A News Item and a Letter.

BY RUTH CAMERON.

The other day I was grieved to see in the paper an item to the effect that an old friend of mine who had been married about twelve years had just been granted a divorce from her husband. The grounds were incompatibility. The divorce was uncontested. It was evidently one of those cases in which the two parties have mutually agreed to disagree and to ask the divorce courts to let them do it.

As I read the news item, there flashed into my mind a conversation I had with my friend about four years after she was married. We were speaking of another young woman who had been married about the same time and had two babies, and of the fact that my friend had no children. "Oh, yes, I'm fond enough of children," she said, "but you know Fred and I are unusually devoted, and I don't want any children because I'm afraid they will come between us and spoil our comradeship."

That was eight years ago. To-day the other woman has a family of five beautiful sons and daughters, a very happy home and a devoted husband. When the woman who didn't want children to come between her and her husband has neither home nor children nor husband.

Yes, children often do come between husband and wife, but nine times out of ten they come between them as a bond infinitely more powerful and enduring than mere vagrant desire.

I thoroughly believe that it is well if a young couple can have a year or two to get used to married life and adjust themselves to each other before they add to their responsibilities. But the couple who thinks of marriage as a pleasant companionship which babies would spoil are steering away from a comparatively harmless Scylla to a deadly Charybdis.

About once in so often I have such interesting letters from my letter friends that I can't keep them to my-

Why Have "Nerves" ?

This is the reason why women have "nerves." When thoughts begin to grow cloudy and uncertain, impulses lag and the warnings of pain and distress are sent like flying messages throughout limbs and frame, straightway, nine times in ten, a woman will lay the cause of the trouble to some defect at the point where she first felt it. Is it a headache, a backache, a sensation of irritability or twitching and uncontrollable nervousness, something must be wrong with the head or back, a woman naturally says, but all the time the real trouble very often centers in the womanly organs. In nine cases out of ten the seat of the difficulty is here, and a woman should take rational treatment for its cure. The local disorder and inflammation of the delicate special organs of the sex should be treated steadily and systematically.

Dr. Pierce, during a long period of practice, found that a prescription made from medicinal extracts of native roots, without the use of alcohol, relieved over 90 per cent. of such cases. After using this remedy for many years in his private practice he put it up in form of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, that would make it easily procurable, and it can be had at any store where medicines are handled.

Mrs. LILA B. HAWKINS, of Zeus, Va., writes: "I had been failing in health for two years—most of the time was not able to attend to my household duties. Female weakness was my trouble and I was getting very bad but, thanks to Doctor Pierce's medicines, I am well and strong again. I took only three bottles of 'Favorite Prescription,' and used the 'Lotion Tablets.' I have nothing but praise for Doctor Pierce's wonderful medicines."

Pitt's Deal for the Regent Diamond Was a Celebrated Haggle.

The interesting story of the great Regent diamond, now owned by the French Government, is told by Norman Pearson in "Society Sketches in the Eighteenth Century." Thomas Pitt, the grandfather of the great William Pitt, Lord Chatham, purchased the stone while governor for the East India Company, and sent it to England in charge of his son Robert.

Pitt first heard of it in the summer of 1701, and about December of that year Jamchund, one of the best known native merchants, brought the diamond to him at Madras, and offered to sell it for two hundred thousand pagodas. Pitt would not offer more than thirty thousand, so the negotiations stopped. In February, Jamchund came again to Madras, and offered Pitt the diamond for one hundred thousand pagodas. Pitt beat him down to fifty-five thousand pagodas, and raised his own offer to forty-five thousand. Jam-

Now Feels Strong and Vigorous

And Fit for Any Amount of Work as the Result of Using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Mr. J. Hurlbert, 23 James Street, Brantford, Ont., writes:—"I was very much run down in health and as a consequence my nervous system was very much exhausted. Close confinement at my work, I think, brought on the trouble. I started using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and by the time I had used up one box I felt a great improvement. The continued use of this preparation has thoroughly restored my system so that I feel strong and vigorous and fit for any amount of work. I have also used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and Ointment with splendid satisfaction, and recommend them at every opportunity." England. For the English crown he would make some abatement; but under no circumstances was it to be sold "to a club of people that shall make more advantage of it than myself, who have run the greatest of risks to purchase it."

In 1703 these "risques" began to grow more serious. Never was a man more tormented by a treasure. His letters on the subject from India palpitate with his fears. He dreads being robbed by the jeweler who cut it, or even by his own agents. Having entrusted it to his son Robert and Sir Stephen Evance he subsequently orders them to hand it over to his cousin, George Pitt. About Robert he writes, "I am not a little jealous too of my one, who has already made too-bad with me on several occasions, therefore pray take care now that he does not strip me." Rumors affecting Evance's credit threw him into an agony of alarm. Bitter, too, is his disappointment when he finds that the stone has been reduced by cutting from four hundred and ten to one hundred and thirty-seven carats.

In 1706 it was ready for sale—a "glorious sight"—but no purchaser appeared. Pitt grew seriously concerned, his anxiety being increased by the growing fame of the jewel. His movements became uncertain and mysterious; he often went about in disguise, and he redoubled his precautions for the safekeeping of the treasure.

At last, in 1717, the Duke of Orleans, regent during the infancy of Louis XV., agreed to buy it for the French crown. Pitt, accompanied by his sons and his son-in-law, Charles Cholmondeley, carried it over himself to Calais, where it was delivered into the hands of the jeweler appointed to receive it. Pitt, in a letter to his son Robert, wrote: "I cannot help impertinent fools meddling with my business that they had nothing to do with. The stone was sold for two million livres (one hundred and thirty-five thousand pounds). I received the third of the money, and the remainder in four payments, every six months, with five per cent. interest; for security of which I have crown jewels, four parcels, one to be delivered at each payment."

What He Wasn't

The home team were determined, at all costs, to retain a lead which luck, rather than superiority of play, had given them.

They packed their goal, and by some means or other withstood a regular bombardment.

At last the attacking side chorussed an appeal for a penalty kick. The referee disagreed.

"Why, three fellows at least handled the ball," remonstrated the visiting captain.

The referee shook his head. "Play on," he said. "That goal-keeper's a marvel!"

"E may be," came the dissatisfied reply; "but I'm blowed if 'e's a blessed hocketopus!"

Give Your Wife a Bond As a Christmas Gift

Yes, it is a little early to talk of such matters, but we want to call your attention to it before you make other arrangements. Have you ever thought of giving such a handsome and enduring gift? Just think what it would mean to her—every six months a little coupon to cut off and money coming in—a practical and welcome reminder of your thoughtfulness. And this will continue year after year until the bond is due, then she will have the face value of the bond to re-invest. She will also have joined the "BONDHOLDER" ranks—a distinction that any thoughtful and careful woman would be glad to attain.

We offer a number of safe bonds in as low a denomination as $100. Think it over. Better send for our list to-day.

Note from Naples

Yesterday a letter was received from Mr. H. LeMessurier, of Naples, by the Board of Trade. It was dated Nov. 21st and read as follows:—"Labrador, the market is overstocked, and most strongly advise you to cease all shipments at present. During the past few weeks the situation of Labrador fish has shown a steady decline, the cause of which is no doubt due to the large quantities of this commodity arriving here, and also to allowances made on several cargoes, which made it possible for some of the buyers to sell at large reduction in prices as against their competitors. It is most advisable that further shipments be held back for the present, thus allowing the market to recover."

Sentenced to Three Years.

To-day Sergt Cox and Constable Morrissey arrived here from Bell Island with three prisoners. One of these, a girl named Brien who will be arranged on charge of infanticide. The two others were William and Robert Pike of St. John's, who were convicted before Magistrate Power for burglary. The former broke into no less than six different shacks in the mines and stole money and other belongings; and the latter committed one of the petty thefts. William was sentenced to six months for each one of the six charges or 36 months in all, and Robert was given six months.

Blood Poisoning.

A young man named Hynes, a deck hand on the Fogota cut his hand last week and did not give the matter much attention until he suddenly observed it to be rapidly swelling and very painful. Blood poisoning set in and both Dr. Leslie, of Change Islands, and Dr. Smith, of Fogo, performed operations on the member, the condition of which is slowly improving.

Publicly Executed in England.

On Tuesday, August 21, 1849, Mary Ann Geering was hanged in front of the county goal at Lewes for the series of crimes known as the "Guesting Poisonings," named from the parish where they were committed, near Hastings, the convict in this case having caused the death of her husband and their two sons for the purpose of obtaining the "burial-money" from an insurance society.

It happened that on the 23rd of the same month Rebecca Smith was similarly executed at Devizes, in Wiltshire, for the murder of her youngest child, one month old. After being convicted, this hardened criminal, who was said to affect a great outward show of piety, confessed to the chaplain of the goal that she had destroyed seven other of her children by poison. These two were certainly most inhuman monsters, and yet a public execution of even such women seems shocking.

In 1868 public execution was abolished altogether in the British Isles.

BRANDISHED A REVOLVER.—A few days ago a resident of Carbonear was up before Magistrate Power at Bell Island for brandishing a revolver and firing shots from it into the air at Portugal Cove. The weapon was taken from him by local constable W. Hibbs. The man was severely reprimanded and bound over to keep the peace. The police still retain the revolver.

SEAMAN CREATES SCENE.—Last night a seaman belonging to the S. S. Stephano created a disturbance at the Queen Theatre. Being drunk he was refused admittance whereupon he attempted to attack one of the ushers. Constables Pitcher and Hickey were called to arrest him. He resisted violently and was only handcuffed after a hard struggle and brought to the police station. The scene attracted much attention.

The Teachings of the Talmud.

The Talmud—most remarkable of books—right down through the ages has influenced and guided the thought and life of the Jews. In its lofty teachings may be found the noblest ideals and exalted ideas. A perusal of the Talmud enables one to realize why the Jew has been such a power of good in the world. These are a few of its tenets picked at random:—

Too many captains sink the ship.

The action of a fool cannot serve as a precedent.

Not without reason goes the crow to the raven, but because it is of its kind.

He laid his money on the horns of a deer.

Better eat onions all your life than dine upon geese and chickens once, and then long in vain for more ever after.

He that hires one garden will eat birds; he that hires any gardens the birds will eat him.

Go to sleep without supper, but rise without debt.

There is no greater evil-doer than he who takes away the earnings of the poor.

Women are to Blame

FOR A MAJORITY OF THE MATRIMONIAL TANGLES.

So Says Well Known Boston Matron in Interview—What All Women Will Find of Interest And Value.

"Seventy-five per cent. of all unhappy marriages are unhappy through the wife's fault."

Mrs. Edward W. Hooke, by twenty-four years of uninterrupted marriage, has established her right to one of the proudest degrees of womanhood—H. W. (happy wife). Meeting her at clubs, at teas, at matinees, in the gymnasium, in any of the score of places where smart women congregate, one hears first that she is a young woman of active mind, with marked executive ability, shown by her capable performance of the duties of president of the International Pure Milk League. But while one woman is admiring her trim tailored suit and another observes that she has travelled so much and lived in so many of the large cities of this country that she is what the politicians call "a good mixer." She thinks it is easy to get along with one's husband.

Mrs. Hooke whisked into a New York tearoom for bathing space in a busy day, and I asked her if she agreed with the trend of modern thought, that marriage is a hard job which the far-sighted woman declines to undertake.

"Hoshi!" was Mrs. Hooke's brisk answer. "It is the easiest thing in the world to make one's marriage a happy one, and a man is the easiest thing in the world to manage. All one has to do is to bring it down to the basis of a business proposition."

Wives to Blame.

"You are not advocating the un-American idea of marriage for money?" I inquired.

"I promise you not to do that, for I don't believe in it. But the difficulties that come up in marriage can be settled as they are in a business partnership. If two business partners disagree about something they don't think at once of business dissolution. They argue the matter out earnestly, but not offensively, and reach a bad rock of understanding on the essential points. This is what the reasonable wife does."

Are not all wives reasonable?

"Far from it. Seventy-five per cent of all the unhappy marriages are made unhappy by the wives. Three-fourths of the separations and divorces could be prevented if the women did their share in the business partnership."

"The greatest fault of women in married life is their extravagance. Yes, I know about the women who work hard in their homes and bring up well a large brood of little ones. But with all their virtues of patience and loyalty many of them have that great martial fault of women. Perhaps they don't go down town and buy a dress they know they can't afford. And maybe they don't insist upon living in an exclusive locality, or a garish apartment house, when they would be better off in an old-fashioned side street."

Chloroform Conscience.

"But they do use poor judgment which is a form of extravagance, in buying food. Delicatessens flourish and their owners grow rich because women make them the mainstays of the household instead of the emergency stations they are intended to be. I haven't been inside a delicatessen since in two years, because the household machinery hasn't broken down but once. That is what delicatessens were started for, but careless housekeepers have made them the family supply stations."

"I know a professional man who showed me his books to let me see what a profitable month he had. But he closed the books with a bang and asked me not to tell his wife how much he had made. If you did she would go down to the shops and spend every cent of it before night," he said. At the time I thought he was harsh.

A. E. CANNING

but I've since learned he was right. "Most women have not the excuse often offered for them that they don't know how much their husband earns. They do know it, but they have not enough self-control to live within his earnings. They see a gown they like—they must have it, and when their husbands says they can't afford it there is a quarrel. The man may need a pair of shoes, but that makes no difference to the woman, who must have the dress. Women seem to chloroform their consciences in these matters. No wonder men say that we have no sense of justice."

"Grown-up Children."

"The other twenty-five per cent of marriage failures are due to women's thoughtlessness—that is, a degree of heartlessness. Women get out of bed unwillingly and shuffle about all morning in a kimono and slippers. Husband goes downtown and meets an attractive woman who dresses daintily, who seems to admire him and who makes an effort to be entertaining."

"He remembers the kimono and he goes home and finds a wife who interrupts what he thinks a good story by saying: 'Dear, I saw a lovely hat marked down to $10.98 that I really must have.' He thinks: How did 'Men are only kids. We are all one I ever happen to marry this woman?' by grown-up children. When the man's day's work is done he comes home in the mood of a boy, expecting to be amused. He wants a wife who will talk entertainingly to him and will pass along anything worth while she has heard during the day. If he has a wife who is good fun at home he won't be so liable to go out to clubs."

A man's day must be started right and the way to start it right is to give him a good breakfast and share it with him. Many a man who goes downtown and does good work begins the day with muddy coffee he makes himself. You've no idea how many men in this town get their own breakfast. And there is a vast number of wives who are still lounging in bed when their husbands begin the day's work."

Says Men Are Fickle.

"Men are fickle creatures and if the day begins badly and ends badly at home, they are likely to turn for comfort to some woman who is more thoughtful—or pretends to be."

The 75 per cent of marriage failures that lie at women's doors prove that the selfishness of our sex has been overrated. It is the selfishness of women that is to blame for three-fourths of the marriages that fail.

"Most men are less selfish than we are. Take the show window gazing habit. You know yourself how hard it is to get past a show window full of pretty things, even though you don't intend to buy. Men will stop and look into the show windows with us, though they are not interested. But there are show windows that interested men—tobaccoists' and haberdashers' windows. When do you see a woman standing beside her husband and looking into such windows? If a man edges toward the window his wife is sure to hang back and scowl."

"Twenty-five per cent, or one-fourth of the marriage failures are due to the selfishness of men. Some men are impossible. But I will say this for them: They go into the marriage partnership with the intention of remaining with the firm for life. Many women don't. They become engaged to marry with a mental reservation. They say to themselves: 'If this doesn't turn out well I can get a divorce and try again.' A point of view that is positively wicked."

OTTAWA, Dec. 12.
A Canadian fleet for each of Canada's coasts, with a Superdreadnought as the center of each fleet, the establishment of yards in Canada and the building in them of ships as far as possible; the fleets to be manned by Canadians, and maintained by Canada; and readiness to go to the aid of Britain in time of emergency—such was the Liberal policy outlined by Sir Wilfrid Laurier in the Commons this afternoon. He condemned the Borden policy of direct contribution, as un-Canadian, un-British, and against the best future interests of the British Empire, concluding with an amendment condemning the Borden policy, and expressing want of confidence in the Government.

A Song of Duty.

Sorrow comes and sorrow goes,
Life is flecked with shine and show,
Now the tear of grieving flows,
Now we smile in happy hour;
Death awaits us every one,
Toller, dreamer, preacher, writer,
Let us, then ere life be done,
Make the world a littler brighter.

Burdens that our neighbors bear,
Easier let us try to make them wear,
Chains, perhaps, our neighbors wear,
Let us do our best to break them;
From the straightened hand and mind
Let us loose the binding fetter,
Lus as the Lord designed,
Make the world a little better.

Selfish broodings sears the soul,
Fills the mind with clouds of sorrow,
Darkens all the shining goal
Of the sun-illuminated morrow.

Men's Winter OVERCOATS!

It is difficult to determine what is the most important point when purchasing a Winter Overcoat.

If the quality is bad, it soon looks shabby. If the fit is bad, you feel shabby. If the finish and trimmings are bad, you look shabby.

To avoid such an annoying state of affairs,

Purchase one of our New Overcoats, at $6.50, $8.00 or $13.50, with long roll collars, double-breasted, belt, with storm cuffs if desired; specially smart and warm.

A full range just received of

Our Special Ulster Overcoats, at $9.50 & 11.50,

With all the latest improvements (warm without too much weight) and similar to tailor-made Coats at $22.00 and $25.00.

Weird Adventure.

While the British ship Molecan was in the Atlantic, late in August, 1902, a strange cloud, of phosphoric appearance, suddenly enveloped the ship. She was approaching the Delaware break-water at the time. At once all the iron on board the vessel was magnetised, and fire played across the ship from stem to stern.

The Whole Vessel Had a Coating of Fire.

even the crew being enveloped by the fiery cloud. The needle of the ship's compass flew around like an electric fan, and the chains, bolts, and bars adhered to the deck as if they had been riveted. The sailors could not even lift even light spikes, while the hairs of their heads stuck out like bristles, and it became a matter of difficulty to move arms or legs.

As suddenly as it had come the cloud lifted, and the phosphorescence on the ship began to fade. In a few minutes the cloud passed away, and could be seen moving along the face of the sea.

It is chronicled on September 1, 1794: "As the corpse of a gentleman was being conveyed to the burial ground it was arrested by a sheriff's officer and his followers, under the usual warrant, on a writ of capias ad satisfaciendum. The friends who followed immediately left their coaches and told the officer if he chose he was welcome to take the body; but he should not have the coffin, shroud, or any one particle, in which the body was enveloped, as these things were the property of the executors, and they further insisted that as the deceased had, by his will, bequeathed his body to them, no execution would hold good against the corpse." The bailiff discussed the matter, and came to the conclusion that the writ was to take a living body, and not a corpse and the account winds up: "This, it is presumed, is the first and only instance of the kind that has happened since the arrest of the dead body of a sheriff of London, not many years since."

A Forty Feet Drop

Jones is one of those individuals who see for ever on the "catch."

"Did you," he asked Brown, the other day, "hear about the pork butcher at the corner?"

"No," replied Brown. "What about him?"

"Why," said Jones, "he dropped forty feet into a cauldron of boiling water."

"Dear, dear me, poor fellow," was the sympathetic comment of Brown.

"There is no need to pity him," remarked Jones.

"No need to pity him!" expostulated Brown, in pained surprise. "I do pity him. Why, the poor fellow must have been scalded to death."

"No," said Jones, "he wasn't even hurt."

"What! Not hurt after dropping forty feet into boiling water?"

"No," explained Jones; "you see, they were pigs' feet."

Brown has resolved on vengeance deep and dire.
