

Two German Assaults on Verdun Repulsed Lloyd George Loses Favor With the Radicals Hun Reply to U. S. May Come Wednesday

GERMANS WHO FOUGHT AT VERDUN NOW PRISONERS OF WAR

GERMAN SOLDIERS CAPTURED BY FRENCH AROUND VERDUN. THESE PRISONERS ARE ONLY A FEW OF THE GERMAN SOLDIERS WHO HAVE BEEN CAPTURED BY THE FRENCH IN THE GREAT BATTLES THAT HAVE BEEN RAGING AROUND VERDUN. THEY ARE OBVIOUSLY ONLY SECOND OR THIRD LINE TROOPS, AND THE MAJORITY HAVE THE APPEARANCE OF BEING WELL ADVANCED IN YEARS.

FAMOUS MILITARY CRITIC PAYS FINE TRIBUTE TO VALOR OF THE FRENCH IN THE VERDUN FIGHT

Col. Repington of the Times Tells of the Great Fighting Qualities of the Defenders—French Excel in Handling of Heavy Artillery.

By Special Wire to the Courier.
London, April 22.—(New York Herald)—Colonel Repington, the Times' military correspondent, who has just made a trip to the Verdun front, pays a very high tribute to the valor of the French troops and the military judgment of their commanders in the following despatch: "We must render great homage to the stubborn defenders of Poivre Hill, the Mort Homme, Vaux fort and other French positions on the Verdun front for their magnificent fighting through the great Verdun battle. "The French aviators also deserve the highest praise. During my visit I saw many aviators brave the enemy's anti-air craft guns with the greatest intrepidity, but I did not see a single German aviator cross our front. In a single day the French accounted for six German airships without themselves sustaining any loss. "From my personal experience I am of the opinion that the French anti-air craft guns are superior to those of the Germans and it also appears to me that our allies employ this artillery upon more scientific principles. "THE ARTILLERY "General Petain realized the role which artillery was to play in this war after the second month of the conflagration. He rapidly learned to appreciate the value of curtain fire. This marvellous operation of modern artillery is particularly suited to the French genius and to the terribly destructive fire of the famous 'soixante-quinze.' "Nevertheless it is in the employment of heavy artillery that General Petain excels. He has rendered the use of this heavy artillery, extraordinarily 'supple' and the heavy guns have become a battle instrument of marvellous efficacy. General Joffre spoke to me with enthusiasm of the method whereby the French medium calibre guns, such as those of 155mm and 215mm are made to dominate the German guns, which are often heavier and of longer range. "The Germans have engaged all their available troops in this battle and after the arrival of a division withdrawn from the Russian front a few days ago, they now have thirty divisions in the Verdun theatre.

ANGRY WITH MR. LLOYD GEORGE

Accused by His One-Time Friends of Trying to be an Autocrat in Great Britain.

By Special Wire to the Courier.
London, April 22.—Displeasure expressed by the Radicals over the attitude of David Lloyd-George, Minister of Munitions, culminated to-day in a remarkable open letter by Alfred G. Gardiner, editor of the Daily News in which Mr. Gardiner charges Mr. Lloyd-George with responsibility of the government crisis just passed. The Minister of Munitions, who for the first year of the war was the idol of the Radicals has been championed lately by the so-called Northcliffe press and the Conservative organs which have been the severest critics of the government. "The crisis this week," says Mr. Gardiner's letter, was the culmination of all your activities. The country has made its choice between Asquith and you. It heard much about Asquith from your friends of the press. You escaped insult. You will escape exposure no longer. "In the heated over-wrought atmosphere of your mind you believe yourself a Man of Destiny. Democracy has been only a vehicle to you, not a faith. When the storm came advanced within you a short work of the democrat. Now you could have that ten months' power of Napoleon whereof you once spoke to me. Parliament became a nuisance and democracy an encumbrance for Napoleon making a new heaven and earth. "You never understood nor liked trade unionism. You are essentially an agrarian agitator. This has been the crucial collision between you and Asquith. Throughout he sought to carry labor with him. You in apocalyptic vision of yourself as the saviour of Europe, turned to compulsion. You were one of the chief architects of the fallen Liberal government and the establishment of the coalition. But the new government was not what you intended. Asquith, Grey, Kitchener remained, and it was subjected from the outset to bitter relentless attacks. "Am I wrong in assuming you have been in close intimacy with the chief assailants of the government?"

GOOD FRIDAY AT ST. BASIL'S

Mass of the Pre-Sanctified Solemnized Yesterday.
Mass of the pre-sanctified was solemnized yesterday morning at St. Basil's Church, when the host consecrated the day previous was consumed, as no host may be consecrated on Good Friday. Rev. Dean Brady, assisted by Rev. Father Padden, said the mass. The Passion of Christ, as found in the gospel of St. John, was also read in both English and Latin at this service. Stations of the Cross were made in public in the evening.

Rev. Dean Brady being assisted by Rev. Father Dogorski, Dean Brady preached a most inspiring sermon from the text "Greater love than this hath no man, that he lay down his life for his friend," depicting Christ's sufferings and death for the redemption of mankind. Veneration of the cross was held both morning and evening, and the annual collection for the Holy Land was taken up at both services. The first mass of the Resurrection was solemnized this morning, together with the ceremonies of reading the prophetic and the blessing of the fire, the paschal candle, the Easter water and the baptismal font.

PTE. MOUNFIELD KILLED IN ACTION

Splendid Type of Soldier Dies for the Empire.
DEATH CAME TWO WEEKS AGO
Pte. W. Carr of the 58th, Also is Reported Killed.
Pte. Kenneth Robertson Mounfield, who left Brantford with the second contingent, was killed in action on April 8th, is the news in to-day's casualty list, although a brother in London was apprised of the sad fact by a telegram from Ottawa yesterday. Pte. Mounfield was one of the very best specimens of a soldier. He was a man of magnificent physique, and was such a striking figure on parade and had such a soldierly bearing, that twice he was picked out by his superior officers, once to be a non-com, and once to take out a commission. In both cases he refused, preferring to remain with the boys he joined up with. He was an exceptionally useful soldier in that he had a good working knowledge of both the French and German language. He was unmarried. His parents are dead, his father died only two months ago. A married sister Mrs. Gillies, lives on Terrace Hill. Before enlisting he was a machinist. He was also a prominent worker in the Y. M. C. A.

AMBASSADOR GERARD HAS PRESENTED AMERICAN NOTE

Now Waiting at Washington to Hear How the News was Taken at Berlin; Note May Come by Middle of Week.
By Special Wire to the Courier.
Washington, April 22.—With official word that the American note had been presented to the Berlin foreign office, administration officials momentarily expected definite advices from Ambassador Gerard as to how the communication was received, together with some indications as to the nature of the German reply. In reporting the delivery of the note late Thursday afternoon, Ambassador Gerard advised the state department that he had afterwards conferred briefly with Foreign Minister Von Jagow. The contents of another message from the ambassador, was closely guarded, although it is said he informed the department that assurances had been given him of immediate consideration of the document. Some officials indicated that they look for a reply from Germany by the middle of next week. Count Von Bernstorff, the German ambassador, who is away on a brief trip, is not expected to return until Monday, unless important dispatches regarding the submarine issue are received at the embassy before that time. It is known that he has advised his government to modify its submarine policy to meet America's latest demands. CENSORSHIP RAISED The censorship has been raised, it is understood since Thursday night. It was very rigid for a while, one citizen of this city having to wait 10 days for a letter to arrive here from Buffalo. CELLAR FLOODED Charles Savory, owner of the property at 19 Jubilee avenue, makes a claim against the board of works for $6 damages done his cellar when it was flooded, because, he claims, of the valves being shut in the storm sewers. HEAVY BOMBARDMENT OF FRENCH FRONT BEFORE VERDUN YESTERDAY

Advances of Germans Against French Lines Between the Meuse and Fort Vaux Stopped by Artillery Fire.
By Special Wire to the Courier.
Paris, April 22, 12.50 p.m.—An intense bombardment of the French front before Verdun, between the Meuse and Fort Vaux was followed by an attempt on the part of the German troops to advance. The War Office announcement of this afternoon says the advance was prevented by the artillery fire of the French, which inflicted heavy losses on the Germans. The statement also says a German attack north of Caurettes wood, in which liquid fire was used, also was repulsed.

ARTILLERY DUEL IN MACEDONIA

No Infantry Fighting Except Clashes Between Patrols.
AVIATORS ARE VERY ACTIVE
French Machine Returned Unhurt After 400-Mile Flight.
By Special Wire to the Courier.
Paris, April 22.—The artillery duel along the Macedonian front continued yesterday, the Havas correspondent at Saloniki telegraphed. There was no activity on the part of infantry except for the usual clashes between patrols. The aviation corps is very active. The French aeroplane which flew over Sofia returned unscathed from its 400-mile trip. It dropped four bombs of large calibre on a Zeppelin shed at Sofia. Two French aeroplane squadrons bombarded the German camp at Petrich yesterday and another squadron dropped bombs on German troops concentrating in the region of Diran. German fliers attacked Grassout, but did no damage.

HUNGARIAN PAPERS START AGITATION IN FAVOR OF PEACE

Premier Asquith's Recent Speech Gets Them Going, as They Are Afraid Hungary Will be Swallowed Up by Germany.
By Special Wire to the Courier.
London, April 22.—The Daily Telegraph's Milan correspondent says that a significant symptom regarding the Hapsburg monarchy is shown by an outburst of the Hungarian newspapers in favor of peace. Premier Asquith's recent speech regarding peace conditions, the despatch says, has been commended by Hungarians who are anxious on account of German aggressiveness respecting small nationalities at the end of the war. In connection with the visit to Berlin made by Baron Burian, Austro-Hungarian foreign minister, it is suggested that Germany proposed that the Hapsburg monarchy should be divided into small autonomous states, presumably in order that they may be more easily swallowed up by Germany. The Slav nationalities, it is hinted, are to be given the minimum of liberty, Galicia also receiving autonomy. The correspondent says that the Hungarians have taken umbrage feeling that their turn would come next and that the Magyars would thus succumb to German predominance. CLEAN LIVER AND BOWELS, TONIGHT!

CANDY CATHARTIC CASCARETS

WORK WHILE YOU SLEEP

Enjoy life! Remove the liver and bowel poison which is keeping your head dizzy, your tongue coated, breath offensive and stomach sour. Don't stay bilious, sick, headachy, constipated and full of cold. Why don't you get a box of Cascarets from the drug store and eat one or two tonight and enjoy the nicest, gentlest liver and bowel cleansing you ever experienced. You will wake up feeling fit and fine. Cascarets never gripe or sicken like salts, pills and calomel. They act so gently that you hardly realize that you have taken a cathartic. Mothers should give cross, sick, bilious or feverish children a whole Cascaret any time—they act thoroughly and are harmless.

WANTED—Ladies to do plain and light sewing at home, whole or spare time; good pay; work sent any distance; charges paid. Send stamp for particulars. National Manufacturing Co., Montreal.

The Situation.

The arrival of Russian troops in France has been one of the most notable recent incidents.

In the Verdun struggle the French are now assuming the offensive, in addition to holding their own in repelling violent Hun attacks.

Germany, it is announced, is now enrolling boys seventeen years of age and the Hungarian papers are commencing to call for peace.

Over three thousand Turks were killed during the recent operations on the Tigris and the all round outlook for Germany and her associates is commencing to assume a very gloomy tinge indeed.

As predicted in this column, Asquith has weathered the latest threatened disruption of his Coalition Ministry.

"Compulsory enlistment of young men of eighteen.

"Retention with the colors of time-expired men.

"Removal of restrictions of territorial enabling territorial soldiers to be drafted into non-territorial units.

"Embodiment of attested married men.

"Unattested married men to be given the opportunity of joining the army as free recruits, and failing adequate response, compulsion to be resorted to.

"State provision for civil liabilities of married men called up."

NOTES AND COMMENTS In a moving picture suit, Judge Tuthill of the Circuit Court, Chicago, has declared that Bacon wrote Shakespeare's works.

The Russian bear, which the Huns had scotched, is now going to help dance on their toes in Europe, in addition to wallowing the Turks and holding Von Hindenburg's forces.

One of the most beautiful poems on "Good Friday" was written by the late E. Pauline Johnson of this city, as follows:

Because, dear Christ, Your tender, wounded arm Bends back the brier that edges life's long way,

Because I never knew Your care to tire, Your hand to weary guiding me aright,

Because You walk before and crush the brier, It does not pierce my feet so much to-night.

Because so often You have harkened to My selfish prayers, I ask but one thing now,

That these harsh hands of mine add not unto The crown of thorns upon Your bleeding brow.

The Tercentenary of Shakespeare's Death.

On April 23rd, 1616, William Shakespeare, the chief literary glory of England, and probably the finest genius among men of letters of all time, passed away.

He has the term and the phrase which fits all time and all circumstance. What better reference could there be, for instance, to the Kaiser and the diabolical kultur for which his name stands than this:

"I grant him bloody, Sudden, malicious, smacking of every sin That has a name."

Or more timely than this: "Naught shall make us rue If England to herself remain but true."

And so the illustrations might be amplified far beyond the limits of a slight newspaper sketch.

There have been many fine tributes to his glorious memory, but perhaps none better than that of Ben Jonson before mentioned, who, upon Shakespeare's death, wrote a notable poem "To the memory of my beloved Master, William Shakespeare." Following are some of the lines:

"To draw no envy, Shakespeare, on thy name Am I thus ample to thy book and fame;

While I confess thy writings to be such As neither man nor Muse can praise too much."

"But stay; I see thee in the hemisphere Advanced and made a constellation there;

Shine forth, thou star of poets, and with rage or influence, chide or cheer the drooping stage;

Which, since thy flight from hence hath mourned like night, And despairs day, but for thy volumes' light."

And how superabundantly he enriched the English language, and with what wizard-like touch he interpreted every phase of human thought and endeavor! His aphorisms, his imageries, his phraseology and his garlands of thought, have become interwoven into a verbal tapestry of which the like has never been, or ever shall be.

On Tuesday evening, at a close of work, Miss Myrtle Cousin was presented by her room-mates of the sweater department, with a handsome mantle clock, prior to her approaching marriage.

Miss Cousin's thanking her friends, and said that the ticking of the clock would always remind her of the happy hours they had spent together.

MEMORIAL SERVICE THIS AFTERNOON

Paris Will Remember the Heroes Who Fell at St. Julien.

SPLENDID TREAT BY CHURCH CHOIR "Crucifixion" Rendered in Most Capable Manner on Wednesday.

Paris, April 22.—Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock a wedding of interest to many Paris people was solemnized at the Methodist parsonage, the contracting parties being Miss Myrtle, third daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Cousins of Stratford, to Mr. Fred Jackson, formerly of Mr. H. Lehder's store here.

Once again the members of the Falkland's Women's Institute have more than excelled themselves. Wednesday night the central fire hall was crowded to see their famous play, "Southern Cinderella."

A very enjoyable time was spent by the members of the Young Peoples' Society of the Presbyterian Church, Monday evening, when they entertained about 50 members of St. Andrew's Young Peoples' Society of Brantford.

Edmond von Kaentf, a steeplejack of national reputation, was killed in Chicago when he fell ninety-five feet from a smokestack on top of a building at No. 656 Wells street.

A man who slept ten days on a stretch was given five days in jail at New Brunswick, N. J., and the other prisoners have arranged to keep him awake the entire time.

On Tuesday evening, at a close of work, Miss Myrtle Cousin was presented by her room-mates of the sweater department, with a handsome mantle clock, prior to her approaching marriage.

LAND OF GEYSERS

(1) Dragon's Mouth Geyser, Wairakei. (2) Active Volcano, Ngaurukoe, N.Z. (3) Harbour Front, Auckland, N.Z. (4) Prince of Wales Feather Geyser, Whakarewarewa. (5) S. S. Niagara.

NATURAL philosophers have been searching for decades for a sound explanation of the geyser phenomena, and yet they are not able to give the interested world full details about them; philosophy has been able to ascend to the heavens and bring down to the world dimensions and particulars about the planets, has been able to tell why the stars wink, why the sun and moon appear and disappear, when there will be an eclipse of some distant revolving body, and why some distant revolving body, and why the eclipse will occur; philosophy has taught us all about all the variations of the firmament, about all the motions of the earth itself, but geysers are puzzles. Nobody fully understands them. At any rate we know something about them—we know they are beautiful.

A geyser may be best described as a volcano of hot water. The word geyser of New Zealand are important parts of the great British Empire. The Canadian Pacific train and steamship connections can bring sightseers from almost any part of the Dominion right up to the home of geysers. The S.S. "Niagara" of the Canadian-Australian Line, ply regularly between Vancouver and Auckland. From Auckland the New Zealand geyser basin can easily be reached. At Rotorua are numerous hotels to accommodate health seekers and the bubbling mud geysers in the vicinity are as wicket-looking as they are extraordinary. But geysers are not the only attractions that New Zealand has to offer; there are hosts of others, and not the least are the New Zealanders themselves, who are our cousins. At this large and very wealthy, a busy depot of commerce, and a home of culture, they had been before, it is only appropriate that there should be more intimate intercourse between its members. Present day travelling facilities almost annihilate distance, and any of us who have the means should not neglect to visit our kindred and neighbours a visit.

The city of Auckland, which is the largest in New Zealand, had in 1906 a population of 21,887, but during the past ten years it is likely that this number has had another 10,000 added to it. Auckland has a good harbour, but it is only yet in its youth, and as the interior of the city is interesting, it contains some impressive buildings, but it is a favorite amongst the young people of the Empire. It is likely to become very large and very wealthy; a busy depot of commerce, and a home of culture, they had been before, it is only appropriate that there should be more intimate intercourse between its members. Present day travelling facilities almost annihilate distance, and any of us who have the means should not neglect to visit our kindred and neighbours a visit.

TO-DAY IS THE ANNIVERSARY OF THE BEGINNING OF THE SECOND BATTLE OF YPRES WHEN THE MAGNIFICENT STAND MADE BY THE CANADIAN TROOPS SAVED CALAIS

THE SECOND BATTLE OF YPRES; ACCOUNT OF THE STRUGGLE AND HOW CANADA STOPPED THE DRIVE

Story of Stand of the Boys of the Maple Leaf, and of the Fight They Put up Which Defence Remains Unparalleled in All the Glorious Traditions of the British Army.

"If I should die think only this of me: That there is some corner of a foreign field That is forever England. There shall be In that rich earth a richer rust concealed." (Rupert Brooke, Sonnet on the Consolation of Death in War.)

In the salient of Ypres, there is a corner that is forever Canada. About 25 miles from the North Sea, just inside the Belgian boundary line, its spires visible for miles around from the flat plains of West Flanders, stands the little city of Ypres. In days of yore the centre of a mercantile trade, only its noble cloth remained as a memento of its past glories. In this war, even before a year ago, it had become famous. It was the hub of a salient which the flower of Britain had held from the choice of Germany's troops in the fall of 1914, in the great drive to Calais. That salient, the result of an offensive which failed, was again to become the place in which Canada was to make such a fight that all the world wondered.

POSITION OF THE ALLIES. All during the winter of 1914 and with the spring of 1915, the British held substantially the same line about

The 3rd brigade was under the command of Brigadier-General Turner. It consisted of the 13th Battalion (Royal Highlanders of Canada), 14th Battalion (Royal Mounted Regiment), 15th Battalion (48th Highlanders of Canada), 16th Battalion (Canadian Scottish), the latter being in the brigade reserve.

The whole of the first brigade was in reserve. It was made up of the 1st Battalion (Ontario Regiment), 2nd Battalion (Eastern Ontario), 3rd Battalion (Toronto Regiment), 4th Battalion (Central Ontario). Such was the position of the troops of the Allies on April 22nd, 1915, just one year ago to-day. There were two features of this salient which tended to make it difficult to hold—in addition to the fact that a salient is always a handicap to the defending forces. One was that the trenches held by the Canadians and part of the 8th Division were not good. They had only recently been taken over and the troops had not had time to put them in a proper state of repair. Again, virtually all supplies for the various positions of the salient came through Ypres, and when the great German 42 cm. shells began to fall on the devoted city, in order to disorganize the transport, then the allies knew an attack was impending.

On a small scale to the Canadians at Ypres, except that the Canadians could not retreat; they could merely take up a new alignment. Upon the 3rd brigade fell the first brunt of the battle. His left flank in the air, General Turner had as it is known in military science, to "refuse" his left. He made the point of contact with the French, the apex of his new line and bent his left wing southward till it rested on a wood west of St. Julien. This most difficult operation was carried out perfectly, but even yet there was a gap beyond the wood, and all efforts were made to collect reinforcements.

DEATH OF CAPT. DRUMMOND. Some attempts were made to rally the fleeing Turks and in this task Capt. Guy Drummond of the 18th Battalion met a heroic death. Meantime other Canadian troops were hurriedly called up. The first brigade was in reserve and could not be used. The 16th battalion was a working party to the 2nd, brigade, was pressed into service. The 7th battalion of the 2nd brigade was brought over, and the 2nd and 3rd battalions of the reserve brigade were also put into the firing line.

The left of the line was now a wood, and this was held by the Ger-

Canadian left, bent back almost at right angles, was struggling to entrench itself under cover of counter attacks. To their eternal honor the 3rd Canadian brigade did not break. Overwhelmed with superior numbers of men and guns, and sick to death with the poisoned fumes, they did all that men could do to stem the tide. And in the yawning rent in our left which gave the enemy a clear way to Ypres. Strangely enough, they did not push their advantage. As in the first battle of Ypres, they broke our line, but could do nothing in the breach.

THE CHARGE OF THE 4TH But by daylight the Germans had worked in enough in the "yawning gap" to threaten the whole 3rd brigade. British troops under Col. Geddes were ordered to charge the enemy trenches, which now so menaced the whole position. The charge was carried to a triumphant conclusion. Col. Birchall of the 4th battalion was killed, but the men, fired by his death, rushed ahead and carried with the bayonet the front line German trenches. The trenches taken were miles behind the original French line of defence.

THE STAND OF THE THIRD BRIGADE. But the Third Canadian Brigade, while it had to watch its left flank, was fiercely assailed from in front. The Germans were overwhelmingly superior in numbers and artillery. They broke through gaps here and there and got behind the lines. The Canadians were pounded to pieces. They were weak and sick from the gas. They could get no food for 24 hours, and then only bread and cheese. They themselves were holding a salient and were enfiladed by fire. On the 23rd they formed a new line at St. Julien. Early in the morning of the 24th the artillery fire was redoubled, and a second great gas attack was launched upon them. That men could do the third brigade had done. Deeds of heroism were performed never to be forgotten. Officers who only a year before had been citizens had fatal responsibilities thrust upon them, and had borne them with glory and honor. But even these troops could do so more and before this second gas attack they fell back to a new line south of St. Julien.

HOLDING THE PIVOT The result of this retreat was to place the 2nd Canadian Brigade in the same position as the 3rd had been in when the French fell back. It's had to swing around to conform to the retirement of the 3rd Brigade. Of that movement the pivot was Grafenstafel, held by the 8th Battalion under Colonel Lippert. Had the 8th Battalion been cut out of its position not only would the conforming movement have been impossible, but the Germans could have pushed in behind the whole of the 2nd Division and cut it off. But the 8th Battalion never wavered. Gassed, swept with artillery, it resisted tenaciously until the British re-inforced it Saturday night.

FUTILE VALOR During the morning of the 25th the 3rd Brigade had recovered some of its lost ground. About mid-day a tremendous attack on St. Julien and the ground east of it was pushed forward by fell back 700 yards and here befell the most pathetic and heroic story of the battle. The 13th and 14th battalions could not be withdrawn, and as they could not be supported or reinforced, had to stand and fight a hopeless battle. Far into the night these men battled with the enemy until sheer force of numbers beat them down into submission.

NONE CAME BACK. Meanwhile British troops had been rushed up and on Sunday they attacked St. Julien but could not retake it. Sunday the Germans attacked. With the terrific artillery fire made it impossible to hold the position, and they had to fall back. The guns had been recaptured and made useless by the enemy or the Canadians after capturing them, is a matter of doubt. From then on until daylight the battle continued in dreadful fury. THE WILD APRIL NIGHT Mr. John Buchan, a London Times correspondent, and next to Hilary Belloc, the most noted of war writers, in his "Nelson's History of the War" says the following of the night of April 22, 23: "A wilder battle has rarely been witnessed than the struggle of that April night. The British reserves at Ypres, shelled out of the town, marched to the sound of the firing, with the strange, sickly odor of the gas blowing down upon them. The roads were congested with the nightly supply trains for the troops in the Salient. All along our front the cannonade was severe, while the

STORIES TOLD BY MEN WHO WERE IN BATTLE; BRANTFORD MEN'S ACCOUNTS OF FIGHT

Interesting Interviews With Various Soldiers From Brantford Who Went Through the Dreadful Struggle and Who Give Their Impressions of the Fight.

A great many of the men who fought at St. Julien and Langemark are now again in Brantford, and some of these tell in their own words the story of their experiences in the great fight. Included among these men is Sergt.-Major Salvaneschi of the 25th Battalion. Although not a Brantford man, the sergeant-major has become so really, now, since he has joined the 25th, and his story is particularly interesting.

SGT.-MAJ. SALVANESCHI

An exceptionally interesting and vivid eye-witness account of the great battle, is told by Sergt.-Major Salvaneschi of the 25th Battalion. Sergt.-Major Salvaneschi went through the entire battle with the 3rd Battalion, without sustaining a scratch, and his narrative is of unusual strength and coherence. "The 3rd Battalion was in billets at the village of Vlamertinghe, some four miles from the firing line, at the time. About four in the afternoon of April 22, we noted a peculiar smell coming from the direction of Ypres. Then we saw crowds of refugees coming from that direction, men, women, children; mounted, in wagons, on foot. Later, Algerian soldiers kept coming in from the trenches. As I spoke French, I was asked by my company commander to ascertain the cause of their retreat. I stopped three men, partially suffocated by the gas the Germans had sent over the lines, and was told that the enemy had broken through, had captured Ypres and the French guns there, and had asphyxiated the French and Algerian troops. In the midst of all this excitement, a staff officer ordered us to stand to, which the battalion did for about three hours, all impatient to go forward. The sun, dark, came an order to move—to the rear, we thought at first, but before long we found we were going into the firing line. The men cheered and sang and advanced in the direction of the front as possible. Troops we passed on the way told us that the Third Brigade, though still fighting, was practically cut to pieces. We reached the Yser canal, however, and crossed it at Baillieu, where we stayed and rested about ten days. From there we went to Festubert."

THE FIRST SHELLS. "The first intimation we had that we were in danger was when, after we had passed the canal, shells began to burst over us, the first one to fall striking the rear of our battalion and practically wiping out our subordinate headquarters staff. We were then ordered to line the road on either side in a ditch; behind us were four Canadian guns, which were being fired upon until they were forced to change their positions. The execution of that manoeuvre was as fine a thing as I ever saw."

"While we were here, we heard that our machine gun officer, Capt. Ryerson and several other officers and many men had been killed or wounded. At daylight we advanced to a blockhouse of earth; this we held for an hour, when there came an order for the entire battalion to advance. "Attacked and outflanked by four divisions, stupefied with a poison of which they had never dreamed, and which they did not understand, with no heavy artillery to support them, they endured until reinforcements came, and they did more than endure. After days and nights of tension they had the vitality to counter-attack. If the salient of Ypres will be for all time the classic battle ground of Britain, that blood-stained segment between the Poelcapelle and Zonnebeke roads will remain the holy land of Canadian arms."

SGT.-MAJ. BUTLER Sergt. Major Butler, who returned to Brantford this week, and who has since left for his home in Hanover for a few weeks' rest before going back to the war, is another old Brantford boy who took part in the fighting at Ypres. The First battalion, to which he belonged, was in the thick of the battle, being quite near the 4th, to which most of the local boys were attached. "Ypres was a wicked fight," said Sergt. Major Butler; "perhaps the worst the Canadians were in. The First was in the fight for several days. I can't describe the battle; no one could; it's too big a thing. We were relieved on the 26th of April, when the 9th Durham regiment came to take our place. That's all I can tell you about it."

CORP. HERB ORR To be wounded at the very commencement of the battle was the lot of Corporal Herb. Orr of Brantford, who returned to his home here last October. His account of the opening phases of the great fight is exceptionally strong and thrilling. "The 4th battalion was resting about six miles from the firing line when the battle commenced. It was on the evening of the 22nd that we were ordered forward to take the place of the Turks, who had been put to flight by the German gas. This was the first occasion upon which gas had been used.

"We marched about midnight. At 2.30 we came under the fire first, then stopping and entrenching ourselves. About 3 o'clock we commenced to advance once more. It was still dark, dawn coming about 4 o'clock. We proceeded perhaps two miles. It was about 5 a.m. that I was wounded."

"Somewhere near noon, the 4th battalion first came into direct contact with the enemy, although it had been under fire for some time already. The battalion opened fire and kept it up for two hours, after which they charged. It was in this charge that Col. Birchall was killed, and so many Brantford men wounded. Less than 200 from the whole battalion came through. They carried the trenches and drove the Germans back, holding them until the morning of the 24th, when they were relieved. They then searched the field for wounded, aided in this by some imperial regiments. Next day they went into battle again. I was wounded, as I said, about five in the morning. I lay on the field until night, when I was carried back by three men of the King's Royal Rifles, themselves wounded, and taken to a hospital. From there I was sent on a 35 mile motor ambulance trip to Boulogne, and then later to England, where I remained in different hospitals and convalescent homes until I was sent home here."

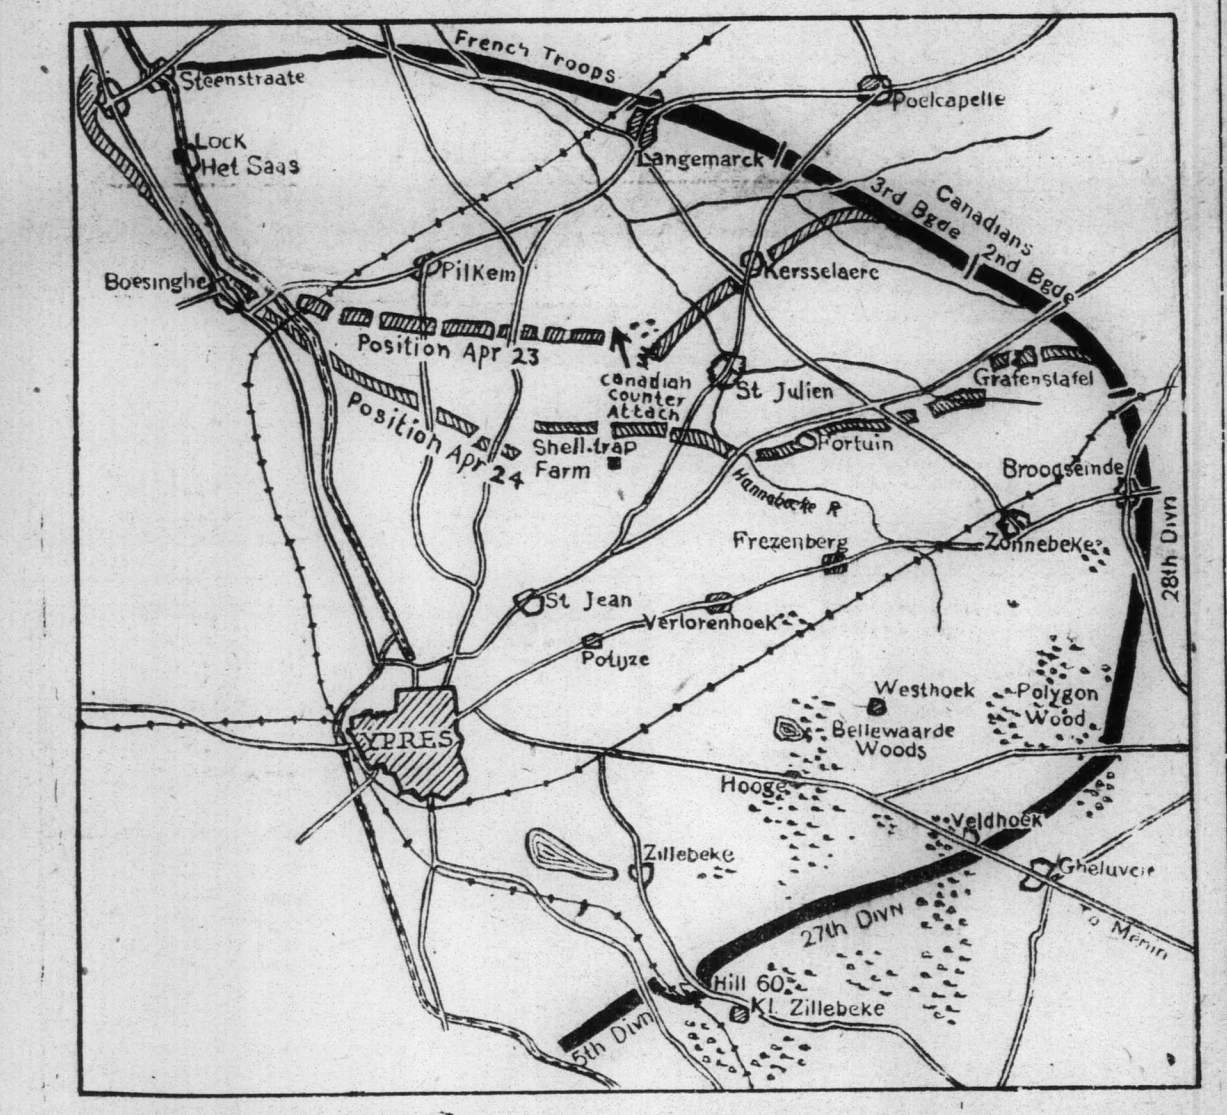

PTE. BLOXHAM

Another Brantford man, who took part in the great battle is Pte. C. H. Bloxham, D.C.M. who was at St. Julien, accompanied by a splendid reputation shears for the bravery of her soldier boys. "The 10th was in Ypres at the time the battle began," said Pte. Bloxham, "and we were soon rushed to St. Julien. Here we were our first taste of real, severe fighting. We went into battle during the night. About ten o'clock, we were ordered to charge a forest just ahead. "I was wounded, as I said, about five in the morning. I lay on the field until night, when I was carried back by three men of the King's Royal Rifles, themselves wounded, and taken to a hospital. From there I was sent on a 35 mile motor ambulance trip to Boulogne, and then later to England, where I remained in different hospitals and convalescent homes until I was sent home here."

BACK TO YPRES. The Tenth Battalion was then, according to Pte. Bloxham, removed, being no longer needed with the arrival of auxiliaries. They took up another position, an open one, and held this for more than twenty-four hours. Finally they marched back to Ypres, under heavy fire, but were shelled and driven into the open once more, being obliged to entrench themselves. Re-inforcements came later, and the 10th aided in the defense of the Yser canal.

Pte. Bloxham, naturally enough realizes the immensity of the battle. "I know nothing about it," he says, "no-one does. It is too vast a subject to attempt to describe." Of the deed which won him the Distinguished Conduct Medal, Pte. Bloxham, with characteristic modesty, is very reticent. "For devotion to duty and bravery on the field," they said, "he explains, 'That's all I know about it.' He admits, however, that at St. Julien he was constantly employed in carrying messages and other errands of a similarly important and hazardous nature.

Ypres as they retreated after the great October battle had died away. In the beginning of April, the form of the salient was a rough semi-circle. A glance at the map will show the position of the Allies. From Steenstraete a straight line drawn south, through Ypres, approximately 8 miles long represents the base of the salient. Commencing at the south and following round the semi-circle the positions were held: as far as the now famous Hill 60 by the 5th Division, from Hill 60 to the Polygon wood, the 27th Division, which included the Princess Pats, who were posted at a corner of the woods. From the Polygon wood to the northeast of Zonnebeke was the 28th division, consisting of the 83rd, 84th and 85th brigades.

THE CANADIAN FORCES. Continuing the line from the 28th Division to, roughly, Langemark—(where from there to Steenstraete, the end of the semi-circle, it was held by the 45th Division of French Colonial infantry)—were the Canadians. There were two brigades from right to left, the 2nd and the 3rd. The second Brigade was under the command of General Currie, and consisted of the 5th Battalion, 6th Battalion (Fort Garry's), 7th Battalion (British Columbia) and the 8th Battalion (90th Winnipeg Rifles). The 10th (Western Canada Regiment) was in the brigade reserve.

THE COMING OF THE GAS April 22nd broke warm and sunny, with a light, steady wind blowing from the southeast towards evening. For two days Ypres had been bombarded, and the British command was anxious. About 5 o'clock in the afternoon on the left of the Canadians a wave of gas, a mode of fighting never used before in warfare. The gas was pumped from cylinders and drifted rapidly in a cloud about 7 feet high towards the French trenches. Its effect was to fill the lungs with fluid and produce acute bronchitis. It also caused temporary blindness, and the men stricken with it gasped and struggled for breath with faces blue and swollen and eyes starting from the head. Upon the French Colonial troops, who had given evidences innumerable of their valor, the coming of the gas was some black witchery, like the first contact of firearms was to the Indian. Just as dusk fell, they rushed back, overcome with terror more than human. Hundreds of their comrades were left dying, and in the twinkling of an eye, a break four miles long was rent in the allied line through which the Germans hastened to rush through. What had happened on a large scale to Sir John French at Mons, had happened again

Another Brantford man, who took part in the great battle is Pte. C. H. Bloxham, who have won for Brantford the splendid reputation she bears for the bravery of her soldier boys.

"The rot was in Ypres at the time the battle began," said Pte. Bloxham, "and we were soon rushed to St. Julien. Here we had our first taste of real severe fighting. We went into battle during the night. About ten o'clock, we were ordered to charge a forest just as the Germans did it, recapturing a number of guns which the Germans had taken earlier. We had a splendid lot of officers, and we simply did as they told us. That's how we won out.

"We held the position there for about thirty-six hours, and then were moved off to support the 8th Winnipeg Battalion, which the Germans attacked furiously. Our machine guns mowed them down steadily, yet still they came on."

So critical did the situation become that Pte. Bloxham was sent for reinforcements. Concerning this exploit, he is very reticent, but the fact remains that by this deed he probably saved both the 8th and 10th Battalions from complete annihilation.

BACK TO YPRES.

OVER SEVEN HUNDRED IN NEW UNIFORM

Ontario Lacrosse Players Have Donned Latest Style Suits.

Toronto, April 22.—The annual convention of the Ontario Amateur Lacrosse Association in Victoria Hall yesterday was a live gathering indicative of a good season for the national game, in spite of the depressing effect of the war on organized sporting activities. There was no competition for the first two offices on the list, and there was little contentious matter in the proposed amendments or new business, but several points afforded occasion for keen discussion, especially the proposition to alter the playing rule governing the goalkeeper's crease. The reports presented were very satisfactory, and as the new President, Mr. Charles Hocking, said on his installation, united effort will make an unpromising year a good year.

PRESIDENT HINDS REVIEW

At the morning session President J. Ed. Hinds of Orillia presented the report of his stewardship in the course of which he said:

"We have come to the end of the most successful year in the history of our association. This success is no doubt due to the campaign inaugurated some time ago and carried on by the present executive. Circular letters boosting Canada's national game were sent to all clubs and prospective clubs in Ontario. This correspondence gave our secretary, Mr. Frank Doyle, a considerable amount of extra work, which he conducted in a very capable manner. This was followed by a personal canvass by Mr. Lally, accompanied by a member of this executive wherever possible.

"There were only two players suspended and one warned for unbecoming conduct on the field. Considering the keenness of the competitions, the clubs of the association are to be complimented on this remarkably clean record.

"Everything went so smoothly that all the series finished early, with the following results: The Young Torontos won the senior championship, which entitles them to the Globe shield, and are to be congratulated on the brand of lacrosse they played. The intermediate championship was won again by Weston, entitling them to the La Fortune Cup for the second year in succession, demonstrating that they were fit for senior company. The junior championship was won by the Beaches, after three hard games with the Matildas. This entitles them to the Iroquois Cup. The juvenile championship was won by the St. Simons, which gives them the Maple Leaf Shield for a year. To these teams I extend my congratulations.

"It is gratifying to see how our lacrosse boys have answered the call to the Empire in the hour of her great trial. More than one half of the boys who took out certificates from the Ontario Amateur Lacrosse Association in 1915 have enlisted for overseas service. The experience gained by playing our national game will make them more fit to compete in the larger and more serious game on the battlefields of Europe on the side of honor, justice and liberty. I am sure you will join with me in wishing them a safe return.

The election of officers resulted as follows:—

President, Chas Hocking, Toronto; First Vice-President, J. B. Brown, Fergus; Second Vice-President, Ernest A. Doyle, Newmarket; Secretary, Jas. E. Dundas, Toronto; Treasurer, W. McArthur, Toronto.

"PETE."

One of the most important events of the present season will take place at the Grand Opera House in this city to-night, April 22, matinee and night, when Hall Caine's internationally successful play, "Pete" will be given its Canadian premiere, with Derwent Hall Caine, son of England's great author in the stellar and title role.

In these days of close relationship between the theatres of London and New York, it is decidedly remarkable that a successful drama written by Hall Caine in collaboration with Louis N. Parker, and which has been played more than seventeen hundred times in the theatres of England, the English colonies and continental capitals, is to be seen for the first time in Canada or the United States. The explanation, however, is quite simple. Since the play scored its first overwhelming success at the Lyceum Theatre in London in 1908, repeated efforts have been made by American theatrical managers to obtain from Hall Caine the American rights to his biggest popular success. The distinguished author steadily refused to sign any contract for the United States and Canada until his brilliant young son, Derwent Hall Caine could fulfill his London contracts and be starred on this side of the water in his father's most successful play.

"Pete" sets forth a story of modern life. Its scenes are laid in the Isle of Man, where Hall Caine's most successful novels and plays have had their locals. The central theme of the Lasky Feature Play Company offers a beautiful picturization of the wonderful reigning theatrical success of recent years, with the principal role played by the star who appeared in the part of the spoken stage for several seasons.

This is Miss Walker's third appearance in Lasky productions on the Paramount program. The others were "Kindling" and "Out of Darkness."

The photoplay of "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" tells the story of melodramatic incidents in the attempts of a United States revenue officer to stop the illegal manufacture of whiskey among the "moonshiners" in the mountains of Virginia. He is pitted against a band of rough mountaineers, led by Judd Tolliver. The "Moonshiner's" daughter, June—the role played by Miss Walker—falls in love with the Government agent and is caught between her affection for her people in the mountains and the young stranger who would ruin their illicit traffic.

The cast of "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" is one of the most notable gathering of screen stars in many months. Theodore Roberts will appear as Judd Tolliver, Thos. Meighan will play the role of John Hale, the Revenue Officer, and Earl Fox will appear as Dave Tolliver.

In addition there will be vaudeville. The Three Oberia Sisters, in a beautiful electric novelty, showing a series of classy dances, and Copely-McBride and Carroll in Melange of singing and comedy.

A Serial Story of Absorbing Interest.

He went to the window and called to his companion. In a minute Macdonald had scrambled back to safer ground and joined him. Colin went to the edge of the precipice and looked over.

"Hallo!" he cried, pointing downwards. "What is that?"

A light mass seemed to hover and flutter a little way down the cliff. Macdonald turned the lantern upon it, and he could see it was some sort of garment caught in a bush and waving in the wind. It looked ghostly in the darkness.

They examined the edge of the cliff above, and found traces of footprints, small tracks made by a woman's feet, and finally a smooth mark on the damp verge as if some one had slipped over and torn away the grass from the edge. Macdonald looked up with a face blanched with horror.

"Quick!" he shouted, running to where a precarious footing on the face of the gorge led down to the depths below.

Down, down, slipping, scrambling, clinging to projecting rocks and twisted roots of the thorn bushes. They never knew how they reached the bottom. Their hands were bleeding, their clothes torn, and, heedless of the rain, they were slipping to the foam-tipped swirling pool at the foot of the fall.

The detective turned the light on the dark waters, passing it carefully round from point to point, looking for something he dreaded to see.

"There, there!" shouted his companion. "A little more to the right! There is something there!"

Something white had drifted into the backwater, some living thing surely. It swayed gently in the moving water. The strong light of the lamp fell on it; they saw with a paralyzing terror a slender white arm thrown back on the rim of the margin, a long hair floating on the rippling waves, a white dress and even the cold sparkle of gems.

They lifted her out and reverently smoothed her limbs, and wrung the water out of her hair, and wiped moisture from the lovely marble features uninjured by the terrible fall, and then leaving the crushed and mangled corpse lying on a bed of moss they went for help to carry her to her home for the last time.

CHAPTER XXVI, AND LAST.

Gracilia Latimer left the library when Colin Grantley was gone, intending to go to her own room. As she crossed the hall she noticed that the front door stood open, and that Mr. Bolton, in a travelling suit, was entering the house. He was accompanied by a tall young woman dressed in deep mourning.

When Mr. Bolton saw Gracilia he seemed more embarrassed than pleased.

"How do you do, Miss Latimer? I want the housekeeper for a minute."

He turned to the woman and drew her aside, speaking rapidly and in a low voice. Gracilia, seeing she was evidently in the way went on upstairs. Glancing down involuntarily when she reached the corridor above, she saw the housekeeper leading away Mr. Bolton's strange companion, and Mr. Bolton making eager inquiries from the butler. She felt a new foreboding which she could not understand.

She stood in her own room for a long time, trying to collect her thoughts. The strange appeal made to her in the letter, the persistence of Colin in taking the answer on himself, Mr. Bolton's unexpected appearance, and the extraordinary sort of companion who accompanied him filled her with terror. Something was going to happen. She had felt it for a long time without knowing the cause of her unrest. The reason of her wish to escape from Wayland Manor was plain now. A tap at her door startled her. Her maid entered.

"Mrs. Bennett is quite put out!" she said. "Miss Verinder is locked in her room and is not to be disturbed, and she does not know what to do with the strange young woman, Mr. Bolton brought here. I said I would come and ask you."

"What directions did Mr. Bolton give?"

"Nothing; only for Mrs. Bennett to keep her in her own room for the present."

"Well, what difficulty is there in that?"

"It seems queer, miss, when Miss Verinder gave no orders."

"You may be sure Mr. Bolton will explain everything to your mistress. Where is he now?"

"He went out immediately, and has just come back with another stranger—a lady this time, and an American I should say by her talk. Though she didn't say much, only looked around as if she was expecting some one. He took her into the library, and when I asked if I should go for you he said quite cross-like, 'No, certainly not! My business is with Miss Verinder!' Oh, Miss, I feel sure something is wrong."

"Where is Miss Verinder's maid?"

"I don't know. I couldn't find her."

"Where is he now?"

"He is in the room. He does not want me to interfere. What is that?"

It was a second tap at the door. A messenger stood outside with a note.

"One of the gamekeepers gave me this, miss. He said Mr. Grantley sent it, and you were to have it as soon as possible. I'm afraid something has happened. He asked for Mrs. Bennett. He ran around to the back of the house. Oh, he looked awful!"

With shaking fingers Gracilia tore open the note, written with pencil on the leaf of a pocket-book. It was in her lover's handwriting.

"Lucy was not there. She is in no danger. There has been an accident—a terrible one. We are bringing the body home. The Doctor has been sent for, and I told the messenger to prepare the housekeeper for our coming. Stay in your room until I come. Thank Heaven, you are safe—Your own Confused, horrified, Gracilia was yet relieved. Colin and Lucy were safe. Macdonald must have been the victim of the terrible accident. She remembered the terrible height from the Witch's Rock to the pool below, and, shuddering, pictured to herself his fall.

"What is it, miss? What has happened?" asked the maid.

"There has been a shocking accident and they are bringing the body here. I think it is a man called Macdonald, who has fallen from the cliff at the Witch's Rock and been killed. Do you mean the young man who was staying at the old lodge?" asked the girl. "He is not killed. He ran up just after the gamekeeper and came in by the side door."

Gracilia grasped the girl's arm in her excitement.

"Are you sure? A young man with dark hair and eyes, with a Scotch accent?"

"That's him, miss. He had a tie of Scotch plaid on him too!"

"Yes, that is Anita Donatelli, not Elaine Verinder," Mrs. Starr said to the group as they gathered together. "It gave me a terrible shock when the detective found me and told me what had happened to Elaine. I was different from her foster sisters. She was a gentle pale girl, without vitality enough to resist any illness. Her lonely life preyed on her mind and I often urged her to leave the house and to love the young Italian painter and was not anxious to go."

"It was the picture he painted of her which first gave me the clue to the mystery," Mr. Bolton said. "That woman, the prime mover in everything, tried to kill him on his journey home, and believed she had succeeded. Mrs. Latimer's accident, also the result of design, not accident. They forged the will and the signature of the young woman who accompanied me here. She is ready to prove that. There never was any will at all."

Gracilia was staring at him with horror struck eyes.

"Do you mean she was poisoned?" she asked. "And was the story you told me true? Oh, I can't understand it! Did she forgive me and love me all the time?"

"I am sure of it. The will was a forgery. And even without that it could not stand. The real Elaine Verinder is dead, and you inherit as if natural heir. In the same way Sir Everard becomes the owner of Wayland Manor, and all that that mad woman schemed for falls to the ground."

"I cannot understand how she came to go the last dreadful deed," said Gracilia.

"This will explain," Grantley said, producing the note Gracilia had received. "Miss Latimer only just escaped the fate of the others. When I saw it I was sure it was a decoy, and Macdonald and I went to the place."

"But why was Miss Verinder there?"

"She must have heard of Mrs. Starr's arrival and have known that the game was up. She had an untold amount of jewels secreted about her. She evidently ran to warn her sister to make her escape, and in the dark was mistaken for Miss Latimer."

Gracilia was trembling from head to foot. The deliberate cruelty of one crime after another appalled her. And the light I saw in Mr. Verinder's room," she whispered.

"Macdonald discovered a secret door into that room, opening from a press in Miss Verinder's. Mr. Verinder must have been shot through the door and the pistol placed in his hand. They were fastening up the door and moving the bed close to the wall so as to avoid detection when you heard them."

"But why should they hate me?" Gracilia asked.

"You heard what the woman said. She believed you were a spy and had come to take everything from her sister. It was you who found the scrap of paper containing Mr. Verinder's last message; it was to you Sir Everard confided his intention of going to Italy. They believed him dead and Miss Carden disposed of. You alone remained."

"Oh, Anita, my sister, I have killed you—whom I love better than my own life! But I did not know that it was you whom I flung over! I thought it was the woman who came to spy and carry tales to the man who made you happy."

"What does it mean?" whispered Gracilia. She had followed Giulietta downstairs and now shudderingly looked into the dead face of Elaine. But was it Elaine? The damp hair was smoothed back from the waxen brow and in a flash she understood the likeness which had so often puzzled her. She turned her eyes to the ground in a deep swoon. As they lay side by side the truth was apparent.

Another lady had been added to the group, a tall, commanding lady, who glided in at Mr. Bolton's side. She looked long and fixedly at the two faces, and then, turning her eyes swiftly to the dead face of Elaine, she said: "That is Anne Cleve!"

"I know her well. She and I were together in the East Hotel, and it was she who asked me to write my name in her birthday-book." She turned her pale face on Mr. Bolton. "I don't think I am wanted here any more, sir. I'll go down to the office and know where to find me. I don't feel well. I'd rather be out of this place."

The Doctor was coming in, and his arrival scattered the frightened group. Mr. Bolton beckoned Gracilia and the others to follow him into the library.

"That is Anita Donatelli, not Elaine Verinder," Mrs. Starr said to the group as they gathered together. "It gave me a terrible shock when the detective found me and told me what had happened to Elaine. I was different from her foster sisters. She was a gentle pale girl, without vitality enough to resist any illness. Her lonely life preyed on her mind and I often urged her to leave the house and to love the young Italian painter and was not anxious to go."

much when he was ill."

"I knew it was he!" Lisabel cried. "He has all the characteristics of a conspirator. Now, Doctor Marshall, you are to sit beside me at dinner and talk to me without ceasing."

"That is if you can edge in a word or two," her husband said.

Colin Grantley's suggestion had been adopted, and Mr. Verinder's room had been remodelled and turned into a guest-chamber. The secret door had been built up, the furniture removed, a new window opened, and the whole character of the place changed. A gay party accompanied Dr. Marshall and solemnly introduced Gracilia to the churchyard where the skeleton should lurk in any cupboard of Lucy's home.

It was when the festivities were over and all the guests had departed that Sir Everard and Lucy paid their first visit to the churchyard where "Elaine the Fair" had been laid to rest. A white cross without any inscription alone marked the grave. Lucy stole her hand into Sir Everard's as they stood looking at it. "What about her sister?" she whispered.

"She never recovered her senses, and never will. She is wearing herself out by paroxysms and cannot last many months, the doctor says. I don't think I ever asked you, darling, to explain to me the mystery of the photograph taken of you and your pretended cousin Mr. Bolton thinks it was not Elaine at all."

"What do you mean?" she asked, pretending each other, besides the time when Giulietta sang instead of Elaine. They were so alike, and Giulietta was so clever. Every dress that Elaine got Giulietta had the same, and by staining and dressing up one could pass for the other. I remember that Elaine was sent for in a hurry that day to be taken with me, and there was a good deal of delay before she came. Uncle was irritated, for he could not bear to be kept waiting. When she came she did not speak—only stood until it was over and then slipped away. I am sure now it was Giulietta, not Elaine. I remember now that I had seen her go out a little while before, and wondered how she got back so quickly. A great many things have become clear to me. Her own people used to visit her. I am certain, and she used to steal away to see them. It must have been at one of these times that uncle sent for her."

"But why not say she was out? It was an awful risk!"

"Uncle would have insisted on knowing all about where she was. The other was easier. She came across the grass and stood looking down while the photographer snapped away. Then she went away without speaking. I thought her odd at the time, but I understand it now."

"And it was to Giulietta's singing we were listening to all the time! Mrs. Starr says Elaine had no voice. It is strange."

"Has anything been done about the Witch's Cave, Everard? I believe it was there she used to meet her Italian people."

"The approach to it has been built up and the house taken away. Come home now, dear Lucy; the last mystery has been cleared up and nothing but brightness remains!"

BANISH PIMPLES AND ERUPTIONS

In the Spring Most People Need a Tonic Medicine.

One of the surest signs that the blood is out of order is the pimples, unsightly eruptions and eczema that come frequently with the change from winter to spring. These prove that the long indoor life of winter has had its effect upon the blood, and that a tonic medicine is needed to put it right. Indeed there are few people who do not need a tonic at this season. Bad blood does not merely show itself in disfiguring eruptions. To this same condition is due attacks of rheumatism and lumbago; the sharp stabbing pains of sciatica and neuralgia; poor appetite and a desire to avoid exertion. You cannot cure these troubles by the use of purgative medicines; you need a tonic, and a tonic only, and among all medicines there is none can equal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for their tonic, life-giving, nerve-restoring powers. Every dose of this medicine makes new vitality, stimulates every organ and brings a feeling of new health and energy to weak, tired, ailing men, women and children. If you are out of sorts give this medicine a trial and see how quickly it will restore the appetite, revive drooping spirits, and fill your veins with new, health-giving blood.

You can get these Pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

BEST DIVIDEND PAID BY AUTO

Is Health and Time Spent Out in Fresh Air, Says a Doctor.

(By Dr. Frank Crane.)

The disease of civilization is the house.

Putting the American Indians, for instance, in houses instead of tents killed them off faster than the bullets of the white man.

Looking over the list of marvelous inventions in this ingenious era, such as telephones, talking machines, typewriters, sewing machines, printing presses, vacuum cleaners and coffee percolators, you may note that most of them are for use by house inhabitants. They increase the efficiency, comfort and bacilli in stuffy rooms and steam-heated offices.

The distinguished exception is the automobile. It is an outdoor device. It implies fresh air. It connotes ozone. It means sun, wind and red blood.

It is hard to overvalue fresh air. Its effects are far-reaching, ramifying in sanity and vigor to the most unsuspected cells of human activity.

It permeates even to religion; for doubtless, what was the matter with many of the cruel creeds and fierce fanaticisms of a former day was that they were concocted in close rooms; bad air in the council chamber effloresced in autos in the cathedral square. People that ride in automobiles could not become thumb-screw heretics.

MOST OF NATURE'S REMEDIES CENTER ON AUTOMOBILES

There are but four real medicines in the bag of old Dr. Vis Medicatrix Naturae. They are air, sun, water and simple diet. Half of them are automobilistic.

The beauty of motoring is that it gets you somewhere. Time was that it took you all day to go out to Uncle Eben's farm, 20 miles away; now you whisk out there in an hour.

When father had a surrey and a claybank mare the best we could do for a ride was to poke about the city. Over seven miles an hour wore out the whip. Now the family and some of the neighbors pile themselves into year car and you are among the woods and hills in a few minutes.

The horse is a noble animal, but the bucket of gasoline under the buggy seat has relegated him to the circus and the park bride path. As a pleasure locomotor he is out of date.

No time is the motor more appreciated than in the spring. Nature is beginning her shy advance. Her violets and spring beauties and crocuses call city souls with an irresistible loveliness. The woods are greening, strange new birds are whistling, the grass is growing, fuzzy catkins are nodding, buds are swelling, the vast, strong, sweet creative sap of nature is mounting, and we are homesick for sun-sweet spaces.

We loathe the stove, the walls and the book cases. Our souls are hot with the passion for meadows, the wide sky and the winding road.

More than any other invention the automobile has brought the enamored-townsman to his sweetheart spring.

A deal has been said of the commercial uses of the gas-driven vehicle. It carries freight, supplants the grocery wagon, delivers dry goods and cheats the railways out of a lot of suburban merchandise traffic. But its ministry to the human spirit is fully as considerable.

HEALTH THE BEST DIVIDEND THAT MOTOR WILL PAY

The best dividend the automobile pays are those of health and happiness. It is making a redder-blooded, brighter-eyed, more vigorous-bodied generation of boys and girls. Even the old folks, and a good portion of the invalids and shut-ins, are able to get out for a daily bit of air and sunshine, when they can speed along in the catfooted motor instead of bumping slowly down the road in the carriage.

The trend of these times is back to the country. But few of us can own country homes in addition to our town dwellings. We can, however, by means of the motor, get away on pleasant days to forest and stream. And we don't have to own the pasture and flocks, the long vistas of appealing landscapes, the wild flowers, the cathedral nave of arching trees over the road, and all the inspiring beauty of the countryside; we can get the usufruct of beauty out of it without having any other deed to it than the right and title of appreciation.

The progress of the human race can best be marked perhaps by the character of its amusements. We are molded by our play more than by our work. It is play that captures the imagination, and the imagination is the determining factor in development. We follow our dreams.

People who take their recreation out of doors are drawn away from those forms of amusement which imply stuffy parlors, smoked-dimmed clubrooms and badly aired meeting places. The trolley has done much to loosen the tangled knot of cities; the motor car will do more.

The standardization of parts is bringing the price of automobiles within the reach of an increasing number of persons of moderate means. And the more the congested towns empty their blood into the arteries of country lanes the better will that blood return to them, aerated, purified, enriched by God's great sanitarium—outdoors.

HELPFUL HINTS.

A motor will throttle better at low speed if the spark plugs are kept in proper condition. The points of the plugs burn away gradually, and if not inspected and adjusted frequently misfiring will result.

As a general rule grease cups are not given the intelligent care they should receive. For instance, those under the engine hood and in a fairly warm place require occasional filling, as the heat keeps the grease fairly soft, and it is drawn into the bearings by the rotation of the shafts.

The fumes from a storage battery on charge are inflammable and it is by no means safe to bring a naked flame near a cell that is "gassing" freely. Battery repair shops and charging stations usually are careful in this respect, knowing by practical experience that the gas can be ignited.

Look first to the storage battery when your motor fails to start. The trouble may not be serious at all. It has been shown that poorly charged batteries most frequently put the automobile at a standstill. Two things are important in connection with the battery and its charging. One is that fresh water must be poured into the cells frequently—about each fifteen days is the proper time. The other is that the car must be kept in operation enough to keep the battery charged. The battery charges when the car is going ten miles an hour or more. Consequently when you drive in the city, with frequent stops, you use up current with the starter at each stop, while the generator is not refilling the battery. This often results in starting trouble with doctors and for women drivers. If your starter seems to be weak—give your car a good run to the country and back. That will fill the battery and your trouble of starting.

Most self-starting systems have a fuse box installed at an accessible point. The purchaser of a new car should acquaint himself with this as quickly as possible. Very often considerable trouble in the electrical system can be eliminated by the installation of a new fuse. This is a simple matter, but if not known may cause a lot of trouble and unnecessary expense.

Starting a motor will be facilitated if the carburetor mixture is enriched at starting. This is usually accomplished by a dash arrangement. Don't blame the self-starter if you fail to do this or if you try to start motor on magneto instead of battery. This applies especially where the self-starter does not throw the motor over very fast.

A BUDGET OF NEWS FOR THOSE INTERESTED IN LABOR
 IN THE WORLD OF LABOR
 GLEANED FROM THE EXCHANGES AND OTHER SOURCE

The wages of civic laborers in New Westminster, B.C., have been standardized at $2.50 per day.

A new scale committee of the Winnipeg Typographical Union is now busy at work, and it is expected that a conference with the employing printers will be held within a few days.

Heavy snowfalls during the past winter were responsible for a large amount of employment in Halifax, N.S., being given to laborers to clear the streets and it naturally aided to keep things going pretty near right.

The civic light and power plant of Winnipeg has fully demonstrated that municipal ownership is a sound proposition, and that with 3c. light there is a very substantial surplus to the credit of the institution, not taking into account that the citizens have benefited in the way of better lighted homes at less money.

Things look pretty dull at Lethbridge, Alta., this summer, as there is no building operations in sight and mostly all workers in the building trades are employed in other vocations or have left for other fields of operation. It is said to be just about the dulllest municipality in the Canadian West.

More than 25 per cent. of last year's acreage in Alberta is already seeded, and weather conditions are ideal. Farmers, however, fear for a shortage of farm labor which might mitigate seriously against the harvesting of a large crop. Wages for farm help are accordingly much higher than in 1915.

The bakers right through from London to Sarnia and Windsor have announced an advance in the price of bread from four to five cents for the small loaf and from six to seven cents for the larger loaf. The claim is made that the increase is due to the scarcity of labor, because of recruiting for the army service corps, the higher cost of material, and increased cost of delivery.

It is not only in the mining districts of Ontario that the necessity of a fortnightly pay-day is recognized. At the last meeting of the Victoria Central Labor Union a resolution was unanimously carried which requested the B. C. Federation of Labor to ask the provincial authorities to enact such legislation as will compel employers of labor to pay their employees at least twice a month.

According to Vice-president A. J. Carter, of District 79 of the United Mine Workers of America which has jurisdiction over the Western Canada coal fields, the organization is in good shape, and gaining ground, and the indications are that in the near future they would practically unionize the industry. Recently the union had secured a ten per cent. increase in wages, and was steadily growing in numbers and influence.

According to the Winnipeg Free Press the real danger to the street railway interests in the Prairie City are the jitneys, which continue to do a big and growing business and cutting heavily into receipts. Winnipeg electric affairs are, in fact, said to be in a far from satisfactory condition, and gilt-edged shares can now be had for $70, or $75 per share less than the price at which Sir William Mackenzie offered to transfer the concern to the city.

In New Westminster, B.C., one of the hotels there that formerly displayed the union card, decided to run open shop, and reduced the wages of its bartenders and help. Organized labor, however, got behind the little blue button to such effect that the proprietor asked for the union card again, signed up an agreement to run his establishment under strictly union conditions, pay the union rate of wages, and be good in future. He had to.

Montreal longshoremen have secured a new agreement with the various shipping companies of that city by which the latter agree to maintain existing wages rates and hours for a further period of two years, when an increase of five cents per hour in wages will become operative, and other conditions will be considered and if agreement upon them is not reached they will be settled by arbitration. The present wage scale is 35 cents an hour for day work and 40 cents for night work. On special jobs however higher rates will prevail.

At the recent convention of District No. 6 of the Western Federation of Miners, which was held in Trail, B.C., it was determined to adopt a sliding scale of prices. In the case of copper, the minimum is based on a market price of 16 cents per pound. When the price exceeds that figure an increase of 25 cents per day for every further advance of two cents per pound in copper. Scales were also adopted in regard to silver, lead, etc. The war has advanced profits of the mine owners enormously, and the intention is to have the scales therefrom arrived to rearrange schedules of prices so that the workers should share more proportionately in return for the wealth they produced. Some very promising developments in the gold mining district of Cobalt are taking place. The R. A. P. Syndicate at Boston Creek is yielding splendid results. In the face of both drifts there is now high grade ore, in some places being as wide in a three and a half foot ore body. This high grade ore right on the surface, runs over $500 to the ton. The Miller Independent property has opened up a vein at three places, and at each place there is a remarkable showing of free gold and a telluride that is probably calaverite. Developments in Chamber-Ferland shows two and a half inches wide of three thousand ounce ore. Other holdings in this district show splendid results, and it is apparent that this whole north country is undoubtedly the greatest mineral district in the world, and it has a great future ahead.

At a great mass meeting held in the Vancouver, B.C. Labor Temple recently, in which it was impossible for hundreds to secure admission, the retail clerks' agitation for provincial legislation to secure a Saturday half-holiday secured a big boost, many employers appearing on the platform in support of the proposition. This agitation has been engineered by the clerks for the last two or three years, and a strenuous educational campaign to enlighten the general public has been carried on most successfully. A bill favorable to the proposition has been introduced into the legislature, and it is now fully expected to pass, as public sentiment is behind it, and it is claimed that even a majority of the retail merchants have signed petitions in its favor. When the agitation was first launched no one took it seriously, with the exception of a few labor unions, and the fact that all classes are now behind it shows the power of organization when rightly directed in forcing live measures successfully to the front.

Was Loaded With Arms, But Destination a Mystery.

By Special Wire to the Courier
 New York, April 22.—A London cable to the Sun says:
 A telegram from Tralee says a collapsible boat, loaded with arms and ammunition, was seized by the police of Curahane Strand. A stranger of unidentified nationality was arrested in the neighborhood.
 It is not known from whence the boat came or for whom the cargo was intended.

GENERAL DEBILITY MAKES A HASTY RETREAT, REPORTS BRANTFORD CITIZEN

Many Brantford people, both old and young, are telling daily of the remarkable benefit that they are receiving from the use of Plantan, in cases of general debility, stomach, liver, kidney and catarrhal troubles. Mr. Thos. E. Loche, of King St. states:—
 "When I recently started the use of the Plantan treatment I was in the worst sort of shape from the effects of liver, intestinal and stomach disorders. This medicine has done me a world of good."

 The above statement should appeal directly to thousands who are suffering from similar ailments to those of Mr. Loche.
 Plantan, which is purely a product of herbs, roots and flowers that are gathered in many of the remote parts of the earth, can now be had at Boles' drug store, this city, where Mr. Jackson, the Plantan expert, who is direct from the laboratory where Plantan is made, is explaining it.

Annual Thank Offering Meeting

The annual thank offering meeting of the W. M. Society of Alexandra Presbyterian Church, was held on Tuesday of this week with a large attendance present. A very interesting service was held, the president, Mrs. McClintock presided. Mrs. F. Davis gave an excellent bible reading and Mrs. C. Gress gave a splendid paper on the Indian work. Mrs. McFarland, Miss E. Wood and Mrs. Philip led in prayer. The address of the day was given by Miss Preston, returned missionary to Japan, and was greatly enjoyed by all present. The offering for the day was $25.

 At the close of the meeting, Mrs. VanFleet, secretary, read the following address to the president, Mrs. McClintock:
 Dear President—We, the members of Alexandra W. M. Society wish at this time to express our very deep appreciation of your services as president of this auxiliary, of the joy that has been ours in working with you, and of the help and inspiration we have received from you at all times. It gives us great pleasure to present to you this life membership certificate in the Women's Missionary Society. May it even in the future recall pleasant recollections of our love and esteem for you, and the many profitable hours spent in the Master's service. That His richest blessing may ever abide with you, is the wish of your co-workers.
