has been in his life. He was more bold and active, but not so wise and studious as his companion. Then said they unto him, what shall we do that we may work the works of God? Sincerity is valuable, and even more valuable than knowledge. The greatest masters of critical learning differ from one another.

But from this time the recovery of the empire was become desperate. No wisdom could obviate its calamities. He was at one time thought to be a superstitious child.

RULE XXXIV.—A is used before nouns in the singular number only. The is used before nouns in both numbers. The article is omitted before a noun that stands for a whole species; and before the names of minerals, metals, arts, &c. The last of two nouns after a comparative should have no article when they both refer to one person; as, He is a better reader than writer.

To use the articles properly, is of the greatest importance; but it is impossible to give a rule applicable to every case. Examples of the improper use and omission of the articles,

EXERCISES.

Reason was given to a man to control his passions. The gold is corrupting.

The wisest and best men are sometimes betrayed into errors. We must act our part with a constancy, though reward of our constancy be distant.

There are some evils of life, which equally affect prince and people. Purity has its seat in the heart, but extends its influence over so much of outward conduct, as to form the great and essential part of a character. At worst, I could but incur a gentle reprimand.

The profligate man is seldom or never found to be the good husband, the good father, or the beneficent neighbour.

He has been much censured for paying little attention to his business. So bold a breach of order, called for little severity in punishing the offender.

The distinction between individual expressions of the whole of a species, when compared with another individual representing another species, is a more general one than that of the whole of a species, when compared with another individual representing the whole of another species.

A more distinction of the sense is to be made of the use of the article in the sentence, "I saw, he behaved with little reverence; I saw him behave with little reverence; I saw him behave with little reverence; I saw him behave with little reverence."

Rule XXXV. An ellipsis, or omission of some words, is frequently admitted. Thus, instead of saying, He was a learned man, he was a wise man, and he was a good man; we say, He was a learned, wise, and good man.

EXERCISES.

A house and a garden. The laws of God and the laws of man. Avarice and cunning may acquire an estate; but avarice and cunning cannot gain friends. His crimes had brought him into extreme distress, and ~~eternal~~ perplexity. He has an affectionate brother and an affectionate sister. By presumption, and by vanity, we provoke enmity, and we incur contempt. Genuine virtue supposes our benevolence to be strengthened and to be confirmed by principle. He is temperate; he is disinterested; he is benevolent. Perseverance in laudable pursuits, will reward all our toils, and will produce effects beyond our calculation. We often commend impudently, and impudently commend impudently. Destitute of principle, he regarded neither his family nor his friends, nor his reputation. He insulted every man and every woman in the company. The temper of him who is always in the middle of the world, will be often ruffled and will be often disturbed.

He regards his word, but thou dost not regard it. They must be punished, and they shall be punished. We succeeded, and they did not succeed.

We have done it, but thou hast not; &c. Thou hast not done it.

RULE XXXVI.—An ellipsis is not allowable when it would obscure the sentence, weaken its force, or be attended with an impropriety; for example, "We speak that we do know, and testify that we have seen," should be, "We speak that which we do know, and testify that which we have seen."

EXERCISES.

* A noble spirit disdaineth the malice of fortune; his greatness of soul is not to be cast down. A house and an orchard. A horse and an ass. A learned and amiable young man. I gladly shunned, who gladly fled from me. A taste for useful knowledge will provide for us a great and noble entertainment when others leave us. They enjoy also a free constitution and laws. The captain had several men died in his ship of the scurvy. I must, however, be so candid to own I have been mistaken. The sacrifices of virtue will not only be rewarded hereafter, but recompensed even in this life. Oh, Piety! Virtus! how insensible have I been to thy charms! That is a property most men have, or at least may attain. There is nothing men are more deficient in, than knowing their own characters. Why do ye ~~that~~ which is not lawful to do on the Sabbath days? Neither has he, nor any other persons, suspected so much dissimulation.

* A noble spirit disdaineth, &c. should be, A man of a noble spirit disdaineth, &c. This will render the sentence consistent with the rules of grammar and with common sense; to talk of the soul of a spirit is ridiculous.

† The article being once expressed, the repetition of it becomes unnecessary, except when a different form of it is requisite; as, A house and an orchard; and when some peculiar emphasis requires a repetition; as, Not only the year, but the day and the hour were appointed.

CONSTRUCTION.

The four following lines are construed by way of example.—They were parsed at page 54. They are construed here, because this pupil should now be able to apply the Rules of Syntax

Oh how stupendous was the power
That raised me with a word ;
And* every day and every hour,
I lean upon the Lord.

How stupendous, adverbs are for the most part placed before adjectives, &c. A power is understood thus ; stupendous a power ; † an adjective agrees with a noun.—A power, the article a is used before nouns in the singular number only.—the power, the is used before nouns in both numbers.—the power was, a verb agrees with its nominative.—the power that, the relative agrees with its antecedent, &c. That raised, a verb agrees with its nom.—Raised me, an active verb governs the objective case.—With a word, prepositions govern the objective.—A word—A is used before nouns in the singular, &c. (During is understood) during every day, prepositions govern the objective case.—Every day, an adjective agrees with a noun.—Day and hour, conjunctions couple the same cases of nouns and pronouns ; for hour is governed by during understood again.—Every how, an adjective agrees, &c.—I lean, a verb agrees with its nominative.—Upon the Lord, prepositions govern the objective case.

The possessive pronouns, my, thy, his, her, our, your, their, and its, must be construed exactly like nouns in the possessive case, for a pronoun is an exact resemblance of a noun in every thing but one ; namely, it will not admit of an adjective before it like a noun.

His is equal to John's, and her to Ann's, and their to the men's, in the following sentences :

John lost his gloves, i. e. John lost John's gloves. Ann found her book, i. e. Ann found Ann's book. The men took off their hats, i. e. The men took off the men's hats. The garden is productive, and its fruit is good, i. e. the garden's fruit. In all these cases, and in such phrases as, my house—thy field—our lands—your estates—their property—what home, the rule is, "When two nouns come together, signifying different things, the first is put in the possessive case."

* It is impossible to construe had grammatically here ; but here is to very vaguely used, that the rule "Conjunctions couple the same kinds and cases of verbs, and the same cases of nouns and pronouns," will not apply in this passage. From the sense, it is evident that had should be was, meaning, not only so, but—every day, &c.

† Or, how stupendous the power was ; but it is certainly better to supply a power, thus : O how stupendous a power was the power that raised me with a word.

John writes pretty. ^{either} Come here James. Where are you going, Thomas? I shall never do so ^{more} more. The train of our ideas are often interrupted. Was you present at last meeting? And when they had lifted up their eyes, they saw no man, save Jesus only. Strive not with a man without cause, if he have done thee no harm. I wrote to, and cautioned

The ~~gospel~~ book is torn in pieces. It is not ~~me~~ who he is in love with. He which commands himself, commands the whole world. Nothing is more lovely than virtue.

The people's happiness is the statesman's honour. Changed to a worsen shape thou canst not be. I have drunk no spirituous liquors this six years. He is taller than me, but I am stronger than him.

Solid peace and contentment consists neither in beauty or riches, but in the favour of God. After who is the King of Israel come out?

The reciprocations of love and friendship between us and them, have been many and sincere. Abuse of mercies ripen us for judgement. Peter and John are not at school to-day.

Three of them were taken into custody. To study diligently and behave gently, is commendable. The enemies who we have most to fear are those of our own hearts. Regulus was reckoned the most consummate warrior that Rome could then produce.

Suppose life never so long, fresh occasions of knowledge may still be made.

PROMISCUOUS EXERCISES.

Surely thou who reads so much in the Bible, can tell me what became of Elijah. Neither the master nor the scholars ^{are} reading. Trust not him whom you know is dishonest. I love no interests but that of truth and virtue. Every imagination of the thoughts of the heart ^{are} evil continually. No one can be blamed for taking due care of their health. They crucified him, and two others with him, on either side one, and Jesus in the midst.

I have read Pope, Homer, and Dryden's Virgil. He that is diligent you should commend. There was an earthquake which made the earth to tremble. And God said to Solomon, Wisdom and knowledge ^{is} granted unto thee, &c. I cannot commend him for justifying himself when he knows that his conduct was so ^{very} improper. He was very much made on at school. Though he were a son, yet learned he obedience by the things which he suffered. If he ^{is} alone tell him the news; but if there is any body with him, do not tell him. They ride faster than us. Though the measure ^{is} mysterious, it is worthy of attention. If he does but approve my endeavours, it will be an ample reward. Was it him who came last? Yes, it was him.

For ever in this humble cell,
Let thee and thy fair one dwell.

PROMISCUOUS EXERCISES.

Every man should act suitably to his character and station in life. His arguments were exceeding clear. I only spoke three words on that subject. The ant and the bee sets a good example before drowsy boys. Neither in this world, neither in the world to come. Evil communications corrupt good manners. Hannibal was one of the greatest generals whom the world ever saw. The middle station of life seems to be the most advantageously situated for the gaining of wisdom.

These are the rules of grammar, by the observing of which you may avoid mistakes. The king conferred on him the title of a duke. My exercises are not well written. I do not hold my pen well. Grammar teaches us to speak proper. She accused her companion for having betrayed her. I will not dissent with her. Nothing shall make me swerve out of the path of duty and honour.

Who shall I give it to? Who are you looking for? It is a diminution to, or a derogation of their judgement. It fell into their notice or cognizance. She values herself for her fortune. That is a book which I am much pleased with. I have been to see the coronation, and a fine sight it was. That picture of the emperor is a very exact resemblance of him. Every thing that we here enjoy, change, decay, and come to an end. It is not that they blame so much.

PROMISCUOUS EXERCISES.

No people ^{are} had more faults than they ^{who} pretend to have none. The laws of Draco ^{was} is said to have been written with blood. It is so clear, or so obvious, ^{that} as I need not explain it. She taught him and I to read. The more greater a bad man's accomplishments are, the more dangerous he is to society, and the more less fit for a companion. ^{Each} has ^{his} their own faults, and every one should endeavour to correct their own. Let your promises be few, and such that you can perform.

His being at enmity with Caesar and Antony ^{were} the cause of perpetual discord. Their being forced to their books in an age at enmity with all restraint, have been the reason why many have hated books all their lives. There was a coffee-house at that end of the town, in which several gentlemen used to meet ^{at} an evening. Do not despise the state of the poor, lest it become your own condition. It was his duty to have interposed his authority in an affair of so much importance. He spent his whole life in the doing good. Every gentleman who frequented the house and conversed with the erectors of this occasional club, were invited to pass an evening when they thought fit. The winter had not been so severe as we expected ^{to} have been. The rest (of the stars) in circuit walk this universe. Sir, if thou have borne him hence, tell me where thou hast laid him.

PROMISCUOUS EXERCISES.

"A lampoon, or a satire, does not carry in their robbery or murder. She and you were not mistaken in her conjectures. My sister and I, as well as my brother, are employed in their respective occupations. He repents him of that indiscreet action. It was me and not him, that wrote it. Art thou am I shall take care that no one shall suffer no injury. I am a man who approves of wholesome discipline, and who recommends it to others; but I am not a person who promotes severity, or who objects to mild and generous treatment. This Jackanapes has hit me in a right place enough. Prosperity, as truly asserted by Seneca, is very much obstructs the knowledge of ourselves. To do to others as we would that they should do to us is our duty. This grammar was purchased of A. Ozie's the bookseller. The council was not unanimous. Who spilt the ink upon the table? Him. Who lost this book? Me. Whose pen is this? John's. There is in fact no personal verbs in any language. And he fell on the ground, and anointed his eyes. Had I never seen, I had never known. The shipwreck and Ann were restored to their owners. If we consult the improvement of mind, or the health of body, it is well known exercise is the great instrument for promoting both. A man may see a metaphor or an allegory in a picture, as well as find them in a description.

PROMISCUOUS EXERCISES.

I had no sooner placed her at my right hand, by the fire, but she opened to me the reason of her visit. A prudent wife ~~she~~ shall be blessed: The house ~~you~~ speak of, ~~it~~ cost me five hundred pounds. Did I not tell thee, O thou infamous wretch! that thou wouldst bring me to ruin? Not only the counsel and attorney's, but the judge's opinion also, favoured his cause. It was the men's, women's, and children's lot to suffer great calamities. That is the eldest son of the King of England's, Lord Feversham the general's tent. This palace had been the grand Sultan's Mahomet's. They did not even man cast away the abomination of their eyes.

I had supposed. He is arrived. They were deserted from their regiment. Whose works are these? They are Cicero, the most eloquent of men's. The mighty rivals ~~are~~ now at length agreed. The time of William making the experiment, at length arrived. If we alter the situation of any of the words, we shall presently be sensible of the melody suffering. This picture of the King does not much resemble him. These pictures of ~~the~~ king were sent to him from Italy. ~~He~~ who committed the offence, thou shouldst correct, not I, who am innocent.

Remarks. The first sentence is used as a model for the second. The first is a simple sentence. The second is a complex sentence. The first is a simple sentence. The second is a complex sentence. The first is a simple sentence. The second is a complex sentence. The first is a simple sentence. The second is a complex sentence.

PROMISCUOUS EXERCISES.

But Thomas, one of the twelve, (called Didymus,) was not with them when Jesus came. I offer observations, that a long and thequered pilgrimage has enabled me to make on man. After I visited Europe, I returned to America. Clélie is a vain woman, whom, if we do not flatter, she will be disgusted. In his conduct was machery, and in his words, faithless professions. The orators did not forget to enlarge themselves on so popular a subject. He acted conformable with his instructions, and cannot be censured justly.

No person could speak stronger on this subject, nor behave nobler, than our young advocate, for the cause of toleration. They were studious to ingratiate with those who it was dishonourable to favour. The house framed a remonstrance, where they spoke with great freedom of the king's prerogative. Neither flatter or censure the rich or the great. Many would exchange gladly their honours, beauty and riches, for that more quiet and humble station, which thou art now dissatisfied with. High hopes, and fond views, is a great enemy to tranquillity. Many persons will not believe, but what they are free from prejudices. I will let me down in peace, and take my rest. This word I have only found in Spenser. The king being apprized of the conspiracy, he fled from Jerusalem. 100000 did baviooer

PROPOSITIONS & EXERCISES.

A too great variety of studies dissipated and weakened his mind. James was resolved to not indulge himself in such a cruel amusement. They admired the countryman's as they called him, candour and uprightness. The pleasure or pain of one passion, differs from that of another. The court of Spain, who gave the order, were not aware of the consequences. There was much said and wrote on each side of the question; but I have chosen to suspend my decision.

Religion raises men above themselves, — irreligion sinks them beneath the brutes: that binds them down to a poor pitiable speck of perishable earth, — this opens for them a prospect to the skies. Temperance and exercise, however little they may be regarded, they are the best means of preserving health. To despise others on account of their poverty, or to value ourselves for our wealth, are dispositions highly culpable. This task was the same performed from the successfulness with which he engaged in it. These controls were the dictates of virtue, and the dictates of true honour. As his misfortunes were the fruit of his own obstinacy, a few persons pitied him; and they were judged every man according to their works. Happiness is the bane of human happiness. I write to my brother before I received his letter.

PROMISSORY ENUNCIATIONS.

When Garrick appeared, Peter was for some time in doubt whether it could be him or not. Are you living contented in spiritual darkness? The company was very numerous. Shall the throne of iniquity have fellowship with thee, which frameth mischief by a law? Where is the security that evil habits will be ever broken? They each bring materials to the place. Nor let any comforter delight my ear. She was six years older than him. They were obliged to contribute more than usual. The Barons had little more to rely on, besides the power of their families. The sewers (closets) must be kept so clean, that the water may run away. Such among us will follow that profession. Nobody is so sanguine to hope for it. She behaved as I expected. Agreeable to your request, I send this letter. She is exceeding fair. Thomas is not so docile as his sister. There was no other book but the one which he died for us. Among whom was many Margaret, and Mary the mother of James. My sister and I waited till they were called. The public is respectfully informed that, &c. The friends and amusements which he preferred, carried his morals. Each must answer for themselves. Henry, though at first he showed an unwillingness, yet afterwards he granted his request.

Which of the two masters, says Seneca, shall we most esteem?—he who strives to correct his scholars by prudent advice and motives of honour, or another who will lash them severely for not repeating their lessons as they ought? The blessing of the Lord maketh rich, and he addeth no sorrow with it: or if there be first a willing mind, it is accepted according to that he hath, and not according to that he hath not. If a brother or a sister be naked and destitute of daily food, and one of you say unto them, Depart in peace, be ye warmed and filled; notwithstanding ye have them not those things which are needful to the body, what doth it profit?

But she always behaved with great severity to her maids; and if any of them were negligent of ~~their~~ duty, or made a slip in their conduct, nothing would serve her but burning the poor girl alive. He ~~did~~ ^{ought} his master to instruct him: he had read nothing but the writings of Moses, and the prophets, and had received no lessons from the Greeks, the Platon, and the Confucius of the age. They that honour me, I will honour. For the poor always go with you.

The passages here must not be read for the general sense, in the manner of the original, but as they stand in the original, which means should have been translated, and collected under the several names, the Greeks, the Platon, and the Confucius of the age.

A very slow child will often be found to get lessons by heart as soon as, nay sometimes sooner, than one who is ten times as intelligent.

It is then from a cultivation of the perceptive faculties, that we only can attain these powers of conception which are essential to taste.

No man is fit for free conversation for the inquiry after truth; if he be exceedingly reserved; if he be haughty and proud of his knowledge; if he be positive and dogmatical in his opinions; if he be one who always affects to outshine all the company; if he be crafty and pennyish; if he affect wit, and is full of puns, or quips, or quibbles.

Conversation is the business, and let every one that please add their opinion freely.

This may mean either that you suppose him younger than I am, or that you suppose him to be younger than suppose him to be.

Parmenio had served with great fidelity, Philip, the father of Alexander, as well as himself, for whom he first opened the way into Asia.

Here we are apt to suppose the word himself refers to Parmenio, and means that he had not only served Philip, but he had served himself at the same time. This however is not the meaning of the passage. If we arrange it thus, the meaning will appear: Parmenio had not only served Philip the father of Alexander with great fidelity, but he had served Alexander himself, and was the first that opened the way for him into Asia.

Belisarius was general of all the forces under the emperor Justinian the First, a man of rare valour.

Was he a man of rare valour? The context indicates we should suppose from the arrangement of the words; but this is not the case, for it was Belisarius. The sentence should have read thus: "Belisarius, a man of rare valour, was general of all the forces under the emperor Justinian the First."

Lisias promised to his father never to abandon his friends.

Which way did his own friends or his father's when Lisias promised never to abandon? If his own, it should be, Lisias promised and said to his father, I will never abandon my friends. If his father's, it should be, Lisias promised and said to his father, I will never abandon your friends.

MISCELLANEOUS OBSERVATIONS

Additional Remarks under the 4th Rule of Syntax.

1. When and is understood, the verb must be plural; as, Wisdom, happiness, (and) virtue, dwell with the golden mediocrity.

Some think, that when two singular nouns, coupled with and, are nearly the same in meaning, the verb may be singular; as, Tranquillity and peace dwells there. Ignorance and negligence has produced this effect. This, however, is improper; for tranquillity and peace are two nouns or names, and two make a plural; therefore the verb should be plural.

2. Two or more singular nouns coupled with and, require a verb in the singular number, when they denote only one person or thing; as, That able scholar and orator has been eminently useful.

3. Many writers use a plural noun after the second of two numerical adjectives; thus, The first and second pages are torn. This I think improper: it should rather be, the first and second page. So, the first page and the second page are torn: or, perhaps; because independently of and, they are both in a torn state. — Generations, how and seed are singular in Exodus xx. 5. Matt. xx. 5. Acts xii. 10.

And and Not.

4. When not is joined to and, the negative clause forms a parenthesis, and does not affect the construction of the other clause or clauses; therefore the verb in the following and similar sentences should be singular. Consume piety and not great riches, make a death-bed easy; I

MISCELLANEOUS OBSERVATIONS.

Genuine piety makes a death-bed easy, and great riches do not make it easy. Her prudence, not her possessions, renders her an object of desire.

Every, And.

5. When the nouns coupled with and are qualified by the distributive Every, the verb should be singular; as, Every man and woman was astonished at her fortitude. Every boy and girl was taught to read.—See rule 27th.

With and And.

6. When a singular noun has a clause joined to it by with, it is often difficult to determine whether the verb should be singular or plural, especially as our most reputable authors use sometimes the one and sometimes the other; for example, some would say, My uncle, with his son, was in town yesterday. Others would say, My uncle, with his son, were in town yesterday.

If we take the sense for our guide, and nothing else can guide us in a case of this kind, it is evident that the verb should be plural; for both uncle and son are the joint subjects of our affirmation, and declared to be both in the same state.

When we perceive from the sense, that the noun before With is exclusively the real subject, then the verb should be singular; thus, Christ, with his three chosen disciples, was transfigured on the mount. Here the verb is singular, because we know that none but Christ was transfigured; the disciples were not joint associates with him; they were mere spectators. There seems to be an ellipsis in such sentences as this, which, if sup plied in the present would run thus: Christ (who was attended) with his three chosen disciples, was transfigured on the mount.

Mr. Murray, however, thinks that the verb should be singular in the following and similar sentences. "Prosperity, with humility, renders its possessors truly amiable." "The side A, with the sides B and C, composes the triangle." In my opinion, on the contrary, the verb should be plural. For, in the first sentence it is not asserted that prosperity alone renders its possessor truly amiable, but prosperity and humility wanted, and co-operating to produce an effect in their joint state, which they were incapable of achieving in their individual capacity.

If true, as Mr. Murray says, that "the side A" in the second sentence is the true nominative to the verb, then it follows, of course, that the two sides B and C have no agency or no share in forming the triangle, and consequently that the side A alone composes the triangle. It is obvious, however, that one side cannot form a triangle or three-sided figure, and that the sides B and C are as much concerned in forming the triangle as the side A, and therefore the verb should be plural.

Upon the whole, we may venture to give the two following general rules:

1. That whenever the noun or pronoun after With exists, acts or suffers jointly with the singular nominative before it, the verb should be plural; as, "She with her sisters are well." "His papers, with its contents, were abstracted from his pocket." "The general with his men were taken prisoners." In these sentences the verb is plural, because the words after. With are as much the subject of discourse as the words before it,—her sisters were well as well as she; the contents as well as the purse were abstracted; and the men, as well as the general were taken prisoners. If, in the first example, we say—is well, then the meaning will be, she is well when in company with her sisters; and the idea that her sisters are well, will be entirely excluded.

2. When the noun after with is a mere involuntary or inanimate instrument, the verb should be singular; as, The captain with his men catches poor Africans and sells them for slaves. The Squire with his hounds kills a fox. Here the verb is singular, because the men and hounds are not joint agents with the Captain and Squire; they are as much the mere instruments in their hands as the gun and pen in the hands of He and She in the following sentence: He with his gun shoots a hare. She with her pen writes a letter.

Of the Articles, with several Adjectives.

A or the is prefixed only to the first of several adjectives qualifying one noun; as, a meek and holy man: but the articles should be repeated before each adjective when each adjective relates to a generic word applicable to every one of the adjectives. For example, "The black and white cows were sold yesterday; the red will be sold to-morrow."

Here cows is the generic word, applicable to each of the adjectives, black, white, and red, but for want of the before white, we are led to suppose that the black and white cows mean only one cow, which are speckled with spots of black and white; and if this is our meaning, the sentence is right; but if we mean two different sorts, the one all black, and the other all white, we should insert the article before both, and say, The black and the white cows, i. e. The black cows and the white cows were sold.

Some think this distinction of little importance; and it is really seldom attended to even by good writers; but in some cases it is necessary; although in others there cannot, from the nature of the thing, be any mistake. In the following sentence, for instance, the repetition of the before horned is not necessary, although it would be proper: "The bald and horned cows were sold last week." Here there can be no mistake: two sorts were sold; for a cow cannot be bald and horned too.

The same remark may be made respecting the Demonstrative pronouns, that has been made respecting the articles; as, "That great and good man," means only one man: but that great and that good man, would mean two men; the one a great man, the other a good.

They—Those.

They stands for a noun already introduced, and should never be used till the noun be mentioned. Those, on the contrary, points out a noun not previously introduced, but generally understood. It is improper therefore to say, They who tell lies are never esteemed. They that are truly good must be happy. We should say, Those who tell lies, and those that are truly good; because we are pointing out a particular class of persons, and not referring to nouns previously introduced. A noun when not expressed after this, that, these, and those, is always understood.

MISCELLANEOUS OBSERVATIONS.

Another—One—Every.

Another corresponds to one; but not to some nor to every; thus, "Handed down from every writer of verses to another," should be, From one writer of verses to another. "At some hour or another," should be, at some hour or other."

One is often used in familiar phrases (like on in French) for us or any one of us indifferently; Thus, One is often more influenced by example than by precept. The verb and pronoun with which one agrees should be singular. Thus, If one take a wrong method at first, it will lead them astray: should be, It will lead one astray, or, It will lead him astray.

That and Those.

It is improper to apply that and those to things present or just mentioned. Thus, "They cannot be separated from the subject which follows; and for that reason," &c. should be, And for this reason, &c. "Those sentences which we have at present before us: should be, These or The sentences which we have, &c.

As Follows, as Appears.

As is often used as a personal or relative pronoun, and in both numbers; and in these cases it should be construed as a pronoun; as, "His words were as follow," that is, His words were those which follow. Here as is plural, because words, its antecedent, is plural. His description was as follow. Here as is singular, because description, its antecedent, is singular: that is, The description was this which follows.

MISCELLANEOUS OBSERVATIONS.

This account of as, though in unison with Dr. Crombie's, is at variance with that of Dr. Campbell and Mr. Murray. They explain the following sentences thus: "The arguments advanced were nearly as follows;" "The positions were as appears incontrovertible." That is, say they, "as it follows," "as it appears." What it? The thing. What thing?—It, or thing, cannot relate to arguments, for arguments is plural, and must have a plural pronoun and verb. Take the ordinary method of finding out the nominative to a verb, by asking a question with the verb, and the true nominative will be the answer: Thus, What follows? and the answer is, The arguments follow. It must be obvious, then, that it cannot be substituted for arguments, and that as is equal to those which, and that the verb is not impersonal but the third person plural, agreeing with its nominative which, the last half of as. In the second example, as appears is a mere parenthesis, and does not relate to positions at all; but still the as is a pronoun. Thus, The positions, it appears, were incontrovertible.

They say, however, if we use such before as, the verb is no longer impersonal, but agrees with its nominative in the plural number; as, "The arguments advanced were nearly such as follow." "The positions were such as appear incontrovertible." This is, if possible, a greater mistake than the former; for what has such to do with the following verb? Such means of that kind, and expresses the quality of the noun repeated, but it has nothing to do with the verb at all. Therefore the construction must be the same with such that it is with as, with this difference in meaning, that when such as is used, we mean of that kind which follows.

When we say, "His arguments are as follows" we mean those arguments which follow are verbatim the very same that he used; but when we say, "His arguments were such as follow," we convey the idea, that the arguments which follow are not the very same that he used; but that they are only of the same nature or kind.

Their position, however, that the verb should be plural, can be made out by a circumlocution, thus: "His arguments were nearly such arguments as those which follow are:" but this very solution would show the error into which they have fallen in such phrases as, as follows, as appears, for they will not admit of similar solutions. We cannot say, "His arguments are nearly as the arguments which follows is."

This means, &c.

The word means in the singular number, and the phrases, By this means, By that means, are used by our best and most correct writers, when they denote instrumentality; as, By means of death, &c. By that means he preserves his superiority. Addison.

Good writers use the noun mean in the singular number, only to denote mediocrity, middle state, &c. is. This is a mean between the two extremes.

This means and that means should be used only when they refer to what is singular; these means,

Some writers have used a plural verb where the antecedent is singular. See Foster, Nov. 25, 1841.—Sweet, No. 513. Dr. Campbell, in the Philosophy of Education, vol. 2, p. 7, has written the singular of these phrases.

MISCELLANEOUS OBSERVATIONS.

and those means, when they respect plurals; as, He lived temperately, and by this means preserved his health. The scholars were attentive, industrious, and obedient to their tutors; and by these means acquired knowledge.

Amends.

Amends is used in the same manner as means; as, Peace of mind is an honourable amends for the sacrifices of interest. In return, he received the thanks of his employers, and the present of a large estate: these were ample amends for all his labours.

Into, In.

Into is used after a verb of motion; and in, when motion or rest in a place is signified; as, They cast him into a pit; I walk in the park.

So and Such.

When we refer to the species or nature of a thing, the word such is properly applied; as, Such a temper is seldom found; but when degree is signified, we use the word so; as, So bad a temper is seldom found.

Disappointed of, Disappointed in.

We are disappointed of a thing, when we do not get it, and disappointed in it, when we have it, and find that it does not answer our expectations; as, We are often disappointed in things, which before possession, promised much enjoyment. I have frequently desired their company, but have hitherto been disappointed of that pleasure.

MISCELLANEOUS OBSERVATIONS.

Taste of, and Taste for.

A taste of a thing, implies actual enjoyment of it; but a taste for it, implies only a capacity for enjoyment; as, When we have had a true taste of the pleasures of virtue, we can have no relish for those of vice. He had a taste for such studies, and pursued them earnestly.

The Nominative and the Verb.

When the nominative case has no personal tense of a verb, but is put before a participle, independent of the rest of the sentence, it is called the case absolute; as, Spain being lost, all virtue is lost; him destroyed; him descending; him only excepted; — him in all these places should be as.

Every verb, except in the infinitive mood or the participle, ought to have a nominative case, either expressed or implied; as, Arise, let us go hence; that is, Arise ye.

Every nominative case should belong to some verb either expressed or implied; as, To whom thus Adam, i. e. spoke. In the following sentence, the word virtue is left by itself, without any verb with which it might agree. "Virtue, however it may be neglected for a time, men are so constituted, as ultimately to acknowledge and respect genuine merit;" It should be, However much virtue may be neglected, &c. The sentence may be made more elegant by altering the arrangement of the words; thus, Such is the constitution of men, that virtue, however much it may be neglected for a time, will ultimately be acknowledged and respected. — See Rule XIX.

MISCELLANEOUS OBSERVATIONS.

The nominative is commonly placed before the verb; but it is sometimes put after it, or between the auxiliary and the verb.—See Parsing, No. 6.

Them is sometimes improperly used instead of these or those; as, Give me them books, for those books, or these books.

What is sometimes improperly used for that; as They will never believe but what I have been to blame; it should be, But that I have been, &c.

Which is often improperly used for that; thus, After which time, should be, After that time.

Which is applied to collective nouns composed of men; as, The court of Spain which; the company which, &c.

Which, and not who, should be used after the name of a person used merely as a word; as, The court of Queen Elizabeth, who was but another name for prudence and economy; it should be, which was but another, or whose name was, &c.

It is and it was are often used in plural construction; as, It is they that are the real authors. It was the heretics that first began to rail, &c.—They are the real authors. The heretics first began, &c. would perhaps be more elegant.

The neuter pronoun it, is frequently joined to a noun or pronoun of the masculine or feminine gender; as, It was he; It was she.

Adjectives, in many cases, should not be separated from their nouns, even by words which modify their meaning; thus, A large enough number; A distinct enough manner; should be, A number large enough; A manner distinct enough. The adjective is frequently placed after the noun which it qualifies; as, Goodness distinct; Alexander the great

MISCELLANEOUS OBSERVATIONS.

All is sometimes emphatically put after a number of particulars comprehended under it; as, Ambition, interest, honour, all (these) concurred.

Never generally precedes the verb; as, I never saw him; but when an auxiliary is used, never may be placed either between it and the verb, or before both; as, He was never seen, or, he never was seen.

The present participle is frequently introduced without any obvious reference to any noun or pronoun; as, Generally speaking, he behaves well. Granting his story to be true, &c. A preposition is perhaps understood; as, While speaking; While granting.

Sometimes a neuter verb governs an objective when the noun is of the same import with the verb; thus, To dream's detest to reap a race. Sometimes the noun after a neuter verb is governed by a preposition understood; as, He lay six hours in bed, i. e. Being six hours.

The same verbs are sometimes used as actives, and sometimes as neuters, according to the sense; thus, Think in the phrase "Think on me," is a neuter verb; but it is active in the phrase "Charity thinketh no evil."

It is improper to change the form of the second and third person singular of the auxiliaries in the imperfect tense of the subjunctive mood; thus, If thou hast done thy duty. Unless he had brought money. If thou had studied more diligently. Unless thou shalt go to-day. If thou wilt grant my request. &c. should be, If thou hast done thy duty. Unless he had brought. If thou hadst studied. Unless thou shalt go, &c.

MISCELLANEOUS OBSERVATIONS.

It is improper to vary the second person singular in the past subjunctive, (except the verb to be;) thus, If thou came not in time, &c. If thou didst not submit, &c. should be, If thou camest not in time: If thou didst not submit.

The following phrases, selected from the Scriptures, are strictly grammatical:

If thou knewest the gift. If thou didst receive it. If thou hadst known. If thou wilt save Israel. Though he hath escaped the sea. That thou mayst be feared.

We also properly say, If thou mayst, mightst, couldst, wouldst, or shouldst love.

OF CAPITALS.

1. The first word of every book, or any other piece of writing, must begin with a capital letter.
2. The first word after a period, and the answer to a question, must begin, &c.
3. Proper names, that is, names of persons, places, ships, &c.
4. The pronoun I, and the interjection O, are written in capitals.
5. The first word of every line in poetry.
6. The appellations of the Deity; as, God, Most High, &c.
7. Adjectives derived from the proper names of persons; as, Grecian, Roman, English, &c.
8. The first word of a quotation, introduced after a colon; as, Always remember this ancient maxim: "Know thyself."
9. Common nouns when personified; as, Careful gentle Spring.

DIRECTIONS FOR SUPERSCRPTIONS AND FORMS OF ADDRESS TO PERSONS OF EVERY RANK.

To the King's Most Excellent Majesty.—Sire, or May it please your Majesty.—Conclude a petition or speech with, Your Majesty's most Loyal and Dutiful Subject

To the Queen's Most Excellent Majesty.—Madam, or May it please your Majesty.

To his Royal Highness, Frederick, Duke of York.—May it please your Royal Highness.

To his Royal Highness the Duke of Kent.—May it please your Royal Highness.

In the same manner address every other of the Royal Family, male or female.

NOBILITY.—To his Grace the Duke of ———,—My Lord Duke, Your Grace, or May it please your Grace.

To the Most Noble the Marquis of ———,—My Lord Marquis, Your Lordship.

To the Right Honourable Baron ———,—My Lord, May it please your Lordship.

The wives of Nobleman have the same titles with their husbands, thus;

To the Right Honourable Lady Ann Rose.—My Lady, May it please your Ladyship.

The titles of Lord and Right Honourable are given to all the sons of Dukes and Marquises, and to the eldest sons of Bishops; and the title of Lady and Right Honourable to all their daughters. The younger sons of Bishops are all Honourable and Esquires.

^a The superscription, or what is put on the outside of a letter, is printed in Roman characters, and begins with To. The name of the person and either in beginning a letter, a petition, or speech, is always printed in Italics, and is necessary to give the superscription. The Names are to be filled up with the real names and date.

FORMS OF ADDRESS.

Right Honourable is due to Earls, Viscounts and Barons, and to all the members of Her Majesty's Most Honourable Privy Council—To the Lord Mayor of London, York & Dublin and to the Lord Provost of Edinburgh during the time they are in office—To the Speaker of the House of Commons—To the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury, Admiralty, Trade and Plantations, &c.

The House of Peers is addressed thus: To the Right Honourable the Lords Spiritual and Temporal of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, in Parliament assembled. My Lords, please your Lordships.

The House of Commons is addressed thus: To the Honourable the Knights, Citizens and Burgesses of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, in Parliament assembled. Gentlemen, May it please your Honours

The sons of Viscounts and Barons are styled Honourable and Esquires; and their daughters have their letters addressed thus: To the Honourable Miss or Mrs. D. B.

The Queen's commission confers the title of Honourable on any gentleman in a place of honour or trust; such as, The Commissioners of Excise, Her Majesty's Customs, Board of Control, &c.—Admirals of the Navy—Generals, Lieutenant-Generals, and Colonels in the Army.

All Noblemen, or men of title in the army and navy, use their title by right, such as Honourable, before their title of rank, such as Captain, &c. thus, Honourable Captain James James, of the ——. Sir, Your Honour

Honourable is due also to the Court of Directors of the East India Company—The Governors and Deputy Governors of the Bank of England.

The title Excellency is given to all Ambassadors, Plenipotentiaries, Governors in foreign countries, to the Lord Lieutenant, and to the Lords Justices of the Kingdom of Ireland—Address each thus:

To His Excellency Sir _____, Bart. Her Britannic Majesty's Envoy Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary to the Court of Rome. Your Excellency, May it please your Excellency.

The Privy Counsellors, taken collectively, are styled the Majesty's Most Honourable Privy Council.

FORMS OF ADDRESS.

The title Right Worshipful is given to the Sheriffs, Aldermen, and Recorder of London; and Worshipful to the Aldermen and Recorders of other Corporations, and to Justices of the Peace in England. — Sir, Your Worship The Clergy are all styled Reverend, except the Archbishop and Bishops, who have something additional; thus To his Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury, or To the Most Reverend Father in God, Charles, Lord Archbishop of Canterbury. — My Lord, Your Grace.
To the Right Reverend Father in God, John, Lord Bishop of ———. — My Lord, Your Lordship.
To the very Rev. Dr. A. B., Dean of ———. Sir. To the Rev. Mr. Desk; or to the Rev. John Desk.*
The general address to clergymen is Sir, and when written to, Reverend Sir. Deans and Archdeacons are usually styled Very Reverend, and called Mr. Dean, Mr. Archdeacon.
Address the Principal of the University of Edinburgh thus: To the Very Rev. Dr. B. Principal of the University of Edinburgh. — Doctor; when written to, Very Rev Doctor. The other Professors thus: To Dr. D. B. Professor of Logic in the University of E. — Doctor. If a Chayman, To the Rev. Dr. J. M. Professor of, &c. — Reverend Doctor.
Those who are not Drs. are styled Esq. but not Mr. thus: To J. P. Esq. Professor of Humanity in the University of Edinburgh. — Sir. If he has a literary title, it may be added: thus To J. P. Esq. A. M. Professor of Registrate, Barrister at Law, or Advocate, and Member of Parliament, viz. of the House of Commons. (these last have M. P. after Esq.) and all gentlemen in distinguished circumstances, are styled Esq. and their wives Ms.

* It is usual to address a man as Esq. even though he has a title, if he is not a peer or knight. In any address it is best to use the highest title which he bears, and never to use Esq. unless you are sure he has no other title. If you are not sure, it is better to use Esq. than to use a title which he does not bear. In short, Mr. is used by all who are not peers, knights, or gentlemen in distinguished circumstances.

It is also usual to address a woman as Esq. if she has a title, if she is not a peeress or knightess. In any address it is best to use the highest title which she bears, and never to use Esq. unless you are sure she has no other title. If you are not sure, it is better to use Esq. than to use a title which she does not bear. In short, Mrs. is used by all who are not peeresses, knightesses, or ladies in distinguished circumstances.

The following are the usual forms of address in the House of Commons, but they are generally used in addressing Esqs. they are necessary.

PUNCTUATION.

PUNCTUATION is the art of pointing written composition in such a manner as may naturally lead to its proper meaning, construction, and delivery.

OF THE COMMA.

RULE I.

A simple sentence in general requires only a full stop at the end; as, True politeness has its seat in the heart.

RULE II.

The simple members of a compound sentence are separated by a comma; as, Crafty men contemn studies, simple men admire them, and wise men use them. He studies diligently, and makes great progress.

RULE III.

The persons in a direct address are separated from the rest of the sentence by commas; as, My son, give me thine heart. Colonel, your most obedient. I thank you, sir. I am obliged to you, my friends, for your kindness.

RULE IV.

Two words of the same part of speech, whether nouns, adjectives, verbs, participles, or adverbs, do not admit of a comma between them, when coupled with a conjunction; as, James and John are good. She is wise and virtuous. Religion expands and elevates the mind. By being admired and flattered, she became vain. Cicero spoke forcibly and fluently. When the conjunction is suppressed, a comma is inserted in its place; as, He was a plain, honest man.

OF THE COMMA.

RULE V.

Three or more nouns, adjectives, verbs, participles, or adverbs, are separated by commas; as, the sun, the moon, and the stars, are the glory of nature.

When words follow in pairs, there is a comma between each pair; as, Truth is fair and artless, simple and sincere, uniform and constant.

RULE VI.

All phrases or explanatory sentences, whether in the beginning, middle, or end of a simple sentence, are separated from it by commas; as, To confess the truth, I was in fault. His father dying, he succeeded to the estate. The king, approving the plan, put it into execution. Paul, the apostle of the Gentiles, was eminent for his zeal and knowledge. Victoria, queen of Great Britain, I have seen the emperor, as he was called. In short, he was a great man.

RULE VII.

The verb to be, followed by an adjective, or an infinitive with adjuncts, is generally preceded by a comma; as, To be diligently employed in the performance of real duty, is honourable. One of the noblest of the Christian virtues, is to love our enemies.

RULE VIII.

A comma is used between the two parts of a sentence that has its natural order inverted; as, Him that is weak in the faith, receive ye.

* Some insert a comma both before and after the verb to be when it is near the middle of a long sentence, because the pronunciation requires it; but that is a bad reason; for phrases and points are often at variance

OF THE COMMA.

RULE IX.

Any remarkable expression resembling a quotation or a command, is preceded by a comma; as, There is much truth in the proverb, Without pains no gains. I say unto all, Watch.

RULE X.

Relative pronouns admit of a comma before them in some cases, and in some not.

When several words come between the relative and its antecedent, a comma is inserted; but not in other cases; as, There is no charm in the female sex which can supply the place of virtue. It is labour only which gives the relish to pleasure. The first beauty of style is propriety, without which all ornament is puerile and superfluous. It is barbarous to injure those from whom we have received a kindness.

RULE XI.

A comma is often inserted where a verb is understood, and particularly before not, but, and though, in such cases as the following; as, John has acquired much knowledge; his brother, (has acquired) little. A man ought to obey reason, not appetite. He was a great poet, but a bad man. The sun is up, though he is not visible.

A comma is sometimes inserted between the two members of a long sentence connected by comparatives; as, Better is little with the fear of the Lord, than great treasure and trouble therewith. As thy days, so shall thy strength be.

* That is, when the relative clause is merely explanatory, the relative is preceded by a comma.

OF THE COMMA.

RULE XII.

It has been stated in Rule VI. that explanatory words and phrases, such as, perfectly; indeed, doubtless, formerly, in fine, &c. should be separated from the context by a comma.

Many adverbs, however, and even phrases, when they are considered of little importance, should not be separated from the rest of the sentence by commas; as, be ye therefore perfect. Peradventure ten shall be found there. All things indeed are pure. Doubtless thou art our father. They were formerly very studious. He was at last convinced of his error. Be not ye therefore partakers with them. Nevertheless the poor man's wisdom is despised. Anger is in a manner like madness. At length some pity warmed the master's breast.

These twelve rules respecting the position of the comma, include every thing, it is presumed, to be found in the more numerous rules of larger volumes. But it is impossible to make them perfect. For, "in many instances the employment or omission of a comma, depends upon the length or the shortness of a clause, the presence or absence of adjuncts; the importance or non-importance of the sentiment. Indeed, with respect to punctuation, the practice of the best writers is extremely arbitrary; many omitting some of the usual commas when no error in sense or in construction, is likely to arise from the omission. Good sense and attentive observation are more likely to regulate this subject than any mechanical directions."

The best general rule is, to point in such a manner as to make the sense evident.

NOTE. No exercises have been subjoined to the Rules on Punctuation; because none can be given equal to those the pupil can practise for himself. After he has learned the rules, let him transcribe a page from any good author, omitting the points and capitals; and then, having received his transcript, and restored the capitals, let him compare his own punctuation with the author's.

OF THE SEMICOLON.

The semicolon is used to separate two members of a sentence less dependent on each other than those separated by the comma.

Sometimes the two members have a mutual dependence on one another, both in sense and syntax; sometimes the preceding member makes complete sense of itself, and only the following one is dependent; and sometimes both seem to be independent.

EXAMPLES.

As coals are to burning coals, and wood to fire; so is a contentious man to kindle strife. As a roaring lion and a ranging bear; so is a wicked ruler over the poor people. Mercy and truth preserve the king; and his throne is upheld by mercy. He that loveth pleasure shall be a poor man; he that loveth wine and oil shall not be rich. Philosophy asserts, that Nature is unlimited in her operations; that she has inexhaustible stores in reserve; that knowledge will always be progressive; and that all future generations will continue to make discoveries, of which we have not the least idea.

The semicolon is sometimes employed to separate simple members in which even no commas occur; thus, The pride of wealth is contemptible; the pride of learning is pitiable; the pride of dignity is ridiculous; and the pride of bigotry is insupportable.

In every one of these members the construction and sense are complete, and a period might have been used instead of the semicolon; which is pointed merely because the sentences are short and form a climax.

OF THE COLON.

The colon is used when the preceding part of the sentence is complete in sense and construction; and the following part is some remark naturally arising from it, and depending on it in sense though not in construction; as, Study is the light of thinking: no study is more profitable than that of our duties.

A colon is generally used before an example or illustration; as, The Scriptures give us an admirable representation of the Deity in these words: God is love. He was often heard to say, I have done with the world, and I am willing to leave it.

A colon is generally used where the sense is complete in the first clause, and the next begins with a conjunction understood; as, Do not flatter yourselves with the hope of perfect happiness: there is no such thing in the world. Had the conjunction for, been expressed, a semicolon would have been used; thus, Do not flatter yourselves with the hope of perfect happiness; for there is no such thing in the world.

The colon is generally used when the conjunction is understood; and the semicolon, when the conjunction is expressed.

NOTE. This observation has not always been attended to in pointing the Bible and some parts of the poetry; as, a colon is often used merely to divide a verse into two parts, to suit a particular manner of church music called chanting; as, "I will praise thee, O Lord, in all thy works, as thy name is such a place as this or enough." In the printing of the Bible, the colon must be used like a comma, or even like a comma, according to the sense.

OF THE PERIOD.

When a sentence is complete in construction and sense, it is marked with a period; as, Jesus wept.

A period is sometimes admitted between sentences connected with such words as but, and, for, therefore, hence, &c. Example: And he arose and came to his father. But when he was yet a great way off, &c.

All abbreviations end with a period; as, A. D.

OF OTHER CHARACTERS USED IN COMPOSITION.

Interrogation (?) is used when a question is asked.

Admiration (!) or Exclamation, is used to express any sudden emotion of the mind.

Parenthesis () is used to enclose some necessary remark in the body of another sentence; commas are now used instead of parentheses.

Apostrophe (') is used in place of a letter left out; as, lov'd for loved.

Caret (^) is used to show that some word is either omitted or interlined.

Eggs (-) is used at the end of a line, to show that the rest of the word is at the beginning of the next line. It also connects compound words; as, Ten-pes.

Section (§) is used to divide a discourse or chapter into portions.

Paragraph (¶) is used to denote the beginning of a new subject.

Quotation [] or Brackets, are used to enclose a word or sentence which is to be explained in a note, or the explanation itself, or to correct a mistake; or supply some deficiency.

Quotation (") is used to show that a passage is quoted in the author's words.

Index (☞) is used to point out any thing remarkable.

Brace { } is used to connect words which have one common term, or three rhymes in poetry, having the same rhyme, called a triple.

Ellipsis (⋯) is used when some letters are omitted; as, K-g for King.

Macron (—) is used to denote a short syllable; the grave (`) a long.

Acute (´) is used to denote a short vowel or syllable, and the dash (-) a long.

Diacritical (¨) is used to denote a high tone in vocal syllables; as, áccid.

Subscript () is used to denote a low tone in vocal syllables; as, áccid.

Superscript () is used to denote a high tone in vocal syllables; as, áccid.

PROSODY.

Prosody is that part of Grammar which teaches the true pronunciation of words; comprising Accent, Quantity, Emphasis, Pause and Tone, and the measure of Verses.

Accent is the laying of a greater force on one syllable of a word than on another; as, Surmount.

The quantity of a syllable is the time which is occupied in pronouncing it. Quantity is either long or short; as, con-sume.

Emphasis is a remarkable stress laid upon certain words in a sentence, to distinguish them from the rest, by making the meaning more apparent; as, Apply yourself more to acquire knowledge than to shew it.*

A pause is either a total cessation or a short suspension of the voice, during a perceptible space of time; as, Reading—makes a full-man; conference—a ready-man; and writing—an exact-man.

Tone is a particular modulation or inflection of the voice, suited to the sense; as, How bright these glorious spirits shine!†

VERSIFICATION.

Prose is language not restrained to harmonic sounds, or to a set number of syllables.

Verses or Poetry is language restrained to a certain number of long and short syllables in every line.

Verses is of two kinds; namely, Rhyme and Blank

* Emphasis should be made rather by suspending the voice a little on the emphatic word, than by striking it very forcibly, which is disagreeable to a good ear. A very short pause before it would render it almost ungrammatical; as, Reading makes a full-man.

† Accent and quantity respect the pronunciation of words, and pause and tone the meaning of the sentence; while tone refers to the feelings of the speaker.

PROSE.

verse. If the last syllable of every two lines has the same sound, it is called rhyme; but when this is not the case, it is called blank verse.

Feet are the parts into which a verse is divided to see whether it has a certain number of syllables or not.

Scanning is the measuring or dividing of a verse into the several feet of which it is composed.

All feet consist either of two or three syllables, and are reducible to eight kinds; four of two syllables, and four of three, as follow:

DISYLLABLES.

- A trochee; as, lovely;
- An iambus; became.
- A spondee; vain man.
- A pyrrhic; on's (bank).

TRISYLLABLES.

- A dactyle; as, probably.
- An amphibract; distants.
- An anapaest; unhappy.
- A tribract; (com)fortably.

The feet in most common use are Iambic, Trochaic, and Anapaestic.

IAMBIC MEASURE

Iambic measure is adapted to serious subjects, and comprises verses of several kinds; such as,

1. Of four syllables, or two feet; as,

With ray-iah'd ears,
The mōn-ārch hears.

It sometimes has an additional short syllable, making what is called a double ending; as,

Open's a double
Road.

It is called from the resemblance to the movement of the tongue in walking, as the first of the feet is walking. In every two lines are called a couplet, and sometimes with the same name a triplet. The above examples show that a trochee consists of a long and a short syllable, an iambus of a short and a long, and a spondee every second syllable is called a long syllable, and the first of the second is pronounced to show the sound of the word. It is sometimes called a long syllable, and a short syllable, by long then a word is called a long syllable.

3. Of three iambs, or six syllables; as, 10 5

Alôft - in áw - f'íl státe,
Thé gôd - líke hó - ró sít.

Oûr héarts - no lóng - ár lán - guish. An additional syllable

3. Of eight syllables, or four iambic feet; as,

And máy - át lást - my wéa - ry áge,
Find óút - thís péace - ful hér - mítté

4. Often syllables, or five feet; called hexameter, heroic, or tragic verses; as,

Thé stár - shall fáde - áway - thé sún - hímsélf
Grôw úp - with áge - and ná - túre sínk - in yéars

Sometimes the last line of a couplet is stretched out to twelve syllables, or six feet, and then it is called an Alexandrine verse; as,

Fór thés - thé lánd - in frá - gránt flów'rs - is dréet;
Fór thés - thé ó - ceán smiles - and smóóthes - hér wá - vy bréast

5. Of verses containing alternately four and three feet; this is the measure commonly used in psalms and hymns; as,

Lét slínts - bélow - with swéét - áccórd.
Uníte - with thóse - ábove,
In sé - lémn - hýs - to práise - thír kíng,
And sít - his dý - íng líve.

37 Verses of this kind were commonly written in two lines, each containing fourteen syllables.

TROCHAIC MEASURE.

This measure is quick and lively, and comprises verses,

1. Some of one trochee and a long syllable, and some of two trochees; as,

Támúlt - éléas.
Slak - at - pléas

On thís - méttéain,
By á - réttéain.

2. Of two feet or two trochees with an additional long syllable; as,

In the - days of - - old,
Stories - plainly - - told.

3. Of three trochees, or three and an additional long syllable; as,

When our - hearts are - mourning.
Lovely - lasting - peace of - - mind.
Sweet - as - light of - human - - kind.

4. Of four trochees, or eight syllables; as,

Now the - dreadful - thunders - roaring!

5. Of six trochees, or twelve syllables; as,

On a - moun-tain, - stretch'd be - neath a - hoary - wil-dow,
Lay a - shep-herd - swain, and - view'd the - roaring - billow.

ANAPAESTIC MEASURE.

1. Of two anapaests, or two and an unaccented syllable; as,

Bât his cour - age 'gan fail,
For nô arts - could avail.
Or, Then his cour - age 'gan fail - - him,
For no arts - could avail - - him.

2. Of three anapaests, or nine syllables; as,

O ye woods - spread your branch - es apace,
To your deep - est recess - in I fly;
I would hide - with the beams - of the chace,
I would van - ish from ev - ery eye.

Sometimes a syllable is retrenched from the first foot; as,

Th' deep - woods so cheer - ful had gay,
Whose rocks - never care - lessly lay.

3. Of four anapaests, or twelve syllables; as,

'Tis the voice of the lug-gard; I hear-him complain,
You have wak'd-me too soon, - I must slum-ber again.

Sometimes an additional short syllable is found at the end; as,

In the warm-chick of youth, smiles and rōe-ss, are blending

The preceding are the different kinds of the Principal feet, in their more simple forms; but they are susceptible of numerous variations, by mixing them with one another, and with the Secondary feet, the following lines may serve as an example:— (Syll. Sapa. &c. apply only to the first line.)

Time shakes-the stable-rainy-of throes, &c
Where is-to morrow? - In faith - or world:
She all night long - her sea - from day - chat sing.
Inn - mēribl - hē'ra - th' Almight - ty's throes.
That on - weak wings - from far - pūdes - your flight

FIGURES OF SPEECH.

A Figure of Speech is a mode of speaking which a word or sentence is to be understood in a sense different from its most common and literal meaning. The principal Figures of Speech are

Personification,
Simile, Metaphor, Allegory,
Hē-pēr-hō-lé,
Irony, Metonymy,

Sy-nec-do-ché,
Antithesis, Climax, Exclamation,
Interrogation, Paraleipsis, Apostrophé.

* Imagery, tropes, and figures may be distinguished principles of poetry, because they are the chief ornaments of it, and the chief means of its beauty. They are also the chief means of its variety, and its improvement. They are also the chief means of its diversity, and its improvement. They are also the chief means of its variety, and its improvement.

Prosopopœia, or personification, is that figure of speech by which we attribute life and action to inanimate objects; as, The sea saw it and fled.

A simile expresses the resemblance that one object bears to another; as, He shall be like a tree planted by the rivers of water.

A metaphor is a simile without the sign (like or as, &c.) of comparison; as, He shall be a tree planted by, &c.

An allegory is a continuation of several metaphors, so connected in sense as to form a kind of parable or fable; thus, the people of Israel are represented under the image of a vine: Thou hast brought a vine out of Egypt, &c. Psalm lxxx. 8 to 17

An hyperbole is a figure that represents things as greater or less, better or worse, than they really are: as, when David says of Saul and Jonathan, They were swifter than eagles, they were stronger than lions.

Irony is a figure by which we mean quite the contrary of what we say; as, When Elijah said to the worshippers of Baal, Cry aloud, for he is a god, &c.

A metonymy is a figure by which we put the cause for the effect, or the effect for the cause; as, when we say, He reads Milton; we mean Milton's works. Grey hairs should be respected, i. e. old age.

Synecdoche is the putting of a part for the whole, or the whole for a part, a definite number for an indefinite, &c. as the waves for the sea, the hand for the person, and ten thousand for any great number. This figure is nearly allied to metonymy.

Antithesis, or contrast, is a figure by which different or contrary objects are contrasted to make them show one another to advantage; thus, Solomon contrasts the timidity of the wicked with the courage of the righteous, when he says, The wicked flee when no man pursueth, but the righteous are bold as a lion.

Climax is the heightening of all the circumstances of an object or action, which we wish to place in a strong light; as, Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? Shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword? Nay, &c.—See also Rom. viii. 38, 39.

Exclamation is a figure that is used to express some strong emotion of the mind; as, Oh the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and the knowledge of God!

Interrogation is a figure by which we express the emotion of our mind, and enliven our discourse by proposing questions; thus, Hath the Lord said it? and shall he not do it? Hath he spoken it? and shall he not make it good?

Paralepsis, or omission, is a figure by which the speaker pretends to conceal what he is really declaring and strongly enforcing; as, Horatius was once a very promising young gentleman, but in process of time he became so addicted to gaming, not to mention his drunkenness and debauchery, that he soon exhausted his estate and ruined his constitution.

Apostrophe is a turning off from the subject to address some other person or thing; as, Death is swallowed up in victory: O death, where is thy sting?

• Climax, Amplification, Enumeration, or Gradation.

The observations that have to correspond to a question, are to be read, but not committed to memory.

As the following words and phrases, from the French and Latin, frequently occur in English authors, an explanation of them has been inserted here, for the convenience of those who are unacquainted with these languages. Let none, however, imagine, that by doing this I intend to encourage the use of them in English conversation. On the contrary, I disapprove of it, and aver, that to express an idea in a foreign language, which can be expressed with equal perspicuity in our own, is not only pedantic, but highly improper. Such words and phrases, by being frequently used, may, notwithstanding the uncouthness of their sound and appearance, gradually incorporate with our language, and ultimately diminish its original excellences and impair its native beauty.

This preceding Grammar, owing to the uncommon precision and brevity of the Definitions, Rules, and Notes, is not only better adapted to the capacity of children than the generality of those styled Introductory Grammar; but it is so extensively provided with exercises of every sort, that it will entirely supersede the use of Mr. Murray's Young Grammar, and Exercises; for it is a more concise, like his Abridgement, which contains only about seven pages of exercises on bad Grammar. This contains more than sixty. This contains a complete course of Grammar, and supersedes the use of any other book of the kind.

In short, by abridging every subject of minor importance; by omitting discussion on the numerous points about which grammarians differ; by rendering the rules and definitions more perspicuous, and at the same time abridging them more than one-half; by selecting short sentences on bad grammar; by leaving few broken lines, and printing them close together—as some exercises and each rule of syntax are compressed into six options as there are in Mr. Murray's volume of Exercises; so that the use of his Abridgement, his larger Grammar, and that of his Exercises, are completely superseded by this little volume at 1s. 6d.; while at the same time, the learner will acquire as much knowledge of grammar with this in six months, as with all these volumes in seven.

The truth of this, as well as the unspeakable advantage of having the Grammar and Exercises in one volume, teachers will perceive at a glance; but as parents may not so quickly perceive the superior brevity and accuracy of the rules, it may not be improper to assist them a little, by comparing a few of the rules in this with those of Mr. Murray's: thus,

Mr. Murray's Rules.

Corresponding Rules to his.

Rule II.—Two or more nouns, &c., in the singular number, joined together by a copulative conjunction expressed or understood, must have verbs, nouns, and pronouns agreeing with them in the plural number; as, "Socrates and Plato were wise; they were the most eminent philosophers of Greece." "The sun that rolls over our heads, the food that we receive, the rest that we enjoy, daily admonish us of a superior and superintending power."—p. 128.

Rule IV.—Two or more singular nouns, coupled with and, require a verb and pronoun in the plural number; as, James and John are good boys, for they are busy.—p. 82.

* This rule is not only vague, but incorrect; for a means any one; now any copulative conjunction will not combine the agency of two or more into one; none but and will do that.—Mr. M.'s third rule is equally vague.

Mr. Murray's Rule.

It is said, "The conjunction and is used to connect two or more words, phrases, or clauses, and is placed between the words, phrases, or clauses which it connects." In regard to the preceding sentence, I am persuaded, it must be in the plural number; and if I am not mistaken, it is in the plural number. I am not, however, intended to accompany it. There is in many minds a notion that the conjunction and is used to connect two or more words, phrases, or clauses, and is placed between the words, phrases, or clauses which it connects. * The second part of this rule is a restatement of the first. The first says the verb and pronoun may be either of the singular or plural number; the second says No; "Not without regard to the import of the word." &c.
