CHAPTER XIV.
LASSELLES' DEATH.

In a few hours after the arrival of the telegram, announcing the death of Lasselles, Adrian and I are speeding toward London as fast as the express can carry us.

"I wonder if it was an accident?" I say, in an awe-stricken voice.

"I should think so; it must have been very sudden," says Adrian. "Evidently, he was all right when Theo wrote to Loys, two days ago."

"Oh, Adrian," I cry, shivering and creeping more closely to his side, "it is horrible! I can't believe it!"

"No, poor fellow; it's almost incredible. Theo is very young to be a widow."

"Very—only twenty—and with two little children. Well, it is a good thing they are rich, isn't it?"

As is generally the case in times of sudden bereavement, I forgot that Theo and I have been other than the tender sisters we were in childhood. As there are many gaping wounds healed beside an open grave; and an enemy must indeed be a bitter one which can resist a softening influence at such seasons. So it is with my heart filled with tenderest love and pity that I step out upon the platform at the Waterloo Station. Theo's footman is on the lookout for us, and Adrian asks if Lord Lasselles' death was due to an accident.

"Oh, no, sir!" is the man's reply. "My lord was eating his breakfast as usual this morning; and, just as I handed his cup to him, he clutched hold of the table, and said: 'Oh, great Heaven!' and leaned forward. I lifted him up, and Simpkins, the butler that is, says: 'Why, my lord, says he, 'what is it?' But he was stone dead—stone dead before my lady could get round from the other side of the table."

"Was Lady Lasselles there?" I ask, in a horrified tone.

"Oh, yes, my lady! They were just beginning breakfast."

"And how is she?" says Adrian.

"Well, my lady was very quiet all through," is the man's answer, "and the maid told me this evening that she sat very still all day, almost without saying a word. But the woman are in great trouble about the little lord, for he's cried for 'dassie' all day. I went up into the nursery to see if he'd come to me, but he wouldn't; it was 'dassie, dassie—me want dassie!' till I couldn't stop any longer." And then he shuts the carriage door and turns away as if he could not trust himself to say another word.

Theo's maid meets me in the hall. "Will you come this way, my lady?" she says, in a hushed voice.

So I follow her up the broad staircase, and she stops at the door of Theo's room, and, having knocked, she opens it, and I enter. Theo is sitting in a low chair before the fire, and rises when she sees me. I rush to her impulsively and take her into my arms.

"My poor, dear Theo!" I say, tearfully.

But, to my intense astonishment, Theo says, calmly:

"There, there; that will do, Audrey."

I have not calculated on such a reception as this. I draw myself away and sit down on the edge of a chair, and wish myself anywhere but where I am. Theo lies back in her chair and makes no attempt to speak; and though I feel something is expected of me, I cannot think of anything to say. At last I remark stupidly that we were very much shocked when we heard the news, and that it was awfully sudden.

"Very," says Theo; "but don't talk about it. It was all very horrible, and it does no good to talk about it. Of course you've heard everything from the servants."

I feel that no other topic will be acceptable, so sit in uncomfortable silence, and wish Adrian and I had not hurried up to town so soon. Then Theo says that, if I go down, I shall find supper in the dining room, and that perhaps I will excuse her seeing me again to-night. So I kiss her and go, to find Adrian waiting for me. He tells the servants that they need not wait, and, when we are alone, asks if Theo is much upset.

"Not a bit," I answer; "she's just as cool and composed as ever she was, and won't say a word about it." "Stunned," suggests Adrian.

"Well, perhaps. You will see for yourself to-morrow," I say, calmly; "but I never saw such a widow in all my life."

In the morning Loys comes, and comes alone, for Teddy cannot be spared. She has left the baby for the first time, and is anxious accordingly. After that, people are coming all day—Lady Lasselles the elder, and Rose and Edith, both full of all kinds of warnings they have had during the past week. Theo sees them for a few minutes, but keeps to her own rooms and requests that she may not be disturbed. In the afternoon Loys and I find our way up to the nurseries, where the two little children are. Loys seizes the baby instantly to its evident satisfaction, while I make overtures to the little viscount by asking him if he will not come to auntie. But the little man only shakes his head, and says, fretfully, "Me want dassie."

I do not know much about children and I am perplexed what to say to him. I do not like to tell him that his "dassie" has gone away—he would not understand if I say he is dead. I look at the head nurse imploringly.

"He was like that all yesterday my lady, she says, in answer to the look. "My lord was very fond of him; and always, when he was in the house, he was up here, or Master Derrick was downstairs with him. And, when he fretted for him we had orders always to send for my lord if he was anywhere near. Indeed, I've known him to come up from a dinner party if Master Derrick cried for him."

Headaches and Heart Trouble

Nervous Prostration of Three Years' Standing Cured a Year Ago by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Anyone who knows the discouragement and despair which accompanies the helplessness of nervous prostration will appreciate the gratitude felt by the writer of this letter.

Mrs. H. C. Jones, Scotch Lake, C. B., writes: "I suffered from nervous prostration for nearly three years. I had frequent headaches, had no appetite and was troubled with my heart. After consulting two doctors without obtaining satisfactory results, I began the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and was completely cured by this treatment. It is nearly a year since I was cured, and I want others to know of this splendid medicine. I now attend to my housework with pleasure and comfort, and am glad to have the opportunity of recommending Dr. Chase's Nerve Food."

At least some benefit is bound to be derived from each dose of this great food cure, as day by day it forms new blood, and builds up the system. 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

Had Itching Piles For 27 Years

"Poor little man!" I say, while the tears fall from Loys' eyes onto the baby's golden hair.

The subject of our conversation looks in a bewildered fashion from one face to another; then, with a sigh so big that you wonder it could have come out of so small a body, he says:

"Me want dassie."

"I wonder if he would take to Sir Adrian?" I say, at last.

"I think not, my lady. We sent for Burrows yesterday afternoon, but he wouldn't look at him, and Simpkins came up last night, but it was of no use; he just cried himself to sleep."

"You should have sent for Lady Lasselles," says Loys.

"For my lady?" questions the woman. "Oh, no, ma'am; we never trouble my lady."

Loys looks at me and says nothing. I lift the boy onto my knee and smooth his bonnie, golden-curly. He puts one tiny hand upon my dress, which is of velvet, and says: "Dassie!" I look at the nurse for explanation.

"My lord often came up in his smoking suit," she says, "and it was of velvet."

An idea crosses my mind. I left Adrian in his dressing room, and he had on a velvet coat.

"Will Derry go downstairs with auntie?" I ask.

He says "Yes," so I carry him down, and find Adrian writing letters. "If you'll dictate, I'll write those," I tell him. "I want you to make friends with the boy."

"All right," he says, cheerfully. "Come here, Derry, and look at my watch."

A good deal to my surprise, Derry goes straight to him, without murmur or complaint of any kind, and, after exhausting the mysteries of the watch, looks round at me, and, in a tone of the utmost satisfaction, says: "Big man."

So there we stay all the afternoon I soon finish the letters; and, when it is nearly dark, Theo's maid comes to say that Lady Lasselles will be glad if I will go to her. I find her exactly in the same attitude, as yesterday sitting back in a low chair, with idly clasped hands, and, as quietly composed in face and manner as if Lasselles had gone to Scotland for a week's shooting.

"How are you to-day, Theo?" I ask, for I must say something, and in my nervousness, I cannot think of anything else.

"Very much as usual, thank you," answers Theo, calmly. "What have you been doing all day?"

"This afternoon I have been writing letters for Adrian," I answer.

"Oh, yes! is he out?"

"No; he is in the dressing room. Jerry is with him."

"Oh, Lasselles, you mean?" I shiver to hear her call the boy by his little while his father still lies dead in the house. "Who took him in here? Surely there are servants enough to look after him, without Adrian being troubled."

"Adrian does not find him a trouble," I answer, coldly. "And I took him in there because he has been retreating for his father since yesterday."

"Really! Ah, he's a very tiresome child, and Lasselles' utterly ruined him! I never could see the good myself of giving way to the whims and caprices of a baby of that age."

I do not answer this at all. I do not know much about children, and so it is of no use attempting any argument with Theo on the subject. Besides, for decency's sake, I do not want any disagreements just now. Presently she breaks the silence, and asks why Adrian has not been to see her.

"I think he was afraid of intruding," I answer.

"Oh, it won't be intruding at all! It's very dull here; but I prefer being by myself to having to endure all the noisy grief I have no doubt Lasselles' people are indulging in. You might go and send him here; will you?"

I do not like to say "No," though I know Adrian would rather not go; but I have to submit, and kiss my sister's cheek meekly ere I leave the room.

"She wants you to go and see her," I say, when I return to the dressing room.

As I expected, Adrian pulls a long

Had Itching Piles For 27 Years

Often Laid Up for Days at a Time—A Wonderful Tribute to Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Few people were ever more enthusiastic in praising Dr. Chase's Ointment than the writer of this letter. When you read the description of his case you will not wonder why Mr. John Johnson, Coleman, Alta., writes: "Three years ago I was cured of blind, itching piles of 27 years' standing by using Dr. Chase's Ointment. I used to think that death would be the only relief I would ever get from the terrible misery of piles. Often I was laid up for three days at a time, and at other times worked when I should have been in bed."

"Dr. Chase's Ointment" is worth six dollars a box instead of sixty cents. I am a different man since using it. I am farming all the time, and never miss a day. Words fail to express my gratitude for the cure this ointment made for me. I cannot tell half as much about it as it deserves. Anyone doubting this can write direct to me."

face. Manlike, he dreads anything like a scene, and, I honestly believe, would walk ten miles rather than face a crying woman.

"Oh," he says, very blankly, "I'd rather not!"

"She thinks it very strange that you have not been before," I add; "but you needn't be afraid. She is very much as usual."

"At last, having persuaded the boy to let him go—for nothing will induce him to go and see his mother—he departs very unwillingly, and I take Derry upstairs to be made tidy; Adrian has promised him that he shall dine with us to-night. I leave him in the nurse's hands, and go back to the dressing room fire, where I sit alone for half an hour.

GREAVES & SONS, Ltd.

The Dowager Countess of Donoughmore wishes to find an old Irish family who migrated to America, about forty-five years ago, after selling their home, Kilmannahan Castle, Clonmel, to the late Earl of Donoughmore. Five years ago, when the owners of the castle were away, some Americans named Green, called to see the home of their ancestors, and were by mistake refused admission. Ever since then Lady Donoughmore has searched in vain for the Green family to apologize to them.

Recently Lady Donoughmore received a letter from Scotland Yard stating that an article found in a taxicab in London last February had been identified by means of the crest as belonging to the Greens of Kilmannahan Castle. Before the article was found a man named Green had reported his loss to the police, but had gone away leaving on address. There is now a double reason for finding some representatives of the family.

Preventing a Slum

The subject of the following article, which is taken from "Collier's Weekly" and written by W. A. Clarke) is Peter Bryce who is now in St. John's.

Mr. Bryce is a modest man and finds ample reward in the result of his work, but we think that his work is of such a character and deals with such a great modern problem that publicity may be the means of starting other men to work along the same lines.

This Shacktown, just outside Toronto, was almost starving in 1907. As the article shows it is now fairly comfortable and rejoices in the name of Earl's Court.

Mr. Bryce is accompanied by his wife (nee Miss Julie Woods) and a fine boy of some months (W. A. Clarke in "Collier's Weekly").

To-day Shacktown is getting more from what funds it has than most people in the wealthier parts of Toronto. And the secret of the change lies to a great extent in Peter Bryce the Methodist preacher. Shacktown is now a working man's suburb. It is really more than a suburb. It is a community in the sense that its people cooperate in the solving of a great many of their common troubles. The Anglicans, the Presbyterians, the Methodists, and almost all the religious denominations are represented among these people. Each church is a sort of center, not only of religious and social activities, but of the economic life of the district. But first and foremost of them all is the Methodist Church where Peter Bryce conceived and carried out his ideas.

This man Peter Bryce is a tall spare, quiet-spoken, mild-mannered man with a genius for helping people to help themselves. He was one of the most active workers in the district in the hard times of 1907 when he was only a student looking after his mission. Since being ordained he has continued in that district, and the ideas as to organization, which he received in connection with the relief work, he has applied to almost every phase of life in his region.

After the great stress was over, and when the rest of the region were once more able to obtain work, Bryce saw that without strenuous effort on his part, and the part of other missioners in the place, Shacktown might easily deteriorate into a city slum. All the elements of a slum were there, except the streets—Shacktown had, and had yet plenty of open space. Most of the people were labourers, earning only a small wage. A great percentage of them were, as I said before, from the slums of London. The same percentage of shiftlessness and wastefulness among his people as in any congregation, but his people could not afford to be extravagant and careless. If they did they would become a slum. This was the thing Peter Bryce was afraid of, not that he did not believe in his congregation, but because he knew the difficulties ahead of it.

Cooperative Coal.
There was the matter of buying coal. Shacktown families, when they could afford it at all, were in the habit of buying their coal by the sack or in even smaller quantities, with the result that they paid the very highest price. He set about to remedy this.

"But we can't," they said, when he asked them to try to save their money and buy their coal in larger lots. "We haven't the money."

"How much do you spend for coal now?"

"Oh, when we get a few nickels together and a few ten-cent bits, then we send out for a little coal. Maybe we get a quarter's worth or half a dollar. But we can't do much better than that."

"Yes, you can," said the Reverend Peter, having conceived an idea. "I'll show you next prayer meeting night."

And he did. The idea was this: long before winter was at hand he and the congregation were to form a club to be called "The Coal Club." This club would receive deposits from its members of anything from a cent to a dollar—more if offered—to be held until the winter season when it would be applied in the purchasing of coal for the club members. In other words, instead of buying coal at high prices and in small lots, the congregation was to buy in wholesale quantities and divide the coal according to the amount invested in the club funds by each family. The club was formed in May and a contract was made with a coal dealer for a large consignment. During the summer the members paid in such little sums as they could spare from time to time. They could not always get very far ahead toward a winter supply of coal, but in many cases they were able to start the coal-burning season with a fair supply ahead. About $1,300 was paid into the club, and the coal was sold to the members at a price fifty cents per ton lower than it could be purchased by the average citizen of Toronto.

All Sorts of Clubs.

In that hard winter Shacktown had learned that bed coverings are not to be dispensed with in Canada. Many a household had slept in its meagre clothing with newspapers spread over the beds. Peter Bryce met this trouble in succeeding winters by organizing the Quilt and Blanket Club. Quilt sort of a name, you say! True, but the club does a great work. It purchases the articles mentioned in its constitution direct from the wholesalers. Last winter two hundred and thirty quilts and blankets were brought into the district homes in this way—cheaper than they could have been obtained otherwise. The same is the story of the Shoe Club, which watches the bargains and has the big stores and buys the cheap footwear by the job lot. The Goose Club arises out of the fact that many of the congregation are from England and Scotland, where tradition says a man should have a goose at Christmas if he can possibly afford it. The congregation who would willingly live a few Christmas geese, but the club is intended as a means of avoiding such a situation. It makes it easy for its members to live up to his tradition without outside help. The women of the community pay in ten cents a week each for several weeks before they reach festival. This is held until the proper moment of purchase. They thus obtain their geese for about twenty-five or thirty cents less than if they bought separately. Last Christmas the club made a contract for one hundred and thirty geese.

Once his club idea was a success the preacher extended it to all sorts of things. The Christmas Shopping Club is a bank for the odd pennies and silver of its members, who receive five per cent interest up to the time they withdraw it for their Christmas shopping. The Holiday Club was inaugurated last February. It is still in the experimental stage, but provides that by means of weekly payments those families who have no friends or relatives on this side of the ocean, and who therefore cannot go "visiting" for their vacations, are able to enjoy an outing at a near-by summer resort. For this purpose a big ten-room house was obtained, of which four families at a time could spend a week's holiday each.

These clubs and the handling of the funds require thought and labor. Each club is in charge of two women, and works in connection with the other activities of the church. Morris Men Despondent.

After keeping silent since Monday, the Daily News breaks out again this morning with a series of opinions. The story told by us yesterday is characterized as a silly season one. As the editor of the Daily News seeks consolation from his opinion, he is welcome to it. But it proves nothing beyond Mr. Robinson's dislike of it. In return we will give him another about the difficulty his party is finding in getting a third man to face Trinity. A well known business man of Trinity declines to stand for them on the ground it is useless for any one to enter the fight and face the P.P.U. opposition in Trinity with Sir Robert Bond leading the Liberal Party. Mr. Robinson can put that in his pipe and extract what consolation he can from it. He tells us too that the P.P.U. petitions for an election last fall was a fake one. The P.P.U. men will make it clear to him in a way he cannot fail to grasp within a few months. All that detraction proves is Mr. Robinson's resentment of the attitude of the petitioners. He has no liking for petitions anyway. He signed a deal in 1898 against which many thousands petitioned. There was the same disparagement of these petitions and petitioners. Tories declared that the petitioners had been misled and that the petitions were fakes. But what happened when the people had a chance of recording their votes? Robert Bond was returned by the largest majority which a leader ever secured. Thirty-two Liberals were returned and only four Tories, and out of these four only two had supported the deal. No wonder Mr. Robinson dislikes petitions, particularly when they show a disposition in the petitioners to turn out a Tory Government.

On Saturday we mentioned a number of the settlements in the northern districts which had returned Morris men from which these petitions came. Among them were Indian Arm, Salvage Bay, Bonavista, Clarke's Beach, Freshwater, Catalina, Selby's Cove, Fox Harbor, New Melburne, Newman's Cove, Musgrave Town, St. Brendan's, Brooklyn, Northern Arm, Newtown, Wesleyville, Sate Harbor, King's Cove, Heart's Ease, Chazy, Neve's, English Harbor, Elliston, Bonaventure, Hatchett Cove, Trinity East, Long Beach, Snook's Harbor, Scilly Cove, Old Perlian, Valleyfield, Trinity, White Rock, Greenspond, Flat Islands.

The charge of faking is a charge against the P.P.U. and its members for the Supreme Council has clearly put on record that "the contents and form" of these petitions had already received the sanction of the Supreme Council before they were circulated for signatures, and that body also endorsed the contents of the petitions Valuable Stallion Breaks Its Leg.

Yesterday afternoon whilst Mr. Joseph Judge was taking his stallion (Bison Chief) out of the stable, in some way the animal's leg got caught and the bone broke off above the knee. The animal had to be destroyed. This is a very heavy loss to Mr. Judge as he only had the stallion a short while, having bought him at a large figure a few months ago. Bison Chief was one of the finest animals seen here for years.

Bebbington, C. Smith and one in steerage.

Garden Parties.

ST. THOMAS'S. Despite counter attractions, the Garden Party held at St. Thomas's Rectory Grounds, yesterday afternoon, was well attended and was in every particular a great success. His Excellency the Governor and suite were in attendance. Revs. G. R. Godden and G. H. Hewitt did all in their power for the pleasure of visitors. Various sorts of games and amusements were afforded children who enjoyed themselves to the fullest. The C.L.B. Band were present during the afternoon and discoursed lively selections. A pleasing event was the presentation of a bouquet of roses by Miss Wood, niece of Rev. G. R. Godden, to Mrs. Davidson. The stalls and ladies in charge of them were: Flaxwork—Mrs. Austen, Mrs. F. Rendell, Mrs. Anderson, Mrs. Stirling and Miss Payne.

Bag Table—Mrs. Carter, Mrs. Hunt, Ice Cream—Mrs. Fraser, Mrs. Flower Stall—Mrs. Lindberg, Miss Shultze. Candy—Miss Wellman. Fruit—Mrs. Howe, Mrs. Curran. Iced Drinks—Mrs. H. Stirling.

The ladies who presided at the tea tables did a brisk business. The proceeds reached a substantial sum, and will be devoted to the Church Organ Fund.

ST. PATRICK'S. Yesterday, St. Patrick's Garden Party was held. Though the weather was cold still the fete was a success. It was held at the Bowring Park and the attendance was larger than last year. The grounds were tastefully decorated with bunting and the tables were regally set with the best that could be afforded. There were present His Grace Archbishop Howley, Monsignors Roche and St. John, Revs. Dean Roche, Ashley, Kelly, Mc Dermott and others. The music was rendered by the T. A. Band and was very enjoyable.

ST. MARY'S PICNIC. St. Mary's Sunday School Picnic was held at Mount Pearl, yesterday. Hundreds assembled and various sports were indulged in. The Rector, Rev. H. Uphill was present during the day.

Special to Evening Telegram. PEKIN, July 16. Russia now demands the full autonomy of Outer Mongolia; that China shall be Suzerain only; that China accept Russian intermediation; and recognize all rights conceded to her at Urga, the capital of Mongolia. The Chinese Parliament has been hastily summoned. There is much excitement and great hostility from both Chinese and foreigners.

LONDON, July 16. The betrothal is announced of Prince Arthur, of Connaught, aged 30, and the Duchess of Fife, King Edward's grand-daughter. She is 25. The British press welcomes the announcement. The Prince is extremely popular in Army and Society, and has been the King's representative in many foreign courts. The Duchess, like her mother, is somewhat retiring in disposition. She is one of the wealthiest women in England, owning about 250,000 acres.

SALONIKI, July 16. Full confirmation is reported of the sacking and burning of the Macedonian town of Seres by the fleeing Bulgarian troops, who crucified, hanged to death, and burned many of the inhabitants. The confirmation has been sent by the Austrian Consul-General here to Vienna. Three thousands of a former flourishing town of 30,000 inhabitants is a mass of melting ruins. The Consul says after a personal investigation. He had gone to Seres to inquire into the plundering and the carrying off of vice-consul George Zlatko.

WASHINGTON, July 16. President Wilson, to-day, after a conference with Secretary Bryan, ordered Ambassador Wilson, of Mexico City, to proceed to Washington immediately for conference. He will come either by the Michigan or the Louisiana from Vera Cruz, if delay is entailed by waiting for the ordinary steamer, and is expected by July 23rd. Diplomatic circles believe that the conference and decision are the result of the official announcement that some Foreign Powers which have already recognized the Huerta Government, are pressing for some indications of the attitude of the States Government towards the continued disorders in Mexico.

LONDON, July 16. The Home Rule Bill's second reading was defeated in the Lords by 302 to 24. The Lansdowne resolution that the House decline to consider the Bill until submitted to the country, was passed without division. The result was a foregone conclusion, but it has inaugurated a serious crisis between the two Houses. Lord Curzon withdrew Lord Lansdowne's promise to accept the Home Rule Bill if a general election were won on it, whilst the Prime Minister announced definitely that the Lords Reform Bill would be tabled next session. The challenge on both sides is complete and uncompromising. The peers are preparing for a life and death fight. It looks as though the Prime Minister was going to bring in a Bill for the formation of a new second chamber, then dissolve, and go to the country on it. The Cabinet has apparently been formulating plans for some time.

MRS. ELIZABETH QUIGLEY. An old and respected resident of Topsail Road passed away this morning in the presence of Mrs. Elizabeth Quigley, widow of the late Peter Quigley. Helpful Counsel.

When man is in a broken condition he'd rather have some pies than forty tons of ammunition or counsel high and wise. We like to help the people living in want, in squalid berds, when help consists of merely giving a string of shining words. We like to send those words like rockets athwart the dismal night, the while we see that all our pockets are buttoned close and tight. We hear the needy cry and clamor, by dire misfortune vexed, and we distribute chunks of grammar and platitudes and text. If we back up these verbal capers by giving greens or tripe, we want to see it in the papers, in double-leaded type. We want to hear the bands a-playing "The Conquering Hero Comes," when we with alms and aid go straying among the hungry bums. But once in forty thousand ages we find the modest guy who takes a portion of his wages to give the hungry pie, who to the widow gives some liver, or sends of slim a cord, because he thinks the cheerful giver is loved well by the Lord. The rest of us are fond of standing where crowds can see us, sure, and while reporters watch us, handing chaste language to the poor.

Sad Death.

A very sad death under peculiar circumstances occurred at the General Hospital yesterday. The victim was John Murray, the 23 year old son of Mr. Peter Murray, farmer, of Freshwater Road. About a week ago the deceased young man stepped on an iron rake, the teeth of which penetrated the flesh in the heart of his foot. Blood poisoning quickly set in, followed by lockjaw, which resulted in death despite the best medical skill possible given him at the Hospital. Deceased was an ex-pupil of St. Bonaventure's College. Mr. and Mrs. Murray are distracted over the loss of their son, and to them the sincere sympathy of the community is extended.

The Nickel Crowded.

SPLENDID PROGRAMME. The Nickel Theatre's holiday programme yesterday was very largely attended. The pictures were of a highly interesting character and gave every satisfaction. Egyptian sports was the first picture and was followed by a sensational story entitled "A Prisoner in the Harem." "Broncho Billy's Bible" was one of the finest western stories ever seen on canvas. "A Limited Divorce" and "Like the Cat, they came back" were comedies. Mr. Myers singing was most attractive.

Put Yourself in Her Place.

By RUTH CAMERON.

"I think it's perfectly all right for a woman to refuse to come where there are children in the home," I heard an indignant young man declare the other day. "Here I've been trying to get a maid for two weeks and she's an impudent thing, refuse to come simply because I have two children. I wonder if they think people shouldn't be allowed to have children." This outburst was received with appreciation by three other young women who all began to vigorously compete for the floor, in order to tell the troubles they or their friends, or their friends' friends had had with equally impudent maids who dared to object to working where there were small children.

Did you ever attend a similar indignation meeting? If you are a woman I've no doubt you have, for they are being held all over this country, and the almost entire unanimity with which the offending maids are condemned makes me blush for the lack of sense of justice in my sex. We all know how much harder children make the work in any house; how they upset the routine; get things in disorder, create confusion and as the New England housewife would put it, track in the dirt. Even when they are our own children and we love them with all our hearts, we sometimes get out of patience. What wonder, then, that they often prove an unendurable trial to the outsider to whom they are excused by no tie of affection, and whom they frequently treat with an entire lack of courtesy and consideration.

Would you think it outrageous, madam, if your husband, with plenty of opportunities open to him, chose that position in which he would be at least hampered in doing his work?

And that is all your maid is doing.

Again, I have frequently heard women complain most bitterly because houseworkers are demanding such high wages. "It's ridiculous," says one. "I wouldn't pay that money even if I could afford it," says another. "They are extortioners," says a third. "I think the government ought to do something about it."

Tell me, madam, if your husband were fortunate enough to be engaged in some kind of work in which the demand for workers was much larger than the supply, would he charge as much as he could get for his services, or not?

To get as pleasant and easy a position as possible and get as much money for one's service as possible is the average worker's ambition everywhere in the world.

Why, then, should you blame this particular class for holding this ambition?

If you, yourself, love housework so passionately that you think you would be willing to do it in a stranger's home, work under difficult conditions, and accept a much smaller wage than you had the power to command, you have reason to condemn these people, otherwise not.

Ruth Cameron

Fashions and Fads.

Metal novelties are also coming in for fall, the metal effect being in gold and silver filling threads.

Thick, soft materials, which look weighty but are ideally light, are promised for fall evening wraps.

Green with canary and gold with king's blue are among the new color combinations seen in Swiss sweaters.

One of the prettiest batiste embroideries has its dark pattern made of batiste, appliqued on with colored silks.

Dark printed crepes in very quaint designs suggesting those of fountaine years ago are very much in favor.

Besides actual girdles and sashes there are girde-like draperies and vests, which suggest the girde out life.

The Mexican bordered voiles, which suggest drawn work, are much used for semi-dress costumes for mid-summer.

The kimono sleeve will continue for dressy costumes, but with a closely fitted forearm. This necessitates a very large armhole.

A pansy pattern on taupe, wood rose, navy or gobelin blue background is the latest thing among printed fleur de soies.

All the new coats or wraps are drawn very close around the figure from the knee down. Very many of them are without sleeves.

All lingerie garments continue very sheer and close-fitting, the trimmings perfectly flat, to accord with the demand for a simple, slender figure.

Rose and black, double faced, are the colors often chosen for the sashes of white voile dresses. Pale yellow voiles have rose or copper color.

The easy dressing of the neck will continue this fall, the open neck being finished with fichus or ruffs, frills or wired collars of the Medicor order.

Skirts of brocaded cotton tulle are delightful with summer blouses. Tan rose and blue are the favored shades.

Such skirts are almost always draped.

Never before this season has hand embroidery been so important in fine garments, and it appears on the most unwanted materials, such as crepes and rattles.

Some of the new founts are being cut on the circle. Also, they are made from pleatings. But no matter how many founces, the foundation skirts will be narrow.

Some of the new sashes are double-faced. Some are tasseled or fringed, and practically all of them are arranged wide around the hips and are knotted at the knees.

The "box back" is a feature in the newest voile waists. The box part is a straight plastron of printed voile down the back, the same printed stuff being repeated in front and in collar and cuffs.

Minimize The Loss.

Practically farmers may easily minimize the loss, due to a backward and cold season, by the judicious use of Sulphate of Ammonia as a fertilizer.

Sulphate of Ammonia contains over 30 per cent of nitrogen, as against 15 per cent in Nitrate of Soda, and is therefore more than 25 per cent better than nitrate of soda as a means of quickening and increasing the growth of crops.

The use of Sulphate of Ammonia has increased enormously of late years and it is recognized to be the most valuable fertilizer obtainable. By its judicious use the production of root crops per acre may be doubled, and the growth of late crops stimulated.

We invite the attention of Farmers to our special pamphlet on the best methods of using Sulphate, copies of which will be forwarded free to any address on application.

The price of Sulphate is moderate, and our terms are accommodating.

Live Foxes.

Edmonton, Alta., July 10.—Two hundred and nineteen live foxes, ranging from black silver to red crosses, valued at $32,000, have been shipped from Edmonton to points in the provinces of Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island, Alberta, New York and Pennsylvania since the opening of the season. The most valuable consignment, which went forward yesterday, consisted of ten pure black puppies, for which Kane Brothers, of Brooklyn, N.Y., paid $30,000. The animals were sent to Ogdon, Penn., for propagation purposes.

Frederic M. Lee, President of the Western Live Fur Company, who recently shipped 24 foxes, valued at $20,000, to breeders in Prince Edward Island, announces that he will not dispose of any more animals to eastern ranchers, having decided to establish a fox farm at Tees, Alta., where 40 foxes are now domiciled. He said:

"Advices from Eastern Canada are that prices of live foxes have decreased from 25 to 50 per cent during the last 30 days. This slump is accounted for by large shipments through Edmonton from all over the northern country, between the Yukon and the province of Saskatchewan. There will be a reaction next fall, when prices will be higher than they have been during the last few months.

"Fur trappers in the north are reaping a veritable harvest now, as the foxes are easily obtained by digging the pups out of the holes before they have left the nests. After this month the young foxes will leave their dams and can only be caught singly in traps. This means fewer animals and higher prices."

HIS MAJESTY
Charlotte Corday.

One hundred twenty years ago to-day Charlotte Corday, a French martyr to the cause of freedom, was guillotined in a painful and abrupt manner by the entire police force of Paris, which at that time was a corrupt and unfeeling body of men.

She was the daughter of aristocratic parents, who kept a hired girl the year around and had the washing done in the basement, and her untimely death caused the late T. Carlyle to exude several yards of blunt blank verse.

At the time of which we write the French revolution was revolting at the rate of about 450 executions a day. It was a dreadful time. People were liable to have their heads removed with the utmost thoroughness at any hour of the day or night, and nobody was happy except the undertaker.

After seeing several of her relatives and friends bite the dust with a look of pained reluctance, Charlotte determined to strike one blow for freedom and then cash in.

The leading guillotine artist of the period was a human iceberg named Marat, who had the soul of a patriot and six different kinds of god. Every morning, before attacking the guillotine, he would feed a relay of his personal friends to the guillotine, after which he would go to church and pray for his bleeding country. Charlotte concluded that it would be a pious act to relieve Marat of his breath and the guillotine and at the same time, so going to a hardware store she bought a large, unused butcher knife and called at Marat's home.

Charlotte found Marat with both feet in a wash tub, trying to think of some body who ought to be guillotined. She was a clever woman, and after taking him off his guard by chatting about the merits of a non-alcoholic cure for the gout she plunged the butcher knife into his cardiac mechanism with considerable vehemence. Marat made a few brief remarks of no particular

THURSDAY, July 17, 1913. Preston's Foot Powder is a boon in hot weather. It soothes and eases hot, tired, red, or blistered feet. A little shaken into the socks in the morning, a little dusted on the feet at night, will make all the difference between discomfort and ease. Helps you in work and in sport; saves body and nerves. Price 25 cents a tin.

Excelsis is a fine shaving stick. Superfatted soaps such as Excelsis are more softening than ordinary soap, give a blander lather, and enable shaving to be cleaner and with less than the usual time and trouble. Ask for "Excelsis" next time. At both our stores. Price 35 cents a stick.

Wedding Bells.

A very pretty wedding took place at Topsail, on July 13th, when Mr. Elmus Way led to the altar Miss Phoebe Duckworth Street. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Nares, and the bride was attended by Mr. Alex Henpebury. After the wedding a reception was held at Mrs. Jeans after which the happy couple left for their future home on Pleasant Street.

New Bungalow FOR BOWRING PARK.

Tenders for the building of the proposed bungalow for Bowring Park are being advertised for. The bungalow will be built on the latest lines and will contain a large dining room (small ones) heated room, and the others became foul and rotten, and though I tried many kinds of medicine they had no beneficial result. At last a doctor advised me to use MINARD'S LINIMENT and in four weeks' time every sore was healed and the hair has grown over each one in fine condition. The Liniment is certainly wonderful in its working.

Eugenics in North Dakota.

New Law Forbids Marriage of Diseased, Drunkards and Blood Relatives.

Grand Forks, N.D., July 8.—Under the new North Dakota marriage law, which has just become effective, the marriage of diseased persons is prohibited. This is the first step taken toward the more rigid control of marriages, and is in line with the general movement throughout the country for the physical examination of persons about to enter the marriage state.

Each person seeking to be married must file with the license clerk a certificate of good health, the certificate to show that the person is not afflicted with any contagious or infectious disease. Another certificate must be filed to show that the persons are not in any manner related by blood. Habitual drunkards are prohibited from marrying.

The Sydney Steel Works.

Editor Evening Telegram: Dear Sir,—It may be of some interest to many of your readers to hear a little about the Sydney, particularly as a very large number of Newfoundlanders make up the working class in those parts. It is generally recognized that the large plant of the "Dominion Iron and Steel Co." has made Sydney what it is, for when we consider that its monthly pay roll exceeds some three hundred and fifty thousand dollars, a slight idea of the beneficency of such a concern in a city, will be suggested to us.

Of this plant I will speak first. It is truly a wonderful concern. It engages in employment about eight thousand men, not including some hundreds of office and official help. The estimated value of the works is fabulous, perhaps deep into the millions. For certain I know, that one building, (all iron), cost in the vicinity of two million dollars. The company has its own railway, with conductors, brakemen, etc., its own electric system, and in its central telephone office it gives employment to some dozen girls alone. There are some sixty or more locomotives in this great yard, hundreds of switches and the track estimate covers some twenty miles. Five blast furnaces are going night and day, including Sunday, and the turn out of iron ranges from eleven hundred to twelve hundred tons per day. The iron product for June of this year, was 33,136 tons. It would indeed be a treat and a surprise to some (why not all) of your readers could they watch the progress of machinery, and the operation of these terrific furnaces. The ore goes in, in its raw state just as it has been taken from Bell Island and comes out in the course of some six or seven hours finished into railway rails, wire both coarse and fine, nails—from the eight-inch spike to the inch and a half fine cut nail, and pig iron of various sizes. Then there are the steel products, steel rails of all descriptions, tools and bands, screws and bolts.

It is most wonderful to see the iron ore melted down into liquid fire, and to watch the progress of this burning fluid from the time it leaves the blast furnaces till it is made into "goods" for shipment all over the world.

One must see all this, to appreciate and understand, a description of it would really convey nothing beyond the surmise of bewilderment and wonder.

The system of office work here, is the very latest in America. Rapid and short methods in the keeping of accounts, reports, etc., and from the very nature of the work, are invariably the better. Perhaps the majority of the workers in the Steel Co. are Newfoundlanders. They are in all branches and departments, many of them occupy positions of trust such as managers, foremen and superintendents. Several are in the offices of the company, whilst still more are attached to the direct mechanical work here.

But I am taking up too much space I fear; and must call a halt. I will again write you, Mr. Editor, and hope you will give me space in your good paper, as you have always done.

Yours very truly,
P. J. KINSELLA.
Sydney, C.B., July 6, 1913.

Baseball.

Yesterday's baseball match between the Red Lions and B. I. S. resulted in a victory for the former by a score of 19 to 7. The players were:

The Regatta.

Many crews practiced on the Lake yesterday afternoon and night. Tomorrow, Long Bay and Outer Cove will be represented in the Fishermen's Race. The latter will row the Shamrock.

Much interest is being taken in the Brigade Race; the three crews are hard in training.

Four crews of Juveniles are practicing. A team from Long Bay will row the Shananditti, after being thirteen years out of use, was launched yesterday afternoon. The C. C. C. are practicing in her.

Whaler Cabot Arrives.

Reports For Small Catches. The whaler Cabot, Capt. Bull, arrived in port yesterday afternoon from Balena, having finished her work at that place for the season. The Cabot was not as successful as in former years and has only seven whales to her credit. Capt. Bull reports that he never saw the fish as scarce before whilst continuous but weather made operations tedious and difficult. After remaining a few days the Cabot will proceed to Snook's Arm to finish up the voyage. That far the Cabot has only one-fourth of the number of fish she had this time last year.

500 Dress Robes at 1-3 off Regular Prices.

Owing to the recent unfavorable weather we are disposing of our entire stock of Summer Dress Robes at a GENUINE REDUCTION OF 1-3 OFF THE REGULAR PRICE of every garment.

This large stock includes Linens, Embroideries, Serges, Foulards and Silks, all of the latest cut and style and in all the usual stock sizes.

The Linens are in many dainty shades, piped with self or contrasting colors and trimmed with buttons. The Embroidered robes are a charming selection, they are beautifully modelled, the designs are exclusive, trimmed with exquisite insertion and lace, tucks, etc.

The Serges are modish and well-tailored, equally suited for town or country cool-weather wear. The Foulards and Silks, in stripes and other designs, are really lovely. Some have the new long shoulder effect and slightly raised waist-line, others have a mere suggestion of striking color, just enough to add distinction to the gowns; and all are this season's models.

Every woman is interested in a real bargain and these dainty gowns with their
